THE

CEREMONIES

AND

RELIGIOUS CUSTOMS

Of the JEWS and the ROMAN CATHOLICKS.

VOLUME the FISRT.

THE

CEREMONIES

AND

RELIGIOUS CUSTOMS

Manners OF THE Rites

OF THE

VARIOUS NATIONS of the KNOWN WORLD:

Together with

HISTORICAL ANNOTATIONS,

And ſeveral

CURIOUS DISCOURSES

Equally Inſtructive and Entertaining.

VOL. I.

Containing the CEREMONIES of the JEWS, and the ROMAN CATHOLICKS.

Written originally in FRENCH, and illuſtrated with a large Number of Folio COPPER PLATES, all beautifully Deſigned

By Mr. BERNARD PICART,

And curiouſly Engraved by moſt of the BEST HANDS in EUROPE.

Faithfully tranſlated into ENGLISH, by a Gentleman, ſome Time ſince of St. John's College in OXFORD.

LONDON:

PRINTED by WILLIAM JACKSON, for CLAUDE DU BOSC, Engraver at the Golden Head in Charles-Street, Covent Garden.

MDCCXXXIII.

CONTENTS

OF THE

SUPPLEMENT

TO THE

Diſſertations on the Ceremonies and Cuſtoms of the MODERN JEWS.

OBſervations on the Diſperſion of the Jews, Page 165
Obſervations on the Perſecutions which the Jews have undergone ſince the laſt Revolution of Jeruſalem, under the Reign of the Emperor Veſpaſian, 168
Crimes laid to the Charge of the Jews, 173
Concerning Impoſtors and falſe Meſſiahs, 175
Concerning the penal Corrections and Chaſtiſements of the Jews; their Badges and Marks of Diſtinction from Chriſtians, &c. The Laws of Princes, and Decrees of the Church againſt them, 177
Concerning ſome Saints of the Jewiſh Church, and the various Miracles perform'd by them, ſince the ſecond Deſtruction of Jeruſalem, 180

Sects of the JEWS.

SAmaritans, 182
SCaraites, 184
Sadducees, 185
Phariſees, 186
Half-Jews, Sabbatites, Eſſenes, Herodians, &c. 187
Chineſe Jews, 188
Profeſſion of Faith of the Jews. Some other Articles of their Belief which are not generally received, ibid.

A Continuation of the SUPPLEMENT.

THE antient Sanhedrim, 194
The Synagogue, 195
The Dedication or Conſecration of the Synagogue, 196
Their Academies and Schools, 197
Their Rabbi's and Doctors, 198
The Election of their Rabbi's, and the Privileges of their Office, 199
The Chazan, the Sciamus, the Sacrificator, the Cohan, 200
The Taled, or Veil; the Zizith, or Taſſels; the Tefilin, or Forehead Pieces; and ſome other Cuſtoms with reſpect to their Prayers, ibid.
The Benedictions and Prayers of the Jews, 202

The CONTENTS.

The Alms of the Jews; their Vows, Confeſſions, Penances, Faſts, and Abſtinences, 204

The Ablutions of the Jews, and the Care which they are obliged to take, in keeping their Bodies free from all Pollutions, 205

Their Eccleſiaſtical Penalties and Excommunications, 206

The Solemnity of the Sabbath, 208

The New Moon, 211

The Penance of the Month Elul, ibid.

The Feaſt of the new Year, 212

The Vigil of the Chipur, or Day of Expiation, 213

The Feaſt of Expiation, or the Chipur, 214

The Feaſt of the Paſſover, 215

The Feſtival of Pentecoſt, 218

The Feaſt of Tents, or Tabernacles, ibid.

The Feſtival of the Law, 220

The Feaſt of Lights, in the Hebrew Tongue called Chanuccha, or Dedication, 221

The Feaſt of Purim, ibid.

The Faſts which are inſtituted by the Synagogue, 222

The Devotion of Monday and Thurſday, 223

The Jewiſh Calendar for the Year 1722, 224

Their Manner of admitting Proſelites, 232

Circumciſion, 233

On the Bathing of their Women for their Purification, 235

The Redemption of the Firſt-born, ibid.

The Education of their Children, 236

The Eſpouſals of the Jews, ibid.

The Weddings of the Jews, 238

Their Divorces, 239

Their taking off the Shoe, 241

The Travelling Jew, ibid.

The ſick and dying Jew, ibid.

Their Funeral Ceremonies, 242

Their Mourning, 243

The Commemoration of the Dead, 244

Cuſtoms in Life, wherein Religion has a Share, ibid.

The Oath and Form of Abjuration of a Jew, who becomes a Proſelyte of the Greek Chriſtians, 247

THE

THE

CONTENTS

OF THE

SECOND PART of this VOLUME,

Concerning the Religious Customs of the ROMAN CATHOLICS, &c.

A DISSERTATION on the Christian Religion, according to the Principles of the ROMAN CATHOLICS.

PART I.

AN Idea of Christianity in general, Page 252
An Idea of the Christian Religion, according to the Tenets of the Roman Catholics in particular, 255
The Fundamental Opinions of the Janseniſts, 270
Of Quietism, 274

A DISSERTATION on the Christian Religion, according to the Principles of the ROMAN CATHOLICS.

PART II.

THE Authority of the Church; the Head of the Universal Church, 283
The Supremacy of the Pope, 284
Of Councils, 286
Of Provincial Synods, 288
The Pope's Spiritual Juriſdiction, 289
Preliminaries obſerved before the Cardinals enter the Conclave, in order to elect the Pope; the various Methods of electing him, and the Artifices and Stratagems made uſe of at his Election, 290
The Order obſerv'd at Rome during the Conclave, 293
A Deſcription of the Conclave, 294

The

The CONTENTS.

The Manner of carrying Provisions to the Cardinals, &c. Page 295
The Pope's Adoration after his Election, 296
The Pope's Coronation, 299
The Entertainment which his Holiness formerly gave on his Coronation Day, 303
The Pope's taking Possession, 304
The Ceremonies which are observed on receiving the Pope at the Church of St. John de Lateran, 307
The Pope's Robes of State, 308
The Order and Ceremonies observ'd when the Pope holds a Consistory, extracted from the Roman Ceremonial for the Year 1518, 310
The Divine Service, or the Canonical Hours, 312
The Ceremonies observ'd in the Pope's Chapel, 314
The Order of the Pope's Procession when he goes to hold a Chapel at St. Peter's, 316
A Description of the Pope's Chapel, according to F. Bonani, 318
The Ceremonies of the Mass, 323
Different Masses, 334
High Mass, Solemn Mass, Episcopal Mass, ibid.
A solemn Mass celebrated by the Pope, 338
The Mass for the Dead, 342
The Devotion paid the Cross, 346
Festivals instituted and ordained in honour of the Cross, and some Ceremonies relating to the same, 348
The Consecration of public and private Crosses, 349
Celebrated Crucifixes, 351
The Custom of having Bells in Churches, 352
The Benediction of Bells, 353
The Benediction of Images, 355
The Holy Shrowd, 357
The Benediction of the Pontifical Robes, &c. 359
The Prone, or Homily, 360
A Description of the Altar, and such Precautions as are necessary for the keeping it in due Order, 364
The sacred Vessels belonging to the Altar, &c. The Corporals, Pálliums, Purificatories, Purses, Veils, and other Decorations of Altars and Churches, 366
The Benediction of the first Stone of a new Church, 370
The Benediction of the Foundation of a Church, 371
The Dedication of a Church and Altar, 372
The Consecration of an Altar, 375
The Procession of the Relics, being a Continuation of the Dedication of a Church, 376
The depositing the Relics under the Altar, 377
The incensing of the Altar, ibid.
The Unction of the twelve Crosses, 378
A Continuation of incensing the Altar, ibid.
The Cross before the Altar, 379
The Benediction of the Vessels and Ornaments of the Altar, ibid.

PREFACE.

AN Edition of the first Part of this Work, composed by Leo of Modena, a Rabbi of Venice, was some Time since published at the Request of some Christians, who were desirous of informing themselves in the Customs and Ceremonies of the Jews of our Time. Mr. Gaffarel had that Edition printed at Paris in the Year 1637, and sent it to the Author; who finding a great Number of Errors in it, corrected them, and resolved to give the Public an Edition more correct than the former; which he accordingly did the following Year at Venice. This last Edition is the Ground-work of this Translation; or, to speak more properly, it is made up out of both the Editions. There is indeed a considerable Difference between the two Impressions; for the Author struck many Things out of the first, nay, sometimes whole Chapters, and added others, which had never appeared before. And indeed, the second Impression is what we have almost every where followed, as the most exact and correct; and the first we have only had recourse to, for the Translation of those Passages of Scripture, quoted in the second Edition according to the Vulgate; it being very absurd to make a Rabbi submit to the Decision of the Council of Trent.

BUXTORF was the first who gave Christians any Light into the Customs and Ceremonies of the modern Jews; that Treatise of his, which he intitled, The Synagogue of the Jews, was printed in the German, which was his Mother-Tongue, in the Year 1603, and met with so kind a Reception, even from the Learned, that it was immediately translated into Latin, and published the very next Year. Buxtorf the Son, not being well satisfied with the Latin Version of his Father's Work, made a new one, wherein he made great Alterations, and sent it to the Press in the Year 1641; and about twenty Years after, reprinted it considerably enlarged. He inserted therein Part of the Work of Leo of Modena, and we may see, that in order to avoid that Confusion, which before appeared throughout the whole Work, by including too many Particulars under one Head, he has endeavour'd to follow Leo's Method. But had he abridged the Book, instead of enlarging it, he had much more obliged the Public. This was the Case of our Rabbi, who touched upon nothing but Matters on all Sides approved, without deviating from his Subject by Digressions or Disputes, and much less by trifling Particularities; equally avoiding to establish any Doctrines whatsoever, or to entertain the Public with Allegories and Absurdities.

THEREFORE, whatever is of any Use, or Value, in Buxtorf's large Volume, will be found in this small one, wherein there is nothing superfluous, the Author never wandring from his Subject, or saying more than is absolutely necessary for making it intelligible. And indeed, a clear Head to digest Matters, is generally allowed the distinguishing Character of the Italians, as the Strength of other Nations is said to lie chiefly in their Back to bear the Weight of them*. Yet, however small that Work may be, it contains a great many Things which Buxtorf has not touched upon.

As our Rabbi's only Aim was to be intelligible, he was content with speaking in a plain succinct Manner; a swelling Stile being unnecessary in a Narration. And in order to go beyond him in Perspicuity, we have often bróke one of his Periods into two or three, though in other Places we have lengthened some of them, to give a greater Light to his Sentiments.

* The Author's Meaning here is, that whilst the Italians excel in inventing, digesting, and making every Subject their own, so other Nations only excel in Strength of Memory; which they croud with a Number of Particulars of very little Use to them, for want of that happy Genius which is the Propriety of the Italians.

He is ſometimes ſo careleſs of his Stile, that, were a Man unacquainted with the Subject which he treats, he would hardly underſtand him. This obliged me to reduce ſeveral of his Periods into their natural Order, by taking the Thought of the Author only, and dropping his Expreſſion; for he ſpeaks Italian much in the Stile of the Jewiſh Synagogues.

THE Chriſtian Religion taking its riſe from Judaiſm, I make no doubt but the reading of this ſmall Treatiſe will be of great Uſe towards the Underſtanding of the New Teſtament, by reaſon of its Conformity and Connexion with the Old. They who compoſed the Books of the New Teſtament being Jews, it is impoſſible to explain it any other Way, than by recurring to Judaiſm; and indeed, Part of our Ceremonies have been taken from thence. Our Doctrines are almoſt the ſame, and as to Mortality, the Commandments are common to us both. Even Purgatory, which the Proteſtants will not admit, is explained at the End of this Work, together with the Belief of Heaven, Hell, the Reſurrection, and the Day of Judgment.

THE Chriſtian Religion has likewiſe this in common with Judaiſm, that each of them is founded upon the Holy Scriptures, the Traditions of their Fathers, upon the Cuſtoms and received Inſtitutions, which, in our Religion, we call, Eccleſiaſtical Diſcipline. Beſides, as our Doctors often expreſs themſelves, this is of Apoſtolical Tradition; ſo likewiſe do the Rabbies often ſay, Halaca le Moſce mi Sinaï: This Explanation was delivered to Moſes upon Mount Sinai. Indeed, under the Word Tradition, they often give us ſtrange Chimeras; but this is not ſo much the Fault of Tradition, as of thoſe who are the Depoſitaries of it.

As to the Prayers of the Jews, they are very pious, and are moſt of them formed upon one Model; tho' compoſed at different Times, and in different Places. They are hardly any Thing more than a continued Series of Paſſages out of the Scriptures, containing the Praiſes of God; and it is very probable, that Eſdras was the Author of a great Part of this Formulary of Prayers, and that the Doctors who ſucceeded him, only made ſome Additions to it. In the Infancy of the Chriſtian Church, our Fathers uſed to ſing the Praiſes of God, to repeat the Pſalms, and read the Holy Scriptures at their Aſſemblies; that is, thoſe Paſſages of the Law and the Prophets which were proper for each Day, as it is ſtill the Cuſtom amongſt the modern Jews. The Church afterwards introduced the reading of the Goſpel in the Room of the Law of Moſes; tho', at the ſame Time, ſhe has always retained ſome Paſſages of the Old Teſtament, and chiefly of the Pſalms, as appears from the Beginning of the Maſs, which is only an Abridgment of Pſalms, which perhaps at firſt were repeated thro', and are now ſhortned only for the ſake of Convenience and Diſpatch.

BESIDES, it is plain, that the firſt Fathers of the Church paid the ſame Reſpect to Saturday as to Sunday. And accordingly we find, that the antient Canons made them equal, by equally prohibiting Faſts on either of thoſe two Days. Celebrate (ſays the Book of antient Conſtitutions, that goes under the Name of Clement) both Saturday and Sunday as Feſtivals; the one being conſecrated to the Memory of the Creation, and the other to that of the Reſurrection. And indeed both theſe Days were long held in great Veneration, and among the Primitive Chriſtians both Saturday and Sunday were Days of Aſſembling; nay, ſome Footſteps of that Cuſtom ſtill appear on Eaſter-Eve, in our Churches, where ſeveral Chapters both of the Law and of the Prophets are read.

WE cannot ſufficiently admire the modeſt and ſerious Behaviour of the Jews, when they are going to their Morning Prayers; for it is not lawful for them to treat of any Buſineſs, nor ſo much as to make a Viſit, or ſalute any one, till they have firſt diſcharged that Duty towards God. This Cuſtom is of very great Antiquity amongſt the Jews, and may ſerve to explain thoſe Words of Chriſt to his Diſciples, upon ſending them to preach the Goſpel: And ſalute no Man by the Way, Luke x. ver. 4.

UPON carefully examining into the Order of the Jewiſh Prayers, and the Rubric or Directions for performing them, we ſhall find, that they differ very little from ours. They have their Prayers for Morning, Noon, and Night; and though they do not uſe the Terms of Double, Semidouble, or Simple, they nevertheleſs have Offices of different Kinds, as well common as proper, in the ſame manner as we have: They likewiſe have their Commemorations, as will be ſeen when we come to ſpeak of their Feſtivals. In ſhort, as we have our Services after the Manner of the Roman, Gallican, and other Churches, ſo have they theirs according to that of the Spaniſh, German, Italian, &c. Synagogues.

THE Deſcription our Author gives of the Tephilin, which they wear in Time of Prayer, ſhews what the Phylacteries mentioned in the Goſpel were, and which moſt of our Interpreters have explained aukwardly enough. Amongſt others, I know not what Father Amelote, of the Oratory, in his French Notes upon the Verſion of the New Teſtament means, by ſaying, that the Tephilin and Taled were Jewiſh Ornaments, which the Maſter of each Houſe uſed to put on, in order to eat the Paſcal Lamb in a more grand and ſolemn Manner. He is here led into an Error by Genebrard, who, to maintain this Opinion, quotes Orah Haiim; though, in the very Place he quotes out of that Book, there is no mention made of any holy Ornaments, that were neceſſary to the Celebration of the Paſſover; but only of a four-corner'd Garment, which the Jews were obliged to wear at that Time, but to avoid Ridicule have now laid aſide, only wearing under their Clothes, a ſquare Cloth with four Taſſels or Strings unravelled at the Ends.

THIS falſe Notion has been the Cauſe of aſcribing the Uſe of conſecrated Ornaments, at the Celebration of the holy Myſteries, to the earlieſt of Times; and ſome People pretend ſtill to ſhew us the Chaſubles of ſeveral of the Apoſtles. But the wiſeſt and moſt learned Writers believe nothing of it; and I am ſurpriſed that Cardinal Bona ſhould ſo paſſionately inveigh againſt Nicolas Alemannius, for inſiſting that the Apoſtles never had the Uſe of conſecrated Veſtments, and for treating every Thing that has been ſaid on this Subject as imaginary and ridiculous. The Cardinal grounds his Aſſertion upon the Writings of Baronius, de Monchi, Stapleton, du Sauſſay, and others; who are of Opinion, that Jeſus Chriſt, at the laſt Supper, wore a conſecrated Garment ſuitable to that Ceremony. Whereas Cardinal Bona himſelf, indeed, ſays no more, than that the Apoſtles only, celebrated the Myſteries in ceremonial Veſtments; but that as to Jeſus Chriſt, when he inſtituted this Sacrament, he had no other than his ordinary Clothes on. Yet neither of theſe Aſſertions has any Foundation in Truth; and Walafrid Strabo was much in the right when he ſaid, That in the Primitive Church, they uſed to celebrate Maſs in the Clothes they generally wore; tho' not for the Reaſon which Joſeph le Vicomte gives us, viz. that in thoſe Days the Church was not able to bear the Expence of Clothes that were rich and ſuitable to her Ceremonies, but becauſe the firſt Chriſtians, who for the greateſt Part had been Jews, uſed to celebrate the Myſteries at their Aſſemblies, in the ſame Clothes which they were uſed to wear in their Synagogues. I am likewiſe of Opinion, that the Copes which our Prieſts now uſe, were taken from the Jewiſh Cloke, or the Roman Gown, or perhaps from both. For it is probable, that both the Roman and the Jew, after having quitted their reſpective Religions for Chriſtianity, ſtill retained their uſual Dreſs. To which we may add, that Maſs was antiently ſaid in Copes, and that the Eaſtern Prieſts, at this very Time, chuſe to officiate in them rather than in our Chaſubles: But as they were found more cumberſome, they are now made ſhorter amongſt us, and opened at the Sides, which makes them much more convenient, and leſs expenſive. In the ſame Manner, the Albe is taken from the Roman Tunic, which being made ſhorter, and wider, is now become our Surplice. In primitive Times then we ſee, there was no Difference between the ceremonial Veſtments, and the common Dreſs, Time alone having produced this Difference; the Laity having been perpetually changing their Faſhions, while the Clergy have always retained their antient Manner of Dreſs. Now, as at the Celebration of the Myſteries ries of Religion, all People put on their beſt Clothes, and the Church, by Degrees, acquired immenſe Riches, and built magnificent Temples; in Proceſs of Time it has happened, that rich and coſtly Veſtments have been introduced.

THE vaſt Number of Bleſſings and Thankſgivings, uſed by the Jews at the Beginning and End of all their Actions, is alſo a great Help to us, for the better Underſtanding of ſeveral Paſſages of St. Paul, wherein he ſpeaks of the Praiſes and Thankſgivings, which we ought continually to give unto God. [a] For, ſays he, if I by Grace be a Partaker, why am I evil ſpoken of, for that which I give Thanks? Whether therefore ye eat or drink, or whatſoever ye do, do all to the Glory of God. I do not hereby mean thoſe Benedictions and particular Thankſgivings, which we find in the tenth Chapter of the firſt Epiſtle to the Corinthians, concerning the Euchariſt; tho' they are perfectly well explained by the Benedictions and Thankſgivings, which the Jews obſerve at the Celebration of their Paſſover. There are many other Things of this Nature, which cannot be well explained, but by the Manners and Cuſtoms of the Jews.

IN the Jewiſh Formulary, they have a Prayer which they uſe in public for thoſe Princes, whoſe Subjects they are; containing ſeveral Articles, and at the End of every one, the People ſay Amen. In order to expreſs their Zeal on this Occaſion, they generally, during this Prayer, embrace the Book of the Law. It appears, nevertheleſs, that whatever they ask of God in Behalf of their Princes, is with a View only to ſome particular Advantage, which is from thence to accrue to the Jewiſh Nation. May the King of Kings through his Mercy preſerve our Prince, may He incline him to do good to all the Iſraelites, and under his Reign may Judah be preſerved, may Iſrael remain in Safety, and may the Redeemer come into Sion. I know not whether we may not conclude from this Prayer, that St. Paul, who was ſo well acquainted with the Cuſtoms of the Synagogue, followed this Precedent, when he taught the primitive Chriſtians to pray unto God, for the Kings and Princes of the World: But be that as it will, we cannot diſapprove the great Number of Benedictions, which the Jews obſerve on ſo many different Occaſions; ſince the Chriſtian Churches, both of the Eaſt and Weſt, have almoſt as many in their Prayer-Books and Rituals. And indeed Benedictions of all kinds are ever good and laudable, when performed in honour of God, and without Superſtition.

I SAY, without Superſtition, becauſe the Jews are charged with making a wrong Uſe of the Name of God and his Angels in ſome of their Benedictions, in hopes of perſuading them by a kind of Magic, to be more familiar and favourable to them, upon an Opinion, that the Patriarchs had Angels, who were as Maſters and Guardians to them. But our Rabbi is ſo far from holding any ſuch Opinion, that, agreeably to the Bible and the Talmud, he here condemns all Magic. We may ſee too, by the fifth Article of their Belief, that they forbid the Worſhip of Angels, when they ſay, That a Man ought neither to worſhip them, nor ſerve them as Mediators or Interceſſors. The Jews, however, pay great Honour and Reſpect to the Angels; and we find by our Author, that formerly when they went to eaſe Nature in any Place where they might be expoſed to Danger, they recommended themſelves to their Guardian Angels. And this Invocation is yet to be ſeen in their Books, expreſſed as follows: [b] May ye be honoured, ye venerable and bleſſed Miniſters of God; preſerve me, preſerve me; help me, help me. There are, even at this Time, devout Jews, who pray after that manner, grounding their Practice on this Paſſage: [c] For he ſhall give his Angels charge over thee, to keep thee in all thy Ways. In ſhort, the Belief of Guardian Angels was an eſtabliſh'd Opinion in the Synagogue in the Time of our Lord, as well as it is now in our Church.

IT muſt be allowed, however, that there are ſome Jews, who prophane the Name of God and his Angels, and turn it to an ill Purpoſe, in order to perform Things out of the

[a] 1 Cor. x. ver. 30, 31.
[b] Orah. Haiim. n. 3.
[c] Pſal. xci. ver. 11.

Courſe

Courſe of Nature, diſguiſing this evil Practice, under the Pretence of its being authoriſed by the [a] Cabala; that the World may be induced to believe, that in this they only follow the Tradition of their Fathers. And indeed under this Notion of Tradition, they impoſe upon the more ignorant amongſt themſelves, and even many Chriſtians, who ſuffer themſelves to be ſeduced by theſe cabaliſtical Imaginations, upon which the whole magic Art is grounded. But what is moſt ſurpriſing, is, that Reuchlin, one of the moſt learned Men of the laſt Age, ſhould have amuſed himſelf with writing on ſo trifling a Subject. The Extravagances even of the Count de Gabalis, which lately appeared, were not diſagreably received: So true it is, that Mankind has a natural Propenſity to Superſtition. The Cabala, in my Opinion, takes its Riſe from the Philoſophy of Pythagoras and Plato, which ſome of the Jews have jumbled together with Judaiſm, ſcattering throughout the whole an infinite Number of ſtrange Notions and idle Dreams, the Children of Idleneſs and Superſtition; as appears by the Books of Adam, Enoch, Salomon, and ſeveral others, to which neither our Author, nor any Jew, or Chriſtian of good Senſe, give the leaſt Credit.

The Jews are not only remarkably devout, but charitable too; and methinks, in their Compaſſion to the Poor, we may ſee a Reſemblance of the Charity of the primitive Chriſtians to their Brethren: By which the latter, at that Time, only imitated what was then, and ſtill is, practiſed in the Synagogues; whereas, on the contrary, we have ſcarce retained the Remembrance of it. I ſhall not here mention their Diſcipline, which is perfectly regular, as will appear in the Chapter concerning their Excommunication and Repentance; but ſhall juſt obſerve, by the way, that the Jews endeavour not only to make Atonement to God by an inward, but alſo by an outward, Contrition and Repentance. And for this Purpoſe, they have their penitential Books, as they were formerly uſed in the Church; and perhaps in Imitation of them. Sure it is, that they inflict ſevere Puniſhments on ſuch as are guilty of heinous Crimes: But this is privately put in Execution; ſuch Things not being allowed by thoſe Princes, whoſe Subjects they are. But, indeed, as to all other Things, the Jews muſt be owned to give much into external Ceremonies; becauſe (ſay they) all external Actions are deſign'd for no other End than to regulate and direct the internal Actions of the Mind. So that by the waſhing of their Hands, they intend the purifying their Conſcience: As by an Abſtinence from unclean Meats, they propoſe the avoiding of Crimes; and look upon all Precepts of external Behaviour, as an immediate Application to the internal. However, it is not my Deſign hereby to approve the exceſſive Strictneſs of ſome ſuperſtitious Jews; as to riſe for ſix Days together before the Sun, the better to praiſe God, or to lie in Bed longer on the Sabbath, to ſhew the greater Reſpect to that Precept, that commands us to reſt on it; all which appear to me as ſo many vicious Affectations. I am likewiſe for diſmiſſing thoſe Anatomiſts, who are ſo ſcrupulous, that a Man can neither eat a Pigeon nor a Chicken without their Approbation: As if the Prick of a Pin, or any other ſcarce diſtinguiſhable Infirmity, or even the Suſpicion of them, in an Animal, were a ſufficient Reaſon for abſtaining from it.

We ſhall, as we go along, farther ſee the Nature of their general and particular Confeſſions; and how to ask and obtain Forgiveneſs of each other by a mutual Reconciliation, in the ſame manner as it is preſcrib'd to us in the Goſpel. But one thing that deſerves our Attention and Obſervation amongſt the Jews, is, that leſt they ſhould have been guilty of any Failure during the Courſe of the whole Year, they have a Day conſecrated on Purpoſe to atone for ſuch Failure. I ſhall not mention their Care of examining their Conſcience in the Time of Sickneſs; nor their Zeal in changing their Name, when under any Apprehenſion of Death. But I have obſerved, that in this Point, as well as others, they act with a ſtrong Superſtition. When they think themſelves beyond hopes of Recovery, they give themſelves the Names of Haiim, Life, Raphael, the Cure of God, and others of the ſame kind; and if they eſcape, they, during the Remainder of their Lives, retain them, aſcribing their Health to ſuch Change of Name.

[a] Tradition.

THEIR Preachers do not ſo much affect Eloquence, as a profound Knowledge in the Scriptures, and Deciſions of their Rabbi's. They apply themſelves particularly to the Study of a ſort of Books, which they call, Sceelot Veteſcuvot, that is Queſtions and Anſwers; which bear a great Reſemblance to thoſe of our Caſuiſts. As every one amongſt them is at Liberty to preach, we may eaſily imagine, how Chriſt and his Apoſtles came to preach in the Synagogues, and how we ought to underſtand what is ſaid by St. Luke, That Jeſus Chriſt was found in the Temple, ſitting in the midſt of the Doctors, both hearing them and asking them Queſtions: Not that he went thither with Intent to ſet up for an Inſtructor of thoſe Doctors, but placed himſelf amongſt ſuch as were Scholars, in order to be inſtructed himſelf, which is ſtill practiſed by the Jews; and for this Reaſon their Synagogues are commonly called Schools. We might here add many other Particulars; but we muſt remember, that this is a Preface only, and not a Book.

To my Reader I ſhall leave all ſuch Reflections as may juſtly be applied to what our Author ſays concerning Marriages, Divorces, and Degrees of Relation; which give Light into ſeveral Paſſages of the New Teſtament. I ſhall ſay no more upon this Subject, than that the Jews ſtrictly enjoin Marriage to every one, without Exception. Rabbi Moſes, however, is of the ſame Opinion with ſeveral Others, that a Man engag'd in the Study of the Law, may take a longer Time than what is preſcribed to others, provided he live chaſtly during that Time: But otherwiſe, he is of St. Paul's Opinion, that it is better to marry than burn. The ſame Thing is now practiſed in the Eaſtern Church; and the People themſelves, who are naturally jealous, require all Prieſts either to marry, or become Monks; the very Maronite [a] Prieſts themſelves, tho' they acknowledge the Biſhop of Rome, are obliged to marry, that is to ſay, before they are made Prieſts. And this is the Reaſon why their Biſhops are unwilling to receive them into Orders, before they are married, unleſs (as I ſaid before) they will retire into Monaſteries.

As to the Supplement concerning the modern Karaites and Samaritans, added to this Work, as theſe two Sects are little known in Europe, I was obliged to mention them, that our Author might not appear in any manner defective. The Rabbiniſt Jews, that is, ſuch as follow the Doctrine and Traditions of the Talmud, charge them with many Errors, either out of Malice or Ignorance; in order to diſcover the Truth of which, I have been obliged to have recourſe to the Karaites and Samaritans themſelves. The Karaite whom I have produced is one of the greateſt Learning and Reputation of his Sect. His Treatiſe, now preſerved in Manuſcript in the Library of the Fathers of the Oratory at Paris, was brought over from Conſtantinople, with a conſiderable Number of other Jewiſh Books, by M. de Sancy, on his Return from his Embaſſy. As to the Samaritans, I have taken what relates to them from two Letters, which the Synagogues of [b] Sichem and Egypt wrote to Joſeph Scaliger, concerning their Ceremonies and Cuſtoms. I was not able to come at the Original, but only a Tranſlation made by M. Morin, one of the Fathers of the Oratory, at the Requeſt of M. de Peyreſe, which I found written in his own Hand, as I was turning over the Samaritan Pentateuch, a Manuſcript now in the ſame Library.

BY the way it muſt be obſerved, that Leo of Modena, in giving us the Hebrew Words in our Characters, has done a Thing unuſual to his Nation. At firſt I had ſome Thoughts of keeping up to the Orthography of our Tongue, but afterwards reſolved to follow his, imagining my Readers would be pleaſed to ſee in what manner the Italian Jews pronounce Hebrew. Nevertheleſs I have ſomewhat deviated from it in this Preface, and in the Supplement, in order to come as near as I could to the French way of pronouncing Hebrew; tho' I am perſuaded very few People will take Notice of it. At the ſame Time it is pleaſant enough to ſee a Frenchman write Hebrew after the German Manner; becauſe he has made uſe of Buxtorf's Dictionary, or ſome of the Hebrew Grammars written by Ger- mans. This different Manner of writing the Hebrew Words, proceeds from the different ways of pronouncing them: But were it agreed how they ſhould be pronounced, there would ſtill remain a Difficulty how to agree upon the Way of writing them: Becauſe the French, Germans, Spaniards, and Italians, pronounce the ſame Letters after a different Manner; and are each of them obliged often to uſe ſeveral different Characters to expreſs one ſingle Hebrew Letter right. The Authors of the Greek Verſion of the Bible, commonly known under the Name of the Septuagint, differ in this from St. Jerom; and all the ancient ways of writing Hebrew Words in other Tongues, entirely differ from the Modern. This is what the Critics ought to take Notice of, when they print any old Books wherein Hebrew Words written in Greek or Latin Characters are found, ſuch as the Works of St. Jerom, St. Epiphanius, and ſome other of the Fathers.

[a] The Jeſuit Dandini in his Account of the Maronites.
[b] Napolouſe.

HOWEVER, I cannot agree with our Author, who believes the Italians pronounce the Hebrew better than any other Nation. The Spaniards, moſt of whom are now in the Levant, are not at all inferior to them in this Point; and I am even of Opinion, that they excel them and all other People, not only as to Pronunciation, but alſo as to the Manner of writing: For their Manuſcripts are incomparably more beautiful than thoſe of the Italians, Germans, or other Levantines. And indeed, they have applied themſelves to the Study of the Grammar and Language of Holy Writ, much more than any other Nation. When they were driven out of Spain, they took Refuge in the Dominions of the Turk, and ſettled chiefly at Conſtantinople, Salonica, and thereabouts; where, to this Day, they are remarkable for the Gravity which they obſerve in their Ceremonies. It is true, they do not ſpeak pure Spaniſh: But corrupt as it is, they make uſe of a Spaniſh Tranſlation of the Bible. Their Synagogues in all Parts are more neat, and have more of Ornament and Magnificence than thoſe of other Nations. They are very nice, in having the Pentateuch and other Books, which they uſe in their Synagogues, fairly copied; which I obſerve by the way, in favour of thoſe who make Collections of Hebrew Manuſcripts. When I prefer the Spaniſh Jews to all others, I only ſpeak of thoſe who are generally known, not being able to ſay any Thing of thoſe who live in the farthermoſt Parts of Aſia, of whom we have no Knowledge at all. But I am ſurpriſed, that among ſo many Jeſuits and other Monks, as travel into thoſe Countries, none have had the Curioſity to give us ſome Information concerning the Jews there, or to bring us ſome of their Bibles, or let us know in what Manner their Traditions differ from the common Traditions and Cuſtoms of other Jews.

I MIGHT here ſay ſomething concerning our French Jews, who formerly exceeded all other Jews in Riches, till they were baniſhed France; from whence we have the Proverb, that he is as rich as a Jew. For it is certain, that in thoſe Days they poſſeſſed the fineſt Houſes and Eſtates in the Neighbourhood of Paris. The exorbitant Uſuries which they were allowed to take, under Pretence of its being beneficial to the Public, had rendered them ſo powerful, that at laſt there was a Neceſſity to deſtroy them. Yet they were not ſo much taken up with their Trade, but that they likewiſe applied themſelves to the Study of their Laws and Ceremonies. And as the Spaniſh Jews in thoſe Days excelled in the Knowledge of the Holy Scriptures, ſo thoſe of France excelled in the Knowledge of the Talmud. Paris, at that Time, was the Athens of the Jews, and they repaired thither from all Parts in order to be inſtructed. R. Solomon Iſaaki, the great Interpreter of the Talmud, was a Frenchman; and I do not doubt but he publickly read Leſſons upon it at Paris. He was born at Troyes in Champagne, and has left us very good Commentaries upon the Bible, which the Jews commonly prefer to all others. I am ſenſible many have affirmed, that this Rabbi was of Lunel in Languedoc, for this Reaſon; that the Name of Jarhi in Hebrew, which is the Name he is generally known by, ſignifies of Lunel: But in my Opinion they are miſtaken; becauſe the true Name of this Jew is not Jarhi, as moſt of our Writers call him, but Itſhaki, or the Son of Iſaac, as the Jews ſtile him. It is true, that R. Benjamin, in his Travels, mentions one R. Solomon of Lunel, whom Conſtantine L'Empereur pereur pretends, is our celebrated R. Solomon; but he does not consider, that he was dead before that Time. This I observe occasionally, in Behalf of our French Jews, who have acquired a great Reputation, for having excelled all others in the Knowledge of the Talmud; and chiefly those of Champagne, who made it their particular Study. They are the Authors of the best Part of what we call Tosaphot, Additions to, or Explanations of, the Talmud, as may be seen in the Treatise entitled Juhasin, or of Families, and in Tsemah David. Most of these Jews were of Rheims, or of Troyes, and there publickly taught the Talmud to those of their own Nation.

I MIGHT likewise add, that though the Manuscript Spanish Bibles are preferred to all others, yet those written by the Jews of Languedoc, and of the Frontiers of Spain, are not at all inferior to them. The City of Narbonne is the chief Place in the World where the Jews mostly applied themselves to transcribe good Copies of the Bible; and we ought in this Sense to take the Meaning of these Words of R. Benjamin at the Beginning of his Travels. Narbonne is the Mistress of the Law, and from thence the Law hath issued, in order to diffuse itself over all the Parts of the World. It has great Doctors, who are Princes, whereof the chief is R. Kalonimos the Son of Nasci, or most potent Prince, R. Theodore of blessed Memory, of the Family of David, and possessed of Inheritances and Lands, which the Lords of that Country have granted him. M. de Sancy, during his Embassy at the Porte, made strict Enquiry after the best Manuscripts of the Bible that could be found in the Levant. The most correct of all those which he brought over with him, is a Copy written for this Nasci, or Prince Theodore, whom the Jew Benjamin has just now been mentioning; most of them are preserved in the Library of the Fathers of the Oratory at Paris. This Manuscript, as appears at the End of it, was written in the Year 967. which answers to our Year 1207. I have also seen very fine Manuscripts of the Bible copied at Perpignan, which, however, are not to be compared to those of Narbonne. That Copy of the Bible, so famous amongst the Jews, which bears the Title of Hillel, and was the Standard by which, as an Original, they corrected their Books, came from the Kingdom of Leon in Spain, and not from Lyons in France, as some Writers have written. At the same Time we must observe, that it is not of such Antiquity as the Jews pretend, as I could easily prove by the different Lessons of that Manuscript. To conclude, I am of Opinion it would be a very difficult Matter now-a-days to find Manuscripts of the Bible of above 600 Years old, and we ought to suspect such as quote any of a more antient Date. And were there any such to be found, they are corrected according to the Massora; as I my self have seen many of them, that were not altogether of so old a Date, and yet were reform'd upon the Corrections of the Massora. From the Time that the Jews have preferr'd the Massora to Antiquity, the antient Manuscripts have not been so much valued, because they have not been thought altogether correct. I might here give the Reader several Reflections concerning these Manuscripts, in order to distinguish the good from the bad; but this will carry me too far, and I fear I have already gone beyond the Limits of a Preface to a small Book. I shall therefore only add, that this second Edition is more correct than the first, in which the Person, who was desired to revise the Sheets, had made several Additions and Alterations of his own, without the Knowledge of the Author, who did not perceive it till a long Time after, upon reading over the Work.

A DIS-

The CONTENTS.

A DISSERTATION on the Christian Religion, according to the Principles of the ROMAN CATHOLICS.

PART III.

THE Benediction of Agnus Dei's, Page 383
The Canonization of Saints, 386
The general Proceſſion which was made at Rome May 22. 1712. being the Day appointed for the Canonization of four particular Saints, 390
The Ceremonies of Beatification, and the Devotion paid to Saints, 397
An Idea of the Power of the modern Saints, 399
The Manner of a Man's devoting himſelf to Saints, &c. 403
The Devotion paid to the Bleſſed Virgin, 405
Feſtivals inſtituted in honour of our Lady, 407
Places remarkable for the Worſhip and Miracles of our Bleſſed Lady, and her Relics, 410
The Jubilee, 412
The Opening of the Sacred Gate by his Holineſs, 415
The Stations or Viſitation of the Churches by Pilgrims, 416
Of Indulgences, 417
Divers Inſtruments of Piety, and divers devout Societies, 420
A Continuation of the ſame Subject; their Societies, 425
A Continuation of the ſame Topic; their Penances, Prayers, and Pilgrimages, 429
A Continuation of the ſame Subject; their Proceſſions, nine-days Devotions, Retirements, and Foundations, 434
The Devotion of Relics, 442
The Proclamation relating to the Head and Right Arm of St. Cornelius, 443
The Tranſlation of Relics, ibid
Relics famous for Miracles, 445
The Manner of diſtinguiſhing the Relics dug out of the Catacombs to be genuine, 446
Several Cuſtoms relating to Relics, 448

DIRECTIONS

TO THE

BOOK BINDERS

FOR

Placing the CUTS belonging to the ROMAN CATHOLIC CUSTOMS.

Page

1 THE printed Side of a Scrutiny Bill, &c.
Figure repreſentant le coté imprimé, &c. } 290

2 Maſs of the Holy Ghoſt, &c.
La Meſſe du Saint Eſprit. } 292

3 The Adoration of the Pope, &c.
L'Adoration du Pape, &c. } 296

4, 5. The Pope going in Ceremony to take Poſſeſſion of the Church of St. John of Lateran, the two Sheets to be joined together.
Le Pape va en Ceremonie prendre Poſſeſſion, &c. } 304

6 The Pope's Chapel.
La Chapelle du Pape. } 318

The CEREMONIES of LOW MASS, &c. in thirty five FIGURES.

Les Ceremonies des Petites Meſſes, &c.

7 The Prieſt goes to the Altar, &c.
Le Prêtre va a l'autel. } 325

8 The Prieſt reads the Epiſtle.
Le Prêtre dit l'Epitre. } 326

9 The Prieſt joins his Hands, and prays for the Faithful that are living, &c.
Le Prêtre joignant les mains prie pour les Fidelles, &c. } 329

10 The Prieſt puts a ſmall Piece of the Hoſt into the Chalice, &c.
Le Prêtre met dans le Calice, &c. } 332

11 Solemn High Maſs.
Meſſe Solemnelle. } 334

12 Conſecration of a lage Croſs.
Conſecration de la grande Croix. } 349

13 Repreſentation of two famous Shrowds.
Figure des deux fameux Suaires. } 357

14 The

Directions to the Book-Binders, &c.

		Page
14	The Benediction of Sacerdotal Robes. Benediction des habits Sacerdotaux	359
15	The Confecration of Salt and Water for bleſſing the firſt Stone, &c. La Conſecration du ſel & de l'eau pour benir, &c.	370
16	The Biſhop writes the Alphabet upon the Croſs, &c. Le Evêque ecrit l'alphabet ſur la Croix de cendres, &c.	374
17	The Celebrant anoints the twelve Croſſes on the Walls, &c. Le Celebrant oint avec le Saint Chreme, &c.	378
18	The Virtues of the Agnus's Dei's, &c.	384
19	The Order of the Proceſſion for the Canonization of Saints, &c. under Clement I. Ordrè de la Proceſſion pour la Canonization, &c.	396
20	A Theatre erected in St. Peter's Church for the Canonization of Saints in 1712. Theatre dreſſé dans l'Egliſe de Saint Pierre, &c.	395
21	The Jubilee proclaimed with the Sound of Trumpets, &c. La Proclamation du Jubilé au ſon des Trompets, &c.	412
22	The Pope opens the Holy Gate, &c. Le Pape faiſant l'overture de la porte Sainte, &c.	415
23	The Pilgrims go in Proceſſion to viſit the ſeven Churches, &c. Les Pelerin vont en Proceſſion viſiter les 7 Egliſes, &c.	416

DIRECTIONS

For Placing the CUTS belonging to the JEWS.

From		Remove	To
Page	Numb.	Title of each Copper-Plate.	Page	Numb.
44	2	The various Poſtures of the Turks, &c.	16	1
20	1	The Plate with Medals, &c.	24	2
228	9	A. Antient Robe of the Jews, &c.	30	2
245	12	The Circumciſion of the Portugueſe, &c.	80	4
205	8	The Dedication of, &c.	196	7
228	9	A. Taled, or white Veil, &c.	200	7
232	10	A. The Prieſts Deſcendants of Aaron, &c.	208	8
238	11	The Search for the Leaven, &c.	215	9
244	11	The Proceſſion of Palms, &c.	218	9
246	12	Simcha Tora, or Rejoicing, &c.	220	9
236	10	Sounding the Horn, &c.	226	9
234	10	Inſtruments made uſe of, &c. is in its right Place.
248	12	Nuptial Ceremony, &c.	238	11
242	11	The Acafoth, &c. is in its right Place.

A

DISSERTATION

UPON

Religious Worſhip.

THE greateſt Part of Mankind would have no Knowledge of a God, if the Worſhip which is paid him, was not attended with ſome external Signs. The more dark and confuſed their Ideas have been of the Supreme Being, the more abſurd and extravagant have been theſe Signs of their Adoration. Ignorance has carried Devotion even to Barbarity; and the wiſeſt amongſt an infinite Number of formidable Zealots, will be the everlaſting Objects of Ridicule. Some of theſe have impiouſly imagined, that to [a] murder and deſtroy their Fellow-Creature without the leaſt Remorſe, was the beſt Service they could pay the Creator; others, have vainly fancied that by an [b] exceſſive whirling themſelves round they were to ſtupify their Senſes, and throw themſelves proſtrate on the Ground: Some, have been ſo fantaſtic and extravagant as to [c] laſh themſelves, and ſwing over a Fire: And others, to continue in [d] Raptures as many Hours as poſſibly they could. The Foundation of Temples and Chappels, the Ceremonies of Religion, Proceſſions, and the frequenting of Churches, have been called Religious Worſhip. In ſhort, People have believed that, in order to obtain the Aſſiſtance of God and the Forgiveneſs of their Sins, they were (if I may be allowed the Expreſſion) bound to importune him by endleſs Exclamations, to dazzle his Eyes with pompous or extraordinary Ceremonies, and with impertinent and very often inſupportable Cuſtoms: But few have been able to raiſe their Minds up to the divine Being, and break through thoſe numerous Rites, which were as ſo many Obſtacles in their Way; all which will more particularly appear in the Sequel of this Diſcourſe.

[a] The Scythians, Mexicans, Peruvians, &c.
[b] The Turkiſh Dervíſes.
[c] The Bramins.
[d] The Quakers, and thoſe called Pietiſts.

A DISSERTATION

I WILL not here amuſe my Reader with a critical Enquiry into the Origin of Words that expreſs that Duty, which Men have, in all Ages, thought themſelves indiſpenſably bound to pay unto the Deity of what Nature ſoever he be. It is almoſt needleſs to inform him, that, to adore and adorare, are derived from ad and orare; as if we ſhould ſay, ad os referre manum, to pray with the Hand before the Lips. We leave theſe and many other Etymologies, to ſuch as think them an Ornament to their Writings: But we ſhall only ſay, that Men have extremely multiplied the Terms deſigned to expreſs a religious Act; imagining, perhaps, that the ſame Idea expreſſed in their Prayers, in different Terms; ſome more ſubmiſſive than others, and always attended with certain Ceremonies, which they thought moſt acceptable to God, might prove more ſucceſsful, and in a more effectual Manner ſecure the divine Aſſiſtance. The Greeks and Romans thought there was a ſort of Magick Charm in ſome particular Words and ſuperſtitious Forms, which they made uſe of in their Prayers, and were even perſuaded, that, by the prevailing Power of them, they could compel the Deity to be favourable to them. I am willing to believe that no Chriſtian can be ſo ſtupid and ſuperſtitious as to imagine that his Prayers will have any ſuch Virtue: But there are very few Men perhaps, who do not believe they ſhall obtain what they ask of God, by uſing a Variety of ſynonimous Terms, attended with that external Devotion, in which all the Religion of an infinite Number of People does entirely conſiſt.

THERE is no great Difficulty to find out the Origin of Prayer. No ſooner had Adam fallen, but he was forced to implore the divine Mercy, and beg God's Aſſiſtance againſt the various Evils, which were the unhappy Reſult of his Diſobedience; but although he had retained his Innocence, he could never have been excuſed from imploring the Help of his Creator, and offering up his moſt humble Supplications to him; and hence proceeded [a] Cain and Abel's Sacrifices, though we otherwiſe know not either the Merit or Manner of them. All that can be ſaid farther is, that it appears from ſacred Writ, that at that very Time Cain was a wicked Man. After the Death of Abel, [b] and when Seth was old enough to know and worſhip God, it is to be ſuppoſed that ſome pious Men began to form a kind of Church, and fall into a regular Way of Worſhip: But the manner of it is likewiſe unknown to us.

As all Mankind in general have the ſame Favours to beg of God, it is no Wonder that their Forms of Prayer ſhould be almoſt the ſame, or at leaſt alike in many Reſpects. They all tend to the ſame End, and their Neceſſities are the ſame; but as Man by Degrees began to loſe the true Idea of the divine Being, and took upon him to attribute corporeal Qualities, or human Frailties to him, he likewiſe loſt the true Spirit of Prayer. He added Superſtition to his Worſhip, ſerved God under corporeal Notions, and being no longer capable of contemplating him in Spirit, whether through Pride, Fear, or Weakneſs, he was pleaſed to repreſent him by Images, Statues, &c. He offered up unto him all that could be offered to Men in order to appeaſe them, and arrived at ſuch a Degree of Extravagance at laſt, that he no longer dared to addreſs himſelf to him without Formalities, in a ſhort, eaſy, and a plain Manner, ſo as to be underſtood both by the People and himſelf. Hence aroſe ſo many extraordinary Ceremonies, ſuch extravagant Acts of Devotion, and ſuch an infinite Number of Forms, uſed in Prayer, which muſt have doubtleſs a very whimſical Effect, when not underſtood. Such amongſt the ancient Gentiles was the Io Pean, which made a Part of their pompous Addreſſes to Apollo, and which, if we may judge of it by the different Ways they have explained theſe [c] two Words, they did not underſtand.

[a] Geneſis, Chap. iv.
[b] Ibid. ver. 26.
[c] Some have explained them by ἰὴ Παιὰν, heal, O Pæan. Pæan was one of Apollo's Sirnames, others have given other Senſes to theſe two Words. And it is poſſible, that thoſe who derived them from two Hebrew Words, which ſignify, Eternal Jehovah, look down upon us, have given them a better Interpretation than either the antient Greeks, or modern Interpreters.

AMONGST

AMONGST the ancient Idolaters, Prayers ſometimes preceded Sacrifices; ſometimes they were uſed after them, and often between them. 'Tis very probable, that the firſt Race of Men did not offer up unto God any Blood-Offerings; and that having no Temples, they uſed at firſt to invoke him in the open Fields, or every Man in his own Habitation, without the leaſt outward Shew, Myſtery, or any of thoſe human Inventions, which in proceſs of Time produced the Irreligion of ſome, and the Bigotry of others. This Manner of Worſhip was too plain and ſimple; they ſoon went into the Groves to worſhip, and there built Chappels. The Silence of the Place inſpired them with Devotion. They conſecrated unto God the talleſt Trees of the Foreſts, and from thence they went up to the Hills. In ſhort, they carried their religious Worſhip to the Tops of Mountains, and as they changed their Situation, they took Care to leave Gods behind them wherever they came. God has upbraided the Jews with this ſhameful Idolatry. We ſee nevertheleſs in the Old Teſtament, that before the Promulgation of the Law, the Patriarchs did the ſame in regard to the true God. After all, there was no other Evil in this Manner of Worſhip than the Application of it to falſe Deities. Devotion requires that Silence and Contemplation which Woods and Fields inſpire. Mountains and other high Places give us an awful Idea of God's Exaltation and Superiority over us: And 'tis probable, that [a] Jupiter for the ſame Reaſon (according to Arrian) was worſhipped upon the Mountains of Bithynia; but had no Temple conſecrated to him there, (becauſe of God's Immenſity,) and the Sicyonians worſhipped ſome of their Gods in the ſame Manner. The Getæ and ancient Indians likewiſe conſecrated no Temples to their Gods; and as for the ancient Perſians, it is well known, that in their Irruptions into Greece, they deſtroyed all the Temples which they found there, out of a zealous Perſuaſion that God being infinite, could not be circumſcribed, or lodged within a Temple. The ſame Perſians did not repreſent the ſupreme Being by Statues; neither did they erect Altars to him; but offered their Sacrifices on high Places. It is certain that the Idolatry of that Nation was much purer than that of the reſt of the Heathens, but eſpecially more free from the Rubbiſh and confuſed Maſs of Superſtitions and Fables of the Greeks. The learned Hide goes ſtill a great deal farther. He aſſures us, in his Hiſtory of the Religion of the ancient Perſians, that for a great Length of Time they preſerved the true Religion. The Romans themſelves, who afterwards multiplied their Gods to that Degree, that they had Deities for all the Neceſſaries of Life; for Diſeaſes and Health; for the Kitchen, and the Market; for the Table and the Bed, &c. not to mention that Riffraff of leſſer Gods, which their Imaginations had framed for preſiding over their Marriages; [b] the Romans, I ſay, continued to worſhip their Gods for above one hundred and ſeventy Years, without making any Repreſentations of them: And had that been ſtill obſerved to this Day (ſays Varro) the Worſhip paid them would have been more pure and holy. It is probable, that Numa, the Founder of their religious Worſhip, had more adequate Ideas of Religion than other Idolaters, and poſſibly he might have drawn them from ſuch Springs as were not intirely corrupted. Thoſe very Romans did not ſwerve from the Practice of the primitive Times, (that is to ſay) from the Cuſtom of Worſhipping the Gods in Woods, and ſetting up their Worſhip in Foreſts. 'Twas in thoſe Places, that they built the Temple of Diana Aricina, and of Juno Lacinia; there it was that the Temple of the Goddeſs Pomona was built, in the Form and Manner that Chartari has repreſented it, and which may be ſeen at the End of this Diſſertation; and it is thus, that the modern Indians ſcatter their Idols all over the Woods and Fields. The People of Guinea, and thoſe of the Iſland of Zocotora, repair likewiſe to Groves in order to perform their religious Worſhip, and make uſe of the tal-

[a] Jupiter Caſius was likewiſe worſhipped upon a Mountain of that Name, ſituate between Syria and Egypt. The ſame Jupiter was alſo worſhipped upon a Mountain of Moab, named Peor, and from thence it is called Baal-Peor.

[b] St. Auſtin, of the City of God, Lib. IV. ch. 31. In the ſame Treatiſe may be ſeen a large and particular Account of thoſe leſſer Roman Deities, who were appointed to preſide over all the Actions of Life, and even over thoſe that were the moſt mechanic and mean.

leſt

left of their hollow Trees instead of Temples. The Deities of the Negroes (according to the Relations of Travellers) have no other Sanctuaries. The Laplanders placed their Stor-junkare upon Mountains amongst Trees, or in Places of difficult Access; in short, we ourselves have likewise in some measure given a Sanction to this rural Devotion, and upon a Supposition that God has appointed the Saints as Protectors of the Universe (which, according to the Scripture, they are one Day to judge) have honoured the Woods, the Hills, and Rocks with their Names.

Devotion having thus made her Retreat into the wild and desart Places, it is no wonder that some Men, who were warmer Zealots than the rest of Mankind, shook off the Cares of Life, gave over all bodily Labour, and grew indolent, idle, and even savage from their enthusiastic Veneration for the Gods. Yet this was not sufficient; a mysterious Turn was given to this solitary Worship, and severe Penances were added to it: Thus the Bramins for the most part live under Trees, and imagining, with the ancient Idolaters, that their religious Worship can never be too private, or too closely concealed. The Entrance to their [a] Pagods is built so very low, that the Day itself can hardly give any Light to their Idolatry. The Woods and Desarts are for the Generality their favourite Habitations, that they may practise their Worship in a voluntary and affected Misery, in Imitation of the ancient Brachmans and Gymnosophists, who in their Solitude denied themselves even the common Necessaries of Life; who from the Rising to the Setting of the Sun (as St. Austin tells us) with stedfast Eyes surveyed its Glories, standing in the midst of burning Sands, sometimes upon one Leg, and sometimes upon the other. The Turks have likewise affected this kind of Devotion; witness the austere Lives many of their Dervises lead amongst Rocks, and in solitary Woods, according to the Accounts given us by the most celebrated Travellers. Some Christians too have practised this kind of painful and melancholy Devotion. We have formerly had, and still have among us to this Day, some of these pious Recluses, whose Austerities are no ways inferior to those of the Indian Bramins, and who voluntarily undergo the most whimsical, tormenting, or cruel Fatigues that the human Body can possibly bear up under. In short, it is certain, that in all Ages, Men have had a strong Propensity to carry their Devotions into solitary Places, where doubtless they imagined they should find the Means of serving the Deity in a manner more worthy of him, with greater Mystery, and less Distraction; and perhaps took a Pride in expiating those Disorders amongst the wild Beasts, which they had not been able to avoid in the Company of rational Creatures.

When the ancient Idolaters arrived at any Place, they immediately offered up a kind of ejaculatory Prayer to the Deity of the Country. When they were on a Journey, they paid their Adoration to the Gods, which they supposed to preside over those Places through which they passed. Neither the Fauni, the Dryades, the Napeæ, the Gods who guarded the Limits of Countries, nor any other were omitted; nay, so great was the Respect which the Romans paid to the Gods of their very Enemies, that they would not sit down before any Town [b], till they had deputed Priests to entreat them to retire out of it, fearing their Attempts might prove unsuccessful, should the Gods be the stronger, or that they should be forced to make Prisoners of them in case they were defeated. Upon any Emergency of State, it was the Custom for some heroic Person to sacrifice himself for the Sake of his Country, that the Gods might accept the voluntary Oblation of one Man as an Attonement for all the People. Many Nations offered up Men in Sacrifices; and it was thus that the Ammonites worshipped Moloch; the Carthaginians, Saturn; and the Scythians of Tauris, the Goddess Diana; and this is a religious Custom to this Day practised in several Nations of America. It was in use

[a] This Word here signifies the Temple of the Deity, and is likewise used for the Deity itself.

[b] Coram obsessâ urbe sacerdotes Deos evocabant, &c. See Brouwer, de veterum ac recent. adorationibus.

amongst

amongſt the Mexicans, till the Arrival of the Spaniards in the new-diſcovered World. But other Nations, not of ſo ſavage a Diſpoſition, went no farther than ſcarifying and ſcourging themſelves, in order to appeaſe the Anger of their Gods; and we find amongſt ourſelves ſome Remains of this bloody Devotion. There are ſome Chriſtian Penitents, who in their Proceſſions ſcourge, and flay, and tear their very Fleſh off, to draw down upon themſelves the divine Mercy: And theſe pious Proceſſions are frequently performed in Times of public Calamity, to invoke the Aſſiſtance of the Almighty, and thoſe Saints who are appointed the Protectors of our States.

As Men grew more civilized, they built themſelves Cities; Devotion ſhone with a greater Luſtre, and removed from its uſual Retirements, into the moſt public Places. We have already hinted, that the Perſians believed the ſupreme Being could not be confined within the narrow Limits of a Temple; yet Temples were abſolutely neceſſary both for the Conveniency of Worſhip, and the Honour of Religion. Nay, thoſe religious Places ſeem to heighten our Zeal, and give Strength to our Devotion; for God himſelf is preſent, and preſides over ſuch Aſſemblies. The moſt illiterate Heathens believed this, which is exactly conformable to what God himſelf has declared in his moſt holy Word: For (ſaith he) Where two or three are gathered together in my Name, there am I in the midſt of them. The Greeks and Romans made their Addreſſes to their Gods in Temples. All Antiquity is a Witneſs of this; but under Pretence of Religion, Debauchery ſoon crept in, and at laſt became almoſt an Act of Faith in the Worſhip of various Deities. Bacchus, Saturn, Adonis, Pan, Flora, Priapus, and Venus were worſhipped after a very profligate, irregular, and indecent Manner. The Women proſtituted themſelves in Honour of this laſt Goddeſs at Babylon, where ſhe was worſhipped under the Name of [a] Mylitta; and the nocturnal Revels of Ceres were infamous, and moſt ſhamefully obſcene. Chriſtianity no longer admits of any of theſe enormous Practices; and yet Aſſignations, Declarations of Love, Intrigues, and other ſcandalous Appointments, continue to be made in our Churches; and the Devotion of Pilgrimages, nine Days Solitude, &c. are very often owing to a Variety of Cauſes, wherein Religion is not any ways concerned.

HOWEVER, religious Worſhip being once confined to Temples, the Appointment of Miniſters for the Deities became neceſſary. God himſelf inſtituted thoſe whom he deſigned for the Service of the true Religion, and Mankind eſtabliſhed thoſe who propagated that which was the falſe. Both the one and the other, from the mercenary Views of worldly Intereſt, have been multiplied to an infinite Number. From hence ſprang up a numerous Crowd of worthleſs Creatures, who pretend a Right to ſerve at thoſe Altars which maintain them. True Religion by Degrees became leſs Spiritual, though more over-run with Ceremonies, and the falſe, more myſterious and fantaſtical. The Prieſts found Means to hinder Men from Action till they had been firſt conſulted. They ſet all the Springs of the Paſſions in Motion, were at the Head of all Intrigues, and made themſelves Maſters of the Courts of Princes. In ſhort, they damn'd People for God's Sake. So great has the Authority of Prieſts ever been in all [b] Religions. We know the Power of the Augurs, Soothſayers, and Prieſts amongſt the Greeks and Romans, of the Magi among the Perſians, of the Druids amongſt the Gauls, of the Bards amongſt the Celtæ and Britons; and the World is impoſed upon after the ſame Manner to this very Day. The Mufti, and other Doctors of the Mahometan Law, are too often the grand Engines in the moſt important Debates of the Divan. The Inhabitants of the New World, Africa, the Eaſt Indies, &c. undertake nothing without the Advice of their Prieſts and Fryars. I preſume it is altogether unneceſſary to produce Examples of what is practiſed among ourſelves.

[a] Vid. Caſtell. & alios de feſtis Græc. In Theſmoph. Mulierbre pudendum colebatur.

[b] Amongſt the Germans the Prieſts gave Sentence of Life and Death upon Criminals. Many Nations formerly choſe their Prieſts for Kings. In the Eaſt and Weſt Indies, China, Japan, &c. the Prieſts and Monks have an unlimited Power. Men are ſo framed by Nature, that there is an abſolute Neceſſity that Prieſts ſhould have Reſpect paid them, in order to maintain the Dignity of Religion; but the main Point is, to ſet reaſonable Bounds to that Reſpect, ſo as not to fall into the Exceſſes of thoſe, who give themſelves up blindly to the Paſſions of Prieſts.

LET us proceed then, to give an Abſtract of all the various Cuſtoms which Men have introduced into religious Worſhip in Honour of the ſupreme Being. The Romans worſhipped the Gods at the Break of Day; and honoured them with Thankſgivings on Feſtivals, and other ſolemn Occaſions. The Law of the Twelve Tables was expreſs on this Point. Let the People worſhip thoſe Gods who have always been acknowledged as ſuch, and thoſe Men whoſe Merit has gained them a Place in Heaven; ſuch as Hercules, Æſculapius, Caſtor and Pollux, &c. Let them conſecrate Chappels in Honour of thoſe Virtues, to which thoſe holy Men are indebted for their Deification. To theſe the Romans made their ſolemn Applications in Times of Diſtreſs, and they had their Days of Penance, as we have ours. They went in Proceſſion [a] bare-footed, &c. The ancient Germans ſacrificed to their God Thor every [b] Thurſday, in hopes by that Means to avert his terrible Judgments of Hail-ſtones, Lightning, and Thunder. Vows were had Recourſe to, in order, as it were, to bribe the Gods, and bring them over to their Intereſt by propoſing advantageous Conditions to them. [c] The ſolemn Contract made with them on ſuch Occaſions was carried into their Temples, and placed at the Feet of their Statues; and as ſoon as the Favour implored of their Gods was obtained, it was no more than Juſtice to fulfil their Vow, and then the Contract was cancelled. This was deemed an abſolute Acquittance.

WITH regard to Prayers, Jeſus Chriſt forbids his Diſciples to lengthen them by vain and impertinent Repetitions. Doubtleſs a Repetition of the ſame Thing in Prayer, proceeds neither from Zeal nor Reſpect. 'Tis very probable, that the Prayers of Idolaters might be very tedious: But it is ſurpriſing that Chriſtians ſhould have fallen into the ſame Error. In my Opinion, to repeat the ſame Prayer to God fifty Times in the Space of an Hour, is as impertinent, as to preſent fifty Copies of the ſame Petition one after another to a Prince. [d] Amongſt the Turks there are a ſort of Bigots, who affect to repeat the Name of God with an irreverent Volubility, which rather reſembles Madneſs than Devotion. The Ancients were very fond of uſing the Number Three in their Prayers, of which we have here given ſome [e] Inſtances. They imagined likewiſe that their Gods delighted in a long Train of Titles and pompous Appellations to expreſs their Supremacy and Power; and leſt they ſhould unhappily diſtinguiſh them by any Name that might give Offence, they took peculiar Care to mention thoſe [f] Attributes with a Salvo or ſome modeſt Reſtriction. But this is not all the ceremonious Part of Prayer; for when they prayed aloud, a Miniſter of the [g] Gods rehearſed the Prayer to the People, who repeated it in the very ſame Terms; and the ſame Thing is now practiſed amongſt the Roman Catholic and Engliſh Chriſtians, as well as amongſt the Turks. I ſhall take no Notice of ſuch Prayers as were uttered in a low Voice in public Aſſemblies,

[a] Nudipedalia. V. Tertull. Apolog.

[b] V. Olaus Hiſtor.

[c] Vota concepta Tabellis inſcribebant . . . . ita conſcripta ſignabant . . . . obſignata affigebant Deorum ſtatuis . . . . Voti compotes facti Tabellas ſolvebant, id eſt lacerabant. Brouwer de Adorationibus.

[d] V. Thevenot.

[e] For Example: Horace ſaith to Diana, Quæ laborantes utero puellas ter vocata audis. Tibullus, Ter cane, ter dictis deſpice Carminibus. Ovid, Ter tollit in æthera Palmas.

[f] For Inſtance this, Quoquo nomine, quoquo ritu, quaquâ facie te fas eſt invocare; and this other, ſive Deus, ſive Dea es: not preſuming to aſcertain the Sex of the Deity whom they worſhipped.

[g] Præco, ἱεροκήρυξ.

nor

nor of the [a] Set Forms conſecrated to this pious Uſe, as well amongſt the Ancients as the Moderns. Every Religion has its own particular Forms; and indeed it would be impoſſible to do without them, unleſs Men were reſolved to introduce Diſorder and Anarchy into Religion.

I BEFORE obſerved, that the Romans worſhipped their Gods at Break of Day: Nay, almoſt all the Nations in the World, even the moſt barbarous and ſavage, obſerved this Cuſtom. At Day-break the Perſian Magi began their Hymns in Honour of their Gods, and ſaluted the Riſing Sun, that Orb of Light, which they looked upon as an Eternal Principle. The ancient Tartars likewiſe began the Day with Invocations to the Sun, to whom they every Morning offered up the choiceſt of their Meats and Drinks; but Idolaters of a more ſtrict Piety did not confine their Devotion to the Morning only. Every Hour of the Day is proper for the Practice of this Duty; for which Reaſon the Evening as well as the Morning Hours were ſet apart for the Service of the Gods. 'Twould be tedious to mention the many Sacrifices, Ceremonies, and nocturnal Prayers in Uſe amongſt the Heathens. The Mahometans call the People to Prayers five Times a Day, and he who will be a faithful Muſſulman muſt be exact herein; they appear at this their Devotion in ſo modeſt and humble a Poſture, that it is impoſſible to expreſs a more profound Submiſſion. The [b] Jews and [c] Chriſtians likewiſe have their Hours for the Practice of public Prayer, and Worſhip of the Divinity. We will now proceed to ſuch other Particulars as Men have thought neceſſary, in order to ſerve God aright, and what they have imagined the ſupreme Being might require of them on this Occaſion. We ſhall not however diſtinguiſh divine Inſtitutions from thoſe merely human.

'TIS well known that the Jews have always, and ſtill to this Day do ſet apart Saturday for the public Performance of divine Worſhip, which they obſerve with almoſt a childiſh Exactneſs. Moreover, they have appointed ſolemn Days in Commemoration of the peculiar Bleſſings which God of his infinite Goodneſs has been pleaſed to vouchſafe unto them. The Chriſtians have ſubſtituted Sunday in the room of it, and obſerve the Paſſover and Pentecoſt of the Jews in Remembrance of Jeſus Chriſt, their firſt Founder. They afterwards kept holy ſome particular Days in Honour of his Apoſtles. In ſhort, Feſtivals have been ſo multiplied out of reſpect to the Saints, that every Day

[a] Theſe ſet Forms and Catechiſms are above all Things neceſſary for the Common People, who have not Capacity enough to underſtand their Religion without ſuch Helps; and if among Chriſtians the Reſpect which is paid to them is arrived to a Degree of Superſtition, it is no way owing to ſuch as appointed them; nay, the Clergy may be placed in the Rank of common People in this Reſpect, and perhaps Intereſt is the Caſe; for the more ignorant the Doctor is, the more is he reſpected by ſcrupulous Conſciences. Ignorance is a ſort of indulgent Parent, who pampers a vaſt Number of idle Children; from thence proceeds Family Religion. The famous Oracle of Delphos recommended to the Athenians the Obſervance of their Anceſtors Rites: (V. Cicero de legibus:) And ſome People are to be found, who, of all the Editions of the Pſalms of David which were tranſlated into Verſe by Clement Marot, and Theodore Beza, chuſe thoſe wherein the moſt obſolete Words are as it were conſecrated, in order to ſing in the ſame Language with their Anceſtors, and perpetuate a religious Obſcurity in the Devotion of their Families.

[b] Mr. Roſs, in his Religions of the World, gives us an Account of ſeveral Cuſtoms which the Jews practiſed during their Prayers; for Inſtance, he ſays, that they pray with their Cloaths tucked up, their Faces turned towards Jeruſalem, and their Hands upon their Heart; that when they are at Prayers, they muſt not touch their naked Skin, break Wind any way, or ſuffer their Thoughts to wander; and that nothing muſt interrupt them, even though they were liable to be bitten by any venomous Creature, &c. The Jews pray three Times a Day. V. Father Simon in his firſt Diſſertation upon the Ceremonies of the Jews.

[c] The Roman Catholics have their canonical Hours. In ſeveral of the Proteſtant Dominions there are Prayers once a Day, and ſome of them leave the People to follow their own Inclinations. After all, woe to them that do not pray to God, as it is their Duty; a good Chriſtian always makes God his chief Object. Some Caſuiſts have conſidered all the Occaſions proper for Prayer; and have put ſome pious Queries concerning it, as whether it is lawful to praiſe God and ſing Pſalms, &c. when a Man is in the Act of Generation; or when he is eaſing Nature.

in

in the Year has its [a] Patron. So that were this heavenly Hierarchy to be honoured according to its Deſerts, we ſhall be under an indiſpenſible Obligation of leading our Lives entirely diſengaged from all worldly Employments. But the Roman Catholic Church has wiſely provided againſt ſuch an Exceſs, and moſt of the Proteſtant Chriſtians have retained no more than four ſolemn Feſtivals in their Reformation, viz. Chriſtmas, Eaſter, the Aſcenſion of our Lord, and Whitſuntide.

THE Heathens likewiſe ſet apart particular Days for the ſolemn worſhip of their Gods, on which it was not lawful to do any manner of Work whatever. The [b] Greeks made a Law whereby they confirmed the Celebration of thoſe Days. The Romans imagined that any manual Operation whatever on a Feſtival, was an Act of Prophanation; and in order to prevent any ſuch Miſdemeanors, they ordered a Herald to make Proclamation, commanding every one to abſtain from Labour; for if the Prieſt diſcerned the leaſt Work going forward during the [c] Sacrifice, the Ceremony was profaned. All Quarrels and Diſputes were ſuſpended at that Time in honour of the Gods: But as ſoon as the Feaſt was over, all Things went on in their old Courſe, and Law-Suits in all their Courts of Judicature were carried on with their uſual Vigour. No profane Perſons were permitted to aſſiſt at theſe ſacred Ceremonies; and [d] thoſe who were preſent were ordered to obſerve a religious Silence, leſt during the Converſation any ominous Expreſſion ſhould accidentally fall from them. Let no one however imagine that their Devotion on this Account was ever the more ſincere; no, it was only a ceremonial Silence, which in Proceſs of Time perhaps became a real Devotion: For as it is poſſible that ſome Men might be piouſly attentive during this ſilent Celebration of thoſe Myſteries; ſo it is very probable, that Cuſtom might by Degrees bring over ſome ſincere Proſelytes to Religion by that Practice. However, [e] Silence in the Temples, and at the Altars during divine Service, has ever been looked upon as the greateſt Sign of that Reſpect which is due to the Almighty. The ſame Thing may be ſaid as to a Conſcience void of Offence; for no Man that is guilty of any enormous Sins can be any ways acceptable to the ſupreme Being. 'Twas neceſſary therefore to exclude ſuch an Offender in Form from his divine [f] Worſhip; and if this was the Cuſtom of the Pagans, much more neceſſarily ought it to be confirmed amongſt Chriſtians. The Office of the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper rejects thoſe Chriſtians who lead a ſcandalous Life, and exhorts them to Repentance, denouncing God's Judgments againſt them; And the Church excommunicates them, if,. after ſuch wholſom Admonitions, they turn a deaf Ear, and perſiſt in their Perverſeneſs.

THE Romans began their public Worſhip with the Invocation of Janus, as appears by ſeveral Inſtances in our [g] Remarks; and they obſerved many other Ceremonies which are more particularly ſpecified in the Authors who have written concerning them. The Romans imagined, that Janus was their Introductor to their Gods, their favourite Meſ-

[a] There is no Probability, that God or his Saints ſhould be pleaſed with the Devotions of thoſe Days, which are only employed in the Indulgence of all ſenſual Enjoyments. All that is religious in them conſiſts amongſt ſome Chriſtians in a few Ceremonies which are of no ſervice to Devotion; and their Zeal is heightened only by ſet Forms and loud Exclamations.

[b] Lex apud Athenienſes jubebat, ut ſacra diis rite fierent, non avocato ad alias curas animo. Vide Brouwer, de Adorationibus & legem apud S. Petitum, de Legibus Atticis.

[c] A Flaminibus præmittebantur qui denunciarent opificibus, manus abſtinerent ab opere, ne, ſi vidiſſet ſacerdos facientem opus, ſacra polluerentur. Feſtus.

[d] The Formulary of the Greeks was, Favens eſto omnis populus: That of the Romans, Favete linguis. Ut rite peragi poſſit ſacrum, nullâ malâ voce obſtrepente, imperatur ſilentium, ſaith Seneca.

[e] The Imans, or Prieſts, in their Exhortations to the Mahometans, ſtrictly recommend Silence and Attention to them during the Time of Prayer.

[f] Procul eſte prophani. Omnis præfatio ſacrorum eos quibus non ſunt puræ manus ſacris arcet. Tit. Livius

[g] Te primùm pia thura rogant, te vota ſalutant, ſays Martial to Janus; and Ovid, Jane, tibi primùm thura merumque fero. This is farther proved by a Roman Prayer taken out of Livy. Jane, Jupiter, Mars Pater, Quirine, Bellona, Lares, Divi Novenſiles, Dei indigites, Divi, quorum eſt poteſtas noſtrorum hoſtiumque, Deique Manes, vos precor, veneror, veniampeto feroque, uti Pop. R. Quirit. vim victoriamque proſperetis.

ſenger

ſenger to deliver their Supplications, and their beſt Advocate. They likewiſe believed, that he firſt inſtituted the Worſhip of the Gods, and built Temples and Altars in honour to them. At the Cloſe of their Devotion they always addreſſed themſelves to the Goddeſs Veſta. She was the Symbol of Religion, the Guardian of the ſacred Fire, and Depoſitary of the Myſteries of Religion, Rerum cuſtos intimarum, ſaith Cicero. It was but reaſonable therefore that ſhe ſhould be remembred at the Cloſe of their Devotion. However the Greeks by a contrary Cuſtom began their Devotions with Veſta, as you may ſee by ſome Inſtances in [a] the Notes. Thus Fire was the firſt Object of the ancient Perſians Adoration.

MEN were excluded from the Temples of the Gods for matrimonial Converſation. Several Paſſages might be produced from the ancient Hiſtorians to confirm the Truth of this Aſſertion. The Jews likewiſe looked upon all Defilements of Body as capital, but chiefly the Impurities of Women, or ſuch other Uncleanneſſes as Men contracted by their Converſation with them. The Brachmans by the Laws of their Religion are enjoined to preſerve their Bodies chaſt; but if we may credit Travellers, they are ſecretly very vicious, and the moſt hypocritical Creatures under the Sun. We are aſſured, that the Samaritans do not converſe with their Wives during the Sabbath; and the Mahometans are likewiſe ſtrict Obſervers of every Thing that tends to Purity of Body; for they not only abſtain from Women at the Time of their Devotions, but even have divers kinds of Ablutions, which they practiſe more or leſs according to the Degree of their Pollutions. If we may credit St. Gregory the Great, a Man who hath lately converſed with his Wife ſhould not be permitted to enter into a Church, it being an Indignity offered to the divine Majeſty. However, we may preſume that St. Gregory did not think it amiſs, if in this caſe Chriſtians were left to the Teſtimony of their own Conſcience. The Roman Catholicks oblige their Prieſts to live unmarried, and the Laws of their Function condemn them to a [b] perpetual Chaſtity. But this ſort of Abſtinence, if I may be allowed the Expreſſion, was not the only one preſcribed in former Times. The ancient Egyptian Prieſts abſtained both from Wine and [c] Women; and the Jewiſh Rabbi's from all Sorts of ſtrong Liquors. The Prieſts of Iſis and Cybele abſtained from certain Meats; and all Pagan Prieſts in general obſerved Faſts and Abſtinences on particular religious Occaſions. They likewiſe affected to throw off all the Cares of Life, and depend upon public Charity in honour of ſome of their Deities, taking up the Profeſſion of a voluntary Poverty, like that which was practiſed by the Votaries of Cybele, the Mother of the Gods. They uſed [d] to carry the Images of their Deities through the Streets, and from one Province to another, in the moſt devout and ſolemn Manner. Theſe Images made a ſtrong Impreſſion on the Mind of pious Heathens, and procured the holy Pilgrims of the Goddeſs a comfortable Subſiſtence, which helped them to undergo the Hardſhips of their Poverty.

[a] Pauſanias. Sacrificant Veſtæ primùm, tum ſecundo loco Jovi Olympio. Porphyrius, A Veſta Cœleſtium Deorum ſacra primùm auſpicati.

[b] Intolerable Burthen! the Weight of which was amply perceived by the Reformation of the Proteſtants. Their Clergy marry, and Religion is no Sufferer by it, though ſome People pretend that a married State and the Cares of a Family, divert a Miniſter from his Duty to the Church. But the Clergy who are debarred Matrimony, often keep Miſtreſſes, which certainly muſt be a Crime of a more heinous Nature than having a Wife.

[c] They abſtained from Fleſh, and Wine, the more effectually to extinguiſh the Flames of Concupiſcence. The ancient Brachmans did the ſame. The Gymnoſophiſts lived upon Rice and Fruits. The Prieſts of Ceres abſtained alſo from eating of Fleſh, which was one of the three Precepts that Triptolemus had given them.

[d] It appears, that Men are well enough pleaſed with ſeeing a certain Set of Enthuſiaſts ſequeſter themſelves from the reſt, which we might almoſt call the Corps de Reſerve of Piety. Theſe Bigots profeſs Poverty, Abſtinence, and Retirement; and yet in the midſt of their Solitude they by Degrees find themſelves richer, better fed, and more at Liberty than the Reſt of Mankind. The Men of the World, whoſe Buſineſs or Pleaſures will not allow them Time to pray, are over-joy'd to find Men who will take upon them the Care of praying for them, and ſecure them a Pardon from God, without the former's being at any other Trouble than paying a Sum of Money, and ſubmitting to a few Ceremonies.

THERE were divers Ways of contracting Pollution by Dreams. In the Play entitled the Frogs, written by Ariſtophanes, one of the Actors calls for ſome Water to waſh himſelf after an ill Dream; and a certain Number of Days were requiſite for the Recovery of their former Purity; often ten, [a] and ſometimes thirty. Seven Days were appointed by the Jewiſh Law for the Purification of a Man that was Seminifluus, and a Woman who had her Terms; three and thirty Days for a Woman delivered of a Male Child, and threeſcore and ſix of a Female. Amongſt the ancient Idolaters, if a Man committed Murder, or any other Act of Violence, he was denied the Privilege of approaching the Altars till he had firſt waſhed [b] himſelf; and amongſt Chriſtians, Penance is enjoined in the like Caſes. In ſhort, every criminal Action, of what Nature or Kind ſoever; every Action grounded upon any Impurity either of Body or Mind, was deemed diſpleaſing to the Almighty, and excluded a Man from all religious Privileges. Funeral Rites were placed in the ſame Rank. The Jews pronounced ſuch as had touched dead Bodies impure; and it was a Cuſtom amongſt the [c] Greeks to hang up the Hair of their Dead at their Door, leſt the People ſhould defile themſelves by going into the Houſe.

THE Purification of the Body, tho' never ſo inconvenient and troubleſome, is ſtill much eaſier than that of the Soul; and as there was a Neceſſity to preſerve the latter in their Minds by ſome obvious and laſting Memorial, the Uſe of luſtral Water was introduced, which the Chriſtian Religion has aboliſhed, and inſtituted holy Water in the Room of it. The People as well as the Prieſts uſed to dip their Fingers into this luſtral Water, as they went into the Temples to ſacrifice; and amongſt the Chriſtians, thoſe who pay a religious regard to conſecrated Water, aſcribe ſeveral Virtues almoſt miraculous to the Uſe of it. We may allow it one Quality which is indiſputable, viz. that it is an awful Admonition to Chriſtians not to appear in the Preſence of God without a clear Conſcience; for otherwiſe all Aſperſions with holy Water, however devoutly [d] performed, can have no other Advantage than the Applauſe of Mankind. Although the Devotion of the Heathens was ſo curious in the Uſe of Water for religious Purpoſes, yet it did not preciſely determine whether they ſhould uſe Spring or Sea Water, &c. [h] They were at perfect Liberty therefore to uſe that which was moſt agreable to them. Nevertheleſs, Sea Water was much eſteemed on this Occaſion, which was the reaſon that abundance of People uſed formerly to pay their Devotions on the Sea-ſhore. If a Man found himſelf polluted with any Crime, all he had to do was, to plunge himſelf into the Sea, and ſay ſome Prayer ſuitable to the Occaſion on the very Place of Purification. It was notwithſtanding an eſtabliſhed Cuſtom for them to waſh in running Water, and as they were obliged to bath often, the Prieſts of ancient Egypt took Care to build their Temples and Chappels on the Borders of the Nile. The Indians of the preſent Age obſerve the ſame Precautions, moſt of their Pagods being ſituated near ſome River: They pay moreover a peculiar Reſpect to the Waters of the River Ganges: But as they cannot at all Times be near enough to waſh themſelves in its ſacred Streams, the

[a] Feſtus: Denariæ, ſaith he, vel tricenariæ ceremoniæ, quibus ſacra adituris decem continuis diebus, vel triginta, certis quibuſdam rebus carendum erat.

[b] We here ſpeak of thoſe Violences only, which Officers of Juſtice could not come at the Knowledge of, either becauſe of the Dignity of the Offender, or of ſome other particular Reaſons. Water was not always uſed on this Occaſion amongſt the Heathens; and Ovid juſtly condemns it in his Faſti.

[c] Vide Eurip. at the Beginning of his Alceſta. They likewiſe kept Water always ready at their Doors in order to waſh the Body of the Dead.

[d] There is a fine Paſſage of Lactantius upon this Subject ..... Flagitiis omnibus inquinati veniunt ad precandum, & ſe pie ſacrificáſſe opinantur, ſi cutim laverint; tanquam libidines intra pectus incluſas ulli amnes abluant, aut ulla maria purificent.

[e] Vide Lomejer. de luſtrationibus Veterum. The Indians likewiſe uſe luſtral Water. They water the Front of their Houſes carefully every Morning with Cows Urin, which they pretend, procures them the Favour of the Gods; they believe too, that this Urine has the power entirely to waſh away their Sins.

Bramins

Bramins tell them that all other Waters will have the ſame Virtue, if, whilſt they are bathing, they pronounce theſe Words; O Ganges! purify me. In like Manner the Romans had an extraordinary Veneration for all Rivers and Fountains; for as they believed that thoſe Waters were governed by ſome Deity who continually reſided in them, the People were commanded to be very cautious in their Bathing, leſt [a] they ſhould any ways diſturb the Water. They were enjoined likewiſe to obſerve a profound Silence at the ſame Time, that they might not interrupt the Repoſe of the Deity.

[b] THE Romans uſed likewiſe to waſh the Feet of their new-married Women, it being an Emblem of that Purity which was required of them in the marriage-State. They who approach'd the Altar in order to offer ſacrifice, [c] frequently waſhed their whole Bodies, and ſometimes their Heads only. As for the Cuſtom of waſhing of Hands, it was ſo conſtantly practiſed in all religious Worſhip, and is ſo well known, that it would be needleſs to enlarge upon that Topick. There are abundance of Inſtances of it both in the ſacred Scriptures and prophane Authors. The Cuſtom of waſhing the Feet with a religious View was not quite ſo common, but yet often practiſed; and perhaps Jeſus Chriſt alluded to it, when he waſhed the Feet of his twelve Apoſtles; though on the other hand it appears, that in the Eaſtern Countries the Cuſtom of waſhing the Feet of thoſe who were invited to a Feaſt, was but a common Civility; and the ſame Ceremony is now practiſed by the Pope and other Roman Catholic Princes, as an Act of Condeſcenſion and Chriſtian Humility.

BUT Ablution, or Bathing, was not at all Times neceſſary; for they often ſprinkled themſelves only with a Branch of Olive, Laurel, or with ſome Inſtrument made for that particular Purpoſe, which they dipp'd in Water; yet the Celebration of the more pompous Myſteries, ſuch as thoſe of Ceres, required total Ablution. No one could conſult the Oracle of Trophonius till he had firſt bathed himſelf ſeveral Times in the River Hercyna; and juſt before his Admiſſion into the Cave, where this famous Oracle was pronounced, two young Men, Aſſiſtants to the Prieſts of it, waſhed him over again. In ſhort, Purification by Water was formerly almoſt an univerſal Cuſtom amongſt the Heathens. The Jewiſh Religion likewiſe required conſtant Ablutions: And as People inſenſibly accuſtom themſelves to look upon Things appropriated to ſacred Uſes, with a kind of ſuperſtitious Awe, thoſe very Things which were at firſt but Signs, became at length the eſſential Part of their Religion; an Error with which Jeſus Chriſt reproached the Jews. At this very Day the ſame Ablutions are practiſed with the utmoſt Strictneſs by the Turks, as well as all Mahometans; and indeed Chriſtian Baptiſm itſelf may be looked upon as a kind of [d] Ablution.

Co-

[a] Theſe two Paſſages prove what is here advanced:

Hujus Nymphæ loci, Sacri cuſtodia Fontis,
Dormio, dum blandæ ſentio murmur aquæ.

Parce meum, quiſquis tangis cava marmora, ſomnum
Rumpere, ſive bibas, ſive lavêre, tace.
NYMPHIS LOCI.
BIBE. LAVA.
TACE.

They are taken from the Diſſertation of Brouwerius de adorationibus.

[b] Aqua petita de puro fonte per puerum feliciſſimum, vel puellam quæ nuptiis intereſt, de quâ ſolebant nubentibus pedes lavari. Varro in Briſſon. de nuptiis.

Aquâ aſpergebatur nova nupta, ſive ut pura caſtaque ad virum veniret, ſive ut ignem & aquam cum viro communicaret, Idem.

[c] Diis ſuperis ſacrificaturi ſeſe lavabant, inferis rem ſacram facturi tantùm aſpergebantur. Brouwerius de adorationibus.

[d] One part of the Greeks bath themſelves in the River Jordan, in Commemoration of the Ordinance of Baptiſm; and this Ceremony is revived every Year with great Licentiouſneſs. A fine Repreſentation of Baptiſm! which ought to ſet before

COVERING the Head was alſo obſerved as an eſſential part of religious Worſhip, and the Jews to this Day keep their Heads covered with a Veil during all the Time of public Devotion in their Synagogues, as they did formerly. The Turks who profeſs a Religion for which they are in a good meaſure indebted to the Jews, imitate them likewiſe in remaining uncovered during the Time of divine Service in their Moſques. The Romans after they had waſhed themſelves always covered their Heads when they approached any of their Deities, partly out of Reſpect, and partly out of Superſtition; but Signs being arbitrary, our great and only Care ſhould be to fix our Attention upon the Object repreſented by them. We uncover our Heads when we pray to God, or approach any Thing that is ſacred. We go into a Church likewiſe always uncovered: But what an unaccountable Whim it is, that the reformed Proteſtants cover their Heads during the reading of the Bible, and the Preaching of the Miniſter, and yet uncover themſelves when they pray or ſing Pſalms! Theſe very reformed Miniſters in ſome Countries preach with their Hats on. But to return to the Romans: To be covered, or veil'd during the Time of divine Service, that is to ſay, whilſt they were praying to their Gods, was a general Practice among them. They likewiſe covered themſelves at ſuch Times as they endeavoured to move Compaſſion; and this Cuſtom was not only preſerved on thoſe Occaſions, but in nuptial Ceremonies too, to denote the Bride's Modeſty, and that Virgin Shame which being then upon the Point of expiring, retired from the Heart into the Face to give it an additional Glow of Beauty. In a Time of Mourning the Face was covered; the ſame was obſerved by Criminals condemned to die. It is very probable, that the Uſe of Veils was firſt introduced to hinder our Thoughts from wandering upon external Objects during religious Worſhip; and perhaps to intimate how unworthy we are of beholding the Deity; yet, in Sacrifices to ſome particular Gods this Cuſtom was not obſerved; for Inſtance to Saturn, [a] Hercules, Ops or Rhea, &c. But the Grecians always ſacrificed to their Gods with their Heads uncovered.

THESE Veils with which they covered themſelves were generally white, and ſo likewiſe were the Veſtments ſet apart for religious Ceremonies. White is the Symbol of that Purity of Soul, and of that State of Innocence in which we ought to appear before the Almighty. It likewiſe is the Repreſentation of Joy in Oppoſition to Black, which is the Emblem of Sorrow. The Antients uſed to offer up white Victims to their Gods in Sacrifices of Thankſgiving, and were of Opinion they could do nothing more agreable to the ſupreme Being than to ſerve him in white: But as for the infernal Deities, as they imagined them to be wicked to the laſt Degree, and to take Pleaſure in the Miſfortunes of Mankind; and as they lived in everlaſting Darkneſs, they muſt doubtleſs be of a ſad and gloomy Complexion; ſo they paid them ſuch Adoration as they imagin'd ſuitable to their Tempers; and for that Purpoſe cloathed themſelves in black. Amongſt the antient Chriſtians, ſuch as were newly baptiſed were always dreſſed in white; and it is well known, that the Roman Catholicks have conſecrated this Colour to their relifore our Eyes the Neceſſity of the Regeneration of that Man who becomes a Chriſtian! We ought not to forget placing the Bleſſing of Bells, as it is practiſed amongſt the Roman Catholicks, into the Number of eſſential Ablutions. It is a kind of Baptiſm, ſince they waſh them with holy Water, and give ſome Saint's Name to them, by whoſe Invocation they offer them up to God, to the End that the Saint may protect them, and help the Church to obtain of God what ſhe deſireth of him, in the Words of the Ritual of Alet. This Ablution is ſo much the more neceſſary for Bells, ſince they repreſent, (as in the Words of the foreſaid Ritual) the Church who inciteth the Faithful to praiſe God, &c. The ſounding Metal of Bells which is heard at a great Diſtance, is a Figure of the Perpetuity of the Goſpel, the Sound whereof has been carried all over the World. They are likewiſe Types of the Miniſters and Preachers of the Goſpel. The waſhing of the Bells is attended with a Benediction, to the End that being once bleſſed, they may have power to make an Impreſſion on the Heart by the Virtue of the Holy Ghoſt, ... and that their ringing may drive away all evil Spirits, &c. We may hereto add, that when the Sound of the Bells of Churches ſtrike the Organs of the Ear, it inſpires the Heart of many Chriſtians with Devotion.

[a] Among the Figures which follow this Diſſertation; obſerve that Medal which repreſents a Sacrifice of Hercules, and that other which repreſents Piety veiled, whereby the Manner wherein Women veiled themſelves when they offered up a Sacrifice will appear. Obſerve likewiſe that which repreſents the Emperor Severus, veiled for the ſame Ceremony, and that which repreſents a Phrygian Cap, which they put on upon the like Occaſion.

gious

giousWorſhip; but the reformed Churches in France,and the[a] Calviniſts in general, have after their Example laid aſide almoſt all Ceremonies in the Celebration of their divine Service, and rejected this [b] Colour. Their Miniſters even whilſt they are preaching are cloathed in black. The Proteſtants generally dreſs themſelves in black when they go to take the Sacrament, or at leaſt chuſe ſome grave Colour on that ſolemn Occaſion. As for the Turks they deteſt [c] black, as being an ominous, unlucky Colour; but they eſteem white and green as ſacred; the latter being appropriated to the Deſcendants of Mahomet. Green above all, is forbidden to Chriſtians and Jews, but they may wear yellow or [d] black.

THE Gentiles, in order to teſtify their moſt profound Veneration for their Gods, went barefooted when they carried them in Proceſſion. Cybele the Mother of the Gods was always ſhewn this Reſpect; and the Roman Ladies at all Times went barefoot into the Temple of Veſta, which Cuſtom of going barefoot was likewiſe obſerved at Proceſſions in Times of publick Diſtreſs. The ſame Thing was practiſed alſo by the Jews, in their Humiliations before God, but in a more awful and ſevere Manner; for beſides this, they mourned in Sack-cloth and Aſhes. The Inhabitants of Crete would not permit any Perſon whatever to enter the Temple of Diana with Shoes on. The Female Votaries of Greece ſeem in former Times to have been as religiouſly ſcrupulous as thoſe of Rome in this Particular; for they uſed to follow the Proceſſion of Ceres, not only with their Feet bare, but, as appears by a particular Paſſage in Callimachus, with their Hair diſhevelled. The myſterious Pythagoras enjoined his Diſciples to ſacrifice to, and worſhip the Gods barefooted: But perhaps he thereby intended to recommend that Humility of Soul and Simplicity of Heart, which is ſo indiſpenſibly neceſſary in all religious Worſhip. In this Manner it was that God, whoſe Views are infinitely above all human Ceremonies, commanded [e] Moſes and Joſhua to looſe their Shoes from off their Feet.

THIS Pagan Cuſtom of caſting off their Shoes upon a Principle of Religion, was converted inſenſibly into the moſt abſurd and ſenſeleſs Superſtition. The Romans uſed to clear their Gardens from the Caterpillars and other Inſects which deſtroy the Fruits of the Earth, [f] by the magical Aid of Women who walked barefoot round the Trees. Sorcereſſes likewiſe in all their Incantations, caſt off their Shoes, as is evident from ſeveral Paſſages of Ovid, Horace, and Virgil: But to return to the Cuſtom of going barefoot for the Sake of Religion. The antient Chriſtians obſerved it in their ſolemn Proceſſions, of which we have many Inſtances in Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory. The Emperor Theodoſius the Younger, and the Patriarch Proclus, humbled themſelves in this Manner, when they aſſiſted at the Proceſſions made at that Time upon Account of ſeveral Earthquakes. Heraclius went farther, for he reſolved to carry the Croſs upon his Back, and bear the Weight of that ſacred Burthen during a long Proceſſion, tho' he was almoſt overwhelmed with the Weight of his Imperial Robes: But as he preferred the humble Weight of the Croſs to all the Pomp and Grandeur of a Throne, he caſt off not only his Royal Veſtments, but his Shoes, to accompliſh with more Alacrity his Journey

[a] Our Author, we confeſs, ſays, too unadviſedly, the Proteſtants in general; but as that Aſſertion is a manifeſt Error, with Reſpect to the Church of England, we humbly hope the Reſtraint which we have put upon it, will not be deemed an unjuſt Deviation.

[b] I do not believe any juſt Reaſon can be aſſigned for it. They only threw off that Colour perhaps at the Time of the Reformation, the better to diſtinguiſh themſelves from the Roman Catholicks; but let a Man be in white, black, or red, that Circumſtance has nothing to do with Religion; true Piety is ſeated in the Heart; for the Choice of Colours is merely the Reſult of Fancy and Opinion, without the leaſt Reaſon to ſupport it, which ſuppoſes Decency and Purity to be where they are not. There is no Colour but may, if you pleaſe, bear ſome advantageous Relation to Religion; if white be the Emblem of Purity, black is that of Sorrow and Humiliation in the Preſence of God; green of Hope; blue of Love, &c.

[c] The Perſians call it the Devil's Colour.

[d] The Jews of Morocco are diſtinguiſhed by their black Caps from the Moors, who wear red Caps. Vide St. Olon's State of Morocco.

[e] Vide Exod. Chap. iii. Joſhua Chap. v.

[f] Plin. Hiſt. Nat. Lib. XVII.

to Mount Calvary. To this very Day the Roman Catholick Penitents for the moſt part march barefooted at their Proceſſions. The moſt devout of the Society of Mercy, walk after the ſame Manner both at Portugal and Goa, when they perform their grand and ſolemn Proceſſion on Holy Thurſday. The Capuchins, whoſe Lives ought to be one continued Series of Penance, wear nothing on their Feet but Sandals, which are hardly ſufficient to guard them from the Thorns and Briars: But there are ſome Chriſtians who carry their Humility ſtill much farther, obliging themſelves to go up the twenty eight Steps of the [a] Santa Scala on their Knees, to pay their Adoration to the Sanctum Sanctorum: A fatiguing, but exemplary Act of Devotion, which exceeds all others, as it ſets aſide the Uſe of our Feet. As to the laudable Cuſtom of being barefooted, in our Acts of Humiliation before the Almighty, it has been introduced into all the Religions of the preſent Age. Where-ever any Footſteps appeared of a religious Worſhip, there likewiſe was ſeen a kind of ceremonial Penitence, which Men had eſtabliſhed in order to make ſuch a formal Attonement as they imagined might be moſt acceptable to the ſupreme Being. The Indians of Peru obſerve this Cuſtom as the moſt inconteſtable Proof they could poſſibly give the Gods of their unfeigned Humiliation. They never entered the famous and magnificent Temple of the Sun, till they had firſt put off their Shoes in the Porch of the Temple; the Turks take off their [b] Pabouches, before they enter their Moſques; and if their Feet be not quite bare, they are at moſt covered only with their Trowſes. [c] The Indians pay the ſame Homage to their Pagods: But not to be too [d] tedious, we will proceed to thoſe other Cuſtoms which human Invention has eſtabliſhed, in order to render Mankind acceptable in the Sight of God.

The Antients always entered into their Temples with their Right Foot foremoſt. This Punctilio they likewiſe obſerved, when they went into any great Man's Houſe: And the Romans were exact to Exceſs, and too ſerious in Trifles of this [e] Nature. The great Auguſtus, who was a Prince of as fine Parts as any that was ever known, would not ſuffer an Attendant to put on his Left Shoe before his Right, imagining that the good or bad Succeſs of the Day depended on ſo trivial a Precaution. Vitruvius tells you with an Air of Gravity, [f] that the Steps going up to a Temple ought always to be of an odd Number, with this ſuperſtitious View, that the Right Foot being ſet upon the firſt Step, the ſame Foot may be foremoſt at the Entrance of the Temple. Though we cannot reaſonably imagine that the Almighty regards any Ceremonies of ſo trivial a Nature, yet a very diſcreet and celebrated [g] Chriſtian has laid it down for an eſtabliſh'd Rule in the Erection of a Church, that the Upper-End ſhould always front the Eaſt. Alet's Ritual tells us, that the firſt Stone laid in the Foundation of a Church, muſt be ſolid, angular, and of about a Foot ſquare at leaſt. There are many other trivial Circumſtances of the like Nature, which are not in the leaſt worthy of our Notice.

[a] The Santa Scala or Holy Ladder, is compoſed of twenty eight Steps, which it is ſaid Jeſus Chriſt went up in order to appear before Pilate. Good Catholicks aſcend theſe Steps on their Knees, and at each Step obtain Indulgencies for three Years. At the Top of the Santa Scala is a Chappel, which is called the Holy of Holies, becauſe of an Image made by the Angels.

[b] A kind of Slipper made of one ſingle Sole, and the Upper-Part of Morocco Leather.

[c] The Veneration which the Indian Mahometans have for the chief of the Faquirs, who are a ſort of Monks, is carried ſo far, as to put off their Shoes when they proſtrate themſelves at their Feet in order to kiſs them. Does it not ſeem as reaſonable for the Roman Catholick Chriſtians to take off their Shoes likewiſe, when they go to kiſs the Feet of the Pope, who is the Vicar of Jeſus Chriſt, and the viſible Head of the Church?

[d] We muſt likewiſe inform the Reader, that the German Prieſts obſerved this Cuſtom of going barefoot, out of reſpect to their Idols; that the Celtæ and the Gauls did the ſame; and that the Chriſtians of Æthiopia enter their Churches barefooted. Nor muſt we omit obſerving, that it was a Cuſtom amongſt the Romans to go barefoot at their Funeral Obſequies.

[e] Theſe are Suetonius's Words. Si mane ſibi calceus perperam ac ſiniſter pro dextero induceretur, ut dirum abhorrebat.

[f] Gradus in fronte conſtituendi ſunt, ut ſemper ſint impares; namque cum dextro pede primus gradus aſcenditur, idem in ſummo templo primus erit ponendus.

[g] Durant.

The

The Antients uſed moreover to go to the Temple and invoke their Gods with downcaſt Eyes. This laudable Cuſtom, when the pure Effect of the Converſion of our Hearts to God, was uſed to denote the greater Humility during divine Service. [a] Nor is it ever more commendable, ſaith Seneca, than on this Occaſion. A devout Muſſulman muſt likewiſe go to his Prayers after the ſame humble Manner. But as Vice in Diſguiſe is not eaſily diſtinguiſhed from Virtue, ſuch a downcaſt look as is here recommended, is very often ſuſpected for Hypocriſy under the Veil of Religion. What would the World now think, to ſee a Crowd of Chriſtians going to Church, with their Eyes fixed on the Ground, and returning home in the ſame dejected Manner? But if a downcaſt Look be a Sign of Modeſty, the Eye erected to Heaven is a Mark of that Confidence which we ought to repoſe in God; and for this Reaſon, it is often obſerved, that we caſt our Eyes upwards to Heaven when we direct our Prayers to God with a becoming Zeal.

ACCORDING to the Antients, the Forehead, which is the Seat of Modeſty, was conſecrated to their particular Genius; in paying their Adorations therefore to the Gods, they ſometimes laid their Fingers on their Foreheads; a Cuſtom which is ſtill obſerved among the Eaſt Indians. According to Tavernier, they fold their Arms in the Act of Adoration, and carry their Hands to their Forehead: they come very near the ſame Practice in ſeveral other Places of the Indies. They oftentimes carry their Hand to their Head out of Reſpect, and even proſtrate themſelves on the Ground in the Fervency of their Devotions. This they likewiſe practiſed in the Eaſt in Honour of their Sovereigns: yet in former Times, the devout Women did not confine their religious Worſhip to that alone; but untied their Hair too, and ſaid their Prayers in that humble Manner. However, this was only practiſed when they were to implore the Aſſiſtance of the Deity upon ſome extraordinary Occaſion; and this ſome Chriſtians themſelves do at this very Day. This kind of Humiliation, I muſt confeſs, has ſomething in it very affecting; nor can we ſee Women with their Hair hanging looſe about them, drowned in Tears, and lamenting and beating their Breaſts, without being ſenſibly concerned. St. Gregory of Tours gives us a pathetic Deſcription of a ſolemn Proceſſion in his Time compoſed of Devotees of both Sexes, who, out of a pious Reſolution to humble themſelves in the moſt conſpicuous Manner before the Almighty, being dreſt all in Mourning, and covered with Sack-cloth, and their Hair being all diſhevelled, marched after the ſacred Tunick of St. Vincent; under the Protection of which, and in full Confidence of its miraculous Virtues, they proceeded, and grounded their Hopes of procuring the divine Mercy, and the Abſolution of their Sins. We ſtill preſerve this religious Cuſtom, and carry the venerable Relicks of the Saints at the Head of our Proceſſions, that their Merit may procure us the Grace of God, and avert his Judgments.

WE juſt now obſerved, that the Eaſtern People throw themſelves on the Ground in the Fervency of their Devotion. The antient Romans likewiſe uſed to proſtrate themſelves before the Statues of their Gods, and at as great a Diſtance too, as they could perceive them at entering their Temple. We are credibly aſſured, that certain Monks

[a] This is likewiſe greatly recommended to Chriſtians: But can we give that Name to a fantaſtical Mixture of Pride and Humility, which is often met with in Chriſtian Aſſemblies? It is a fine Sight, that of ſeeing People humble themſelves before God, and valuing themſelves leſs than the vileſt Inſects, with all the ſplendid Attendants of Vanity: A Paſtor ſpeaking to the People in all the Pomp of worldly Eloquence; all the while ſcrupulouſly exact in flattering the Ears of his Audience, whilſt he is ſpeaking to God in their Behalf: ſhewing his Wit in the Confeſſion of their Sins and his own, and making a ſhew of his Parts to the ſupreme Being, whilſt he is aeknowledging himſelf guilty before him. It is a pleaſant Scene afterwards to ſee theſe Paſtors and Auditors going out prodigiouſly ſatisfied with each other, and ſo pleaſed with what has paſſed, that they are already thinking of improving the ſame, and rendering it ſtill more magnificent and agreeable on the firſt Occaſion.

belonging

belonging to a Monaſtery near Cairo, never preſume to ſleep, till they have firſt thrown themſelves with their Faces to the Ground one hundred and fifty Times, and kiſſed the Duſt of the Pavement. This too is practiſed by the Turks, who fall down on their Faces, whenever they hear an Iman pronounce the Name of God with a loud Voice. The antient Egyptians uſed, after the ſame Manner, to proſtrate themſelves before Anubis, whereof you may ſee a Repreſentation, in a Medal at the End of this Diſſertation. The different Poſtures which are practiſed by the Turks, when they pray unto God, [a] have ſomething peculiar in them, and which we ſhould doubtleſs think very indecent and prepoſterous in our Churches. You may form a Judgment of them by the Figures hereunto annexed. Nothing can be more ſhocking, in my Opinion, than to ſee a Devotee, who, under the Notion of rendring himſelf acceptable to God, addreſſes himſelf to him in any affected Poſture whatſoever. The Banians proſtrate themſelves before their Idols with their Hands on their Heads. [b] As for bowing the Body, or only the Head, it hath ever been practiſed in religious Worſhip, as being a natural Demonſtration of the Reſpect which we owe unto the Almighty. The Roman Catholicks, the Grecians, and ſome other Chriſtian Communities, have preſerved this Cuſtom in their religious Worſhip. The reformed Churches content themſelves with taking off their Hats, when the Preacher hath concluded his Sermon; and when they pray, they ſtand upright. [c] Some of them indeed pray on their Knees; the Roman Catholicks always riſe at the Time of their ſinging Deus in adjutorium, Magnificat, &c. The People kneel during Prayers; ſtand up at the Goſpel, and ſit at the Sermon, &c. The Proteſtants of the Church of England kneel at their Prayers. The Rule of all Chriſtian Churches is, that Order and Decency ſhould be obſerved during the Time of divine Service. The Sermon ſhould be attended to with Reſpect, and the Prayers with ardent Devotion; to both which it is the Miniſter's bounden Duty to exhort them. The moſt devout of the modern Jews wrap the Veil they wear on their Head round their Neck during their divine Service in the Synagogue, that they may liſten to the Prayers with the greater Attention. In order [d] to ſee with how much Devotion they perform this Duty towards God, the Reader ſhould turn to the Treatiſe of R. Leo of Modena, concerning their Cuſtoms and Ceremonies. The Litanies which are ſung by the Roman Catholicks and Greeks ought likewiſe to be taken Notice of as remarkable Cuſtoms in religious Worſhip; being intended to excite in the Hearts of the Faithful, but more particularly of the Vulgar, an holy Contrition and Sorrow for their Sins. As to the Cuſtom of counting Prayers by Beads, it contributes very much to the Eaſe of ſuch devout Perſons Memories as are under an Obligation of offering up to God a ſet Number of Prayers, as an Attonement for their Sins. This Cuſtom is more antient and univerſal than perhaps we may imagine: For it appears, that the antient [e] Romans had a ſort of Beads in uſe among them, and we refer you to four Medals which will juſtify that Cuſtom.

[a] When an Iman pronounces the Name of Mahomet, the Turks bow down their Heads upon their Knees, to expreſs the Veneration they have for the Founder of their Religion.

[b] The People of Japan, Tartary, China, &c. likewiſe proſtrate themſelves before their Idols: But this has ever been ſo general a Cuſtom in the Eaſt, that it would be needleſs to enlarge on it.

[c] The moſt devout bow their Body, or their Head, or hold their Hands before their Faces; but at the ſame Time we ſhall ſee many of them who pray in a careleſs indolent Poſture, and being ſeated on a downy Cuſhion, with great Patience expect the End of the longeſt Prayer, after a comfortable Nap during the whole Sermon. It is with uſt Reaſon, that the Jews blame thoſe who pray to God ſitting. Nemo niſi ſtans rite orat, ſaith Maimonides. We may ſee, by the Accounts of Travellers, that the Idolaters of the Eaſt and Weſt Indies worſhip, or pray unto their Idols, ſtanding at leaſt. Nevertheleſs, the Ancients uſed to ſit at certain religious Ceremonies; as for Inſtance, at he Sacrifices and Feaſts of Funerals, called Parentalia, &c. The Idolaters of the Iſland of Hiſpaniola, after a great many Ceremonies in Honour of their Idols, uſed to ſeat themſelves croſs-legged in a Ring, and pray with their Faces towards their Idols.

[d] The ancient Jews, by four different Words, expreſſed four Kinds of Submiſſion to God. 1. The Act of Proſtration. 2. The bowing of the Head. 3. The ſinking of the Head and half the Body even with their Knees. 4. Kneeling.

[e] See Du Cheſne. The Mahometans, as well as Eaſt Indians, and ancient Inhabitants of Mexico, according to ſome Accounts, uſe Beads at their Prayers.

As

Dissertation Vol. 1.e N.o 1.

B Duret delin.

CDu Bosc Fl.

The various postures of the Turks at their prayers

As to bending the Knee in Adoration of the Deity, this too is one of the moſt antient Cuſtoms in the World; yet I cannot forbear obſerving to my Reader, that St. Baſil diſcovered a Type both of Sin and Grace in this Act of Devotion. We bend the Knee, ſaith he, and this repreſenteth our Fall by Sin; we afterwards riſe again, and this is a Type of the divine Mercy that raiſes us again, and gives us Aſſurance to look up to Heaven. The Juſtneſs of this Type will ſtrengthen, we hope, the Minds of all well-diſpoſed Perſons againſt the depraved Notions of thoſe who would deſtroy all ſuch Repreſentations for the Advancement of Reaſon in their Stead. But let us go on with our Enquiry into the Cuſtoms eſtabliſhed in religious Worſhip. In former Times, during divine Worſhip, the Face was turned towards the Eaſt. Many Paſſages from the Antients might be quoted to prove this Aſſertion: But it will be ſufficient, I preſume, barely to name the Authors in whoſe [a] Works they are to be found. Vitruvius has laid it down for a Maxim, that a Temple ſhould be diſpoſed in ſuch Manner, [b] that thoſe who go to ſacrifice at the Altar, may turn themſelves to the Eaſt. The Altar too (according to Vitruvius) ought to be turned towards that Part of the World. Probably the Origin of this Cuſtom [c] is owing to the Idolatry of thoſe who firſt of all worſhipped the Sun; an Idolatry which obtains to this Day, [d] amongſt the Eaſt Indians and Americans. St. Auſtin [e] has very plainly proved, that the primitive Chriſtians borrowed the Cuſtom of their turning to the Eaſt from the Heathens. This Cuſtom is come down to us, and ſtill obſerved amongſt the Roman Catholicks: But the antient Jews, on the contrary, turned themſelves towards the Weſt, that they might not copy the Idolatry of the Heathens. When they were on a Journey, or obliged to live without the Walls of Jeruſalem, they uſed to pray with their Faces towards that City. As for the Mahometans, they turn to the South, upon Account of the City of Mecca, where ſtands the famous Sepulchre of Mahomet.

NATURE hath endued Mankind with particular Motions, whereby he expreſſes, almoſt without any Deſign, the Troubles of his Soul, and the anxious Cares with which his Mind's oppreſs'd. Such, for Inſtance, is the Motion of his Hands, when he begs a Favour of God on any emergent Occaſion, or endeavours to move the Pity and Compaſſion of a powerful Adverſary. It would therefore, methinks, be very abſurd, to place thoſe Motions in the Number of Ceremonies, ſince they are, as it were, innate; and yet they have thought fit to blend them, ſimple as they are, and expreſſive of Nature, with Ceremonies. Thus, when the antient Heathens addreſs'd themſelves to their infernal Deities, they extended their Hands downwards; when to the Sea-Gods, they ſtretched out their Hands towards the Ocean. The Turks croſs their Hands over their Breaſts. Chriſtians claſp them, or twiſt them one within another: Some diſtinguiſh themſelves in their Prayers by the Sign of the Croſs. Thoſe who are fond of Quotations might here find a fair Opportunity of ſhewing their Learning, both from the Antients and Moderns. We ſhall leave that Province to them, and content ourſelves with this one Remark, that theſe Cuſtoms are liable to no Objection, when they only contribute to fix the Mind during the Time of Prayer: Yet there are (even amongſt Chriſtians) an infinite Number of Devotees, who look upon outward Signs as the Eſ-

[a] Apuleius in his Metamorph. Ovid. Lib. iv. de Faſtis. Valerius Flaccus in Argonaut.

[b] Ædes ſacræ deorum immortalium ad regiones, quas ſpectare debent, ſic erunt conſtituendæ, ut . . . . . ædis ſignum, quod erit in cellâ collocatum, ſpectet ad verſpertinam cœli regionem, ut, qui adierint ad aram immolantes, aut ſacrificia facientes, ſpectent ad partem cœli orientis, & ſimulacrum quod erit in æde, & ita vota ſuſcipientes contueantur ædem & orientem cœli. Vitruv.

[c] The Sun was formerly worſhipped by moſt Nations in the World. And that Day of the Week which we have dedicated to God, the Antients dedicated to the Sun, whoſe Name it ſtill has retain'd among the Germans and Engliſh.

[d] The Sun is worſhipped in the Kingdoms of Bengal, Guzarat, Decan, &c. Theſe People, when they pray or waſh themſelves, turn their Faces towards the riſing Sun. In Canada, Florida, Peru, &c. the Sun is acknowledged as a Deity; as likewiſe amongſt the Idolaters of Africa.

[e] Cum ad orationem ſtamus, ſaith St. Auſtin, vertimur ad orientem, ut admoneatur animus ad naturam excelſiorem ſe convertere, &c.

ſence of religious Worſhip: And many recommend joining of Hands, or making the Sign of the Croſs to their Families, without one Word concerning that Attention, and Elevation of the Mind towards God required in Prayer.

ALTARS have ever been peculiarly regarded in divine Worſhip; for which Reaſon they ought by no Means to be omitted. In former Times this was the Place ordained for Prayers, Vows, and Oaths, [a] and then the Hands were laid with Reverence upon it. It was a Cuſtom amongſt the antient Jews to confeſs their Sins unto God at the Altar. The Ceremony was this: They laid their Hands between the Horns of the Oblation, as near to the Altar as conveniently they could, where the Sacrifice was then to be made; and in this Poſture they repented them of ſuch Sins as they came to confeſs. Great part of the Chriſtian Church hath preſerved the Altar for the Ceremonies of ſacred Worſhip. There Maſs is ſaid, God is worſhipped, the Saints invoked, and there too their Relicks are expoſed. We ſhall not enter into a long Detail of all the different Ceremonies practiſed at the Altars of the Roman Catholicks; but ſhall only make this one Remark, that by an Abuſe, which is a Shame and Diſcredit to Chriſtianity, they [b] are, in Italy, made Sanctuaries for the moſt profligate and abandon'd Wretches. It is true indeed, that this is a very antient Cuſtom, and that the Jews and Heathens countenanced it; but the Jews tolerated it only in caſe of Crimes committed by meer Accident, and without Malice prepenſe; and we preſume, that the Reſpect due to the Chriſtian Religion ſhould require all bad Cuſtoms to be entirely aboliſhed, which were introduced by the antient Heathens. To this Reſpect paid to the Altars, the Idolaters added that [c] of embracing the Doors of their Temples, and the Statues of their Deities; weeping and wailing at their Feet, tearing their Hair, and promiſing to lead a new Life; and after theſe Ceremonies, thoſe likewiſe of careſſing their Deities, [d] embracing their Knees, putting ſmall Crowns on their Heads, and making them Preſents of Fruits and Flowers. And theſe are Cuſtoms [e] which ſome of the Chriſtians have conſecrated to God, and to the Saints, but in a more peculiar Manner to the bleſſed Virgin, whom they crown in many Parts of Europe; and to whom they offer up their choiceſt Flowers and Fruits, in hopes to procure her Favour; whom they load with the nobleſt Appellations and moſt pompous Titles, and in their Adorations make uſe of the ſofteſt and moſt engaging Expreſſions. The Grecians made an Addition to the Cuſtoms which we have juſt mentioned; they took Branches, with Wool twiſted round them, and touched the Knees of the Deities to whom they made their Applications in the Times of their Diſtreſs: And when there appeared any Proſpect of Succeſs, the Suppliant took the Liberty to be more familiar, and with his Branch touched the Right Hand, and even the Chin and Cheeks of the God to whom he made his ſolemn Petition. The Chriſtians have likewiſe, in ſome Manner, preſerved this Cuſtom in Honour of the Saints, and it is well known with [a] The Roman Cotholicks take Oaths at the Altar, either by laying their Hand on the Goſpel, or receiving the Communion from the Hands of the Prieſt, &c.

[b] Not only the Altars, but likewiſe the Convents. A Murderer, a fraudulent Bankrupt, and ſuch other Raſcals, fly boldly thither for Protection; and ſhould a Magiſtrate have the Aſſurance to oppoſe it, he would be deemed guilty of Sacrilege, which the Inhabitants of thoſe ſacred Places, and the Miniſters of the Altar, would not let paſs unpuniſhed. The Prayers of the Monk, the Sermons of the Prieſt, and the Excommunications of the Biſhop, would ever attend him: So that People are often obliged to ſee the Majeſty of God, and that of his Saints and their Relicks prophaned by Malefactors, whom the Charity of Prieſts and Monks protect, in Oppoſition to the ſecular Power.

[c] Vid. Tit. Liv. 1. Decade Lib. ii. & Virg. Æneid. Lib. ii. Plaut. in Rud. Stat. Sylv. Lib. v. Lucan. Lib. iii.

[d] They made uſe of the ſofteſt Terms, and the moſt tender and paſſionate Expreſſions; and took Care never to utter any Thing, unleſs they thought it of equal Weight with what they knew ought to be moſt agreeable to the Gods. The Reader may with very little Pains collect a great Number of Inſtances of this Kind, from the Writings of the Heathens.

[e] Vide in the Life of St. Gertrude, printed at Louain in 1637. remarkable Inſtances of divers miraculous Cures, &c. which St. Gertrude wrote in Favour of thoſe Devotees who honoured her after this Manner. Each Saint, in Proportion to his Power, hath ſhewed a great Regard to thoſe who ſerved him in this Way; and this kind of Devotion was ever attended with ſome extraordinary Favour.

what

what ſurpriſing Advantage many, among the Faithful, have touched the Images of Saints with Handkerchiefs, Linen Cloths, &c. and how many valuable Bleſſings have been entail'd on whole Families, for having kiſſed theſe Images in the Fervency of their Devotion.

THE Antients likewiſe made it a conſtant Practice to turn themſelves round when they worſhipped the Gods; and Pythagoras ſeems to recommend it in his Symbols. By this circular Movement, ſaith Plutarch, ſome imagine that he intended to imitate the Motion of the Earth: But, adds he again, I am rather of Opinion, that this Precept is grounded on this other Notion, that as all Temples are built fronting the Eaſt, the People at their Entrance turned their Backs to the Sun, and conſequently, in order to face the Sun, were obliged to make a half Turn to the Right; and then, in order to place themſelves before the Deity, they compleated the Round in offering up their Prayer. M. Dacier, who tranſlated theſe Words from [a] Plutarch, inſiſts, that by this manner of turning, Pythagoras intended to give us a Precept for the Adoration of God's Immenſity, which fills the Univerſe. How wild and extravagant is human Imagination! ever taking Delight to ſtifle, under the Practice of ſome dark and myſterious Ceremonies, that Simplicity which the Father of Light and Truth requires of us. But be that as it will, the [b] Romans uſed to turn to the Right, and the [c] Gauls, on the contrary, to the Left. The Eaſt Indians obſerve the ſame Ceremony. They turn to the Right in walking round the Statues of their Deities; and at every Round are obliged to proſtrate themſelves with their Faces flat on the Ground. The antient Jews alſo practiſed this Way of turning to the Right. They went up on the Right Side of the Altar, and came down on the Left, as appears by a Precept of the Miſchna. In this Cuſtom of turning round, the antient Perſians had in View the Immenſity of God, who includes and comprehends all things in himſelf. This Ceremony is ſtill obſerved in the Maſs, and, doubtleſs, contributes very much to the Merit and Majeſty of that auguſt Sacrifice: For it raiſes Devotion in the Heart, and turns a Chriſtian from ſenſual to ſpiritual Objects, by taking him off from the Vanity of exterior Ceremonies, and from the Pleaſure ariſing from the Pomp and Pageantry of Religion, as if they were really Religion itſelf.

WERE we to enlarge on the Topick of religious Kiſſes, on the Hymns, and ſacred Dances performed in Honour of the Deity, three capital Points in ceremonious Religion, we might there find Matter enough for a compleat Diſſertation. We ſhall therefore ſay as little of them as poſſibly we can. [d] It was cuſtomary to ſalute the Hands, and often the very Mouths of the Gods. [e] It likewiſe was uſual to kiſs their Feet and Knees: In ſhort, it was a part of Devotion [f] to kiſs the Doors of the Temples, the Pillars and Poſts of the Gates, [g] the Ground of any foreign Country on their firſt Arrival; and indeed, what would they not have kiſſed? ſince it was ſufficient, for the Extravagance of Superſtition, to find out any odd and fantaſtical Object, to perſuade Mankind to have Confidence in and rely upon it. It is from a Superſtition of the like Nature, that the Turks and other Mahometans, who go in Pilgrimage to Mecca, [h] kiſs the black Stone

[a] Dac. in the Life of Pythagoras.
[b] Plutarch in the Life of Camillus, Plaut. Curc.
[c] Plin. Hiſt. Nat.
[d] Vid. Cicer. 5. in Verrem Lucret, Lib. i. Tacit. Ann. Lib. xv. &c.
[e] Apul. Mileſ. 11. Prudent.
[f] Tibul. Lib. i. Eleg. 5. Arnob. Lib. i. Virgil Æneid. Lib. ii. &c.
[g] Homer. in Odyſſ. N.
[h] The Mahometans have a great Veneration for this Stone, calling it the Pearl of Paradiſe, which, by its Brightneſs, formerly gave Light to all the Territory of Mecca; but the Sins of Mankind, as they tell us, have made it black. Jacub Ben Sidi ſays, that Mahomet ordered the People to confeſs their Sins before this Stone, and there weep, lament, and implore the divine Mercy, &c. The Kaba, or Square Chappel, was built by the Angels, according to the Tradition of the Muſſulmans; but was carried by them up to the ſixth Heaven, to be preſerved from the Waters of the Deluge. The Daba which they have at preſent, was made by Abraham, to whom God ſent the Shadow of the firſt for a Model from Heaven. Vide the little Book intitled Reſpublica Arabiæ.

which

which they call Hagiar Alaſuad, and the four Corners of the Kaba. The modern Idolaters in the Eaſt Indies and America [a] obſerve likewiſe that Part of the religious Worſhip which the Roman Catholicks have conſecrated in Honour of the Croſs, and Relicks of Saints; the latter have likewiſe conſecrated it on Occaſions of Ceremony; as in the ſprinkling of holy Water, the Prieſt kiſſes the Aſpergillum, or holy Water-ſtick; and at the Proceſſion on Palm-Sunday, the Deacon kiſſes the Palm which he preſents to the [b] Prieſt. It would be tedious, if not impertinent, to enlarge upon this Subject, or to be particular as to the Time and Manner of the Prieſt's kiſſing the Altar, of the Kiſſes beſtowed on the Incenſory, Patin, and Chalice, the white Stole, the Prieſt's Hand, &c. [c] When People could not with any Convenience kiſs the Object of their Devotion, they uſed to kiſs their own Hands, and ſo throw up Kiſſes to the Gods. This religious Practice is daily obſerved amongſt the Spaniards and Portugueſe, who croſs their Thumb with the Fore-Finger, and kiſs their Hand afterwards in Honour of any diſtant Image.

As to Muſic in divine Worſhip, it has been in Uſe in all Ages, and the Cuſtom is univerſal. There is ſcarce a Nation in the World, in all Probability, that does not think it their Duty, after their own Mode, to ſing the Praiſes of the ſupreme Being; and it appears that the antient Heathens were of Opinion, that [d] Muſic appeaſed the Anger of their Gods, and brought them down upon Earth: For which Reaſon the Pagan Devotion was generally attended with Concerts of vocal and inſtrumental Muſic. The firſt Muſicians, ſuch as Linus, Orpheus, &c. were regarded as a kind of Prophets, and in all Probability were at the ſame Time Prieſts, Phyſicians, and Magicians, like the Prieſts of the Eaſt Indians, the Lamas of the Tartars, and the Bonzes of Japan. But, be that as it will, the Romans, the Grecians, and the Egyptians, had Muſic continually at all their religious Exerciſes, as at Sacrifices, and other ſolemn Rejoicings in [e] Honour of the Gods. [f] Their Hymns were for the moſt part compoſed and digeſted in nonſenſical Terms, and the Eulogium of the Deity was ſometimes as obſcene as it was impertinent. It was cuſtomary to turn into Verſe, and ſing with the moſt ardent Devotion whatever was moſt inconſiſtent and romantic in the Legends of their Gods and Heroes, who were the Saints of the Heathens: For the Unity of a ſupreme Being was a Point generally allowed by them, and all other Deities were look'd upon as ſubordinate to him. Theſe Deities had, each of them, their particular Juriſdictions and Employments; and the Eulogiums or Hymns ſung in Honour to them for the moſt part turned on their Abilities to diſcharge their reſpective Functions, the Bleſſings they beſtowed on their Votaries, their Miracles, &c. The Jews and Chriſtians have likewiſe conſecrated Muſic to Religion. The former made uſe of Trumpets, Drums, and Cymbals for this Purpoſe, joined with the Voices of the Levites and the People. Nothing could be more plain and artleſs than the Muſic of the primitive Chriſtians. They ſung the Praiſes of God with a loud Voice, as the reformed [g] Proteſtants do at this very Day. There are more Ceremonies, more Art, and a greater Variety in the Muſic of the Roman Catholicks: But it ſometimes may be lawful to mix the agreeable and uſeful together in Devotion; in caſe theſe Graces are not carried to ſuch an extravagant Pitch as to ſmother, as it were, and ſtifle the Flames of Devotion.

[a] Vide the Hiſtory of the Conqueſt of Mexico, the Hiſtory of the Yncas's, the Voyages of Dellon, Tavernier, &c. to the Eaſt Indies.

[b] Vide the Rituals.

[c] Vide Apul. Minut. Felix. Job. ch. xxxi.

[d] Vide Horace Od. Lib. i. Od. 36. Et thure & fidibus juvat placare . . . . . Cuſtodes Numidæ Deos. Arnob. Vos æris tinnitibus & Tibiarum Sonis . . . . . Perſuaſum habetis Deos delectari, &c.

[e] On this Occaſion they uſed different ſorts of Inſtruments, according to the Deities which they worſhipped.

[f] Vide Proofs of this in the Hymns aſcribed to Homer and Orpheus. Vide likewiſe the Hymns of Callimachus, and the Chorus's of the antient tragic Authors. Ariſtophanes in Acharnan. ſpeaks of Phallic Verſes ſung in Honour of the Phallus, or membrum virile, which was carried in Pomp in the Bacchanalia. Thoſe Verſes and that Figure muſt needs inſpire a ludicrous Devotion.

[g] In many Places the ſinging of Pſalms is accompanied with Organs.

[a] THE modern Heathens, even the moſt barbarous amongſt them, have Hymns and Muſic, both vocal and inſtrumental, in Honour of their Gods. The greateſt part of the Religion of the Americans conſiſts in Dances and Songs, whereby they imagine they appeaſe the Anger of their Gods, and pay the true Tribute of Reſpect which is acceptable to them: A Sentiment which was very antient, and which drew down upon Poets and Muſicians the profound Veneration of all the World in the earlieſt Ages: For then they were look'd upon as the Interpreters of the Gods, and inſpired Perſons; but Religion, however, made no Advancement thereby. The Jewiſh Prophets were animated by the Sound of Inſtruments. We have an Example of this in [b] Eliſha. [c] Saul, who was tormented with an evil Spirit, found Relief by the Charms of Muſic. Without preſuming even to glance at what was ſupernatural or divine in theſe two Inſtances, I will be bold to ſay, that the antient Heathens have endeavoured to effect as ſurpriſing Things by the prevailing Power of Muſic; and if we may credit all that Antiquity has tranſmitted to us relating to the [d] extraordinary Cures of Zenocrates, Thales, Empedocles, &c. the violent Enthuſiaſm of the Pagan Diviners, their Prophecies, and Oracles, they have ſtill done much more ſurpriſing Things: But Truth generally is handed down to us with a large Addition of Falſhood.

THOUGH dancing naturally enough ſucceeds Muſic, yet it would be no eaſy Task to find any juſt Conformity between that and Religion. The Deity, it is true, requires a chearful Service; yet this Chearfulneſs ought to conſiſt in Freedom of Mind, and ſuch an inward Complacency as is the natural Reſult of that Freedom. The greateſt Part of Mankind has no Idea of this kind of Chearfulneſs, and imagine that the only true Gaiety conſiſts in ſprightly Dances and melodious Songs. From this miſtaken Notion it was that the Idolaters introduced ſenſual Pleaſures into religious Worſhip: Wherefore we muſt not be ſurpriſed to ſee Debauchery, and the ſacred Myſteries of Religion go Hand in Hand together; it being the natural Reſult of a Religion wherein the Deity was made to ſerve the Turn, and promote the Intereſt of Mankind. [e] They danc'd about the Statues and the Altars, and [f] invented round Dances out of pure Love and Zeal for their Gods; nay, once a Year they ſent certain Pilgrims to ſome conſecrated Place, in order to dance before the particular [g] Deity whom they intended to honour. Men and Women, young and old, bore a Part in theſe Dances. At Rome, the Salii themſelves, who were Prieſts of Mars, led up the Van round the Altars of the Deity, all the while devoutly ſinging his Praiſes. In ſhort, theſe Dances were ſo much the Taſt of the antient Pagans, that the Poets made no Difficulty of making the Gods themſelves [h] dance. The Idolaters of the Eaſt and Weſt Indies, and indeed almoſt all Idolaters whatſoever, have the ſame Eſteem for this Cuſtom. The principal part of their divine Worſhip conſiſts in Dances; nay, ſome of them never ceaſe their antic Geſtures till they drop down ſenſeleſs, and raving mad. The Inhabitants of Braſil, and other Barbarians, oblige the very Priſoners whom they intend to ſacrifice, to ſing and dance. Can any Thing be conceived more ſavage or inhuman?

[a] We are not here to take the Word Muſic in its genuine Signification: For moſt of theſe Idolatrous People rather make a hideous Noiſe than ſing. They know nothing at all of the Harmony, or Charms of Muſic.

[b] Second Book of Kings, chap. iv. ver. 15.

[c] It is probable that this evil Spirit was a violent Fit of melancholy Madneſs, which poſſibly Muſic might calm. Aſclepiades, a Greek Phyſician, cured Phrenſies this Way.

[d] Zenocrates healed ſome kind of mad People by the Sound of Inſtruments. Thales of Crete cured the Plague by playing on the Guitar. Empedocles began to ſing, in order to appeaſe the Anger of a furious young Fellow. The Verſes of Tyrtæus the Poet revived the drooping Courage of the Lacedemonians. Moſt of the Oracles were given in Verſe, in the midſt of Tranſports and Fits of Enthuſiaſm.

[e] Vide Callimachus in his Hymns, and Euripides in his Iphig.

[f] V. Ariſtoph. in his Frogs, &c.

[g] Vide Callim. hymno in Delum.

[h] Heſiod in his Theogony, makes the Muſes dance; Horace does the ſame by Venus, the Graces and Nymphs. And in the Poets, Diana, and all the rural Deiteis are often ſaid to dance.

THE Chriſtians themſelves can ſcarcely ſuppreſs this indecent and licentious Cuſtom in their religious Worſhip. They who have travelled in Europe, know very well what ſhameful Abuſes are committed in ſome Countries, in the Celebration of their ſolemn Feſtivals. Neither Dances, Maſquerades, nor the groſſeſt Buffooneries of the Stage, are omitted. Not the Feſtivals of the Sacrament, nor the Paſſion of Jeſus Chriſt, are free from them; and on theſe Occaſions there is often ſeen an odd Medley of Penitents and Buffoons, who, all of them, no doubt, pretend to do Honour to the Religion they profeſs.

WE muſt not forget the Crowns which the Antients put on the Heads of their Gods; this too was an Inſtance of a very ſingular Veneration. Particularly it was their Cuſtom, to crown the Houſhold Gods, the Genii, the tutelary or guardian Gods, and thoſe whom they invoked on any emergent Occaſion: But indeed the antient Heathens in general, had no God whom they did not crown out of a Principle of Religion. They deck'd them with Flowers, and offered up Perfumes and Incenſe to them; and all this was nothing but a long Series of religious Careſſes due to their Goodneſs. The ſcrupulous Ideas which Men entertain from a Principle of Religion, are of a boundleſs Extent. As all the Actions of Life were depending upon ſome Deity, it was but reaſonable they ſhould pay ſome Regard to the famous Priapus, the God of Gardens, a Deity ſo venerable for ſome particular Qualifications. The Ladies that had the leaſt Taſt for Gallantry, offered Crowns and Flowers to him: But the moſt zealous of his Admirers uſed to [a] crown a very remarkable Part of his Body. As that favourite Part was the particular Object of their Gallantry, they, in Gratitude, thought it their Duty to make it likewiſe the Object of their Devotion. They were not contented with crowning the Deities only; but the Prieſts, who ſacrificed, were crowned as well as they, and very often the People too attended the religious Solemnities with Crowns on their Heads. The Crowns which were offered unto the Gods, [b] were oftentimes hung up at the Doors of their Temples. In ſhort, it was a received Cuſtom, both amongſt the Greeks [c] and Romans, to crown thoſe Deities whoſe Favour they were ambitious of procuring by ſo ſolemn an Acknowledgment of their Pre-eminence. However, it was not deemed ſufficient barely to give them Crowns. To gain their Favour effectually, it was likewiſe neceſſary to pitch upon the choiceſt Trees that ſtood on their Demeſn, and were moſt acceptable to them; and from thence to take the Materials of thoſe Crowns. Thus the Oak was made choice of for Jupiter, the Myrtle for Venus, the Laurel for Apollo, the Pine for Cybele, the Poplar for Hercules, Wheat-Ears for Ceres, the Olive for Minerva, Reeds for all River-Gods, Fruit for Pomona, the Alder for Pan, and Hay for poor Vertumnus, whoſe Power and Merit were too inconſiderable to deſerve a better Allotment. But as the leaſt Deity amongſt them had a Vote in the celeſtial Court, it was therefore requiſite that he ſhould wear a Crown too, that when it was his Turn to ſpeak, he might not ſay any Thing inconſiſtent with the Intereſt of the Suppliant, who might have been ſo uncivil as to forget him. As for the illuſtrious Priapus, 'tis well known, that his Head was not the Part whereon the Crown was fixed; his extraordinary Talents were ſuppoſed to lie elſewhere, and there he choſe to have the Marks of Veneration, due

[a] In Liberi ſacris honeſta matrona pudenda virilia coronabat, ſpectante multitudine. St. Aug. de Civit. Lib. viii. c. 21. Another ſaith, Quæ ſi contigerit fruenda nobis, totam cum paribus Priape noſtris, cingemus tibi men . . . . coronis. A Priapus crowned in this Manner, muſt have been a delightful Sight. I know not whether the Miniſters of the Heathen Religion found their Account in it. Poſſibly it may be imagined that our Age can afford no ſuch Example; But it is a Miſtake: Some Years ago, in a certain Town of France, the Women, grieved at not being able to produce any Proofs of their Fruitfulneſs, went and offered up their Prayers to St. Rene; but their Prayers alone not proving efficacious enough, they began to fall on him with their Teeth; and their Devotion was ſo great, that they had ſtript the Saint of his Virility, and were going on in this extravagant Manner, to demoliſh him, had not the Biſhop of the Place prevented them, by wiſely putting a Stop to their Zeal.

[b] Flava Ceres tibi ſit noſtro de rure Corona
Spicea, quæ templi pendeat ante fores.

[c] Vide Tibull. Plat. Πολιτ. Sophocl. Oedip. &c.

to

to him, placed. The[a] Performance of that ſacred Office was a Privilege peculiar to the Ladies.

WE ſhall enlarge no farther upon theſe Crowns, which have been the Subject of[b] ſeveral learned Diſſertations. We ſhall with much more Pleaſure endeavour to do Juſtice to the Piety of the Roman Catholicks, who have purified what the Superſtition of the Pagans had prophaned. [c] The Images of the immortal Saints have not uſurped theſe Crowns, like the worthleſs Deities of the Heathens: They have only aſſerted and taken what was always their Right, and what the Vicar of Jeſus Chriſt hath appointed them to the End of the World, by the Canonization of ſuch as thoſe holy Images repreſent.

IN ſhort, when the Heathens had the good Fortune to be preſerved from Shipwreck, or any other apparent Danger, or to recover from a dangerous Fit of Sickneſs, [d] they ſet up a Picture in the Temple of that particular God whom they had applied to in their Diſtreſs, and to whoſe Mercy and Goodneſs they imagined themſelves indebted for their happy Deliverance. They likewiſe hung up the Cloaths which they had on at the Time of Danger, in the Temples. Pictures are to this Day conſecrated to the Saints, in ſome Part of their Churches, and are as laſting Memorials of the Miracles wrought by them; and theſe Offerings are ſometimes made even in Gold and Silver, &c. repreſenting thoſe particular Parts of the human Body, upon which it is imagined that theſe Saints have performed ſome miraculous Cure. But we ſhall ſay very little relating to this Article, preſuming what has been already offered is ſufficient; neither ſhall we enter into a long Detail of ſome private Devotions of Chriſtian Invention. We ſhall therefore only hint at the prevailing [e] Power of Ave-Maria's, the Devotion of Chaplets, the Virtue of Beads bleſſed by the Pope, and Indulgences; the Merit of the Roſary, Scapulary and Agnus Dei's; [f] and the miraculous Power of the Relicks of the Saints belonging to the Church. All theſe Things are look'd upon [g] as eſſential Parts of religious Worſhip; and we refer the Readers to the Folio Tracts of Bollandus, Papebroke, Ribadeneyra, and all thoſe who have wrote the Lives of the Saints; of Molanus, who wrote the Hiſtory of Holy Images; of the Author of a Book intitled, Sacrarum Ceremoniarum Eccleſiæ Romanæ, Libri III. and of an infinite Number of other learned Men, whoſe Labours were deſigned for the Conſolation of devout Perſons.

THIS Sketch will be ſufficient, 'tis preſum'd, in a Diſcourſe intended as an Introduction to the Religious Ceremonies of all the Nations of the World. It was abſolutely neceſſary for me to give the Reader ſome Idea of an infinite Number of different ſorts of Devotion, which have been practiſed in all Ages, conſecrated in all Religions, and in ſhort, look'd upon as the only Refuge of devout Perſons, who have neither the Courage nor the Virtue which they ſhould have, to be ſimple and plain in the Worſhip of the ſupreme Being.

[a] See the foregoing Page. Honeſta Matrona pudenda virilia coronabat, ſpectante multitudine. See St. Auſtin de Civitate Dei.

[b] Vide Paſchalius de Coronis, and other learned Authors.

[c] The firſt Saints of Chriſtianity are commonly crowned with Rays, which repreſent the Glory they enjoy in infinite Light, and the Brightneſs of their Knowledge, which places them near the ſupreme Being. St. Dominic, St. Francis, and all the Saints, whom the Piety of the modern Chriſtians has placed in the ſame Rank as the twelve Apoſtles, and the Fathers of the Church, bear likewiſe theſe glorious Tokens, which their Virtue gained them.

[d] Horat. . . . . me tabula ſacer,
Votiva paries indicat uvida
Suſpendiſſe potenti
Veſtimenta maris Deo.

There are an infinite Number of Paſſages to this Purpoſe.

[e] According to Father Sepp, in his Account of Paraguay, even the Serpents themſelves are kept in Awe by Virtue of Ave Maria's.

[f] There hath been ſomething mentioned hereof in this Diſſertation.

[g] This is true, yet with ſome Reſtrictions.

It is a difficult Task for thoſe who are unacquainted with the World, to act freely, without Affectation, and live amongſt Men in a plain and eaſy Manner. With all their Ceremonies, they find it a hard Matter to paſs in the World for Perſons of an agreeable Converſation. We beg leave to compare ſuch People to thoſe who adhere to all religious Cuſtoms, as if they were the very Eſſence of Religion itſelf. It is painful for them to addreſs themſelves to God without Formality, and to pray to him without Ceremony; and if it ſhould be their unhappy Lot not to get over this outward Oſtentation, one would not eaſily be induced to conſider and eſteem them as Perſons of a ſolid Piety; with which Reflection we ſhall conclude.

An EXPLICATION of ſeveral antient MONUMENTS, referr'd to in the Diſſertation upon religious Worſhip, and repreſented in this PLATE.

I.

THE FIRST FIGURE repreſents a Temple of Pomona in a Wood, or more properly an Orchard. Pomona was a Nymph, and afterwards became the Wife of Vertumnus, who was look'd upon, by the Romans, as the God of Autumn. It was likewiſe their Opinion, that he was concerned in all Contracts relating to Commerce, and that he determined, or altered the Minds of Men in civil Affairs. Vertumnus courted this Pomona under ſeveral Shapes; yet none of them proved any ways ſucceſsful, till he appeared before her in the Form of a Youth in all his Bloom. Had he been ſo wiſe at firſt, he had ſaved himſelf a World of unneceſſary Trouble.

AFTER Vertumnus ſucceeded in his Addreſſes, and Pomona became his Wife, ſhe was acknowledged as a Goddeſs. She preſided over Gardens; or, more properly, it may be ſaid, that her Juriſdiction extended only over ſome particular Fruits, which were offered up to her in Sacrifice. She was repreſented young and gay, like Hebe, and with her Head adorned with Flowers. Her Prieſt, amongſt the Romans, was called Flamen Pomonalis, and the Regard which was paid him was in Proportion to the Power of the Goddeſs whom he ſerved; for he was ranked amongſt the Prieſts of the moſt inferior Order, and was diſtinguiſhed by the Name of Flamen.

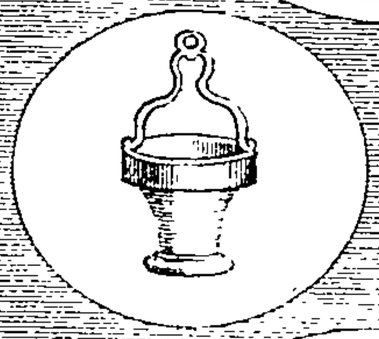
II.



THE various kind of Inſtruments which were uſed in ASPERSIONS, and are repreſented in the Medals placed next the Temple of Pomona, were uſed in Luſtrations. It would be too great a Digreſſion, barely to mention a part of what relates to ſo curious a Subject, on which Lomeierus has obliged the World with a very learned Diſſertation in a large Volume in Quarto. Perſons of all kinds were not indifferently admitted to perform this ſacred Office. For as Luſtration was a Ceremony in ſome meaſure practiſed as an Expiation for the Sins of the People in general, or of ſome particular Family, or ſingle Perſon for the Redemption of his Soul from God's Wrath, and his temporal Deliverance from Afflictions, &c. it was requiſite, that whoever performed the Luſtration, ſhould bear a Character, with reſpect to his Birth, Age, Profeſſion, and ſober Deportment, which became that holy Function. [a] Prieſts, Conſuls, young Boys and Virgins, frequently aſſiſted in this Ceremony. Such Families as had an hereditary Right to any Degree of Prieſthood, were always preferr'd whenever a Luſtration was required. This Ceremony was obſerved, at a Perſon's firſt Admiſſion to any Divine Myſtery; and before he might preſume to approach the Gods, or be employed as an Aſſiſtant at any Sacrifice;

[a] Vide Lomeierus in his Treatiſe de Luſtrationibus, cap. 13.

TO

Page

Page

Page

Page

it was alſo practiſed after unlucky Dreams and Funeral Rites, in order to their Purification from ſome Pollutions of the Body; but more particularly from thoſe which were generally thought to attend the carnal Converſations of married Perſons.

LUSTRATIONS were performed either by the Means of Water, Fire, or Air: And they always uſed ſuch Water as was naturally conſecrated, if it could poſſibly be procur'd, i. e. River, or Spring-water, which were deemed ſacred; becauſe the Gods, Nymphs, and Genii reſided in them. If they could not, it was uſual to conſecrate common [a] Water; and the Cuſtom was, to keep large Veſſels full of Water at the Doors of the Temples of the Gods, wherein burning Firebrands, taken from the Altar in Time of Sacrifice, had been quenched. The People uſed to beſprinkle themſelves with this Water; but commonly the Prieſts were the Miniſters of this holy Aſperſion.

LUSTRATIONS by Air, were performed by a Fan, with which they diſperſed the Air for the Purification of Souls. Oſcillation, or moving the Body by ſwinging to and fro in the Air, was alſo a kind of Purification.

LUSTRATION, or Purification by Fire, was very frequently uſed amongſt the ancient Pagans. For the Performance of this Ceremony, the Force of Fire, or Smoke only, was uſed. Tryals by ordeal Fire and hot Irons, which were in great Repute in the Church about the eighth Century, in all Probability, took their Riſe from this way of Luſtration by Fire. The Luſtration performed by Smoke was made with Perfumes. On this Occaſion they uſed Sulphur, Roſin, Incenſe, ſweet-ſcented Herbs, Laurel, &c. At connubial Luſtrations they made uſe of Fire and Water too; and the ſame was often practiſed at Funerals. Honey was ſometimes uſed inſtead of Water; and for the Attonement of the heinous Sin of Murder, they often mingled Blood with the Water. They alſo made uſe of Eggs, becauſe it was a received Notion, that they contained in them an Abſtract of the four Elements. In ſhort, it would be needleſs to enlarge upon Luſtrations performed with human Blood, or with certain Fruits; or upon others which were made with the Blood of [b] Dogs, Cats, and other Animals: Though their Lives were preſerved, yet they continued loaded with the Sins of the People. Lomeierus, in his Treatiſe, gives us a very particular Account of ſeveral other Luſtrations for Men, Cities, Armies, Fields, Fruits, and living Creatures: To which curious Work we ſhall refer the Reader.

THE Aſperſions performed with Branches of Laurel, Olive, or Roſemary, with a Sprig of Hyſſop, or any other Inſtrument made for that Purpoſe, may all be looked upon as Luſtrations.

AFTER theſe Ceremonies of Luſtration and Aſperſion were over, the People imagin'd themſelves in a State of Regeneration, and accordingly ranked themſelves amongſt the Number of the Bleſſed. All expiatory Ceremonies concluded with an Ilicet, very much reſembling the uſual Benedictions of our Clergy, when they diſmiſs the People. Ilicet is a Term uſed for, depart in Peace, or Pax vobis.

III.

As the Sacrifice of Hercules is repreſented in one of theſe Medals, we think ourſelves obliged to ſay ſomething relating to that particular Ceremony. This Deity was ſo condeſcending and indulgent, as to take the trouble upon himſelf to teach too illuſtrious Families that particular Form of divine Worſhip which would be moſt acceptable to him. Theſe two Families, who held the firſt Rank amongſt the Aborigines, a

[a] Lomeierus de Luſtrationibus, cap. 17.
[b] Id. Ibid. cap. 23.

People of Italy, bore the Name of Potitians and Pinarians. It was the Cuſtom, when they ſacrificed to Hercules, to offer up a young Heifer which never had borne the Yoke. The Potitians had the Superiority over the Pinarians, becauſe the latter were one Day too dilatory in their Attendance, after they were honoured with a ſolemn Invitation to the Sacrifice. When an Oblation was made to him at the Altar called Ara Maxima, [a] the whole Congregation were obliged to be bare-headed, to teſtify their profound Veneration for Hercules; for as this Deity was repreſented with his Head covered, it would have been an Act of Irreverence and Diſreſpect in a mortal Man, to be covered as he was, or in his Preſence.

THE Romans uſed to repair to the Ara Maxima, in order to confirm, by a ſolemn Oath, their Promiſes and Contracts.

IV.

PIETY, who preſides over Sacrifices, and for the moſt part over all religious Worſhip, was of neceſſity to be veiled; ſince covering the Head is only intended to fix the Eye on the Object of Devotion, and to prevent all mental Diſtractions. The Manner in which Piety is here repreſented to be veiled before an Altar, is almoſt the ſame as that of the Roman Ladies, when they paid their Worſhip to the Gods. The Emperor Severus is likewiſe veiled in that Medal, where he is repreſented with an Olive Branch in his Hand.

IT was neceſſary, that they who ſacrificed to PUBLICK FAITH, who is here repreſented in a [b] Medal with a Horn of Plenty in her Hand, and a Crown of Laurel on her Head, ſhould be covered with a white Veil. This Veil was an Emblem of that Purity and Innocence, which are the inſeparable Companions of Faith; as the Horn of Plenty is the Emblem of Proſperity, which is generally the Conſequence of this Virtue.

V.

IT was alſo the Cuſtom ſometimes to make uſe of the Phrygian Cap, here repreſented in the laſt of the four Medals, that are under the Temple of Pomona. [c] Though we are not certain that this Cap was made always after the ſame Form, yet it is generally agreed upon, that it covered a part of the Cheeks, and was tied under the Chin.

VI.

ANUBIS, before whom a Man is repreſented as lying proſtrate on the Ground, was one of the Gods of the Egyptians. For they generally appeared under the Figure, or with the Head of a Dog, and his very Name ſeems to intimate what he was; for Anubis, according to the Interpretation of ſome learned Authors, ſignifies one that barks, and is originally a Hebrew Term; Hanubé being a Hebrew Participle, to which is joined the Aſpirate H. This Egyptian Anubis, and Mercury, are thought to be the ſame Deity. By the Form of a Dog was hieroglyphically repreſented the extraordinary Penetration of the God; no Animal being ſo ſagacious as a Dog, which makes the Emblem very appoſite. The God of Thieves, Merchants, and publick Miniſters, had need of a perfect Sagacity for a proper Diſcharge of their reſpective Adminiſtrations.

ANUBIS, in ſome Medals, is repreſented holding a Caduceus in his Hand.

THE four other Medals, which follow that of Anubis, repreſent the different Poſtures of Suppliants.

[a] Vide Serv. in Virg: Æneid. Lib. iii.
[b] Apud Roſin. in Antiquit.
[c] Vide Soler. de Pileo.

Gravelot Inv et Sc. London 1733

AN HISTORICAL

DISSERTATION

ON THE

CUSTOMS and CEREMONIES

OF THE

PRESENT JEWS.

PART I.

CHAP. I.

The Origin of the Customs and Ceremonies of the JEWS; their several Divisions; and the various Particulars wherein they differ.

THE Ceremonies and Customs of the present Jews are not all of equal Authority; neither are they observ'd by all of them alike; for which Reason they are divided into three Classes. The first contains the Injunctions of the written Law, viz. those which are included in the five Books of Moses. These Injunctions consist of 248 Affirmatives, and 365 Negatives, which in all amount to 613, and are called Mizvoth Hatorah, which signifies, Commandments of the Law.

THE second Class relates to the oral Law, or that which was delivered by Word of Mouth; and this Denomination is given to those Comments or Annotations which the Rabbi's and Doctors have made in their Days upon the Pentateuch, and to an infinite Variety of Ordinances and Laws, which they call Mizvoth Rabanan, or Commandments of the Doctors; and which were collected into one large Volume, called the Talmud, of which we shall take particular Notice in the second Chapter of the second Part of this Dissertation.

THE

THE third Claſs includes ſuch Things as Cuſtom hath given a Sanction to in different Times and Places, or which have been but lately introduced: And therefore they call them Minhaghim, or Cuſtoms. Of theſe three Claſſes then, the firſt and ſecond, which compriſe the written Law by Moſes, and the oral Law, tranſmitted from their Doctors by Tradition, are received by all the Jews in general, whereſoever ſcattered and diſperſed, without any conſiderable Variation among them in that Reſpect, as appears by the Talmud. But as for the third, which has Relation to their Cuſtoms only, they vary very much from one another; becauſe the Jews, diſperſed into divers Parts of the World, have fallen into the Names and Manners of thoſe Countries: They differ therefore from each other in this third Claſs only; and principally the Eaſtern, German, and Italian Nations. In the Eaſtern, I likewiſe compriſe thoſe of the Morea, Greece, Barbary, and thoſe who are called [a] Spaniſh; and under the Name of Germans, I take in the Jews of Bohemia, Moravia, Poland, Muſcovy, and others. According to this Order and Diſtinction, therefore, I ſhall endeavour, as far as I am able, to ſhew in this Diſſertation, what is grounded as well upon their written Law, as upon the Commandments of their Doctors, and upon meer Cuſtoms: But I muſt apprize the Reader beforehand, that where-ever he ſhall meet with any Variation amongſt the Jews, it has Reference only to their Cuſtoms, to which, without great Difficulty, they will not believe, that the Name of Precept can with any Propriety be given: Though they hold the Precepts of the firſt and ſecond Claſs as eſſential.

CHAP. II.

Concerning their Houſes.

I. WHEN any Jew builds a Houſe, he is obliged to leave ſome Part of it incompleat, purſuant to the Directions of the Rabbi's on this Topick, that he may the better remember the preſent Deſolation of Jeruſalem and the Temple; and in order to teſtify his unfeigned Sorrow, he muſt expreſs himſelf in theſe Words of the Pſalmiſt: If I forget thee, O Jeruſalem, may my Right Hand forget her Cunning. Or, if he builds, he muſt leave at leaſt a Cubit Square of the Wall free from Lime, and write thereon in large Capitals thoſe Words of the Pſalmiſt juſt mentioned; or theſe, Zecher la Chaban, which ſignifies a Memorial of Deſolation.

II. AT the Doors of their Houſes, Chambers, and all Places of publick Reſort, they fix up againſt the Wall, at the Right Hand of the Entrance, a Reed, or any other Pipe, with a Parchment in it prepared for that Purpoſe, whereon are written after a very correct Manner, theſe Words from Deuteronomy: [b] Hear, O Iſrael, the Lord our God is one Lord, &c. as far as theſe other Words, [c] and thou ſhalt write them upon the Poſts of thy Houſe, and on thy Gates. Then leaving a ſmall Blank on the Parchment, theſe Words are continued: And it ſhall come to paſs, if ye ſhall hearken diligently unto my Commandments, &c. as far as theſe Words, and thou ſhalt write them upon the Door-Poſts of thine Houſe, and upon thy Gates. This Parchment is rolled up, and encloſed within the Reed, and at the Bottom is written the Name [d] Sciaddai. And whenever the Jews come in or go out, they touch this Place very devoutly; then kiſs that Finger which touched it; and this is what they call Mezuza.

[a] The Spaniſh Jews, being baniſhed the Dominions of the King of Spain, took Refuge for the greateſt Part of them in the Levant, where they remain to this Day.
[b] Deut. vi. ver. 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9.
[c] Deut. xi. ver. 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20.
[d] This is one of GOD's Names.

III. THEY

III. THEY have neither Picture, Image, nor Statue; neither will they permit any ſuch Repreſentations in their Houſes, much leſs in their Synagogues, and other Places ſet apart for divine Worſhip; conformable to that negative Commandment in the 20th of Exodus, and in ſeveral other Places of the Old Teſtament, which expreſly ſaith, thou ſhalt not make unto thee any graven Image. But in Italy there are abundance of Jews, who are not ſo ſtrict and conſcientious, but have both Portraits and Hiſtory Pieces in their Houſes. They avoid, however, having any Relievos, eſpecially thoſe where the Bodies are compleat.

CHAP. III.

Concerning their Kitchen and Table-furniture.

I. ALL their Kitchen-Furniture muſt be perfectly new; for if they have been made uſe of by any Perſons beſide their own People, particularly if they are earthen, or have had any Thing warm in them, they are rejected and thrown away; becauſe ſome of their forbidden Meats, which are numerous (as will fully be ſhewn in the ſixth Chapter of the ſecond Part) might have accidentally been put into them, and the Juices thereof might have pierced them. But if theſe Utenſils are of Metal, or Stone, which are not porous like earthen Ware, they may be uſed, after they have been ſet upon the Fire, or thrown into ſcalding Water.

II. WHEN they have purchaſed any of theſe Implements of Houſhold, whether made of Glaſs, Earth, or Metal, they plunge them directly into the Sea, a River, a Well, or into ſome large Quantity of Water, to denote a more than ordinary Neatneſs; conformable to the twenty third Verſe of the thirty firſt Chapter of Numbers.

III. They make uſe of a Variety of Veſſels both for the Kitchen and Table, ſome of them being appropriated for Milk, and other Spoon-Meats only, whereof that is one Ingredient; and others for Fleſh; for they muſt not, as I ſhall obſerve in the ſixth Chapter of the ſecond Part, eat both Meat and Milk at the ſame Time.

IV. THEY have alſo particular Kitchen Furniture and Diſhes ſet aſide for the Service of the Paſſover, which, as will appear in the third Chapter of the third Part of this Work, ought never to touch any leavened Bread.

CHAP. IV.

Concerning their Sleep and Dreams.

I. SUCH Jews as comply with the Precepts of their Rabbi's, place the Head of the Bed whereon they lie to the North, and the Feet to the South, or the Reverſe; for they ſcruple to place them Eaſt and Weſt, in Obſervance of the Reſpect due to Jeruſalem, and the Temple, which were ſo ſituated: There are but few, however, who are now ſo very preciſe.

II. WHEN they lie down to Reſt, they beg of God, in their Prayers, to preſerve them from the Dangers of the Night, to grant them the Enjoyment of a ſweet and uninterrupted Repoſe, and to raiſe them the next Morning, when they awake, in perfect Health. To theſe Prayers, they add the fourth, fifth, ſixth, ſeventh, eighth, and ninth Verſes of the ſixth Chapter of Deuteronomy, and the ninety firſt Pſalm, Whoſo dwelleth in the ſecret Place of the moſt High, &c. and the hundred and twenty firſt, I will lift up mine Eyes unto the Mountains, &c. and the fifth Verſe of the thirty firſt Pſalm, Into thine Hand I commit my Spirit. To theſe ſome of the Jews add other Paſſages, according to their different Cuſtoms and Inclinations.

III. THEY lay a peculiar Streſs on Dreams, out of Regard to thoſe of Jacob, Joſeph, Pharaoh, Nebuchadnezzer, Daniel, and others, mentioned in the ſacred Scriptures; and to that particular Paſſage in the thirty third Chapter and fifteenth Verſe of Job, In Dreams and Viſions of the Night, &c. then he openeth the Ears of Men, &c.

IV. AND indeed they put ſo much Confidence in them, that ſhould any one be made uneaſy by a frightful Dream, particularly if it has any Relation to any of the four [a] Kinds which the Rabbi's have explained, he faſts all the next Day in all the Forms of Faſting, of which I ſhall treat more at large hereafter. In ſhort, nothing but a Dream can oblige a Man to faſt on the Sabbath, or on any other ſolemn Feſtival.

V. AT Night after the Faſt is over, the Perſon that dream'd, ſends for three of his Friends before he preſumes to eat, to whom he ſaith ſeven Times, [b] May my Dream be fortunate! to which they anſwer at each Time, Amen, God grant it may be ſo. After this Ceremony they add ſome Paſſages of the Prophets; and that he himſelf may have ſome propitious Omen of his being in Peace, they repeat to him theſe Words of Eccleſiaſtes, [c] Go thy Way, eat thy Bread with Joy, &c. then he who has faſted, ſits down to his Supper.

CHAP. V.

Concerning their Clothes.

I. THE Jews are ſtrictly forbidden to dreſs themſelves in any Stuffs made of Woollen and Linnen mix'd together. In [d] Deuteronomy it is ſaid, [e] Thou ſhalt not wear a Garment of various ſorts; and therefore they never ſew a Woollen Veſtment with Thread, nor a Linnen one with Wool.

II. BOTH Men and Women are likewiſe forbidden to diſguiſe themſelves by wearing promiſcuouſly one another's Apparel, [f] The Woman ſhall not wear that which pertaineth unto a Man, neither ſhall a Man put on a Woman's Garment. Moreover, the Men are forbidden the Practice of all effeminate Actions, ſuch as Painting, or making uſe of depilatory Plaiſters: The Women likewiſe are injoined not to practiſe ſuch Things as are only proper for the Men.

III. AND this very probably is the Reaſon why Men are forbidden to ſhave their Beards from the Temples down their Cheeks, and even any Part of the Beard; [g] Neither ſhalt thou marr the Corners of thy Beard.

[a] Theſe four Kinds of Dreams are, the ſeeing the Book of the Law in Flames; the ſeeing the Day of Abſolution at the Hour of Neila, that is to ſay, of the Evening Prayer; the ſeeing the Beams of your Houſe tumbling down, or your Teeth falling out; ſome add, the ſeeing of your Wife with another Man.

[b] This Ceremony concerning Dreams, is related at Length in the Order of the Jewiſh Prayers, according to the Ritual of the Italians of the Mantuan Impreſſion.

[c] Chap. ix. ver. 7.

[d] Deut. xxii. ver. 11.

[e] Levit. x. ver. 19.

[f] Deut. xxii. ver. 5.

[g] Levit. xix. ver. 27.

Vol. I. A. c

Arbanean sol.

A

B B Sisith. B B

C

D

G

E

Simurim.

F

Matsot.

K Mezuza.

H

I

Sophar.

Lulab.

B. Picart delin.

C. Du Bosc Ex.

an antient Robe of the Jews, which they now wear under their usual cloths, for fear of viating from the customs where they live, in point of dress. B. Four Strings one at h corner. C. One of these Strings of a larger Size, with 5 knots, which represent e Name of God. D. The Sabbath lamp. E. Unleavenid bread for the celebration of y Passover. F. Common unleavenid bread which they eat during the Festival. G. A branch Palmes, Willows, and Mirtle, tied together and held in their left hand, to which ey conjoyn with the right hand, the citron. H. and shake all together towards e 4 winds. I. A Ram's horn which they sound on new-years day, and some other stivals. K. A stick, or hollow cane fixed on y Right check of their doors, wherein they en-se a scrol of parchment containing some passages out of Duteronch. 6. v. 4 &c. and ch. 9. v. 13 &c.

A. Vêtement que les juifs portoient autrefois, et qu'ils portent maintenant sous leurs habits ordinaire pour ne point choquer les manieres des pais où ils vivent. B.
les Cordons qui sont aux 4 coins. C. Un desdits Cordons representé plus grand à
5. noeuds qui signefient le nom de Dieu. D. Lampe Sabathique. E. Pain sans levain avec lequel ils font la Pâque. F. Pain ordinaire sans levain qui se mange pendant la fête. G. Rameau de Palme, de Saule, et de Mirthe, joints ensemble qu'ils tiennet à la main gauche, et le Citron. H. dans la droite qu'ils aprochent l'un contre l'autre, et les agitent vers les 4 vents. I. Corne de Bellier avec laquelle on sonne aux jours de l'An et aux autres fêtes.
K. Baton, ou Canne creuse attaché aux chambranle de toutes les portes, au côté droit: dans lequel ait renfermé un parchemin où ait ecrit les passages du Duter. chap. 6. vers. 4 &c. et chap. 11. v. 13 &c.

IV. With Reſpect to their Dreſs, 'tis with Reluctance that they follow the Faſhions of other Nations, and only comply with them, to prevent their being the Objects of Ridicule. They are not allow'd, on any Pretence whatever, to have a Crown, or any particular Lock of Hair on the Middle of the Head, or any Thing in Reſemblance of it; but in all Countries long Gowns are their favourite Dreſſes.

V. The Women dreſs themſelves according to the Mode of the reſpective Places in which they live, except only on their Wedding-Days, at which Time they wear a ſort of Peruke, or Head-Dreſs of falſe Hair reſembling their own; yet ſo as to preſerve the Faſhion of the Country externally: But ſtill, they induſtriouſly conceal their own Hair.

VI. The Men eſteem it very indecent and diſreſpectful to have their Heads uncover'd; nay, they never practiſe it in their very Synagogues. However, they ſometimes comply with it, as they obſerve it to be an Act of Complaiſance and Civility paid to Perſons of Diſtinction amongſt the Chriſtians.

VII. Every Veſtment which they wear muſt have four Corners, and at each of them a Fringe hanging down, which is called Zizit. This Fringe is generally made of eight Woollen Threads twiſted together for that Purpoſe, with five Knots upon each, which takes up half the Length of it. That Part that has no Knots when it is unravelled, falls into a kind of Fringe, [a] Let them make themſelves Fringes, ſaith the Law, [b] on the Borders of their Garments.

VIII. This Injunction has no Relation to their Women, and for that Reaſon none of them obſerve it.

IX. Nay very few of the Men themſelves wear theſe four-corner'd Garments now-a-days, to prevent the Contempt and Ridicule of the People amongſt whom they live; but content themſelves with wearing a Piece of ſquare Stuff with a Fringe at each Corner under their other Garments, which they call [c] Arban Canfoth, in Commemoration of the Commandments of God; becauſe it is ſaid in the ſame Chapter of Numbers at the fortieth Verſe, That he may remember and do all my Commandments, &c. But at the Time of divine Service in their Synagogues, they cover their Heads with a ſquare Woollen Veil which they call Taled, and has a Fringe at each Corner, of which I ſhall take further Notice in the eleventh Chapter.

X. It is likewiſe a Duty incumbent on the Men always to wear on their Forehead a Totafot, ſo called in the Scripture, and which the Jews call Teffilin, as it is recorded in Deuteronomy, [d] Thou ſhalt bind them for a Sign upon thine Hand, and they ſhall be as Frontlets between thine Eyes. We ſhall give an Account of their Quality and Form in the eleventh Chapter; but to avoid being ridiculed by the People, for complying with a Thing which they hold as ſacred, and wear with the utmoſt Precaution, they only tie it on in Time of divine Service.

XI. Moreover, to wear a Girdle, or ſome other Thing over their Clothes, to divide the upper Part of the Body from the lower, is, in their Opinion, very decent and becoming.

[a] Numb. xv. 38.
[b] Deut. xxii. ver. 12.
[c] Four Wings.
[d] Chap. vi. ver. 8. ch. xi. ver. 18.

CHAP.

CHAP. VI.

Concerning the Decency which ought to be obſerved when they retire to eaſe Nature.

I. THE Rabbi's have laid down ſeveral Directions relating to the Place deſigned for their neceſſary Occaſions, and their manner of Deportment there, which wholly regard Health, Decency, and Modeſty; grounded upon what is written in Deuteronomy, [a] Thou ſhalt have a Place alſo without the Camp, whither thou ſhalt go forth abroad, and thou ſhalt have a Paddle upon thy Weapon, &c. and it ſhall be when thou wilt eaſe thy ſelf abroad, &c.

II. THEY muſt make it their conſtant Practice to eaſe themſelves every Morning as ſoon as ever they riſe, and then waſh themſelves that they may go clean to their Devotions.

III. WHENEVER they find the leaſt Motion, they muſt comply with it, becauſe the Suppreſſion of it is look'd upon as an Abomination, and a Contradiction to what is written in Leviticus, [b] Ye ſhall not make yourſelves abominable, &c.

IV. If, on theſe private Occaſions, they ſuſpect that they ſhall be ſeen, they are directed, for Decency's ſake, to conceal themſelves with the utmoſt Precaution. [c] And foraſmuch as at firſt they had no commodious Apartments in their Houſes for that Purpoſe, and were expoſed to publick View, they had various Inſtructions for the Preſervation of a due Decorum. And as that Action was then look'd upon as dangerous, they uſually invoked their Guardian Angels to protect and preſerve them at that Time: But that Cuſtom is now aboliſhed.

V. AFTER this, they are obliged to waſh their Hands, and in a ſhort Ejaculation to return God thanks not only for Man's Creation, but his Preſervation too; ſince the leaſt Obſtacle in their Evacuations might prove fatal: And this, when Neceſſity requires it, they always obſerve.

CHAP. VII.

Concerning their Manner of waſhing their Hands and Face.

I. THEY waſh their Hands and Face every Morning as ſoon as they get up, and never touch any Meat, Bread, Book, or ſacred Thing till this is done.

II. As to the Properties of the Water, and the Manner of uſing it, the Rabbi's, who have refined hereupon, have been over nice, and too tedious in their Inſtructions. But particularly they prohibit the throwing the Water with which they have waſhed themſelves upon the Ground; for it is an unclean Action, according to their Notion, to walk over the Place where it is ſpilt.

[a] Chap. xxiii. ver. 13.

[b] Chap. xi. ver. 44.

[c] They have ſtruck out of the ſecond Edition what follows to Numb. v. as uſeleſs, there being now no Occaſion for practiſing it.

III. WHILST

III. WHILST they are wiping their Hands and Face, they repeat the Bleſſing, which I ſhall mention in the ninth Chapter.

CHAP. VIII.

Concerning their Purity.

IN Leviticus we read, that he was unclean who touched a dead Corpſe, a Leper, or any creeping Thing, &c. and, as ſuch, was denied Admiſſion into the Temple: But ſince the Deſtruction thereof, the Jews pretend, that all thoſe Precepts, relating to unclean Things, are aboliſhed. There is an Inſtitution, however, in Eſdras, which continued ſome conſiderable Time after, purporting, that he who had ſhed his Seed was unclean: And this is grounded upon what is written in the fifteenth Chapter and ſixteenth Verſe of Leviticus: And if any Man's Seed of Copulation go out from him, then he ſhall waſh all his Fleſh in Water, and be unclean until the Even. But as the Obſervance of this Injunction would be very difficult and troubleſom on Account of their legal Commerce with their Wives, it is now neglected and laid aſide.

CHAP. IX.

Concerning their Benedictions.

I. THE Rabbi's have directed the Jews to bleſs and praiſe Almighty God, not only in their Prayers, and at ſuch particular Times as they receive Favours from him, but even on all Occaſions, and in all their Actions, whether they eat or drink; and, in ſhort, for every Precept of the Law, and of the [a] Rabbi's; which they extend to every Occurrence which is new, or any Thing extraordinary; for they have different Benedictions for all kinds of Things; and as they are ſo numerous, it cannot be expected that we ſhould here give a particular Account of them all. But the Rabbi's have compoſed a large Treatiſe upon this Topick, in which they are all compriſed.

II. IN the Morning, as ſoon as they riſe, they ſay, Bleſſed be thy Name, O Lord our God, Sovereign of the Univerſe, who giveſt Life unto the Dead, Light unto the Blind, and who ſpreadeſt the Earth upon the Waters, and many other Ejaculations of the like Nature. When they waſh their Hands, in Compliance with that Precept, they ſay, Bleſſed be thy Name, O Lord our God, Sovereign of the Univerſe, who haſt ſanctified us by thy Commandments, and who haſt enjoined us to waſh our Hands. When they apply themſelves to the Study of the Law, Bleſſed be, &c. who haſt given us the Law. When they eat Bread, Bleſſed be thou, O Lord, &c. who bringeſt forth Bread from out of the Earth. When they drink Wine, Bleſſed be thou, O Lord, &c. Creator of the Fruit of the Vine. When they eat of the Fruit which grow upon the Trees, Bleſſed, &c. Creator of the Fruits of the Trees: When of the Fruits of the Earth, Bleſſed, &c. Creator of the Fruits of the Earth. When they are refreſhed by any agreeable Smell, Bleſſed, &c. who haſt created ſuch a Thing odoriferous. When they ſee a high Mountain, or a vaſt Extent of Sea, they ſay Bleſſed, &c. Creator of all Things from the Beginning. When they ſee, eat, or dreſs themſelves in any new Thing, and even at the opening their ſolemn Feſtivals, they ſay, Bleſſed, &c. who haſt made us to live, and ſupported us to this Day. When any one dies, Bleſſed, &c. Judge of all Truth. In ſhort, in every Thing, before or after any Action; and ſometimes before and after too, they repeat the ſame Bleſſing to God, imagining, that it is a Sin of Ingratitude to make Uſe of any Thing, or enjoy any Convenience of Life, without firſt humbly confeſſing by ſome Terms of Thankſgiving, that it is wholly owing to his Goodneſs that they hold it, and that he is the ſole Lord and Proprietor of all Things.

[a] Beſides the Precepts contained in the Law, the Jews have other kinds of Commandments, which they call the Precepts of Hacamim, or Wiſe Men; who appointed theſe Precepts each in their Time, according to the different Reaſons they had to ordain them for the Worſhip of God.

III. THEY lie under an indiſpenſable Obligation of repeating a hundred Benedictions at leaſt every Day; and as moſt of the Jews ſay them every Morning in the Synagogue with their Prayers, they call thoſe Morning Benedictions, Meath Beracoth, which ſignifies a hundred Bleſſings.

CHAP. X.

Concerning their Synagogues or Schools.

I. THEY make their Synagogues, which they likewiſe call Schools, either large or ſmall, above or below, in a Houſe, or ſome ſeparate Place, as it ſuits beſt with their Convenience; becauſe it is not in their Power to erect any lofty or magnificent Fabrick. The Walls of theſe Synagogues are all white-waſhed within, and either wainſcotted or hung with Tapeſtry; and all round about are ſelect Paſſages and pious Exhortations, to be attentive at their Prayers. There are likewiſe Seats fixed round, and in ſome of theſe Schools there are little Cheſts, to lock up their Books, Robes, &c. In the Middle, or againſt the Walls, there are Candleſticks, or Lamps, hung up to hold Oil or Wax-Tapers, to give Light to the Place. At the Doors ſtand Boxes for Charity, which is afterwards diſtributed amongſt the Poor.

II. AT the Eaſt End in every Synagogue, is an Ark, or Cheſt, call'd [a] Aron, in Commemoration of the Ark of the Covenant that was in the Temple: And in this Ark they lock up the Pentateuch in Manuſcript, written upon Vellum, with a particular Ink, and in ſquare Characters which they call [b] Merubaad, tranſcribed with the utmoſt Accuracy [c] and Circumſpection from the Original written by Eſdras, whereof, we are told, there is a Copy at Grand Cairo, which Eſdras made from the Hand-writing of Moſes himſelf, as is mentioned in the eighth Chapter of the ſecond Book of Eſdras: Theſe Tranſcripts muſt be ſo correct, that the Want or Addition of a Vau, or a Jod, corrupts the Whole, and renders it uſeleſs and invaluable. The Tranſcriber too muſt take Care to obſerve all the numerous Formalities required and commanded by the Rabbi's on this Occaſion. Theſe five Books of Moſes are not in the Form of our Modern Books, but like a Volume, or Scroll of the Ancients; that is, written upon Skins of Vellum, not ſewed with Thread, but with the Sinews of ſome clean Beaſt. The Skins, thus ſtitch'd together, and written upon, are rolled on two wooden Sticks, one at each End. The Book, thus rolled up, is covered with a Piece of fine Linen or Silk embroidered, which is generally wrought after the moſt exquiſite Manner by ſome Female Artiſts, wherein they endeavour to exert their utmoſt Skill, which they conſecrate to this Uſe, together with

[a] Ark.

[b] Square.

[c] The Jewiſh Doctors have invented a vaſt Number of Rules to be obſerved in writing a Copy of the Law for the Uſe of any Synagogue, but moſt of thoſe Rules are trifling Superſtitions. Some of them indeed may contribute towards having a correct Copy; as to that antient Copy, aſcribed to Eſdras, it is a mere Fable.

with another Silk Cover over that, in order to give it an additional Beauty. Sometimes they are at the Expence of covering the two Ends of the Sticks, which they call [a] Hezhaim, and are much longer than the Vellum, with Ornaments of wrought Silver, which have Pomegranates and ſmall Bells faſtened to them, and are, for this Reaſon, called [b] Rimonim, over which they ſet a Crown, which either goes quite round it, or half of one only, whic hhangs down before. And this Crown they call [c] Hatara, or Chedertora: All which is performed according to the Cuſtom of the Country, or the peculiar Fancy of him to whom the Book belongs. In this Ark there are ſometimes twenty of theſe Books, or more, which they call Sefertora, or the Book of the Law. The Jews read them upon their Feſtivals, and at ſome ſtated Hours, of which I ſhall take Notice in its proper Place.

III. THERE is a kind of long Altar of Wood, ſomewhat elevated, either in the Middle or at the Entrance of the Synagogue, whereon the Book is unrolled, when they go to read; and it is likewiſe placed on this wooden Desk, whilſt they are preaching.

IV. ON one Side of the Synagogue there is a Gallery, incloſed with wooden Lettices, where the Women ſit during the Time of divine Service; through which they can ſee very diſtinctly all that is done below, but are inviſible to the Men; neither do they meet together in the ſame Place, leſt ſuch Interviews ſhould obſtruct their Devotions, and engage their Thoughts another Way.

V. THE Situation however, and other Particularities of thoſe Galleries where the Women ſit, vary according to the Countries and People amongſt whom they live; but the Diſpoſition of them is the ſame in all Places.

VI. IN every Synagogue there is a proper Perſon appointed to ſing the [d] Prayers, who is called [e] Cazan, and another to keep the Keys, and to ſee that the Synagogue is decent, and in good Order, to light the Lamps and Wax-Lights, and do whatever is requiſite in Time of divine Service. This Man is called [f] Sciamas, or Servant. Both are maintained at the publick Expence.

VII. IN every City there are more or leſs of theſe Schools or Synagogues, in Proportion to the Number, or the various Sorts of Jews who dwell in them. For as the Levantines, Germans, and Italians differ in their Prayers more than any other Point whatever, each of them is deſirous of having a Place for that Purpoſe peculiar to themſelves.

[a] Wood of Life.
[b] Pomegranates.
[c] The Crown of the Law.
[d] The Jews pronounce their Prayers in ſuch a Tone as they may be ſaid to ſing them; for even when they read the Text of the Bible they properly ſing.
[e] The Cazan with the Jews, anſwers to a Reader amongſt thoſe of the P. R. R. The Word Cazan is to be met with in the Works of St. Epiphanius.
[f] The Sciamas, or Miniſter, is almoſt the ſame as was formerly a Deacon; and the Syrian Churches call their Deacons by that Name to this very Day, though it is alſo generally applied to all ſuch as officiate at divine Service.

CHAP.

CHAP. XI.

Concerning their Prayers, their Cloaks or Long Robes, their Forehead-Pieces, and the Pentateuch.

I. THE Jews go to Prayers three Times every Day in their Synagogues. The firſt four Hours after Sun-riſe are appointed for the Morning Service, which is called [a] Sciacrid: The ſecond Service is in the Afternoon, and called [b] Mincha: The third, at the Cloſe of the Evening, which they call [c] Haruid. But in ſeveral Places, on ſuch Days as are not Feſtivals, the Afternoon and Evening Prayers, for Convenience ſake, are ſaid together at Sun-ſet.

II. THEY muſt not eat, drink, or do any kind of Thing, or ſalute even a Friend till they have been at Morning Prayers: They are obliged, moreover, to waſh their Hands before they enter the Synagogue.

III. AT their firſt Entrance into the Synagogue, they cover themſelves with the [d] Taled, which I have already deſcribed, [e] and pronounce the Benediction, [f] Bleſſed be thou, &c. Some Jews only cover their Heads with a Veil, but others bring it cloſe about their Necks, that no Objects may divert their Thoughts, and that their Attention to their Prayers may be no ways interrupted.

IV. IN the next Place, they put on the Forehead-Pieces, which they call [g] [h] Teffilin, as has been already mentioned, and of which take the following Deſcription. They take two Slips of Parchment, and write on them, with an Ink made for that particular Purpoſe, theſe four Paſſages in ſquare Letters, which is executed with great Accuracy upon each Piece: [i] Hear, O Iſrael, &c. The ſecond, And it ſhall be our Righteouſneſs, if we obſerve to do all theſe Commandments, &c. The third, Sanctify unto me all the Firſt-born. The fourth, And it ſhall be when the Lord ſhall bring thee, &c. Theſe two Slips of Parchment are rolled up together after the Manner of a ſmall piked Roll, which is wrapped up in a Piece of black Calf's-Skin: After which it is fixed upon a thick ſquare Piece of the ſame Skin, leaving a Slip thereof faſtened to it, of about a Finger's Breadth, and near a Cubit and a half long. One of theſe Teffilin is placed on the Bending of the Left Arm, and after they have made a ſmall Knot in the Slip, like a Jod, they wind it round the Arm in a ſpiral Line, till the End thereof reaches the End of the Middle Finger: This they call Teffila Scel Jad, that is to ſay, the Teffila of the Hand. As for the other, they write the four Paſſages before-mentioned upon four diſtinct Pieces of Vellum, which, when ſtitched together, make a Square, upon which they write the Letter Scin, and over it they put a ſquare Piece of hard Calf-Skin, as thick as the other, from which proceed two Slips of the ſame Length and Breadth as the former. They put this ſquare Piece upon the Middle of their Forehead, and the Slips going round their Heads, make a Knot behind in the Shape of the Letter Daleth, and then hang down before upon the

[a] Mattins.
[b] Nones.
[c] Veſpers.
[d] The Word Talet or Taled, according to the Italian Pronounciation, ſignifies in Rabinic Hebrew, a Cloak, or a Robe worn over other Clothes.
[e] Numb. Chap. vii, viii, and ix.
[f] Numb. Chap. x.
[g] Deut. vi. ver. 4, 11, 13.
[h] Teffilin in the Chaldee, or Rabinic Hebrew, anſwers to the Latin Word Precatoria, becauſe the Jews uſe it at the Time of Prayer.
[i] Exod. xiii. ver. 1. and the following Verſes.

Breaſt.

Breaſt. This they call Teffila Scel Roſch, which is, the Teffila of the Head. Theſe are the Forehead-Pieces, which are uſually put on in the Morning only with the Taled. Some of the Jewiſh Zealots, indeed, wear them at their Noon Prayers too; but there are very few amongſt them who wear the Taled at thoſe Prayers, excepting the Reader.

V. When ten are aſſembled together, and each of them thirteen Years and a Day old at leaſt (for otherwiſe thoſe Prayers cannot be ſung after a ſolemn Manner) then the Cazan, or Reader, goes up to the Table or Altar, or ſtands before the Ark, and begins to ſing Prayers aloud, in which the reſt join, but in a ſofter and leſs audible Voice.

VI. Their Form of Prayer is not uniform amongſt the Jewiſh Nations. For, as I hinted before, they vary in nothing ſo much as in this Particular. The Germans ſing in a louder Tone than the reſt. The Eaſtern and Spaniſh Jews ſing much after the ſame Manner as the Turks; and the Italians ſoft and flow. Their Prayers are longer or ſhorter, according as their Days are, or are not Feſtivals. And in this Particular too they differ amongſt themſelves.

VII. In the following Particulars, however, they all agree. They ſing Pſalms in the Morning, particularly the hundred and forty fifth, which they repeat entirely, I will magnify thee, O God; and thoſe that follow, beginning with Allelujah. Beſides this, they repeat a Collection of Praiſes to Almighty God, which they always, and at all Seaſons, mix among their Prayers, viz. [a] Cadis, that is, Holineſs; a Hymn to the Creator of the Light and the Day, which they call [b] Jozer: That Paſſage of Deuteronomy, Hear, O Iſrael, ending with theſe Words: And it ſhall be our Righteouſneſs, if we obſerve to do all theſe Commandments, &c. which we have already mentioned; and this Paſſage out of Numbers, Chap. xv. ver. 38. Speak unto the Children of Iſrael, and bid them that they make them Fringes, &c. Theſe three are called [c] Chiriat Sceman, and to them are added [d] Veiaziu, &c. eighteen Thankſgivings offered up to Almighty God, which they call [e] Scemona Eſre, in which, at the ſame Time that they are praiſing him, they implore the divine Goodneſs to beſtow upon them ſuch Things as are moſt neceſſary for them; ſuch as their daily Bread, their Health, the free Exerciſe of their Reaſon, their Liberty, and the Pardon of all their Tranſgreſſions, &c. which are firſt ſaid in a low and humble Voice, and afterwards the Cazan, or Reader, ſings them aloud, beginning the hundred and forty fifth Pſalm over again, with ſome Paſſages out of the Prophets, and particularly that of the ſixth Chapter of Iſaiah, Holy, holy, holy, is the Lord of Hoſts, &c. with the Interpretation thereof, in the Chaldean Language. After this, they conclude with a Leſſon and Thankſgiving unto God, for inſtructing them how to ſerve him as they ought, beſeeching him to cauſe all Mankind to worſhip him in one Way, which they call [f] Halenu le Sabeah. And this is the Form of their Morning Service.

VIII. On Mondays and Thurſdays they add a ſort of Confeſſion, with penitential Prayers to thoſe after the Scemona Eſre; and when any one keeps a voluntary Faſt, he moſt commonly fixes on thoſe Days for that particular Occaſion which they call Days of Juſtice; becauſe the Judges in former Times uſed to hold their Sittings on thoſe Days, with regard to Offences againſt God, as well in great Cities as in Country Towns, and Places adjacent, to which the People flock'd from all Parts, as to a Market.

[a] This Praiſe begins with theſe Words, May thy Name be exalted and ſanctified.
[b] This is the firſt Word of the Praiſe, which ſignifies Creator.
[c] The Lecture of, Hear, O Iſrael.
[d] And conſtant. This is the Beginning of a Praiſe.
[e] Eighteen, becauſe it containeth ſo many Thankſgivings.
[f] It is our Duty to praiſe.

IX. THE Afternoon Service begins with the hundred and forty fifth Pſalm, the Cadis, the eighteen Thankſgivings, or Scemona Eſre, which are firſt repeated in a low Voice, and then ſung aloud: When the Cadis is a ſecond Time repeated, the Prayers are concluded.

X. AT Night they repeat a Hymn to Almighty God, who bringeth on the Night, who delighteth in Iſrael, and hath given his Commandments to them; the three Leſſons called Chiriad Sceman, a Remembrance or Memorial of their miraculous Deliverance out of Egypt, and a ſhort Prayer to God, to keep them in Peace during that Night. After this, eighteen Verſes out of the Prophets, the Scemona Eſre, the Halenu le Sabeah, and the Cadis in a low Voice concludes their Evening Service.

X. THESE are the eſſential Parts of which their Prayers moſt commonly conſiſt. And although they make ſome ſuitable Additions on Feſtivals and other particular Days, as ſhall be obſerved in its proper Place, yet theſe Prayers are always the Foundation of the reſt, both for their Order and Subſtance. And accordingly, in this Particular, there is but a trivial Variation among the ſeveral Nations of the Jews, who, as to their Form of Prayer, are almoſt unanimous.

XII. THEY have divided the five Books of Moſes into forty eight, or fifty two Leſſons, called Paraſciod, or Diviſions; and one of them is read every Week in their Synagogues: So that in the Compaſs of a Year, whether it conſiſts of twelve or thirteen Months, as I ſhall ſhew hereafter, they read the whole Book through. On Mondays and Thurſdays, after having ſaid their penitential Prayers, they take the [a] Sefar Tora out of the Ark before mentioned, and whilſt that Verſe of the thirty fourth Pſalm, O praiſe the Lord with me, &c. and ſome others are repeating, they place it on the Desk, where being opened and unrolled, they deſire three Perſons to read the Beginning of the [b] Paraſcia, in the ſame Place with them. And the whole Congregation repeats ſome Words of it, which are preceded and followed with a Bleſſing. After which the Reader gives them his Benediction, and they all promiſe either to beſtow ſomething on the Poor, or to contribute towards the Neceſſaries of the Synagogue, or to remember the Reader, or [c] Sciamas. Then the Sefar Tora is held up wide open, and the Reader ſhewing the Writing thereof, ſays to the Congregation, [d] This is the Law which Moſes ſet before, &c. The Levantines, indeed, perform this Ceremony firſt of all. After this Declaration, the Book is rolled up and covered, and then ſhut up in the Ark.

XIII. THIS Manner of reading the five Books of Moſes, and inviting a greater or ſmaller Number of the Congregation to read it with them, was order'd by Eſdras; which is obſerved on all Faſts and Feaſts, of which I ſhall take particular Notice in its proper Place.

XIV. And as each Man, out of a Zeal for Religion, is fond of being employ'd in ſome particular Ceremonies, ſuch as taking the Book out of the Ark, and laying it up again, or any other performed in Time of divine Service, that Indulgence is generally granted to ſuch as are moſt generous and free of their Money; and whatever is ſo collected, is diſtributed, as I ſaid before, either amongſt the Poor, or employed towards the Neceſſaries of the Synagogue.

[a] The Book of the Law.
[b] Section or Chapter.
[c] Servant.
[d] Deut. iv. ver. 44.

CHAP.

CHAP. XII.

Concerning the Prieſts and Levites; their Preſents and their Tithes.

I. IN antient Times no Perſons but the Deſcendants of Aaron, as we read in Exodus, and other Places, were admitted as Prieſts or Miniſters in the Temple. None but they could offer up Sacrifices, make Oblations, burn Incenſe, and, in ſhort, perform any Thing that was requiſite or neceſſary to be done. And, indeed, they were not only allowed a Share of all the Sacrifices, which are ſpecified in the ſame Place, but likewiſe had the Shoulder, Breaſt, and Jaws of every Beaſt that was killed. They had the Firſtling alſo of every Flock, the Exchange given for the Firſt-born of Women; the firſt Fleeces of Sheep, and other Things which belonged to Beaſts; the fiftieth Part of the Harveſt, and of Fruits; a Piece of Dough out of every Maſs of Bread; and all other Advantages ordained in the ſacred Scriptures.

II. THE Office of the Levites was to ſing in the Temple at ſtated Times. They were allowed the Tythe of the Harveſt, which they went into the Country to reap.

III. BUT theſe Duties are now ceaſed, unleſs it be with reſpect to ſuch Jews as live in the Territories of Jeruſalem, and the antient Judea. There are very few Jews at preſent who enjoy any Lands or Flocks of their own; ſo that though there are ſome, who pretend to be Sons of Prieſts and [a] Levites, and to have an indiſputable Tradition of the Truth of their Lineage, notwithſtanding all their Tranſmigrations, yet they have no Pre-eminence, unleſs it be receiving ſome Dues on Account of the Firſt-born, and having uſually the Preference to all others who are invited, as I have before obſerved, to read the [b] Pentateuch in their Synagogues; and their bleſſing the People on their ſolemn Feaſts in theſe Words: The Lord bleſs thee, and keep thee, &c. Numbers, ch. vi.

IV. THEY never will touch, if they can poſſibly avoid it, any dead Body, nor come under a Roof where there is one. The Jews pay them a Ranſom for their Firſt-born, as I ſhall ſhew more at large in the ninth Chapter of the fourth Part of this Diſſertation.

V. THE Prieſts are not permitted to marry with a Siſter-in-Law, who hath had Caliza, as I ſhall explain it in the ſeventh Chapter of the fourth Part, nor with any Woman that has been divorced from a former Husband.

VI. IN ſome few Circumſtances the Prieſts are Superior in Dignity to the Levites.

[a] Several of the Jews retain, to this Day, the Name of Cohanim or Prieſt, though there be no Temple; ſo that the Word Cohen, is now but a Title of Honour, and not of a real Prieſt.

[b] Chap. xi. Sect. 2.

CHAP.

CHAP. XIII.

Concerning Agriculture and Cattle.

I. THE Jews in all Places are ſtrictly enjoined not to ſow two different ſorts of Seed together, as Wheat and Barley, &c. nor to ſow any Thing with the Seeds of Grapes. [a] Thou ſhalt not ſow thy Field with mingled Seed, &c. Neither are they allowed to graft any Tree, as Peach, Apple, Orange-Tree, and the like; or to keep any grafted Trees on their Ground, but they may eat the Fruits thereof.

II. HE that plants a Fruit-Tree, muſt not touch the Fruit of it, till three Years after its firſt Plantation. The Fruit thereof in the fourth Year was formerly dedicated to the Temple, [b] but at this Time they gather it in common with other Fruits.

III. THEY take ſpecial Care to prevent two Animals of a different Species from coupling together, as the Aſs and the Bull, or any other, for the Generation of Mules, according to that Prohibition, [c] Thou ſhalt not let thy Cattle gender with a divers Kind. They were likewiſe ſtrictly enjoined not to let them work, draw the Plough or Cart together, [d] Thou ſhalt not plough with an Ox and an Aſs together.

IV. WHEN they gathered in their Harveſt, they were under an Obligation to leave ſome Part of it ſtanding at one End of the Field, and likewiſe to leave ſome Grapes in their Vineyards.

V. EVERY ſeventh Year was a Year of Reſt for their Lands, and that Year's [e] natural Produce was always appropriated to the Support of the Poor.

VI. THEY were not allowed to eat, or put to any Uſe whatever, the firſt-born Male of a clean Female, as of a Cow, an Ewe, or of any other ſpotleſs Animal: For formerly it was the Prieſt's cuſtomary Due, unleſs they redeem'd it of him. But this Inſtitution, whether the Animal be ſpotted, or not, is at preſent no where practiſed or regarded. The [f] Firſt-born of an Aſs might be redeem'd by giving the Prieſt a Lamb in exchange for it.

VII. WHOEVER finds a Bird's Neſt, where there are either Eggs or young ones, of that kind which are allowed to be eat, if he takes the Neſt [g], muſt ſet the Dam at Liberty.

CHAP. XIV.

Concerning their Charity to the Poor, and their Benevolence to Animals.

I. NOTWITHSTANDING the Jews lie more open and expoſed than any other Nation to Injuries and Inſults; and although but few of them are rich, and ſuch as are, have little in their Poſſeſſion that can properly be called Riches; yet thoſe

[a] Lev. xix.
[b] Lev. xix. ver. 23.
[c] Lev. xix. ver. 19.
[d] Deut. chap. xxii. ver. 10.
[e] Lev. chap. xxv.
[f] Exod. xiii. ver. 13.
[g] Deut. xxii. ver. 6.

few

few ſupply the Neceſſities of their numerous Poor, and ſuccour and relieve them at all Times, and on all Occaſions; ſo that it muſt be allowed that the Jews are very tender of and indulgent to their Poor.

II. In all Cities of any Repute the Poor go on the Eve of the Sabbath, and other ſolemn Feaſts, to the Houſes of ſuch as are moſt rich and ſubſtantial; and every Houſe-keeper relieves them according to his Ability. Beſides, the [a] Parnaſſim, or Memunin, who are proper Perſons appointed for that Purpoſe, ſend them Money conſtantly every Week, but chiefly to ſuch Poor as are aſhamed to beg, and to Widows and other old or infirm People, who are not able to make their perſonal Applications.

III. A Fund is likewiſe raiſed for the Poor out of the charitable Contributions which are put into the Box of the Synagogue, and out of the Money which is collected by the Prieſts in the Time of their divine Service, as in the eleventh Chapter is already mentioned.

IV. When there is a Neceſſity to beſtow a larger Charity than ordinary, either to one of the Poor of the City, whom they know to be a proper Object, or to a Stranger, or on Account of the Marriage of a young Woman, the Redemption of a Slave, or any Thing of the like Nature, the Rulers of the Synagogue direct the Reader to go all round the Congregation, who, as he paſſes by them, ſtill names the Perſons to whom he ſpeaks; ſaying, God bleſs N. who will beſtow ſuch or ſuch a Sum towards ſuch a Charity. As the Jews do not touch any Money on the Sabbath, and as this Collection is generally made on that Day, ſuch Perſons as are then charitably diſpoſed, oblige themſelves on their Words to give ſuch a Sum to the Reader upon that Account; and this verbal Promiſe is called [b] Nedava; which they always take care to diſcharge before the Week is at an End. As ſoon as the Reader has made his charitable Collections, the Sums thereby raiſed are duly diſtributed to ſuch Poor as they were deſigned for.

V. There are alſo in all populous Cities ſeveral Aſſemblies or Clubs, who are very beneficent to their Poor: Some aſſiſt the Sick, others bury the Dead; that Society which collects the [c] Zedaca, or ſmall Alms, are generally called Ghemilud Haſſadim; that which undertakes the Redemption of Slaves, Pidion Suevim; and they who employ themſelves about the Marriage of the young Women are called Haſſibetuloth. There are ſeveral other Aſſemblies, more or leſs conſiderable, according to the Number of Jews that reſide in each City.

VI. If the urgent Neceſſity of any poor Perſon requires more than they who live in the ſame City are able to beſtow, he makes immediate Application to the principal Rabbi's, who give him a [d] Certificate under their Hands, to this Effect: That the Bearer hereof N. is an honeſt and good Man, and ſuch as peruſe it are deſired to aſſiſt him. By Virtue of this Certificate, the Bearer, wherever he goes, if to a Caſtle, a Farm, or any other Place where any Jews reſide, is maintained and relieved for a Day or two together; and at his Departure is ſometimes ſupplied with Money to ſupport him on the Road. In every Town thro' which he paſſes he gets a new Certificate, or procures proper Perſons to ſubſcribe the firſt, with which he goes to the Synagogue, in the Name of the Parnaſſim, or of the Aſſemblies, or of ſuch other Perſons as are empowered to give him a Warrant. And thus he receives, in the Manner before mentioned, the Subſiſtence and Support which he ſtands in need of.

[a] Thoſe who are appointed to take Care of their Civil Affairs.
[b] Liberality.
[c] Juſtice; the Jews ſtile their Alms after this Manner, conformable to the ſixth Chapter of St. Matthew, ver. 1. Ne juſtitiam veſtram faciatis coram hominibus.
[d] This ſort of Letters was alſo long in Uſe amongſt the Chriſtians.

VII. THE [a] Jews, in whatever Part of the World they reſide, ſend Alms to Jeruſalem every Year for the Relief of the Poor there, who pray for the Welfare of all Jews in general. There are likewiſe conſiderable Sums ſent into other Parts of Judea, as to Joppa, Tiberias, and Hebron, the Burying-Places of the Patriarchs Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob, and their Wives.

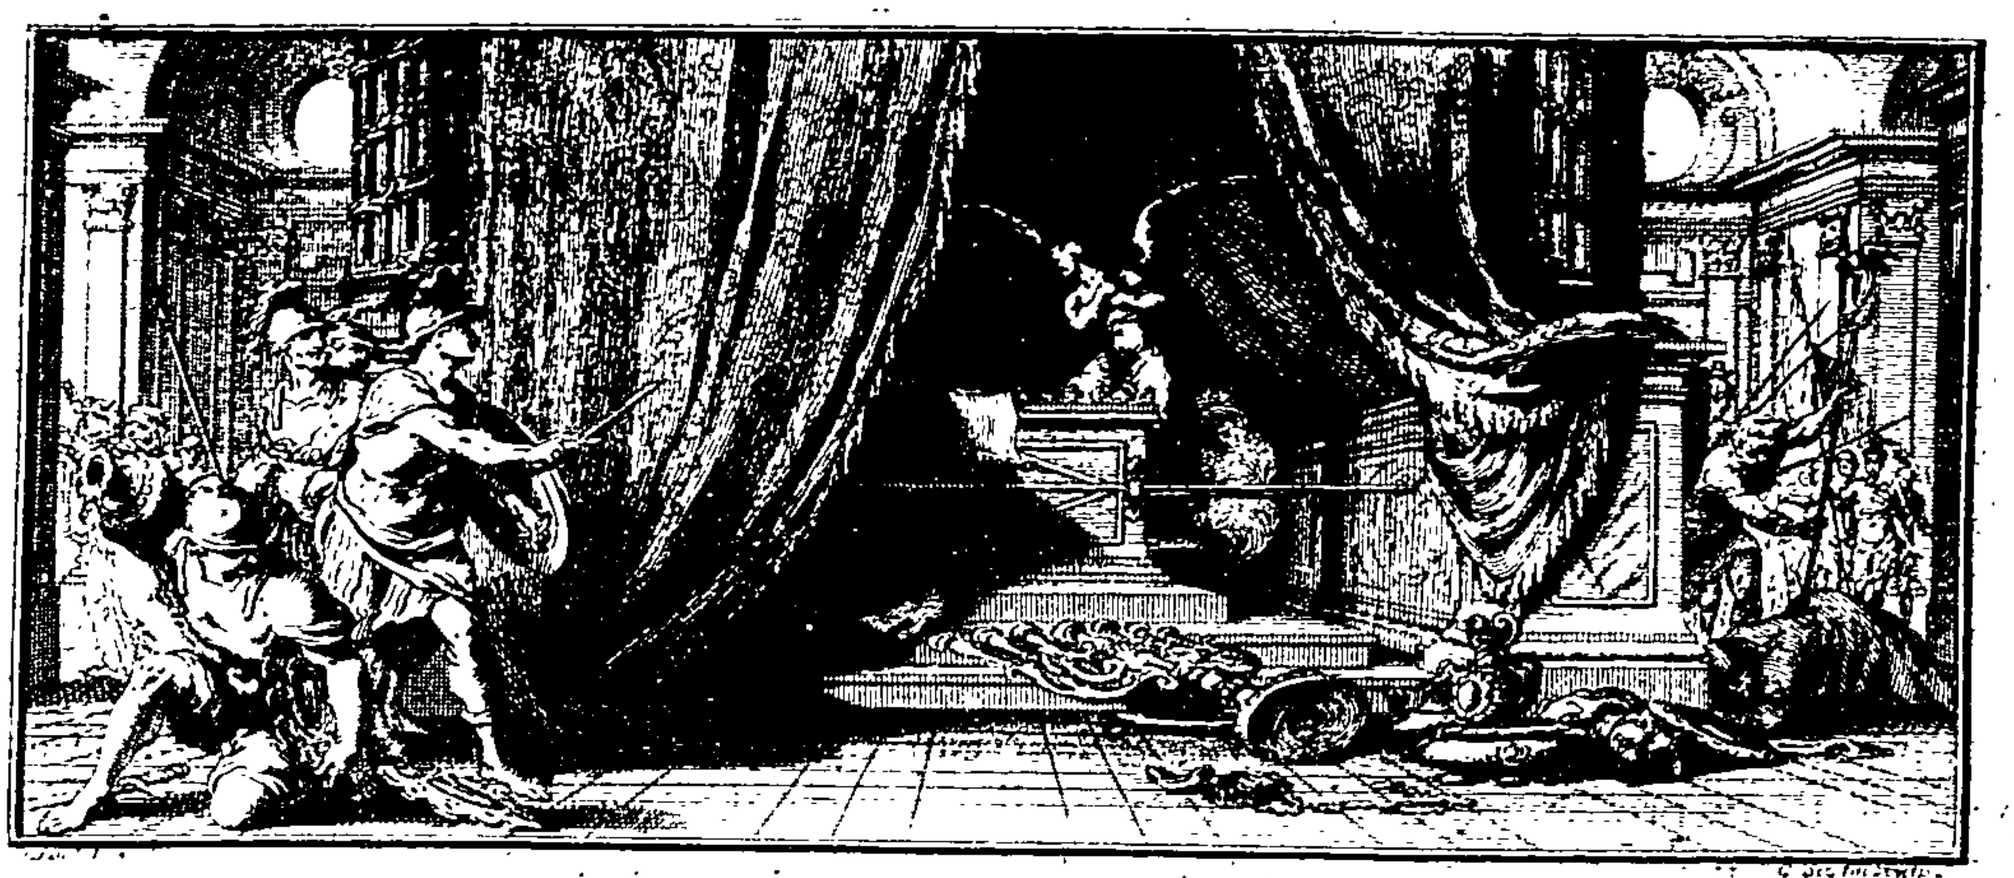
VIII. BESIDES theſe public Charities, every Man has free Liberty to relieve the Poor privately, in ſuch Manner, and at ſuch Times as he thinks moſt convenient, and according as his Circumſtances will beſt admit of.

IX. THE Jews likewiſe imagine that they are doing a laudable Action when they give their Alms and charitable Aſſiſtance to the Poor and Needy of all Perſuaſions, though not Jews, nor of the ſame City; becauſe they look upon it as an Act of Humanity, which ought to extend indifferently to all Perſons in general; and, indeed, the Rabbi's give a particular Charge relating thereunto.



X. BY the ſame Motive of Tenderneſs and Compaſſion, they neither torment nor abuſe any Animals whatſoever, and take all the Care they poſſibly can not to put them to a cruel Death; for they look upon them as the Works of God's Hands, according to the Words of the hundred and forty fifth Pſalm, ver. 9. And his Mercy is over all his Works.

[a] This is not in the firſt Edition.

The E N D of the FIRST PART.

A N

AN HISTORICAL DISSERTATION ON THE CUSTOMS and CEREMONIES OF THE PRESENT JEWS.

PART II.

CHAP. I.

Concerning their Language, Pronunciation, Manner of Writing, and Preaching.

AMONG the modern Jews there are but few that are able to make any Diſcourſe in Hebrew, or the Holy Tongue, which they call [a] Laſchon Hacodeſch, in which are written the four and twenty Books of the Old Teſtament. They are as much at a Loſs with reſpect to the Chaldee, or the [b] Targum, tho' they ſpoke thoſe Languages when they enjoy'd their Privileges, and were in their own Nation. They have very little Knowledge therefore of any other Language than that of the Country whereof they are Natives. Thus the Jews of Italy and Germany talk Italian and Dutch; and thoſe of the Eaſt, and of Barbary, Turkiſh and the Moreſco Tongues. Nay, they have made thoſe foreign Languages ſo abſolutely their own, that many of thoſe Jews who went from Germany into Poland, Hungary, and Ruſſia, carried the German Language with them into thoſe Countries, and tranſmitted it to their Poſterity. As for thoſe who were forc'd out of Spain, and fled for Refuge into the Eaſt, they likewiſe carried the Spaniſh Language along with them into thoſe Parts. In Italy they uſe both Languages in Imitation of their Fore-Fathers. The major Part of them chuſe to preſide in thoſe Countries, where they are Maſters of the Language. They mingle, however, many corrupt Hebrew Words in their Converſation. But few of them underſtand the Scripture thoroughly; and ſcarce any of them, except the Rabbi's, can make a compleat Diſcourſe in the holy Tongue.

[a] Holy Tongue.
[b] By the Chaldaic Paraphraſes, they mean Interpretations or Comments.

Diſt

II. As to their Manner of Pronunciation, with reſpect to the Hebrew Language, 'tis ſo various, that the Italians and Levantines can hardly underſtand the Germans. But none of them pronounce more grammatically, which they call [a] Dichduch, or more intelligibly than the Italians.

III. THE holy Tongue, it muſt be allowed, lies in a very narrow Compaſs, and is very barren with regard to Words; for as there are no other antient Writings extant but the four and twenty Books of the old Teſtament, the Jews are obliged to borrow all their Words from thence. The Rabbi's, indeed, have enlarged it ſufficiently for public Service, by introducing a great Variety of Chaldee, ſome Greek, and other foreign Words and Expreſſions into it. They have alſo coined ſeveral new Words for the Names of Things, and in every Age their Writers have done the ſame, particularly the better to expreſs their Sentiments upon philoſophical Topicks, and other Sciences, from whence they have borrowed their Terms.

IV. THIS Rabbinical Hebrew is generally made uſe of in their Books, Contracts, Journals, &c. but as for their Epiſtolary Correſpondence, of what Nature or Kind ſoever, the Generality of them write in the Language of the Country in which they live. Some of them, however, write them in Hebrew Letters. The Jews of the Morea are the only People who ſtill carry on all their Tranſactions in the Hebrew Language.

V. THEIR Sermons are compoſed in the Language of the Country in which they live, in order to be more univerſally underſtood. Their Quotations from Scripture, however, and from their Rabbi's, are in Hebrew, which the Preacher afterwards explains in the vulgar Tongue, for the Benefit of the more illiterate Part of his Audience.

VI. As every Man has free Liberty to preach, he who intends to officiate in that Character, watches his Opportunity, when the Congregation is ſitting ſilent in the Synagogue; then covering himſelf with his Taled, or ſometimes uncovered, he reſts upon the Desk I have beforementioned, [b] and opens with a Text taken out of the Leſſon that has been read, called [c] Naſe, to which he adds a Sentence extracted from the Writings of thoſe learned Men called Maamar. After this, he enters upon his Diſcourſe, beginning with ſome Circumſtance ariſing from his Text; afterwards he explains it, and quotes Places out of the Scripture, and brings Authorities from the Rabbi's, for the Confirmation of it. Every one does it after his own Way, which is very different, according to the Nation whereto he belongs.

VII. THEIR Sermons are preached on the Sabbath, and on their ſolemn Feaſts, except when there is a Funeral Eulogium for the Maſter of any conſiderable Family, or for ſome other extraordinary Occaſion, which is generally made upon common Days.

[a] Subtilty, their Grammar conſiſting only in Trifles and ſubtle Reflections.
[b] Part I. chap. viii.
[c] The Subject.

CHAP.

CHAP. II.

Concerning their Studies and Academies, and the Origin and Contents of the Ghemara or Talmud.

I. THE beſt Employment they can follow is, in their Opinion, the Study of the Sacred Scripture, and the Interpretations thereupon, according to the utmoſt of their Ability; [a] And thou ſhalt talk of them when thou ſitteſt in thine Houſe, and when thou walkeſt by the Way, &c. Some apply themſelves to the Cabala, that is, the myſterious Theology of Scripture. Others employ their Time in the Study of Philoſophy and the other Sciences, both natural and moral; but with this laudable View only, that they may underſtand the Scripture to a greater Degree of Perfection: For unleſs a Man propoſes to make Phyſick his Profeſſion, thoſe Studies are deem'd very pernicious; but in that Caſe, indeed, it is both requiſite and allowable. The Generality of them make it their Buſineſs to underſtand the [b] Ghemara or Talmud, in thoſe Places where they are permitted to have it; for where they have it not, they endeavour to make themſelves Maſters of the Writings of their wiſe Men, their Paraphraſes, or the Abridgment of the Talmud.

II. THEY have particular Academies called [c] Jeſivod, erected for that Purpoſe, where the Rabbi's and their Pupils meet for their better Improvement in the Art of Diſputation; but they are ſo irregular in their Practice of it, and ſo noiſy, that one would imagine the Debates in queſtion were Articles of the laſt Importance. They uſually meet there after Morning Prayers; Fridays, the Eves of Feſtivals, Sabbath Days, and Holy-days only excepted.

III. AND foraſmuch as all the Precepts, Cuſtoms, and Ceremonies of the Jews are grounded upon the Talmud, and have all their Authority from it, it is requiſite that the Reader ſhould be acquainted with its Origin, and have a ſatisfactory Account given him of what it principally contains.

IV. IN the firſt Chapter of this Work I have obſerved, that the Jews received the written Law from Moſes, and the oral Law; which is an Interpretation of the former, from their Rabbi's, with a Collection of all their Conſtitutions. Whilſt the Temple was ſtanding, the Jews were not allowed to write down any Part of this ſecond Law, which was thence called the oral Law, as it was taught only by Word of Mouth, and by Tradition.

V. BUT about one hundred and twenty [d] Years after the Temple was deſtroy'd, Rabbi Juda, who at that Time was called by the Jews Rabenu Hacadoſh, or our holy Maſter, on Account of his exemplary Life and uncommon Virtues; this Rabbi, I ſay, who was a Gentleman of Fortune, and a Favourite of the Emperor Antoninus Pius, taking notice that the Diſperſion of the Jews made them negligent and forgetful of this oral Law, writ down the Tenets, Ordinances, and Traditions of all the Rabbi's to his Time; this he did by way of Epitome, which he called [e] Miſna. This Compendium of his is divided into ſix Parts; the firſt treats of Agriculture and Seeds; the ſecond of Feſtivals; the third

[a] Deut. vi. 7.

[b] Perfection. It is a Supplement to the Miſna, which is the Text, whereof the Ghemara is the Gloſs or Explanation.

[c] The Meaning of this Word is properly Seſſio, becauſe the Scholars are ſitting.

[d] The Learned do not agree among themſelves about the Time when the Talmud was compiled.

[e] This is what the Fathers have called Deuteroſis, or, as it were, a Repetition of the Law, which ſerves as a Text to the Talmud.

of Marriages, and every Thing relating to Women; the fourth of Law-Suits, and of the Diſputes which ariſe from Loſs or Intereſt, and of all Manner of Civil Affairs; the fifth of Sacrifices; and the ſixth of Things clean and unclean. But this Book being very conciſe, and it created abundance of Diſputes, which, as they daily increaſed, obliged two Rabbi's of Babylon, one named Ravena, and the other Ravaſce, to collect all the Interpretations, Controverſies, and Additions, which have been written upon the Miſna, down to their Time, with a Supplement of ſeveral ſhort Hiſtories, Maxims, and memorable Sayings, that they had met with in their Reading; placing the Miſna as the Text, and the reſt as an Expoſition, out of which they compoſed the Book called [a] Talmud Babeli, or Ghemara, which is divided into ſixty Parts, called [b] Maſſactoth. Some Years before, one Rabbi Jocanan of Jeruſalem, had compoſed a Treatiſe of this kind, well known by the Name of Talmud Geruſalmi, Talmud of Jeruſalem. But this being very conciſe, and written in a diſagreeable Style, the Babylonian was preferred, as being more copious and more clear. Upon this laſt, Rabbi Solomon, generally called [c] Raſci, made ſome Annotations, and an Academy of Rabbi's added ſome Diſputations called [d] Toſſafoth. Several Things have been taken out of this Babylonian Talmud, and eſpecially out of the three Diſſertations, of the Number of thoſe ſix juſt before mentioned, becauſe thoſe on Husbandry, Sacrifices, and on Cleanneſs or Uncleanneſs, are now no longer practiſed or regarded.

VI. SINCE that Time, ſome of the Popes have forbidden, and others have allowed the Uſe of the Talmud. It is at preſent prohibited in Italy, where it is neither to be read nor ſeen.

CHAP. III.

Concerning the Promotion of their Rabbi's, their Authority, and their Excommunications.

I. THE Rabbi's are no way ſollicitous for their Degree, but think it vain and ridiculous to ſhew an Over-Fondneſs or Inclination for it: For which Reaſon they never examine them, but when they find a learned and judicious Man worthy to be named a Rabbi, that is to ſay, a Man who hath made the oral Law his principal Study, he is looked upon by the Generality amongſt them as a Doctor, and is therefore called Cacham, or Wiſe Man. Tho' this is the Cuſtom in the Eaſt, yet in Germany and Italy they are created by the moſt antient Rabbi's, who either by Word of Mouth, or a particular Form in Writing, call the Candidate Chaver de Rau, his Maſter's Companion, which Title is beſtowed upon young Men, not ſo well verſed in the Sciences as the old Doctors; or ſometimes they call them Morenu or Rau, Preceptor or Maſter.

II. THE Cacham Rau, or Morenu, determines all Manner of Debates, ſettles what Things are lawful and what unlawful, and paſſes Judgment upon all Religious Concerns; nay, his Deciſion ſometimes is required in Civil Affairs. Theſe Wiſe Men, or Preceptors, perform all Nuptial Ceremonies, and have Liberty to iſſue out their Divorces when they think proper. They preach, when they are duly qualified, and are the Principals of their Academies. They have the uppermoſt Seats in the Synagogues and Aſſemblies. They have a Power to puniſh the Diſobedient, and excommunicate them when [a] Talmud of Babylon.

[b] Treatiſes.
[c] R. Solomon Jarchi, or, as the Jews call him, Solomon Iſaaki. He was a Native of Troyes in Champain, not of Lunel in Languedoc, as ſome have thought.
[d] Additions.

they

they are obſtinate or perverſe; and for this Reaſon they are every where very much reſpected.

III. WHEN a Perſon is excommunicated, he is curs'd by them in the moſt ſolemn and public Manner, after which no Jew can converſe with, or approach him within the Length of a Fathom, or ſix Foot; he is excluded from the Synagogue, and is obliged to ſit barefooted upon the Ground, like one who mourns for the Death of his Relations, till he procures his Abſolution, and a new Benediction from one or more of the Rabbi's.

IV. IN their more ſolemn Excommunications, they aſſemble together in the Synagogue, where lighting up ſome black Tapers, and blowing a Horn, they thunder out their Imprecations againſt the Man who hath been, or ſhall be guilty of ſuch or ſuch an enormous Crime; to which the Congregation anſwers, Amen, So be it.

CHAP. IV.

Concerning their Oaths and Vows.

I. THEY are ſtrictly enjoined to refrain from ſwearing in vain, or pronouncing any of God's Names without an abſolute Neceſſity, according to the Prohibition in the Decalogue, and fifth Chapter of Deuteronomy. [a] Lying and ſwearing falſly are alſo ſtrictly forbidden; according to Leviticus, Chapter xix. Verſe 12. Ye ſhall not ſwear by my Name falſly.

II. THEY are very cautious how they make any ſolemn Vows, but when they do, they are obliged to fulfil them. A Husband has Power to give his Wife a Diſpenſation for any Vow of Abſtinence which ſhe hath made to herſelf, though ſhe is willing to perform it; but then he muſt grant it within the Space of four and twenty Hours after he knows of it. A Father has alſo the Privilege of breaking the Vows of his Daughter, in Caſe ſhe is unmarried; according to the thirtieth Chapter of Numbers, and fourth Verſe.

III. NAY, a Man or a Woman, who hath taken an Oath, or made a ſolemn Vow, if it be no ways prejudicial to a third Perſon, and they have ſufficient Grounds to repent of their Raſhneſs, may, according to their Tradition, procure a Diſpenſation from a Rabbi of Repute, or from any three indifferent Perſons. He, therefore, who is deſirous to be diſengaged from his Vow, may communicate his Reaſons to a Rabbi, or to three private Perſons, who, if his Reaſons are juſt and approved of, ſhall ſay, Be thou unbound, &c. and this ſhall be deem'd a ſufficient Diſpenſation.

[a] Exod. xx.

CHAP. V.

Concerning their Trade, and their Uſury.

I. EVERY Man is obliged, both by their written and their oral Law, to be true to his Word, and not to over-reach or defraud any Perſon whatever, Jew or Stranger, and in all their Dealings to comply with the Rules of Commerce preſcribed in ſeveral Places of the Scripture, and particularly in the nineteenth Chapter of Leviticus, from the thirty third Verſe to the End.

II. SOME have ungenerouſly aſſerted and written, that the Jews are under an Obligation to cheat the Chriſtians, whenever it is in their Power, and think it a laudable Action when accompliſh'd; but this is meer Scandal and Ill-Nature, and only charged upon them to render them Objects of Contempt. So far is this Aſperſion from being true and juſt, that ſeveral Rabbi's have written againſt it; and even our Maſter Bachii hath compoſed a Treatiſe in his Book [a] Cad Achema, Letter Ghimel Ghezela, where he lays down this Propoſition, That it is a much greater Crime to defraud a Perſon who is not a Jew, than one who is; becauſe the Action in the firſt Place is wicked in itſelf, and becauſe the Scandal is the greater: For which Reaſon ſuch a Practice is called Chillul Aſcem, or a Prophanation of the Name of God, which is a Sin of the moſt heinous Nature. If any of them therefore cheat in their Way of Trade, it is to be imputed only to ſuch Perſons as commit the Fraud. For no true Jews are guilty of ſuch a ſcandalous Practice; no manner of Deceit being tolerated by the Law, nor in any reſpect whatever countenanced by the Rabbi's.

III. IT is very probable, however, that as they are reduced to a deplorable Condition, by being diſperſed all over the Earth, and almoſt every where debarr'd from the Privilege of holding any Lands, and deprived of all the certain Ways of Commerce, or advancing their Stock, their Souls may have been corrupted, and have degenerated from the primitive Integrity of the Iſraelites.

IV. FOR this very Reaſon, they take the Liberty of turning Uſurers, depending upon this Paſſage, [b] Unto a Stranger thou mayſt lend upon Uſury, but unto thy Brother thou ſhalt not lend upon Uſury. By the Term Stranger, the Jews ought to underſtand no others but theſe ſeven Nations, the Hittites, the Amorites, the Jebuſites, &c. whom God had ordained ſhould be ſmitten with the Edge of the Sword. But as the Generality of the Jews have no other Way of getting a Subſiſtence, they aſſert that it is lawful for them to lend their Money upon Uſury to all ſuch as are their [c] Brethren only by Nature.

V. [d] THOSE Paſſages therefore of the Rabbi's, which excourage Extortion from Strangers, muſt be underſtood only of the ſeven Nations beforementioned, their Opinion being grounded upon their being ſo often curſed in the Holy Scripture. But it cannot be underſtood of thoſe Nations where the Jews are at preſent tolerated, and where they are treated with the utmoſt Humanity, both by the Princes and the People, eſpecially amongſt Chriſtians; ſince it would be a Practice not only repugnant to the written Law, but the Law of Nature it ſelf.

[a] A Buſhel of Meal.

[b] Deut. chap. xxiii. ver. 20.

[c] They not being permitted to hold Lands, or to inherit any Eſtate in Property, think that they are allowed to get their Livelihood by other Means, and that the Reaſon againſt Uſury is of no Force againſt them, as being founded upon the Law of Nature. The firſt Edition ſays, being not deemed by many as Brothers by Nature.

[d] This is not in the firſt Edition, but only in the Copy printed at Venice, where it ſeems to have been added on Purpoſe.

CHAP. VI.

Concerning their Contracts, Writings, Witneſſes, Judges, and Judgments.

I. ALL Bargains, Sales, or Agreements are reckoned duly executed, and in full Force and Virtue, when both Parties have touched the Clothes or the Handkerchief of the Witneſſes, which is a kind of Oath called [a] Kinian Suddar, the Purchaſe of the Cloth.

II. PUBLIC Notaries are but very little regarded amongſt them, except the Notary, as a Writer, ſtands for a Witneſs, who, with two others, makes any Writings valid and effectual, whether they relate to Commerce, Wills, Marriages, Divorces, or Concerns of any other Nature whatſoever.

III. THAT ſuch Writings may be more authentic for the future, and be in Force at all Times and in all Places, they get three other Perſons, who are appointed Judges of the Affairs therein contained, to authoriſe them.

IV. AND to prevent their Witneſſes from having the leaſt Room to prevaricate, they muſt undergo an Examination in Preſence of their Adverſary, or the Perſon who is thought guilty.

V. THE principal Rabbi's are commonly Judges of the Controverſies which ariſe amongſt the Jews, let the Occaſion be what it will; or otherwiſe the Parties by Agreement chuſe ſome of their Friends for Arbitrators.

VI. THE Rabbi's form their Judgment on what is written in [b] Choſen Hamiſpath, or in the Collection of Caſes adjudged, called [c] Sheeloth Veſcivuoa, extracted for the greateſt Part from the twenty firſt Chapter of Exodus; which begins thus: Now theſe are the Judgments which thou ſhalt ſet before them, with what follows to the End of the twenty third Chapter, and from the Beginning of the twenty ſecond of Deuteronomy to the End of the twenty fifth. To theſe the Judges add their Sentiments, drawn from the Reaſon of the Thing, having always a peculiar Regard to the Perſon, the Caſe, and Point of Time.

VII. As for Criminal Caſes, they are entirely ſubmitted to thoſe Princes under whoſe Government they live, the Authority of the Rabbi's extending no farther than to excommunicate ſuch as tranſgreſs againſt any of their Ceremonies, as in the third Chapter of this ſecond Part I have before obſerved.

[a] This Chapter was omitted in the firſt Edition.

[b] The Breaſt-Plate of Judgment. It is the Title of Part of an admirable Book concerning the Jewiſh Law, &c.

[c] Queſtions and Anſwers.

CHAP. VII.

Concerning ſuch Meats as are always prohibited, and their Manner of eating.

I. THEY are not permitted to taſte the Fleſh of any four-footed Beaſt, unleſs it parts the Hoof, and chews the Cud, as the Cow and the Sheep: But they never eat Rabbets, Hares, or Pork. They eat no Fiſh without Scales or Fins, no Birds of Prey, nor Reptile, there being an expreſs Prohibition againſt them, in the eleventh Chapter of Leviticus.

II. WHATEVER they eat, therefore, muſt be dreſſed by Jews, and the Utenſils, as I have already obſerved, belonging to their own People, for fear of their Pollution by any forbidden Meats. Nay, [a] they are ſo ſcrupulous, as to refuſe to make uſe of another Man's Knife.

III. THEY never eat the Fat of Beef, Lamb, or Kid, as is directed at the End of the third Chapter of Leviticus. Neither do they eat the Sinews of the Thigh, it being prohibited at the End of the thirty third Chapter of Geneſis. For which reaſon they take out all the Fat and Sinews with the utmoſt Precaution; and in ſeveral Places in Italy and Germany they will not eat the Hind-quarter, becauſe very few are capable of taking out the Sinew and Fat in a proper Manner.

IV. [b] THEY never eat the Blood of a four-footed Beaſt, nor of a Bird, nor ſo much as an Egg, if there be the leaſt Drop of Blood in it. It is, perhaps, for this Reaſon, that that they are not allowed to partake of any terreſtrial Beaſt, or Bird, whoſe Throat hath not been cut open in order to drain the Blood.

V. IN ſlaughtering any Beaſt, they pitch upon ſome skilful Perſon, becauſe there are various Circumſtances to be obſerved upon that Occaſion. They muſt make choice too of the moſt proper Time, have a Knife that is very ſharp, and without Notches, that the Blood may flow out as faſt as poſſible, without the leaſt Interruption; falling either upon the Ground, or upon Aſhes, with which they cover it as ſoon as they have done.

VI. THEY are not allowed to cut off any Part of a living Beaſt, or eat it, whether raw or roaſted.

VII. THEY muſt not kill a Cow and her Calf on the ſame Day; neither muſt they kill an Ewe or a Goat, and their Kids at the ſame Time, if they know it.

VIII. [c] IF any ſuch Beaſts or Birds as they are permitted to eat, happen to die of themſelves, or are killed any otherwiſe than as beforementioned, they muſt not taſte them.

IX. IN like manner, if a Bird has been prick'd by a Thorn or a Needle, or any four-footed Beaſt has accidentally an Impoſthume, or vitiated Lungs, all which they pry narrowly into, after the Beaſts are dead, they never eat of them, according to the Prohibition

[a] Part I. chap. iii.
[b] Levit. chap. xvii. ver. 10, &c.
[c] Lev. xvii. ver. 15.

bition at the End of the twenty third of Exodus, and in other Places of the ſacred Scripture.

X. If a living Beaſt has accidentally had a Bone broken in one of thoſe Limbs which the Rabbi's have pointed out, or has been dangerouſly wounded, they muſt eat no Part of it.

XI. For the better Obſervance of the Law before mentioned relating to the Blood, they leave their Meat in Salt for an Hour, before they put it into the Pot, that all the Blood may come out. Otherwiſe they can eat no Meat, unleſs it be roaſted: And as the Liver is full of Blood, they broil it well upon the Coals, before ever they boil it.

XII. There is nothing worth our Obſervation, with reſpect to their eating Fiſh; for they are not forbidden to eat their Blood, nor commanded, when they are dead or vitiated, to throw them away.

XIII. They muſt not eat both Fleſh and Cheeſe, or Milk, at the ſame Meal; becauſe it is written, [a] Thou ſhalt not ſeethe a Kid in his Mother's Milk. This they underſtand of all kinds of Beaſts, and of any Milk whatſoever. And they are ſo far from dreſſing their Meat with any Thing whereof Milk is an Ingredient, that they never mix both in a Meal, neither do they eat Fleſh and Cheeſe at the ſame Hour; becauſe there might poſſibly remain ſome Fleſh between the Teeth, they ſay, that might mingle itſelf with the Cheeſe. But if they eat Cheeſe ſome time before, they may eat Meat afterwards.

XIV. For this Reaſon, the Veſſels uſed for Meat are never made uſe of for Things compoſed of Milk, each one having its peculiar Mark of Diſtinction; nay, they have different Knives for each Purpoſe. If, by Accident, they dreſs either of theſe Eatables in ſuch Veſſels as belong to the other, they not only avoid taſting it, but likewiſe, if it be an earthen Veſſel, either break it, or throw it aſide as uſeleſs.

XV. They never eat any Cheeſe, unleſs they have firſt ſeen it in the Curds, leſt there ſhould be any Milk of a forbidden Beaſt, or any Part of the Skin mixed with the Curds, which might be reckoned both Fleſh and Cheeſe, as alſo leſt the Milk ſhould have been warmed in a Veſſel already uſed in boiling ſome forbidden Meat; they therefore ſet a particular Mark on thoſe Cheeſes whoſe Curds they have ſeen made.

XVI. It was an ancient Order of their Rabbi's, that they ſhould not eat Fleſh and Fiſh too at one Meal, it being, as they pretended, very unwholſom; but none of the Jews at preſent obſerve this Direction.

[a] Exod. xxii. ver. 19. and in other Places.

CHAP.

CHAP. XIII.

Concerning their Drink.

I. SOME Jews, according to the Opinion of the antient Rabbi's, imagine that they are forbidden to touch any Wine that has been made or taſted by any Perſons whomſoever, beſides their own People. The Levantines and Germans, indeed, are curious in this Particular; but the Italians think it a Circumſtance not worth their Obſervance. Thoſe Rabbi's, ſay they, who made this Inſtitution, liv'd at that Time amongſt Pagan Idolaters, with whom their People were debarr'd from holding the leaſt Communication, which ought not to be underſtood of thoſe Nations whom thoſe Rabbi's have acknowledged to be no Idolaters, and amongſt whom their People live at preſent.

II. THEY have alſo ſeveral other Cuſtoms; for Inſtance, at the Beginning and End of all their Feaſts, in their Weddings, their Circumciſion, and ſome other public Occaſions, they never fail to thank God for his Goodneſs over the Glaſs before they drink it; whenever they drink, they ſay a ſhort Grace alſo after as well as before. For they have a peculiar Regard for this Liquor, becauſe it is written, [a] That Wine maketh glad the Heart of Man: And in another Place, [b] That it cheereth God and Man.

CHAP. IX.

Concerning their Manner of making their Bread.

I. AFTER their Bread is kneaded, that is, after they have made a Maſs of Dough about the Bigneſs of forty Eggs, they take a ſmall Piece of it, and make a Cake, which is in lieu of the Firſt-Fruits preſcribed in Numbers, chap. xv. ver. 20. Ye ſhall offer up a Cake of the firſt of your Dough, &c.

II. THAT Cake was formerly given to the Prieſt, but now it is thrown into the Fire, and left there till it is entirely conſumed.

III. As it is the Women's Buſineſs for the Generality to make the Bread, this is one of the three Precepts which they are particularly directed to obſerve.

CHAP. X.

Concerning their Manner of eating at Table.

I. BEFORE they ſit down to Table, they muſt waſh their Hands as clean as poſſible: The Rabbi's have been very ſcrupulous in this Particular, as well as upon their Manner of waſhing their Hands in the [c] Morning, of which I have already taken ſufficient Notice.

[a] Pſalm. civ. ver. 15.
[b] Judges ix. ver. 13.
[c] Part I. ch. vii.

II. As

II. As ſoon as they are ſeated they generally repeat the twenty third Pſalm, The Lord is my Shepherd, &c. After that, the Maſter of the Family takes a whole Loaf, bleſſes it, breaks it, and gives a Bit about the Bigneſs of an Olive to each of his Gueſts; after this Ceremony they may eat as much as they pleaſe: But the firſt Time any one drinks, [a] he is obliged to ſay the Grace which I have before mentioned.

III. THE Rabbi's have written very largely on the Method of their eating with Decency and good Manners: And ſtrictly charge them not to tread upon Bread, or throw it away, or caſt any Eatable of what kind ſoever upon the Ground, that no Favour which God Almighty is pleaſed to beſtow on them ſhould be treated with Contempt.

IV. AFTER their Meal is over, they waſh their Hands again, and remove the Knives from off the Table; becauſe a Table is a Repreſentation, as they think, of an Altar, whereon no Steel ought to be laid; and divers of them ſay the ſame Pſalm which the Levites uſed to repeat in the Temple, upon that Day of the Week whereon they happen to be aſſembled, together with the ſixty ſeventh Pſalm, God be merciful unto us. If there be three or more in Company that have eaten, one of them takes a clean Glaſs, fills it with Wine, and lifts it up, ſaying, Gentlemen, let us bleſs him of whoſe good Creatures we have partaken; to which the others anſwer, Bleſſed be he of whoſe good Things we have partaken, and who, in his Goodneſs, hath at this Time moſt plentifully fed us. Then the firſt returns thanks to God, and beſeeches him, that he would give to every one the Neceſſaries of Life, as he gave the Land of Promiſe unto their Forefathers; and that he would alſo rebuild Jeruſalem. After this, the Maſter of the Houſe bleſſes all his Gueſts, and prays for Peace: In the next Place, he gives every one of them a little Wine out of his own Glaſs, and drinks the Remainder himſelf; and then they clear the Table.

[a] Part I. chap. 9.

The END of the SECOND PART.

AN HISTORICAL

DISSERTATION

ON THE

CUSTOMS and CEREMONIES

OF THE

PRESENT JEWS.

PART III.

CHAP. I.

Concerning the Sabbath-day.

THERE is no Feſtival which the Jews have ſo great a Veneration for as the Sabbath-day; becauſe it was inſtituted and appointed immediately after the Creation of the World, and is mentioned in various Places and at ſundry Times in ſacred Writ, and particularly in the Decalogue, wherein the Performance of the leaſt Thing upon that Day is forbidden, and a general Reſt from all Labours is commanded.

II. THE Rabbi's have reduced all ſuch Things as God hath forbidden to be done on the Sabbath-day to thirty-nine Articles, each whereof has its particular Circumſtances and Dependencies; viz. to plow, to ſow, to reap, to bottle, and to tie up the Sheaves, to threſh, to winnow, to ſift, to grind, to bolt, to knead, to bake, to ſhear, to waſh, to card, to ſpin, to twiſt, to weave, to dye, to tie, to untie, to ſew, to break any Thing to Pieces, to faſten with Wedges or Pins, to build, to demoliſh, to beat with a Hammer, to hunt, to fiſh, to kill, to flay, to prepare or ſcrape the Skin, to cut it in order for Working, to write, to eraſe, to make Lines for writing, to kindle, to extinguiſh, to carry any Thing out of Doors into the Street.

to

THESE are the principal Things forbidden, which take in divers Particulars; as for Inſtance, Filing falls under the Head of Grinding, becauſe both break Bodies aſunder; Curdling of Milk is a kind of Building, for theſe two out of various diſtinct Parts make but one. It is the ſame with the reſt, which are all explained with great Subtilty by the Rabbi's; nay, they even point out the Time when, and the Manner how Things ought to be done.

III. THEY muſt not either kindle their Fire, or extinguiſh it upon this Day, in Compliance with what is written in the thirty fifth Chapter of Exodus, Verſe 3. Ye ſhall kindle no Fire throughout your Habitations upon the Sabbath-day. Nay, they are not allowed to touch it, nor ſo much as the kindled Wood, which they muſt not ſtir up: Nor are they ſuffered to light up or extinguiſh a Lamp in cold Countries, when they have no hot Stoves; they may employ, however, any Servant that is not a Jew to kindle their Fire; if they do not, they either diſpoſe it ſo as that it lights of itſelf, or elſe they ſit in the Cold.

IV. FOR this Reaſon they dreſs no Meat upon the Sabbath; neither are they allowed to taſte any Thing that has been dreſſed, or that grew, or was gathered on that Day.

V. THEY are not allowed to carry any Burden on that Day; ſo that they wear no more Clothes than what is abſolutely neceſſary to cover them, or ſuch other Things as are joined and belong thereunto; becauſe any Thing more would be look'd upon as a Burden or Load. Their Exactneſs extends even to the Garb of their Women, Children, and Servants, and to the loading of their Beaſts, in Conformity to what is written in the Decalogue: [a] Thou ſhalt not do any Work, thou, nor thy Son, &c.

VI. THEY are forbidden on this Day to talk of any worldly Affairs; to make any Bargain with reſpect to buying and ſelling; and to give or take by Way of Payment; as it is written in the fifty eighth Chapter of Iſaiah, Thou ſhalt not turn away thy Foot from the Sabbath, &c.

VII. NEITHER muſt they handle or touch any Thing heavy upon this Day; nor can they take in their Hands any of the Tools of their Trade, or any other Things, the Uſe whereof is prohibited on the Sabbath-day.

VIII. THEY are not allowed to walk above a Mile, that is to ſay, two thouſand Cubits, out of any [b] Market Town or Village.

IX. THE Rabbi's, to prevent the following of Occupations, or doing any Manner of Work on that Day, have added ſeveral other Prohibitions to thoſe before-mentioned, ſuch as touching any Money, riding on Horſeback, ſailing in a Boat, playing on any muſical Inſtrument, or bathing.

X. IN Diſtempers which require the Surgeon's Aſſiſtance only, the Rabbi's are very rigid and auſtere; but with regard to Phyſicians, when they think the Patient is in the

[a] Exod. xx. Deut. v.

[b] The Jews can walk as long as they pleaſe on the Sabbath-day, provided they go not out of the Suburbs of the Town wherein they live. They always regard the Suburbs as a Part of the Town, and when they have a Mind to go out of Town upon that Day, they meaſure the Diſtance allowed for walking from the End of the Suburb.

leaſt

leaſt Danger, or after a Woman is juſt brought to Bed, every Thing that is requiſite is allowed without any Reſerve.

XI. WHATEVER therefore is neceſſary for the Sabbath is prepared upon Friday, in Conformity to what Moſes ſays concerning Manna, [a] And it came to paſs, that on the ſixth Day, &c. To be more expenſive than ordinary on that Day, is look'd upon by them as a laudable Action; ſince it ſhews a peculiar Value and Regard for that ſolemn Feſtival; as it is written in the fifty eighth Chapter of Iſaiah, Verſe 13. Nay, their humbling themſelves, and condeſcending to do ſuch Things as are mean and below their Station on the Sabbath, they think an Honour done to the Day.

XII. THEY never engage in any Work on the Friday, but what they can accompliſh with Eaſe before the Evening. About an Hour before Sun-ſet, they take the Proviſion which is intended for the next Day, and depoſit it in a warm Place; after which all Manner of Work is over. In ſome Towns a Man is appointed on Purpoſe, to give Notice about half an Hour before the Sabbath begins, that every one may ceaſe from their reſpective Labours in due Time.

XIII. THE Sabbath, in their Opinion, begins half an Hour before Sun-ſet; and conſequently from that Inſtant all Prohibitions are ſtrictly obſerved. For which Reaſon the Women are obliged to light up a Lamp in a Room, which has generally ſix or four Lights at leaſt, which burn the greateſt Part of the Night. They likewiſe cover a Table with a clean Napkin, and lay Bread thereon, and then cover it with another Piece of Linnen, which is both long and narrow. This Cuſtom is obſerved, they tell us, in Commemoration of the Manna, which fell after the ſame Manner, having Dew above and below it; but none fell upon the Sabbath.

XIV. IN order to begin the Sabbath well, ſome of them will put on clean Linnen, waſh their Hands and Face, and go to the Synagogue, where they ſay the ninety ſecond Pſalm, It is a good Thing to give Thanks to the Lord, &c. with their Common Prayers; And to theſe they add a Commemoration of the Sabbath, in theſe Words, taken out of Geneſis, [b] Thus the Heavens were finiſhed, &c. And God bleſſed the ſeventh Day, &c.

XV. THEY go directly home from the Synagogue, and their uſual Salutation to each other afterwards is, a good Sabbath to you, and not good Night or good Morrow. Moreover, the Fathers bleſs their Children, and Doctors their Pupils; others add to theſe Benedictions ſeveral Places of the Scripture in Commemoration of the Sabbath, ſome before Meat, and ſome after, according to the Cuſtom of the Place of their Abode.

XVI. WHEN the whole Family is ſeated at Table, the Maſter holds a Glaſs of Wine in his Hand, and pronounces theſe Words out of Geneſis, [c] Thus the Heavens were finiſhed, &c. In the next Place he returns God Thanks for having inſtituted and appointed the ſtrict Obſervance of the Sabbath, and bleſſes the Wine, then drinks ſome Part of it himſelf, and gives a ſmall Quantity to ſuch as ſit at the Table with him. After this, he repeats the twenty third Pſalm, The Lord is my Shepherd, &c. Then he bleſſes the Bread, and gives it round; and they all eat, and amuſe themſelves that Evening and the next Day as agreeably as they can. Supper being over, they waſh their Hands, and obſerve the Ceremonies before mentioned, concerning their manner of eating. Some Jews, after they have eaten, repeat the hundred and fourth Pſalm, Bleſs the Lord, O my Soul, &c.

[a] Exod. xvi. ver. 22. and 26.
[b] Gen. ii.
[c] Ibid.

XVII. THEY never riſe ſo ſoon on the Sabbath as on other Days, and when they go to the Synagogue, they repeat ſeveral Pſalms and Prayers in Commendation of the Sabbath, which are intermixed with their Common Prayers. Then they bring out the Pentateuch, and ſeven Perſons read the whole Section for the Day, and ſome Paſſages out of the Prophets, which have relation to what they read out of the Law. This laſt Leſſon they call [a] Aftara, and is uſually read by ſome Youth for his early Improvement.

XVIII. THEN he who holds the Book in his Hands, lifts it up, and bleſſes the whole Audience.

XIX. AFTERWARDS they have a ſolemn Benediction for the Sovereign under whoſe Government they live, wherein they beſeech Almighty God to keep him in Joy and Peace, that all his Undertakings may proſper, that his Dominions may be encreaſed, and that he may love their People, as it is written, [b] Seek the Peace of the City, whither I have cauſed you to be carried away Captives, and pray unto the Lord for it; for in the Peace thereof ſhall ye have Peace. Laſtly they repeat another Prayer called Muſſaf, that is to ſay, Addition, which contains the Words uſed in the Sacrifice, which was perform'd in the Temple on the Sabbath; and therewith the Service concludes.

XX. THEY preach ſometimes in the Forenoon, and ſometimes in the Afternoon, in their Synagogues, or other Places appointed for Divine Worſhip, and take their Text from the Pentateuch, out of the Leſſons for the Day. In their Sermons they recommend Virtue and diſcourage Vice, [c] illuſtrating their Notions, as I have already obſerved, with Paſſages taken from their moſt celebrated Rabbi's.

XXI. IN the Evening they go to the Synagogue again, and join the Remembrance of the Sabbath with their Common Prayers, and three Perſons read out of the Pentateuch the Beginning of the Section for the Week following.

XXII. THEY uſually make three Meals in the twenty four Hours of the Sabbath; the firſt is on the Friday after Evening-Service; the other two on the Day following to honour the Feſtival. The Cloth is never removed during the whole Time.

XXIII. As ſoon as Night comes on, and they can diſcover three Stars of any conſiderable Magnitude, the Sabbath is over, and they are allowed to go to Work; becauſe the Evening-Prayer, which they rather delay than haſten, is then begun.

XXIV. To the uſual Prayer for the Evening, they add a Remembrance of the Sabbath, which is diſtinguiſhed from the other Days of the Week, and the ninety firſt Pſalm, He that dwelleth in the ſecret Place of the Moſt High, &c. To which ſeveral Places of Scripture, and ſeveral Benedictions and good Wiſhes are likewiſe added.

XXV. [d] They make the Sabbath laſt as long as poſſibly they can, by prolonging their Hymns and Prayers; ſince 'tis a received Opinion amongſt them, that the Souls of the Damn'd, as well as thoſe in Purgatory, endure no Torments upon that Day.

XXVI. IN the Evening, when the whole Family is come Home, a Taper or Lamp with two Wicks at leaſt, is immediately lighted up. The Maſter takes ſome Wine in a Cup with ſome odoriferous Spices, and after the Repetition of a few Paſſages out of the [a] That is to ſay depart, becauſe after this Leſſon out of the Prophets is read, they go home. The Word is of the ſame Import with our Word Maſs, which comes from the Latin Miſſio, or Miſſa.

[b] Jerem. chap. xix. 7.
[c] Part II. chap. i.
[d] This was omitted in the ſecond Edition.

Prophets;

Prophets; as for Inſtance, that out of the hundred and ſixteenth Pſalm, I will take the Cup of Salvation; and that at the End of the eighth Chapter of Eſther, The Jews had Light and Gladneſs, &c. and ſuch like Places, as ſo many ſincere Wiſhes for the Proſperity and good Succeſs of the Week following: He bleſſes the Wine and the Spice, and ſmells to them, to begin the Week with an agreeable Savour. After this, he bleſſes the Light of the Fire that has not hitherto been made uſe of, and then looks upon his Hands and Nails, as a Token that he is going to his daily Labours. What we have related here has ſeveral other Significations in the Writings of the Rabbi's, but the whole is intended to denote that the Sabbath is over, and is from that Moment divided from the Day of Work that enſues, and ſo they conclude. And accordingly the whole Ceremony is called Abdala, or Diſtinction: At the ſame Time, ſome pour Wine upon the Ground, as an Indication of Mirth; others ſing or repeat Pſalms or Paſſages of the Scripture, as a propitious Omen of a happy Week; after which every one purſues the Dictates of his own Inclination.

XXVII. THEIR uſual Salutation that Night, is, God grant you a lucky Week, and not good Night to you.

CHAP. II.

Concerning the New Moon, the Names of the Months, and the intercalary Month.

I. THE Courſe of one Moon makes the Jewiſh Month; the Computation begins with the New Moon.

II. WHEN the Sanhedrim, that is to ſay, the Judges of Jeruſalem, bore Sway and exerciſed their Authority, two Men were appointed by them on Purpoſe to give Notice of the firſt Appearance of the Moon, and upon their Report to the Sanhedrim, publick Notice was given that the Month began from that Day, and thereby they fixed their Holidays with relation to the Times preſcribed for their Feſtivals. But ſince the Temple was deſtroyed, they ſettle it by Computation, and print a Calendar every Year, which ſhews them the New and Full Moons, the Seaſons of the Year, the Feſtivals, &c. They ſet down at preſent likewiſe in their Calendars, the Feſtivals of the Chriſtians, that they may know what Days are the moſt proper to trade with them.

III. THE New Moon is a Feſtival, becauſe it is inſtituted and appointed in the Book of [a] Numbers; and becauſe there was a new and grand Sacrifice offered on that Day. This Feſtival is ſometimes part of two ſeveral Days, that is, the End of one Day, and the Beginning of the other. They are not debarred from working or trading upon this Day; the Women only lay aſide their Work, and they all indulge themſelves a little more than uſual in their Way of Living.

IV. IN their Prayers they make mention of the firſt Day of the Month, and repeat from the hundred and thirteenth Pſalm to the hundred and eighteenth, upon that Day. They bring out the Pentateuch, and four Perſons read it, to which is added, the Prayer call'd Muſſaf [b]. They alſo read the Inſtitution of the Sacrifice, which was formerly offered on this Day.

[a] Numb. x. ver. 10. and xxviii. ver. 11.

[b] Addition, as we in our Offices ſay, to commemorate any particular Feſtival.

V. ON

V. On the Eve of the Sabbath after the New Moon, or ſome other following Evening, as ſoon as the Half-Moon is viſible, the Jews aſſemble together, and join in a particular Prayer to God, in which they ſtile him the Creator of the Planets, and the Reſtorer of the New Moon. Then, with their Hands devoutly lifted up towards Heaven, they beg of God to deliver them from all Evil, and having remembred King David, they ſalute each other, and ſo depart.

VI. The Names of their Months are as follow, viz. Tiſri, Haſſuan, Chiſleu, Teved, Scevat, Adar, Niſan, Jiar, Sivan, Tamus, Au, Elul. Tiſri, their firſt Month is the ſame with our September; but of this I ſhall diſcourſe more fully when I come to ſpeak of the Beginning of the Year.

VII. They make each Cycle or Revolution to be nineteen Years, that the Solar Years and the Lunar may be equal; and ſeven of theſe nineteen Years have thirteen Months a-piece in them, ſo that every ſecond or third Year contains thirteen Months in it, which is called [a] Meubar. When this happens, the Month of Adar is reckon'd twice, and plac'd betwixt February and March; ſo that they have Adar the firſt, and Adar the ſecond, which they call [b] Veadar.

CHAP. III.

Concerning the Paſſover.

I. The fifteenth Day of the Month Niſan, which often anſwers to our April, is the firſt Day of the Paſſover, which is called [c] Peſach, in Commemoration of the Jews Departure out of Egypt, and continues a whole Week: But ſuch as live out of Jeruſalem and its Territories, make it hold eight Days, according to the antient Cuſtom, when the New Moon by the Sanhedrim's Order was proclaimed, as I have already ſaid in the foregoing Chapter, without any Computation. This Feſtival is ordain'd in the twelfth Chapter of Exodus [d], and in ſeveral other Places of Holy Writ.

II. The two firſt and two laſt Days of the Paſſover are ſolemn Feſtivals, on which no Perſon is permitted either to work or do any manner of Buſineſs; nay, they keep them as ſtrict as the Sabbath: But they may make a Fire indeed, dreſs their Meat, and carry what Things they want from Place to Place. On the four middle Days they are only oblig'd not to work, but are permitted to touch Money; and there are only ſome few Particulars which diſtinguiſh thoſe Days from their uſual Working-Days.

III. During theſe eight Days they muſt neither eat, nor have any leavened Bread, or any Leaven in their Houſes, or even in their Cuſtody; ſo that they eat none but unleavened Bread all that Time; which Bread they call [e] Azyma.

IV. In order to obey this Precept as punctually as poſſible, they ſearch all the Houſe over with the utmoſt Precaution, to clear it of every Thing that is fermented. They pry into every Corner, into all their Trunks and Cupboards on this Account. When the Houſe is ſcower'd, they white-waſh it, and ſupply it with new Table and Kitchen

[a] Intercalated.
[b] And Adar, or ſecond Adar,
[c] Paſſage.
[d] Exod. xii. ver. 14.
[e] Exod. xii. ver. 15, 16, 17.

Furniture

Furniture, or with ſuch as is reſerved for the Service of this Day only. If they have been uſed before, and are of Metal, they muſt be firſt heated in a Forge, and new poliſh'd before they can be uſed on this Occaſion, becauſe nothing which has touch'd leavened Bread may be made uſe of during thoſe eight Days: For which Reaſon, on the Vigil of the Holiday, the Maſter of the Family ſearches all the Houſe over, to ſee if he can find no leavened Bread. About eleven of the Clock the next Day, they burn a Bit of Bread, to give Notice, that the Prohibition againſt leavened Bread is then begun; and this Ceremony is attended with a particular Declaration, that the Head of the Family has no Leaven in his Cuſtody; that if he has, it is unknown to him, and that he hath done to the utmoſt of his Power to prevent it.

V. IMMEDIATELY after, they fall to making of unleavened Bread, called by them Mazzoth, and they make as much of it as they think will laſt during all the eight Days. They take particular Care that their Meal has never been wet, or heated, leſt it may have been damaged. Of this they make flat heavy Cakes in various Forms; and for Fear they ſhould ſwell up, they bake them directly in an Oven, and keep them very neat and clean. Theſe they eat inſtead of Bread during the Holidays. Some of them are made with Eggs and Sugar for the Dainty and the Sick; but theſe are likewiſe void of Leaven, and are called Mazza Aſcira, or rich Cakes.

VI. ON the Eve of the Paſſover, which is the fourteenth of the Month Niſan, the Firſt-born in every Family uſually faſts, in Commemoration of God Almighty's ſmiting upon the Night following all the Firſt-born of Egypt.

VII. THEY go to Prayers in the Evening; and at their return Home ſit down to a Table which is duly prepar'd for their Entertainment in the Day Time, and ſet off with all the Elegance and Grandeur that the Circumſtances of each Perſon will well admit of. Inſtead of the Ceremony which was formerly obſerved, in Conformity to what was written in the twelfth Chapter of Exodus, viz. to eat the Lamb with unleavened Bread and bitter Herbs, &c. they have ſome ſmall Pieces of Lamb or Kid, dreſt with unleavened Bread, and bitter Herbs, ſuch as Celery, Succory, and Lettice, brought to Table in a Diſh, or little Basket, with proper Sauce in a ſeparate little Diſh; all which is provided in Commemoration of the Lime and Bricks which they were obliged to make in Egypt. Then each of them holding a Glaſs of Wine in his Hand, ſays the [a] Hagada, in which is contained all the long Series of Troubles which their Forefathers underwent in the Land of Egypt, and the Miracles which God wrought for their happy Deliverance. After this, they return God Thanks for all thoſe undeſerved Mercies, and ſay the hundred and thirteenth Pſalm, and thoſe that follow, which they call [b] Hallel, and then refreſh themſelves. After Supper is over, they continue ſaying and ſinging the Remainder of thoſe Pſalms, and other Hymns, peculiarly adapted to the Solemnity of the Day, and ſo retire to Bed. The Night following the very ſame Ceremonies are repeated.

VIII. THEIR Morning Prayers on this Occaſion are the ſame which they make uſe of upon other Feſtivals, except only the Addition of thoſe Prayers which are proper for the Day, with the Pſalms abovementioned, from the hundred and thirteenth to the hundred and nineteenth. Then they take out the Pentateuch, and five Perſons appointed for that Purpoſe ſucceſſively read the twelfth Chapter of Exodus, [c] and the Ordinance of the Sacrifices of the Paſſover. After this, they repeat the Prayer which they call Muſſaf; then they read ſome Paſſages out of the Prophets, which bear ſome Relation to what has been read in the Pentateuch; that is, as we have before obſerved, the Leſſon called Aftara, in the ſame Manner as on the Sabbath. After they have din'd, they commemorate the Feſtival, and pray for the Prince under whoſe Government they live, after the ſame Manner as they do upon the Sabbath.

[a] The Narration.
[b] Theſe are Pſalms which begin with Alleluia.
[c] Numb. xxviii.

IX. THEY obſerve the ſame Ceremonies upon the two laſt Days, excepting, that they do not perform thoſe at the Table on the two laſt Evenings which they did the two firſt.

X. THE Feſtival concludes with the Ceremony which they call Habdala, as it is obſerv'd on the Sabbath, with reſpect to the Words, but they omit the Spice; when this is over, they are allow'd to eat leavened Bread.

XI. THEY compute forty nine Days from the ſecond Night of the Paſſover to the Feaſt of Weeks, at which Time they formerly offer'd an Handful of Barley-Ears, call'd Homer; from thence they take the Phraſe, To count the Homer: [a] And ye ſhall count from the Morrow, &c. Every Night, after the Benediction of the Commandment is over, they ſay, now we reckon ſo many Days from the Homer.

XII. FROM the Day after the Paſſover to the thirty third Day following, they ſpend their Time in a kind of Mourning; they neither marry, nor dreſs themſelves in any new Clothes, neither do they cut their Hair, or ſhew any Demonſtrations of public Joy; becauſe at that Time, that is, from the Day after the Paſſover until the thirty third Day after, it happened, that there was a great Mortality amongſt the Pupils of Rabbi Hachiba, who was one of their moſt celebrated Doctors. And foraſmuch as, after the Death of ſome thouſands, the Sickneſs ceaſed on the thirty third Day of the Homer, that Day was called [b] Lag, which ſignifies thirty three, if we take the Letters for ſo many Figures. This Day is kept with general Rejoicings, and as a kind of Feſtival, and puts an End to the leaſt Appearance of Sorrow or Concern.

CHAP. IV.

Concerning the Feſtival of Weeks, or Penteceſt.

I. ON the fiftieth Day of the Homer, which is the ſixth of Sivan, is celebrated the Feſtival Shavuoth, or of Weeks, which is ſo named, becauſe it is kept at the End of the ſeven Weeks, which they compute, as I have already obſerv'd, from the Paſſover. This Feſtival in Scripture is likewiſe called, the Day of the Firſt-Fruits; [c] becauſe the Firſt-Fruits were offered in the Temple upon that Day. It is alſo called the Feaſt of Harveſt; for then they began to cut their Corn. It has likewiſe different Denominations in different Places of the Scripture, and at preſent is obſerv'd for two Days ogether.

II. THESE two Days are obſerv'd almoſt as ſtrictly as the Paſſover Holidays; for no Work is allow'd to be done upon them, neither can they tranſact any Buſineſs, or in ſhort, do any thing more than on the Sabbath, excepting only, that they are allow'd to kindle their Fire, dreſs their Victuals, and carry whatever they want from Place to Place.

[a] Levit. xxiii. Ver. 10. and 15.
[b] L and G, in Hebrew, make 33.
[c] Deut. xvi. Exod. xxiii. Lev. xxiii. Numb. xxviii.

III. UPON

III. UPON that very Day their Tradition aſſures them, that the Law was given on Mount Sinai: For which Reaſon [a] they adorn their Synagogues, the Places where they read, and even their own Houſes, with Roſes and other gay and odoriferous Flowers, artfully wreath'd in the Form of Crowns and Feſtoons; and of theſe Decorations they are very profuſe.

IV. THEIR Prayers are adapted to the Feaſt, and they read the Account of the Sacrifice made on that Day out of the Pentateuch; as alſo the Aftara out of the Prophets, and the Benediction for their Prince; and in the Afternoon there is a Sermon preach'd in Commendation of the Law.

V. WHEN the ſecond Day of the Feaſt is over, the Ceremony of the Habdala is performed in the Evening, as we have before obſerved at the Cloſe of the Paſſover; to denote that the Feaſt is concluded.

CHAP. V.

Concerning their New-Year's-Day, and the Month Elul.

I. THE Talmudiſts do not agree in fixing the Time when the World began. Some inſiſt, that it was in the Spring, that is, in the Month Niſan, which is our March; others, that it was in Autumn, that is to ſay, in the Month Tiſri, which anſwers to our September. This laſt Notion has ſo far prevail'd, that they begin their Year from that Time. And notwithſtanding it is written in the Scripture of the Month Niſan, [b] This Month ſhall be unto you the Beginning of Months: And according to this way of Computation, they counted thence, the firſt, ſecond, third Month, and ſo to Adar, which was the twelfth and laſt Month; yet afterwards they alter'd it, and began their Year with the Month Tiſri, or September.

II. FROM thence came the Feaſt Roſch Haſana, or New-Year's-Day, which is kept on the two firſt Days of Tiſri; for, in Leviticus [c] it is written, in the ſeventh Month, in the ſeventh Day of the Month, ſhall ye have a Sabbath, &c. During this Feſtival, as on the two others beforementioned, all manual Operations and Tranſactions in Trade are entirely laid aſide.

III. THEY hold it from Tradition, that on this Day particularly, God Almighty judges the Actions of the Year paſt, and orders all Things that ſhall happen for the Year to come: This Day being, as it were, the very Point of Time of the World's Birth, they imagine that God thereon carefully reviſes all the Occurrences of the preceding Year. From the firſt Day of the Month Elul therefore, which is juſt before this, they begin their Penance; and in ſome Places waſh themſelves before 'tis Day, ſay their Prayers, acknowledge their manifold Sins and Iniquities, and repeat ſome Penitential Pſalms. There are many of them who begin their Faſting and Penance upon this Day, and give Alms without ceaſing, until the Day of Abſolution, which I ſhall particularly treat of in the next Chapter. This they continue forty Days, and ſound the Horn on the Beginning of the Month Elul, for a Reaſon which ſhall be given in its proper Place.

[a] Exod. xix.
[b] Exod. xii.
[c] Chap. xxiii. Ver. 24.

IV. THESE

IV. THESE Religious Ceremonies are for the Generality obſerved on the Week at leaſt before the Feaſt, and on the Eve thereof, when ſeveral employ their Time in waſhing, and procuring, by Way of Diſcipline, thirty nine Stripes to be given them; as [a] it is written, [b] Forty Stripes he may give him, and not exceed, &c. and this is called [c] Maleuth.

V. ON the firſt Night of the Year, as they return from the Synagogue, their Salutation is, May'ſt thou be written in a good Year; and the Reply is, And thou alſo. 'Tis cuſtomary on this Day to bring Honey and leavened Bread to Table, and all ſuch other Things as may preſage a plentiful and pleaſant Year.

VI. THERE are ſeveral of them who on the Morning of theſe two Feaſts go dreſs'd in White to the Synagogue, as an Indication of their Repentance and Purity. Some of the Germans, at that Time, wear ſuch Clothes as they intend for their Burial, as a Mark of their Mortification. They have more Prayers on this Feſtival than on any other, on Account of their Wiſhes for a happy New Year, and the free Remiſſion and Pardon of their Sins. They take the Pentateuch out, and five different Perſons read the Account of the Sacrifice which was uſually offer'd on this Day: Afterwards they ſay the Aftara out of the Prophets, and then the Benediction for the Prince in whoſe Dominions they live.

VII. AFTER this, they ſound the Horn thirty Times, ſometimes ſlow, ſometimes quick, in Conformity to what it is written in [d] Leviticus and in Numbers, It is a Day of blowing of Horns unto you, &c. This is done, they ſay, to remind them of God's Judgments, and affrighten Sinners, and bring them to Repentance. To this they add the Prayer which they call Muſſaf, and ſeveral other Circumſtances appropriated to the Day: And then they ſound the Horn as they did before. After their Return Home, they eat, and after that ſpend the reſt of the Day, in hearing Sermons, and in other Acts of Devotion. Theſe two Days are in all reſpects alike, and in the Evening which cloſes the Feaſt they perform the Habdala, as I have before obſerv'd, in ſpeaking of their other Feſtivals.

CHAP. VI.

Concerning the Chipur, or Day of Forgiveneſs.

I. AFTER theſe two Holy Days are over, they ſtill continue to riſe before 'tis Day, to ſay their Prayers, and to do Penance until the tenth of the Month Tiſri, which is the Faſt of Expiation, and called [e] Jom Hachipur, inſtituted in the twenty third Chapter of Leviticus. On the tenth of this ſeventh Month, there ſhall be a Day of Attonement, &c. and during that Day all Manner of Work is laid aſide, as on the Sabbath; and they obſerve this Faſt with that Strictneſs, that they neither eat nor drink one Thing or another.

II. THEY formerly practis'd a particular Ceremony on the Eve of this Feſtival, which conſiſted in ſtriking a living Cock thrice againſt their Heads, at each Time ſay-

[a] Deut. xxv.

[b] The Scripture preſcribes forty Stripes, but the Tradition in the Talmud only thirty nine. St. Paul informs us in his ſecond to the Corinthians, Chap. xi. Ver. 24. that this Tradition was obſerved in his Time.

[c] Stripes.

[d] Lev. Chap. xxiii. Ver. 24 Numb. xxix. Ver. 1.

[e] Day of Expiation.

ing

ing, let this be ſacrificed in my Stead. This Cuſtom was called [a] Capara, but it is now rejected and laid aſide in Italy and the Levant, becauſe they have acknowledg'd it to be an idle and groundleſs Piece of Superſtition.

III. They indulge themſelves in eating on this Eve, becauſe the next Day is a Faſt. Abundance of them waſh, and have thirty nine Stripes given them, called Malcuth. Such as are poſſeſſed at that Time of other People's Effects, if they have any Conſcience, make them Reſtitution. They ask Pardon of ſuch as they have injur'd, and forgive thoſe that have injur'd them. They give Alms, and ſhew for the Generality, all the Demonſtrations of a ſincere Repentance.

IV. Two or three Hours before the Sun ſets they go to Prayers, and then to Supper, but all is over before Sun-ſet. Many of them at this Time dreſs themſelves in New Robes, or put on thoſe Funeral Clothes which I have before mention'd; and in theſe penitential Habits go without their Shoes to the Synagogue, which is on this Night finely illuminated with Lamps and Candles. There each Nation, after their own Manner, repeat ſeveral Prayers and Confeſſions, as a Demonſtration of the Sincerity of their Repentance, which laſt three Hours at leaſt; after which they go home to Bed. Some indeed will ſtay all Night long in the Synagogue, ſaying their Prayers and repeating Pſalms; and in caſe they happen to be ſleepy, they indulge themſelves but a very little Time.

V. The next Morning, ſuch as went Home, repair again by Day-break to the Synagogue, dreſſed as the Day before, and there ſtay till Night, ſaying their Prayers without Intermiſſion, repeating Pſalms and Confeſſions, and beſeeching God to pardon all their Tranſgreſſions. This Prayer is divided into four Parts. That for the Morning they call Schahhrith: And that which ſucceeds [b] Muſſaf: The Afternoon Prayer they call Mincha, and the Evening [c] Nehila. At the firſt and third, they take out the Pentateuch and read in it, at ſix of the Clock in the Forenoon and at three in the Afternoon. To this they add the Aſtara, or Leſſons out of the Prophets.

VI. After the Muſſaf, they read the Account of the Sacrifice, and relate the celebrated Ceremony of the High-Prieſt, who was never ſuffered but on that Day only to enter into the Holy of Holies, to burn Frankincenſe and caſt the Lots upon the two Goats, one of which was for the Lord, and the other for [d] Hazazel, as it is written in the ſixteenth Chapter of Leviticus.

VII. When it is ſo dark as that the Stars appear, they ſound the ſame Horn which was ſounded on the firſt Day of the Year, to denote that the Faſt is ended. Then, as they are going out of the Synagogue, wiſh one another a long Life, after a very friendly and courteous Manner. They bleſs the New-Moon, as in the third Chapter I have before obſerv'd, and after their Return Home, and the Repetition of the Habdala, they break their Faſt ſitting down to Supper.

CHAP. VII.

Concerning the Feaſt of Tents or Tabernacles.

I. ON the fifteenth Day of the ſame Month Tiſri, is the Feaſt of Tents, Tabernacles or Booths; which is called Succoth, in Commemoration of their Incampment in the Wilderneſs when they departed out of Egypt. Thus it is written in the twenty

[a] Expiation.
[b] This is like our Lauds which have been added to our Mattins.
[c] The Cloſe; becauſe that Prayer cloſes that of the Evening, like our Compline, which is ſung after Veſpers.
[d] This is the Name of a Hill whither the Goat uſed to run, and the Hill took its Name from the Goat, for Azazel is a Compound Word, ſignifying a running Goat.

third Chapter of Leviticus, Verſe the forty ſecond: Ye ſhall dwell in Booths ſeven Days, &c. Every one therefore makes a Booth in ſome open Place near his Houſe, which he covers with Leaves, and adorns it all round in the beſt Manner that he poſſibly can. The Rabbi's have been very punctual as to the Faſhion and Nature of theſe Booths, as well as their Dimenſions. They eat and drink in them, and ſome lie all Night in them; or at leaſt ſpend ſo much Time of the Night and Day in them, as they uſed to paſs at Home, during all the eight Days that the Feſtival laſts.

II. It continues nine Days in Reality, whereof the Law inſtituted and commanded ſeven, and an antient Cuſtom has added one, as in the Paſſover which I have before mentioned in the third Chapter of this third Part. Another Day is likewiſe ordain'd over and above for the ſolemn Aſſembly: [a] On the eighth Day ye ſhall have a ſolemn Aſſembly, &c. The two firſt, and the two laſt Days of this Feſtival, like thoſe of the Paſſover, which I have before mentioned, are very ſolemn; but the other five are not ſo ſtrictly obſerved.

III. There is nothing particular in the Prayers on this Occaſion, except the Additions proper for the Feaſt. They repeat the Hallel, that is, from the hundred and thirteenth, to the hundred and nineteenth Pſalm; and take out the Pentateuch and read in it; after this, they ſay the Aftara, and the Benediction for their Prince: Then follows the Muſſaf, and the Leſſon relating to the Sacrifices which were made at this Time, as it is written in the thirty ninth Chapter of Numbers, Verſe the thirteenth; viz. on the firſt Day thirteen Bulls, on the ſecond twelve, on the third eleven, and ſo on daily decreaſing, which in all makes ſeventy for the ſeven Days; and on the eighth Day, only one.

IV. Upon this Day, they always contrive to ſecure one Branch of Palm-Tree, three of Myrtle, two of Willow, and one [b] of the Citron, perfect and compleat. And during the Repetition of the Pſalms called Hallel in the Synagogue, they hold all thoſe Branches bundled up together in their Right Hand, that of the Citron only excepted, which they hold in their Left; and after they have brought all theſe Branches near one another, they ſhake them towards the four Quarters of the World; as it is written in the twenty third Chapter of Leviticus, And ye ſhall take you on the firſt Days the Boughs of goodly Trees, Branches of Palm-Trees, &c. And as they are ſinging ſome particular Hymns, they move in ſolemn Order once a Day round the little Altar or Desk which is erected in the Synagogue, graſping in their Hands thoſe Boughs and Citron-Branches with their Fruit upon them; this Ceremony being in former Times perform'd in the Temple round the Altar.

V. On the ſeventh Day of the Feaſt, called [c] Oſaana Rabba, theſe Boughs are thrown away, and inſtead of them they take Willow Branches, and move in ſolemn Order ſeven Times round, ſinging the twenty ninth Pſalm, Give unto the Lord, O ye Children of the Mighty, or Princes, give unto the Lord Glory and Strength, &c. This Day is celebrated with much more Solemnity than any of the others.

VI. The ninth [d] and laſt Day is called Simcha tora, or a general Joy on Account of the Law; becauſe on this Day they have read the whole Pentateuch through, according to the Diviſion which was made for every Week, as in the ſecond Chapter of the firſt Part has been already mentioned.

[a] Numb. xxix. Ver. 35.
[b] The Branch muſt have its Fruit whole and perfect.
[c] To help wonderfully.
[d] This ninth Day was inſtituted by the Rabbi's,

VII. And

VII. AND as the Year then concludes, they ſelect two proper Perſons out of each Synagogue, who are called the Bridegrooms of the Law: The one, whom they call [a] Chathan Tora, reads the Concluſion, and the other, named [b] Chathan Bereſcith, begins immediately again; and this they perform with all the outward Demonſtrations of Alacrity and Joy. All their Synagogues obſerve the ſame Ceremony, and the Remainder of the Day is ſpent in innocent Amuſements.

CHAP. VIII.

Concerning their Faſts both obligatory and voluntary.

I. ON the ſeventeenth Day of the Month [c] Tamuz, which is our July, the Jews obſerve a ſolemn Faſt, in Commemoration of ſome particular Afflictions with which formerly their Forefathers were viſited upon that Day at Jeruſalem, and becauſe Moſes upon the ſame Day broke the firſt Tables of the Law in his Anger, on Account of the golden Calf.

II. ALL their Faſts which are uſual and ordained begin in the Evening: And they neither eat nor drink till the Stars begin to appear the next Night.

III. AT their Morning Devotions on Faſt Days, they add to their Prayers ſome particular Confeſſions, and a Recital of the mournful Calamities which happened on thoſe Days. Afterwards the Pentateuch is brought out, and theſe Words of the thirty third Chapter of Exodus, ver. 11. 'And Moſes beſought the Lord, &c. are read to the Congregation: In the Afternoon, at the Prayer called Mincha, they read again in the ſame manner: And inſtead of the Aftara, that other Paſſage in the fifty fifth Chapter, ver. 6. of Iſaiah, Seek ye the Lord while he may be found, &c.

IV. THERE are ſome of the Jews, who from the ſeventeenth of the Month Tamuz to the ninth of Au, (which makes three Weeks) neither eat Fleſh, nor drink any Wine: But this is a voluntary Abſtinence; and they comply with it for no other Reaſon but that all thoſe Days were formerly fatal to Iſrael.

V. THE ninth Day of the Month Au, is a Faſt called [d] Tiſha beau. This Faſt is obſerved more ſtrictly than the others: For on this Day Nebuchadnezzar burnt the Temple, and on the ſame Day, the Emperor Titus burnt it a ſecond Time. It commences on the Eve, about an Hour before Sun-ſet; from which Time, till the Stars begin to appear the next Night, they neither eat nor drink. They go barefooted, or at leaſt without Leather Shoes, and without waſhing themſelves all that Time.

VI. WHEN their Evening Service is over in the Synagogue, they ſit diſconſolate on the Ground, whilſt the Lamentations of Jeremiah are read. The next Day the ſame Lamentations are read over again, with ſeveral others which are added to them; and they continue diſconſolate all the Day long; neither are they allowed to read in the Law; but only in Job, Jeremiah, and ſuch other ſorrowful Books.

[a] Spouſe of the Law.
[b] Spouſe of Bereſcith, i. e. of the Beginning of the Law, becauſe the Law begins with the Word Bereſcith.
[c] They make Tamuz generally anſwer to our June. Which is to be obſerved in the following Months.
[d] The ninth of Auguſt, or rather of July, reckoning Tamuz for June.

VII. THE

VII. THE Sabbath, which is immediately ſubſequent to this Faſt, is called Necham, or Conſolation. For at the reading theſe Words of [a] Iſaiah, inſtead of Aſtara, Be ye comforted, be ye comforted, O my People, &c. they comfort themſelves with the agreeable Expectation, that both Jeruſalem and the Temple ſhall be again reſtored.

VIII. ON the third Day of the Month Tiſri, which is the firſt Day after the Feaſt of the New Year, they faſt, as uſual, from one Evening to the next; becauſe Gedaliah the Son of Ahikam, [b] who was an upright Man, and the only ſurviving Support of the Remnant of Iſrael, was that Day kill'd. As this Day is ſet a part for Acts of Repentance, they take this Opportunity to remember that righteous Man; for which Reaſon this Faſt is called [c] Zom Gadalia.

IX. AFTER this comes on the Faſt called Chipur, or of [d] Attonement, which is celebrated, as I have already obſerved, on the tenth of Tiſri, and of which I have treated at large in a preceding Chapter.

X. THEY alſo obſerve a Faſt on the tenth of Teved, which is our December, becauſe Nebuchadnezzar laid Siege to, and afterwards took Jeruſalem on this Day.

XI. THE thirteenth of the Month Adar, which anſwers to our March, is likewiſe obſerved as a Faſt-Day, and called Purim [e]. This they keep in Commemoration of Eſther, who faſted, as we read in her Hiſtory, on Account of her Misfortunes.

XII. THESE are the Faſts which are ordained and obligatory. If there be any others, they are peculiar to each Nation; as for Example, the Germans, who, after the Feaſts of the Paſſover, and of the Tabernacles, obſerve three ſeveral Days as Faſts, viz. the two Mondays following, and the Thurſday that intervenes, for Fear they ſhould have offended God in the preceding Feaſts of eight Days Continuance. They faſt on the laſt Day of the Year, for the ſame Reaſon; and ſome of them on the Eve of the firſt Day of every Month.

XIII. IF, for Mortification's ſake, or out of private Devotion, any of them are inclin'd to prolong this Faſt (except it be on Occaſion of ſome particular Dream, which Circumſtance I have already mentioned) their Cuſtom is, before Sun-ſet to ſay, I will faſt To-morrow. After this they neither eat nor drink till the ſame Hour the next Evening; to this ſolemn Promiſe they add a Prayer to God, that he would be pleas'd to accept of their Faſting inſtead of a Sacrifice.

CHAP. IX.

Concerning the Feaſt of [f] Hanuca or Lights.

I. THEIR antient Sages appointed a Feaſt of eight Days, which begins on the twenty fifth of Chiſleu, with us December, in Commemoration of the Victory which the Maccabees obtained over the Grecians. On the firſt Day they light up one Lamp, two on the ſecond, and ſo on till the laſt Day, at which Time they light up eight Lamps. The Occaſion of this Ceremony is this: The Enemies having entered the City,

[a] Chap. xl.
[b] Jeremiah xli.
[c] Faſt of Gadalia.
[d] Part III. chap. vi.
[e] Lots or Chances.
[f] This is what we call Dedication.

and

and the Temple and polluted it, Jonathan and his Sons drove them out and defeated them. And ſince, at his Return, there was not Oil left ſufficient to light the Lamps of the great Candleſtick, he found juſt enough for one Night only in a ſmall Veſſel; but by a Miracle it laſted eight; which obliged him, in Commemoration thereof, to light as many Lamps as I have before-mentioned. At this Feaſt likewiſe they commemorate Judith's heroic Attempt upon Holofernes, though not executed at that Time of the Year, as ſome Criticks have obſerved.

II. DURING theſe eight Days they are allowed to tranſact any Affairs, or perform any manual Operation; for the only Circumſtance in this Feaſt which is extraordinary, conſiſts in the lighting of the Lamps, and the Addition of an Eulogy to their Prayers in Remembrance of this glorious Victory, and every Morning the hundred and thirteenth and following Pſalms, called Hallel; as alſo the thirtieth, I will extol thee, O Lord, &c. There is alſo ſome trivial Difference in their Eating.

III. THIS Feaſt is called Hanuca, a Term which ſignifies Exerciſe or Renewal; becauſe the Service of the Temple was at that Time renewed, which had been before polluted and profaned.

CHAP. X.

Concerning the [a] Purim.

I. ON the fourteenth of the Month Adar, which is our March, [b] is the Feaſt of Purim obſerved, in Commemoration of Eſther, who upon that Day preſerved the People of Iſrael from a total Extirpation by the Conſpiracy of Haman, who was hanged with all his Children. This Feaſt was called Purim, becauſe it was written in the ninth Chapter of Eſther, Therefore they called thoſe Days Purim, &c.

II. THIS Feſtival holds two Days, but the firſt only is ſtrictly and ſolemnly obſerv'd. They faſt on the Eve, as I have before mentioned: But during theſe two Days they may traffick, or do any manner of Work; yet on the firſt Day, though under no Obligation, they voluntarily abſtain from both.

III. ON the firſt Night they go to the Synagogue, where, after their ordinary Prayers, they commemorate their happy Deliverance from that fatal Conſpiracy, and read the whole Book of Eſther, which is written on Vellum, and rolled up like the Pentateuch. They alſo call it Meghilla, or Volume. During the reading of it, ſome of them clap their Hands at the Name of Haman, as a Teſtimony of their utter Abhorrence and Deteſtation. They obſerve the ſame Ceremonies in their Morning Service, and read on this Day out of the Pentateuch the ſeventeenth Chapter of Exodus, ver. 8. Then came Amalek, &c.

IV. ON this Feaſt they beſtow their publick Alms upon the Poor, and all Relations and Friends ſend each other ſome Preſents of ſuch Things as are good to eat. Scholars make Preſents to their Tutors; Maſters to their Servants; and Perſons of Diſtinction to their Inferiors. In ſhort, the whole Day is ſpent in Chearfulneſs and Gaiety, as it is, written in the ninth Chapter of Eſther, That they ſhould make them Days of Feaſting and Joy, and of ſending Portions one to another, and Gifts to the Poor, &c.

[a] Lots or Chances.
[b] Or February.

V. On the Evening of the ſecond Day every one provides as magnificent an Entertainment as his Circumſtances will admit of, and they eat and drink more plentifully than uſual. After Supper they viſit one another, and after a friendly Reception, ſpend the Remainder of their Time in all manner of Diverſions.

VI. There is no new Leſſon on the ſecond Day, nor is the Feaſt ſo ſolemn; yet they make it a Day of Diverſion.

VII. When the Year conſiſts of thirteen [a] Months, and there are two [b] Adars, as I have already obſerved, they call the fourteenth Day of the firſt Adar, the little Purim. But none of the Ceremonies of the Feaſt are obſerved; for that Day is only nominal.

[a] Part III. chap. ii.
[b] The laſt Month of the Year is reckoned twice in the intercalary Year.

The END of the THIRD PART.

AN

AN HISTORICAL

DISSERTATION

ON THE

CEREMONIES and CUSTOMS

OF THE

PRESENT JEWS.

Tranſlated from the Italian of LEO OF MODENA, a Rabbi of Venice.

By Monſieur DE SIMONVILLE.

AN HISTORICAL

DISSERTATION

ON THE

CUSTOMS and CEREMONIES

OF THE

PRESENT JEWS.

PART IV.

CHAP. I.

Concerning illegal Converſation with Women.

HE greateſt Sin which a Man can poſſibly commit with a Woman is, in the Opinion of the Jews, to lie with another Man's Wife, or one that was only betrothed. The next to this flagrant Crime is, to have unlawful Converſation with a Relation in the Degrees prohibited by the eighteenth of Leviticus. The Children therefore that are thus begotten are called Manzerim, or Baſtards, [a] and are by no means to be received into any Family: A Baſtard ſhall not enter into the Congregation of the Lord. The third is, to have criminal Converſation with a ſtrange Woman, though ſhe be not a Jeweſs, (this is founded upon Eſdras's Prohibition) or with a Jewiſh Proſtitute. So that neither Reaſon nor the Law allow them to tolerate a common Harlot, as is ſaid in the ſeventeenth Verſe of the ſame Chapter, There ſhall be no Whore of the Daughters of Iſrael, &c.

[a] Deut. xxiii.

II. It is likewiſe a Sin to have unlawful Converſation with any Woman whatſoever: They are to know no Woman but their Wives; for to lie with a Virgin and not marry her, is a Commiſſion of the Sin of Fornication.

III. They are not allowed to lie with a Woman during her Terms, or Monthly Flowers: Levit. xviii. Thou ſhalt not approach unto a Woman to uncover her Nakedneſs, as long as ſhe is put apart for her Uncleanneſs. This Prohibition extends, as I ſhall ſhew hereafter, to a Man's Wife as well as any other Stranger whomſoever.

CHAP. II.

Concerning Marriage.

I. EVERY Jew is under an indiſpenſable Obligation to marry, and the Time appointed for it by their Rabbi's is at eighteen Years of Age: He who lives ſingle till he is twenty, is reckoned to live in the actual Commiſſion of a known Sin: This is grounded on the Duty of Procreation, in Obedience to that Command which God gave to our firſt Parents: [a] Be fruitful, and multiply, and repleniſh the Earth. But when they have Iſſue Male and Female, the Precept is accounted as accompliſh'd. On the other Hand, as a ſingle Man is often ſubject to commit Fornication, they think it a Duty incumbent on him to marry, and remove the Temptation.

II. There are ſeveral Paſſages in the old Teſtament which might be produced to juſtify a Plurality of Wives; and the Eaſtern Jews frequently practiſe it; but the Germans do not allow it at all, nor do the Italians approve of it; and then only comply with it, when after many Years Cohabitation with a firſt Wife they have had no Iſſue by her.

III. They are allowed to marry their Nieces, that is, their Brother's or Siſter's Daughters, and their firſt Couſins for the ſame Reaſon; but a Nephew muſt not intermarry with his Aunt. As for the other Degrees of Conſanguinity which are forbidden, they may be ſeen in the eighteenth Chapter of Leviticus.

IV. Some are very cautious how they marry a Woman who has buried two or more Husbands, branding her with the ignominious Title of a Husband-Killer; but this is not prohibited, and is leſs to be underſtood of a Man, who may have had two or more Wives.

V. A Widow, or a Woman divorced from her Husband, cannot marry again till ninety Days after the Death of the one, and the Separation of the other, that it may thereby be certainly known whether the firſt Husband is Father of the Child.

VI. If a Man dies, and leaves behind him an Infant that ſucks, the Widow cannot marry again till the Child be two Years old; the Rabbi's having limited that Time, for the better Maintenance and Education of the Orphan.

[a] Gen. i.

CHAP. III.

Concerning Betrothings and Weddings.

I. WHEN the Jews have ſettled the Terms of Accommodation, the Marriage Articles are ſigned by the Husband, and the Relations of the Wife; after which the former pays a formal Viſit to the latter, and takes her by the Hand. In ſome Countries the Bridegroom preſents the Bride with a Ring at the ſame Time, and then marries her. But this is not the uſual Practice in Italy nor Germany. They are often ſolemnly engaged for ſix or twelve Months, and ſometimes two Years, according to the Convenience of the Parties, or the Agreement made between them: During which Time the young Lover pays frequent Viſits to his Miſtreſs, and ſpends his Time in her Company with the utmoſt Familiarity, but with a ſtrict regard to Decency and good Manners.

II. WHEN the Marriage-Day is appointed, (which is uſually at the Time the Moon changes, and in Caſe the Bride be a Maid, or a Wedneſday or Friday, but if a Widow, on a Thurſday) the Bride, if ſhe be free from her Terms, goes the firſt Night into a Bath, and there waſhes herſelf, of which I ſhall take more particular Notice in the following Chapter. But if ſhe be not, all carnal Converſation with her is prohibited till ſhe can waſh; however, the Nuptial Solemnities are ſeldom delay'd upon that Occaſion.

III. SOME inſiſt that the married Couple ſhould faſt on the Wedding-Day, till the Bleſſing be over.

IV. FOR the Solemnization of this Marriage, the Lovers who are thus betrothed, meet at an Hour appointed for that Purpoſe, in a kind of State-Room, and there ſit under a Canopy, whilſt a ſelect Band of Muſick attends, and plays before them; or whilſt proper Children, as is the Cuſtom in ſome Places, move in ſolemn Order round about them, having Torches in their Hands, and ſinging at the ſame Time ſome proper Epithalamium. All thoſe who are of their Synagogue being aſſembled, a Taled is put upon the Heads of the Bridegroom and the Bride, which is a ſquare Veil, with thoſe Tufts beforementioned hanging down at the Corners. After this, the Rabbi's of the Place, or the Reader of the Synagogue, or ſome near Relation, takes a Glaſs, or any other Veſſel filled with Wine, and after having bleſſed God for the Creation of Man and Woman, and the Inſtitution of Matrimony, &c. gives Part of this Wine to the Bridegroom and the Bride. Then the Bridegroom putting a Ring upon the Finger of his Bride before two credible Witneſſes, who are commonly Rabbi's, ſays, Thou art my Wife according to the Ceremonies of Moſes and Iſrael. After which the Marriage Articles are read, wherein the Bridegroom acknowledges the Receipt of the Conſideration Money, the Obligation he is under to make his Wife a Jointure, and to maintain and live peaceably with her all the Days of his Life. For the due Performance of all and ſingular the Articles above-mention'd, he gives a Duplicate to his Wife's Relations. After this, more Wine is brought in a new Veſſel, and having ſung ſix more Benedictions, which make ſeven in all, the Bride and Bridegroom drink a ſecond Time, and the Reſidue of the Wine is thrown upon the Ground as a Declaration of their Joy. The Glaſs or Veſſel being empty, the Bridegroom takes it, and breaks it all to Pieces; this moral Ceremony is performed that their Mirth may give them an Idea of Death, who daſhes us to Pieces like a brittle Glaſs or Veſſel, and teaches us not to be proud or ſelf-conceited. In the mean Time all Perſons preſent cry out, Mazal tou, may it prove propitious, and then withdraw.

V. IN

V. In the Evening they make a grand Entertainment for their Friends and Relations: And in ſome Places all the Gueſts who are invited, preſent the Bride with a Piece of Plate; ſome before, and ſome after Supper is over; then follow the ſeven Benedictions before mentioned, and which are before repeated at the Solemnization of the Nuptials; and after this they all riſe from Table.

VI. In Caſe the Bride has waſhed herſelf, ſhe then is put to Bed to the Bridegroom; and if ſhe be a Virgin, as ſoon as the Ceremony is over, the Man gets out of Bed, and can have no more Converſation with her till after an appointed Time, (which I ſhall take Notice of when I ſpeak of married Women) and ſhe has waſhed herſelf a ſecond Time.

VII. On the Sabbath-Day Morning, after the Conſummation of their Marriage, the Bridegroom and the Bride go to the Synagogue together. The Bride is attended by all the Women that were preſent at the Wedding; and at the Leſſons of the Pentateuch, the Bridegroom is deſired to read: Whereupon he promiſes to give liberally to the Poor, and all who come with him follow his good Example. When Prayers are over, the Men wait on the Bridegroom home, and the Women on the Bride; after which they part with Abundance of Courteſy and Complaiſance. The Bridegroom in ſome Places lives the firſt Week with his Wife's Relations, where he amuſes himſelf with his Friends and Acquaintance.

VIII. This is the general Practice in all Weddings, tho' there are ſome little Variations obſerved, according to the various Countries in which they live.

IX. If the Wife dies and has no Iſſue, they are obliged to act according to the Cuſtoms of the Country they live in, which vary almoſt in every Nation.

CHAP. IV.

Concerning the Meaſures a Woman muſt take to obtain a Divorce, and the Puniſhments a Man is liable to who debauches a Virgin.

I. WHEN a Child who is under ten Years of Age, [a] whether her Father be alive or dead, becomes a Widow, and afterwards marries with the Conſent of her Mother or Brothers a Man whom ſhe does not approve of, ſhe may have a Divorce till ſhe attains the Age of twelve Years and one Day, at which Time ſhe is deem'd a Woman. If ſhe declares, that ſhe will not have ſuch a Man, it is ſufficient. And when ſhe has taken two Witneſſes to ſet down her Refuſal in Writing, ſhe may obtain a Divorce, and marry again with whom ſhe pleaſes.

II. A Man who abuſes a Maid by Violence, or any other way, the Judge obliges him to marry her, if the Girl and her Relations are willing to it; nor can he ever be divorced from her, according as it is written in the twenty ſecond Chapter of Deuteronomy: Or otherwiſe an Attonement for the Scandal or Injury muſt be made by depoſiting ſuch Sum of Money as ſhall be mutually agreed on between the Parties.

[a] The Jews oftentimes marry their Children very young, though the Marriage be not conſummated till they are of a proper Age; theſe are the Matches here meant.

CHAP. V.

Concerning Women in the Time of their Courſes, and their Lyings in.

I. AS ſoon as a Woman is ſenſible of her Impurity, ſhe is under an Obligation to acquaint her Husband with it, who can have no more Converſation with her till the Obſtacle be removed. He can give her nothing, nor take any Thing from her; he can neither eat out of the ſame Diſh, nor drink out of the ſame Glaſs or Cup with her.

II. AT the End of five Days at the moſt, when this Obſtacle is generally removed, (tho' if it ſhould laſt longer they muſt ſtill have Patience) the Wife puts on clean Linnen, lays freſh Sheets upon her Bed, and ſeven Days afterwards pares her Nails, and makes them very clean. She then waſhes and combs her Hair, and goes into a Bath which muſt be of running or Rain Water, and not brought by a Man; it muſt be three Cubits high at the leaſt, and one Cubit broad, or elſe it is deficient and ineffectual. Where they have no Bath, the Woman muſt go to ſome Spring, River or Well, or to the Sea, and there bathe her ſelf ſtark naked, and every Part of her Body muſt touch the Water; nay, if ſhe has only a Ring upon her Finger, that ſhould be ſo cloſe as to prevent the Water running thro' it, her bathing would be inſufficient, the Ring muſt be taken of, and ſhe be oblig'd to waſh her ſelf again. When a Woman therefore goes into the Bath, another attends her, and takes particular Care that the Water ſhall cover her all over. After this, ſhe may converſe with her Husband, till her Impurity returns.

III. WHILST a Woman lies in, ſhe muſt alſo be ſeparated from her Husband ſeven Weeks if it be a Boy, and three Months when 'tis a Girl. In ſome Places the Separation is not of ſo long Continuance. A Week before the Time is expir'd, the Woman puts on clean Linnen, and bathes after the Manner I have already mentioned; and when ſhe has obſerved the Formalities required, ſhe may then converſe with her Husband as freely as before.

CHAP. VI.

Concerning Jealouſy and Divorces.

I. IN Antient Times it was the Cuſtom for a Husband that was jealous to carry his Wife to a Prieſt, who gave her a particular Potion which burſted her in Caſe ſhe was guilty, but if innocent, had no Effect, according as it is written in the fifth Chapter of Numbers: At preſent a jealous Husband only entreats his Wife not to ſee the Man who occaſions his Uneaſineſs. But, if after ſuch a gentle Reproof, the Woman continues to diſoblige him, and there are very good Reaſons to ſuſpect her ill Conduct, or if ſhe be found in Company with her Lover, and they are both catch'd in the very Act of Adultery, then the Rabbi's oblige the Husband to divorce her, even againſt his own Inclination, and never to receive her into Favour any more. As to the Manner of his dovorcing her, I ſhall ſpeak more largely in another Place. The Woman however may afterwards marry any Perſon whomſoever, the Man only who was the Cauſe of her Divorce excepted.

II. A HUSBAND [a] may obtain a Divorce upon the leaſt Diſtaſt whatever, altho' her Conduct be never ſo innocent or blameleſs, Deuteronomy xxiv. When a Man hath taken a Wife and married her, and it comes to paſs that ſhe finds no Favour in his Eyes, &c. Yet they are not to ſue out a Divorce, unleſs they have ſome Reaſons to ſuſpect their Wives Behaviour, or can lay ſome criminal Action to their Charge. For the Rabbi's have preſcribed abundance of Formalities, which require a great deal of Time and Trouble in the Performance, to prevent Men from making an ill Uſe of this Privilege; ſo that frequently they alter their Minds and hearken to Terms of Reconciliation, before the Bills of Divorce can be procur'd, and afterwards live in perfect Love and Unity together.

III. THE Form of the Bill of Divorce which they give their Wives, is called [b] Ghett, and is written by a Notary or Proctor, in the Preſence of one or more of their learned Rabbi's. It muſt be written upon Vellum and be rul'd, and contain twelve Lines and no more: It muſt alſo be written in ſquare Characters, with a thouſand other trivial Punctilio's, both as to the Hand, the Manner of writing it, and the Names and Sirnames of the Man and the Woman. Moreover, neither the Notary, nor the Rabbi's, nor the Witneſſes, are allow'd to be any Ways a-kin either to the one or the other.

IV. THIS is the Purport of the Ghett, or Bill of Divorce. Such a Day, Month, Year, and Place, &c. I A. B. do voluntarily and freely divorce thee, and put thee away, and diſcharge thee C. D. who haſt formerly been my Wife; and I do hereby give thee full and free Permiſſion to marry whom thou pleaſeſt, &c.

V. AFTER the Bill or Ghett is thus written, the Rabbi examines the Husband very ſtrictly, and after a very artful Manner, with Intent to find out whether this Diſcharge is procur'd with his own Approbation.

VI. THERE are ten Perſons generally preſent at the ſigning this Letter or Bill, beſides the two ſubſcribing Witneſſes to the Deed, and two to the Date.

VII. AFTER this the Rabbi charges the Woman to open her Hands, and hold them cloſe together, that ſhe may take the Bill and not drop it: Then the Husband after being re-examin'd, gives her the Inſtrument, ſaying, This is thy Divorce, I put thee away from me, and I give thee free Liberty to marry whomſoever thou pleaſeſt. The Woman takes the Parchment and delivers it to the Rabbi, who reads it over again, and then the Woman is divorc'd. There are ſeveral other little Punctilio's which have been contriv'd, only to render theſe Divorces more difficult and troubleſom, as I have before obſerv'd, and which I ſhall purpoſely omit, for fear the Reader ſhould charge me with being too tedious and impertinent.

VIII. AFTER this is over, the Rabbi exhorts the Woman not to marry till after the Expiration of three [c] Months, leſt ſhe ſhould prove with Child. Neither the Husband nor the Wife thus divorced can live together again, or be alone; but both of them may marry whom they pleaſe.

[a] This Cuſtom of divorcing Wives has been long uſed in the Greek Church.
[b] There is a Treatiſe in the Talmud concerning Divorces, entitled Ghittim.
[c] Ninety Days.

CHAP.

CHAP. VII.

Concerning the Ibum, and Caliza.

I. IF a Husband dies without Iſſue by his Wife, or any other Woman, then his Brother, if he has one living, has a Power over the Widow, and may either marry her himſelf, or permit her to marry any Perſon elſe; as it is ſaid in the twenty fifth of Deuteronomy, If Brethren dwell together, and one of them die, and have no Child, the Wife of the Dead ſhall not marry without unto a Stranger; her Husband's Brother ſhall go in unto her, and take her to him to his Wife. If a Man dies and leaves ſeveral Wives behind him, his Brother can only diſpoſe of one, but is not allow'd to marry the others; and where there are ſeveral Brothers, the eldeſt has the Title and Preference; tho' any one of them may give the Widow leave to marry again.

II. THE intermarriage with ſuch a Widow they call Ibum; for the Meaning of that Term is, to marry a Siſter-in-law; and the Brother might marry her without any Formality at all, if it ſuited his Inclination: But the Rabbi's have directed that thoſe Matches ſhould be in the uſual Form; whereupon all the Goods and Chattels of the Deceaſed belong to him; he receives the very Portion the Woman brought to her Brother: In ſhort, ſhe is then reckon'd his own Wife.

III. IN antient Times, ſuch as married their Brother's Widow were more belov'd and reſpected than ſuch as gave them their Liberty to marry whom they pleaſed; but being now become more avaricious and ſenſual, they prefer Beauty and Riches to their Duty; ſo that very few marry their Brother's Widow, eſpecially among the Germans and Italians, who chuſe rather to indulge the Woman, and leave her to her own Choice.

IV. THIS ſort of Permiſſion to marry they call Caliza, or the looſing of the Shoe, as it is written in the twenty fifth of Deuteronomy, Then ſhall his Brother's Wife come unto him in the Preſence of the Elders, and looſe his Shoe from off his Foot, and ſpit in his Face. The Ceremony is thus performed: Three Rabbi's, and two Witneſſes of inferior Degree, go out on the preceeding Evening, and agree upon a proper Place: The Day following, after Morning Service, the Congregation waits on the Rabbi's and the other Witneſſes, who being aſſembled, ſit down, and oblige the Widow and the Brother-in-Law to appear before them, who then make a publick Declaration that the Deſign of their coming was to procure their Freedom and Diſcharge. The principal Rabbi examines the Man, argues with him, and uſes his beſt endeavours to prevail on him to take the Widow for his Wife; but after a Re-examination, and an obſtinate Refuſal to comply, the Man puts on a Shoe that is too big for him, and the Woman, attended by one of the Rabbi's, repeats the ſeventh Verſe of the Chapter before mentioned: My Husband's Brother refuſeth to raiſe up unto his Brother a Name in Iſrael, he will not perform the Duty of my Husband's Brother: Then the Brother-in-Law anſwers in the Words immediately following; I like not to take her. Upon this Declaration the Widow looſes the Shoe, and takes it off; then throws it on the Ground with a ſeeming Reſentment and Diſdain, and ſpits upon the Man, ſaying in Hebrew, with a little of the Rabbi's Aſſiſtance, So ſhall it be done unto that Man, that will not build up his Brother's Houſe, and his Name ſhall be called in Iſrael, the Houſe of him that hath his Shoe looſed. This Form of Words ſhe repeats thrice, and thrice this Anſwer is repeated by the Aſſiſtants, his Shoe is looſed. Immediately the Rabbi acquaints the Widow, that ſhe has free Liberty to marry whom ſhe pleaſes; and if ſhe requires a Certificate of the ſame, the Rabbi's readily grant it. Upon a due Examination of this whole Ceremony, every Circumſtance here obſerved plainly appears to be taken from the twenty fifth of Deuteronomy.

V. BUT

V. BUT, as in the Caſe before us the Woman can neither recover her Portion, nor marry again without ſuch a publick and legal Diſcharge, ſome Brother-in-Laws are very troubleſom and vexatious, and delay the Ceremony as long as poſſibly they can, in order to oblige the Widow to purchaſe their Compliance. It is cuſtomary, therefore, for a Father, when he marries his Daughter to a Perſon who has any Brothers, to make a previous Contract, that in Caſe of his Deceaſe, the Widow ſhall be ſet at Liberty without relinquiſhing any of her Pretenſions. Some will oblige the Husband, in caſe he happens to prove dangerouſly ill, to grant his Wife a Divorce, that her Brother-in-Laws, after his Deceaſe, may have no Authority over her.

CHAP. VIII.

Concerning Circumciſion.

I. ON the Birth of a Son, the Father is congratulated in the following Terms, I give you Joy, by all his Friends and Acquaintance. Some write the Words Adam and Eve upon ſmall Pieces of Paper, and lay them in each Corner of the Mother's Bed-Room. [a] Others write Lilit be gone, and the Names of three Guardian Angels, as a Charm to ſecure the Child from Hurt by any impious Incantations. They are no ways enjoin'd, or obliged to the Obſervance of this Ceremony; but 'tis the Effect only of Superſtition, and a tender Regard for the Infant's Welfare.

II. THE Father lies under an indiſpenſable Obligation to have his Son circumciſed on the eighth Day, in Obedience to that ſacred Command, [b] He that is eight Days old ſhall be circumciſed among you, every Man-child in your Generations. The ſame is repeated in the twelfth Chapter of Leviticus, And in the eighth Day, the Fleſh of of his Foreskin ſhall be circumciſed. This cannot be done till the Expiration of the eight Days; but in Caſe the Child be ſick or infirm, it may be deferred till he is perfectly recover'd.

III. THE Night before the Day appointed for the Circumciſion of the Child is called the Watch; becauſe the whole Family then ſits up to take care of the Infant. That Evening, as a Teſtimony of their Joy, is ſpent in all manner of innocent Amuſements; for the Relations and Friends of the Father wait on him, and the Women viſit the Mother on this happy Occaſion.

IV. THEY chuſe a Godfather to ſtand for the Child at the Time of its Circumciſion, and a Godmother to carry it to the Synagogue, and bring it back again. Some Relation of the Father's or the Mother's is uſually ſelected for the Performance of this friendly Office. As for the Molel, or Circumciſer, they make Choice of ſuch Perſon as they think moſt proper; for any one is allowed to do it that underſtands the Operation. An artful Circumciſer is look'd upon amongſt the Jews as an ingenious, valuable Man; and in caſe the Infant's Father is well skill'd in the Operation, he may perform that Office for his own Son.

V. ON the Morning that the Child is to be circumciſed, two Seats with Silk Cuſhions in them, are provided, either in the Synagogue, or their own Houſe, in caſe the Ceremony is to be performed in private: One whereof is laid for the Godfather, who holds [a] Lilit, according to the Jewiſh Tales, was Adam's firſt Wife, who being diſobedient, and an eternal Scold, left him, and flew up into the Air by the Means of a magical Incantation. She is taken for a nocturnal Fury, an Enemy to Women in Child-bed, and to new born-Babes; and is what the Latins call Striges Lamiæ.

[b] Gen. xvii.

the

THE CIRCUMCISION of the PORTUGUESE JEWS.

A. The Child's Father.
B. The Mother and Godmother in a Seperate Room, the Jewish women being excluded from this Ceremony.
NB. Those present are Christians.
C. The Godfather holding the Child on his Lap during the Operation.
D. An empty Chair for Elias the Prophet.
E. The Mohel or he that performs the Operation.
F. A Rabin, Relation, or friend holding the cup.

La CIRCONCISION des JUIFS PORTUGAIS.

A. Le Pere de l'Enfant.
B. La Mere dans une autre chambre, avec la Marraine car les femmes Juives n'assistent pas a cette Ceremonie.
NB. celles qu'on voit ici, sont des Chretiennes.
C. Le Parrain tenant l'Enfant sur ses genoux, pendant l'operation.
D. Un Siege vuide pour le Prophete Elie.
E. Le Mohel, ou celui qui fait la fonction de Circoncire
F. Le Rabin, un Parent, ou un Ami tenant la Coupe

B. Picart ce delin.

C. Du Bosc Fecit.

THE REDEMPTION of the FIRST BORN.

A. A Priest of the Race of Aaron carrying the child away.
B. The father offering money to redeem it.
C. The child's mother.
D. Her Midwife.
E. The Nurse. The rest are Relations, Friends, &c. invited to the Ceremony.

Le RACHAT du PREMIER NE.

A. Un Sacerdotte, ou descendant de la Famille d'Aron, emportant l'Enfant.
B. Le Pere offrant de l'argent pour le Racheter.
C. La Mere de l'Enfant.
D. La Sage Femme.
E. La Nourrice. Les autres sont des Parons, et Amis, invitez a cette Ceremonie.

the Child, and the other for the Prophet Elias, whom ſome of them imagine to be preſent, though inviſible, at all their Circumciſions, he being more than ordinary ſtrict in the Obſervation of the Law. Abundance of People flock to the Synagogue on theſe Occaſions, and the Perſon who is to perform the Operation comes with a Diſh in his Hand, in which all his Inſtruments and other Requiſites are regularly laid; ſuch as a Raſor, aſtringent Powders, Linnen, Lint, and Oil of Roſes: Some bring likewiſe a Porringer full of Sand, in which they throw the Foreskin as ſoon as it is cut off. They employ themſelves in ſinging Anthems ſuitable to the Occaſion till the Godmother comes, who brings the Infant in her Arms, attended by ſeveral Women; but none of them are allow'd to go any farther than the Door of the Synagogue. There the Godmother delivers the Babe to the Godfather, and immediately all the Congregation cries aloud, Baruch Aba, the Father is welcome.

VI. THE Godfather having placed himſelf in the Seat provided on purpoſe for him, lays the Infant on his Knees; and the Circumciſer unwraps the ſwaddling Clothes. Some make uſe of a Pair of Silver Tongs to take hold of that Part of the Foreskin which is to be cut off. Then the Operator taking his Raſor, ſays, Bleſſed be thy Name, O Lord, who haſt inſtituted for our Uſe the Circumciſion. Whereupon he cuts off the thick Skin of the Prepuce; and then with his Thumb-Nails tears off a thinner Skin which is left behind. During this Operation the Father bleſſes God, and thanks him for his Appointment of this ſacred Ordinance, and thoſe who ſtand round about him, wiſh him the Happineſs of bringing up his Child till he be of Age to marry. The Circumciſer proceeds, and ſucks the Blood that runs from the Wound two or three Times, and ſpits it out into a Cup full of Wine: Afterwards he takes ſome Dragon's Blood, Powder of Coral, &c. which he applies to the Wound in Order to heal it, and binds up the whole with a Bolſter dipped in Oil of Roſes.

VII. THE Operation being over, he takes a Cup of Wine, and after he has bleſſed it, he repeats another Benediction for the Infant, and at the ſame Time gives him ſuch Name as his Father beſt approves of; then he pronounces theſe Words out of the fifteenth of Ezekiel, I ſaid unto thee, when thou waſt in thy Blood, live, &c. In the mean Time he wets his Lips with the Wine, into which he had ſpit the Blood. After this they repeat the whole hundred and twenty eighth Pſalm, Bleſſed is every one that feareth the Lord, &c. As ſoon as the Service is over, the Godfather returns the Infant to the Godmother, that ſhe may carry him home again, and deliver him ſafe into his Mother's Arms. And all the Congregation at their Departure, ſalute the Father, and kindly wiſh, That he may be preſent at the Child's Wedding.

VIII. AFTERWARDS the Perſon who circumciſes the Child, as well as the Goſſips, Friends, and Relations, ſends Sweetmeats, or ſome other Preſents of the like Nature to the Mother. When the Parents happen to be poor, they ſend them Money, but more or leſs according as they are charitably diſpoſed.

IX. ON the ſame Morning the Father entertains the Circumciſer, the Goſſips, his Relations and Friends, in as handſome a Manner as his Circumſtance will admit. At the End of the Entertainment, they add Benedictions and Prayers for the Infant, and beg of God to bleſs him with Health and Proſperity, and give him Grace to live in his Faith and Fear.

X. THE Infant is uſually well in about four and twenty Hours. Some Jews, therefore will ſend Sweetmeats and other Preſents to the Parents and Friends of the Child on the third Day, that they may be merry together at his Recovery.

XI. THERE are no Ceremonies when the Child is a Girl, except only that ſhe is carried to the Synagogue as ſoon as her Mother's Month is up; and there the Reader, after a ſhort Benediction for the Child, gives her ſuch Name as her Father has deſign'd her. It is cuſtomary amongſt the Germans, for the Reader to go to their reſpective Houſes; and when he has taken the Girl out of the Cradle, he bleſſes her, and gives her the Name; requir'd. If a Male-Child happens to die before Circumciſion, and within the eight Days, ſome Jews will circumciſe him with a Reed before they bury him.

CHAP. IX.

Concerning the Redemption of the Firſt-born.

I. THE Firſt-born belongs to the Prieſt, in caſe it be a Boy, altho' as I have already obſerv'd, his Father has at that Time, or has had Children before by another Wife, [a] according to that Injunction, [b] Sanctify unto me all the Firſt-born. And afterwards, All the Firſt-born of Man amongſt thy Children ſhalt thou redeem, &c.

II. IN Compliance with the ſacred Injunction juſt mention'd, as ſoon as the Child is full thirty Days old, they ſend for one of the Sons of Aaron, whom the Father approves of beſt. Several Friends and Relations being aſſembled in the Houſe, the Father brings a conſiderable Sum of Gold and Silver in a Diſh or Baſon, and alſo the Child to deliver him into the Hands of the Prieſt, who turning to the Mother, ſays with a loud Voice, Madam, is this Boy yours? To which ſhe replies, Yes. Had you no Child before this, continues the Prieſt, either Male or Female? Or have you ever miſcarried? To this ſhe replies, No. Then adds the Prieſt, this Child, being your Firſt-born, is my Right and Property. Whereupon he turns to the Father, and ſays unto him; If you are inclin'd to have this Child again, you muſt redeem it. This Gold and Silver, replies the Father, was brought for that Purpoſe: You have then an Inclination to redeem it; ſays the Prieſt. Yes, ſays the Father, I have. Then the Prieſt turning towards the Aſſembly, ſays with an audible Voice, This Child being a Firſt-born is my Property, according as it written in the eighteenth Chapter of Numbers, Verſe the ſixteenth. And thoſe that are to be redeemed from a Month old, ſhalt thou redeem according to thine Eſtimation, for the Money of five Shekels, &c. inſtead of which I content my ſelf with this. Then taking two golden Ducats, or more, as he thinks fit, he returns the Child to his Parents. This is alſo a Day of great Joy and Rejoicing.

III. IN caſe the Father or Mother are Deſcendants either of Prieſts or Levites, then they are not oblig'd to redeem their Firſt-born.

CHAP. X.

Concerning the Manner of educating their Children, and their coming to Age.

I. WHEN a Child once begins to talk, they firſt teach him to read, and then to tranſlate the Bible into the Language of the Country wherein they reſide, without the leaſt regard to Grammar-Rules, which they call Dichduch. But as ſoon

[a] Part I. Chap. xii.
[b] Exod. xiii.

as

as the Child is about ten Years old, then he may ſtudy the Grammar, if his Inclination leads him to it. But the [a] Jews in general ſhew little or no Regard to that Branch of Learning, and moſt of them, eſpecially the Germans, talk, read and write without any Idea of Grammar-Rules.

II. AFTER this, they make their Youth read ſome of their Commentators upon the Bible, as [b] Rabbi Salomon, and an Abridgment of the Ceremonies and Religious Cuſtoms of the Rabbi's, ſuch as [c] Rabeneu Moſes and others. Theſe Books are very difficult to be comprehended aright, becauſe they have neither Points nor Vowels; and are written in a quite different Stile from that of the Bible, ſo that they can never be learnt [d] by eſtabliſh'd Rules.

III. SUCH Youth as are forward and ingenious, immediately after their Study of thoſe Books, read the Miſna and Talmud, which in their Opinion is the beſt Foundation of their future Accompliſhments. Some, as I have obſerved in the ſecond Chapter of the ſecond Part, apply themſelves to other Sciences.

IV. WHEN a Youth is thirteen Years and a Day old, he is look'd upon as a Man, and is under an Obligation to obſerve all the Commandments of the Law. For which Reaſon they are called Barmizva by ſome, and by others Minian, [e] which ſignifies Number. As he is then of Age, he can make Contracts, and tranſact any Affairs of Life without any Dependance on his Guardians, and may act both in regard to temporal and ſpiritual Affairs according to his own Inclination. As to Girls, they are reputed Women at twelve Years and a half old.

CHAP. XI.

Concerning the Reverence and Reſpect due to Relations, &c.

I. CHILDREN, among the Jews, think themſelves ſtrictly bound in Duty to honour their Parents. Honour thy Father and Mother, ſays the fifth Commandment; and this the Rabbi's have fully expounded, as well with reſpect to the Duties which Children are oblig'd to pay to their Parents during their Lives, as after the Time of their Deceaſe.

II. THEY alſo inſtruct a Father how he ought to behave towards his Son, but more particularly when he is grown up, that he may have no Opportunity of tranſgreſſing againſt the Reverence and filial Reſpect which he owes his Parents.

[a] But few of the Jews are for that Reaſon able to teach the old, or the Rabbinic Hebrew, for want of Method.

[b] He was a Frenchman, and has written Expoſitions on the Bible and Talmud. De Lira has taken a great many Things from him.

[c] The famous Rabbi Maimonides has compoſed a judicious Epitome of the whole Talmud, in the Rabbinical Hebrew, in a pure and eaſy Stile.

[d] Yet the Hebrew of the Rabbi's, altho' it be difficult, may be reduced to Rule and Grammar.

[e] Minian ſignifies Number: And there is a Book of R. Moſes, intitled, Minian Hamitſvot, that is to ſay, the Number of the Precepts which the Jews are obliged to obſerve.

III. THEY

III. THEY maintain likewiſe, that by Virtue of the ſame ſacred Direction, we ought to honour an elder Brother and a Mother-in-law. Nay, they are of Opinion, that there is more Reverence and Reſpect due to a ſpiritual Paſtor, than to a natural Parent; the latter only having given us Life, but the former makes that Life both agreeable and happy. They require alſo that every one, both by his Words and Actions, ſhould honour not only pious and learned Men, but [a] the aged, and even ſuch as are not of their own Perſuaſion; becauſe, according to the Rabbi's, they are antient Citizens as it were of the World, have ſeen more Events, and have much more Experience: [b] With the Antient is Wiſdom, and in Length of Days, Underſtanding.

[a] Levit. Chap. xix.
[b] Job xii.

The END of the FOURTH PART.

AN

Their Manner of Divorce

AN HISTORICAL DISSERTATION ON THE CUSTOMS and CEREMONIES OF THE PRESENT JEWS.

PART V.

CHAP. I.

Concerning the Heretical Jews: Together with a Supplement relating to the Caraïtes and Samaritans.

I SHALL not here treat of the various Hereſies which broke out ſome ſhort Time before the Deſtruction of the ſecond Temple; my Intention in this Work being only to ſpeak of ſuch Things as are in preſent Practice. Of all the many Hereſies which then prevail'd, there is but one that has [a] been tranſmitted down to us. Such as follow it, are look'd upon as Hereticks by the Jews, notwithſtanding they obſerve the Law of Moſes, and are called Caraïm, a Word derived from Micra, which ſignifies, the pure Text of the Bible; becauſe they rely wholly on the Pentateuch, [b] and practiſe it in its literal Senſe, without paying the leaſt Regard to the Expoſitions, Paraphraſes, and Precepts of the Rabbi's.

[a] The Author has forgot the Samaritans of our Days. See the Supplement.

[b] This is falſe, as you will ſee lower, and particularly in the Supplement, wherein I have corrected many Things againſt the current Opinion concerning the Caraïte Jews.

II. SINCE they will not ſwerve from the Letter of the ſacred Scripture, they muſt doubtleſs be reformed Sadducees; with this Difference, that the antient Sadducees deny'd the Immortality of the Soul, and by conſequence Paradiſe, Hell, Purgatory, the Reſurrection of the Dead, and ſome other Articles which the Moderns maintain. But leſt they ſhould render themſelves odious to all Religions which acknowledge theſe important Truths, they have acquieſced in, and even admitted ſome of the antient Traditions, to make themſelves more acceptable to the Jews, whoſe Name they aſſume. I do not queſtion, however, but that they owe their Origin to the Sadducees, and that they were of that Sect [a] before they had adopted this new Belief.

III. THERE are ſome of theſe Caraïtes at this Day in Conſtantinople, Cairo, and other Parts of the Eaſt, and alſo in Muſcovy, where they live according to their own Manner, have their own Synagogues, and obſerve ſuch Ceremonies and Cuſtoms as are peculiar to themſelves; though at the ſame Time they inſiſt that they are Jews, and the only true Obſervers of the Moſaic Law.

IV. SUCH Jews as deviate from their Perſuaſion, they call Rabbanim, or Diſciples of the Rabbi's. But theſe laſt have a natural Averſion to the Caraïtes, and will make no Alliances, nor have any Converſation with them. They call them Manzerim, or Baſtards, becauſe they keep none of the Precepts of the Rabbi's relating to Marriages, Divorces, or Purifications of Women. Nay, their Hatred is ſo inveterate, that if a Caraïte had an Inclination to turn Rabbiniſt, the other Jews would not conſent to his Admiſſion.

SUPPLEMENT.

Concerning the Caraïtes.

I. IT would be a difficult Task to fix the exact Time when Caraïſm began. Father Morin, who has treated on this Topick, traces the Origin of this Sect to the eighth Century, ſoon after the Publication of the Talmud; and imagines, that this large and laborious Work is not near ſo antient as moſt of the Jews think it is. In fact, Caraïſm took its riſe from the Publication of the Talmud. For we do not find that the Word Caraite was ſo odious before that Time, as it has been ſince. On the contrary, by the Term Caraï, was intended a Perſon who had a conſummate Knowledge of the ſacred Scriptures. So that the Riſe of this Sect proceeded from the learned Jews of that Time, who oppoſed a thouſand idle Dreams, which were publiſhed under the ſpecious Name of the Traditions of Moſes; altho' moſt of them had no other Foundation than the Pride and Ambition of ſome of their Doctors, who would have palmed their own private Deciſions upon the illiterate Vulgar, as ſo many Oracles delivered upon Mount Sinaï. And as thoſe Jews, who would not embrace theſe vain Traditions, made uſe of the Scripture for the Refutation of them, which they call Micra, they took from thence the Name of Caraïm; as we ourſelves have ſeen ſome Proteſtants, who called themſelves Evangeliſts, becauſe they would receive no other Authority than that of the Goſpel, and rejected all Traditions whatſoever.

II. BUT ſuch Jews as declared themſelves for the Talmud, ſtiled theſe others, Samaritans and Sadducees; not becauſe they were really ſo, but becauſe they imitated them with reſpect to thoſe Traditions, which they would not receive: Though ſince that Time there have been Jews who have imagined that a Caraïte was in Reality a Samari- tan and a Sadducee: And they have been the more confirmed in this Error, for want of applying themſelves to Hiſtory and Chronology. The Author of this Work, who very well knew that the preſent Caraïtes maintained quite different Doctrines from the Samaritans, has raiſed a new imaginary Sect of Caraïtes to reconcile this Contradiction; as if the antient Sect were in Reality no other than Samaritans and Sadducees, and the modern had either altered their Opinion, or at leaſt, were grown more moderate. But this Sentiment of our Rabbi is only grounded on the Ignorance of the Jews, as has been obſerved, and the Arguments which he produces, are too weak and inſufficient to ſupport his Notion.

[a] This is falſe. See the Supplement.

tan

III. OUR modern Criticks have been very groſly miſtaken with Regard to the Caraïtes, by too boldly relying on the Authority of the Jewiſh Writings; for the Rabbiniſts, who are their inveterate Enemies, have charged them falſly in almoſt every reſpect. Father Morin has acted much more generouſly; for he has made uſe of a Comment upon the Pentateuch which was compoſed by a Caraïte; and ſince I have that very Manuſcript in my Cuſtody, I determine here to ſhew my Reader fairly, without any Prejudice or Partiality, in what Caraïſm does conſiſt, and wherein the Caraïtes differ from the Rabbi's or Jewiſh Doctors. I ſhall begin with their Sentiments relating to the Text of the Bible; our Author in this reſpect having confounded them with the Samaritans, who acknowledge the Pentateuch only as authentic; and there are ſeveral learned Men at this very Time, who imagine that the Opinion of the Caraïtes, as to the Text of the Bible, is vaſtly different from that of the other Jews. I cannot conceive where a certain Doctor of the Sorbonne, and Regius Profeſſor of the Hebrew Language, met with what he has lately publiſh'd upon this Topick, relating to the Caraïtes. He explains the Word Caraïm or Caraïtes in the following Terms: viz. Such as only admit of Conſonants without Points in their Bibles, ſuch Points having, as they imagine, no other Authority than Tradition: And adds afterwards, That the Caraites have inſenſibly gain'd Ground of the Jews in general, but more particularly of the Talmudiſts and allegorical Writers; and that thus they were eaſily induced to believe that ſuch Books of the Law as have Points in them are profane. There is ſcarce one Word of Truth in all that this learned Profeſſor has offered, as will plainly appear by the Sequel of this Diſcourſe.

IV. THE Caraïte, who wrote the Comment above mentioned, calls himſelf Aaron Son of Joſeph, who lived about the Cloſe of the thirteenth Century. He acknowledges that all the Books of the Scripture contained in the Canon of the Jews are authentic, and, as the other Jews do, allows their Number to be twenty four. The better to diſtinguiſh them from human Traditions, he ſometimes calls them Prophecies, thinking it an impious Affront to the Deity to bring his holy Word in Competition with any human Compoſition whatſoever; and herein he ſeverely reproves thoſe Jewiſh Doctors, who ſet the Fictions of the Talmud, and the idle Chimæras of their Anceſtors, upon the ſame Footing with the Books of the holy Scripture. The Caraïtes however, as he plainly ſhews, do not reject, as ſome pretend, all kinds of Traditions, but ſuch only as are falſe and romantic, ſome Inſtances whereof he has furniſhed us with in the Beginning of his Work, where he very merrily expoſes them. He tells us what a whimſical Explication theſe Rabbi's give of the Serpent which we read of in the Beginning of Geneſis. For both the Rabbi's and the Cabaliſts ſay, That he was as large as a Camel, and that Samael [a] ſat upon him; nay, that God himſelf rode, and diverted himſelf upon his Back. In the ſame Place he produces ſome other allegorical and Cabaliſtical Commentaries of theſe very Rabbi's, which he learnedly confutes, and further adds, That in theſe, and other Explications of the like Nature, they rely upon no other Authority than the Tradition of their Fathers. Then breaking out with a religious Zeal againſt thoſe who treat the Word of God ſo diſreſpectfully: Curſed be the Man, ſaith he, whoſe Behaviour is ſo audacious and profane.

[a] The Devil.

V. To

V. To demonſtrate that they admit of ſuch Traditions as are both rational and well-grounded, he diſtinguiſhes thoſe Traditions which are ſure and antient, from thoſe that are falſe and doubtful. And his Rules for the Authority of Traditions ſeem to be the ſame with thoſe which the learned Vicentius Lirinenſis has given us: In ſhort, he not only profeſſes to admit of the Scripture, but alſo to adhere to Reaſon and ſuch Tradition as has been ſure and of old Standing, but not to that of modern Invention. He acquieſces in the Doctrine of the Antients, where none have preſumed to vary it, and where it is conformable to ſuch authentic Writings as have met with the general Approbation of the Jews. Upon this Principle they admit of all the Books of the Bible, as well as the Jewiſh Rabbi's; and what is ſtill more remarkable, they acknowledge them as they are pointed at preſent; for they have no other Tranſcript than that of the Maſora. And whenever they read in a different Manner, it is as Criticks only, in Imitation of the Rabbi's Juda, Jona, Abeneſra, Kimchi, Abenmelec and other Rabbiniſt Grammarians.

VI. OUR Caraïte, who is very curious and induſtrious in his Enquiries into the literal Senſe of the Text, frequently quotes the various Lections in order to chuſe out the beſt. And in this Particular he imitates the Rabbiniſts, who do the ſame. He ſtrictly obſerves the moſt minute Circumſtances in Grammar, to make out the true literal Senſe. It would be needleſs to produce any Inſtances here; becauſe he obſerves this Method throughout the whole Work.

VII. I SHALL not attempt to confute the Notion of ſuch as imagine that the Caraïtes have Tranſcripts of the Bible, which vary from the Vulgar, having already obſerved, that they not only admit, as all other Jews do, the four and twenty Books of the Scripture, but that they make uſe of the Hebrew Copies alſo, exactly as they now ſtand pointed by the Maſſorets.

VIII. As to their Theology, it is no ways different from that of the other Jews, except that it is more pure and leſs ſuperſtitious: For they pay no regard to the Explications of the Cabaliſts, or their Allegories, which in Reality have no Foundation. Moreover, our Caraïte diſcovers very plainly his Sentiments relating to the Nature of the Soul, and a future State, in his Explication of theſe Words of Geneſis, Let us make Man in our own Image. The Spirit of Man, ſays he, owes its Riſe and Origin to Things above, and his Body to thoſe which are below. For his Soul, adds he, is of an angelic Nature. And immediately after, The future State was made for the Soul of Man. This Notion is directly repugnant to that of the Sadducees, and plainly demonſtrates, that all the Errors with which the Caraïtes are charged, are the Effects only of Calumny and Detraction.

IX. As to the Ceremonies and Religious Cuſtoms of the Caraïtes, they are ſo numerous that to deſcribe them all would require a long Diſcourſe: But I preſume it will be ſufficient in general to obſerve, that the Caraïtes reject all the Ordinances of the Miſna and Talmud, which are not conformable to the Scripture, or cannot be drawn as neceſſary and apparent Conſequences from it. I ſhall content myſelf with producing only three Inſtances. The firſt is relating to the Commandment of Mezouzot, or Parchments, which the Jews faſten to all the Doors through which they daily paſs. The ſecond, relating to the Tephilim, or Phylacteries, ſpoken of even in the New Teſtament. The third relates to the Prohibition of eating Milk with Fleſh. Notwithſtanding the two firſt ſeem expreſs and poſitive in Deuteronomy, where you have theſe Words; [a] Thou ſhalt bind them for a Sign upon thine Hand, and they ſhall be as Frontlets between thine Eyes, and thou ſhalt write them upon the Poſts of thy Houſe, and on thy Gates: Yet our Caraïte inſiſts, that this is a figurative way of Expreſſion; and that when God directs the Jews to write them upon the Poſts, his Intention was, that at their coming in, and going out, they ſhould always have their Minds intent upon them. And by this Interpretation the Caraïtes are exempted from the Obſervance of a vaſt Variety of Ceremonies, or rather Superſtitions, which the Jewiſh Doctors have invented relating to the Mezouzot and Tephilim. Hence it is likewiſe, that the Caraïtes laugh at and ridicule the Rabbi's, when they ſee them at Prayers with theſe Tephilim on their Foreheads, according to our Deſcription of them in the eleventh Chapter of the firſt Part of this Work; nay, they do not ſcruple to call them Aſſes with Bridles. St. Jerom ſpeaks of theſe Tephilim almoſt in as contemptible Terms; for, in his Expoſition on the Words of the Goſpel, wherein the Phylacteries are ſpoken of, he ſays, The Phariſees, by a falſe Conſtruction of this Paſſage, wrote the Ten Commandments of Moſes on Parchment, which they rolled up and tied on their Foreheads; making a kind of Crown round their Heads, that they might always have them before their Eyes.

[a] Deut. vi. and xi.

have

X. THE third Inſtance is taken from the Prohibition of their Eating Fleſh and Milk Diet at the ſame Meal, grounded on this Paſſage of Exodus; Thou ſhalt not ſeeth a Kid in his Mother's Milk. But our Caraïte regards none of thoſe Traditions which give this Paſſage ſuch a figurative Senſe. For this Place is, in his Opinion, to be explained by that other where it is ſaid of a Bird's Neſt, Thou ſhalt not take the Mother with the Young ones. And when the Jewiſh Doctors are preſs'd home on this Subject, as I have preſt them myſelf, they anſwer, Ameru Hachamenu: This is the Interpretation of our Maſters or Sages; for they imagine that the Deciſion of their Fathers is as authentic as the very Text of the Scripture; and that God himſelf delivered that Explication to Moſes on Mount Sinat.

XI. I SHALL not treſpaſs on the Reader's Patience any longer, by ſpeaking of their other Ordinances which are innumerable, becauſe moſt of them are no more than Commentaries of the Jewiſh Doctors, which the Caraïtes deſpiſe. They read the Text of the Bible with a quite different View from that of the Rabbi's, who embrace all the Opportunities they can, to find out new Interpretations. The Caraïtes read the Scripture in a rational way, and expound it from the Context, that is, they explain the Senſe of what follows by what precedes. In ſhort, they reject every Thing that has not Scripture, Reaſon, and a Tradition which has never vary'd, for their Foundation.

XII. HOWEVER, the Caraïtes, as they are Men of Senſe and Ingenuity, readily comply with the Jewiſh Doctors in ſome particular Points of Diſcipline, notwithſtanding they very well know that 'tis no ways conformable to the Scriptures. For Inſtance, they follow their Calendar, and the Computations of Rabbi Hillel; becauſe, ſince 'tis abſolutely neceſſary to be determined by ſome Method, they prefer this to any other: Juſt as ſome Proteſtants make uſe of the reformed Calendar, although at the ſame Time they are conſcious it is not perfect and compleat in every Particular.

XIII. THEY not only conform to the Rabbiniſts, as to their Method of Circumciſion, but make uſe of them too ſometimes for that very Purpoſe: For Circumciſion is appointed in Scripture, though the manner of its Operation be not particularly ſpecified; hence the Turks, as well as Jews, circumciſe their Children, but differ in the manner of its Performance. The former, when they have once cut off the Skin, never meddle with it any more; but the latter tear the Edges of the Skin which remain after Circumciſion in ſeveral Places with their Thumb-Nails; and I am apt to believe this is the Reaſon why Jews are ſooner heal'd than Turks after Circumciſion.

XIV. THE Caraïtes make uſe likewiſe of the Taled, of which our Author has taken particular Notice in the firſt Part of his Book. Their Taled is ſomewhat different however from that of the Rabbiniſts; for it is cut in another Form, and the Strings which hang like Tufts, are not like theirs.

XV. To what I have already ſaid of the Caraïtes, I ſhall only add, that our Caraïte never writes the Name of Jehovah, or the Tetragrammaton, with the uſual Letters, Jod, He, Vau, He, but with theſe three only, Jod, Vau, Jod: And I am of Opinion therefore, that the ancient Caraïtes did not read Jehovah, as it is written in our modern Tranſcripts, but Jave, which Lection Theodoret aſcribes to the Samaritans: Unleſs we imagine theſe three Letters may be termed a Contraction of the Name of Jehovah, as we ſee other Jews often write it with two or three Jods.

XVI. As to that Aſſertion of our Author, that the Jewiſh Doctors have ſuch a natural Averſion to the Caraïtes, that they call them Baſtards, and refuſe to make any Alliances with them, or admit them when they are inclin'd to turn Rabbiniſts, it is an undeniable Proof of the great Eſteem which the Jewiſh Doctors have for the Traditions of their Fathers. I have heard, however, that in the Levant, when a Caraïte is deſirous to become a Rabbiniſt, and to have Children that may be reckon'd ſuch, they oblige him to marry a Slave, and the Children by ſuch a Wife are not looked upon as Manzerim, or Baſtards, but as Rabbiniſt Jews.

SUPPLEMENT.

Concerning the Samaritans.

I. THIS very ſurpriſing, that the Author of this Treatiſe ſhould take no Notice of the Samaritans; ſince he promiſed to give us an Account of all ſuch Hereticks as are at preſent amongſt the Jews. It muſt be confeſs'd that this Breach between them has been of long ſtanding; but as it has been, and ſtill continues to be irreparable, he might have ſaid ſomething one would think about them. I ſhall not here take Notice of the Origin of the Samaritans, becauſe it is expreſly ſet forth in the ſacred Scripture; and it is not to be queſtioned in the leaſt, but that thoſe who bear that Name in divers Parts of the World are of the ſame Sect. My Intention is only to ſpeak of theſe laſt, whoſe Memory has but lately been revived in our Time on Account of their Pentateuch, which has been printed in the celebrated Bibles of M. le Jai, and the Engliſh Polyglot.

II. THE modern Samaritans reſide at Gaza, [a] Sichem, Damaſcus, Cairo, and other Parts of the Levant, in which Places they boaſt of having Prieſts, who are, as they inſiſt, Deſcendants from Aaron. Their Temple, or rather their Chapel where they offer their Sacrifices, ſtands upon Mount Garizim. Joſeph Scaliger, who was acquainted with it, wrote ſeveral Letters to the Samaritans in Egypt, and to the High Prieſt who reſides at Sichem. They reſolved all the abſtruſe Queſtions which he propoſed to them in thoſe Letters; theſe Reſolutions were dated in the nine hundred and ninety eighth Year of Mahomet's Hegira, which anſwers to our 1590. but Scaliger never receiv'd them.

III. IN their firſt Letter, written in the Name of the Aſſembly of Iſrael in Egypt, they declare, that they annually celebrate the Paſſover the fourteenth of the firſt Month, upon Mount Garizim, and that their High Prieſt at that Time was named Eleazer, the Son of Phineas, the Son of Aaron. They proceed in the next Place to the Solution of thoſe knotty Points which he had propoſed to them; but ſince they are more fully explained in the Anſwer which was wrote in the Name of the High Prieſt Eleazer, and of the Synagogue at Sichem, directed to the ſaid Scaliger, I ſhall only take Notice of this laſt, which will ſufficiently demonſtrate what the Samaritans are. The Contents are as follow.

[a] Naplouſe.

I. THE

1. THE Samaritans ſtrictly obſerve the Sabbath according to the Commandment in Exodus: For no one preſumes to ſtir from the Place where he happens to reſide on that Day, unleſs to the Synagogue, where they read the Law, and ſing Hymns of Praiſes to Almighty God. They do not ſo much as lie with their Wives that Night, neither do they, nor their Servants, kindle any Fire all that Day; whereas the Jews break the Sabbath in both thoſe Particulars: For they walk out of Town, kindle their Fires, and converſe with their Wives; neither do they waſh after they have approached them.

2. THE Paſſover is look'd upon s their moſt ſolemn Feſtival, which begins at Sun-ſet, by the Sacrifice preſcribed in Exodus for that Purpoſe. They make no Sacrifices, however, but upon Mount Garizim, and there they read the Law, and ſay their Prayers; after which the High Prieſt diſmiſſes the whole Aſſembly with his Benediction.

3. THEY alſo obſerve the Feſtival of the Harveſt for ſeven Days; but do not agree with the Jews as to the Day of its Commencement; For the Jews compute from the next Day after the Celebration of the Paſſover, whereas the Samaritans compute their fifty Days from the next Day after the Sabbath, which falls in the Week of the Feaſt of unleavened Bread; and the Feſtival of the Harveſt commences the next Day after the ſeventh Sabbath then enſuing.

4. THEY keep the Feſtival of Expiation on the tenth of the ſeventh Month, and ſpend the whole twenty four Hours in Prayers and Pſalmody, without eating. For every Body faſts but ſuch Infants as ſuck the Breaſt; whereas the Jews except all Children that are not ſeven Years old.

5. ON the fifteenth of the ſame Month they keep the Feaſt of Tabernacles upon the ſame Mountain.

6. THEY never delay the Circumciſion longer than eight Days, according as it is ordained in Geneſis; whereas the Jews frequently do.

7. THEY are under an indiſpenſable Obligation to waſh themſelves in the Morning, if they have converſed with their Wives, or have been otherwiſe accidentally polluted in the Night-Time; and all ſuch Veſſels as are capable of Pollution, become ſo, by their touching them before they have waſhed themſelves.

8. THEY take away the Fat of their Sacrifices, and give the Shoulders, Jaws, and Entrails to the Prieſt.

9. THEY never intermarry, as the Jews do, with their own Neices, and content themſelves with one Wife only; whereas the others are indulged by their Laws with a Plurality.

10. THEY believe in God, Moſes, and Mount Garizim. And whereas the Jews (as they ſay) put their Confidence in others, we ſubmit to nothing but what God has expreſly commanded in the Law; who therein made uſe of the Miniſtry of Moſes. The Jews have forſaken what God has ordained in the Law, to follow the Inventions of their Fathers and their Doctors.

11. THIS is the Purport of the Anſwer made by the Direction of the High Prieſt Eleazer, and written by his Secretary Abzehuta, the Son of Joſeph Harmacus, who reſided at Gaza. It is alſo obſerved, that Eleazer had a Son called Phineas, who followed the ſame Employ in his Father's Preſence; that they always reſide in that holy Place in the the Sight of God, and that ſuch as have any Doubts to reſolve, reſort to them from all Parts; foraſmuch as they decide all diſputable Matters according to the ſtrict Laws of Equity and Truth.

12. FROM Aaron down to themſelves, they compute one hundred and twelve High Prieſts, of whoſe Names they keep a particular Liſt, and peremptorily deny that the Jews have any Prieſts of the Family of Phineas, and that they are guilty of a groſs Miſtake when they call the Samaritans, Cutheans; that they are Deſcendants from the Tribe of Joſeph the Juſt, by Ephraim; that their Samaritan Characters are the ſame that God himſelf made uſe of when he wrote the Law, and that he communicated them to Moſes. The Anſwer of the Synagogue in Egypt makes this remarkable Addition, that the Characters now made uſe of by the Jews in writing their Law, are the impious Invention of Eſdras, and accurſed for ever.

IV. WE might make ſeveral Remarks here upon theſe two Letters, but we ſhall purpoſely decline them, and content ourſelves with this one Obſervation, that the Samaritans are not in the leaſt infected with the erroneous Principles of the Sadducees, and that in this Reſpect the Jews are partial, and do them Injuſtice. What gave Riſe to this Calumny is, that the Samaritans will not acknowledge the idle Traditions of the Jews, as I have already obſerv'd in ſpeaking of the Caraïtes; and this is the Reaſon why the Jews confound the Samaritans with the Sadducees and Caraïtes. 'Tis my Opinion, that we cannot at this Time learn the Purity of the Jewiſh Law better than from the Samaritans of Sichem, who, as Father Moren, and M. Peyreſc have obſerved, ſtill continue according to the antient Inſtitution to ſacrifice on Mount Garizim. To ſurvey the Place where they ſacrifice, to obſerve its Form, its manner of Erection, its Order and Proportion, and more particularly to take the Dimenſions both of the Altar and of the Veſſels which are appropriated to that ſacred Purpoſe, would be a very agreeable Curioſity: So likewiſe would it be to ſee their High Prieſt dreſſed in his Pontifical Robes, eſpecially on Eaſter-Day, when he is attended by all his numerous Train of inferior Officers. 'Tis ſurpriſing, methinks, that none of our Travellers have had this Curioſity.

V. PART of the Account which I have here given of the Samaritans, is confirmed by the Travels of Benjamin the Jew. This Doctor, who lived in the twelfth Century, tells us, that in his Time there were but a hundred Samaritans in the Synagogue of Sichem, two hundred in that of Egypt, about three hundred in the Synagogue of Aſcalon, and between three and four hundred in that of Damaſcus. He likewiſe takes Notice, that they have Prieſts who are the Deſcendants of Aaron, and for that Reaſon called Aaronites, who never marry, except it be with ſuch Women as belong to their own Family, that they may not confound the ſacerdotal Race with others; that theſe Prieſts make their Oblations on Mount Garizim, where they have a Stone Altar, which was erected by the Iſraelites after their Paſſage over Jordan. He adds, that theſe Samaritans are of the Tribe of Ephraim, and that the Burying-Place of Joſeph the Son of Jacob, whom they ſtile their Father, is ſtill in their Poſſeſſion. In ſhort, he ſays, that the Samaritans are very cautious how they touch a dead Body, or come near any Burying-Place for fear of Pollution; that they change their Habits when they go to the Synagogue, and waſh themſelves before they put them on.

VI. THE Samaritans have Time out of Mind ſtiled themſelves the Deſcendants of the Tribe of Ephraim, and the true Sons of Jacob, and boaſt of it, as is evident from the Queſtion which the Woman of Samaria asked our bleſſed Lord: Art thou greater than our Father Jacob? As to their Tombs, beſides the Account which Benjamin gives us of the Burial-Place of of Joſeph, the Samaritans ſhew thoſe of their Prophets likewiſe which lie round about their Temple; particularly thoſe of Eleazer, and Ithamar the Son of Aaron, and even that of his Grandſon Phineas. They pretend alſo to have the Sepulchres of Joſhua and Caleb, and of two others, named Abinon and Joſeph, the Sons of Carath or Parath. They have likewiſe an Inſcription in their Temple, which was wrote, as they tell us, in the fifteenth Year from the going up of the Iſraelites into the Land of Promiſe, by the Hand of Phineas, who was the Son of Eleazer, and Grandſon of Aaron.

VII. As thoſe ill-natur'd Reflections which the Jews uſually caſt upon the Samaritans are inconſiſtent with themſelves, I ſhall not here trouble the Reader with a Confutation of them: For they charge them not only with Sadduceiſm, but Idolatry too, in paying divine Adoration to the Image of a Dove in their Temple. Their Calumnies are equally unjuſt, when they charge the Samaritan Alphabet with the Want of theſe three Letters, He, Heth, and Gnain; and likewiſe when they ſay, that the Samaritans, in the Beginning of Geneſis, have written, Aſima created, inſtead of God created; I my ſelf having had ocular Demonſtration of the Falſhood of that Aſſertion; for we have an Hebrew Pentateuch in the Samaritan Character, in which thoſe three Letters are now to be met with, ſo that they have thoſe Letters, and likewiſe the Word Elohim, God, as well as the Jews.

VIII. It muſt be acknowledg'd that the Samaritans think the Pentateuch of Moſes are the only authentic Books of the ſacred Scripture. They have the Hiſtory of Joſhua indeed, and ſome few of the other Hiſtories of the Old Teſtament amongſt them; but they vary from ours: Neither do they look on them as Books of divine Authority, becauſe the Jewiſh Canon, which has determin'd the Number of the Books of the Bible, is of a much later Date than their Separation, as well as the greateſt Part of thoſe very Books; which were compoſed, as they imagine, with a peculiar Regard to the Poſterity of David, and to eſtabliſh it on the Throne. For this Reaſon they call Eſdras an Impoſtor, who (according to their Notion) laid aſide the genuine, primitive Hebrew Letters, for thoſe which the Jews ſtill make uſe of in the writing of the Old Teſtament. And indeed St. Jerom, and our moſt celebrated Criticks are all fully perſuaded that the Original Hebrew Characters were thoſe of the Samaritans, and that Eſdras, after the Return from the Captivity, made uſe of the Chaldee Characters, in which the Books of the Old Teſtament are at preſent written. It is very probable, that this was done to diſtinguiſh the Jews from the Samaritans in a more conſpicuous Manner than they were before, and that there might be nothing common between them. It is very probable, likewiſe, that the People had accuſtomed themſelves to theſe Characters during their Captivity, when they learn'd the Language: My Reaſon for this Suppoſition is this, that they were oblig'd at that Time to make a Chaldee Paraphraſe on the Hebrew Text, in order to underſtand it.

IX. The ſole Difference between the Samaritan and the Jewiſh Pentateuchs lies in the Characters. The Samaritans, ſays St. Jerom, have the Pentateuch written in as many Characters as the Jews; they differ only in the Form of their Points. St. Jerom makes uſe of the Term Apex to expreſs a Point, which is a ſmall Hair-Stroke, with which the Jews embelliſh the Top of ſome of their Characters, placing it over them in the Shape of a Crown. Theſe they make uſe of in thoſe Books which are read in their Synagogues, and in their Mezouzot. It is very probable, that our Saviour referred to thoſe Hair-Strokes, in that Saying, Iota unum, [a] aut unus apex non peribit à lege. For the Points which are now in uſe were unknown at that Time.

X. In fine, when I aſſert with St. Jerom, that the Samaritan Pentateuch is different from that of the Jews in its Characters only, I would not be underſtood in a ſtrict Senſe; but they are to be look'd upon as two Tranſcripts taken from one and the ſame Original, which each Nation has copied in ſuch Characters as were peculiar to themſelves:

[a] Matthew.

Tho' it was morally impoſſible, but that in Proceſs of Time ſome Alteration muſt happen in the various Lections. St. Jerom has taken the Pains to point out ſome of them, as others were equally induſtrious before him. And it is by the Obſervation of all theſe Circumſtances that the Controverſies which have already been, and continue ſtill upon this Topic, are to be reconciled: For were the Greeks, who acknowledge the Pope, deſirous and fond of writing the Latin Vulgate in Greek Characters, and always have the ſame in common Uſe, I am fully perſuaded that in length of Time, there would be ſome Alteration in thoſe two Tranſcripts.

XI. THE Samaritans have not only the Hebrew Pentateuch in Samaritan Characters, but alſo two Verſions of it, one in Arabic, and the other in Syriac or Chaldee, which they call the Samaritan Verſion, as if it were a diſtinct Language, tho' it is only a kind of Syriac or Chaldee, which differs in ſome Reſpects from the common Syriac. Thoſe two Verſions are likewiſe written in Samaritan Characters, and rang'd with the Text in three Columns. M. De Pyreſc had a Tranſcript of theſe Tritapla, altho' ſomewhat imperfect. The Hebrew-Samaritan Pentateuch, and the Samaritan Tranſlation are printed in M. Le Jay's Bible, and in the Engliſh Polyglot, the Characters whereof were taken from that Tranſcript which is depoſited in the Library of the Fathers of the Oratory at Paris near the Louvre. Theſe printed Tranſcripts however are not ſo beautiful or majeſtic as the Manuſcript. There are Abundance of theſe Samaritan Tranſcripts ſtill to be met with in private Libraries. But no Perſon ever made ſo curious a Collection of them as M. De Pyreſc: For he had divers Fragments of the Works of ſelect Authors which were wrote in a Language ſomewhat different from the common Syriac, tho'it might properly be called Samaritan, beſides the Tritapla abovementioned. In ſhort, Poſtel aſſures us, that the Samaritans have Grammars of their Language.

XII. As the Samaritans write the Text of their Pentateuch without Points or Vowels, we cannot determine whether their Manner of reading is the ſame with that of the Jews, which is now ſettled by the Maſſorets. To hear a Samaritan read the Pentateuch, however, would be a curious Amuſement, that we might ſee whether it was in every Reſpect conformable to the Jewiſh Manner, which we follow very cloſely, becauſe we have no other. Some Traveller, we hope, who is a perfect Maſter of the Hebrew Tongue, will ſome Time or other gratify our Curioſity in this Reſpect, as it might be a ſingular Advantage to the whole Church. It would be needleſs to mention the Greek Verſion of the Samaritan Pentateuch in this Place, becauſe every one that has any tolerable Knowledge of the Greek Fathers, know perfectly well wherein it conſiſts. We are not however to confound the Samaritans in general with a particular Sect, whoſe Leader's Name, as the Arabians call him, is Doſitheus, or Douſis. This Douſis (if we may believe a Samaritan, who has wrote the Hiſtory of his own Nation) altered the Text of the Pentateuch in divers Places, for which he was ſeverely reprimanded by the High-Prieſt. Some of his Diſciples, however, made uſe of his corrupted Pentateuch, as will more fully and at large appear in the Commentaries of Abraham Echellenſis upon the Book of Hebedjeſu. [a] Photius likewiſe takes Notice of one Doſitheus or Doſten, a celebrated Corrupter of the Sacred Scripture, who was a Samaritan, and Contemporary with Simon Magus. This Man was the Leader of that Sect of the Samaritans call'd Doſthenians.

ONE of our moſt learned and judicious Moderns is of Opinion, that this Doſitheus was the Author [b] of our Hebrew-Samaritan Pentateuch. But there is no Foundation notwithſtanding to ſupport ſuch a Notion, the Hebrew-Samaritan Pentateuch, but lately printed, being the ſame with that which is read in all the Synagogues of the Samaritans. I am conſcious, I own, that ſome learned Men who are well verſed in all Matters which relate

[a] In his Bibliotheca.
[b] Uſſerius Armach.

late to the Eaſtern Nations, are aſtoniſh'd to hear it aſſerted, that the modern Samaritans have any particular Place on Mount Garizim for their Sacrifices; becauſe ſay they, Pietro dell-Valle, who had been in Perſon among the Samaritans of thoſe Parts, takes not the leaſt Notice of it in his Travels: And that the extreme Poverty to which they have been reduc'd oblig'd them to decline their Sacrifices. But whether we enquire or not into Pietro della Valle's Account of the Samaritans, or whether the French Tranſlation of his Travels be exactly juſt and faithful to the Italian, or even whether Valle was ſo curious as to inform himſelf of every minute Circumſtance that related to them, whilſt he was in Perſon amongſt them, all Arguments againſt Facts, which may with Eaſe be indiſputably proved, are idle, and urg'd to no manner of Purpoſe. But that in Scaliger's Time the Samaritans at Naplouſe had Prieſts is not to be queſtion'd; ſince in their Letter to him, they requeſted that he would ſend them ſome fine Linnen to make proper Veſtments for their High-Prieſt. Several Memoirs likewiſe relating to the Sacrifices of the Samaritans, were found amongſt the numerous Papers of M. De Pyreſc, who had receiv'd his Inſtructions from ſuch Travellers as he had prevail'd on to viſit the Samaritans, on purpoſe to purchaſe ſome of their moſt valuable Books. The ſame Samaritans of Naplouſe have lately written to ſome of our reverend and learned Engliſh Divines, to whom they give the friendly and affectionate Title of their dear Samaritan Brethren of England. In their Letters they inſiſt, that they have a High-Prieſt of the Race of Phineas, and that their Prieſts in general are Deſcendants of Levi. And in their laſt Letter, which was written in 1676, they inform them of the much-lamented Death of their High-Prieſt, and at the ſame Time entreat them to aſſiſt them under their preſent Calamity, to ſend their Oblations to the ſacred Mount Garizim, to furniſh them with Veſtments for their Prieſts, and laſtly, to ſend their charitable Contributions to the Sepulchres of their Fathers. Father Morin likewiſe, who had been curious in his Enquiries relating to the Samaritans, has aſſured us, that they ſtill ſacrifice on Mount Garizim, and that the Authority of their High-Prieſt, who reſides at Naplouſe, extends over all the Samaritans, to whom he annually by his Circular Letters gives timely Notice of the Paſſover, and the other ſolemn Feſtivals, which he expects ſtrictly to be obſerv'd.

CHAP. II.

Concerning their Divinations and Sorceries.

I.[a] THE Jews look upon it as a very heinous Sin to put the leaſt Confidence in any Prediction of what Nature or Kind ſoever, be it by Aſtrology, Geomancy, Chiromancy, or any other Sorceries and Divinations.

II. BUT it is ſtill in their Opinion a more heinous Sin to delight in Necromancy, magical Incantations, or Deluſions, Theurgy, the Conjuration of Angels or Devils, or the Conſultation of the Dead, in Expectation to receive Anſwers from them; and in ſhort, to do any of thoſe Things which are forbidden, and particularly ſpecified in the eighteenth Chapter of Deuteronomy.

III. THEY are likewiſe commanded not to cut their Skin, and put Ink, or any other Colours whatſoever upon it, Leviticus, Chap. xix. Ye ſhall not print any Marks upon you.

IV. THE Rabbi's have alſo forbidden many other Superſtitions, which were in Uſe among the[b] Amorites, and ſtiled Darche Ha-Emori.

[a] This Chapter was omitted in the firſt Edition.
[b] The Ways of the Amorites.

CHAP. III.

Concerning their Proſelytes.

I. [a] WHEN any one has an Inclination to become a Jew, three Rabbi's, or others of Authority and Reputation, are oblig'd to examine him very ſtrictly, to find out if poſſible, the true Reaſon of this Reſolution, and to obſerve whether Intereſt and not Religion be the real Motive. For when they perceive 'tis with any ſuch View, they diſcharge him, repreſenting to him at the ſame Time that Moſes's Law is very ſevere; that its Followers are at preſent in an abject and deſpicable Condition, and that 'tis more for his Advantage to continue a Member of his own Church.

II. IF after ſuch a friendly Exhortation, the Man ſtill requeſts to be admitted, they circumciſe him; and, when he is healed, waſh his whole Body in Water in the Preſence of the three Rabbi's who before examin'd him. After the Performance of this Ceremony, he is look'd upon to be as perfect a Jew as themſelves.

CHAP. IV.

Concerning their Precepts which peculiarly relate to the Women.

I. WHATEVER the Men are enjoin'd, by negative Precepts, to refrain from, the Women are under the ſame Obligations. But as for the Affirmative Precepts, the Rabbi's have agreed that no Woman is obliged to obſerve ſuch as require an eſtabliſh'd Time for their Execution; their Opinion in this Particular being grounded on the Delicacy and Tenderneſs of the Sex, the Obedience due to their Husbands, and the Duty they are bound to pay them.

II. THESE three following Precepts therefore are all that are recommended to the Women in particular; the firſt is, to avoid their Husbands with the utmoſt Care and Precaution in the Time of their monthly Pollutions, and to bath themſelves before they converſe with them again. The ſecond is, after they have kneaded their Bread, to make a Cake, and throw it into the Fire; tho' in former Times it was an Offering which was made to the High Prieſt. [b] The third and laſt is, as I have already obſerved, to light the Friday Night's Lamp for the Eve of the Sabbath.

III. THERE are ſome amongſt them, however, who are more warm and zealous in their Devotions than the Men; and who not only take Care to train up their Children in the Way that they ſhould go, but uſe their utmoſt Endeavours, likewiſe, to reclaim their Husbands from a vicious Courſe of Life.

[a] This Chapter was left out in the ſecond Edition.
[b] Part III. Chap. i.

CHAP. V.

Concerning their Slaves.

THE antient Jews made a great Diſtinction between their Slaves; ſome of them being Hebrews, and ſome Canaanites: But at preſent they purchaſe none except it be in the Eaſtern Parts, and in Barbary. Such as are poſſeſs'd of them, make them do all menial Offices, and either keep them, or ſell them, according to the Cuſtom of the Place where they live; and in Caſe their Slaves are deſirous to become Jews, they circumciſe and waſh them, and then make them free.

CHAP. VI.

Concerning their Confeſſion and Penance.

I. THEY have no other Form of Confeſſion, than that which they make to God himſelf in their Prayers. They moſt commoly have one ready compoſed and alphabetically digeſted, which they call [a] Viddui. Every Letter denotes ſome grievous Sin to which they are naturally addicted: But ſuch as are Men of Ingenuity enumerate the Particulars, and take Notice of the various Kinds of them, and the aggravating Circumſtances with which they are attended.

II. MONDAYS and Thurſdays are the ſtated Days ſet apart for making theſe ſolemn Confeſſions; and on every Faſt-Day they are likewiſe repeated: As alſo in private on the Faſt of Expiation, of which I have already given the Reader a ſufficient [b] Deſcription. They repeat likewiſe their Confeſſion every Night and Morning in Times of Sickneſs, and when they are expoſed to any apparent Dangers.

III. THE Days appointed for Penance commence on the firſt of the Month Elul, and hold till the Day of Expiation; but it is more cuſtomarily obſerved from their New-Year's-Day to the Day of Expiation aforeſaid. All Times are equally proper for ſuch whoſe Minds are uneaſy, and their Conſciences accuſe them. Such as have not a ſufficient Capacity to diſcharge this Duty aright of themſelves, conſult ſome Rabbi, and beg his Aſſiſtance; or if they have Underſtanding enough, they apply to Treatiſes written upon the Subject of Penance, and there they are inform'd what Penance is moſt proper for their peculiar Sins, whether Abſtinence, Faſting, Scourgings, Benefactions to the Poor, Prayers, or Good Works, to make an Attonement, as far as they are able, for the Sins which they have from Time to Time committed.

[a] Confeſſion.
[b] Part III. Chap. vi.

CHAP. VII.

Concerning their Sickneſs and their Death.

I. THEY look upon it as a very laudable Action, and a bounden Duty to viſit the Sick, and to aſſiſt them in the Time of their Diſtreſs.

II. WHEN any one is apprehenſive that his Life is in apparent Danger, he ſends for about ten Perſons, more or leſs, as he thinks moſt convenient, one of whom at leaſt muſt be a Rabbi; and then in a ſolemn Manner repeats the general Confeſſion which I have juſt now mentioned in their Preſence; and then makes a Prayer, in which he humbly begs of God, if it be his bleſſed Will, to reſtore him to his former State of Health; or, if not granted, he then recommends his Soul to him, and prays that his Death may be accepted as an Expiation for his Sins. If his Conſcience is over-charged with any Sin, or he has any Secret which he would willingly reveal, he declares it to the Rabbi. After all this he begs Pardon of God,' and of all ſuch as he has at any Time offended, and forgives likewiſe all ſuch as have offended him, and even his moſt inveterate Enemies. In Caſe he has any Children, or Domeſticks, he calls them to his Bed-ſide, and gives them his Benediction; and if his own Father or Mother be preſent, he receives their Bleſſing. If he has an Inclination to make his Will, and to diſpoſe of that worldly Eſtate with which God has been pleaſed to bleſs him, he has free Liberty to execute it in ſuch Manner as he himſelf thinks moſt convenient.

III. THERE are ſome who take care to have a publick Prayer put up for them in the Synagogue, and change their Name, as an Indication of their Change of Life. At ſuch Times they promiſe and beſtow their Charity to the Synagogues as well as to the Poor.

IV. WHEN the Perſon who is ſick is in Danger of Death, or juſt expiring, they never leave him alone, but watch with him Day and Night: For to be preſent at the Separation of the Soul from the Body, eſpecially if the Perſon be a learned or pious Man, in their Opinion, is not only a laudable but a meritorious Action: For it is written in the forty ninth Pſalm, ver. 10. That he ſhould not ſee the Grave, &c. The Perſon who is preſent when the ſick Man gives up the Ghoſt, according to the ancient Cuſtom, tears ſome Part or other of his Garments.

V. THERE are ſome of them, who at ſuch a Time will throw into the Street all the Water which they have in the Houſe, or can find in the Neighbourhood. This is accounted an ancient Cuſtom, denoting that ſomebody lies dead not far from the Place.

CHAP. VIII.

Concerning the Dead, and their Funerals.

I. AS ſoon as any one is dead, his Body is laid upon the Ground in a Sheet, his Face is cover'd, and a lighted Taper is ſet by his Head.

II. A PAIR of Linnen Drawers is immediately provided, and ſome Women ſent for to ſew them; who for the moſt part perform this friendly Office out of Charity and good Will: After this, the Corpſe is thoroughly waſhed with warm Water, in which Camomile and dried Roſes have been boiled. In the next Place, a Shirt and Drawers are put on, and over them ſome put a kind of Surplice of fine Linnen, a Taled or ſquare Cloak, with with the Strings which hang at the Corner of it, and a white Cap on his Head. Thus dreſſed, he is laid in a Coffin made on Purpoſe, with one Linnen Cloth under, and another over him. If the Party deceaſed be a Perſon of any conſiderable Faſhion, his Coffin is made in ſome Places with a piked Top; and if a Rabbi, a conſiderable Number of Books is laid upon it. Then the Coffin is covered with black, [a] and carried out of the Houſe.

III. THEN all the People croud round about it; and ſince the Attendance on a Corpſe, and the Conveyance of it to the Grave is look'd upon as a very meritorious Action amongſt them, they all carry it upon their Shoulders by Turns ſome Part of the Way. In ſome Places the Mourners follow the Corpſe with lighted Flambeaux in their Hands, ſinging ſome melancholy Anthem as they march along. In others this Ceremony is omitted; the Relations, however, who are in Mourning, accompany the Corpſe in Tears to the Grave.

IV. AFTER this ſolemn Manner the Dead are carried to the Burial-Place, which is moſt commonly a Field ſet a-part for that Purpoſe, called Beth Hachaim, or Houſe of the Living, the Dead being look'd upon as Living, on Account of their immortal Souls. When the Deceaſed is laid in his Grave, in caſe he was a Perſon of any extraordinary Merit, there is a proper Perſon preſent who makes his Funeral Oration. As ſoon as this Eulogium is over, they repeat the Prayer called Ridduc Addin, the Juſtice of the Judgment, which begins with theſe Words of Deuteronomy, Chap. xxxii. ver. 4. He is the Rock, his Work is perfect; for all his Ways are Judgment, &c.

V. A SMALL Bag of Earth is depoſited under his Head, the Coffin is nailed up, and convey'd to a Grave dug on Purpoſe, as near the Place as conveniently may be, where the Family of the deceaſed are interred. In ſome Countries, when a Coffin is brought within a ſhort Space of the Grave, ten Men go in a ſolemn Manner ſeven Times round it, repeating a Prayer for his Soul; but in other Parts this Ceremony is not obſerved. The neareſt Relation rends ſome little Part of his Garments, and then the Corpſe is put into the Grave, and covered with Earth, and each Friend throws in a Handful upon the Corpſe till the Grave is filled up.

VI. [b] THE Jews account it a Sin, either in Man or Woman, to tear their Fleſh, or their Hair on this melancholy Occaſion, either when they weep over the Deceaſed, or at any Time afterwards; for in Deuteronomy Chap. xiv. it is written, Ye ſhall not cut yourſelves, &c.

VII. AT their Departure from the Grave, every one tears up two or three Handfuls of Graſs, and throws it behind him, repeating at the ſame Time theſe Words of the ſeventy ſecond Pſalm, , ver. 6. They of the City ſhall flouriſh like the Graſs of the Earth. This they do by way of acknowledgment of the Reſurrection. Then they waſh their Hands, ſit down, and riſe again nine Times ſucceſſively, repeating the ninety firſt Pſalm, He that dwelleth in the ſecret Place of the moſt High. After this they return to their reſpective Places of Abode. Theſe are the uſual Ceremonies of the Jews at their Funerals; and if there be any Variation, it is only in a few trivial Particulars.

[a] This Cuſtom, as well as many others which our Rabbi takes Notice of, are uſed in ſome particular Places only. And the Jews obſerve even ſome of the Cuſtoms of the Places wherein they live.

[b] This is not in the firſt Edition.

CHAP.

CHAP. IX.

Concerning their Mourning, their Prayers, and Commemoration of the Dead.

I. WHEN the neareſt Relations of the Party deceaſed are return'd home from the Burial, be they Father, Mother, Child, Husband, Wife, Brother, or Siſter, they directly ſeat themſelves on the Ground; and having pulled off their Shoes, refreſh themſelves with Bread, Wine, and hard Eggs, which are immediately brought before them; according as it is written in the thirty firſt of Proverbs, ver. 6. Give ſtrong Drink unto him that is ready to periſh, and Wine to thoſe that be of heavy Heart, &c. He whoſe uſual Place it is to crave a Bleſſing on their Meals, introduces a proper Word or two of Conſolation. In the Levant, and in ſeveral other Places, the Friends of the Deceaſed frequently ſend in Proviſions for ſeven Days ſucceſſively, Morning and Night, to ſome of his neareſt Relations, for the ſumptuous Entertainment of ſuch Gueſts as they think proper to invite; and on a Day appointed for that Purpoſe, they themſelves partake of the Feaſt, and condole with them.

II. WHEN the dead Body is convey'd away from the Houſe, his Coverlid is folded double, his Blankets are rolled up, and laid upon a Matt; afterwards a Lamp is lighted up at the Bed's Head, which burns for a Week without any Intermiſſion.

III. SUCH as are ſo nearly related to the Deceaſed as I have abovementioned, reſide in the Houſe for a Week together, and during all that Time ſit and eat upon the Ground, except on the Sabbath-Day, on which they go with a ſelect Company of their Friends and Acquaintance to the Synagogue, where they are more generally condol'd with, than at any other Place. During theſe ſeven Days, they are not allowed to do any Manner of Buſineſs; neither can the Husband lie with his Wife, and ten Perſons at leaſt go every Night and Morning to pray with them under their Confinement. Some add to their Devotions on this ſolemn Occaſion the forty ninth Pſalm, Hear this all ye People, &c. and afterwards pray for the Soul of their deceaſed Friend.

IV. THEY dreſs themſelves in ſuch Mourning as is the Faſhion of the Country in which they live, there being no divine Direction relating thereunto.

V. AFTER the Expiration of the ſeven Days, they leave the Houſe, and go to the Synagogue, where ſeveral of them order Lamps to be lighted, procure Prayers to be ſaid, and promiſe their charitable Contributions for the Soul of the Deceaſed. This Ceremony is repeated at the Cloſe of each Month, and likewiſe of the Year: And if the Perſon who is dead be a Rabbi, or a Man of Worth and Diſtinction, they make his Eſped upon thoſe Days, that is, a Funeral Harangue in Commendation of his Virtues.

VI. A SON for the Generality goes daily to the Synagogue, Morning and Night, and there repeats the Prayer called [a] Cadiſh, for the Soul of his Father or Mother, eleven Months ſucceſſively; and ſome of them faſt annually on the Day of their reſpective Deaths.

VII. IN ſome Places they ſet a Monument over the Grave, and cut the Name of the Deceaſed upon it; as alſo the Day, Month, and Year of his Deceaſe, and a Line or two, by Way of Encomium.

[a] Holy.

CHAP. X.

Concerning Paradiſe, Hell, and Purgatory.

I. SINCE the Reader has been already inform'd that the Jews pray for the Souls of their deceaſed Friends, I think my ſelf obliged to give him ſome Reaſon for that Practice. They are of Opinion that there is a Paradiſe, which they call [a] Gan Heden, and that ſuch Souls as are in that happy State enjoy the beatific Viſion. As for Hell, which they call [b] Ghehinnam, they imagine that the Souls of ſuch as are wicked are burnt there in raging Flames, and endure other inconceivable Torments: That ſome of them have no hopes of Mercy, and ſuffer thoſe Pains for ever and ever; whilſt others, however, are doom'd only to remain there for a certain Term. This they call Purgatory, which, as to the Place, is the ſame as Hell, and only differs from it in the ſhorter Duration of its Torments.

II. [c] THEY believe, that all ſuch Jews as are not Hereticks, and have not offended againſt the Commandments of the Rabbi's, are diſcharged from Purgatory within a Year at fartheſt; and theſe they imagine make up the greateſt Number. For there are very few, according to their Notion, who remain in Hell on Account of their Sins for ever and ever.

CHAP. XI.

Concerning the Metempſychoſis, or Tranſmigration of Souls; and likewiſe concerning the Reſurrection, and the laſt Day of Judgment.

I. SOME Jews are of Opinion with Pythagoras, that Souls tranſmigrate from one Body to another, which they call [d] Ghilgal, and produce ſeveral Paſſages of Scripture, principally extracted from Eccleſiaſtes and Job, for the Confirmation of it. But this Doctrine is not for the Generality received; neither is a Man look'd upon as a Heretick, whether he believes it, or thinks it idle and romantic.

II. THEY acknowledge the Reſurrection of the Dead; and it is one of the thirteen Articles of their Creed, firmly to believe that the Dead ſhall riſe again at the laſt Day; and that God will at that Time pronounce an univerſal Judgment on all Mankind, both in Body and Soul, according as it is written in Daniel: [e] And many of them that ſleep in the Duſt of the Earth ſhall awake, ſome to everlaſting Life, and ſome to Shame and everlaſting Contempt.

[a] Garden of Pleaſure.

[b] It is thus pronounced in the Chaldee; but in the Hebrew, Gehinnom. It is the Valley of the Children of Hinnom, ſo famous in the Bible; from thence came the Word Gehenna.

[c] This was left out in the ſecond Edition.

[d] Revolution. As if the Souls were perpetually revolving from one Body to another.

[e] Daniel xii. 2.

CHAP. XII.

Concerning the thirteen Articles of their Belief.

SINCE [a] I have already given the Reader an Account of the Ceremonies and religious Cuſtoms of the preſent Jews, I think I have nothing more to do, than in this laſt Chapter, to tranſcribe the thirteen Articles of their Creed, which contain all that they believe, according to what Rabbi Moſes [b] the Egyptian has ſaid of it, in his Commentaries on the Miſna, in the Diſcourſe Sanedrin, Chap. Helec, which the Jews have receiv'd without any Oppoſition.

I. THAT there is One God, the Creator of all Things, and firſt Principle of all Beings, who is Self-ſufficient and independent, and without whom no created Being can ſubſiſt.

II. THAT God is One, and indiviſible; but of an Unity peculiar to it ſelf alone.

III. THAT God is an incorporeal Being, and that he has no bodily Quality of any Kind whatever, which either is poſſible, or can any ways be imagin'd.

IV. THAT God is eternal, and that all Beings except himſelf had once a Beginning.

V. THAT none but God is the Object of divine Adoration; and that no created Being ought to be worſhipped as a Mediator or Interceſſor.

VI. THAT there have been, and ſtill may be Prophets duly qualified to receive the Inſpirations of the ſupreme Being.

VII. THAT Moſes was a Prophet ſuperior to all others; and that God Almighty honour'd him with a peculiar Gift of Prophecy which was never granted to any of the reſt.

VIII. THAT the Law left them by Moſes was the pure Dictates of God himſelf, and that nothing therein contain'd relates in the leaſt to Moſes, and by Conſequence the Explication of thoſe Commandments, which were handed down to them by Tradition, came entirely from the Mouth of God, who delivered it to Moſes.

IX. THAT this Law is unchangeable, nor [c] can there be the leaſt Addition to, or Diminution from it.

X. THAT God perfectly knows, and governs all the Actions of Mankind.

XI. THAT God rewards thoſe who obſerve his Law, and ſeverely puniſhes ſuch as are guilty of the leaſt Violation of it; that eternal Life is the beſt and greateſt Reward, and the Damnation of the Soul the moſt ſevere Puniſhment.

XII. THAT a Meſſiah ſhould come, more deſerving than all the Kings that have ever lived; that altho' he thinks proper to delay his Coming, no one ought on that Account to queſtion the Truth of it, or ſet an appointed Time for it, much leſs produce Scripture for the Proof of it, ſince Iſrael will never have any King to rule over it, but one that ſhall be of the Line of David and Solomon.

XIII. THAT God ſhall raiſe the Dead, as we have already obſerv'd. Theſe are their Fundamental Articles, and thus I conclude my Diſſertation on their Practice and Belief.

[a] This whole Chapter was left out in the ſecond Edition.

[b] This is the ſame Perſon who is called, Maimonides, or Rambam; that is, Rabbi Moſes Ben Maimon, who was the moſt learned and leaſt ſuperſtitious of all the Jews.

[c] See the Supplement where this pretended Immutability of the Law is diſcours'd of, which the Jews generally oppoſe to the Chriſtians.

The END of the FIFTH PART.

A SECOND

DISSERTATION

ON THE

CEREMONIES of the JEWS.

In which thoſe CEREMONIES, and the DISCIPLINE

OF THE

CHRISTIAN CHURCH

are compar'd together.

Intended as a SUPPLEMENT to the firſt DISSERTATION.

By F. SIMON.

A SECOND

DISSERTATION

ON THE

CEREMONIES of the JEWS.

CHAP. I.

An ENQUIRY into the firſt Principle of Religion wherein both Jews and Chriſtians agree.

BOTH Jews and Chriſtians agree in this Particular, that each of their Religions are grounded as well upon the Word of God as upon Tradition. We may ſay, at the ſame Time, that both of them acknowledge but one Fundamental Article of Belief, which they call Revelation, or the Word of God revealed unto Mankind. For be this Word written or not, it is ſtill the ſame, if it be certain that it comes from God. For which Reaſon, the Jews never ſcruple to put their Traditions in Competition with the Law of Moſes; nay, they inſiſt, that the written Law, if once ſeparated from the Oral Law, or Tradition, would be no more than a Lamp without Light, or a Body without a Soul. They are obliged to believe under Pain of Excommunication, that God dictated to Moſes every Syllable which is contained in the Pentateuch; and farther, that he delivered to him likewiſe on Mount Sinaï, the Explication of that Law which was preſerved amongſt them, as they pretend, without Interruption from his Time, till at laſt they were under an indiſpenſable Obligation to ſet it down in Writing. [a] Moſes, writ ſeveral Copies of the Law before his Death with his own Hand, and gave one to every

[a] Ramban in his Preface to the Treatiſe Jad. Hazeha.

Tribe; and one in particular which he put into the Ark. Afterwards he communicated, Vivâ Voce, the Expoſition of the ſaid Law to the Sanhedrim of his Time. Joſhua likewiſe after Moſes's Death, taught that Expoſition which was receiv'd immediately from God to the Elders in his Days; and his Succeſſors did the ſame to others; ſo that if what the Jews ſay be taken for granted, their Religion is to this Day in its native Purity. But tho' their Principle relating to Traditions may be true in general, yet it is no difficult Task to demonſtrate the Falſhood of it, by examining into each Particular; for not only the Prophets, and our Saviour have condemned ſeveral of their Traditions; but their own Doctors likewiſe have diſagreed about the true Succeſſors, who have preſerved thoſe Traditions, and of which we have ſeveral Catalogues made by ſeveral Authors. This alone may juſtly create a Jealouſy, and make them leſs worthy our Notice and Regard.

It muſt be acknowledged however, that for the Preſervation of a Religion in its Purity, it is abſolutely neceſſary to admit of this Principle of Tradition in general, as the Author of the Diſcourſe intitled Cozri, has made appear by ſeveral undeniable Arguments, which plainly demonſtrate that the various Opinions of Philoſophers and Heretics relating to Religion proceed from the Inſtability of their Principles, they not being founded on any conſtant Tradition. As to thoſe Jewiſh Traditions which our Saviour rejected, his Intention was only to aboliſh ſome falſe ones, which the Rabbiniſts had added to the old; and when this our bleſſed Maſter refers us to the written Law, Scrutamini Scripturas, we muſt not ſuppoſe that his Aim was to refer us to the bare Text of Scripture, but to that Text as interpreted by the Doctors, who were the Succeſſors of Moſes. [a] They ſit, ſays he, ſpeaking of thoſe Doctors, in Moſes's Seat; all therefore whatſoever they bid you obſerve, that obſerve and do; and this in Conformity to the Words of the Law. [b] If there ariſe a Matter too hard for thee in Judgment, thou ſhalt come unto the Prieſts, the Levites, and unto the Judge that ſhall be in thoſe Days. And if we diligently examine the Teſtimonies brought by the Apoſtles from the Old Teſtament to confirm their Doctrine, it will plainly appear, that they quoted them in no other Senſe than that which was generally receiv'd in their Time. St. Irenæus, Tertullian, and the reſt of the Primitive Fathers of the Church, referred to that very Tradition in their learned Diſputations and Debates with Heretics, and to the Epiſcopal Succeſſion in the moſt celebrated Churches, and particularly to that of Rome, which they own was eſtabliſh'd by thoſe great Apoſtles St. Peter and St. Paul. And ſeveral we ſee, who were preſent at the Council of Trent, for this Reaſon never ſcrupled to make the old Traditions as authentic as the Holy Scripture, and regard them as Revelation. [c] Tanto le Tradizioni quanto le Scritture ſon Parole di Dio e primi Principii della Fede, con accidental Differenza trá loro, che quelle rimaneſſero Scritte ancora ne' Libri, e queſte ſolamente ne' Cuori. This Manner of Expreſſion is exactly conformable to that of the Jews when they ſpeak of their Traditions; and Tertullian formerly aſſerted that the Sacred Scripture was the ſole Right and Property of the Catholic Church: Scriptura Sacra Eccleſiæ Catholicæ Poſſeſſio eſt propria: And the Jews inſiſt, that the Synagogue is the ſole Miſtreſs of thoſe Holy Writings, and that other Nations have the Letter only, and not the Spirit of them. But to confeſs the Truth, there is ſuch a Number of Traditions at preſent amongſt the Jews, that the whole Life of Moſes would have been too ſhort to have taken them from God on Mount Sinaï, where they imagine he took them in the Compaſs of forty Days which he paſſed on the Mount. This is not ſo much the Fault of Tradition, conſider'd in itſelf, as of thoſe with whom it has been entruſted: We muſt therefore look upon this favourite Maxim of the Jews, Halakah le Moſce mi

[a] Matt. xxiii. 2.
[b] Deut. xvii.
[c] Palavic. Hiſt. of the Council of Trent, Chap. xiv.

Sinaï,

Sinai, It is a Deciſion received by Moſes on Mount Sinai, to be no more infallible, than this other Principle which our own Divines are ſo fond of, This is an Apoſtolical Tradition; ſince it is demonſtrable, that both the one and the other are fallible; and that even in the firſt Ages of Chriſtianity, there were ſome learned Men who have conferr'd the pompous Title of Apoſtolical Traditions on ſome Tenets which were Heterodox and of their own Invention. Wherever the Jews can demonſtrate that any Precept has been received among them without Variation from Moſes's Time, no one without Prejudice and Partiality will diſpute the Truth of that Tradition. [a] Vincentius Lirinenſis would have the Catholicks regulate their Faith by the ſame Maxim; for he propoſes that ſuch Things as have been receiv'd in all Places, at all Times, and by all Mankind ſhould be admitted as Articles of their Belief: Id teneamus quod, ubique, quod ſemper, quod ab omnibus creditum eſt. For which Reaſon, the Fathers of the Council of Trent have recommended to us ſuch Traditions only as infallible, which we have directly receiv'd from our Bleſſed Saviour by his Apoſtles, [b] or from thoſe Apoſtles to whom the Holy Spirit had revealed them, and which were tranſmitted to us without any Diſcontinuance.

In ſhort, the Jews notwithſtanding their extraordinary Zeal for theſe Traditions, which they pretend have been tranſmitted to them by their Forefathers, and their Support of them with that Obſtinacy, as to imagine that 'tis their Right and Duty to kill ſuch as oppoſe them; yet they could never determine to their own Satisfaction, who thoſe Authors were by whom they were tranſmitted; which very plainly appears by a Compariſon of ſuch Treatiſes as have been publiſh'd upon this Subject: As for Example, the Commentaries made on that, intitled, [c] Pirke Avoth, the Chapters of the Fathers. Iſaac Abrabanel has uſed his utmoſt Endeavours, indeed, to juſtify this Tradition, which they pretend to be uninterrupted, but fail'd in the Attempt. His Controverſy was with Rabbi Moſes, who had written a Treatiſe relating to ſuch as were to be join'd together. Neither R. Joſeph Hajon, R. David Ganz, the Author of Juhaſin, or the Book of Genealogies, nor thoſe other Jews who have diſputed on this Queſtion, agree amongſt themſelves: So that in order to preſerve their Connection, moſt of them are obliged to maintain that ſome of their Rabbi's lived for ſeveral Ages, the better to cement the broken Links of the Chain of their Succeſſion. The Jews in this Particular have had one Advantage above other Nations, nay, above the Greeks themſelves; for herein they have fearleſs and undaunted impoſed upon the whole World. Their Treatiſes are full of romantic Tales; and that there ſhould be any Chriſtians now-a-days who ſhould give Credit to their Dreams and idle Chimæra's, particularly with Regard to their Traditions, is very wonderful and ſurpriſing. They generally agree in this, however, that from Joſhua, who ſucceeded Moſes, till R. Juda, ſirnamed the Saint, who firſt made a Collection of all their Traditions, and wrote them down, there was firſt an Aſſembly or Set of Elders, who received the Expoſition of the Law from Joſhua; that the Prophets ſucceeded this antient Body, the firſt of whom was Samuel, and that the grand Aſſembly or Synagogue held under Eſdras, and partly compoſed of Prophets, ſucceeded them. [d] R. Moſes de Cotſi, a learned Jew, in order to make this Chain of Tradition compleat, and at the ſame Time to demonſtrate that it continued uninterrupted during the Captivity of the Jews at Babylon, introduces ſome illuſtrious Perſons who were of the Tribes of Juda and Benjamin, and carried Captives to Babylon; nay, he aſſures us, that theſe very Captives founded there the celebrated Academy of Nahardea on the Euphrates; which with their Traditions were afterwards preſerved, and the latter taught to ſuch as returned with Zerobabel and Eſdras from Babylon to Jeruſalem, where an Academy was erected in Imitation of that at Nahardea, which ſtill ſubſiſted, becauſe all the Jews did not return to Jeruſalem. To conclude, theſe their Traditions were tranſmitted down from Eſdras, who

[a] Vincent. Lir. adv. Hær. c. 3.
[b] Concil. Trid. Seſſ. 4.
[c] Abrav. in his Preface on Nahalot Avoth.
[d] R. Moſes de Cotſi in his large Treatiſe on the Precepts of the Law.

was

was the Leader of the Aſſembly, which is generally called the Great, till the Time of this R. Juda, of whom we have already ſpoken, who made a Collection of them towards the Cloſe of the ſecond Century, under the Empire of Commodus, or, as ſome ſay, under Antoninus Pius. For my Part, I cannot ſee any Reaſon why we ſhould believe the Jews in the following Particular, more than in many others, viz. That their Tradition, as they pretend, during all that Time received no Variation; unleſs they ſhould produce ſome authentic Records to ſupport that Aſſertion.

CHAP. II.

Concerning the Theology of the Jews, with ſuitable Reflections thereupon.

THE whole Jewiſh Creed is compriſed in thirteen Articles, called by them the Fundamental Principles of their Religion; and in this they follow R. Moſes, Son of Maimon, who digeſted theſe Principles into Order; the firſt of which relates to the Exiſtence of the ſupreme Being; the ſecond to his Unity; the third to his Spirituality, and the abſolute Impoſſibility of his being Corporeal; the fourth to his Eternity, a Perfection peculiar to himſelf alone; the fifth to the Service and Adoration due to him alone; the ſixth to Prophecy, viz. that there have been Prophets and may be more amongſt the Hebrews; the ſeventh to the peculiar Prophecy of Moſes, which was above the Degree of Prophecy communicated to the reſt of the Prophets. The eighth abſolutely determines that the Law of Moſes came not from himſelf, but that God was the ſole Author of it; and was graciouſly pleaſed likewiſe afterwards to expound it. The ninth ſpecifies, that this Law is immutable, and that no Perſon whatever is permitted to add to, or diminiſh it. The tenth eſtabliſhes God's Providence, and his peculiar Regard and Affection for all his Creatures. The eleventh implies, that God will be the ſure Rewarder of all thoſe who obſerve the Precepts of the Law, and the ſevere Puniſher of all thoſe who dare to tranſgreſs it. The twelfth ſpecifies, that the Meſſiah will come, and that altho' the Time thereof may be prolong'd, and muſt not be determin'd, it ought however to be depended on as abſolutely certain. The thirteenth and laſt relates to the Reſurrection of the Dead. Theſe thirteen fundamental Principles of the Jewiſh Religion diſtinguiſh them from all other Nations, as the ſole Favourites of the Almighty, and his true Children, to whom he promiſed the Inheritance; and for this Reaſon they account all ſuch as deny theſe Principles, abominably wicked, and deſerving Death itſelf. The Jews therefore would doubtleſs be much to be feared even at this Day, were they inveſted with Power; for although they outwardly acknowledge that the Chriſtians are not to be look'd upon as abominably wicked, ſince they believe the Unity of the divine Being as well as the Jews; yet the Chriſtians in their Opinion are perfect Idolaters, becauſe they maintain the Doctrine of the Trinity, and thereby multiply, as they think, the Godhead, by a Multiplication of its Perſons. Notwithſtanding the Jews for the Generality embrace the Opinion of Rabbi Moſes, relating to theſe thirteen fundamental Principles of their Religion, yet there are ſome of their Doctors, and amongſt other [a] R. Haſdai, R. Joſeph Albo, and Don Iſaac Abrabanel, who do not follow it in every Particular. Their Scruples are worthy our Notice, as they may contribute very conſiderably towards the clearing up of the Chriſtian Religion. In the firſt Place then, they ſay, that it is no eaſy Matter to underſtand that Article aright, which eſtabliſhes the Adoration of one God only; and at the ſame Time prohibits all Addreſſes to any other, either by Way of Mediation or

[a] R. Haſdai in the Treatiſe Or Adonai. R. Joſ. Albo in the Treatiſe Ikkarim. R. Abrabanel in the Treatiſe Roſamena.

or Interceſſion; ſince the Jews in their Neceſſities make their ſolemn Applications to the Angels.

SECONDLY, the Article relating to the Immutability of the Law ſeems repugnant to that which God himſelf has practiſed from the Beginning of the World, he having at firſt preſcrib'd peculiar Laws, and prohibited the eating of any Fleſh. Afterwards he gave quite other Commandments to Noah; then he ordered Abraham to be circumciſed; and laſtly, Moſes received from God ſeveral other Commandments. From whence it ſeems unreaſonable to aſſert, that there ſhould be but one Law only, and that not ſubject to the leaſt Variation. Neither can it be alledg'd, that there can be no Addition to, or Diminution of it; ſince it is evident, that Solomon and others after him added many Things to it; but this Prohibition relates only to particular Perſons, who upon their own private Authority can neither add to the Law, or take one Tittle or Jota from it.

THIRDLY, the Article relating to the coming of the Meſſiah does not appear to be fundamental, for R. Hillel maintained, that the Jews ought to live no longer in Expectation of their Meſſiah, becauſe he came according to his Sentiments in the Days of Hezekiah. This Doctor, however, was not the leſs a Member of the Jewiſh Communion on that Account.

FOURTHLY, there are many other Things which ſeem to deſerve a Place among the fundamental Articles of the Jewiſh Belief; ſuch as God's various Attributes, which R. Moſes has omitted, where he treats of the Grounds and Principles of Religion; and moreover, the World's Creation, Man's Free-will, his Belief of ſuch Miracles as are comprehended in the Law; the Soul's Immortality, Prayers, the Uſefulneſs of Penance, and ſeveral other Points which the Jews are under an indiſpenſable Obligation to believe; from whence it is evident, that there are many more Articles of their Belief which R. Moſes hath omitted. It muſt be confeſs'd, however, that the ſame Rabbi doth ſpeak of other Articles in another Place. But his Intention in all Probability was to take Notice of the principal and fundamental Articles only; and Abrabanel has endeavoured to juſtify him much after this Manner.

IT will be proper here to ſhew the ſeveral Methods which the Jews have at ſeveral Times practiſed for the Explication of their Theology. The antient Jews for the Generality have had Recourſe to Fables and Alluſions, with which they have ſo embelliſh'd their Books, that there is a kind of Mythology amongſt them as well as amongſt the Pagans; and their having ſeveral Conſtitutions, which prohibit the reading of the Philoſophers and other prophane Authors, has contributed very much, in my Opinion, to the Ignorance of the antient Jews. Some of them, however, have applied to the Platonic Philoſophy, in which they have blended their own idle Chimæra's, from whence their Cabaliſtic Learning principally proceeded. We muſt likewiſe aſcribe ſeveral of thoſe Ways of Expreſſion which frequently occur in their old allegorical Writings, and are much the ſame with thoſe the Chriſtians make uſe of to explain the Myſtery of the Trinity, to this Study of the Platonic Philoſophy.

BUT after the Arabians had ſpread the Philoſophy, but more particularly the Logic and Metaphyſics of Ariſtotle into ſeveral Provinces, ſome of the Jews, who were not ſo very ſcrupulous, applied themſelves cloſe to thoſe Studies; and at the ſame Time tranſlated this Philoſopher's Works out of Arabic into the Hebrew of the Rabbi's. From that Time the Theology of the Jews ſeems perfectly chang'd, at leaſt their manner of explaining it, which created ſuch great Diſorders amongſt them, that ſuch as had applied themſelves to the reading of the antient Books, and the Traditions of their Fathers, were highly offended to ſee their Theology over-run with Metaphyſics, and their Authority ſub-mit to Reaſon. When R. Moſes publiſhed his Book, entitled Moreh Nevokin, ſome of their other Doctors accuſed him with having corrupted their Religion, by introducing too much Philoſophy into it, as the Letters of the chief Rabbi's of thoſe Times, and thoſe of R. Moſes himſelf too plainly demonſtrate. The Jews, however, have gradually accuſtomed themſelves to theſe kinds of Subtilties, and at laſt approved the Writings of that Rabbi. It is certain, with reſpect to the other Articles of the Jewiſh Belief, that they not only reverence Angels as we do, but pretend to be well acquainted with their Names and diſtinct Employments. Thoſe Names, however, were for the moſt part invented by their Cabaliſtic Divines, who gave them ſuch diſtinct Titles as ſuited beſt with the Effects which they were thought to be the Cauſe of; we ought therefore to diſtinguiſh what they believe from what they do not, concerning Angels. [a] They believe, that all Things here below are ſubſervient to the Powers above, and that every Kingdom is dependent on ſome Angel or other, reſerving only the Hebrews, who directly rely upon God, and want not the Aſſiſtance of a Mediator. The fifth Article of their Belief is underſtood in this Senſe, according to R. Moſes, in his Expoſition whereof he ſays, that no Power but God alone is to be the Object of our Adoration, or reverenc'd as a Mediator or an Interceſſor.

WHAT the Jewiſh Doctors ſay in their Writings relating to Angels, is not always to be taken in the literal Senſe, it being little elſe but Allegories and Fables invented at Pleaſure by ſuch People as made a wrong Uſe of their vacant Hours, and of the eaſy Credulity of the illiterate Vulgar; not to mention the Introduction of their Names for the Solution of ſome Difficulty or other, as the antient Poets brought in their Gods on the like Occaſions. Theſe very Doctors were the Projectors of the Cabaliſtic Art, which is a chimerical Science, without the leaſt Foundation: And therefore ſuch Jews as apply themſelves to it are for the moſt part Enthuſiaſts, and ſo poſſeſſed with their own divine Fancies, as to imagine that by the Aſſiſtance of this Art they are able to work Miracles at their Pleaſure.

THEIR Cabala is divided into ſpeculative and practical. This laſt they make uſe of for the Operation of their imaginary Miracles, which they accompliſh by the Pronunciation of ſome particular Names of God, and of Angels, or ſome Verſes out of the Pſalms, applicable to their Purpoſe. The Jews, particularly thoſe of Poland, and ſome other Places in the North, are in this reſpect ſo ſuperſtitious, that in caſe any of them are accidentally condemned to Death, they have Recourſe to this practical Cabala; but we do not find it has prov'd of any great Advantage to them, except in the hiſtorical Diſſertations which they have publiſhed relating to the Miracles performed by it; nay, ſometimes it unluckily falls out, that their Judges, being ignorant of the Vanity of that Science, paſs Sentence on them, and puniſh them as Conjurors. In Reality, the idle Reſults of Magic, which we find in Agrippa, and ſome other modern Authors, who have been look'd upon as celebrated Magicians, are generally extracted from the Jewiſh Cabala, to which other fabulous Amuſements have been added, the better to impoſe upon and delude the unthinking Vulgar.

FOR the better Explication of the Jewiſh Belief relating to the Adoration of Angels, to whom they pretend no Supplications ought to be made, either as Mediators or Interceſſors, it is requiſite to obſerve, that this does not ſeem intirely conſiſtent with their own Writings; in which we find ſeveral Prayers directed to Angels, to implore their Aid and Aſſiſtance. Joſhua bowed down to an Angel, and the Jews themſelves acknowledge St. Michael as their Leader and Patron; nay, they are ſo accuſtom'd to attribute all Things to their Angels, particularly when they talk in the Style of the Cabaliſtic Doctors, that they own them as the Authors of moſt of their Actions. There were none but the Sad-

[a] R. Abrabanel Roſamana.

ducees

ducees that denied the Exiſtence of Angels, as if what Moſes had ſaid of them was all an Allegory : But our bleſſed Saviour himſelf has condemned this Sect, and approved of the general Belief of the Jews, relating to the Exiſtence of Angels, which was afterwards confirmed by the Apoſtles, and receiv'd by the whole Church.

In ſhort, the Jews believe alſo that there is a Hell, a Purgatory, and a Paradiſe : And tho' it be difficult to prove theſe three Articles of their Belief by any formal Quotations from the Law of Moſes, yet no one will preſume to deny them. It is of no great Importance whether their Purgatory be a ſeparate State, rather than a ſeparate Place from that of Hell, as the Chriſtians in the Levant diſtinguiſh it ; it is ſufficient for them to acknowledge that there is a Paradiſe, where the Souls of the Righteous are perfectly happy, and a Hell, where the Souls of the Wicked are miſerably tormented in unquenchable Fire, and other inconceivable Puniſhments ; and that ſome are conſign'd to thoſe dreadful Torments for ever and ever, and others only for a certain Seaſon. But I cannot conceive what ſhould induce the Rabbi's to imagine, that thoſe Jews who are not Heretics, or have not offended againſt ſome principal Point of the Law, remain in Purgatory but one Year only. For thus they not only attone for all trivial Offences in Purgatory, but flagrant Crimes too, for which they are doubtleſs detained a much longer Time ; this the Jews account as their peculiar Privilege ; for being (as they ſay) the true Children of God, it is for their Sakes in particular that he has made another World, out of which all other Nations are excluded by them, except ſuch as acknowledge the Unity of a God, and ſome other Fundamental Articles contain'd in their Writings : For we muſt not ſuppoſe that the Jews are ſo rigid, as abſolutely to damn all other Nations who will not embrace their Law. This general Harmony in Religion throughout the World was reſerv'd for the Time of the Meſſiah, and in this they entirely agree with us.

It would be needleſs to make any Reflections here upon the Affinity which there is between the Belief of the Jews, and that of the Chriſtians, relating to moſt of the Articles already mention'd : For doubtleſs the Chriſtian Religion took its Riſe from that of the Jews, which muſt be accounted its Baſis and Foundation : And St. Auſtin ſays, that in Reality they are but one and the ſame Religion. For which Reaſon our bleſſed Saviour aſſures us, that he did not come to deſtroy the Religion of the Jews, but to compleat and perfect it ; and what is ſtill more remarkable, is, that he has left no Writings behind him for the Confirmation of his new Law, but what ſtill adds a greater Luſtre and Beauty to the old One. The moſt learned Jews themſelves agree with us in this, that the Meſſiah will add new and more ſhining Perfections to the Law of Moſes.

CHAP. III.

Concerning the Morality of the Jews, compared with that of the Chriſtians.

THE Jews have no other Foundation of their Morality than that of the Decalogue, and the Chriſtians are indebted to them for it. The Love of God, before all other created Beings, is recommeded to them by their Doctors as ſtrenuouſly as it is to us, with this Reſtriction, that moſt of their Remarks have ſomething peculiar in them, and are very affected, or rather ſuperſtitious, which is no Defect however in their Law, but is entirely to be attributed to their Doctors.

We do Injuſtice to the Jews, in my Opinion, when we aſſert, that they acknowledge no other Righteouſneſs than that which conſiſts in the Ceremonies of their Law; as if they imagin'd, for Inſtance, that they had atton'd for their Sins, when they had waſh'd their Bodies with the Element of Water. They ſincerely believe, on the contrary, that all external Ceremonies were ordained only as ſo many Inducements to internal Holineſs. Their Faſtings and other external Mortifications muſt be internal too, and proceed from the Heart; and they think likewiſe, that beſides an outward and ceremonial Penance, if I may be allow'd the Expreſſion, we ought alſo to have a true Sorrow for, and a ſincere Repentance of our Sins, if we are deſirous to ſatisfy divine Juſtice. That this is the Belief of the Jews, is too plain to need a Proof, ſince moſt of their Books which treat of Morality and Repentance abound with theſe Maxims. I thought proper to make this Obſervation, that they might not be ſo freely cenſur'd as they commonly are, with being bound down to the Letter of the Law, without regarding the true Senſe and Meaning of it. They inſiſt, on the contrary, that in our Reſearches into the Meaning and Spirit of the Law, there is no Neceſſity for us abſolutely to decline and forſake the Letter, which is an Admonition, as it were, with reſpect to the internal Senſe of the Law itſelf.

But the Jews have very probably reformed their Doctrine relating to the true Spirit of the Moſaic Law, by the Aid and Aſſiſtance of thoſe beautiful Inſtructions which they have drawn from the various Diſſertations of the Chriſtians. When our Bleſſed Saviour ſays to his Diſciples, in his Diſcourſe on Charity, that [a] he gives them a new Commandment, he only revives the old one, which had been ſhamefully corrupted by the falſe Expoſitions of their Doctors. As for Example, the Love of our Enemies is as ſtrongly enforc'd by the Old, as it is by the New Teſtament; but it was requiſite that our Lord ſhould revive that Injunction, becauſe the Jews at that Time had laid aſide the Practice of it; for which Reaſon he ſays to his Diſciples, Mandatum novum do vobis, ut diligatis Invicem. Their [b] Doctors, in order to give them an adequate Idea of the high Eſteem which they have of Charity towards their Neighbours, affirm that the World is eſtabliſh'd on three Foundations, viz. the Law, Prayer, and Mercy. We may very well ſay, however, that they are fonder of, and adhere more ſtrictly to the Ceremonies of their Law, than to the real Performance of any good Actions; and the Reaſon is this, becauſe the vaſt Variety of Precepts with which they are over-burthen'd principally conſiſt in external Acts.

The abject Condition to which they have been reduc'd for theſe many Ages contributes very much towards making them more wicked; particularly ſuch as live in Europe, unknown, and in Obſcurity; ſome of whom imagine that if a Jew can keep his Religion to himſelf, without making any external Profeſſion of it, it is ſufficient. Many of them, deluded by this Principle, think it no Sin to embrace the Chriſtian Religion, whilſt at the ſame Time they are in their Hearts as perfect Jews as ever. There are in Spain a great Number of theſe hypocritical Chriſtians, whom even the Rigour of the Inquiſition there will never be able to reform, becauſe there is no Nation ſo fully convinc'd of their Religion as the Jews of theirs. In France indeed there are not ſo many of them, and they have good Reaſons for not coming there.

We ought likewiſe to attribute to the abject Condition in which they are at preſent the uſurious Contracts which they are daily engag'd in: For as they are not permitted to purchaſe Lands, and poſſeſs any real Eſtates amongſt us Chriſtians, they are oblig'd to improve their Money ſome other Way in which they traffick, as the reſt of the World do in other Commodities: And this Practice might probably be innocent enough in [a] John xiii. 34.

[b] Treatiſe of Avoth, or of the Fathers.

Caſe

Caſe their Law had not prohibited all Manner of Uſury: But they reſtrain this negative Commandment, and pretend that it extends no farther than to their own Brethren They readily lend them Money therefore, not only without any Proſpect of Advantage, as our Lord has directed with Reſpect to his Diſciples in the Goſpel; but they will not receive the leaſt Intereſt for it, tho' freely offer'd, under any Pretences whatſoever. This Practice is inviolably kept up even amongſt the Caraites; which plainly demonſtrates, that they take the Prohibition of Moſes relating to Uſury in the ſtricteſt Senſe, at leaſt with Reſpect to their own People. As to the Chriſtians indeed, ſince, as I have obſerv'd above, they account them Idolatrous Multipliers of the Deity, they imagine they have a Right by Conſequence to deſtroy them as much as poſſibly they can. They upbraid us likewiſe with not ſtrictly complying with the Prohibition of Uſury on any Account by our Lord himſelf; and inſiſt, that even Contracts authoriſed by any Government whatever are uſurious according to that Prohibition. So far are they from applying the Law of Uſury to ſuch only as are in Neceſſity, and the Objects of our Compaſſion, that they poſitively inſiſt, it is as much an uſurious Act to take Intereſt from the Rich, as it is from the Poor.

CHAP. IV.

Concerning the Commandments, Conſtitutions, and Judgments of the Jews.

THE Apoſtle St. Peter very juſtly call'd the Ceremonies which were obſerved amongſt the Jews under the Old Teſtament, a Yoke, which neither they, nor their Fathers could ever bear; [a] Jugum quod neque nos, neque Patres noſtri portare potuimus: Yet the Jews even now, look upon them as a peculiar Bleſſing from God towards their Nation, and a Prerogative of their Religion above all others in the World. They admit however, that it is not abſolutely neceſſary for the Attainment of eternal Life to obſerve them all; it being impracticable for them, whilſt without a Temple and without Sacrifices, to keep a great many of them.

THEY divide the Commandments or Precepts of the Law into ſix hundred and thirteen principal Ones, which are ſubdivided into an infinite Number leſs obligatory, and with all the Artifice and Judgment imaginable deduced from them. Theſe ſix hundred and thirteen Commandments are contained, as they conceive, in this Hebrew Word Tora, i. e. Law, the Letters whereof, conſider'd as Numerals, make up ſix hundred and eleven; and the better to account for the two remaining Precepts, [b] they inſiſt, that God himſelf gave the two firſt which relate to his Unity, [c] and to the Prohibition of paying divine Adoration to any Images or Statues. So that according to this Notion, by thoſe Words of Deuteronomy, [d] Moſes commanded us a Law, is underſtood the ſix hundred and eleven Commandments only; but this is nothing more than a Subtilty of the Cabala, which they call Gematric [e]. The moſt learned of the Rabbi's therefore are of Opinion, that the Words of the Law, wherein the Unity of God is ſpoken of, do not expreſs a Precept peculiar and ſeparate from the others, but that they are uſed as an Introduction, as it were, to the whole Decalogue [f]. Some other Jews, by the Aid of a Nicety not unlike that of [a] Acts xv. 10.

[b] R. Bechai upon the Law.
[c] Eliezer Pirke.
[d] Deut. xxxiii. 4.
[e] Mecilta Raſci Albo. Abrab.
[f] R. Abraham Seba.

the Cabala, pretend that theſe ſix hundred and thirteen Precepts of the Law are all compris'd in the Words of the Decalogue, which they ſay includes ſix hundred and thirteen Letters. But foraſmuch as there are in Reality ſix hundred and twenty Letters, ſome have alſo extended their Precepts to the ſame Number. But there is no Neceſſity to dwell any longer on theſe Niceties, which ariſe from the Philoſophy of Pythagoras and Plato, altho' it muſt be acknowledg'd, that Reflections of the ſame Nature are to be met with in the Works of thoſe Fathers of the Church, who had apply'd themſelves to the Study of the Platonic Philoſophy. They do not however lay ſuch a Streſs on thoſe myſterious Numbers as the Rabbi's do, who have made, as we have already obſerv'd, an Art of it, which they call the Gematric, or Geometric Cabala.

THEY farther divide theſe ſix hundred and thirteen Commandments into two hundred and forty eight affirmative, and three hundred and ſixty five negative ones. The two hundred and forty eight Affirmatives, according to the Jewiſh Doctors, anſwer to the ſame Number of Members which are to be found, as they imagine, in a human Body: And foraſmuch [a] as it is written in the Book of Eccleſiaſtes, that to keep God's Commandments is the whole Duty of Man; they add, that all the Members of a Man are ſupported and maintain'd by theſe Commandments; as if each Limb anſwer'd to ſome particular one. As for the three hundred and ſixty five Prohibitions, they make them anſwer the three hundred and ſixty five Days of the Solar Year; ſince we lie not only under an indiſpenſable Obligation to accompliſh the Law of God according to the Jewiſh Expreſſion, with all our Limbs, that is, with all our Strength, but likewiſe all the Days of our Lives. Were theſe Numbers invented only to remind us of that Obligation which we lie under to love God with all our Hearts, we could not with Juſtice charge the Jews with Superſtition on that Account; and moreover, the idle Chimæra's of the ancient Heretics, which were founded on much the ſame Principle, would not probably appear ſo ridiculous, as when they are literally underſtood. It was in this Manner that Baſilides compris'd an infinite Number of Secrets under the Word Abraxas, a Word artfully coin'd to repreſent the Number three hundred and ſixty five, according to the Characters of the Greek Alphabet, and to denote the three hundred and ſixty five Days of the Year at the ſame Time. We might with Eaſe explain ſeveral other myſterious Fictions of the old Gnoſtics, who often agree with the Rabbi's on this Subject, by the ſame Method. But this we preſume would be look'd on as too great a Digreſſion.

THERE is alſo another Diviſion of the Precepts of the Law, according to the various Names which Moſes made uſe of to expreſs them. Theſe Names are, Mitſvoth, Commandments; Hukim, Inſtitutions or Ordinances; and Miſpatim, Judgments. They call thoſe, Mitſvoth or Commandments, the Reaſon whereof is clearly expreſſed in the Text of the Law itſelf: As for Inſtance, the Reaſons why the Jews are under an Obligation to obſerve the Paſſover and keep the Sabbath are plainly ſpecified in the Pentateuch. Their Inſtitutions on the other Hand, or Ordinances, called Hukim in Hebrew, do not compriſe at the ſame Time the Reaſon of them in the very Terms of the Law. God thought proper to conceal it from the Jews. In ſhort, the Judgments which Moſes calls Miſpatim, are Commandments of the Underſtanding, as the Rabbi's expreſs themſelves, and ſuch as our own Reaſon would dictate to us, even tho' they were omitted in the Law.

BESIDES theſe Precepts compris'd in the Law of Moſes, the Jews acknowledge ſeveral others, which they call the Injunctions of the Hacamim, that is, of their Wiſemen, or Doctors, whom they indulge with the ſame Liberty of making new Laws or Statutes as Moſes had, as any particular Times and Occaſions might require. This Privilege is grounded

[a] Eccleſ. xii. 13.

grounded on the Words of God himſelf, who directs them to conſult the Elders of the Sanhedrim for the Reſolution of ſuch Controverſies or Debates as might ariſe from the Law. Moſes was the firſt who made divers Inſtitutions of this Kind, in the Conſiſtory of his Time. His Succeſſor Joſhua did the ſame; and ſo did thoſe who ſucceeded him in that Dignity. For which Reaſon the Jews imagine that they lie under as great an Obligation to obey the Ordinances of the Sanhedrim, as the Commandments of the Law, tho' the Conſtitutions of the former are inferior to thoſe of Moſes: The Reaſon which they give for this is very plain; for they pretend that thoſe Elders were under the immediate Influence of the Spirit of God, and by Conſequence, infallible in their Reſolutions. Under the Name of Wiſemen, they compris'd not only the Elders of their Sanhedrim or Conſiſtory, but alſo thoſe Prophets who had ariſen amongſt them at various Times, and who had an indiſputable Right to a Seat in their Aſſemblies.

CHAP. V.

Concerning the grand Conſiſtory or Sanhedrim of the Jews, and the Place where it was held. Several Explanatory Remarks upon this Subject, with regard to what is obſerved amongſt the Chriſtians.

THE Sanhedrim or grand Conſiſtory of the Jews, as I have already obſerv'd, takes its Riſe from Moſes. It was compos'd of ſeventy one Elders, one of whom was honour'd with the Title of Principal or Preſident; [a] and the Jews ſtill call ſuch a Perſon Hannaſci, the Prince. Beſides this Principal, there was another or Vice-Principal, call'd Ab, or Father of the Sanhedrim. As for the others, they all bore the Title of Elders or Senators alike. As to the Manner of ſeating themſelves, it was in a ſemi-circular Form, in the midſt whereof ſat the Naſci, or Principal of the Aſſembly, and at his Right-Hand the Vice-Principal, and the others according to their Degree on each Side of the Naſci. Some add a third Elder, whom they called Hacam, Wiſeman, without any other Addition, who ſat upon the Left of the Principal: So that the Naſci's Deputy, and this Hacam were like two Aſſiſtant Counſellors. It was proper to take Notice of their Manner of Sitting, becauſe that Practice was tranſmitted to the Synagogues from theſe Conſiſtories, and afterwards, as we ſhall ſee hereafter, to the Churches or firſt Aſſemblies of the Chriſtians.

THIS Sanhedrim could be held no where but at Jeruſalem, in a Place called Liſcat Hagazit, the Stone Conclave, which was contiguous to the Temple, or rather a Part of it; as our Councils for the moſt Part aſſemble in Churches. This Liſcat Hagazit was much the ſame Thing with that which was formerly called at Conſtantinople, In Trullo. The Talmudiſts call it a Baſilica, and all Cauſes of any conſiderable Importance were finally determined in that Place: This Remark gives Light to thoſe Words of St. Luke, [b] It cannot be that a Prophet ſhould periſh out of Jeruſalem. When any Point was in Debate which Tradition could not abſolutely determine, each Elder had a definitive, as well as a deliberative Vote.

WHEN the Jews returned from Babylon to Jeruſalem, the holding of one of theſe great Conſiſtories was abſolutely neceſſary for the better Settlement and Regulation of the Affairs of State. It conſiſted, according to their Opinion, of one hundred and twenty of their principal

[a] Rambam in his Treatiſe of the Sanhedrim.
[b] Luke xiii. 33.

cipal Men, over whom Eſdras, ſirnamed the Scribe, ſat as the Naſci or Preſident. They add likewiſe, that in this grand Aſſembly were preſent the Prophets Haggai, Zachariah, Malachi, and ſeveral other great Men who were inſpired by God, as Daniel, Nehemiah, Mordecai, Zorobabel, Azariah, Miſhael and Ananiah. Altho' we ought not to regard every trivial Circumſtance which the Jews have taken Notice of relating to this Aſſembly, yet we may in general conclude, that Prophets and other illuſtrious Perſons were permitted to ſit there with the Elders or Senators.

THERE was nothing more pompous and majeſtic in the Commonwealth of the Hebrews, than this Sanhedrim, which (according to the Jewiſh Manner of Expreſſion) had the Power of making Such la Tora, a Hedge to the Law, becauſe they had an Authority of interpreting it, as at certain Times and on certain Occaſions they thought moſt proper. [a] In this Senſe R. Moſes calls it, The Foundation of the Oral Law, and the Pillar of ſound Doctrine: For which Reaſon, ſuch as refuſed to ſubmit to it were accounted Rebels and excommunicated Perſons. To this our bleſſed Lord alludes, when he pronounces the following Sentence againſt ſuch as hereafter will not ſubmit to the Deciſion of the Church or of the Congregation: [b] Sit tibi ſicut Ethnicus & Publicanus. And indeed, if we compare the Diſcipline of the Chnrch in its Aſſemblies or Councils with that of the Synagogue, we ſhall find the Difference betwixt the one and the other but very ſmall. In the firſt Place, our bleſſed Lord in the Eſtabliſhment of his new Law (being the ſupreme Legiſlator, of which Moſes, who was no more than the Interpreter, was the Type) was no ways inferior to Moſes in his Qualifications; and as Moſes had left the ſame Power to Joſhua, and to the Elders of his Time, relating to the Expoſition of the Law, our Lord likewiſe conſtituted St. Peter to be his Succeſſor, and the Naſci, or Principal of his Church; and St. Paul dignifies ſome of the Apoſtles with the Title of Pillars; Jacobus & Cephas, & Johannes qui videbantur eſſe Columnæ. The Catholics aſcribe to their Councils a certain Infallibility, which they allow to be in the Church, in the very ſame Manner as the Jews were fully perſuaded of the Infallibility of their Sanhedrim. * In this Particular they have imitated the Apoſtles and Elders, over whom St. Peter preſided as their Naſci, or Prince, (holding by a divine Right this Primacy in the Church) when they ſent to their Brethren of Antioch, Syria and Cilicia, the Reſolutions of their Aſſembly: [c] Viſum eſt, ſay they, Spiritui ſancto & nobis; by which Words they ſhew'd that they were divinely inſpired.

THE Biſhop of Rome, who is St. Peter's true Succeſſor, has alſo ſucceeded him as Naſci or Principal of the Church. But we ought by no Means to limit or confine the Place of this Infallibility or Inſpiration to Rome, as the Jews reſtrain'd it to Jeruſalem. Neither is it true, that the ſole Council of the Pope, in Conjunction with his Clergy, perſonate the ancient Conſiſtory. The whole Church alone, of whom St. Peter's Succeſſor is the Hannaſci or Prince, is the Repreſentative of that Sanhedrim. In this Senſe the ancient Fathers of the Church, ſpeaking of the Biſhop of Rome, always preferred him before the other Biſhops, Prærogativam Suffragii. Beſides, as all the Elders in the Jewiſh Sanhedrim had a deciſive Voice; ſo in our Councils, the Biſhops have alſo a caſting Voice as well as the Pope, who is the Naſci, or Principal. The Reaſon why the Conſiſtory of Rome has not the ſame Power under the new Law, as the Sanhedrim of Jeruſalem had under the old, is, that the Religion which the Meſſiah was to eſtabliſh was not to be limited to a ſmall Spot of the Earth, as the Jewiſh Religion had been: And herein they themſelves agree with us. Neither can it at this Time be ſaid, [d] Notus in Italia Deus, as it was heretofore, Notus in Judea Deus. Thus the Chriſtian Religion

[a] Rambam.
[b] Mat. xviii. 17.
* The Author ſpeaks here, and in all other Places as a Catholic, which is to be obſerved.
[c] Acts xv. 28.
[d] Pſalm lxxv, (or lxxvi.)

being

being confined to no one particular Place, but on the contrary, being ſpread all over the habitable World, In omnem terram exivit ſonus eorum; [a] the grand Conſiſtory, which we call General [b] Councils, cannot be compoſed but by ſummoning all the Elders who have been the Succeſſors of the Apoſtles; that is, the Biſhops over whom the Pope is Hannaſci or Principal, as Succeſſor of St. Peter. The Queſtion therefore ſo often propoſed in the Schools, whether the Councils are ſuperior to the Popes, or they to them, is altogether groundleſs, as well as perfectly uſeleſs; ſince the Councils, which are the Repreſentatives of the antient Sanhedrim, are Aſſemblies which ought to conſiſt of the Principal and Elders, that is, of the Pope and Biſhops; this Queſtion was principally controverted during the Schiſm, at which Time we ought to argue after a quite different Manner.

THE Authority of the grand Conſiſtory, or Sanhedrim of the Jews, continued in Being as long as the Republic; only that their Rabbi's make ſome Diſtinction with reſpect to Inſpiration, during its Subſiſtence. Moſt of them believe that Prophecy, or divine Inſpiration, ſubſiſted till the fortieth Year of the ſecond Temple, to which another kind of Inſpiration ſucceeded, called by them Bathkol, the Voice's Daughter, which is frequently mentioned in the Talmud. There ſeems to be a very plain Alluſion made to this Voice's Daughter in the New Teſtament; where it is ſaid ſome Voices were heard in the Air, as if they came from Heaven. When the Jews had no longer any Form of Government, and they were ſcattered all over the Earth, they obſerved no other Maxims but thoſe which had been laid down by the preceding grand Aſſemblies. For this Reaſon, they collected all thoſe Ordinances with the utmoſt Care, is in the Sequel of this Diſcourſe, when we come to treat of their Talmud, which with them is much the ſame Thing as a Compilation of the Canon Law with us, will more fully appear. [c] Rabbi Moſes indeed aſſures us, that even after the Compilation of the Talmud, there were ſeveral other Conſiſtories held. But thoſe Aſſemblies were provincial only, and by Conſequence of no Authority, but in the Province where they were held; for the grand Conſiſtory of Jeruſalem only could oblige the whole Jewiſh Nation to obſerve its Deciſions. Theſe Conſiſtories held by the Jews in ſome Provinces, may very well be compar'd with our provincial Councils. But we ſhall ſay no more relating to the Sanhedrim of the Jews and their other Aſſemblies. We ſhall treat, however, in its proper Place of their Diſcipline during all the Time of their Captivity, and by what Means their Religion has been preſerv'd in the midſt of all their Misfortunes.

CHAP. VI.

Concerning the Synagogues of the Jews, and the Officers or Miniſters of thoſe Synagogues; the Riſe of our Churches or firſt Aſſemblies; the firſt Inſtitution of our Biſhops and Prieſts.

THERE were ſeveral private Synagogues in Jeruſalem beſides the Temple, which are taken Notice of in the New Teſtament, particularly that of the Alexandrians, and ſome others. [d] The Jewiſh Doctors taught the Law in thoſe Synagogues, which were likewiſe made uſe of as Seminaries for the Education of Youth; and this was their uſual Practice in the Time of Jeſus Chriſt and his Apoſtles, who aſſembled there as well

[a] Pſalm xviii. (or xix.)
[b] Epiſtle to the Romans, Chap. x. 18.
[c] Rambam Preface to Jad. Hareca.
[d] Acts vi.

as the reſt of the Jews, to hear the Interpretation of the Law, and the Lectures of their Doctors. As the Synagogue was the Place likewiſe for hearing Cauſes, and pronouncing Judgment, the ſame manner of ſitting was obſerv'd as was uſed in the great Conſiſtory. There was in the firſt Place therefore a Principal, called in Greek Archiſynagogos, the Principal of the Synagogue, whom the preſent Jews call the Principal of a Kahal, that is, a Congregation. All ſuch as ſat on each Side of this Principal in a Semi-Circle, as before-mentioned, aſſum'd the Title of Zekenim, Elders, and at their Feet upon other Seats ſat their Pupils, who ſtudied the Law.

THESE Pupils, who were called Talmide Hakamim, The Pupils of the Wiſemen, were divided into three diſtinct Claſſes. Thoſe of the firſt, were elected to fill the vacant Places of the Hakamim or of the Wiſemen; thoſe of the ſecond, were advanced to the firſt, and thoſe of the third, to the ſecond. The People ſat in the Area, which anſwered to the Body of our Churches, ſo that the Principals and Elders of the Synagogue ſat with their Backs towards the People, who were ſeated in the Area either on Mats or Carpets. When St. Paul tells us that he was brought up at the Feet of Gamaliel, he means, that he was once the Pupil of that learned Doctor, ſitting at his Feet amongſt his other Pupils. The Author of the Annotations on St. Paul's Epiſtles, which ſome have attributed to St. Ambroſe, fully and very conciſely explains what we juſt now hinted relating to the Synagogues of the Jews. Hæc [a] Traditio Synagogæ eſt, ſays this Author, ut ſedentes diſputent ſeniores Dignitate in Cathedris, ſequentes in Subſelliis, noviſſimi in Pavimento ſuper Mattas.

IF our Painters had entertain'd a right Idea of the Diſpoſition of the Synagogues, they would never have repreſented our bleſſed Lord ſitting in the midſt of the Doctors in a Seat conſpicuous above the reſt, as if he had been the Principal of a Synagogue, though but twelve Years old; which Notion was founded on theſe Words of St. Luke, [b] Invenerunt illum in Templo ſedentem in medio Doctorum, audientem illos, & interrogantem eos. He ſat on one of the lower Seats amongſt the other Pupils, and he had the free Liberty to propoſe what Queſtions he thought proper as a Pupil, ſince thoſe Places were Academies in reality, where Youth were at once inſtructed both in their Law and their Traditions, which is practiſed to this very Day. They diſtinguiſh therefore their Schools by two different Names, one whereof was called Beth-Hammikra, the Houſe or Place of Reading; becauſe in that the Text only of the Law was read; the other was called Beth-hamidras, the Place of Expoſition or Enquiry: Whereby the Jews pretend to have preſerved the two Laws, which Moſes, according to them, received upon Mount Sinaï, viz. the Written Law, that is, the Pentateuch, and the Oral Law, which comprehends their Traditions. But our bleſſed Lord plainly demonſtrates to them, that on ſeveral Occaſions, under the ſpecious Title of Traditions, they had ſhamefully corrupted the Law by their falſe Interpretations.

LET us come now to the firſt Churches or Aſſemblies of the Chriſtians, who could not hold any in their Infancy, but under the Name of Jews, the Emperors not having indulg'd them with that Privilege. All Laws therefore made relating to the Jews, either favourable or ſevere, were equally applied to the Chriſtians, who were accounted at that Time as a particular Sect of the Jews, much like the Phariſees or Sadducees. By this Means the Apoſtles, inaſmuch as they took Refuge under the Jews, were able to preach their Doctrine without much Difficulty, and without being cenſur'd as Innovators. St. Paul himſelf ſometimes acted after the ſame political Manner, openly declaring that he was a Jew, and of the Sect of the Phariſees, [c] Ego Phariſæus ſum filius Phariſæorum. 'Tis therefore no ſuch ſurpriſing Thing, that the primitive Chriſtians, the moſt of whom

[a] Ambroſ. Comm. in Ep. ad Cor. i. 14.
[b] Luc. ii. 46.
[c] Acts xxiii. 6.

had

had been Jews, and who for the moſt part aſſembled at the Temple and in the Synagogues as well as they, ſhould in their firſt Aſſemblies obſerve the ſame Diſcipline as they did. This will ſtill appear more evident by the Parallel we ſhall draw between them.

As there was in every Synagogue a Principal, or Superintendant appointed to preſide over the other Elders; ſo in the Chriſtian Aſſemblies there was likewiſe a Superior, whom ſome of the Fathers of the Church have likewiſe nominated the Preſident, though for the moſt part he is diſtinguiſh'd by the Title of Elder or Biſhop in the Books of the New Teſtament. Such as were of the firſt Degree in the Synagogues were commonly called Zekenim, Elders, in Imitation of the ſeventy Elders whom Moſes had appointed to be the Judges of the Sanhedrim. Even he who preſided over the reſt aſſumed the Name of Elder, being only, as it were, their Dean or Superior. In the firſt Aſſemblies of the Chriſtians, ſuch as were of the firſt Degree, aſſumed likewiſe the Name of Presbyteri, Elders, or Prieſts. The Principal or Biſhop, who was the Superior of thoſe Elders, took alſo the Title of an Elder; and for this Reaſon, the Name of Biſhop is ſometimes confounded with the Name of Prieſt or Elder in the New Teſtament. And thus ſuch as were ignorant of the original Senſe and true Meaning of the Word Prieſt, have falſly imagined, that there was no Difference between Biſhops and Prieſts in the earlieſt Ages of the Chriſtian Church.

THE Council of the firſt Chriſtian Aſſemblies was for no other Reaſon called Presbyterium, or a Council of Elders. The Biſhop preſided in it as the Principal and firſt Elder, ſitting in the midſt of the others, in the Manner before-mentioned. In Cathedrâ ſeniorum laudent eum, ſays the royal Prophet. The Prieſts or Elders, who ſat on each Hand of him, had each their reſpective Seat as Judges, and on that Account are called Aſſeſſores Epiſcoporum, by the Fathers of the Church. Nothing of any Importance was put in Execution till it had been firſt controverted in this Aſſembly, where the Biſhop made but one Body with the other Elders or Prieſts; becauſe the Authority, which is now called Epiſcopal, was not dependent on the Biſhop alone, but on all the Elders jointly, that were under the Biſhop: And this Practice was obſerv'd at Rome likewiſe for ſeveral Ages.

THE Name of Cathedral Church, in all Probability, is deriv'd from this antient Manner of ſitting in the primitive Churches, or firſt Aſſemblies of the Chriſtians; and it is for this Reaſon, that the Feſtivals of the Chair of St. Peter both at Rome and Antioch are ſtill obſerved, they being the two Cities where that bleſſed Apoſtle ſat as Principal over a ſettled and determinate Conſiſtory. But it muſt be obſerv'd, that by the Term Cathedral Church, I do not mean a Cathedral Church or Temple, according to the preſent Acceptation of the Word. Eccleſia, originally meant no more than an Aſſembly, and it is well known, that 'till the Reign of Conſtantine, the Chriſtians were not permitted to build Temples for their publick Service. What ſome Writers, and particularly the Spaniards, ſay, relating to the Antiquity of their Cathedral Churches, which they pretend were erected in the Time of the Apoſtles, is very idle and ridiculous; a Cathedral Church in thoſe Days being no more than the See of a Biſhop, attended by a certain Number of Elders: But if we are to give Credit to the new Breviary of the Carmelites, there was a Church erected on Mount Carmel in Commemoration of the bleſſed Virgin Mary, by thoſe Prophets who were the Succeſſors of Elias, and viſited the Virgin, which Favours ſhe very graciouſly return'd. But this is idle, and impertinent to the laſt Degree.

THIS Conformity of Diſcipline between the Church and the Synagogue will be ſtill more conſpicuous, if we reflect on the antient Cuſtoms of the Church. For Example, in former Times, the Biſhops only had the Care and Management of Schools; and it is not not to be queſtioned, but that as the Jewiſh Synagogues were Schools in which the Law was expounded, and that there were Schools erected near the Synagogues; ſo the Biſhop and Elders, or Prieſts, in the ſame Manner had the Care and Direction of Schools amongſt Chriſtians; there having been Schools from the earlieſt Ages of Chriſtianity in the City of Alexandria. In moſt Cathedrals there are ſtill ſome viſible Remains of this Cuſtom, where there are Offices to which the Care of Schools is annexed. At Paris, for Example, this Duty is incumbent on the Chanter, and on the Chancellor at Rouen. The Council of Trent had ſome Intentions to reſtore the Uſe of thoſe Schools, under the Name of Seminaries, which are of a quite different Nature from thoſe which moſt of the Biſhops in France are daily eſtabliſhing in their Dioceſes. The Deſign of the Fathers of that Council was not, that thoſe who were devoted to the Prieſthood ſhould learn nothing but a few Ceremonies for the due Adminiſtration of the Sacraments; but that thoſe Seminaries ſhould be real Nurſeries for the Education of Youth in Virtue and good Manners, and that when they were grown up to Years of Maturity, they might prove of Service to the Church.

CHAP. VII.

A Continuation of that Conformity which is viſible between the Church and the Synagogue. Some other Offices of the Synagogue.

THE Church has had this likewiſe in common with the Synagogue, that in its Infancy the Chriſtians would admit of no other Judges but the Tribunal of the Biſhop and Elders, to decide the Differences which ſometimes would ariſe amongſt them. For which Reaſon, St. Paul forbids the Faithful, whom he calls Saints, (a Term the Jews likewiſe beſtow'd upon themſelves) to make their Applications to any other Judges than the Elders of the Aſſembly, on whom he confers the Name of Wiſemen, which is the ſame Appellation which the Jews gave to their Doctors. [a] Is it ſo, that there is not a Hacam or Elder amongſt you, ſays this holy Apoſtle, no not one that ſhall be able to judge between his Brethren? Sic non eſt inter vos ſapiens qui poſſit judicare inter Fratrem ſuum? They are widely miſtaken, I think, who have thus tranſlated St. Paul's Words: Is it ſo, that there is not a Wiſeman amongſt you? For the Term Wiſeman, is in this Place a Title of Office, and ſignifies a Hacam of the Aſſembly, that is to ſay, an Elder or Doctor.

THE Chriſtian Church has likewiſe viſibly copy'd after the Synagogue in the Ordination of her Miniſters, by laying their Hands upon them, which the Jews call Semica to this very Day. So that conſtituting a Man a Doctor, or impoſing Hands on him, are ſynonymous Terms amongſt them. Moſes was the Inventor of this Ceremony, for he laid his Hands on Joſhua who was appointed his Succeſſor, as well as on the other Elders of the Sanhedrim who were immediately afterwards filled with the Holy Ghoſt. In Imitation of Moſes, the Principals of all the Conſiſtories, after Moſes and Joſhua, likewiſe practiſed this Impoſition of Hands on ſuch as were elected Elders of the Sanhedrim. The Jewiſh Doctors however obſerve, that it was not abſolutely requiſite to have recourſe to the Naſci, or Prince of the Sanhedrim on this Occaſion; but that the Elders who had once received that Impoſition had a Right and Title to practiſe the ſame Ceremony on others, and that it muſt be performed by three, in the ſame Manner as it was appointed in the Infancy of the Church, that there ſhould be at leaſt three Biſhops preſent when a Biſhop was to be ordained. Beſides this Impoſition of Hands, in Proceſs of Time they thought proper to ſubjoin ſome Words to that Ceremony, which expreſs'd the Action that was performed; as for Inſtance, I impoſe my Hands on thee; or, let my Hands be impoſed on thee; which is entirely conformable to our Manner of Ordination and Adminiſtration of the other Sacraments.

[a] 1 Cor. vi. 5.

of

THERE was alſo in the Temple, and afterwards in the Synagogues, a Miniſter or Officer, in every Reſpect reſembling the Deacons of our Church, who was called the Sciamas, or Miniſter of the Temple, and the Syrians make uſe of this Word Sciamas to ſignify their Deacons and other inferior Miniſters to this very Day. The Jews generally call him Hazan, becauſe his chief Employment is to inſpect into every Thing that is done in the Synagogue, and eſpecially the reading of the Law: For which Reaſon the Deacons of the Church are not only to provide all Things convenient in the Aſſembly, but are alſo appointed to read the Goſpel; which Cuſtom is ſtrictly obſerved amongſt us to this very Day.

WE do not find in the Books of the new Teſtament, that the Apoſtles ordained any other Miniſters beſides thoſe before-mentioned, viz. Biſhops, Prieſts, and Deacons. But under the Appellation of Deacon all inferior Miniſters ought to be comprehended; as indeed the Word Deacon in Greek imports all ſorts of Miniſters. The Syrian Churches commonly make uſe of but one Word to ſignify all ſuch Miniſters as are inferior to Deacons; and the Jews do the ſame; for the Word Hazan ſometimes denotes the Porter of a Synagogue. The Levites performed that Office in the Temple; 'twas their proper Buſineſs to open and ſhut the Doors, and ſing in the Desk whilſt the Sacrifices were offered.

THIS very Diſcipline has been tranſmitted from the Temple of Jeruſalem, and from the Synagogues to the Church, where the Porters and Singing-Men are likewiſe eſtabliſh'd; but it happened afterwards, that they who were oblig'd to apply themſelves ſolely to the Miniſtry of the Goſpel, were alſo conſtrain'd to ſing: And indeed ſinging is now the principal Employment of the Canons, who were formerly the Biſhop's Aſſiſtants, as Elders, compoſed with him what was then called the Presbyterium.

CHAP. VIII.

Some Remarks on the Prayers of the Jews, and their Conformity with thoſe of the Chriſtians.

THE Jews have a vaſt Variety of Prayers, whereof they have made divers Collections; and though they have at all Times been under an indiſpenſable Obligation to pray to God, yet, during all the Time they had Sacrifices in the Temple, they had not, in all Probability the ſame Forms of Prayer as they now have in their Synagogues. The Prayers which they uſe at preſent may be called a Supplement to their antient Sacrifices; and for this Reaſon they have given the Title or Name of ſmall Temples to their Synagogues. And as two Sacrifices were offered every Day in the Temple of Jeruſalem, one in the Morning, and the other in the Evening, ſo they have Morning and Evening Service in their Synagogues, to correſpond with thoſe two Sacrifices. Beſides theſe, there was another Sacrifice offered up on Holidays, for the Solemnity of the Feſtival; and for this Reaſon they add a new Prayer on Feaſt-Days called Muſaph, that is, Addition. It is farther remarkable, that they have not only Morning and Evening-Service, to repreſent the Morning and Evening Sacrifice, but Prayers too for the Night, which were inſtituted inſtead of thoſe which remained after the Evening Sacrifice.

THE Chriſtians have a ſtated Time for their Prayers; and though they are obliged to pray to God without ceaſing, ſine intermiſſione [a] orate, as the Apoſtle expreſſes, yet they have their appointed Hours for publick Prayer; and theſe Prayers in common have more Efficacy, and are more acceptable to the Almighty. Our bleſſed Saviour, it is true, principally preſcribed private Prayers; but he did not thereby ſhew any Diſlike to publick Prayers, ſince he was frequently preſent at them amongſt the Jews; he cenſured only the Pride and Affectation of ſome Jewiſh Doctors, who prayed in Publick, to be ſeen of Men, ut videantur ab hominibus.

IT ſeems pretty plain, however, that our bleſſed Lord [b] did abſolutely diſapprove of thoſe long Prayers which the Jews made publickly in their Synagogues, when he commanded his Diſciples not to uſe ſuch Prayers as the Heathens did, who vainly imagined, that they ſhould be heard the ſooner for their much ſpeaking. He preſcribes even the Form of their Prayers, rejecting all the reſt as tending but little to Edification. Sic ergo orabitis, Pater noſter qui es in cælis. After this manner therefore pray ye, Our Father which art in Heaven, &c. To this I anſwer, that it is not probable that Jeſus Chriſt aim'd at an entire Condemnation of all the Prayers which the Jews generally uſed in their Synagogues, but thoſe only of ſome particular Rabbi's, who were every Day inventing new ones. Theſe, and theſe only, in my Opinion are condemned by Jeſus Chriſt, and in order to induce his Diſciples to lay them entirely aſide, he gave them a Set Form for their private Devotions, but never forbad them to aſſiſt at publick Prayers in the Synagogues.

AND this very Fault ſome Chriſtians themſelves are guilty of; for which Reaſon the Councils were under an Obligation to condemn ſome Prayers which had been introduced into the Office of the Church, by ſome Perſons who compoſed them according to their own Imaginations. Neither muſt we imagine, that the Uniformity of Prayer now in the Latin Church has been always the ſame; for the Monks and Friers are as much diſtinguiſhed from the reſt of the Clergy by their Offices, as by their reſpective Rules, in which they imitate the antient Jewiſh Doctors, who compoſed private Prayers for their Pupils, beſides the publick which were authorized by the Synagogues.

THE Jews have likewiſe ſeveral Ways of praying, which they expreſs by various Terms. [c] St. Paul, in his firſt, Epiſtle to Timothy, ſeems to have alluded to theſe Terms, therein exhorting them to offer up Supplications, Prayers, Interceſſions, and Thankſgivings for all Men. He might have ſaid Prayers only, had there been no ſuch Diſtinction at that Time as there is now in the Jewiſh Books of Prayer: For they call Bakaſot, Petitions, Requeſts, or Supplications, which St. Paul expreſſes by the Word Deeſis. They give the Name of Tephillot to what the ſame Apoſtle calls Proſeuchas, Vows, or Prayers, &c.

ST. Auſtin, who never had any Recourſe to the Jewiſh Rituals, has uſed his utmoſt Endeavours to diſtinguiſh all thoſe various kinds of Prayers which are expreſſed in the Latin Verſion of the New Teſtament by thoſe Terms Obſecrationes, Orationes, Poſtulationes, gratiarum Actiones. He explains them with reſpect to the Prayers which were then uſed in the Church, and are ſtill retained to this very Day. [d] We ſhall call thoſe Prayers, ſays that holy Doctor, Orationes, which are uſed in the Celebration of the Sacrament, before the Conſecration of the Offering on the Altar; as alſo thoſe which are uſed at the Bleſſing and Conſecration: But notwithſtanding theſe two kinds of Prayers are in reality diſtinct, and the Conſecrations are called Bleſſings and Thankſgivings by the Jews, yet it would be more proper, in my Opinion, to explain thoſe various Terms by thoſe va-

[a] 1 Theſſ. v.
[b] Mat. vi. 7.
[c] 1 Timothy ii. 1.
[d] St. Auſt. Ep. to Paulin.

rious

rious kinds of Prayers, which were uſed at that Time in the Synagogues of the Jews: for St. Paul doubtleſs means, that Chriſtians ſhould pray for Princes, and for all ſorts of People in their publick Aſſemblies, in the ſame manner as the Jews then did in their Synagogues.

I SHALL not here enlarge on ſome other Prayers, common both to Jews and Chriſtians: Such, for example, as they make uſe of before their Journey by Land, or Voyage by Sea. The Chriſtians were under no Obligation to imitate the Jews in ſuch Prayers, the Dangers which Men are at ſuch Times expoſed to ſufficiently admoniſhing them that they have Occaſion for God's Aſſiſtance and Protection. I ſhall only obſerve, that the Jews and the Catholicks, in their Prayers rely alike on two Things, viz. on the Mercy and Goodneſs of God, and on the Innocence and Piety of their Forefathers. For which Reaſon, the Jews mention Abraham, Iſaac, Jacob, and ſome others, both Patriarchs and Prophets. Do thou, O God, ſay they, vouchſafe to hear us, and grant us ſuch and ſuch a Favour, through the Merits of all thoſe juſt and holy Men who have ſprung up every Generation amongſt the Iſraelites. Le maan zecout col hatſadikim ve hahaſidim ſcehajou becol dor neemanim al Iſraël.

NOR is it neceſſary to expatiate on the Difference that there is among the Jewiſh Common-Prayer-Books. It is ſufficient to make this general Obſervation, that they have different Cuſtoms with Reſpect to this Point as well as we, and that ſuch Cuſtoms are ſet down in the Beginning of each Seder Tephillot, Order of Prayers. The Spaniards, for Inſtance, add theſe Words, ceminhag kahal kados ſepharad, according to the Cuſtom of the Spaniſh Aſſembly. The Italians ſay, according to the Cuſtom of the Italian Aſſembly. The German, Poliſh, and other Nations obſerve the ſame Method: Under the Denomination of Germans, the Poliſh Jews are included, becauſe their Cuſtoms are the ſame.

To the preceding Remarks, I ſhall only add, that neither Men, Women, nor Children, can be excuſed from making their humble Supplications to God; ſince we may pray according to the Obſervation of the Rabbi's at any Time, and ſince this Nation is not confined to any particular Hour. St. Paul, in all Probability, alluded to this Reflection of the Rabbi's, when he exhorted the [a] Theſſalonians to pray to God without ceaſing; not that they were to ſpend their whole Time in Prayer, but becauſe they might pray at all Hours, and at all Seaſons.

THEIR Prayers commonly begin with Thankſgivings for Mercies received, and ſo proceed to ask of God ſuch Things as they ſtand in need of. They may begin, if they think proper, with Petitions, and then proceed to praiſing God and bleſſing his holy Name. Our bleſſed Saviour himſelf ſeems to have followed the former Method in the Prayer he has left us; for it begins with the Exaltation of the Name of God. Our Father which art in Heaven, hallowed be thy Name, &c. And the Petitions follow, viz. Give us this Day our daily Bread, &c. Several other Remarks might be made relating to the Prayers of the Jews; but my Intention is to mention only thoſe which are the moſt eſſential, and ſuch particularly as may illuſtrate the Chriſtian Religion.

[a] 1 Theſſ. v. 17.

CHAP.

CHAP. IX.

Concerning the Bleſſings uſed amongſt the Jews; and their Reſemblance with thoſe of the Chriſtian Religion.

THE Commandment for bleſſing God amongſt the Jews, is not a mere Injunction of their Doctors, but a Precept in the Law, wherein it is ſaid, [a] When thou haſt eaten and art full, then thou ſhalt bleſs the Lord thy God for the good Land which he hath given thee. [b] And no one can be diſpenſed from it, any more than from praying, for we may bleſs God at all Times. But as the Jewiſh Doctors are extreamly ſubtle and nice in their Explications of the Law, R. Moſes is of Opinion, that they are only obliged by the Words of the Law to bleſs God after they have eaten, and finiſh'd their Meal, on Account of theſe Words in the Text, When thou haſt eaten and art full. The Generality of the Rabbi's, however, preſcribe Bleſſings both before and after eating, which Injunction they have extended to a great many other Things.

THE ſame Cuſtom of bleſſing both what was to be eaten and what was to be drank was tranſmitted from the Synagogues to the firſt Aſſemblies of the Chriſtians; Whether therefore ye eat or drink, ſays St. Paul, [c] whatſoever ye do, do all to the Glory of God. Theſe Benedictions are alſo called Thankſgivings or Praiſes; and thus we are to underſtand thoſe other Words of St. Paul in the ſame Place; If I by Grace be a Partaker, why am I evil ſpoken of for that for which I give Thanks. Our bleſſed Saviour himſelf likewiſe ſtrictly obſerved theſe Bleſſings; which is evident from his bleſſing the five Loaves in the Wilderneſs, [d] Benedixit illis. The Benedictions which he pronounced on the Bread and Wine ſeparately at his Celebration of the laſt Paſſover with his Apoſtles, are related with the very ſame Circumſtances as are to be met with in the Jewiſh Rituals. For which Reaſon I ſhall principally inſiſt on this, and at the ſame Time demonſtrate wherein our bleſſed Lord followed the Jewiſh Form, when he pronounced theſe Words over the Bread which he bleſſed, This is my Body, &c.

IN the firſt Place then we ſhall obſerve, that the Perſon of the greateſt Dignity amongſt the Jews always pronounces the Baraca, or Benediction on the Bread and Wine; for which Reaſon our bleſſed Lord performed it himſelf, being with his Diſciples as their Maſter and their Doctor. St. Luke, who gives a more particular Account of this Tranſaction, than either St. Matthew or St. Mark, takes Notice of two Cups, over which our Lord pronounced this Bleſſing, becauſe the Jews in reality at the Celebration of the Paſſover, begin with the Bleſſing of a Cup which is filled with Wine; and this firſt bleſſing of the Cup is called for Diſtinction-ſake, the Bleſſing of the Cup uſed in eating. They drink four Cups at this Feaſt, but bleſs only the firſt and the laſt; all the Jews, except the Germans, who repeat the Benedictions over all the Cups, comply with this Cuſtom.

As to theſe different Cuſtoms now obſerved amongſt the Jews, be they as they will, it is very probable, however, that our Lord followed the Practice of his own Age, and that St. Luke related it juſt as it was tranſacted, whilſt the other Evangeliſts only make mention of it in general. St. Luke, 'tis true, has here uſed an Expreſſion very familiar amongſt the Hebrews, who often repeat the ſame Thing; and I am conſcious ſome will ſay, that by theſe two different Cups, he expreſly intended two different Paſſovers of our

[a] Deut. viii. 10.
[b] Rámbám's Treatiſe of Bleſſings.
[c] 1 Cor. x. 31.
[d] Luc. ix. 16.

Saviour

Saviour with his Diſciples; as if he had obſerved the Ceremony of the Paſſover according to the antient Law in the firſt, and from thence taken Occaſion to inſtitute the Paſſover of the new Law. But this has not the leaſt Foundation from the Text of the Goſpel, and it is more natural to ſay, that our bleſſed Lord celebrated the Paſſover in the ſame Manner as was practiſed at that Time amongſt the Jews, nay even to ſuch a Punctilio that all the three Evangeliſts call the Wine which was in the Cup, The Fruit of the Vine, in Conformity to what we ſtill read in the Jewiſh Ritual: Bleſſed be thou O Lord our God, King of the World, for having created the Fruit of the Vine, bore peri hag gephen.

It is moreover very probable, that our Lord, after he had bleſſed and broken the Bread according to the Jewiſh Cuſtom, imitated alſo the Jews in theſe Words, This is my Body; for they ſay in the Chaldee or Syriac, when they eat unleaven'd Bread, Ha lahma ania di acalou abhatana be area Miſraim. This is the Bread of Affliction, which our Fathers did eat in the Land of Egypt. There are ſome of them, however, who repeat theſe Words in their Mother Tongue, and others who ſay them in any Language that is underſtood by all who are then preſent. But our bleſſed Lord and Maſter ſignified to his Diſciples, that they were no longer required to eat that Bread of Affliction, which their Fathers had eaten when they came out of Egypt; but that being the Author of a New Covenant, he gave them his own Body and Blood inſtead thereof. Take ye, ſays he to them, and eat; what I give unto you is my Body; and after he had bleſſed the Wine which was in the Cup, he gave them that conſecrated Wine, as the Jews generally call it; that is, which was really changed into his Blood, and ſaid unto them, drink ye all of it, for this is my Blood, the Blood of the New Covenant; in Alluſion to thoſe Words of Moſes, [a] Behold the Blood of the Covenant, which the Lord hath made with you; Hic eſt ſanguis fœderis quod Dominus pepigit vobiſcum, which he pronounced for the Confirmation of the Covenant which God had made with the Iſraelites in the Old Teſtament. As then the Blood of the Victims under the old Covenant was truly ſhed, ſo we ought not to queſtion but the Blood of Jeſus Chriſt, who was the true Paſchal Lamb, was alſo ſhed for the Confirmation of his New Covenant with us. [b] Hic eſt ſanguis meus Novi Teſtamenti qui pro multis effunditur in remiſſionem peccatorum.

To conclude, our bleſſed Lord ſeems to have alluded to the ſame Way of Expreſſion already mentioned, when he aſſures us in the ſixth Chapter of St. John, that he is the Bread of Life; [c] I am, ſays he, the Bread of Life; he that cometh to me ſhall never hunger, and he that believeth on me ſhall never thirſt. This Phraſe is much the ſame with that we find in the Hagada or Hiſtory, which the Jews repeat at the Celebration of the Paſſover. This is the Bread of Affliction which our Fathers did eat in the Land of Egypt, whoever is hungry let him come and eat; whoever are poor and needy, let them come and partake of the Paſſover; that is, let them eat of the Paſchal Land for the Preſervation of their Lives. [d] This is the Bread which comes down from Heaven, adds our Saviour in the ſame Place, that a Man may eat thereof and not die. As what was repreſented only under Types and Figures in the Old Teſtament were verified in him, hæc omnia in figuris contingebant illis, he took frequent Opportunities of inſtructing the Jews therein, by raiſing their Minds to Heaven by metaphorical Expreſſions, which at the ſame Time were the genuine Senſe of the Scripture when he ſpoke to them; as for Inſtance, when he tells them, that tho' their Fathers had eaten Manna, yet they were dead, becauſe in reality moſt of them died in the Wilderneſs, and ſo did not enjoy the Land of Promiſe; and that he on the contrary was the true Bread of Heaven, which contained in it everlaſting Life, whereof the Land of Promiſe was the Type only.

[a] Exod. xxiv. 8.
[b] Matt. xxvi. 28.
[c] John vi. 35.
[d] Ibid. ver. 50.

CHAP. X.

Concerning the Feſtivals of the Jews, and their Conformity with thoſe of the Chriſtians.

SINCE the Chriſtian Religion differs not in the eſſential Part of it, from that of the Jews, and ſince they both tend to the ſame End, it is not to be wonder'd at, that the Chriſtians obſerve moſt of the Feſtivals of the Jews according to their own particular Manner: I ſay according to a particular Manner of their own, becauſe they have retained nothing that is barely ceremonial: As for Inſtance, there is a wide Difference between the Paſſover of the Chriſtians and that of the Jews, the latter being only the Type of the former. This St. Paul intimates to the Corinthians, when he exhorts them to celebrate the Paſſover, [a] with the unleavened Bread of Sincerity and Truth; and at the ſame Time reminds them, that they have no other Paſchal Lamb but Jeſus Chriſt. Paſcha noſtrum immolatus eſt Chriſtus. We ſing, moreover, the Hagada or Hiſtory of that Feſtival in our Churches, and this in Conformity to the Hagada of the Jews. And as in their Hiſtory of the Paſſover, they take Notice of the Difference between this Night and the other Nights of the Year, ſo the Chriſtians likewiſe bleſs that Night when Jeſus Chriſt triumphed over the Grave, hæc Nox eſt in qua deſtructis Vinculis Mortis Chriſtus ab inferis Victor aſcendit. The Jews acknowledge in their Hagada, that they were the Slaves of Pharaoh in Egypt, from whence the Lord their God delivered them with a high and mighty Hand; and the Chriſtians make the ſame Acknowledgment, when they bleſs Almighty God for their Redemption on this Night from Sin and the Tyranny of the Devil, of which Pharaoh was the Figure. In ſhort, the more fully to demonſtrate wherein the Paſſover of the Chriſtians does conſiſt, they have added, by way of Alluſion to the Paſſover of the Jews, the following Words, hæc ſunt Feſta Paſchalia in quibus verus ille Agnus occiditur, cujus Sanguine poſtes Fidelium conſecrantur.

THE Chriſtians obſerve likewiſe the Feaſt of Pentecoſt, but after another Manner than the Jews. For it was on this Day that God gave the Law to the Iſraelites upon Mount Sinaï, which was all in Flames, on Account of the Lightning and Thunder that ſurrounded it; and on the ſame Day the Apoſtles likewiſe received the new Law, being filled with the Holy Ghoſt, who deſcended on them with a great Noiſe, as it is written in the Acts [b] of the Apoſtles. Thus the Pentecoſt of the Chriſtians was principally ordain'd for the keeping holy that Day on which the new Law was imprinted by the Holy Ghoſt on the Hearts of the Apoſtles, in the ſame Manner as the antient Law was delivered to Moſes upon that Day on Tables of Stone.

BESIDES theſe two grand Feſtivals, which, as has been already hinted, the Jews and Chriſtians equally obſerve, Saturday was for a long while kept by the Church, (particularly the Eaſtern Church) as a Day of ſolemn Aſſembly, as well as Sunday: For which Reaſon, the old Canons prohibited all faſting on that Day, becauſe Gaiety and Chearfulneſs, and not Sorrow and Sadneſs were intended to be indulg'd on ſuch Days. The Chriſtians however never obliged themſelves to obſerve ſuch Ceremonies as were merely Jewiſh in their Celebration of the Sabbath, but rather ſhew'd a Regard to the Creation of the World, which was the Cauſe of its Inſtitution. And as this Cauſe was not in the leaſt dependant on the ancient Ceremonies of the Law, they thought themſelves under an equal Obligation with the Jews to obſerve and keep holy that Day; as it is appointed in the old Book of Conſtitutions, which they attribute to St. Clement; Ye

[a] 1. Cor. v. 8.
[b] Acts ii.

ſhall

ſhall keep as holy Days, both Saturday and Sunday, the firſt being conſecrated in Remembrance of the Creation, and the other of the Reſurrection.

THERE are ſtill ſome Remains of that antient Ceremony in the Latin Church, in the Office for Saturday in Paſſion Week, and the Eve of the Pentecoſt, which may properly be called the two grand Saturdays of the Chriſtian Religion, as the Jews called the Saturday of the Paſſover, Sabbath gadol, the grand Saturday. In our Churches the Service is the ſame on thoſe two Days as it was formerly on all the other Days of public Aſſembly. They then publickly read ſomething out of the Law and the Prophets, in Conformity to the preſent Cuſtom in the Synagogues. As for Inſtance, the Leſſon for the Saturday in Paſſion Week begins with theſe Words in the firſt Chapter of Geneſis, In Principio creavit Deus Cælum & Terram; to denote, that on that Day we commemorate the Creation. After which that Paſſage out of Exodus is read, wherein is particularly deſcrib'd the Victory of the Iſraelites over Pharaoh's Hoſt, at their Paſſage thro' the Red-Sea.

I SHALL not here take Notice of the other Places in the Scripture which are read in the Office of that Day, becauſe every one may conſult the Book itſelf. What principally deſerves our Obſervance, is, the Application which the Church makes of it, in the Appropriation of that Leſſon to her ſelf, taking every individual Tranſaction under the Old Teſtament to be only a Type of the Myſteries fulfilled under the New. In the Prayer which is added to the Words of Geneſis, wherein mention is made of the Creation of Man, ſhe takes Notice of his ſecond Creation, that is, his Redemption. O God, ſays the Church, who ſheweſt thy Power in the Creation of Man, and who haſt ſhewed it ſtill more in redeeming him: Deus qui mirabiliter creaſti Hominem, & mirabiliter redemiſti. In the other Prayer, added to the Words of Exodus, wherein is commemorated the Paſſage thro' the Red-Sea, ſhe likewiſe ſubjoins, as in the firſt Prayer, the Truth to the Type, humbly beſeeching Almighty God, that as he deliver'd the Hebrews from their Captivity in Egypt, ſo he would likewiſe be pleaſed to ſave all Nations by the Waters of Baptiſm.

THE ſame Obſervation may eaſily be made in the Office for Saturday before Whit-Sunday; for then we read the Law and the Prophets, as on the Saturday in Paſſion Week; and becauſe the Jews received the Law on that Day, [a] we read that Part of Exodus wherein the Manner in which God gave his Law on Mount Sinai, is particularly mentioned. In Proceſs of Time, 'tis true, there have been conſiderable Alterations in the Office of the Church, and the ſame Regularity was not obſerved at the Beginning as is at preſent: It has always been the Cuſtom however of the whole Church to read Leſſons out of the Law, the Pſalms of David, the Prophets, or ſome other Book of the Old Teſtament, according to the various Feaſts; to which afterwards they added a Leſſon out of the Golpels, or the Epiſtles of St. Paul.

IF there has been any Difference, it was inconſiderable, and the Cuſtoms of the Synagogues vary as much, according to the various Countries, as the Manner of performing the Offices of the Church vary from each other. The Church and the Synagogue agree in this, that they have peculiar Prayers both for ordinary Feſtivals, and peculiar for ſuch Days as we now call Feriæ; and beſides theſe, they have other Prayers likewiſe appointed for more ſolemn Feſtivals. The Synagogue, 'tis true, has this Advantage over the Church, that it is more antient, and the firſt alſo to whom God communicated his holy Word. Illis, ſays St. Paul, ſpeaking of the Jews, [b] credita ſunt Eloquia Dei. But this Advantage is of little Importance, ſince the antient Law expected its its Perfection from the Meſſiah; who was to renew it, and remove all its Defects. No Man, for Example, will ſay, that the Out-lines of a Picture are more perfect than the Painter's laſt Touches, which finiſh and give it all its Beauties. It is the very ſame as to the Law, with reſpect to the Goſpel; the former is in Reality but the Out-lines, and always continued in that State, till at laſt our bleſſed Lord came to complete that Work, which till then remained imperfect. [a] Finis enim Legis Chriſtus.

[a] Exod. xix.
[b] Epiſt. to the Romans, chap. iii.

FROM what has been ſaid, the Reaſons are very plain, why the Chriſtians have retained ſome of thoſe Feaſts, which ſeemed to be peculiarly adapted to the Jewiſh Religion; and why they commemorate thoſe ancient Feaſts in their Office to this very Day. If it be true, that Jeſus Chriſt came not, as he himſelf ſays, into the World to deſtroy the Law, [b] but to fulfil it, it was abſolutely neceſſary to preſerve ſo much of the Law as was not barely Ceremonial. And for this Reaſon, we have retained the Books of the Old Teſtament, out of which we read our Leſſons as well as the Jews: But as for their Rituals, they could not be obſerv'd, ſince the Ceremonies of the Law were not to ſubſiſt intire after the coming of the Meſſiah. And the Church has reſerved only that Part of it, which might be appropriated to the Uſage of the new Law.

CHAP. XI.

The State of the Jews after the Deſtruction of Jeruſalem, and upon what Principles they governed themſelves in Points of Religion. Concerning their Talmud, and the Manner of its Compoſure.

IT is very evident, that the Religion of the Jews was to ſubſiſt no longer intire after the Deſtruction of Jeruſalem, which was the Seat of the Sanhedrim or grand Conſiſtory, to whoſe Deciſions all the Jews were under an indiſpenſable Obligation to ſubmit. For which Reaſon, the Rabbi's in their Hiſtories, principally endeavour to ſhew, that notwithſtanding the deplorable Condition to which their Nation was reduc'd, by ſo many Baniſhments into divers Kingdoms, they had not loſt however their Traditions, becauſe they imagine their famous Schools or Academies, where thoſe Traditions have been always taught, have preſerv'd them. Tho' they could boaſt no longer of any infallible Conſiſtories, yet they inſiſt that they ever had a Succeſſion of Men who took upon them the Dignity of Naſci, or Principal of the Sanhedrim, and there are ſome Perſons amongſt the Jews, even to this Day, who aſſume that Title to themſelves only as a Mark of Honour.

THE Talmud takes Notice of two Leaders or Heads of the Tribe of Judah, whereof one was in Paleſtine, and the other in the Territory of Babylon. The Jews go ſo far as to trace the Genealogies of theſe two Leaders, and ſome of them pretend that the Meſſiah, whoſe coming they live in Expectation of, is to deſcend from the laſt of theſe imaginary Commanders.

As theſe Men rul'd over all the Jews during their Baniſhment, and there were ſeveral celebrated Schools eſtabliſh'd in thoſe Places, ſuch Jews as could no longer conſult

[a] Rom. Chap. x. 4.
[b] Mat. Chap. v. 17.

the

the Oracle of the Sanhedrim, had Recourſe from all Parts to theſe two Schools, which ſubſiſted, according to their Account, till the Year 1040. And altho' their Deciſions were not of equal Authority with the Decrees of the grand Conſiſtory, yet they were in great Repute amongſt all the Jews, who were diſtinguiſh'd into Eaſtern and Weſtern. The Babyloniſh School took the Name of Eaſtern, and the Paleſtine of Weſtern.

THE Jews therefore, obſerved as near as poſſibly they could, the ſame Diſcipline after the Deſtruction of Jeruſalem, as they had done before. And as they were ſcatter'd and diſpers'd into various Countries, they choſe ſeveral Leaders to rule over them in their Baniſhment, whom for this Reaſon they ſtiled Princes or Commanders of the Exiles. Theſe Princes or Commanders are mentioned in the Laws of the Emperors, under the Name of Patriarchs. They ſent Commiſſioners called Selihim or Apoſtles, as far as their Juriſdiction extended. They likewiſe had Prieſts or Elders with them, who were appointed to decide all Controverſies and Debates that aroſe upon Matters of Religion. The Emperors tolerated theſe Sorts of Tribunals amongſt the Jews, and even honoured their Patriarchs and Miniſters with divers Privileges; but as this Jewiſh Government in the Dominions of thoſe Princes might have been attended with pernicious Conſequences, it was thought proper entirely to ſuppreſs it. They have, however, to this Day in ſeveral Places Officers or Civil Magiſtrates: But then they dare not exert their Authority, nor puniſh the Rebellious, leſt it ſhould come to the Ear of thoſe Princes whom they are oblig'd to obey.

BY this means indeed they may have preſerved at leaſt ſome Part of their Diſcipline; but as it was impoſſible to preſerve ſuch a Variety of Traditions as they had amongſt them, they thought it requiſite to write them down, notwithſtanding, they were to be taught only by Word of Mouth. And ſince it might have been objected, that it was irrational to imagine, that ſuch a Number of Traditions could have been preſerved for ſo many Ages, and in the total Subverſion of their Government, they have artfully enough ſuppos'd that a particular Set of Wiſemen or Rabbi's taught thoſe Traditions from Time to Time in their ſeveral Ages, even from Moſes to the Perſon who firſt put them into writing. Some of them indeed (and amongſt others Rabbi Moſes) add that each Principal of the Sanhedrim kept private Memorandums of thoſe Traditions, which however were publiſhed by Word of Mouth only. And ſuch as received them from the Mouth of thoſe Doctors, committed them to writing for their own private Improvement and Information.

RABBI JUDAH therefore, who was, as is generally acknowledg'd, the firſt Compiler of theſe Traditions, only made a Collection of them from the various Manuſcripts which were extant in his Time, and which he conſulted with the utmoſt Care and Induſtry. This Doctor, who was the Naſci or Preſident of the Sanhedrim, lived in the ſecond Century under both the Antonins: But the Jewiſh Hiſtorians differ as to the Time when he finiſh'd this Collection, which was univerſally received by the Jews, and taught without Diſtinction in the Schools of Paleſtine and Babylon. This Collection has from that Time been a Guide for the Jews in all religious Debates, and was called the Miſna, that is, the Repetition, or rather Expoſition of the written Law. The Stile of it is very perſpicuous, but very laconic. And ſince the Naſci or Princes of the Conſiſtories had given various Deciſions upon the ſame Subject, Rabbi Judah gives an Account of them all; which makes his Work obſcure, and ſometimes unintelligible; for he does not always point out the Opinion which he beſt approves of, and which ought to be follow'd. Some of the Jews, however, have cleared up this Obſcurity in ſome meaſure, by ſetting an Aſteriſm, or ſome other particular Mark, to the Names of thoſe Rabbi's, whoſe Deciſions have the Sanction of a Law. And moreover, there are Editions of the Miſnajot, in which the Deciſions, which are to be their Rule and Guide, are carefully diſtinguiſhed.

THE Treatiſe entitled the Miſna, which we have juſt before mentioned, and which is now the Text of the Talmud, being written in ſo conciſe a Stile that it cannot anſwer all the Difficulties which daily occur relating to the Law, the Doctors who ſucceeded Rabbi Judah, added ſome ſhort Remarks or Annotations to it, whereof ſome were called Toſiphetot, Additions, by way of Supplement : The others are entitled Barajetot, that is Gloſſes beſide the Text. But theſe ſhort Commentaries not being yet ſufficient to reſolve all the Queſtions propoſed upon the Law, it was thought requiſite to compoſe a more copious Expoſition of the Miſna, which they call Gemara or Perfection ; and this Gemara is in Reality what the Jews now call the Talmud.

As they had two celebrated Schools, as abovemention'd, and as the Miſna was taught in both, ſo they have compoſed two Kinds of Talmuds. The firſt is that of Jeruſalem, whereof the Founder is ſuppoſed to be Rabbi Johanan, Preſident or Naſci of the School which was in Paleſtine. The Time when he flouriſh'd is not preciſely determin'd ; and the Jews themſelves are divided in their Sentiments about it ; for ſome imagine that he was living towards the End of the third Century ; and others towards the End of the fourth. The ſecond Talmud is called the Talmud of Babylon, becauſe it was compoſed by Rabbi Aſſe, who was Preſident of a School in that Country, at the Beginning, or, as ſome ſay, about the Middle of the ſixth Century ; others, however, pretend it was written about the Beginning of the fifth Century. However juſt theſe ſeveral Opinions of the Jewiſh Writers may be, who indeed ſeem to ground them on the various Times when the Talmud was written, they all agree in this, that the Talmud of Babylon was compoſed at leaſt a hundred Years after that of Jeruſalem. Moreover, when they ſpeak of the Talmud, they for the moſt part mean that of Babylon, which is more copious and extenſive than that of Jeruſalem, which they ſeldom make uſe of, as being too conciſe and too obſcure.

THE Gemara or Babyloniſh Talmud, which is the Rule by which the Jews are directed in all their Ceremonies and Affairs both Civil and Criminal, is compos'd in the Chaldean Language as it was then written, which is difficult to be underſtood, on Account of its Deviation from the antient Chaldean, which was ſpoken with much more Purity at Babylon. But beſides this Inconvenience, in reſpect of Language, it abounds with a vaſt Number of uſeleſs and impertinent Queſtions and Stories, or rather fictitious and romantic Amuſements, which the illiterate Vulgar imagine to be true. But a Man of the leaſt Penetration may with eaſe diſcover, that they are nothing more than Allegories invented by injudicious Men, and fit for no other Purpoſe than to expoſe the Jews to Contempt and Ridicule. There are palpable Errors in this Talmud of theirs, even with reſpect to Hiſtory and Chronology : But ſuch Jews as are Men of any Underſtanding, give no Credit to theſe kind of Facts, without a ſerious Enquiry into the Truth of them. But it would be look'd upon as a Crime, or a Kind of Apoſtacy, not to admit of their Deciſions or Expoſitions of the Law, for which they have as high a Veneration as if they came directly to them from the Mouth of Moſes himſelf. Halacah la Moſce mi Sinai, is their Favourite Expreſſion ; This is a Tradition which God delivered to Moſes from Mount Sinai : And under this ſpecious Name of Tradition, the Jews have received the impertinent Tales which their Doctors have impos'd on them, as if God himſelf had revealed them. They are not permitted ſo much as to enquire into the Veracity of them, unleſs they are fond of falling into the Hereſy of the Caraïtes. If any one demands a Reaſon for all theſe Gloſſes of their Forefathers, which ſeem at leaſt to deviate ſo very much from the Text of the Law, the only Anſwer they give is this ; Ameru hacamenu ; that is, Our Wiſemen or Rabbi's have ſaid ſo.

CHAP.

CHAP. XII.

Concerning the Succeſſion of the Jewiſh Rabbi's who came after the Talmud. Some Reflections on the Riſe of thoſe idle and impertinent Traditions which are contained in the Talmud. Concerning their Cuſtoms and local Practices.

THE whole Body of their Tradition being compris'd in that Collection entitled the Talmud, their Rabbi's who liv'd afterwards were diſtinguiſh'd by the Name of Seboreans, that is, Perſons who offer their Opinions, becauſe in Reality their Deciſions had not the Weight or Authority of a Law with them. Rabbi Moſes, however, does not once mention theſe ſpeculative Rabbi's in the Introduction to his Abridgment of the Talmud, but proceeds directly to thoſe who bear the Title of Geonim, or Excellent, on Account of their ſuperior Knowledge of the Law. Theſe Geonim, who lived in the Territory of Babylon, compoſed ſeveral Books for the Expoſition of the Gemara, and were conſulted by the other Jews from all Parts: But the Arabians having made themſelves Maſters of that Country, and having deſtroy'd all the Schools which were eſtabliſh'd there, the Geonim flew for Refuge into Europe, and particularly into Spain, where Rabbi Iſaac Alfes, who lived about the Time when theſe Geonim declin'd, made an excellent Collection of the Deciſions of the Gemara, without taking any Notice of the uſeleſs and impertinent Cavils and Queſtions which were in it.

THE Jewiſh Doctors who ſucceeded Rabbi Iſaac Alfes, took upon them the Name of Rabbanim, amongſt whom Rabbi Solomon Iſaaki of Troyes in Champegne was the moſt celebrated for his Knowledge of the Talmud. And indeed, the Jews prefer his Annotations upon that Book before all others, and for this Reaſon have honour'd him with the Title of Head of the Interpreters. This is the ſame Rabbi Solomon whom our Jews generally call Jarhi, and who is the famous Author of Delira. It would be to no manner of Purpoſe to mention here ſeveral other Rabbi's who have made Annotations on, or abridg'd the Talmud. Such as are fond of this Kind of Study, ſhould prefer above all others, that excellent Abridgment which Rabbi Moſes, the Son of Maimon, compoſed in a very pure, eaſy and intelligible Stile. To this Doctor may be added R. Moſes, ſirnam'd Cotſi, from the Place of his Nativity, who, in a particular Treatiſe, has fully explain'd every Article which relates to the ſix hundred and thirteen Precepts or Commandments of the Jews. But we have dwelt long enough on the Talmud, and thoſe Rabbi's who have given any Interpretation of it: We ſhall therefore proceed to make a few ſerious Reflections on that important Subject.

IT muſt be ackowledg'd that the Traditions now compriſed in the Talmud, or at leaſt a conſiderable Part of them, are very antient; ſince the primitive Fathers of the Church have not only ſpoken of them in general under the Name of Deuteroſes, which is a ſynonimous Term with Miſnajot, but have alſo quoted ſome of them verbatim, as they are at preſent to be met with in the Books of the Jews. For our better Satisfaction, we need only peruſe the Writings of Origen, St. Epiphanius, and St. Jerom, but particularly the laſt, who quotes a vaſt Number of them in his Annotations chiefly on the Prophets. The Jews, in all Probability, invented moſt of thoſe Traditions when they had no ſettled Oracle to conſult; and that ſome time after their Return from Babylon to Jeruſalem, their Rabbi's were fond of gaining Applauſe by their new Interpretations of the Law.

THESE

THESE new Interpretations divided them into various Sects, which afterwards affected to differ, as much as poſſible, from each other, which is a common Practice on ſuch Occaſions. The Phariſees, who preſerved the Law with the Traditions of their Fathers, enlarged their Number, in order to oppoſe, with the greater Warmth and Zeal, the Opinions of the Sadducees, who, on the contrary, would admit of none. Theſe two Sects could never keep up a Medium, which would have been to obſerve with all the Punctuality imaginable ſuch Traditions as were requiſite for the Expoſition of the obſcure Paſſages in the Law, and for the Maintenance of Diſcipline and Decorum in their Government. This was the Reaſon that induc'd our bleſſed Lord, not only to reprove the Sadducees, who ſubverted the moſt valuable Part of the Jewiſh Religion, by rejecting all Traditions whatſoever, but the Phariſees too, who had made the Religion of their Fathers ridiculous, by their additional Traditions, which very much deviated from the Text of the Law.

FROM hence, in my Opinion, aroſe all thoſe Fables and idle Allegories now compris'd in the Books of the Talmud. The Phariſees becoming at laſt the moſt prevailing Sect amongſt the Jews, during the Time of their Diſperſion, the Patriarchs and Preſidents of their moſt conſiderable Schools ſpread this Doctrine throughout all the Countries where there were any Jews. There were but a very few Rabbi's who were Schiſmaticks, and with Obſtinacy and Perverſeneſs oppoſed this vaſt Number of Traditions; being impatient to ſee ſuch a Number of idle Chimera's ſtand in Competition with the Text of the Law. For which Reaſon, they were called by the Name of Caraïtes, that is, a particular Order of Men, who hold the Text of the Scripture, though at the ſame Time they reject only ſuch Traditions as they imagine were ill-grounded: And even at preſent they read the Books of the Talmud, to which they conform themſelves in moſt Things which relate to Decency and Order.

ALTHOUGH the Jews pretend that their Traditions had never appeared in Writing, if it had not been for the Misfortunes of the Times, yet it would have been very difficult for them, as they were ſo numerous, to avoid it. And indeed their principal Traditions, thro' Careleſſneſs are loſt, and amongſt others thoſe which related to their Sacrifices: Nay, they are perfect Strangers to the Names of ſeveral Animals, which they are prohibited by their Law to eat, and yet, notwithſtanding their Ignorance, they have now the Aſſurance to affirm, that they have preſerved the Law of Moſes in its Purity and Perfection, with the very Interpretation of it, which he received from the Mouth of God upon Mount Sinaï.

BUT if we will but ſearch with the leaſt Application imaginable, into the ſeveral Collections which the Jews have at different Times made of their Conſtitutions, we ſhall find nothing extraordinary in them, nothing but what may be met with in other Religions, which have their Ceremonies, and in other Books in which their Diſcipline is compris'd: So that there is no Neceſſity on that account to aſcribe them to God, as their Author. It is very probable therefore, that theſe Collections were made by the Heads or Preſidents of their celebrated Schools, and afterwards diſperſed all over their whole Nation, on account of their intrinſic Merit. The Rabbi's after this, pretended, in order to give them a greater Sanction, that the Deciſions compriſed in thoſe Books were delivered to Moſes with the Text of the Law; but they have brought down ſo many Follies and extravagant Fancies from Mount Sinaï, that this alone is ſufficient to prevent our giving any Credit to thoſe very Things, which otherwiſe in themſelves carry an Air of Truth along with them.

BESIDES theſe Conſtitutions compriſed in the Talmud, and to which all the Jews are forced to ſubmit, they have ſome certain Cuſtoms, which differ according to the different Countries in which they live. Theſe local Cuſtoms are called Minhagim Cuſtoms; and in order order to retain them the better, they have written ſeveral particular Treatiſes for that Purpoſe. Theſe Cuſtoms are evident, and eaſy to be obſerv'd even in their Prayer Books, wherein there is a Variation either as to the Order, or to the Things themſelves. The Rabbi's have likewiſe treated of their Dinim, or Judgments, which may be reduced to Cuſtoms; becauſe the Jews vary alſo in them, and becauſe thoſe Dinim only contain ſome plauſible Reaſons why a Ceremony may be perform'd in one Manner rather than another.

CHAP. XIII.

Concerning the Books made Uſe of in the Synagogues; and the principal Study of the Jews.

WE have already obſerved, where we treated of the Prayers of the Jews, that they have Books written after various Modes, wherein all thoſe Prayers are collected. Every Nation, in this Particular, follows its own Cuſtoms, which is no Hindrance however to their agreeing in what relates to the Body of Prayers in general. Beſides theſe Books of Devotion, which they call Sedec Tephillot, or Order of Prayers, they have another Book, entitled Mahazor, which not only includes their Office for the whole Year, but alſo ſelect Verſes or Anthems, which they ſing in their Synagogues on particular Sabbath-Days, and other Holy-Days; and theſe Verſes are very hard to underſtand, on Account of their Style, which is very conciſe, and very intricate. I ſhall here ſay nothing of the Sefer Tora, or Book of the Law, whereof there are always divers Copies in every Synagogue, written in a very ſingular Manner, and with a ſuperſtitious Exactneſs. As for Example, if the Parchment on which the Law is to be written be prepared by a Chriſtian, or even by a Heretic Jew, or a Samaritan, it would be accounted profane, and could never be made uſe of for this Purpoſe. It is abſolutely neceſſary, therefore, that a profeſſed Jew ſhould prepare it, according to a particular Meaſure, both with reſpect to the Height of the Roll, the Size of the Page, and the Diſtance of the Lines. They obſerve the antient Manner of writing their Books upon long Rolls, and I ſhould not blame them for their Exactneſs in marking the Diviſions of the ſmall Pages or Columns, in which the Books intended for the Service of the Synagogues are written, if they did not give ſuperſtitious Reaſons for their Conduct in that Reſpect: Whereas it is evident, that all thoſe Meaſures were invented with no other View but the making their Volumes appear more beautiful and uniform.

THEY are alſo very curious in their Preparation of the Ink intended for the writing thoſe Books. It muſt be made after a peculiar Manner, and the Rabbi's have ſet down the particular Ingredients of which it muſt be compoſed. Nothing that glitters muſt appear upon it, ſuch as Gold or Silver, nor in ſhort, any gawdy Colour whatſoever. So that if any one of the Sefer Tora's, or Tranſcripts of the Law, appropriated for the Uſe of the Synagogues, ſhould contain one Letter only of another Colour from that Ink which is compoſed for that particular Purpoſe, that Sefer Tora would be looked on as profane, and would never be made uſe of in any of their Synagogues.

THEY obſerve likewiſe, the ſame Rules with reſpect to ſome other ſmall Volumes, which are alſo read in their Synagogues upon ſtated Days. They have, for Example, the Book of Eſther, which they call Megillah Eſther, the Volume of Eſther, written upon a Roll, of the ſame Size as the Book of the Law: And what is very remarkable in theſe Books, which are thus dedicated to the Service of the Synagogues, is, that the bare Letters of the Hebrew Alphabet are ſeen only without any of thoſe Points or Vowels, which are printed in the Hebrew Bibles, and determine how they ſhall be read. In this they have retained in all Probability the antient Manner of writing their Books before thoſe Points or Vowels were invented. There are none of thoſe Accents to be ſeen in them for the Diſtinction of the Matter, which direct the Jews at this Time in the Manner of reading the other Bibles, which are not ſet apart for the Service of the Synagogues; for they have no other Accents but thoſe which at the ſame Time ſerve to elevate or depreſs the Voice when they read, or more properly, when they ſing the Words of the Law. They are obliged, therefore, to practiſe a conſiderable Time, before they can read without Heſitation in the Synagogues, where they admit of no Books with Points or Accents, like their other Tranſcripts of the Scripture, whether in Print or Manuſcript.

As to the principal Study of the Jews, they think themſelves, above all Things, obliged to apply themſelves to the Study of the Law, and the Traditions compriſed in the Talmud. Their Synagogues ſerve them for Schools on this Occaſion, and there are very few Jews but what can read the Books of the Law diſtinctly, and even repeat ſome Part of it by Heart; nay, but what have read ſome of the Diſcourſes of the Miſna, which is, as it were, the Text of the Talmud. As ſoon as a Child, ſay they, hath attained the Age of five Years, he ſhould be taught to read the Text of the Law, and at fourteen, to read the Miſna.

THEIR Method in the Education of their Children is very different from ours; for they are taught the Hebrew Language, and the Chaldee too, in ſome meaſure, without the leaſt Idea of the Rules of Grammar; about which they never concern themſelves: For which Reaſon we ſeldom find a Jew who can inſtruct others in what he knows himſelf of the Bible and Talmud; becauſe all the Knowledge which moſt of them have therein is grounded only upon conſtant Practice.

WHEN they have attained to the Age of thirteen, they learn the Commandments, which are very numerous: And if they have leiſure, when they are fifteen, they apply themſelves to the Study of the Gemara, or the Talmud; but there are not many Jews who have a perfect Knowledge, or can give a ſatisfactory Account of it; notwithſtanding it is publickly taught amongſt them, at leaſt in thoſe Parts where they are at Liberty to read it. We have nothing in our Academics that can equal the Warmth of their Debates, when they are arguing upon any Topic of the Talmud; for they have always their Reaſons pro and con, which they ground upon the Authority of their Fathers, and in theſe Controverſies they are ſo hot, and exaſperated one againſt another, that to hear them, one would imagine they were perfect Mad-men. Gens Ratione furens & Mentem paſta Chimeris.

As the Jews ſeldom apply themſelves to the Study of polite Literature; nay, as their Fathers have eſtabliſh'd Laws which have forbid them to read the Philoſophers, they ſeldom or never regard the Art of thinking; and this makes them ſuch religious Bigots, having entertain'd from their Infancy an infinite Number of Prejudices, from which it is almoſt impoſſible ever to reclaim them. And though the Talmud abounds with a Parcel of idle and romantic Stories; yet they pay as ſuperſtitious a Veneration to it, as if God himſelf had delivered it to their Fathers: So great is the enthuſiaſtic Folly of the Jewiſh Vulgar. For I do not ſpeak of thoſe who know better, and yet are obliged to look upon that Book as the Rule of their Faith, as well as the reſt; for their Neglect of it would be deem'd impious and heretical. Loquuntur cum multis, ſed ſapiunt cum paucis.

CHAP.

CHAP. XIV.

Concerning the Books now extant amongſt the Jews; and whether they may in any reſpect be ſerviceable to the Chriſtians.

THERE have been ſeveral Catalogues of the Jewiſh Books already publiſh'd under the Title of the Rabbinical Library. I might here take the Opportunity to furniſh the Reader with a new Set which have never been taken Notice of: But it would be more acceptable, in my Opinion, to ſhew what uſe may be made of them, than barely to name them. There is ſcarce any Science, it is true, but what has been treated of in Rabbinical Hebrew, tho' it muſt be confeſs'd, that very few of the Diſcourſes are any ways correct; for with reſpect to Arts and Sciences, the Jews have only tranſcrib'd the Books of the Arabians, which they have tranſlated after their own Manner. The Writings of the Jews therefore are only to be conſulted, in my humble Opinion, with regard to their Religion; and that too with Diſcretion, unleſs we are willing to approve of, and receive for Truth all their wild and romantic Fictions.

In order to make a judicious Inquiry into this Affair, we muſt conſider the Jewiſh Religion in it ſelf, according to its Conformity with that of the Chriſtians: And if we do ſo, it is evident, that ſuch Books as only treat of Judaiſm, can be of no great uſe to the Chriſtians. As for Example, of what Advantage would it be to them to know how the Jews are oblig'd to pitch their Tents or Tabernacles, at their Celebration of the Feſtival which bears that Name? It is ſufficient for them to know wherein that Feaſt conſiſts, and the occaſion of its Inſtitution: Which may be eaſily diſcovered from the Text of the Bible, or the Annotations, if any Thing is intricate and obſcure. The ſame may be ſaid with reſpect to all the other Jewiſh Feſtivals on which the Rabbi's have diſcourſed after a very nice and peculiar Manner. And as the Miſna, and Gemara, for the Generality, contain very little beſides theſe kind of Subtilties, they can be but of ſmall Service to Chriſtians, unleſs it be with reſpect to ſome particular Treatiſes, in which ſome Ceremonies and Cuſtoms are to be met with which are like our own, and may give us ſome Light towards the Expoſition of ſome particular Paſſages of the New Teſtament. For my own part, I ſhould be contented with the Abridgment of the Talmud by Rabbi Moſes, without ever conſulting either the Miſna or Talmud, which we may wholly reſign to the Jews, unleſs we read thoſe Books with a View only to expoſe and ridicule them, and convince them how unaccountably partial and prejudic'd they are in Favour of the Traditions of their Fathers. We need only read the Works of Rabbi Moſes for this Purpoſe, which are not perfectly free from theſe vain Amuſements, tho' ſome have aſſur'd us, that he was the only Jewiſh Author that ever wrote without Romancing. Solus inter Judæos neſcit delirare R. Moiſes. It muſt be acknowledged, that his Treatiſe is not ſo full of Abſurdities as thoſe are which the other Rabbi's have publiſh'd; but however it muſt be allowed, that he is ſometimes guilty; for otherwiſe he would be no ſtanch Jew. We may find, it is true, ſeveral Scripture Paſſages explained in the Talmud by the ancient Jewiſh Doctors; but very few of them have a literal Expoſition. Each Rabbi is fond of ſhewing the Brightneſs of his Genius by Allegories and childiſh Alluſions, which are below the Dignity of the Subject. Whenever they do follow the literal Senſe, 'tis after a Jewiſh Manner, and in Conformity to their Ceremonies; ſo that thoſe Books can be of uſe to the Jews only, for the Explication of the Scriptures, or rather to confirm them in thoſe religious Prejudices which they have already imbibed.

THEY have ſome other Books which may be of ſingular Service to the Chriſtians for the Expoſition of the Old Teſtament: Such as their Annotations on the literal Senſe of the Bible, tho' they are but very few. For moſt of the Jewiſh Authors, and particularly ſuch as are the moſt ancient, have choſen rather to keep cloſe to the allegorical Senſe, than to interpret the Text; ſo that thoſe celebrated Annotations, entitled Zohar, and for which the Jews have ſo great a Veneration, as alſo the Medraſcim, with other allegorical Obſervations, can be of no Service to any but the Jews. The Collection of the Rabbi's which was firſt inſerted in the great Venetian Bible, of which there are ſeveral Editions, and afterwards in Bayle's, may be of ſingular Service towards the better Underſtanding the literal Senſe; to which are added the Annotations of Don Iſaac Abrabanel upon the major Part of the Scriptures. I might likewiſe here mention ſeveral other Jewiſh Writers who have literally expounded the Text of the old Teſtament; but this laſt Commentator in a manner contains them all.

As to their Divinity, in my Opinion, we ought to read only the Works of ſuch as have commented on the chief Articles of their Religion; and were I to make my Choice out of their Books of that Nature, which are very numerous, I ſhould prefer the Sepher Ikkarim, or Book of Principles of Joſeph Albo, a Spaniſh Jew, and a few others written by particular Rabbi's, who have examined into the Elements of Rabbi Moſes upon this Subject, and amongſt others Don Iſaac Abrabanel before mentioned, and Rabbi Haſdai. But above all Things we ought carefully to enquire into the Reaſons which they urge to prove, that as God himſelf is unchangeable, ſo the Law which he has once delivered, ought likewiſe to be ſubject to no Variation; for thereby they pretend to demonſtrate, that the Chriſtians ought not entirely to have aboliſhed the Ceremonies of the Law of Moſes. But the Objections which they themſelves raiſe in this Particular, and which they are not able to reſolve, is a plain Teſtimony that their Principle is erroneous. It would be convenient, moreover, to conſult ſome other Rabbi's who have written on the Principles of the Jewiſh Religion before Rabbi Moſes, and particularly, the Treatiſe of Saadias Gaon, entitled Sepher Emunoth, or, The Book of the Faith. For altho' that Work was compos'd at a Time when the Jews were more fond of the romantic Fictions of the Talmud, than of the Interpretation of their Divinity; and altho' this Author is very incorrect, we may however find (by the Compariſon of his Sentiments with thoſe of Rabbi Moſes) that the Divinity of thoſe Geonim, or excellent Men, did not exactly agree with that of the preſent Jews. Theſe Jewiſh Theologiſts write not only relating to their own Doctrine, but often undertake to refute the Chriſtian Faith: And for this Reaſon their Books may give us ſome light into ſuch Matters of Controverſy, as have been more learnedly debated, and more particularly by Rabbi Lipman, in a Treatiſe of his entitled Sepher Nitſahon, that is, The Book of Victory.

I SHALL not here amuſe the Reader with a long Catalogue of the moſt valuable Books written by ſuch Authors as have made divine Treatiſes according to the Cabaliſtic Principles, becauſe none of them have one Grain of common Senſe in them. And yet it is ſurprizing to think what a Number of Jews there are, (and particularly in the Levant) who apply themſelves to the ſpeculative Cabala. What ſeems moſt rational in this Science, is the Interpretation of the Attributes or Properties of God, for Example, his Unity and Eternity: But they ſay nothing however that is agreeable upon this Subject, but what is collected from the Philoſophy of Plato, to which they have added other Subtleties of their own, to ſuit the Principles of that Philoſophy to their Law. There is a very ſmall Treatiſe, publiſh'd under the Title of Sepher Jetſira, or, The Book of the Creation, which they look upon as the Plan of that Divinity, and which ſome of them imagine to be compoſed by the Patriarch Abraham, as containing the whole Syſtem of the Divinity of the antient Patriarchs; tho' in Reality, there is in it nothing that is valuable or ſolid. But the Jews, who have ſince that Time written upon this this Ground-work, either by Annotations upon this ſmall Treatiſe, or by entire Diſcourſes of Cabaliſtic Divinity, have mightily extolled the wondrous Secrets of that divine Science, even to that Degree, that there have been many of the Chriſtians, and ſome even now, who give credit to all the boaſted Myſteries of the Jewiſh Cabala. In the Catalogue of Jewiſh Books, which formerly belonged to Johannes Picus, Count of Mirandola, there are Abundance of theſe kind of Writings, and I don't queſtion but that the Jews, who were more ſtudious to enrich themſelves than the Library of that young Nobleman, palm'd ſeveral ſuppoſititious Diſcourſes of the ſame Kind upon him. Such however as have any Time to trifle away, and are deſirous to be inſtructed in the Principles of that Science, may peruſe the Works of Rabbi Moſes Cordovero, who has made an Abridgment of them, under the Title of Pardes Rimonim, that is, The Garden of Pomegranates. But if they will not be contented with that Abridgment, and are willing to go to the Bottom of that Science, they may conſult the following Books, viz. Meppetah Hakkabala, The Key of the Cabala, Sud Sudot, The Secret of Secrets, Sepher Bahir, The illuſtrious Book, and Sepher Happelia, The Book of Wonders. I ſhall ſay nothing of the practical Cabala, which is very erroneous; tho' ſuch as profeſs that Art boldly aſſert, that they have frequently experienced the Truth of it, taking a Pleaſure in deluding thoſe who are inclin'd to believe them upon their Words. To this practical Cabala we ſhall refer all thoſe Books which have been written by them, relating to the Influence of the Stars upon ſome particular Figures, which have given Riſe to their Taliſmans, the Magic Power of their Characters, and many other Things of the like Nature, which have no other Foundation than the extravagant Whimſies of the Cabaliſtical Doctors, who apply themſelves to Geomancy, Palmeſtry and Phyſiognomy.

THE Jews have alſo abundance of philoſophical Treatiſes, having tranſlated all the Works of Ariſtotle into the Rabbinic Hebrew, with the Annotations of Averroes, and ſeveral other Arabian Authors upon that Philoſopher. Some Authors too are to be met with among them, who have compos'd Treatiſes of Logic, Natural Philoſophy, and Metaphiſics; but they have ſervilely copied the Principles and Method of Ariſtotle, or rather of the Arabian Philoſophers, who have wrote large Comments on that Author. Their Books of Philoſophy therefore can be of little uſe to any but their own Nation, unleſs indeed by their Means we may recover ſome of the Arabian Authors, whoſe Works are almoſt loſt and very ſcarce, and which are eaſily to be found amongſt the Jews who have tranſlated them. The Works of Averroes himſelf, which are now in Print, were tranſlated from the Rabbinic Hebrew, and not from the Arabic. They have likewiſe ſome Works under the Name of Ariſtotle, which we have not in Greek; but in all Probability they were counterfeited by the Arabians, and afterwards tranſlated by the Rabbi's. The Italian Jews have alſo tranſlated ſome Diſcourſes of that Philoſopher from the Latin; but we need not in my Opinion conſult thoſe Tranſlations, in order to improve our ſelves in the Ariſtotelian Philoſophy, which we may read in Greek, or at leaſt in Latin, having ſeveral Tranſlations of his Works which are far more correct and valuable than thoſe of the Rabbi's.

A COMPLETE Library might be made of ſuch Jewiſh Authors as have treated on Mathematics, and Medicine: But moſt of their Works are only paraphraſtical Tranſlations from the Arabian Text. For Inſtance, with reſpect to the Mathematicks, they have tranſlated Ptolemy's Almageſt, together with the Abridgment of it from the Arabic. And beſides thoſe, we have the Works of Alphraganus, with ſeveral other Compoſitions of the like Nature in Rabbinic Hebrew. We muſt not however do them ſo much Injuſtice as to inſinuate that they are mere Tranſlators, they having alſo compoſed divers Treatiſes of Arithmetic, Geometry, Aſtronomy, and Aſtrology, in Imitation of the Grecians and Arabians. Aben-Eſra himſelf, who is one of their moſt learned Commentators on the Scripture, has written upon all the Branches of the Mathe-

Mathematics ; as alſo, a particular Treatiſe upon the Aſtrolabe, entitled Sepher Aſtrolab le Eben-Eſra. Rabbi Mardochai-ben Comtino, who has treated on the ſame Subject, entitles his Book, Sepher tikkon celi hannechoſet, that is, A Treatiſe upon the Compoſition of the brazen Inſtrument. This Rabbi has likewiſe written a Diſcourſe on Geometry and Aſtronomy.

As the Jews have for a long Time followed the Mathematician's Scheme for the Regulation of their Calendar, and do not now compute the firſt Day of the Moon from the Day of her Phaſis, or firſt Appearance, they have been oblig'd to have Recourſe to Aſtronomical Tables to regulate their Feſtivals. For this Purpoſe we may conſult the Treatiſe of Rabbi Iſaac Ben Joſeph, which bears the Title of Jeſud Olam, or, The Foundation of the World, and the Aſtronomical Tables of Emanuel Ben Jacob baal haccenaphaim ; to which we may add the Calendar of the Hebrews, publiſh'd by Munſter.

As for their Treatiſes on Medicine, which are likewiſe very numerous amongſt the Jews, they are for the moſt Part Tranſlations only from the Arabians, and even from ſome of our Chriſtians who have wrote on that Subject. They have, for Inſtance, taken the Works of Hippocrates and Galen from the former : And moreover, tranſlated almoſt every Phyſical Diſcourſe that has been written in the Arabic Language into Rabbinical Hebrew, tho' there are not many of them to be met with in Print, which makes them more difficult to be purchas'd in Arabic, than the Rabbinical Hebrew Tranſlations. They have alſo tranſlated into the ſame Language the medicinal Works of the latter, whom they ſometimes mention, but thoſe of Montpelier in a more particular Manner.

THERE have been Jews who have underſtood the Greek and Arabian Languages well enough to tranſlate the Aphoriſms of Hippocrates, with an Expoſition of Galen from Greek into Arabic : At leaſt a Tranſlation of that Kind is aſcribed to Rabbi Hanam Ben Iſaac, which was afterwards tranſlated into Rabbinical Hebrew, with additional Remarks by Rabbi Nathan from the Arabic. To conclude, I ſhall not here take notice of ſeveral Diſcourſes on Chirurgery, which are likewiſe extant among the Jews, as well as a great Number of Botanical Treatiſes, treating of medicinal Herbs and Plants ; there being no great Probability that our Phyſicians or Chirurgeons will ever conſult them upon this Occaſion.

CHAP. XV.

Remarks on ſome other Books, written in Rabbinical Hebrew.

RHETORICK and Poetry have for the moſt Part been treated with Contempt by the Rabbi's, ſo that they have very few Orators or Poets amongſt them ; for the Rabbinical Hebrew is but a barren Language : For which Reaſon, their Preachers ſeldom or never ſtudy the Art of Elocution ; but for the moſt Part apply themſelves cloſely to Morality, on which however they diſcourſe after another Manner than we do, becauſe they therein compriſe that Multitude of Precepts which they think themſelves under an indiſpenſable Obligation to obſerve ; from whence ariſe a thouſand Controverſial Points which they determine with all the Subtilty and Artifice imaginable. As they acquieſce entirely in the Authority of their Fathers, they conſult their Talmud upon upon all Emergencies, and very often thoſe particular Authors, who have written ſelect Treatiſes, entitled Scheelot Veteſchuvot, that is, Queſtions and Anſwers, wherein their Caſes are more readily reſolv'd.

As to their Poetry, every one knows that it can boaſt of no Antiquity amongſt the Jews, at leaſt in the Manner it is practis'd at preſent, and which they have reduced to an Art Time out of Mind, in Imitation of the Arabians. I remember I myſelf have ſeen ſeveral Years ago an Abridgment of all their Philoſophy compoſed in that kind of Verſe by Rabbi Abraham ben Meſullam. They have alſo ſeveral Hymns, in Commemoration of ſome of their moſt ſolemn Feſtivals, in their Prayer Books, called Mahazor, as we have already hinted in another Place. Nay, moſt of the Jews prefix Verſes to their Works; and there are ſome of them make whole Orations in Metre. Their Verſes, however, will never dignify them with the Title of Poets. There never was a Nation that publiſh'd more Fables than the Jews, or was fonder of Fictions even at thoſe Times when they had not a Poet amongſt them.

THEY have likewiſe their Hiſtorians and Chronologiſts, tho' their Number is but ſmall, and thoſe very careleſs and remiſs, even in ſuch Affairs as very nearly concern them. No Wonder, therefore, if they are much more ſo in their Hiſtories of other Nations, whoſe Treatiſes they copy without the leaſt Judgment, and are very partial and unjuſt in their Tranſlations. How many Fables, for Example, do we find in the Book of Joſippus or Ben-Gorion, which were taken, notwithſtanding, from the real Joſephus? That Circumſtance alone, ſhould any Jew attempt to write a Hiſtory, would be ſufficient to make any one ſuſpect the Veracity of his Relations. When I ſpeak of the Hiſtorical Writings of Ben-Gorion, or of the ſpurious Joſephus, I would not have it thought that I attempted to include the Abridgment publiſhed by Munſter, nor that other Edition, ſtill more copious, which he has publiſh'd with the Latin Verſion; but the Edition of Conſtantinople, which Munſter himſelf did not give us complete, there being many Omiſſions therein at the Beginning and End, and indeed throughout the whole Work.

THEIR Chronological Treatiſes, entitled Seder olam Rabba, that is, Great Chronology, and Seder olam Zutta, an Abridgment of Chronology, as well as their Sepher Hakkabala, or Books of Traditions, which is one of their moſt ancient Hiſtories, contain but a very few Things that are worthy of Obſervation. Rabbi Ghedalia, who compoſed a Chronological Hiſtory, under the Title of Scalſcelet Hakkabala, or, The Chain of Tradition, has encumber'd it with a prodigious Number of idle Tales and Fables; the principal Aim of the Jews in their Hiſtories being, in reality, no other than to demonſtrate the Succeſſion of their Doctors and Schools, and more vigouroufly to refute the Doctrine of the Caraite Jews, who refuſe to ſubmit to ſuch a vaſt Number of Traditions as the Jews have among them, and which ſeem to have ſo little Foundation. This was the only Motive that induced R. David Ganz to write a complete Body of Chronology, and bring it down to our own Times; tho' indeed, in the ſecond Part of it, he principally enlarges upon the Chronology of other Nations. But as the Jews in general have very little Knowledge of our Hiſtory, ſo they are for the moſt part guilty of egregious Miſtakes in their Tranſlations of our Authors; ſo that it is in vain to conſult their Books for real Facts, of which we may have better Information from other Authors. The Treatiſe, entitled Juhaſin, that is, on their Deſcents, is a Collection only from various Hiſtorians; but there are very few valuable Tracts in that Collection, the Jews not having Capacity enough to make a judicious Choice.

THEIR Succeſs has been equally bad whenever they have undertaken the Hiſtories of other Nations, having only tranſlated their Books, and abridged them without any Diſcretion, which is evident by the Epitome they have given us in Hebrew of the Hiſtories of the Kings of France and the Ottoman Emperors, though it gives but a very lame and and conciſe Account of the latter. The Title of this Hiſtory, which is conceiv'd in the following pompous Terms, Sepher dibre hajamin lè malche Tſorphat u malche Beth Ottoman Hatturg, does indeed, at firſt View, preſent us with an Idea of ſomething very extraordinary; but in reality the Performance is very mean and contemptible. But as moſt of the Jews are great Travellers, and Maſters of ſeveral Languages, they might oblige the World with ſome excellent Hiſtories, if they would give themſelves the Trouble. One of the moſt judicious Jewiſh Authors that we have, is, in my Opinion, R. Azarias, an Italian by Birth, and yet he has not given us any particular Hiſtory, but only quoted ſome Hiſtorical Occurrences in a Treatiſe, entitled Meor-enaïm, that is to ſay, The Light of the Eyes. He often has Recourſe to our Chriſtian Authors, of whom he ſeems to have a better Idea than any other Jew.

As to Grammar, the Jews are indiſputably more learned in that Science than in any other: And yet they looked upon it with Contempt for a long Time, not having bent their Thoughts that Way till near the ninth Century, when the Arab Grammarians flouriſhed, whoſe Example they ſoon followed, and indeed excelled them in a ſhort Time by the Subtilties which they invented in this Art. But to confeſs the Truth, moſt of the Rules which the Jewiſh Grammarians, but particularly the Moderns have publiſh'd, are of very little if any Service.

THEIR moſt celebrated Grammarians are R. Juda, R. Jonas, R. Aben-Eſra, Moſes, and David Kimhi: The two firſt wrote in the Arabic Language, and their Works were afterwards tranſlated into Rabbinical Hebrew; but never printed as ever I heard of. The grammatical Works of Aben-Eſra, a learned Spaniſh Jew, are in great Repute, and are to be met with, printed at Venice in a Collection of ſeveral Grammarians. The Grammar of R. David Kimhi has notwithſtanding been almoſt univerſally approved, becauſe it is written more methodically, and becauſe he is a more plain and intelligible Author than any of the other Jews. And for this very Reaſon his Hebrew Dictionary is preferred before all others; and indeed, but very few conſult any other. Such, however, as are deſirous of underſtanding the Hebrew Tongue to Perfection, muſt ſtudy and read with Attention all the grammatical Compoſitions of R. Elias Levita, which contain a vaſt Variety of beautiful Reflections, both moral and divine, which are indeed abſolutely neceſſary for the underſtanding of the ſacred Scripture.

I SHALL not here enlarge on the Rabbinical Hebrew, that is to ſay, on the Language in which the Jews have written for ſeveral Ages; ſince there is no Grammar of it extant, and likewiſe ſince that Language varies according to its various Writers. The Grounds of the Rabbinical Hebrew, it is true, were taken from the Hebrew of the Old Teſtament, which every one has copied as cloſely and accurately as he could; but the Spaniards have intermixed Words of their own with it, and the French, and all other Nations have done the ſame in their reſpective Languages. If any one, however, is a perfect Maſter of the Hebrew of the Bible, he may underſtand with Eaſe the Writings of the moſt celebrated Rabbi's, who have made literal Annotations on the ſacred Scripture; for they have but a very few particular Expreſſions, which by Practice may quickly be attain'd; and beſides there are ſeveral Dictionaries, that explain the foreign Words which occur in any Language whatſoever. The Jews for the moſt part conſult the Dictionary, called Aruc, which the Conſtantinopolitan Jews abridg'd under the Title of Aruc hakketſer, that is to ſay, The little Aruc. And in this Dictionary the Words of the Talmud are all to be met with: But as it is written in Rabbinical Hebrew, it will be of but little Service, unleſs to thoſe who have already attain'd a conſiderable Knowledge of the Rabbi's; for which Reaſon I ſhould rather recommend to my Readers the Dictionary of David de Pomis, an Italian Jew, printed at Venice in the Year 1587. This Dictionary has one peculiar Advantage, which is, that it is printed in two Columns, the the firſt whereof gives the Hebrew Words of the Bible, with their Explanations in Latin and Italian, and the other the Rabbinic Hebrew Words, which he calls Foreign Dictions, to diſtinguiſh them from thoſe that are purely Hebrew. And to this he has added an Interpretation, written firſt in Rabbinical Hebrew, and then in Latin and Italian; ſo that by the Aſſiſtance of this Dictionary, any one may learn the Language of the Rabbi's with much more Eaſe than by the large Talmudic and Rabbinic Dictionary of Buxtorf, which is more copious and extenſive.

CHAP. XVI.

Concerning the Uſefulneſs of the Hebrew Language, and whether a Divine ought to ſtudy it; with ſome Reaſons for queſtioning the Neceſſity of it.

IT is impoſſible, if we will believe St. Jerom and St. Auſtin, for us to acquire a perfect Knowledge of the ſacred Scriptures, which contain the chief Grounds of our Religion; without being well verſed in the Greek and Hebrew Languages, and thereby enabled to conſult the Originals, whenever we are at a Loſs. I ſpeak, ſays St. Auſtin, to ſuch as underſtand the [a] Latin; who ought alſo to have a competent Knowledge of the Greek and Hebrew, that in caſe any Difficulties ariſe they may be able to conſult the Originals which have been tranſlated into Latin. Latinæ quidem linguæ Homines quos nunc inſtruendos ſuſcepimus, & duabus aliis ad Scripturarum cognitionem habent opus, Hebræâ ſcilicet, & Græca, ut ad exemplaria præcedentia recurratur, ſi quam dubitationem attulerit Latinorum interpretum infinita varietas. When any civil Concern is to be determin'd before a Judge, the Copy only of a Deed is never regarded, but the Original itſelf muſt be produced; in Matters of Religion however it is not ſo; for many of our Divines are too lazy to conſult the Original Authors, but ſit down contented with ſuch Tranſlations of them as are either defective or obſcure.

I MUST confeſs, indeed, that it may be alledged in favour of the preſent Age, that it is needleſs to have Recourſe to the Originals, ſince the Council of Trent has pronounced the Latin Verſion to be authentic; and moreover the numerous Tranſlations which have been made into divers Languages, from the very Text of the Bible itſelf, may in ſome meaſure ſupply the Place of Originals. To which we may add, that an infinite Number of Men, who were eminent and learned in the Oriental Languages, have explained whatever appeared difficult in the Style of the Scripture. This ſeems to me the moſt plauſible Excuſe that can be made in Behalf of ſuch Divines as neglect the Study of the Hebrew Language, and are perſuaded, that if, on the one Hand, it be not altogether uſeleſs, at leaſt, on the other, that Deficiency may be ſupplied by ſhorter and leſs troubleſom Expedients.

BUT without our being obliged to give the Reaſons which induced the Fathers of the Council of Trent to declare the antient Latin Verſion authentic, it is impoſſible for the Vulgate to have a greater Authority at preſent than the Greek Verſion of the Septuagint had in the primitive Ages of the Church, ſince it was thought to be inſpired and prophetic to the Time of St. Jerom, who was the firſt that began to queſtion its divine Authority. The primitive Fathers, however, always had Recourſe to the Greek Tranſlations from the original Hebrew, for the Interpretation of the Scripture. Could they have conſulted the Originals themſelves, they would indiſputably have done it; ſince they teſtified ſo great a regard for the indefatigable Labours of Origen, who had rang'd thoſe antient Greek Tranſlations in diſtinct Columns with the Verſion of the Septuagint in the Middle. The Annotations of the Greek Fathers upon the Old Teſtament cannot be read, but we ſhall frequently find the Names of Aquila, Symmacus, Theodotion, with other antient Tranſlators, and the Samaritan Commentator too, who had tranſlated likewiſe the Pentateuch into Greek for the particular Service of the Samaritans.

[a] St. Aug. Lib. ii. of the Chriſt. Doct. Chap. ii.

IT may be ſaid, that we likewiſe have now the ſame, or indeed greater Helps, for the Explication of ſuch Difficulties as occur in the Vulgate, ſince we have ſeveral good Latin Tranſlations from the Original. But this very Circumſtance makes the Knowledge of the Hebrew Language ſtill more neceſſary, in order to determine which of all thoſe Tranſlations ought to be preferred, as St. Auſtin, in the Words already quoted, has judiciouſly obſerv'd. Beſides, how many dubious and obſcure Expreſſions are there, whereof we cannot rightly determine the Senſe, but by having Recourſe to the Originals? Not but that all theſe various Verſions ſerve in a great meaſure to clear up thoſe Difficulties; and altho' in St. Auſtin's Time there was a Latin Tranſlation likewiſe, then called Antient and Vulgate, yet he rightly approved of the other Tranſlations, which were almoſt innumerable. Latinorum interpretum, ſaith he, infinita varietas. But notwithſtanding all theſe Helps, a Knowledge of the Hebrew Tongue, is, in his Opinion, abſolutely neceſſary, in order to conſult the Originals, or, as that pious and learned Man expreſſes himſelf, Ut ad exemplaria præcedentia recurratur. It is very difficult to have a perfect and clear Idea of the Force and Propriety of Hebrew Words by Tranſlations only, even allowing them to be faithful and correct, every Tongue having its peculiar Idioms, which for the Generality loſe their Beauty when tranſlated into another Language. It would be an eaſy Matter to produce ſeveral Inſtances, but that would be too great a Digreſſion; and beſides, I imagine every one is already convinced of this Truth by his own Experience.

I SHALL only add, that this Application to the Study of the Hebrew Language habituates the Mind to a greater Accuracy and Readineſs in the Style of the Scripture, as will be very evident by a Compariſon of St. Jerom's Annotations, and the Old Teſtament, with thoſe of the other Fathers, who lived before or after him. How many trivial Queſtions do we meet with in the Writings of ſome Divines, for want of Judgment or an Inability to conſult the Originals of the Scripture? Some of the moſt curious and inquiſitive among them embaraſs and confound themſelves extremely to find out whether Man is born with one original Sin only, or with many; which critical Enquiry ariſes from the following Words in the Vulgate; In iniquitatibus conceptus ſum & in peccatis concepit me mater mea; but the Hebrew Text, where it is written, In iniquitate & in peccato, ſolves the Queſtion beyond all Diſpute.

HERE we might with Propriety enough produce ſome Inſtances of the happy Diſcoveries which have been made in the Scripture, principally in our own Age, through the Knowledge of the Hebrew Language; but it would be tedious, if not triflng, to expatiate on a Subject which has already been ſufficiently demonſtrated. Cardinal Cajetanus was ſo fully perſuaded of the Neceſſity there was to underſtand the Hebrew Language, for the better Expoſition of the Books in the Old Teſtament, that although he was not of a proper Age at that Time to apply himſelf to the Study of it, yet he conſulted with, and procur'd the Aſſiſtance of ſuch as were moſt learned in that Tongue, whether Jews or Chriſtians, for the Completion of the Annotations which he has written upon thoſe Books. It would be beſt, therefore, to ſtudy betimes the Hebrew Language, when the Memory is more capable of Exerciſe than the Judgment.

THE

THE ſix Fathers of the Society, who, by their Principal's Order, compoſed a Book entitled Ratio atque Inſtitutio Studiorum, recommend amongſt other Things to all ſuch as for the future ſhall devote themſelves to the Study of the ſacred Scriptures, to examine with the utmoſt Care the Words of the Hebrew and Greek Text, and reconcile them if poſſibly they can with the Latin Verſion, [a] Hebræa quoque & Græca explicanda ſunt atque examinanda, cum vel à Latina Vulgata editione diſcrepare videntur ad eorum conciliationem quoad ejus fieri poterit. At the ſame Time they complain that the Study of the Scripture was ſhamefully neglected by their Society; for each Member, ſay they, principally applies himſelf to School Divinity, as if any one could be a complete Divine without a perfect Knowledge of the ſacred Scriptures. Such kind of Divines therefore are called by them mutilos & mancos Theologos. They cannot endure ſuch Preachers as ſtudy ſcholaſtic Learning only, becauſe they deliver nothing but their own Sentiments to the People, or if they do quote any Paſſages of the Scripture, they ſeldom or never give them their proper Senſe. As this is the Foible of moſt of our preſent Preachers, it will not be amiſs, I preſume, to repeat here the very Words of the Book as they ſtand in the Edition publiſh'd at Rome: Concionatores etiam Scholaſticis tantum imbuti ſtudiis, non rarò in ſuis evaneſcunt cogitationibus: De Scripturis verò, quas vix primoribus labris deguſtârunt, aut nihil afferunt in medium, aut parum ad rem, alienis gloſſis & fucatis argutiis Scripturam adulterantes.

CHAP. XVII.

Inſtructions for attaining the Hebrew Tongue with Eaſe in a ſhort Time.

THERE is no Language, I dare venture to aver, can be acquired with leſs Difficulty and in leſs Time than the Hebrew; for the Number of Words therein are but ſmall, all of them being compriſed in the Books of the Old Teſtament; and the Grammar Rules requiſite for the attaining of it but very few: For which Reaſon the eaſieſt and moſt conciſe Grammars ſhould at firſt be choſen; as for Example, the Compendium of Schickardus, entitled Horologium Schickardi, and Buxtorf's Abridgment of the Hebrew Grammar. I recommend theſe two Epitomes to young Students, becauſe every Thing that is neceſſary to be known is contained in them. On the contrary, as the Jews have refined too much upon Grammar, the ſhorteſt is the beſt, provided that every Thing abſolutely requiſite be there clearly and fully explained, and free from all Obſcurities, Brevis eſſe laboro, obſcurus fio.

IN the firſt Place, as to the Manner of Reading the Hebrew, a Student has no Need to trouble himſelf about the Pronunciation of ſome particular Letters, there being no eſtabliſh'd Rule for them amongſt the Jews, who pronounce the Hebrew variouſly according to the various Countries in which they live. Was I to make my Choice, however, of any particular Pronunciation, I would prefer the Spaniſh before that of all the other Jews, becauſe it is more ſimple, and comes nearer to the Manner of the Antients. But it is ſufficient to obſerve here in general, and only for our better Information therein, that a Student may follow that Method, if he thinks convenient, after he has attained to a perfect Knowledge of the Hebrew. For at firſt he ought to regard the Pronunciation of the Grammarian only whom he has made choice of for his Guide.

[a] Ratio Stud. printed at Rome 1586.

SE-

SECONDLY, as it is cuſtomary for the Jews to uſe particular Points inſtead of Vowels, which are diſtinguiſh'd into long and ſhort, he ſhould principally take notice of the one and the other, for ſeveral of the Grammar Rules which are difficult and perplex'd, may by that Means be avoided. As for Example, without having Recourſe to all that the Grammarians have ſaid concerning the Dageſh, the Sheva, and other trivial Niceties, it is ſufficient to know, that in the Pronunciation of the Hebrew Language, the Long only, and not the Short, is always to be dwelt on; and for this Reaſon the Letter which follows the ſhort Vowel muſt be doubled, and mark'd with a Point called Dageſh: Or if it follows a Sheva, the Sheva muſt not be dwelt upon. The Word Dibber is therefore pronounced with a double B, becauſe there being a ſhort Vowel under the D, it by Conſequence attracts the other Letter after it, that a ſhort Vowel may not be dwelt upon. It is the ſame with Reſpect to the Sheva, when it follows a ſhort Vowel; and for this Reaſon, the Grammarians ſay, it is not then pronounced, but only after a long Vowel. But without expatiating on all the trivial Rules of Grammar, which only overburthen the Memory and confound the Underſtanding, it is ſufficient to know, that the Pronunciation always dwells on the long Vowel, and never on the ſhort.

As to Hebrew Nouns, whether Subſtantives or Adjectives, they are attended with little or no Difficulties; but the Verbs indeed, whereof there are a great Number of Conjugations, are more intricate and perplex'd. It may be ſufficient at firſt, however, to learn them in the Groſs, that when the Student wants the Interpretation of any Book in the Old Teſtament, he may ſearch for them under their reſpective Conjugations. By this Means, he will learn them in a very ſhort Time, and even without any Fatigue; and moreover, whilſt he is thus practiſing, he will make a conſiderable Progreſs in the Knowledge of the Language.

No one can well conceive how advantageous it is to enter upon a Language with the Explication of Authors; which ſhould be done as ſoon as the Student has the leaſt Notion of Grammar, or indeed as ſoon as he is able to read. To what Purpoſe for Example, do we firſt read a whole Grammar throughout; in the next Place, learn with Exactneſs the Genders, Declenſions, and the like? as is the Cuſtom at preſent in our Latin Schools, where Deſpauterius is learn'd for many Years together, and for the moſt Part without the leaſt Improvement, for want of applying the Rules to Practice. Would it not be more advantageous to Children, to give them at firſt the moſt general and conciſe Rules of the Grammar, and afterwards lead them into the Conſtruction of Authors? They would by this Means at once learn the Rules and the Uſe of them too, which they would much more eaſily comprehend than the Rules alone without Exerciſe. For in ſhort, after the Loſs of a great deal of precious Time, we muſt come to that at laſt, and of all thoſe Rules we only retain ſuch as we learned whilſt we were exerciſing ourſelves in the Conſtruction of Authors.

WHOEVER has a Mind therefore to apply himſelf to the Study of the Hebrew Language, ought to follow the Method which I have here preſcrib'd, and, as much as poſſible, avoid reading any Hebrew Grammars, which are generally overloaded with an exceſſive Number of Rules. It will not be amiſs, however, for a Student to read them when he begins to have a perfect Idea of that Language. For then thoſe numerous Rules will no longer perplex his Mind: But Tyro's ought to have this Maxim conſtantly in Remembrance, Uſus multus, Præceptiones paucæ, Much Exerciſe, and few Rules. And for the more eaſy Attainment of this Practice by Reading, all Sorts of Books ought not to be promiſcuouſly read; but the hiſtorical Books of the Bible being eaſier than the others, ſhould be read the firſt: And even ſome of them ought to be preferred before others.

MOSES

Moses, of all the Hebrews, wrote in the beſt and moſt eaſy Stile, and ſhines particularly in his Book of Geneſis; and what may be of great Aſſiſtance to ſuch as are deſirous to learn the Hebrew Language, is, that in the firſt Chapter of Geneſis, he frequently repeats the ſame Words and Expreſſions, by which Means they may with Eaſe and Pleaſure be retained. And tho' there are in theſe firſt Chapters of Geneſis a great Number of theſe Kind of Repetitions, yet there are likewiſe a vaſt Quantity of Words compris'd in them. After this, great Progreſs may be made in the Hebrew Language in a little Time, with Reſpect to the hiſtorical Books of the Bible, becauſe the Stile of them is very plain and eaſy. But as to the other Books, which are written either in a more conciſe or a more figurative Stile, it is quite another Thing; for which Reaſon, it is moſt adviſable to obſerve ſome Order and Regularity in the reading them.

It would be better, in my Opinion, to read the Pſalms before Eccleſiaſtes, the Proverbs, or the Canticles. Theſe three laſt Books are written in a very conciſe Stile, and are difficult to be underſtood, without the Reader's ſupplying ſomething himſelf in ſeveral Places. And as the Pſalms may be ſaid to be a Medium, as it were, between Hiſtory and thoſe Books, the conciſe Stile will thus by Degrees grow eaſy and familiar. After theſe, the Prophets may be read, which are rather more difficult in their Conſtruction, on Account of the Subjects they treat of, than in their Expreſſions, which are more figurative however than any other Part of the Bible, becauſe the Prophets were the Jewiſh Orators: And for that Reaſon, they often employ all thoſe Figures peculiar to Orators; this we ſee principally in Iſaiah, who is doubtleſs the moſt eloquent of all the Prophets. The Book of Job, whoſe Thoughts are dreſt in the boldeſt and ſublimeſt Figures, not to mention his Way of ſpeaking by half Words only and Sentences, ought to be reſerv'd for the laſt Leſſon. It might not perhaps be amiſs to ſhew here which of the Tranſlations of the Bible are the beſt and moſt uſeful towards attaining the Knowledge of the Hebrew Language; but as this would require too tedious a Diſcuſſion, I ſhall adviſe my Reader rather to conſult a learned and judicious Maſter, that is able to conduct him to his Journey's End, than to apply to ſuch Books as cannot give him a ſatisfactory Anſwer, and to which conſequently he will in vain propoſe thoſe Difficulties which he meets with.

CHAP. XVIII.

Concerning the Liturgies and Maſſes of all the Chriſtians throughout the World.

THOUGH we have already given ſome Account of the Origin of ſeveral Ceremonies obſerved by the Chriſtians, ſo far as they relate to the Jews, and principally as to what belongs to the Prayers and Offices of the Church, yet ſtill we ſhall here give you a complete Diſcourſe upon the Maſs, which the Chriſtians in the Levant call Liturgy, and which is the Principal Office of our Religion, that the various Ceremonies which are practiſed in various Churches, may be more fully known and underſtood. But notwithſtanding all thoſe Cuſtoms, they all agree in the Subſtance of this Office, which takes its Birth from the Jewiſh Synagogues, and was imitated by the Apoſtles in their firſt Aſſemblies.

The Term Liturgy was taken from the New Teſtament, wherein it generally ſignifies an Office or public Miniſtry; and is applied in this Senſe to the Miniſtry of the Goſpel, as well, with reſpect to preaching, as to the Adminiſtration of the holy Sacraments. [a] For which Reaſon St. Paul, to teſtify that God had elected him for this ſacred Miniſtry, ſpeaking to the Faithful at Rome, ſays, that God had graciouſly vouchſafed to chuſe him to be the Leitourgos, or Miniſter of Jeſus Chriſt, to preach his Goſpel unto all Nations. But the Eaſtern Church has confined this Word to the particular Office of the Maſs, which they call Liturgy.

[a] Epiſtle to the Romans, Chap. xv. Ver. 16.

If we conſider this Office of the Liturgy in its Origin, it muſt be allowed to have been at firſt, like all other Offices, more plain and ſimple ; to which, in Proceſs of Time there were ſome Additions made, but ſtill without any eſſential Alterations. The Liturgy has always conſiſted of particular Prayers, accompanied with Praiſes and Thankſgivings, which were ſolemnly repeated over the Bread and Wine for their Conſecration, by tranſubſtantiating them into the Body and Blood of the Son of God, by Vertue of the ſacramental Words which the Prieſt pronounced, in Imitation of our bleſſed Lord's Action at the Paſſover which he celebrated with his Apoſtles. They brake the Bread afterwards and diſtributed it to ſuch as were preſent at the Ceremony, at which the Prieſt or Elder preſided, juſt as amongſt the Jews the Father of a Family, or the moſt proper Perſon at the Table, bleſſes the Bread, and then the Wine in the Cup, and after he has taken ſome Part of both himſelf, diſtributes them to his Friends and Acquaintance round about him.

There is no Queſtion but that our Lord, when he bleſs'd or conſecrated the Bread and Wine at his laſt Supper with his Diſciples, according to the Relation of the Evangeliſts, followed the Cuſtom which the Jews obſerved in thoſe Days at the Celebration of the Paſſover. He made uſe of Prayers, Benedictions, and Thankſgivings, as they did when they performed the Ceremony of the Paſchal Lamb, which was called the Sanctification or Conſecration of the Paſſover. For which Reaſon, our Lord commanded his Apoſtles to obſerve that Ceremony for ever in Commemoration of him, as the Jews did that of the Paſſover, in Commemoration of what had been tranſacted when they came out of Egypt. And what ſtill makes theſe two Ceremonies more conformable to each other, is, that as the Paſſover of the Jews is a lively Repreſentation of what was tranſacted at their Departure out of Egypt, when their Deliverance from the Bondage they were then under was accompliſh'd ; ſo the Office of the Liturgy amongſt the Chriſtians includes the principal Myſteries of their Religion, particularly that of the Death and Reſurrection of our bleſſed Lord, who has delivered them from the Captivity of Sin. This is conſpicuous in all the Writings of the Greek Authors who have treated on the Liturgy.

Besides theſe Prayers, Praiſes, Benedictions and Thankſgivings, wherein the Liturgy properly conſiſts, the Epiſtle and Goſpel are read, which were formerly attended with ſome Paſſages extracted from the Pſalms and the Prophets, whereof there ſtill remain ſome Inſtances in the Maſs, which having been ſince abridg'd, ſome particular Verſes only of the Pſalms are read ; whereas formerly they were ſung or repeated from the Beginning to the End. What we now call the Anthem, was in former Times the whole Pſalm, which was ſung throughout, and whereof we now only recite a Verſe or two. The Term Anthem is derived from the Greek Word Antiphona, becauſe thoſe Pſalms were repeated alternately in the Aſſemblies. For this Reaſon likewiſe, we find ſome particular Verſes of the Prophets and other Books of the Bible in the Maſs, which being ſhortened, at this Time only compriſe a Part of what was formerly longer. This is evident in the Anthem called Offertorium, and which for the moſt Part contains only a Verſe or two of a Pſalm : Inſtead whereof in the Primitive Church the whole Pſalms were ſung whilſt the People were making their Oblations.

We muſt obſerve however, that the Reading of the Books of the Old Teſtament, the Epiſtles and Goſpels, and the ſinging of Pſalms, are not appropriated to the Office of the Maſs in particular ; for at all Times, when the Primitive Chriſtians aſſembled, thoſe Books

Books were read, as by the Epiſtles of St. Paul, and the Works of the Holy Fathers plainly appears. It is not therefore (as we have already obſerved) to be queſtioned, but this Cuſtom took its Birth from the Jewiſh Synagogues, where the Law, and ſome Paſſages of the Prophets were read with due Attention. It is very probable, that the Cuſtom of Reading the Epiſtle and Goſpel in the Desk came from thence likewiſe, where the Reader ſtands in a Place made in that Form, and ſomewhat elevated above the reſt.

In ſhort, if we will but reflect ever ſo little on the antient Manner of performing the Liturgy, as we find in the Books of Juſtin Martyr, and other Fathers of the Church, we may plainly perceive that the greateſt part of it proceeds from the Cuſtoms which the Jews obſerved in the Synagogues, and which were handed down to us from them by the Apoſtles in the firſt Aſſemblies of the primitive Chriſtians. But ſome Alterations have been made by Degrees according to the Situation of the Place; yet not ſo, but that all the various Liturgies which are ſcattered and diſperſed throughout all the Parts of the World, agree in all eſſential and fundamental Points with the primitive Liturgy. We come now to an Inquiry into the Particulars of this Variety of Maſſes or Liturgies.

We may divide them in general into Eaſtern and Weſtern. Under the Name of the former, we ſhall include the Liturgies of the Greeks and Melchites, which are the Source and Origin of all the other Eaſtern Liturgies; thoſe of the Chaldeans or Syrians, which are the Neſtorians, the Jacobites, and Maronites; thoſe of the Cophti, or the Chriſtians of Egypt, and thoſe of the Ethiopians; the Liturgies of the Armenians written in the old Armenian Language; thoſe of the Iberians or Georgians; thoſe of the Mingrelians, compoſed in their own Tongue; the Liturgies of the Albanians, the Sclavonians and Muſcovites, to which we may add the Circaſſians, and other Chriſtian Inhabitants of Tartary. From all which we may eaſily judge how numerous thoſe Chriſtian Nations are, who obſerve the Eaſtern Form in their Liturgies to this very Day.

This Difference of Form between the Eaſtern and Weſtern Chriſtians, with reſpect to their Liturgy, conſiſts principally in one particular Prayer, which the former call the Invocation of the Holy Ghoſt; and in which, according to them, the Conſecration of the Bread and Wine, in ſome meaſure conſiſts, and not in theſe Words only, This is my Body, &c. This Prayer or Invocation is the ſame almoſt verbatim in the Liturgies of all thoſe Nations juſt mentioned, whereas it is not to be met with in one of the Latin Maſſes in Uſe among the Weſtern Chriſtians. Under the Name of Latin Maſſes, we likewiſe include ſuch Churches as have formed their Worſhip according to that of Rome; Part of the Sclavonians, for Example, who inhabit the Borders of Dalmatia, have tranſlated the Roman Office into the Sclavonian Language, and made their Liturgy conformable to it. The Greeks, likewiſe, under the Juriſdiction of the Latin Biſhops, have introduced ſome Alterations into the antient Greek Liturgy. We may ſay the ſame Thing of the Liturgies of the Maronites, of Part of the Neſtorians and Armenians, who have alſo conformed their Liturgies to a nearer Reſemblance with the Latin Maſs; but theſe Alterations are very viſible, if we will but take the Pains to compare them with other Liturgies of thoſe very Nations, and to ſeparate them from what peculiarly belongs to the Rites of the Eaſtern Church.

As to the firſt Authors of the Liturgy, and the Language in which it was firſt written, there have been many Things advanced upon this Subject that have not the leaſt Air of Truth in them. All the Liturgies we have, in all Probability, came firſt from the Greeks; for the Expreſſions of them are Greek, and ſeem to have been tranſlated from thence. We are not to imagine, however, that the Apoſtles celebrated the Liturgy in the the Greek Language as it is at preſent, full of Expreſſions and Terms which were not uſed in the primitive Times of the Church. But from the Obſervation which we have now made, that all the Liturgies ſeem to have been tranſlated from the Greek, we may juſtly infer, that the Greek Churches were the firſt who compoſed a Body of Liturgies, whereon the other Chriſtian Nations afterwards regulated theirs. It is likewiſe very probable, that the Apoſtles, in their firſt Aſſemblies, celebrated the Liturgy in Greek, ſince the Greek Language was in thoſe Days more univerſal than any other in the Empire, and many underſtood it even at Rome. Beſides, the Greek Tongue was ſpoke in moſt of the firſt Churches, which were founded by the Apoſtles; and for this Reaſon, they never wrote to the Faithful, even to thoſe that were at Rome, but in that Language.

To this we may add, that in the firſt Aſſemblies of the Chriſtians, the New Teſtament was read in Greek, before all Nations had made a Tranſlation of it into their reſpective Tongues; and I do not queſtion in the leaſt, but that the Pſalms were likewiſe ſung or recited in that very Tongue, ſince the Greek Verſion of the Septuagint was read at that Time in moſt of the Synagogues.

THE Syriac, 'tis true, was the Mother Tongue of moſt of the Apoſtles, and in all Probability the Jews of Jeruſalem, and the other neighbouring Countries, read the Hebrew Bible in their Synagogues; but at moſt, this only proves that ſome of the Primitive Chriſtians celebrated the Liturgy in the Chaldee or Syriac, and that the Leſſons taken out of the Prophets, and the Rehearſal of the Pſalms were performed at their Aſſemblies in the Hebrew; which is nothing, if compared with all the other Parts of the World, where the Greek Language was in Uſe. Beſides, there was not at that Time a Body of Liturgies compoſed in the Syriac or Hebrew, as ſome Authors have reported. Nothing can be more falſe and groundleſs than what thoſe Authors pretend to maintain, that St. Peter and ſome of the other Apoſtles celebrated Maſs in Hebrew; for the Hebrew Language had then been long out of Uſe amongſt the Jews. Now St. Paul tells us, that in the firſt Aſſemblies of the Chriſtians, the Liturgy and other Prayers were celebrated in a Language which was underſtood by thoſe Congregations; and this likewiſe is confirmed by Cardinal Bona, who aſſures us, that the Apoſtles read the Prayers of the Liturgy in the Language of that Country where they happened to reſide.

WE ought not, however, to conclude with that Cardinal, that the Apoſtles were really the firſt Authors of all the Liturgies, which were publiſhed in ſo many various Languages throughout the univerſal Church: For it is very certain, that the Liturgies in the Chaldee or Syriac Language, as thoſe, for Example, of the Neſtorians, the Jacobites and Maronites, are not the ſame Liturgies which the Apoſtles might have performed in that Language in the Diſtrict of Jeruſalem; becauſe the Syriac of thoſe Liturgies is widely diſtant from the Syriac which the Apoſtles ſpoke in their Age and Country: Beſides, theſe Syriac Liturgies, as we have already obſerved, were tranſlated from the Greek. This, likewiſe, ought to be obſerved, in regard to all the other Liturgies.

SHOULD we admit it to be true, that the Apoſtles celebrated the Liturgy in the Language of thoſe Churches which they founded, we cannot conclude from thence, that they are the real Authors of all the Liturgies which now go under their Names in the Eaſtern Churches. A tranſient View of thoſe Liturgies will ſoon convince any one that they could not be in Uſe till many Ages after the Apoſtles. The Greeks have three celebrated Liturgies, which bear the Names of St. James, St. Baſil, and St. John Chryſoſtome; but the two laſt only are in common Uſe amongſt them. Were we curiouſly to inquire into the Reaſons why thoſe Names were given to theſe three Liturgies, we ſhould find no others but what are aſcribed to a very uncertain and worthleſs Tradition; for the moſt learned Greeks themſelves do not agree in this Particular. This Opinion is grounded,

I am ſenſible, upon the Authority of Proclus, who aſſerts, that St. James was the firſt Author of the Greek Liturgy, and that ſeveral Additions by Length of Time having been made to this Liturgy, St. [a] John Chryſoſtome and St. Baſil thought proper to make an Abridgment of it, from whence aroſe the Names of the Liturgies of St. John Chryſoſtome and St. Baſil. But nothing of Proclus can be produced, in which this is quoted: There is indeed a Fragment in which it is mentioned, but whether that be his or not we are not [b] certain. The Author, who printed at Rome ſeveral Greek and Latin Diſcourſes of this Proclus, Archbiſhop of Conſtantinople, ſpeaking of this Fragment, ſays, that the Perſon who tranſcrib'd the Greek Liturgies, made an Abſtract only of ſome Letters or Diſcourſes of Proclus, which he placed before the Liturgies to give them the greater Sanction, and that he quoted Proclus as he thought proper himſelf, but not directly as he found them in the Text.

It ſeems but reaſonable, however, that this Fragment of Proclus ſhould be looked upon as genuine, or at leaſt, that what is mentioned therein is not grounded on the bare Teſtimony of a Tranſcriber, who endeavoured to raiſe the Credit of thoſe Liturgies he was then about to publiſh: For the Greek Biſhops, who aſſembled in the ſixth Council, ſtyl'd In [c] Trullo, aſcribe that Liturgy to St. James, which we have under his Name; and the major Part of the Greek Authors ſince his Time, not only do the ſame in regard to that Liturgy, but to the other two likewiſe, which they really believe to be St. John Chryſoſtome's and St. Baſil's. To which I anſwer, that the Fathers of that Council followed the common Notion in this Particular, which had only a popular Tradition for its Foundation, and was never thoroughly enquir'd into.

This is ſo true, that Theodorus Balſamon, being requeſted by Letters to give ſome Information whether the Liturgies read in the [d] Churches of Jeruſalem and Alexandria, under the Names of St. James and St. Mark, were genuine, ſent the following Anſwer, That neither the Sacred Scriptures, nor any Council had aſcrib'd the Liturgy which bore the Name of St. Mark, to him; that the thirty ſecond Canon of the ſingle General Council In Trullo had aſcrib'd to St. James that Liturgy which went under his Name: But that the fifteenth Canon of the Apoſtles, and the fifty ninth Canon of the Synod of Laodicea, in their Catalogue of the Books of the Sacred Scriptures, compoſed by the Apoſtles, and appointed for the Service of the Church, took no manner of Notice of the Liturgies of either St. James or St. Mark. Many more Inſtances of this Kind might be produced to prove that neither St. James nor any of the Apoſtles were the Authors of thoſe Liturgies which now go under their Names. Euſebius and St. Jerom, who have made correct Catalogues of the antient Eccleſiaſtical Writers, would never have omitted the Liturgies attributed to the Apoſtles, if there had been any of them in their Time.

'Tis ſtrange, methinks, that Leo Allatius, and Cardinal Bona ſhould believe that the Liturgy which goes under St. James's Name, and is the Foundation of all the reſt, was really genuine and has only been ſince enlarged. But the Arguments which they have brought to ſupport ſuch an Aſſertion are not at all concluſive. It is more reaſonable therefore to ſay, that neither St. James, St. Mark, St. Peter, nor, in ſhort, any of the Apoſtles, are the Authors of thoſe Liturgies which are ſaid to be theirs, their Names having been made uſe of with no other View than to give a Sanction to the Liturgies which by Degrees were introduced into the ſeveral Churches; and which have no other Authority than the Cuſtom which has always been obſerved in all Churches (from the very Time of the Apoſtles) of compoſing Prayers and Thankſgivings in ſuch Manner as is above ſet forth.

[a] Procl. Lib. de Trad. Div. Liturg.
[b] Vincent. Ricard.
[c] Can. 32.
[d] Theod. Balſ. Jur. Græc. Rom. Lib. V.

As to the Liturgies which are attributed to St. John Chryſoſtome and St. Baſil, it cannot be peremptorily aſſerted, that they are the Authors of them; for the Church of Conſtantinople, and the other Greek Churches, had their Liturgies long before. Theſe two Fathers might very probably have made ſome ſmall Reformation in the antient Liturgies; though we cannot abſolutely prove it. In ſhort, in the Conſtitutions which bear the Name of St. Clement, there is a very ancient Form of Liturgy; but there is no Likelihood that he was the Author either of that, or of the Conſtitutions.

SINCE we have ſaid thus much of the Greek Liturgies, it is to little Purpoſe to enlarge on thoſe of the other Eaſtern Churches, which have only tranſlated the Greek Liturgies into their own Language, and publiſhed them under various Names, to give them the greater Sanction. There are a far greater Number of Liturgies written in Chaldee and Syriac than in Greek. The Jacobites themſeves have above forty, which are all different, and under different Titles. The Maronites, who publiſhed their * Miſſal at Rome in the Year 1592, printed but twelve Liturgies in it, notwithſtanding they have a much greater Number, and moſt of them in common with the Jacobites. This was not taken Notice of, in all Probability, when that Miſſal was printed with ſome Amendments; for the Liturgy of Barſuſanus, a celebrated Jacobite, was inſerted in it.

THE Chaldeans, who have a Liturgy of St. James compoſed in their own Language, and tranſlated from the Greek, for the moſt part believe, that this Liturgy is the Source and Origin of all the reſt, and that it was really compoſed by St. James, whoſe Name it bears: Yet, ſince they offer no Reaſon for it, they are not to be regarded. A popular Tradition is all they depend upon, without enquiring whether it be Fact or not. The Miſſal of the Neſtorians, of which I once had a Copy, does not contain ſuch a Number of Liturgies; but that which is the moſt remarkable of them, in this Miſſal, which the Neſtorians who live about Babylon commonly uſe, is one that goes under the Name of Neſtorius himſelf, and is much longer than any of the reſt. If Neſtorius did really write a particular Liturgy, it was without all Diſpute in Greek. And indeed, this is the Opinion of Ebed-Jeſu in his Catalogue of Eaſtern Writings, wherein he takes Notice that the Liturgy of Neſtorius was tranſlated from the Greek into either the Chaldee or Syriac by Thomas and Maraba. The ſame Neſtorians have two other Liturgies in their Miſſal, one whereof is attributed to the twelve Apoſtles, and is widely diſtant from that which bears the ſame Title in the Miſſal of the Maronites. We muſt not, however, believe that theſe two Liturgies were in reality compoſed by the Apoſtles; but it is very probable that they were ſo called, from their being read on thoſe Days which were conſecrated in Commemoration of the Apoſtles.

THE Chriſtians of the Indies, who are generally known by the Name of the Chriſtians of St. Thomas, are likewiſe of the Sect of theſe Neſtorians. They acknowledge only one Patriarch, whom they call the Patriarch of Babylon, whoſe Juriſdiction extends as far as the Indies: For which Reaſon, the ſame Neſtorian Miſſal is to be met with at Goa, Cochim, Angamala, and all over the Indies, wherever there are any Chriſtians of St. Thomas. But we are to obſerve, that Alexis Meneſes, a Monk of the Order of St. Auſtin, a celebrated Miſſionary in thoſe Countries, who was afterwards conſtituted Archbiſhop of Goa, and who aſſumed the Dignity of Primate of the Eaſt, cauſed ſome Copies of it to be amended, pretending that their Liturgies were very erroneous. But after a very careful Examination of them, I found none in them, except that they give Neſtorius the Title of Saint. There was no Neceſſity, in my Opinion, for ſo great an Alteration as he made in the Latin Tranſlation of that Liturgy, which is attributed to the Apoſtles, and is printed by itſelf in the Bibliotheca Patrum.

* A Maſs-Book.

[a] THE Author of the Hiſtory of Alexis Meneſes has likewiſe inſerted that Maſs of the Neſtorians, with an Introduction, amongſt Meneſes's Works: And to ſhew the Neceſſity there was of amending that Liturgy, he aſſures us there were ſome Things in it which oppoſed the Reality of the Sacrament in the Euchariſt, before a Neſtorian Archbiſhop had amended it, who re-eſtabliſhed the Form of the Conſecration, in which it was aſſerted, that the Body of our Saviour was only figuratively contained in the Sacrament of the Euchariſt: And that none ſhould doubt for the future that the real Preſence, and true Body of our Lord was in that Sacrament, theſe following Words, ſays he, were added; Hoc eſt in veritate corpus meum: Hic eſt in veritate calix ſanguinis mei, qui pro vobis & pro multis effundetur in debitorum propitiationem & in peccatorum remiſſionem.

BUT I will venture to affirm, that in the genuine Manuſcript Miſſals of the Neſtorians, written even before Meneſes went to the Indies, and which are at this Day uſed by thoſe Neſtorians, called Schiſmatics, there is nothing like thoſe pretended Errors. It very often happens, that the Miſſionaries are partial and unjuſt in their Accounts of the Eaſtern Chriſtians; for they have not attained to a perfect Knowledge of Divinity, and for that Reaſon condemn whatever is not agreeable to their Sentiments as heretical and erroneous. But this I intend to demonſtrate in a particular Treatiſe by itſelf.

THE Jacobites, as I have already obſerved, have alſo a great Number of Liturgies compoſed in the ſame Language as thoſe of the Neſtorians: Yet it is no difficult Matter to diſtinguiſh the one from the other in the Manuſcript Copies; not only becauſe they make uſe of different Characters, but different Expreſſions too, particularly in ſpeaking of the bleſſed Virgin, whom the Neſtorians always call the Mother of Chriſt, and never the Mother of God, as the Jacobites and Maronites do. Beſides, theſe Jacobites are not very faithful and exact in their Quotations of the genuine Words of our Saviour, as they are written in the Goſpel. In a Manuſcript Copy, for inſtance, of one of their Liturgies, which they aſcribe to Matthew the Paſtor, we read that our Lord took leavened Bread, wherein was concealed the Myſtery of Life. In the ſame Liturgy, inſtead of theſe Words, This is my Body, it is, This is my Fleſh. In another Liturgy, which they ſay is St. Peter's, we read, This Bread is my Body, and not This is my Body. But theſe Variations, and ſome others of the like Nature, generally proceed from their making no Scruple to inſert their Expoſition of our Lord's Words, inſtead of the Words themſelves.

THERE was alſo a Miſſal printed at Rome in the Chaldee or Syriac, which contained twelve Liturgies, under the Names of St. Xyſtus, Pope of Rome, St. John Chryſoſtome, St. John the Evangeliſt, St. Peter, the chief of the Apoſtles, St. Dennis, St. Cyril, Matthew the Paſtor, John the Patriarch, ſirnamed Suſan, St. Euſtathius, St. Maruta, Metropolitan of Tagrita, St. James the Apoſtle, and Brother to our Saviour, St. Mark the Evangeliſt, with a ſecond Liturgy of St. Peter, the chief of the Apoſtles. The Maronites and Jacobites believe, that all theſe Liturgies were really compoſed by thoſe to whom they are attributed, in which Particular they give manifeſt Proofs of their Ignorance and Credulity.

THERE was alſo another Book printed by itſelf about the ſame Time at Rome in Chaldee or Syriac, for ſuch as officiate at Maſs, and anſwer the Prieſt, or rather celebrate the Liturgy along with him: For it is cuſtomary with all the Eaſtern Chriſtians, in this particular Ceremony, to ſpeak almoſt as much as the Prieſt himſelf, who offers up the Sacrifice: And that they might the better underſtand what they ſaid, this Book is printed in two Columns, and one of them is Chaldee, and the other Arabic. Nay, ſome Part of the Rubrics of this Miſſal is likewiſe publiſhed in Arabic: Which has not been obſerved in the Liturgies, unleſs in that aſcribed to St. Cyril, which is alſo publiſhed in Chaldee and Arabic; becauſe it was generally believed, that the Chaldean Prieſts, who celebrated the

[a] Orient. Hiſt. concerning the Progreſs of Alexis Meneſes in the Reduction of the Chriſtians of St. Thomas.

Liturgy

Liturgy in the Chaldee, muſt doubtleſs underſtand that Language, which is as familiar to the Maronites, as the Latin is to us. The Arabic is at this Time their Native Language, and there are ſeveral of their Prieſts who can read indeed the Chaldee Liturgies, but are at the ſame Time perfect Strangers to the Language.

If any one, however, is ſo curious as to conſult a Chaldee Miſſal, which is accurate and correct, according to the Practice of the Maronites, he muſt have Recourſe to the Manuſcript Copies, and rather to thoſe which the Jacobites, than thoſe the Maronites themſelves made uſe of: Becauſe the Miſſionaries who have from Time to Time been ſent to Mount Libanus, have made ſuch Alterations in them as they thought proper. It was needleſs, in my Opinion, to correct this Miſſal in the Edition publiſh'd at Rome, becauſe that Improvement principally falls on the Prayer, call'd the Invocation of the Holy Ghoſt. Now it is undeniably true, that this very Prayer or Invocation is to be found in the Greek Liturgy; and that the very Greeks who reſide at Rome are permitted to make uſe of that Liturgy. I could ſay much more relating to the Liturgies of the Maronites, but as I have already wrote a particular Treatiſe upon that Subject, I ſhall purpoſely decline it.

The Ethiopian Liturgies ought not to ſtand in Competition with thoſe called Chaldean or Syriac, notwithſtanding the Ethiopians call the old Ethiopian Language Chaldean or Ethiopian; thoſe Liturgies varying conſiderably from each other, both in their Contents, and the Language in which they are written. Francis Alvares, who frequently officiated at the Maſs of the Ethiopians, and lived ſome Time amongſt them, aſſures us, that their Liturgy is very conciſe, and widely diſtant from the Ethiopian Maſs, printed in the Library of the Fathers, which is much more copious and extenſive. The Ethiopians therefore have in all Probability two Sorts of Liturgies; ſome ſhort, and ſome long, and on common Days make uſe of the ſhorteſt, and principally that which is attributed to Dioſcorus, Patriarch of Alexandria, and printed in London both in the Ethiopian and Latin Languages. [a] Some Ethiopian Maſſes have likewiſe been printed in the Ethiopian Tongue at Rome, where may be found with two others, that, entitled Canon univerſalis Ethiopum. It is remarkable, that in the Year enſuing, a Latin Tranſlation of that Liturgy was alſo printed at the ſame Place, and reprinted ſome Time after in the Library of the Fathers.

But I cannot conceive the Reaſon why the Author of that Latin Verſion has not followed with any tolerable Exactneſs the Ethiopian Original, from which he frequently deviates without any Manner of Occaſion. It is viſible, however, that in the Prayer, called the Invocation of the Holy Ghoſt, he attempted to make his Verſion agreeable to the Clergy of Rome, and to the Latin Divines, who are of Opinion the Conſecration is over, as ſoon as ever that Invocation is begun. But the Ethiopians believe, as all the Reſt of the Eaſtern Chriſtians do, that the Conſecration is not entirely over, till the Words of the Invocation are concluded. And indeed the Ethiopians, who have printed the Ethiopian Text of this Liturgy, have not thought proper to reform that Part of it.

When the Ethiopians procur'd thoſe Liturgies to be printed at Rome, they doubtleſs endeavoured as much as in them lay to be thought Orthodox, and conformable to the Opinion of the Church of Rome; in order (at leaſt in outward Appearance) that their Church might be united to it, they ſtanding at that Time in need of their Aſſiſtance, becauſe of the Wars they were then engag'd in. The Liturgies therefore which they have printed ſhould be read with due Precaution, and compared with ſome of the beſt Manuſcripts, by which they ought to be corrected and reform'd.

[a] In 1548.

They

THEY have other Liturgies beſides theſe, under the Names of St. John the Evangeliſt, St. James, St. John Chryſoſtome, the bleſſed Apoſtles, St. Cyril, St. Gregory, and ſome anonymous Authors. And thus the Ethiopians boaſt of their Liturgies being very antient, as if they were in Reality written by thoſe very Perſons whoſe Names they bear: But it is remarkable, that the Ethiopian Church has been long dependent on that of the Copti in Egypt, from whom ſhe has received the moſt eſſential Part of her Offices.

THESE Copti have alſo particular Liturgies compos'd in the Coptic Language, which at preſent are only made uſe of at divine Service, becauſe but few People underſtand it, and the Arabic is now more univerſal. This Coptic, which Kircher the Jeſuit pretends to be a native Language, independent of all others, has received a vaſt many Improvements from the Greek, and ſtill retains all the Characters, with a prodigious Quantity of their Words. There are three of their Liturgies to be met with in the Library of the Fathers, which are attributed to St. Baſil, St. Gregory, and St. Cyril, and were tranſlated by a Maronite of Mount Libanus from an Arabic Verſion. But whether that Tranſlator made uſe of bad Copies of thoſe Liturgies, or had not a perfect Knowledge of the Arabic, it is very certain, that his Latin Verſion is very erroneous. We muſt obſerve, however, that as the Coptic is underſtood but by very few, the Copti generally join an Arabic Verſion to thoſe Liturgies compos'd in Coptic, for the better Underſtanding them, though at the ſame Time their Liturgy is read in Coptic.

Victorius Scialac, a Maronite, and Author of the Latin Verſion of thoſe Coptic Liturgies, obſerves, that the lateſt Coptic Liturgies have been rectified and reform'd by the Latins, ſince the Union of the Coptic Church with that of Rome, in the Time of Clement VIII. But there is no Appearance of Truth in this Aſſertion; becauſe that Union which they pretend happened under Pope Clement VIII. did not prove to be real. It muſt be acknowledg'd, that by a Peruſal of theſe Liturgies any one may eaſily perceive that they were taken from the Greek.

THE Liturgies alſo that are in Uſe amongſt the Armenians, might in my Opinion be rang'd amongſt thoſe of the Eaſtern Church; for they likewiſe read the Prayer, called the Invocation of the Holy Ghoſt, [a] at their Celebration of the Maſs. A Copy of this Maſs has been printed at Rome in the Armenian Language with a Latin Verſion; but the Cenſors at Rome have made ſeveral Alterations in it, and in ſome Places without any Manner of Occaſion. For which Reaſon, that Abſtract of the Armenian Maſs, which is inſerted at the End of the firſt Volume of the Treatiſe, entitled The Perpetuity of the Faith, is not conformable to thoſe Alterations, tho' the Armenian Patriarch who ſent this Abſtract was of the Latin Communion, and even then reſided at Rome. Biſhop Uſcanus, who gave another Abſtract of the Armenian Liturgy to the Author of The Perpetuity of the Faith, ſeems to pay a greater Regard to the Improvements made by the Roman Cenſors; for after having publiſhed his Abſtract conformable to their Corrections, he is content with ſaying only, that there are others whoſe Liturgies follow a various Reading, as if that Variation proceeded from a Diverſity of Copies, and not from the Roman Cenſors. Beſides theſe Armenian Liturgies, compos'd in the Armenian Language, I very well remember, that I formerly met with a large Manuſcript, which contain'd ſeveral Syriac Liturgies according to the Practice of the Jacobites, amongſt which was one compos'd in the Syriac Tongue, according to the Manner of the Armenians. After a ſtrict Examination, I found it was only an Abridgment of the Greek Liturgy, which was attributed to St. James; and this is very conformable to what ſome of the antient Hiſtorians have ſaid relating to ſome Part of the Armenians, who formerly made uſe of the Syriac, as well as the Armenian Language.

[a] In the Year 1642.

THE Armenians, according to Galanus's Hiſtory, aſſert, that the Author of their Liturgy and other Prayers, was one of their Patriarchs, whom they named John, and who liv'd ſome time after the Council of Calcedon. But I have ſaid enough on the Liturgies that are in Uſe in the Eaſtern Churches, my Deſign being only to give a ſuccinct Account of them. But before I conclude this Diſcourſe, I ſhall only add, that M. Brerewood, who has written a Chapter particularly upon thoſe Liturgies, in his Diſcourſe on various Religions, has made ſeveral Miſtakes; as for Inſtance, when he pretends, out of a Compliment to the Opinion of the Proteſtants, to ſay, that there are but three Nations, where the Liturgy is celebrated in a Language which is underſtood by none but the Learned, viz. the Greek, the Latin, and the Chaldee or Syriac. But he did not conſider, that the Copti of Egypt celebrate their Liturgy in the old Coptic, which ſcarce any one underſtands; that the Ethiopians alſo celebrate their Liturgy in the old Ethiopic, which is widely diſtant from the vulgar Language. Beſides, the Armenian Tongue, in which the Liturgies of the Armenians are compos'd, is not altogether the ſame with that which is at this Time ſpoken by the Armenians. We proceed now to the Liturgies or Maſſes of the Weſtern Church.

CHAP. XIX.

Concerning the various Liturgies or Maſſes of the Weſtern Church.

MOST Authors who have treated on the Maſs of the Latins, believe St. Peter wrote it, and that it has received ſome few Amendments only by Length of Time; but that prodigious Number of Maſſes which has ever appeared throughout the Weſtern Churches, and particularly in that of Italy, is a plain Demonſtration, that St. Peter never left behind him any particular Form of Maſs for the Uſe of the Church of Rome, any more than for that of Antioch, of which likewiſe he was Biſhop. Is it poſſible, that Euſebius and St. Jerom, who take particular Notice of the Epiſtles of this Holy Apoſtle, ſhould ſay nothing of this Maſs of St. Peter, if it were true, that he had really compos'd it? The Notion of ſuch, therefore, as make him the Author of the Latin Maſs, is rather grounded on a very uncertain Tradition, than on any ſolid and ſubſtantial Reaſons.

[a] THE Popes long complained of the too great Diverſity of Offices made uſe of in moſt of thoſe Churches, which were indebted for their Belief to the Church of Rome. Pope Innocent I. ſays, in one of his Epiſtles, That Italy, Gaul, Spain, Africk, Sicily, and the neighbouring Iſlands, are in Duty bound to conform themſelves to the Church of Rome in their Offices, ſince ſhe is the Mother Church; and all of them, continues he, ought implicitly to obſerve what St. Peter has eſtabliſh'd in the Church of Rome, and what ſhe has ever practis'd; whereas on the contrary, they act according to the Dictates of their own vain Imaginations. But we don't find, that St. Gregory the Great, who was notwithſtanding one of the moſt zealous Advocates for the Holy See, took any great Pains to introduce an Uniformity of Offices into ſuch Churches as had received their Faith from that of Rome. [b] In his Letter to Auſtin, who was then

[a] Innocent I.
[b] Greg. I. Ep. ad Aug.

then in England for the Propagation of the Goſpel, he tells him, that he was free to follow the Cuſtoms either Rome, Gaul, or any other Church; becauſe indeed of a Diverſity of Offices or Ceremonies can never prejudice the Fundamentals of Religion.

THE Uniformity which now appears in the Latin Maſs and other Offices did not always ſubſiſt. Charlemagne, in Complaiſance to the Popes, left no Means unattempted to bring the various Offices of ſeveral Churches to a Conformity with that of Rome. His Succeſſors likewiſe uſed their utmoſt Endeavours to introduce the Roman Office into all their Dominions. But notwithſtanding all their Zeal, and all the Intereſt which the Popes had made to accompliſh it, they were oppoſed by thoſe Churches which they were attempting to ſubject to the Roman Cuſtoms, with the utmoſt Courage and Reſolution. Each Nation argued as warmly againſt it, as if there had been an open Attempt to oblige them to forſake the Religion of their Fathers.

I SHALL not here attempt to give an Account of all the various Maſſes in Uſe in ſeveral of the Weſtern Churches, becauſe we have little more than Fragments left of moſt of them; but ſhall only ſhew, that the Roman Maſs was formerly celebrated in very few Places beſides Rome, and that even there ſome Alterations were made in it; the Maſs in Uſe at preſent, which we inſiſt to be according to the Roman Ritual, not being the antient Roman Maſs in it's Purity, but an Abridgment only.

To begin with Italy, the Church of Milan had in former Times a Maſs, and even an entire Office different from that of Rome, Part whereof remains in Uſe to this Day. It is generally called the Office, according to the Ambroſian Ceremony, in Contradiſtinction to that of the Roman. Some Authors, who have treated on this Ambroſian Maſs, have ſhewed us, at the ſame Time, wherein it varies from that of Rome. Walafrid Strabo aſſerts, that St. Ambroſe compos'd it, and that he ſo contriv'd it, as that it might not only ſerve his Church of Milan, but all the other Churches of his Dioceſe The Church of Milan, however, in all Probability, even before St. Ambroſe's Time, had an Office different from that of Rome, as well as the other Churches of Italy, which was more pliant and ready to conform to the Roman Rite than that of Milan, which ſhelter'd herſelf under the Authority of St. Ambroſe.

EVEN at Rome there was a prodigious Diverſity of Offices, as Peter Abalard has very juſtly obſerved. Of all the Churches in Rome, [a] ſaith this Author, the Lateran Church alone preſerved the antient Roman Office; all the other Churches had their various Offices. Radulf of Tongres, ſpeaking of the Roman Office, has likewiſe obſerved, that there were two different Sorts of Offices at Rome, one ſhort, and the other long; and that the latter, which was an Abridgment only of the other, was celebrated in the Pope's Chappel, whereas the former was properly the Roman Office. He afterwards adds, that the Pope's Officers frequently alter'd or abridg'd that Office as they thought proper, for the Convenience of the Pope and his Cardinals; and that the Friers of the four leſſer Orders choſe that Abridgment in Conformity to the Court of Rome. It is eaſy to imagine, that by ſuch a Proceedure their Intention was to obey the Rule left them by their Patriarch, and to follow the Roman Order. In ſhort, the ſame Author obſerves, that Pope Nicholas III. totally abrogated that antient Roman Office, which was the true Office of Rome, to give a Sanction to that of the Friers of the leſſer Order: For which Reaſon, new Miſſals and other Office-Books were introduced in Lieu of the old Ones, which are at preſent ſtiled the Roman Office; whereas, in my Opinion, they ought with more Juſtice to be called the Office of the Franciſcans.

[a] Abal. in Epiſt. Apol. Adv. Bern.

THE

THE Gauls likewiſe have had their particular Office, as is apparent by the Epiſtles of St. Jerom, and of ſeveral of the Popes; and it was principally in theſe Parts, that Charlemagne and his Succeſſors uſed their utmoſt Endeavours to introduce the Roman Office. Pope Adrian ſent what is generally called the Sacramentarium of St. Gregory to that Emperor, who had requeſted it for the more eaſy Introduction of the Maſs into his Dominions, and the other Offices according to the Uſe of Rome. Pepin had alſo ſome Time before uſed all poſſible Means to carry on the ſame Deſign. [a] The Abbot Hildwin gives us an Account of the Maſs as it was uſed amongſt the French, before they conformed to the Roman Rite, and attributes the Riſe of it to St. Dennis, whom he calls the Areopagite; but without making any critical Enquiry into the Truth of this Origin, it is certain, that in that Part of Gaul, now commonly called France, they had a particular Form of Maſs, widely diſtant from that of Rome: And the ſame Abbot, in a Letter of his to the Emperor Lewis, takes Notice of ſome certain Miſſals, according to the Uſe of the Gallican Church, which were very antient, and uſed before the Roman Rite was introduced into that Church.

[b] THE Maſs which Matthias Flaccus Illyricus procured to be printed at Strasbourg in the Year 1557, was by many eſteemed to be the Maſs of the Gallican Church: But Cardinal Bona has lately laboured by many ſolid Arguments to prove the contrary, and demonſtrate that this Maſs was very different in every Circumſtance from what the antient Authors have attributed to the Maſs in Uſe in the Gallican Churches. He, moreover, is of Opinion, that the Maſs, in former Times called Gallican, was taken from that made uſe of at Toledo, and all over Spain, and is no more than what we now call the Moſarabic Maſs. But his Arguments are mere Conjectures, which only prove, that both theſe Maſſes agreed in many Particulars.

IT is not to be queſtioned, but there was a particular Maſs appointed in Spain, for the uſe of thoſe Churches which were dependent on the Greeks, ſince that Maſs is ſtill extant. And tho' Gregory VII. ſubſtituted the Roman Maſs in its ſtead, yet it hath been impoſſible to extirpate the Celebration of it in ſome of the Spaniſh Churches, and particularly in that of Toledo and Salamanca, where it is uſed at this very Day. The Spaniards teſtified a more than ordinary Zeal for the Preſervation of their antient Rites, as well as an extraordinary Steadineſs againſt the Admiſſion of the Roman Office. The Arragonians were the firſt who received it under Pope Alexander II. who ſent a Cardinal on Purpoſe into Spain, with the Dignity of a Legate. [c] Sancius too, King of Arragon, after his Acceſſion to the Kingdom of Navarre, thro' the Inſtance and Aſſiſtance of Pope Gregory VII. laid the Churches of Navarre under an Obligation to receive the Maſs and other Offices of the Church of Rome, which were before eſtabliſhed in the Kingdom of Arragon; as by thoſe Letters which that Pope writ to Sancius, and to the other Spaniſh Kings, very plainly appears.

ALPHONSO, King of Caſtile, did not ſo readily comply with the earneſt Sollicitations of that Pope. The Caſtilians likewiſe refuſed to receive the Roman Maſs; and the King himſelf had never conſented to it, if his Queen, who came from France, where the Roman Rite was in Uſe, had not prevailed on him by her repeated Sollicitations. The Spaniards are furniſhed with numberleſs Hiſtories and Miracles to ſupport their antient Gothic Maſs: But as theſe Hiſtories appeared to me no more than fabulous Amuſements, I thought it needleſs to quote them. It is to be obſerved, however, that this Maſs of the Spaniards, is the very ſame which is printed in the Library of the Fathers, and entitled Miſſa Moſarabum; which is ſo called from the Arabs being once Maſters of Spain. The Chriſtians

[a] Abbas Hilduinus.
[b] Flaccus Illyricus, Card Bona, Lib. I. Rer. Lit. Chap. xii.
[c] Pet. de Marca in Hiſt. Bearn.

of

of thoſe Countries were at that Time for the Generality called Moſarabes, that is to ſay, intermingled with the Arabs.

It would be too tedious, as well as needleſs, to enter into a long Detail of the numberleſs Maſſes and other Offices of the Church, which have been eſtabliſhed in other Countries beſides thoſe I have already mentioned. Even that Part of the World which is now called England had its Offices, and all its various Ceremonies, long before St. Gregory ſent Auſtin to convert that People. For this Auſtin was not the firſt that preached the Goſpel to the Engliſh, who were then known by the Name of Britons. Auſtin eſtabliſhed the Chriſtian Religion but in one County; for moſt of this Iſland had been converted to the Faith long before his Arrival. Hoc in Eccleſiis tuis faciant, ſays St. Jerom in one of his Epiſtles, quod Romæ, ſive quod in Oriente, quod in Italia, quod in Creta, quod in Cypro, quod in Africa, quod in Illyrico, quod in Hiſpania, quod in Britannia. All the Churches in general, which own'd the Romiſh Church as their Mother, did not agree with her either in what related to their Maſs, or their other Offices; for even the Biſhops of the principal Churches took the Liberty to lengthen or diminiſh the Office as they thought convenient; and indeed frequently without the Authority of any Council. The Inſtitutions of Charlemagne and his Succeſſors, who had eſtabliſhed Uniformity of Office in their Dominions, were ſo little regarded, that from Time to Time they would make ſome Alteration or other in it. The Monks and Friers principally, who are for the moſt Part prone enough to ſet a greater Value upon themſelves than any other Men, were likewiſe determined to be diſtinguiſhed by a particular Office of their own, which Liberty was carried to ſuch a Pitch, that at laſt Pope Sixtus V. was obliged to conſtitute an Aſſembly at Rome, called De Riti, for no other Purpoſe than to enquire into theſe new Offices which daily encreaſed, and to put a Stop to the growing Evil. So that ever ſince they have been forced to have the Approbation of thoſe De Riti to give a Sanction to their new Offices.

Notwithstanding this prodigious Variety of Maſſes, which are of no great Importance, we may venture to aſſert, that the Subſtance of the Maſs has ever been the ſame in the Weſtern Church, and that the Latin Maſſes have ever had a nearer Reſemblance to each other, than to the Liturgies of the Eaſtern Churches, all of them having, as I have already obſerved, the Prayer, called the Invocation of the Holy Ghoſt, which is not in the Latin Maſs; unleſs it is allowed to be compriſed in the following Prayer: Quam oblationem tu Deus, in omnibus quæſumus, benedictam, adſcriptam ratam, rationabilem, acceptamque facere digneris, ut nobis corpus & ſanguis fiat dilectiſſimi filii tui Domini noſtri Jeſu Chriſti. This Prayer, in my Opinion, is the ſame with that which the Eaſtern Chriſtians call the Invocation of the Holy Ghoſt. All the Variation is, that in the Maſs of the Eaſterns that Prayer is ſaid ſome conſiderable Time after the Prieſt has pronounced theſe Words, This is my Body, &c. but in the Latin Maſs before it; and this agrees much better with the general and received Notion of our Schools, which is, that the Conſecration principally conſiſts in the Words juſt mentioned; whereas the Eaſtern Churches are of Opinion, that thoſe Words are only quoted as the Hiſtory of what was tranſacted when our bleſſed Lord eat his laſt Supper with his Apoſtles. And for this Reaſon, they afterwards addreſs their Prayer to the Holy Ghoſt, and implore him to change the Bread and Wine into the Body and Blood of our Lord and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt. Altho' this has been explain'd by the Greek Church, who, at the Council of Florence, declared that they firmly believed the Words, (This is my Body) conſummated the Conſecration.

The END of the SECOND DISSERTATION.

A N

I N D E X,

Containing the

CHAPTERS of the FIRST DISSERTATION.

P A R T I.

CHAP. I. THE Origin of the Cuſtoms and Ceremonies of the Jews; their ſeveral Diviſions, and the various Particulars wherein they differ, Page 27

CHAP. II. Concerning their Houſes, 28

CHAP. III. Concerning their Kitchen and Table-Furniture, 29

CHAP. IV. Concerning their Sleep and Dreams, ibid.

CHAP. V. Concerning their Cloths, 30

CHAP. VI. Concerning the Decency which ought to be obſerved when they retire to eaſe Nature, 32

CHAP. VII. Concerning their Manner of waſhing their Hands and Face, ibid.

CHAP. VIII. Concerning their Purity, 33

CHAP. IX. Concerning their Benedictions, ibid.

CHAP. X. Concerning their Synagogues and Schools, 34

CHAP. XI. Concerning their Prayers, their Cloaks or Long Robes, their Forehead-Pieces, and the Pentateuch, 36

CHAP. XII. Concerning the Prieſts and Levites, their Preſents, and their Tithes, 39

CHAP. XIII. Concerning Agriculture and Cattle, 40

CHAP. XIV. Concerning their Charity to the Poor, and their Benevolence to Animals, ibid.

P A R T II.

CHAP. I. Concerning their Language, Pronunciation, Manner of Writing, and Preaching, Page 43

CHAP. II. Concerning their Studies and Academies, and the Origin and Contents of the Ghemara or Talmud, 45

CHAP. III. Concerning the Promotion of their Rabbi's, their Authority, and their Excommunications, 46

CHAP. IV. Concerning their Oaths and Vows, 47

CHAP. V. Concerning their Trade and their Uſury, 48

CHAP. VI. Concerning their Contracts, Writings, Witneſſes, Judges, and Judgments, 49

CHAP. VII. Concerning ſuch Meats as are always prohibited, and their Manner of eating, 50

CHAP. VIII. Concerning their Drink, 52

CHAP. IX. Concerning their Manner of making their Bread, ibid.

CHAP. X. Concerning their Manner of eating at Table, ibid.

PART III.

CHAP. I. Concerning the Sabbath-Day; Page 55
CHAP. II. Concerning the new Moon, the Names of the Months, and the intercalary Month, 59
CHAP. III. Concerning the Paſſover, 60
CHAP. IV. Concerning the Feſtival of Weeks, or Pentecoſt, 62
CHAP. V. Concerning their New-Year's-Day, and the Month Elul, 63
CHAP. VI. Concerning the Chipur, or Day of Forgiveneſs, 64
CHAP. VII. Concerning the Feaſt of Tents or Tabernacles; 65
CHAP. VIII. Concerning their Faſts, both obligatory and voluntary, 67
CHAP. IX. Concerning the Feaſt of Hanuca or Lights, 68
CHAP. X. Concerning the Purim, 69

PART IV.

CHAP. I. Concerning illegal Converſation with Women, Page 73
CHAP. II. Concerning Marriage, 74
CHAP. III. Concerning Betrothings and Weddings; 75
CHAP. IV. Concerning the Meaſures a Woman muſt take to obtain a Divorce, and the Puniſhments a Man is liable to who debauches a Virgin, 76
CHAP. V. Concerning Women in the Time of their Courſes, and their Lyings-in, 77
CHAP. VI. Concerning Jealouſy and Divorces, ibid.
CHAP. VII. Concerning the Ibum and Caliza, 79
CHAP. VIII. Concerning Circumciſion, 80
CHAP. XI. Concerning the Redemption of the Firſt-born, 82
CHAP. X. Concerning the Manner of educating their Children, and their coming to Age, ibid.
CHAP. XI. Concerning the Reverence and Reſpect due to Relations, &c. 83

PART V.

CHAP. I. Concerning the Heretical Jews: Together with a Supplement relating to the Caraites and Samaritans, Page 85
SUPPLEMENT concerning the Caraites, 86
SUPPLEMENT concerning the Samaritans, 90
CHAP. II. Concerning their Divinations and Sorceries, 95
CHAP. III. Concerning their Proſelytes, 96
CHAP. IV. Concerning their Precepts which peculiarly relate to the Women, ibid.
CHAP. V. Concerning their Slaves, 97
CHAP. VI. Concerning their Confeſſion and Penance, ibid.
CHAP. VII. Concerning their Sickneſs and their Death, 98
CHAP. VIII. Concerning their Dead, and their Funerals, ibid.
CHAP. IX. Concerning their Mourning, their Prayers, and Commemoration of the Dead, 100
CHAP. X. Concerning Paradiſe, Hell, and Purgatory, 101
CHAP. XI. Concerning the Metempſychoſis, or Tranſmigration of Souls; and likewiſe concerning the Reſurrection, and laſt Day of Judgment, ibid.
CHAP. XII. Concerning the thirteen Articles of their Belief, 102

AN INDEX.

Containing the

CHAPTERS of the Second DISSERTATION,

Intended as a

SUPPLEMENT to the CEREMONIES of the JEWS.

CHAP. I. AN Enquiry into the first Principle of Religion, wherein both Jews and Christians agree, Page 105

CHAP. II. Concerning the Theology of the Jews, with suitable Reflections thereupon, 108

CHAP. III. Concerning the Morality of the Jews compared with that of the Christians, 111

CHAP. IV. Concerning the Commandments, Constitutions, and Judgments of the Jews, 113

CHAP. V. Concerning the grand Consistory or Sanhedrim of the Jews, and the Place where it was held. Several Explanatory Remarks upon this Subject with Regard to what is observed amongst the Christians, 115

CHAP. VI. Concerning the Synagogues of the Jews, and the Officers and Ministers of those Synagogues; the Rise of our Churches or first Assemblies; the first Institution of our Bishops, and Priests, 117

CHAP. VII. A Continuation of that Conformity which is visible between the Church and the Synagogue. Some other Offices of the Synagogue, 120

CHAP. VIII. Some Remarks on the Prayers of the Jews, and their Conformity with those of the Christians, 121

CHAP. IX. Concerning the Blessings used amongst the Jews; and their Resemblance with those of the Christian Religion, 124

CHAP. X. Concerning the Festivals of the Jews, and their Conformity with those of the Christians, 126

CHAP. XI. The State of the Jews after the Destruction of Jerusalem, and upon what Principles they govern'd themselves in Points of Religion. Concerning their Talmud, and the Manner of its Composure, 128

CHAP. XII. Concerning the Succession of the Jewish Rabbi's who came after the Talmud. Some Reflections on the Rise of those idle and impertinent Traditons which are contained in the Talmud. Concerning their Customs and local Practices, 131

CHAP. XIII. Concerning the Books made use of in the Synagogues; and the principal Study of the Jews, 133

CHAP. XIV. Concerning the Books now extant amongſt the Jews, and whether they may in any Reſpect be ſerviceable to the Chriſtians, Page 135
CHAP. XV. Remarks on ſome other Books written in Rabbinical Hebrew, 138
CHAP. XVI. Concerning the Uſefulneſs of the Hebrew Language, and whether a Divine ought to ſtudy it; with ſome Reaſons for queſtioning the Neceſſity of it, 141
CHAP. XVII. Inſtructions for attaining the Hebrew Tongue with Eaſe in a ſhort Time, 143
CHAP. XVIII. Concerning the Liturgies or Maſſes of all the Chriſtians throughout the World, 145
CHAP. XIX. Concerning the various Liturgies or Maſſes of the Weſtern Church, 154

THE

A THIRD

DISSERTATION

ON THE

CEREMONIES

AND

CUSTOMS of the JEWS,

BEING A

SUPPLEMENT

To the two preceding

DISSERTATIONS.

By * * * *

SUPPLEMENT

To the Two preceding

DISSERTATIONS.

NE might eaſily be induced to imagine, that nothing more could well be added with reſpect to the Cuſtoms of the Jews to what Rabbi Leo of Modena, and Father Simon (who has given us a Supplement to that Rabbi's Work) have ſaid on that Topick; but we may venture boldly to aſſert with the learned [a] Author of the Hiſtory of the Jews, that Leo of Modena has omitted divers Things of no ſmall Weight and Importance. He does not always enter into an exact Account of the Ceremonies and Cuſtoms of the Jewiſh Church; and as for Father Simon, his principal Aim is to ſhew us the Conformity between ſome of the Rites of the Roman Catholic Church, and thoſe of the Synagogue, without giving us any Annotations on Rabbi Leo's Abridgment. We imagine it therefore highly requiſite to make up the Deficiency of thoſe two Diſcourſes with the following Obſervations.

I. Obſervations on the Diſperſion of the JEWS.

ALL Chriſtian Divines muſt readily allow, that the Diſperſion of the Jews, ever ſince the Time of the Deſtruction of their Temple and City of Jeruſalem in the Reign of Veſpaſian, is attended with ſuch particular Marks of Reprobation, that we muſt be blind not to diſcern the Hand of God in it. This Diſperſion is become a Field fertile in Miracles, Prodigies and Invectives. The Chriſtian and the Jew may equally reap their Harveſt therein. Both may diſcover Wonders there, and yet behold them in a different Light. Our Chriſtian Miniſters have, from Time to Time, by the Art of Perſuaſion, found Means to awaken in the Minds of their Audience an Idea of the Reprobation of the Jews. The opprobious Language with which that People are daily treated, the odious Character they bear, the Aboliſhment of thoſe Ceremonies which are the moſt eſſential to their Religion, the whole Hierarchy of their Church ſubverted, their Tribes and Families confounded, and their Sacrifices ſuppreſs'd, are ſome of the viſible Marks of that fatal Rebrobation. The Jews, on the other Hand, find Matter of Glory and Triumph in theſe very Misfortunes; and haughtily aſſert, that [a] their Nation is the Heart of the Univerſe. Tho' the Heart is the nobleſt Part of the human Body; yet 'tis that which ſuffers moſt by its Indiſpoſitions, that which is conſumed by the Paſſions, and tormented with Anguiſh: No Corruption, however, can be formed in it, ſince 'tis endued, as it were, with an innate Purity, and preſerves to the laſt the Power of diſcharging all ſuch corrupt Humours as deſtroy the other Parts. That fine and delicate Matter, whereof the Heart is compoſed, attracts indeed a Number of Diſtempers to it, which afterwards it expels by the Strength of its Conſtitution. The Jews aſſert likewiſe, with the [b] Prophet, "that no People on Earth but themſelves are the Favourites of Heaven, and for that "Reaſon the Almighty viſits them for their manifold Sins and Iniquities." But theſe Sins and Iniquities are tranſitory, becauſe God will not ſuffer them to deſtroy the Heart, as they formerly deſtroyed the People of Canaan, &c. The Jews ſuffer by the Depravations of their Neighbours, and the Heart ſuffers by the Indiſpoſitions of the Liver, Spleen, Stomach, &c. This plainly demonſtrates, that the Idea which they entertain of their Diſgraces and Misfortunes is very different from that of the Chriſtians.

[a] M. Baſnage's Hiſt. of the Jews, Lib. i. Chap. i.

We are at a Loſs to determine how and where the ten Tribes whom Salmanazar carried away into Media were diſperſed: But be that as it will, it is evident, that ſince their Diſperſion the Jews have made themſelves conſpicuous in ſeveral Countries; and yet the World had no diſtinct Knowledge of them, in my Opinion, till after the Deſtruction of the Kingdom of Judah. [c] Joſephus makes their Number, even in the Time of King Ahaſuerus, amount to an infinite Number of Millions. One Eldad has publiſhed the Hiſtory of their Diſperſion, and endeavoured to adorn it with ſo many Fables, that it does not in the leaſt fall ſhort of the Mythology of the antient Greeks. Benjamin of Tudela has alſo embelliſhed his Subject in the ſame manner, and gives a Deſcription of a prodigious Tract of Land, whereof, he ſays, his Nation were the Lords and Maſters; but no one beſides himſelf ever heard of ſuch a Place. Peritzol, another celebrated Jewiſh Hiſtorian, has planted them in divers Parts of the World, where, as yet, they have never been found. For Example, he has formed a Society of Recabites in the Deſart of Cabor; and conferr'd on them a Kingdom in the Deſarts of Arabia. He has alſo planted the Jews all along the Gangean Shore, the Frontier Places of Bengal, the Philippine Iſlands, &c. In ſhort, he has beſtowed an Empire on them not far from the River Sambatius, or Sabbation, which borders on Preſter-John's Dominions, and is ſo ſituated, according to the Account of this Author, that we might eaſily imagine it lay upon the River Thibet. Suppoſing it was true, that there ever was a Jewiſh Settlement in thoſe Countries, we might very juſtly conjecture, that they were the Remainder of the ten Tribes. Gulielmus de Rubruquis, who travelled into Tartary in the Year 1646. aſſures us, that about two Days Journey beyond Derbent, on the Road to great Tartary, [e] he met with a great Number of Jews in a City called Samaron; and he mentions likewiſe, an incloſed Country towards the Caſpian Sea, where the Jews were confined. [f] Carpin, who travelled at the ſame Time, gives us likewiſe an Account of ſome of the Jews of Tartary, whom he calls Brutaches or Baſterques. Other Hiſto-

[a] Vide Buxtorf. Lib. Coſri. Iſraelitæ inter populos ſunt inſtar cordis ad reliqua membra.
[b] Amos.
[c] Ant. Jud. Lib. ii. Cap. v.
[d] Vide Baſnage Hiſt. of the Jews, Lib. vii.
[e] Page 272, 273. Edit. of Paris 1634.
[f] Ibid. p. 377.

rians

rians make mention of the [a] Naphtalites and Danites ſettled in Great Tartary, and of certain Sadducees ſettled likewiſe on the Frontiers of Thibet.

It is likewiſe thought, that the Jews of the ten Tribes were diſperſed into the Kingdom of Cachemire, a Province which belongs to the Mogul: but although this Notion be ſupported by ſome Proofs which may be ſeen in the Account given us by [b] Bernier; yet we cannot from thence infer, that the Jews were Lords or Sovereigns in that Country. There are Jews [c] likewiſe in a Province of China, who have preſerved Part of the ſacred Scriptures, with the Ceremonies of their Religion, and ſeveral of their Traditions: But in their Worſhip there appears a great Mixture of Chineſe Idolatry, and amongſt the reſt, that Veneration they pay to Confutius. [d] We ſhall not expatiate on the Sovereignty of the Jews in ſome particular Provinces of Ethiopia. If we may give Credit to the Relations concerning thoſe Countries, the Jews are very numerous there; as plainly appears from the Hiſtory of Ethiopia, written by Ludolphus.

Some pretend, likewiſe, to find Jews in America; though their Reaſons for it [e] are very ſuperficial and groundleſs; not only the Jews, however, but the Chriſtians themſelves too, have given into this Notion. The Reader may conſult Mr. [f] Baſnage upon this Topick. 'Tis true, indeed, one of our Modern Travellers informs us, [g] That the Indians, who live upon the Coaſts of Peru near the River Plata, have ſeveral Cuſtoms in common with the Jews, as well as the Calchaques, who live between Peru and Tucuman; that they have a ſort of Circumciſion, and never eat Swines-fleſh. Others are of Opinion, that the Worſhip and Ceremonies of the Jews, and thoſe of the Inhabitants of Lapland, are much the ſame. Were we allowed to make Conjectures, why might we not as well imagine, that the Chriſtians, and more eſpecially the Roman Catholics, had tranſmitted Part of their Worſhip and religious Cuſtoms to the Americans? But we ſhall ſhew hereafter, that by ſtraining Conjectures, we might poſſibly maintain, that the Inhabitants of Mexico and Peru are indebted to the Chriſtians for ſeveral of their Ceremonies. It is certain, that all ſuch general extravagant Suppoſitions as are grounded only upon a bare Reſemblance of Rites and Cuſtoms, can never prove, that a Nation at ſo prodigious a Diſtance from Aſia ſhould be deſcended from the Jews; and it is equally difficult to prove, that a captive Nation, deteſted, contemned, and oppreſſed by their Neighbours, ſhould ever have been able to ſettle themſelves in Tartary, &c. and gradually become ſo powerful as to eſtabliſh a Government capable of oppoſing and making Head againſt ſuch Neighbours. A

[a] Vide Schikkard. in Perſic.

[b] Voyages, Tom. ii. Page 316. Edit. of 1709.

[c] Vide F. Gozani's Letter in the ſeventh Collection of Inſtr. Letters of ſome Miſſionaries:

[d] Vide A curious Account of the preſent State of the Jews, taken from an Italian Author, in Mr. Baſnage's Hiſtory of the Jews, Lib. ix. Cap. 38. There is room, however, to believe, that the Jews did not leave Aſia, till long after the Revolution of the Kingdom of Iſrael; their firſt Settlement was in Media, Chaldea, Armenia, &c. After which they paſſed into Europe by the Way of Georgia, the Black Sea, and Muſcovy; and ſo ſpread into Tartary, towards the Northen Parts of India, and as far as the Borders of China. The Revolution of the Kingdom of Judah only accompliſhed what the other had begun. Thus they ſettled amongſt Foreign Nations, and preſerved their Worſhip and Cuſtoms, from which they often deviated, and which at laſt they wholly loſt, in Proportion to the Diſtance they were placed from their Riſe. Theſe Alterations, 'tis true, affected the Jews very much at firſt; we are not to imagine, however, any Impoſſibility in their forgetting the Misfortunes and Deſolation of Sion. There was but a ſmall Number of pious Refugees, who vowed to have their beloved Jeruſalem for ever in their Remembrance.

[e] The Americans, we are told, compute their Year by Moons; that they offer up the Firſt-Fruits to their Idols; and that the greateſt Part of the People of America, but principally the Inhabitants of Mexico and Peru, have a Tradition of the Deluge among them; that thoſe of Mexico obſerve a Grand Jubilee; and that ſeveral of the American Nations obſerve Circumciſion, &c. but this alone is not a ſufficient Proof, that the People of America are originally Jews. It is very cuſtomary for Men of different Nations to obſerve the ſame Ceremonies, though at the ſame Time they never communicated their Thoughts to each other. The Method of calculating the Year by Moons is very plain and natural, and therefore it is no Way ſurpriſing, that People, who had no other Manner of Calculation, ſhould have made choice of that Way to judge of the Courſe of Time. As for their Circumciſion, their remembring the Deluge, &c. Theſe, indeed, might as well prove, that they were deſcended from the Egyptians, the People of Colchis, or the Aſſyrians, as the Jews.

[f] Hiſtory of the Jews, Lib. vii. Chap. iv.

[g] Coreat's Voyages to the Weſt Indies, Tom. i. p. 291. Edit. of the Year 1722.

People

People, however, who [a] once look'd upon themſelves as ſuperior to all the Nations upon Earth, may be indulg'd in a few fabulous Relations, and [b] pardon'd for their Exceſs of Pride and Oſtentation: So that being accuſtom'd to Miracles and Prodigies, they preſum'd to think Providence neither could, nor ought ever to ſpeak or act but in their Favour. We ſhall not here expatiate any farther upon the Diſperſion of the Jews, and ſhall therefore refer the Reader to [c] Mr. Baſnage's Hiſtory of them, for what might be added on that Topick.

II. Obſervations on the Perſecutions which the JEWS have undergone ſince the laſt Revolution of JERUSALEM under the Reign of the Emperor VESPASIAN.

RELIGION is for the moſt Part ſeverely ſhock'd by the Decay and Revolutions of Kingdoms; and that Man muſt have a more than common Reſolution, who ſincerely profeſſes a Religion which is deſpiſed and out of Faſhion, thro' the Prevailing Power of human Paſſions. The Deſtruction of Jeruſalem by the Babylonians was a fatal Blow to the Jewiſh Religion; and tho' ſome worthy Men returned from that Captivity, yet a great many wicked Wretches alſo returned with them, who completed thoſe Evils which the Impiety of their Anceſtors had begun; and mingled their own Vices with thoſe of the Colonies, which the King of Babylon had left in Judea; but that indeed was no more than the natural and general Conſequence of a Mixture of various Nations. The Vulgar are of Opinion, that thoſe ancient Captives were all Saints, whoſe whole Employment was to ſing Pſalms all Day and Night to the Honour and Glory of God; but this is a groſs Miſtake.

THE Jews, after their Return from Captivity, began inſenſibly to deviate from the Purity of their Morals and their religious Worſhip: When at the ſame Time they grew more earneſt and zealous for the Obſervance of their Rites and Ceremonies. Might I be indulg'd with making one Reflection here, I would obſerve, that for want of Miracles and Prophecies, which prevented them from taking that for Religion, which was no more than the external Part, the Pomp and Grandeur of it, the Jews gave blindly into the idle Traditions of their formal Doctors, who raiſed their own Merit upon the Ruins of Prophecy, and thought the Surface and Externals of the Law requiſite for ſupporting the Splendor of a difficult and troubleſom Diſcipline, which was no longer upheld by Miracles. The whole Form of the Jewiſh Religion was thereupon totally changed, and the Jews aſſumed the Mask of Hypocriſy: But tho' the Ceremonies and Cuſtoms of Men appear never ſo incommodious, yet they ſtill are infinitely more eaſy than the Reformation of the Heart.

IN the midſt of this Corruption Paganiſm triumphed over the Weakneſs and Decay of the Jewiſh Religion, by the awful Power of the Romans; and as the Time of its Deſtruction grew near, this Corruption ſeemed to ſpread over the Jewiſh Church in equal Proportion; and ſo ripened them into that Rebellion, which brought upon them the Deſtruction of their State. The Roman Emperors, under whoſe Government the Jews were obliged to live, treated them after a very ſevere Manner; but after the

[a] An Inſtance of this appears in the Hiſtory of the King of Cozar. Vide Baſnage's Hiſtory of the Jews, Lib. ix. Chap. 1. and Buxtorf. Lib. Coſri.

[b] The Jews, notwithſtanding their Weakneſs, ſtill conſider themſelves as the Favourites of the Almighty, as plainly appears by the Works of the Modern Rabbi's. It is very difficult, if not impoſſible to lay aſide that Pride which ſo noble an Origin as that of the Jewiſh Religion inſpires them with.

[c] This Hiſtory contains a great many curious Collections of the Author, concerning the ancient and modern Eſtabliſhment of the Jews.

Deſtruc-

Deſtruction of their Metropolitan City, they were much leſs regarded. Domitian loaded them with intolerable Taxes, and exacted them ſo rigorouſly, that he cauſed thoſe who were only [a] ſuſpected of Judaiſm to be ſtripped ſtark naked, to have ocular Demonſtration whether they were Jews or not; and even made them Partakers in the Perſecution which the Chriſtians ſuffered under him. Their Revolt under Adrian involved them ſtill in new Calamities; and according to [b] Juvenal, they were at that Time reduced to ſuch Extremities as to turn Fortune-Tellers for their daily Subſiſtence. Not that we are to imagine that the Nation in general follow'd that contemptible Employment. For beſides the Partiality of Juvenal, who had an Antipathy to the Jews, there are good Grounds to believe, that none but the Rabble followed that ſcandalous Courſe of Life. Their Diſtreſſes however, having made them Diſaffected, they attempted a Rebellion under the Conduct and Direction of one Barcochebas, who aſſumed the Title of Meſſiah; but proving unſucceſsful, the Emperor Adrian cauſed a great Number of the Rebels to be put to Death, expoſed them to public Sale, and denied them the Privilege of ſettling in Judea.

Our preſent Aim is to give the Reader an adequate Idea of the various Calamities of the Jewiſh Nation through every Age, ſince the Birth of our bleſſed Saviour. The Rabbi's intimate, that the Emperor Antoninus Pius had a favourable Opinion of Judaiſm, and that Severus likewiſe and his Succeſſors treated the Jews with a great deal of Humanity; at leaſt we do not find, that thoſe Pagan Emperors uſed them with any uncommon Severity. But when the Chriſtians were once Maſters of the Roman Empire, they did not ſhew ſo much Indulgence to a Nation, who were look'd upon as the inveterate Enemies of Jeſus Chriſt; they recollected that they had crucified the Meſſiah, and thought themſelves in Duty bound to avenge the Indignities which he had ſuffered at their Hands. Conſtantine began by Laws that were mild enough, but Conſtantius treated them with abundance of Rigour; and publiſhed an Edict, which made it Death for any Jew to marry a Chriſtian. The Emperor Theodoſius indeed was ſo kind and indulgent, as to grant them the free Exerciſe of their Religion; but St. Ambroſe was ſo apprehenſive of the ill Conſequences that might attend ſuch a Condeſcenſion, that he employed all his Eloquence to prevent the growing Evil. The Feſtival which the Jews celebrated in Commemoration of their happy Deliverance by Queen Eſther, was ſuppreſſed in the Beginning of the fifth Century; the Chriſtians imagining, that under the Form of Haman they inſulted Jeſus Chriſt; and the Suppreſſion of that Feaſt was countenanced and encourag'd by the Clergy. There is a Pleaſure no doubt in mortifying the Enemies of our own Religion, when the Prieſts give a Sanction to the Attempt; and in ſuch a Caſe, 'tis no great Difficulty to look upon it as a Chriſtian Duty. Let us come now to the Time of Juſtinian. This Prince would not permit them to eat the Paſchal Lamb, nor indulge them in the Exerciſe of their Religion in Africa. His Charity and Goodneſs, however, was added to his Severity; for he reſolved, if poſſible, to [c] convert them to the Chriſtian Faith. They were afterwards treated either better or worſe, according to the Diſpoſition of Juſtinian's Succeſſors; but Heraclius having declared himſelf their open Enemy, perſecuted them on divers Occaſions, and uſed Violence in order to make them Proſelytes. [d] He even cauſed them to be perſecuted in the Dominions of the neighbouring Princes; for the King of Spain at his Inſtigation put a great Number of them to Death, out of that Religious Principle, which favours the Deſtruction of the Body for the Salvation of

[a] Suet. in Domitiano, Chap. xii.

[b] Sat. 6.

[c] A holy Hermit, whoſe Name was Simon of Emeſa, at this Time converted a Jewiſh Glaſs-Maker in the following Manner: This Man was attempting to make a Glaſs, and every Time he blew, inſtead of a Glaſs he made Croſſes. Upon which the Saint told him, that all his Endeavours would prove unſucceſsful, till he had firſt ſigned himſelf with the Sign of the Croſs; the Workman liſtened with Attention to the Saint's Inſtructions, and was immediately converted to the Chriſtian Faith.

[d] Vide the Hiſtory of the Jews by Baſnage.

the Soul; nor indeed were they much better treated in Spain, by ſome other of the Viſigoth Kings. Chilperic and Dagobert, both Kings of France, labour'd hard for the Converſion of the Jews, and cauſed many of them to be baptiſed, that is, to be plunged in Water; in Order to make Chriſtians of them to all outward Appearance; for the external Signs and Ceremonies employed for the Engagement of a Man to any Religion make little or no Impreſſion on his Heart. Hiſtory tells us, that Leo the Iſaurian likewiſe was equally zealous in the Converſion of the Jews, and us'd his utmoſt Endeavours to make them Chriſtians.

CHARLEMAGNE, and afterwards Lewis the Debonair, who reign'd in the Weſt, were indulgent enough to the Jews, tho' indeed contrary to the Inclination of Agobardus, Biſhop of Lions. For as learned and moderate as he was, he exaſperated his Sovereign as much as poſſibly he could againſt them by his Writings, [a] which were very warm and full of Invectives. They were, however, ſtill tolerated under the Reign of Charles the Bald, notwithſtanding they were from Time to Time accuſed of abetting the Enemies of the [b] Government, in order to render them more odious in the Eyes of the common People.

THE Jews were likewiſe very much ſupported by the Mahometan Religion, when it firſt began to gain Ground; which from its Birth made a prodigious Progreſs by the Succeſs of its Arms, and the Diviſions of the Chriſtians, and ſeemed to ſhew a peculiar Regard for Judaiſm: Yet the Caliphs and other Mahometan Princes did not think themſelves under a perpetual Obligation to countenance the Jews. Cader perſecuted them with great Severity, to get Poſſeſſion of their Eſtates, which were very conſiderable, and this Perſecution continued ſeveral Years. And much about that Time, the Caliph Hakim, who reigned in Egypt, and ſet himſelf up as Head of the Religion of the Druſes, was very rigid and ſevere to all the Jews in general.

THE Zeal of ſome Jews, who us'd their utmoſt Endeavours to convert the Mahometans in the Kingdom of Granada, brought upon themſelves a violent Perſecution about the Middle of the eleventh Century; and the Followers of the Cruſade, publiſh'd by the Chriſtians of Spain, about the End of that Century, would fain have extirpated all the Profeſſors of the Jewiſh Religion, had the King of Caſtile complied with the earneſt Sollicitations of the zealous Nicholas of Valencia: But the Warmth of theſe holy Confederates amply repaired the Loſs of ſo many Victims in Germany. They maſſacred ſeveral Thouſands of thoſe unfortunate Wretches, at Worms, Triers, Spire and Mentz. About fifty Years after this pious Expedition, a Hermit, whoſe Name was Rodolphus, ſounded the Alarm againſt them, under Pretence, that Charity required the total Extirpation of the Enemies of the Chriſtian Religion. This Man had doubtleſs aſſum'd a Miſſion, which was by no Means conformable to that of Jeſus Chriſt, who had brought Peace into the World, and reproved his Apoſtles, who thro' a miſguided Zeal were for having the Samaritans deſtroy'd by Fire from Heaven. The Perſecutions of thoſe Cruſades were general, and all Europe felt the dreadful Effects of them.

WE think we have ſomewhere before obſerv'd, that the Perſecutions which the Jews have ſuffered under the Mahometans, have neither been ſo univerſal nor ſo violent

[a] See Extracts hereof in the Hiſtory of the Jews by Mr. Baſnage.

[b] We ſhall only produce one Inſtance. In the Beginning of the thirteenth Century, the Archbiſhop of Toledo plunder'd the Jews of his Dioceſs, and perform'd this glorious Exploit at the Head of the Rabble; he gave it out, that the Jews had conſpir'd to deliver up that City to the Moors. It was about this Time too, that the Armies of the Cruſado's which were then aſſembled near Toledo, upon their Expedition for the Conqueſt of the Holy Land, thought themſelves oblig'd (in Honour to Jeſus Chriſt) to deſtroy thoſe, who had formerly crucified him, and put to Death many thouſands of the Spaniſh Jews, and ſacrificed them as ſo many Offerings acceptable to God, in order to bring down his heavenly Benedictions on them. On the other Hand, the zealous Jews aſcribed theſe Misfortunes to ſome partcular Formalities, which had not been ſtrictly obſerved in their Manner of making their Teffilins. Vide the Miſnah, Tom. 1. Pag. 9.

as

as thoſe under the Chriſtians. Schah Abas, who reigned in Perſia about the Cloſe of the ſixteenth Century, perſecuted them, with Intention to compel them to become Proſelytes to the Mahometan Religion; and in the ſeventeenth Century, one of the Prime Miniſters of Perſia renewed the Perſecution againſt them: But we no where find, that the Spirit of Perſecution amongſt the Eaſtern Nations was always renewed by the Enthuſiaſtic Fury of their Derviſes. One of the hotteſt Perſecutions which the Jews ſuffered in the Eaſt, compelled a great Number of them to renounce their Faith. The famous [a] Maimonides attempted to give his Brethren ſome Conſolation, by foretelling them a Deliverance, which never came to paſs. And tho' Predictions of this kind (which have no better Foundation than thoſe of Aſtrologers) ſerve only to delude the credulous Vulgar, yet our Rabbi's Enthuſiaſm, methinks, was here excuſable, ſince he thereby endeavoured to hinder the Apoſtaſy of the Jews. They were again perſecuted in the Eaſt, [b] near the Cloſe of the thirteenth Century, and were as inhumanly treated by the Cruſades, in all Places thro' which they paſſed. But as for Raimond of [c] Pennaforta, he was more charitable, and endeavoured to convert the Spaniſh Jews by Dint of Argument.

THEY were likewiſe cruelly perſecuted under the Reign of Ferdinand the Catholic, who drove them out of his Dominions in the Year 1492, and allowed them but four Months for the Settlement of their Affairs and their Departure from Spain; which Time, at the Requeſt of a zealous [d] Eccleſiaſtic, was afterwards reduced to the narrow Compaſs of a Month. Eight hundred thouſand Jews at that Juncture left Spain, and carried away with them immenſe Riches: But out of ſuch a prodigious Number of Fugitives, ſeveral were loſt by Shipwreck, Hunger, or Poverty, and often by the Inhumanity of thoſe to whom they applied for Refuge. The Genoeſe were determined not to loſe this favourable Opportunity of teſtifying their Zeal for the Chriſtian Cauſe. Their Thoughts were therefore Intent on relieving the Hunger of theſe indigent Refugees, and at the ſame Time on ſaving their Souls by Means of the extreme Neceſſities of their Bodies. They marched out therefore to meet the Jews with a Croſs in one Hand, and Bread in the other, which they diſtributed only to ſuch as paid their Adoration to the Croſs; and this may very well be term'd a Maſter-Piece in the Method of Converſion. The Soul of Man is bound down ſo cloſe to the Indigencies of his Body, that the former for the moſt Part finds it a very difficult Task to bear up whilſt the latter is afflicted; but the Misfortune is, that the Soul is very apt to relapſe, when once the agonizing Pains of the Body are all over.

WE muſt not here neglect taking Notice of the famous Troop of Shepherds at the Beginning of the fourteenth Century. Theſe Enthuſiaſts, who were headed by a Prieſt and a Monk, committed unaccountable Outrages in [e] France, during the Reign of Philip the Long, and particularly maſſacred the Jews without Mercy. They alſo treated thoſe in Spain in as barbarous a Manner; but at laſt the Kings of France and Spain were obliged to uſe their utmoſt Endeavours to extirpate thoſe Miſcreants who carried Death and Deſtruction before them wherever they went; and a Peſtilence broke out, which ſeemed determined to have a Share in the Extirpation of that accurſed Race; tho' unluckily indeed it proved fatal to the Jews, as well as them. They were accuſed of having by their magical Incantations poiſoned the Waters; but being cleared of that Charge, they were only ſentenced to embrace the Chriſtian Religion, upon the Penalty of being burnt alive; and thus ſome Thouſands of the Jews, who refuſed to become Proſelytes, were condemned to the Flames.

[a] He lived in Egypt in the twelfth Century.

[b] Raimondus of Pennaforta, was General of the Dominicans in the Year 1255. His Legend tells us, that he embark'd on his Cloak, and returned to Barcelona, to avoid the Corruption of the King of Aragon's Court.

[c] Chiefly in the Country of Chorazan.

[d] Turrecremata.

[e] It is ſaid, that they firſt began their Diſorders in Spain, and there took their Riſe.

THE

THE Flagellants, likewiſe, about the Middle of the fourteenth Century ſignaliz'd themſelves in Germany. This Sect, who were more charitable and devout than the other Chriſtians of their Time, voluntarily ſcourged their naked Bodies with Rods pointed with Steel for the Relief of poor ſuffering Souls in Purgatory, and for the making an Attonement for the Sins of their Fellow-Creatures. Before they began the Performance of this their Penance, they read their Commiſſion with an audible Voice, which was compriſed in a Letter ſent to them from the Almighty himſelf, and delivered to them by an Angel, with expreſs Command to ſcourge themſelves in the Manner abovementioned. This Commiſſion was levelled at the Jews, and they thought themſelves in Duty bound to maſſacre and burn them, to make their Penance more acceptable in the Sight of God.

POPE John XXIII. declared himſelf an inveterate Enemy to the Jews that were in Italy, and perſecuted them with the utmoſt Severity; and, as he look'd on himſelf to be the Vicar of Jeſus Chriſt, the Lord of Souls, and the Supreme Governor of the Univerſe, decreed, that all of them ſhould turn to the Chriſtian Faith. He alſo ſent Letters into Spain, requiring his Friends to labour at the Converſion of the Jews; and accordingly the Regency of that Kingdom ſucceeded in the Attempt, and made abundance of Converts; but ſuch as obſtinately refuſed to enter into the Way of Salvation, were either burnt alive, or forced to fly the Country. Pope Pius V. and alſo Sextus V. baniſhed them out of all their eccleſiaſtical Dominions, except Rome and ſome other particular Cities, and the Reaſon alledged for their act of Indulgence and Toleration in thoſe Places, was the Hopes they conceiv'd, that by their Converſation with the Chriſtians they might by Degrees become Proſelytes; and that his Holineſs by his continual Preſence would inſpire them with better Notions. This was a ſtrong and ſolid Way of Reaſoning; but why ſhould not the common Father of all Chriſtians grant the ſame Indulgence to Heretics?

IT muſt be confeſs'd, that the Jews often brought themſelves into Trouble, either by their uſurious Contracts, or other Exceſſes which were equally Criminal, which cauſed their Deſtruction in France, during the Reign of Philip le Bel, under whoſe Government they grew ſo powerful and ſo numerous, that the Jewiſh Writers pretend, that more Jews were baniſhed France, than ever went out of Egypt in the Time of Moſes; but Exile and the Loſs of their Eſtates, were not their only Misfortunes; for many of them were condemned to be burnt.

LET us now ſee, whether they were treated with more Humanity in England than in other Chriſtian Countries. Henry III. indeed, attempted to make Converts of them, without any Compulſion: But that Prince's private Intereſt and Neceſſity made him indulgent to the Jews; his prime Miniſter called upon them for large Sums of Money, and upon their Refuſal, they were charged with Murder, that the King might have a legal Title to their Eſtates, and ſo they were forced at laſt to pay away one third Part of their Wealth to the Crown for the peaceable Enjoyment of the Remainder. Heavy Taxes were often impoſed on them during this Reign, till about the End of the thirteenth Century, when they were totally baniſhed. The Hiſtory of England takes Notice of the various Hardſhips which, from Time to Time, they ſuffer'd at Lincoln, and in other Cities in that Kingdom.

TO conclude, the Fortune and Circumſtances of the Jews have had their Revolutions, according to the Zeal of the People, who were animated by the Clergy, or to the political Views of Chriſtian Princes. But the Reformation made by Luther and Calvin muſt doubtleſs have been favourable to them, they having ever ſince eſtabliſhed themſelves to Advantage in ſeveral Proteſtant Kingdoms. Holland, obliged, as it were, for the Encouragement of Commerce, to open her Arms to all manner of Sects, received them more ge-generouſly than any of the other Proteſtants, and the Jews are now ſettled peaceably at Amſterdam, and actually inhabit the moſt beautiful Part of that famous City.

WHAT we have already ſaid, is ſufficient to give the Reader an Idea of the Perſecutions which the Jews have ſuffered under the Chriſtians, to revenge the Death of the Meſſiah; which Perſecutions were, however, frequently grounded on enormous Crimes imputed to them by the Wickedneſs of ſome particular Men, and which the illiterate Vulgar, out of a miſguided Zeal, puniſhed with all the Rage and Reſentment that Enthuſiaſm and Bigottry could inſpire them with.

III. Crimes laid to the Charge of the JEWS.

1. ONE of the greateſt Crimes which is imputed to the Jews is, their crucifying of Children, whereof they have been frequently accuſed, and ſome have not ſcrupled to affirm, that they annually renew [a] this Cuſtom. Naucler tells us, that the Jews uſed to meet privately on Thurſday in Paſſion-Week, and at the ſame Time ſacrifice an Infant to teſtify their Abhorrence of the Chriſtian Religion; and other [b] Hiſtorians ſay, that they were uſed to receive the Heart of the Infant ſo ſacrificed at their Communion. The Murder of a Youth whoſe Name was Richard, and laid to their Charge, was the Cauſe of their Baniſhment from France in the Reign of Philip Auguſtus. We are at a Loſs to determine how this Crime came to be ſo often imputed to them all over Chriſtendom, and ſo inceſſantly repeated by the Hiſtorians of paſt Ages, as even to tire their Readers with it. It is very poſſible, that ſome of the Jews might be ſo impious and inhuman as to commit ſo flagrant a Crime; and this very probably may be thought ſufficient Grounds to charge the whole Nation with it over and over, with an Addition of the moſt odious and aggravating Circumſtances. But be that as it will, this pretended Sacrifice of Infants was of no ſmall Emolument to the Church, who under that ſpecious Pretence ſeized on all the Effects of the Jews.

FATHER Daniel ſeems to think this [c] Accuſation againſt them true, and ſays, That ſome ſhort Time before Eaſter they inhumanly maſſacred the Infants of the Chriſtians whom they ſtole away, and made an impious Sacrifice of them on the Day of their Communion, out of an implacable Hatred to Jeſus Chriſt, &c. But Father Daniel, however, ought to have given us a Deſcription of the Jewiſh Communion; for an Author who propoſes to convince his Readers, ought always to have a perfect Idea of thoſe Particulars which he relates.

SOON after the Murder of young Richard, whom we before-mentioned, the Jews aſſembled on the Borders of the River Seine, where they crucified [d] another Youth, having firſt ſcourged and crowned him with Thorns. Albericus trium Fontium, a credulous and worthleſs Author, has imputed this Crime to them more than once.

[a] Vide the Quotations in Baſnage's Hiſtory of the Jews, Lib. ix. Chap. xii.
[b] Albericus trium Fontium.
[c] Vide the Hiſtory of France, 4th Dutch Edit. Tom. II. Page 574.
[d] It is reported too, that the Jews crucified a Child of eight Years old at Lincoln in England, in the Year 1255. at Prague in the Year 1305. And at Saragoſſa towards the Year 1250. This laſt was a young Choriſter named Dominic, who was famous for a great Number of Miracles. This little Saint came into the World adorned with the Marks of his Glory and Sufferings; being born with a Crown on his Head, and Croſſes on his Shoulders.

Eduxit nitidam matris de ventre coronam.
Atque humeros crucibus rutilos oſtroque micantes.

2. THE Vulgar have alſo charged the Jews with the Practice of [a] Witchcraft and Sorcery; and Abundance of them were maſſacred in England upon this Charge, about the End of the twelfth Century; for ſome of them having preſumed to be preſent at the King's Coronation, notwithſtanding an expreſs Order was iſſued to the contrary, paid dear for their Curioſity; for the People, having entertained a Notion that the Jews had conſpired to bewitch the King, ſhewed their Zeal and Affection to his Majeſty at the Expence of Jewiſh Blood. The Commiſſion of one ſingle Crime of this Nature was ſufficient to charge them with it ten Times over.

3. THE Jews are likewiſe charged with an impious and profane Abuſe of the ſacred Hoſt: For about the Cloſe of the fourteenth Century they audaciouſly preſum'd to wound one of them with the Point of a Knife; and it was affirmed, that the bleſſed and adorable Hoſt put them in the utmoſt Conſternation by the Blood guſhing out of it, into the Faces of thoſe execrable Miſcreants, who never could waſh it off. Nay, this was not all, for according to Legendary Writers of thoſe Times, the Jews having made an Attempt to bury it under Ground, in order to conceal the Crime they had committed, it eſcaped out of their Hands, and was ſeen by a young Cow-keeper, who was in the Fields watching his Cattle, aſcending up towards Heaven. The Jews all fell on their Knees to adore the bleeding Hoſt, and remained in that devout Poſture ſo long, that the Boy ran to inform the Biſhop of this ſurpriſing Accident; and the People flocking in Crowds to the Place, ſaw the Hoſt with the Wound ſtill bleeding; upon the Diſcovery whereof the Jews were [b] puniſhed after the moſt rigorous Manner, that the moſt enthuſiaſtic Rage could poſſibly deviſe; and a Church was immediately erected upon the very Spot where the Hoſt was ſeen; which afterwards became celebrated for its Miracles, and for the extraordinary Indulgences which it afforded to ſuch as came thither to pay their Devotions.

ANOTHER Hoſt, which [c] a Jew had maliciouſly thrown into a Pot of boiling Water, produced as great a Miracle as that juſt mentioned. No ſooner had he caſt the Hoſt into the boiling Water, but there appeared to him a moſt beautiful Infant, whom this accurſed unbelieving Jew attempted to deſtroy; but the Infant avoided him by an active Retreat from one Side of the Pot to the other, which miraculous Eſcape had ſuch an Influence on the Children of this impious Jew, that they all became Proſelytes, and the Father was burnt alive upon their Impeachment. [d]

4. THEY have likewiſe been charged with ſcourging Crucifixes, and profaning Images and Croſſes; and indeed, they are not abſolutely to be juſtified upon all theſe Articles of Impeachment; but this we think we may venture to ſay, that ſeveral have imagined, that it was for the Intereſt of Religion to lay ſuch Crimes to their Charge. As for Example, an Italian Monk, having concealed a Crucifix under a Dunghil, imputed that Sacrilege to the Jews, and by that Stratagem cauſed them to be deſtroyed [e] without Mercy. Ought we not to imagine this artful Contrivance the Reſult of a holy Zeal? For ſeveral of the Jews, who had been converted, had relapſed into Judaiſm, and he had a charitable Intention to prevent the Apoſtaſy of others.

[a] The Crucifixion of Infants, according to the Authors of thoſe Days, was a neceſſary Conſequence of the Affection which the Jews were charg'd with for all magical Operations. Some pretend, that they made uſe of the Infant's Heart and Blood mixed with a conſecrated Hoſt, in the Performance of their Inchantments. But the Jews are not the only Perſons who have been accuſed of Conjuration. It is well known by ſuch as are acquainted with antient and modern Hiſtory, that this ſtale Imputation has been reviv'd from Time to Time on other Occaſions; and that the very Chriſtians themſelves have more than once accuſed each other with the Practice of it.

[b] They were burnt in a ſlow Fire, and live Dogs were thrown in with them. Vide the Hiſtory of the Jews by Mr. Baſnage, Lib. ix. Chap xiii.

[c] At the Beginning of the fourteenth Century.

[d] One of theſe profaned Hoſts performed a moſt extraordinary Miracle. The Fact was this: A Servant Maid, who had been to receive the Sacrament at Eaſter, preſerved the Hoſt and brought it to her Maſter, who was a Jew. This Man put it into a Purſe with ſeven Pieces of Silver, which were miraculouſly chang'd by the profaned Hoſt into ſeven other Hoſts. Vide the Writers of thoſe Times.

[e] This Story is related upon the Teſtimony of a Jew, by Mr. Baſnage, Lib. ix. Chap. xix.

5. THEY

5. [a] THEY were likewiſe accuſed of having poiſoned the Waters of ſeveral Springs and Rivers; and this cauſed a prodigious Number of them to be deſtroy'd about the Middle of the fourteenth Century. There is a Report, that the Waters in general throughout Spain were poiſon'd. 'Tis pretended too, that the Jews, who were engag'd in this helliſh Project, and were aſſiſted by the Lepers of thoſe Days, were bribed by the King of Granada, who was a Mahometan. The ſame Crime was ſome time after imputed to them again, and it was aſſerted, that they employ'd Beggars to do it, who threw a Compound of Nails and Fleſh of executed Malefactors, &c. into the Wells and Fountains.

6. THE Jews were indeed often found guilty of Treaſon and Rebellion, whereof we have ſeveral Inſtances in Hiſtory; and without going back to the firſt Ages of the Chriſtian Church, it is univerſally allow'd, that the Jews betray'd the Emperor Juſtinian in favour of Coſroës King of Perſia. The Author of the Life of St. Theodardus tells us, that they invited over [b] Abderamis, a Saracen Prince, into Languedoc, which occaſioned a great Number of Chriſtians to be maſſacred; but few pay any Regard to that Author, who is very incorrect, and relies chiefly upon [c] Hearſay. They were afterwards, however, much oftner accuſed of thoſe Crimes; for ſome Writers ſay, that they aſſiſted the Normans in ravaging Aquitany, and that they were very ready and inclin'd upon all Occaſions to raiſe Inſurrections under the Command of thoſe Impoſtors, who aſſumed the ſame Name and Character which they refuſed to acknowledge in Jeſus Chriſt, the Meſſiah of the Chriſtians.

WE have here pointed out the chief Articles of Impeachment brought againſt the Jews, which we think ſufficient, without mentioning the Uſuries, and other Miſdemeanors imputed to them in the Way of Trade.

IV. Concerning their IMPOSTORS and falſe MESSIAH'S.

THE Subject before us is very copious and extenſive; we ſhall not therefore purſue it through all the Ages of the Church. Hakem is one of thoſe whom we propoſe in the firſt Place to take Notice of. He not only inſiſted on that Regard which was due to a Man inſpired by God, as the antient Prophets were, but alſo to one immediately united to him by the ſtrongeſt Ties that could poſſibly be imagined. We are inform'd, that when the Saracens cloſely purſued him, he threw himſelf into a large Veſſel full of Aqua Fortis, hoping that his Body would by that Means be totally conſumed, and that the People would entertain as awful an Opinion of him after his Death, as he had endeavoured to inſtil into them in his Life-Time; yet, to the no ſmall Diſappointment of this Impoſtor, not only his Hair, but his Fat too, was found [d] amongſt the Aqua Fortis; for that Liquor cannot diſſolve it.

THE famous Zedechias, a Jewiſh Phyſician, uſed to amuſe the Court of Lewis the Debonnaire with ſwallowing whole Cart-Loads of Hay, together with the Carts themſelves, the Horſes and their Drivers. Notwithſtanding there are ſome Hiſtorians that atteſt this for Truth, yet in my Opinion a Man muſt have an uncommon Share of Faith, to give any Credit to this Relation.

[a] Faſcic. Temp.

[b] Vide Catel Hiſtory of Languedoc, Lib. iii. Page 518.

[c] Partim fidelium narratione, Ibid. p. 523.

[d] Empedocles attempted to enforce almoſt the ſame Belief in his Behalf; for he threw himſelf into the Flames of Mount Etna, to the End, that the People upon his diſappearing ſo on a ſudden might imagine he was become a God: But his Shoes, which either he had left behind him, or had been thrown up by the Force of the Flames upon the Side of the Volcano, ſoon diſcovered the Deceit of this Impoſtor. Both theſe Events bear a great Affinity to each other, and in all Probability are both invented Stories; but that of Empedocles is of a very antient Date.

AN-

ANOTHER Impoſtor appeared in Perſia in the Year 1138, and occaſioned an Inſurrection among the Jews, who look'd upon him as the Meſſiah; but this Impoſtor met with as little Succeſs as a certain Arabian, who in the Year 1167, pretended to be the Forerunner of the Meſſiah. He had a great Number of Diſciples, and was deſtroyed, as well as the other, without any other Emolument to the Jews, than that of leaving them to bear the Reproach and Puniſhment of his Impoſture.

ANOTHER Jewiſh Impoſtor appeared in Moravia, and was followed by his own Nation about the End of the twelfth Century. This Man boaſted of having the Art of vaniſhing out of Sight whenever he thought convenient: But the Jews, terrified by the cruel Menaces which were publiſh'd againſt him on this Account, voluntarily delivered him [a] up. The Impoſtor called Eldavid, was put to Death by his Father-in-Law, after he had cauſed an Inſurrection among the Jews of Perſia in the Year 1199, or 1200.

THE famous [b] Sabathai Tzevi was one of the moſt artful and dextrous Impoſtors that ever appeared amongſt the Jews. He began to act his Farce in the Year 1666, and choſe one Levi a Jew for his Companion, who for his Part pretended to be the Prophet Elias. Abundance of the Jewiſh Nation were deluded by them, and flattered themſelves with Hopes of ſeeing their Laws and Religion reſtored by their Means; but they met with a very ſtrong Oppoſition. The Jews of Smyrna refuſed to acknowledge them, and even carried their Reſentment ſo far as to condemn Tzevi to Death. The falſe Meſſiah, however, artfully evaded the Sentence, and taking Advantage of the timorous Temper of ſome, and the eaſy Credulity of others, had the Aſſurance to aſſume the Title of King of the Kings of Iſrael. After all this Artifice, however, he indiſcreetly put himſelf into the Power of his Enemies; for after he had obliterated the Name of the Ottoman Emperor out of their Prayer-Books, and diſtributed the moſt important Places in his new Kingdom of Iſrael among his new Subjects, he ſet out for Conſtantinople, where the Grand Seignior took Care to have him ſeized, and ſoon after beheaded, notwithſtanding he had embraced the Mahometan Religion. This Impoſtor had ſome good Qualities; was to all outward Appearance humble and chaſte, and his Diſcourſes, though plain, were very pathetic.

ONE Daniel ſoon after ſprang up, as it were, from the Aſhes of the falſe Meſſiah, [c] and aſſerted in the Year 1703, that Tzevi was not dead; that he had concealed himſelf indeed for a Time; but that he would ſoon appear again, &c. This religious Coxcomb, ſome how or other gain'd the Reputation of an extraordinary Man; for by the Pronunciation of a few particular Words, he had the Art of raiſing himſelf up into the Air with ſuch a rapid Force, that one would have imagined ſome ſupernatural Power aſſiſted him in the Performance; and likewiſe by a Deceptio Viſus, which is no Secret to thoſe who are skill'd in Optics, he cauſed a fiery Globe to appear, which changed its Poſition, and followed his Motions, till at laſt it was loſt, after having remained ſome time upon his Breaſt. What became of this Impoſtor afterwards we are not able to determine; for we have no farther Account of him than that he was baniſh'd from Smyrna.

[a] See Baſnage's Hiſtory of the Jews, Lib. ix. Chap. xi.
[b] See Joh. Lendt de Pſeudo-Meſſiis.
[c] See Baſnage's Hiſtory of the Jews, Lib. ix. chap. 27.

V. Con-

V. Concerning the penal Corrections and Chaſtiſements of the JEWS; their Badges or Marks of Diſtinction from CHRISTIANS, &c. The Laws of Princes, and the Decrees of the Church againſt them.

NO Hiſtory, either ancient or modern, has furniſh'd us with one Precedent of a People and a Religion, that have been diſtinguiſhed in a more odious Manner than the Jews and Judaiſm. We ſhall leave the Diſcovery of the viſible Marks of Reprobation in theſe Diſtinctions to the Divines, and ſhall paſs on to thoſe Examples which Hiſtory has tranſmitted to us.

THE Caliph [a] Giafar Sadek, made that notorious Law both againſt the Jews and Chriſtians, whereby the Children of ſuch People, as ſhould become Muſſulmen, were to be the ſole Heirs to the Eſtates of their Family; which Law was more fatal to them than the hotteſt Perſecution.

ABDALLA, who commanded the Chriſtians to ſhave their Faces, and wear high crowned Hats, did not ſhew more Indulgence to the Jews; for he cauſed both the one and the other to be marked in the Hand. But the Caliphs carried the Matter farther, and in Proceſs of Time [b] obliged the Jews to wear a Badge of yellow Cloth upon their Garments, to diſtinguiſh them from the Muſſulmen.

[c] MOTAWAKEL order'd the Jews to wear a Leathern Girdle, by Way of Diſtinction. He likewiſe depriv'd them of all public Employments, would not ſuffer them to ride on Horſeback, and indulg'd them only with Mules and Aſſes. All his Laws, which are ſtill in Force, were made, as we are told, to expoſe the Jews to Ignominy and Contempt; but there is ſomething ſtill more diſgraceful in the Manner in which the Emperor Adrian treated them after the Rebellion of the Impoſtor Barchochebas: For he ordered their Ears to be cut off. Ptolomy Philopator had long before made a Law, by which all Jews were to have the Form of an Ivy Leaf, which was the Plant conſecrated to Bacchus, imprinted on their Body with a hot Iron, as a public Indication that they had loſt their Liberty; for that Prince aim'd at their Converſion to his Religion by the Dread of a Puniſhment, which was ſo much the more ignominious as Slavery was the Conſequence of it.

THERE is ſomething ſtill more remarkable in the Treatment of the Jews at Toulouſe in the eighth Century: For it was cuſtomary there to buffet them thrice in a Year at the Door of ſuch a Church as the Biſhop thought proper to appoint; and the principal Man amongſt them was thus treated in the Name of the whole. The Origin of this Cuſtom may be ſeen in Catel, [d] and in Mr. Baſnage's Hiſtory. The Inhabitants of [a] He lived in the Year 770.

[b] Thevenot aſſures us, that in Perſia the Jews actually wear a Piece of Stuff on their Garments, which he deſcribes in the following Manner. It is, ſays he, a ſmall ſquare Piece of Stuff, about two or three Fingers broad, that is fixed on their Caba or Garment, which they wear on their Stomach, about two Inches above their Waſte; it is no Matter what Kind of Stuff it is made of, if the Colour be different from that of the Garment whereon it is fix'd.

[c] This Caliph lived in the Year 846.

[d] This Cuſtom was afterwards aboliſhed, and the Jews paid a Fine to be diſcharg'd from it. Violence in Matters of Religion, is more agreeable to the Taſte of the People, who always conſider whatever is done againſt the Enemies of their Belief, as religious Actions. But the Tribute paid by the Jews, ſeemed more glorious, and proved of greater Service to the Church; the Jews however, looked upon both the Tribute and the buffetting as ſo many Perſecutions. The Intention indeed was, good and every Thing was done in the Name of the Lord; but the Jews fancied they had very good Reaſon Beziers formerly pelted the Jews [a] with Stones, from the Eve of Palm-Sunday till the laſt Day of Eaſter; [b] but at laſt by paying a Fine to the Biſhop, they bought off this infamous Treatment.

In the Eaſt, the Caliph [c] Hakim, generally ſuppoſed to be the Author of the Sect or Religion of the Druſes, made a Law that the Jews ſhould wear a particular Mark, whereby they might be diſtinguiſhed from other Men.

In the twelfth Century, as 'tis thought, or thereabouts, a remarkable Ceremony took its Riſe, which the Jews are under an Obligation to obſerve at the Inſtallation of a new Pope. [d] They are to wait the Pontiff's coming on the Road to St. John de Lateran, and there on their Knees preſent him with a Tranſcript of their Law; on the Receipt whereof his Holineſs tells them, "that he reverences the Law which God gave "to Moſes, but condemns their falſe Interpretation of it, by their fruitleſs Expectation "of the Meſſiah, who has been long ſince come, and whom the Church believes to be the "Lord and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt." What follows is a ſhort Account of the Origin of this Ceremony. When Pope Innocent II. upon his Retreat to France, made his Entry into Paris, the Jews went in a ſolemn Proceſſion to meet him, and in a very reverential Manner preſented him with the holy Books of their Law, which his Holineſs the Vicar of Jeſus Chriſt, was pleas'd very graciouſly to accept of. The Jews, by a Decree of one of the Councils, [e] were oblig'd to wear a Wheel upon their Breaſt, afterwards they wore Capes and Sleeves as long as the Cape [f], but without Plaits, by the Order and Direction of ſome of the other Councils: And in the Beginning of the twelfth Century, red Hats were an additional Diſtinction made at Toulouſe and all thereabouts. The Diſtinction of the Wheel was confirm'd in the fourteenth Century, to which the Horn was added, as a Badge for the Female Sex of all Ages among them; and Philip the Bold obliged them to wear a Horn upon their Hats, which proved fatal to them; for by being thus conſpicuouſly diſtinguiſhed from the Chriſtians, they were for ever expoſed to the Inſults of the rude Rabble. They were alſo prohibited bathing in all ſuch Places as the Chriſtians made uſe of for that Purpoſe. King John determin'd to have them known by their Colours, and commanded them for Diſtinction ſake to wear Red and White. [g] One of the Councils in the fourteenth Century decreed that the Women ſhould wear a Red Wheel as well as the Men. The Hat with a Horn upon it, was appointed in ſeveral Places for the Badge of the Men, and the Council of Saltsburg confirm'd that Appointment in 1420. The Wheel which was to be worn by the Jews on all Cloths made of yellow Threads, was decreed for their Reaſon to object againſt many of the Proceedings of the Chriſtians, and on this Occaſion deny, that they were influenc'd by the Spirit of God, becauſe their Conduct was a Contradiction to the Morality of the Goſpel. And indeed, they made Choice of a bad Time to recriminate upon them with Falſhoods and Calumnies, whilſt the viſionary vain Notions, and ridiculous Employments of the Monks, were ſufficient Matter for Reproach. But above all Things they ought not to have omitted thoſe Drawers, which the Nuns of Treves made after a peculiar Manner, to inſpire the Men with criminal Deſires. I muſt own, the Subject is too particular and too ludicrous to take farther Notice of it, when a Man is obliged to enter into Diſpute with an ill-natur'd and partial Diſputant.

[a] They were not ſatisfied with this ſevere Treatment of them; but they likewiſe broke their Windows, and beat down the Doors of their Houſes, and often even ſtoned them in the Streets; and after this odd Manner the People prepared themſelves for the Communion at Eaſter. At laſt one of their Biſhops, unable to bear ſuch Riots and Diſorders, redeemed the Jews from the Tyranny of the People by a Fine of about four Marks of Silver, which Agreement between the Biſhop and the People was concluded in the Year 1160.

[b] Vide Catel's Hiſtory of Languedoc. Baſnage's Hiſtory of the Jews, Lib. ix. Chap. 3. The Cuſtom of buffeting the Chief of the Jews, which we mentioned, was practiſed for many Centuries.

[c] This Caliph reigned in the Beginning of the eleventh Century.

[d] Cum Pontifex ad Montem Jordanum pervenit, Judæi illi obviam veniunt, genuflexi Legem Pontifici offerunt, Linguâ Hebraica Legem laudantes & hortantes Pontificem ut illam veneretur. Pontifex vero illis auditis reſpondet, ſanctam Legem laudamus & veneramur; utpote quæ à Deo Moyſi tradita eſt; Obſervationem verò veſtram, & vanam Interpretationem damnamus, & improbamus, quia Salvatorem, quem adhuc fruſtrà exſpectatis, Apoſtolica Fides jampridem adveniſſe docet, &c. V. Sacrar. Ceremon. Eccleſ. Rom. Lib. I. Fol. xvii. Edit. 1516. Fol.

[e] That of Narbonne in 1227.

[f] Baſnage's Hiſtory of the Jews, Lib. ix. Chap. 15.

[g] That of Ravenna in 1311.

Diſtinction

Diſtinction by the Council of Cologne in [a] 1442. The Women were order'd to wear two blue Strings on their Heads. Two [b] Popes made the Men wear yellow Hats and the Women Veils of the ſame Colour. The Men follow this Faſhion now at Avignon; but at Venice red Hats are all the Mode, and as ſome Things are frequently chang'd into Ornaments, which were originally intended as Marks of Infamy and Diſgrace, the Venetian Jews make their Hats of the fineſt Scarlet they can procure, and line them with black Taffeta. The high-crowned Hat, the Turban, and violet-coloured Shoes are Part of the Jewiſh Dreſs at Conſtantinople, that the faithful Followers of Mahomet and Ali may be known from all Unbelievers, as well thoſe who are circumciſed as thoſe who are not. Beſides, the Mahometans treat them with all the Marks of Ignominy and Contempt. Cardinal Borromeo, who was Archbiſhop of Milan, and whom the Church has canoniz'd, forbad the Jews to appear without their yellow Hats and Veils; confin'd them to their Houſes for three Days before Eaſter; and would not ſuffer them to live near any Church. The Council of Baſil [c] before his Time, made much the ſame Decrees. Let us not omit in the Concluſion of this Article, the ſallow Complexion of the Jews, their ill Scents, and the Blood with which their Children come into the World. Theſe are conſpicuous Marks of their Reprobation, and, if we are to regard ſome of the moſt zealous Chriſtians, of the Almighty's Diſpleaſure. Avitus, who was a Chriſtian Poet, ſays, that their ill Smell is taken away by the Grace of Baptiſm.

THE Jews pay very dear for tranſacting any of their Affairs at Augſbourg; for it coſts them a German Florin for every Hour they ſtay there. They are not permitted to reſide any longer than three Hours at Trent, tho' formerly they had Liberty to ſtay there three entire Days, but this was deſign'd as a Chaſtiſement or Penalty upon them for courageouſly defending Buda againſt the Emperor. And thus were they puniſhed for their Fidelity to their Prince. Ought they not to have known, that there is none due to Infidels?

WE ſhall not pretend to give an exact Account of all the burdenſom Taxes at different Times impos'd upon them; [d] the unjuſt Diſcharge of ſuch Debts as any Chriſtian had contracted with them, the Privilege of detaining their Wages, when due to them, and of murdering them without being call'd to Account for it; the Charge laid upon them to make no Reſiſtance when attack'd in their Religion; [e] the Rape of their Children, &c. But it will be neceſſary however to ſay ſomething of the Ordinances of the Church relating to them.

[f] THEY are order'd by one of the Councils to keep their Houſes ſhut up at the Approach of the Hoſt, and by another to caſt no Reflections on the bleſſed Virgin Mary, the Saints of the Church, or the Chriſtian Religion. Theſe two Decrees, in our Opinion, are very juſt, and highly to be approv'd of; for if we ought at no Time to inſult or give Offence to thoſe who are of a different Perſuaſion from our own; ſuch certainly as profeſs a Religion which is not the prevailing one, ought to be much more upon their Guard. Thoſe Decrees which enjoin all Jews to pay a decent Reſpect to the Miniſters of the Church, and not to intermarry with Chriſtians, not to be poſſeſs'd of any Chriſtian Slaves, nor to diſinherit their Children for embracing the Chriſtian Faith, deſerve the ſame Approbation; but thoſe Regulations, which forbad a Chriſtian, tho' never ſo much indiſpos'd, to conſult a Jewiſh Phyſician, or to take a Jew as a Witneſs, though a Man of the ſtricteſt Probity and Honour, and thoſe which relea-

[a] The Jews of Francfort were alſo obliged to wear it.
[b] Paul IV. and Pius V.
[c] In 1434.
[d] In 391. in the Reign of Wenceſlaus.
[e] See the Citations in Baſnage's Hiſtory of the Jews, Lib. ix. Chap. 15.
[f] Baſnage's Hiſtory of the Jews, Lib. ix. Chap. 14.

ied, ſed a Chriſtian from any Debt contracted with a Jew, provided the former made Oath that it was an uſurious Contract, are very partial, rigorous and unjuſt, and what no Perſon that is of common Honeſty can aſſent to.

VI. Concerning ſome Saints of the Jewiſh Church, and the various Miracles perform'd by them ſince the ſecond Deſtruction of JERUSALEM.

THE Hiſtory of Joſeph Ben Gorion, who may very juſtly be called the [a] Jacobus a Voragine of the Jews, will furniſh the Reader with Prodigies and Miracles in Abundance; but without going thither for them, we ſhall confine ourſelves to a few remarkable Inſtances.

MAIMONIDES is too well known to be omitted. The Birth of this Jewiſh Rabbi in 131, was owing to a Reſolution which his Father took to break thro' that Celibacy in which he had determined before to live. Maimon however, the Father of Moſes Maimonides, would not venture upon ſo important an Affair, without ſome expreſs Revelation. He imagin'd, that an Order from Heaven would fully diſcharge him from a Vow, perhaps too raſhly entered into, and the Thought ſucceeded; for he was inform'd by a Dream, that he might marry, and was directed accordingly to make his Addreſſes to the Daughter of a Butcher, who was the Mother of Maimonides, and who died ſoon after ſhe brought him into the World. The Father, now fond of Matrimony, ſoon brought young Moſes home a Mother-in-law of a very diſagreeable Temper. He was often beaten and very ill treated, whereupon he made his Eſcape to the Top of a Synagogue, where he fell aſleep, and became from the Time that he wak'd a Man of Parts and Wit, tho' very dull and inactive before. This was not however, the firſt Miracle of the Kind. Heſiod, a young Shepherd of Boetia, eighteen hundred Years before Maimonides was born, had dreamt that he was a Poet, and when he wak'd found it Truth. This Jew was afterwards one of the Sultan of Egypt's Favourites, upon which the Mahometan Phyſicians grew jealous of him. They obliged him to drink Poiſon, taking it for granted that he had not Art ſufficient to prevent its malignant Operation. He ſwallow'd it however, without receiving any Harm, and on his Side occaſion'd the Death of ten of thoſe Phyſicians, by obliging them in their Turns to try the ſame Experiment. He was afterwards accuſed of a Conſpiracy againſt the Sultan's Life, and thereupon ordered to have his Veins opened; but he preſerv'd his Life by a Vein which was at that Time unknown to every Body but himſelf, and which none of our ableſt Anatomiſts have ſince diſcovered. Till this ſecret Vein is open'd, there can be no Effuſion of Blood. As Maimonides was going to be buried, a Gang of Thieves ſet upon the Mourners, who ran away in the utmoſt Confuſion, and left the dead Corpſe behind them, which the Thieves attempted to throw into the Sea: but little thinking they had to do with a Saint, could not accompliſh their wicked Deſigns.

Rabbi [b] Juda the Pious had like to have dy'd before he was born. His Mother when with Child of him, had been cruſh'd to Pieces by a Hay-Cart againſt a Wall, had not God commanded the Wall miraculouſly to give way [c], ſo that the big-bellied Woman had Room to ſtand with Safety in the Hollow of it.

[a] Archbiſhop of Genoa, and Author of the Golden Legend; he lived towards the End of the thirteenth Century.
[b] He lived in the twelfth Century.
[c] At Worms.

THE

THE Jews commemorate their Saints and Martyrs by a Sort of Diptics [a]. One Iſaac de Caſtro of Tartas, whom the Portugueſe burnt alive at * Liſbon, was one of them who ſuffer'd with great Courage and Reſolution. The Jews of that Nation who reſide at Amſterdam look upon him as a Saint. One Sylva a Phyſician is likewiſe deemed one of this Number, whom the Spaniards attempted to burn too; but a violent Tempeſt extinguiſhed the Fire. This is one of the moſt modern Miracles. Another as he was going to be burnt in Portugal, was in a Moment diſcharged from his Fetters, by which good Fortune he eſcaped, or rather diſappeared by the Aſſiſtance of ſome inviſible Power. Another, called Don Lopez de Vera, who turned Jew, and afterwards ſtyled himſelf Juda the Believer, ſuffered Martyrdom with ſuch invincible Courage and Conſtancy, and ſuch ſtrong Aſſurances of his eternal Salvation, that his Judges were almoſt confounded. By theſe Inſtances one may conclude, that the Reſolution of Martyrs is not always the Reſult of divine Aſſiſtance, and that ſtrong Prejudices and Prepoſſeſſions oftentimes inſpire Men with a ſurpriſing Intrepidity. 'Tis no ſuch great Wonder, therefore, to find Martyrs of all Religions. Shall we call it Enthuſiaſm, Paſſion, Perverſeneſs, or Hypocriſy, that confer on ſome Men a ſupernatural Courage, and make them diſdain the very Preſervation of their Beings? But, be that as it will, we ſhall leave the Caſe intirely undetermined, leſt we ſhould ſeem to reflect on, or weaken that famous Deciſion, That the Cauſe, and not the Suffering, conſtitutes the Martyr: But it muſt be acknowledged, that Martyrs to Morality are very ſeldom to be met [b] with; yet there are an infinite Number of Men, who will freely lay down their Lives in Defence of thoſe Principles which are look'd upon as the Fundamentals of Religion. We ſhall take the Liberty to add an Inſtance or two more of the Saints of the Jewiſh Church, and of their Miracles, and ſo conclude.

THE Sanctity of [c] Jochanan was very particular. Whenever he made Water, he always took care not to be above four Cubits diſtant from ſome Houſe of Prayer. He celebrated all Feſtival Days with extraordinary Devotion, and drank to Exceſs, in order to ſolemnize the Sabbath with the greater Fervency. The Irregularity of ſuch a Devotion is obvious to every one that is not wilfully blind.

WHEN [d] St. Juda was interred, the Day was prolonged, and the Night kept back, till all the Attendants at his Funeral were retured to their reſpective Homes to light their Lamps appointed for the Day of their Sabbath. The Daughter-Voice pronounced all of them ſaved, one ſingle Perſon who died of Deſpair only excepted. This Daughter-Voice was for the moſt Part a propitious or unlucky Omen, drawn from the firſt Words which were ſpoken by the firſt Perſon which was heard, or met by the Conſulter in his Way. This Word was looked on as an Oracle of Heaven, and there have been ſome Jews whoſe Enthuſiaſm has riſen to ſuch a monſtrous Pitch as to prefer ſuch fortuitous Words to the Prophecies of the Old Teſtament. The Heathens, indeed, ſought their Deſtinies in the Verſes of Homer and Virgil, much after the ſame Manner, and ſome ſuperſtitious Chriſtians formerly made a Practice of enquiring into the Succeſs of their Undertakings by opening their Bible at a Venture in two or three different Places.

ECCLESIASTICAL Dignities being naturally ſuperior to all other, it is eaſy to conceive how the Perſuaſion prevailed, that God diſtinguiſhes them by certain particular Marks of his Indulgence. To be a Prieſt or a Doctor is ſufficient to be deemed the Depoſitary of the Supreme Being, and what is more, to be perſuaded that one is ſo; from whence aroſe the miraculous Operations aſcribed to thoſe religious Functions. The Traditionaries were reckoned once among the Jews of the Number of thoſe privileged Perſons, as [a] This is the Cuſtom of ſeveral Places.

* In 1647.

[b] It were no Difficulty both in ancient as well as modern Hiſtory to meet with Perſons, who have had very imperfect Notions of their Duty, and whoſe Virtue has been very moderate; who yet on Occaſion have been ſufficiently ſtored with blind Faith and Prejudices, as to be able to ſuffer Death with Conſtancy.

[c] He lived in the Time of the Emperor Veſpaſian.

[d] He lived under Antoninus Pius.

they were the Conſervators of their Traditions, and had the Care of tranſmitting them to lateſt Poſterity. Theſe Traditions conſiſt in a prodigious Number of ſacred Trifles and Punctilio's, which are nevertheleſs ſo neceſſary to the faithful Jew, that without them it is impoſſible for the Law of God given to Moſes to direct him in the Way to Heaven. It was but juſt, therefore, that the Cares of ſo important and laborious an Employment ſhould be attended with many extraordinary Privileges. Accordingly thoſe illuſtrious Guides enjoyed the glorious Prerogative of working Miracles; of over-ruling the Devil; of putting a ſtop to, and diſſolving any magical Incantations; and, in ſhort, of predicting and foreſeeing the Death of the Sick. We ſhall purpoſely omit, however, the Names and Miracles of theſe Traditionaries, ſince they are to be met with in the Talmud.

VII. SECTS of the JEWS.

THERE are two Sects which the Jews account Schiſmaticks, Heretics, and Perſons worthy of Excommunication; viz. the Samaritans, and Caraites.

SAMARITANS.

WHAT follows is an Addition to what F. Simon has ſaid of them in the preceding Diſſertations.

IF the Relation [a] of a Samaritan of Naplouſe, who is the antient Sichem, may be credited, "The Samaritans of that City conſiſt of five or ſix Families, who have perpetuated themſelves in it; and notwithſtanding the Troubles and Viciſſitudes of Fortune which they have undergone, have ſtill the ſecret Pleaſure of ſeeing the Religion they profeſs never wholly ſuppreſſed at Naplouſe. The Samaritan added, that he hoped as long as Mount Garizim ſtood, God would have his Worſhippers there; that tho' God, indeed, by a juſt Vengeance on the Iniquities of the People, had permitted the Deſtruction of the Temple on that ſacred Mountain, to which their Fore-Fathers went up to ſacrifice to the only true God; yet the Followers of his Religion had never yet been deprived of the Satisfaction of often viſiting that holy Hill, there to put up their Prayers and Wiſhes for the Re-eſtabliſhment of this holy Temple, and there to offer to God at leaſt a Heart inviolably attach'd to a Religion, which, in his Opinion, was the moſt antient, as well as the moſt holy Religion in the World." The Author of the above Relation travelled in the Years 1697, and 1698, and if what he aſſerts be true, we may juſtly conclude, there is neither Temple nor Sacrifice on Mount Garizim; but we have good Reaſons to doubt whether he is ſo exact as he ought to be.

1. THE Samaritans load Mahomet with their heavieſt Imprecations, which are to be found at the End of a Chronicle they call the Book of Joſhua; but Mahomet's Name is written in Samaritan, that the Turks may have no Knowledge of an Imprecation ſo offenſive to their Religion.

2. THEY retain an implacable Hatred againſt the other Jews, who treat them with equal Contempt and Abhorrence.

3. EVERY one knows that the Name of [b] Jehovah is too ſacred to be pronounced by a Jew. The Samaritans, likewiſe, avoid it, and make uſe of the Word Sema in the Room of it.

[a] Travels to Mount Sinai and Jeruſalem by Moriſon, printed in 1704.

[b] Formerly that Jew who ſhould pronounce the Word Jehovah ran the Riſque of his Life, nor did the High Prieſt himſelf pronounce it but once a Year in the Temple at Jeruſalem.

4. THEY

4. THEY have a confuſed and imperfect Idea of the Meſſiah, but they make honourable mention of him, as we are informed, without running into Invectives againſt the Chriſtians.

5. THEY follow the Mahometan Hegyra, in the Computation of their Years.

6. THEY deny the Exiſtence of Angels, and interpret thoſe Paſſages where they are mentioned by the Word Command or Virtue: [a] God ſent an Angel: that is, a Command. The Angel of God did ſuch a Thing, that is, God's Virtue wrought, &c. There are ſome learned Men, however, who inſiſt, that the Samaritans really believe their Exiſtence.

7. THE High Prieſt is Judge of the People, and all Debates are decided by his Opinion, and at his Tribunal. Their High Prieſts likewiſe pretend to be the Deſcendants of Aaron.

8. THEY obſerve the Sabbath with much more Strictneſs than the Jews.

9. THEY fall proſtrate on the Earth in their Adorations to God on Mount Garizim, which they call The Houſe of God.

10. THEY ſacrifice their Paſchal Lamb on Mount Garizim only, which is dreſſed with bitter Herbs, and eaten with leavened Bread.

11. THEIR ſeventh Month begins with the Feaſt of Trumpets. That of Expiation follows ten Days after. [b] They are more ſtrict in the Obſervance of their Faſts than the Jews.

12. THEIR Feaſt of Tabernacles is on the fifteenth of the ſame Month, when they ſet up Tents, and indulge themſelves in all ſorts of Diverſions for ſeven Days; and on the eighth and laſt of the Feſtival, a Hymn is ſung to the Praiſe and Glory of God.

13. THEY examine very carefully, whether the Conjunction of the Sun and Moon be at Night, or in the Day-time before Noon. If it falls out before ſix a Clock, that Day is the firſt of the Month; but if at ſix, or a little after, the Month does not commence till the next Day. If the Conjunction be lunar, the Month conſiſts but of twenty-nine Days, if it be ſolar, of thirty. If the New Moon falls on the eleventh of the Month [c] Adar, a Month is intercalated, and then they compute thirteen to that Year, and the Month immediately enſuing is the firſt of it. But if the Month begins on the twelfth of Adar, or ſome few Days after, it is the firſt Month of the Year, which then conſiſts of twelve Months only.

14. THEY pour what they call the Water of Separation on the third and fourth Day, upon all ſuch Things as have been polluted by the Touch of Women; and this they do for ſeven Days on a Woman who has any Fluxion. She who has been brought to Bed of a Son ſeparates for forty Days, but if of a Daughter, as many more.

15. THEY hold a general Judgment, which is to be an awful Day of Vengeance to the Wicked, and of Peace and Recompence to the Virtuous.

MOST of theſe Obſervations are collected [d] from ſome Letters which were written by the Samaritans about the Year 1690.

[a] Baſnage's Hiſtory of the Jews, Lib. ii. Chap. ii.
[b] See above F. Simon.
[c] It anſwers to February.
[d] Baſnage's Hiſtory of the Jews, and Dr. Prideaux's Connexion.

CARAITES.

THERE are Caraïtes in the Eaſt, and likewiſe in Poland and Lithuania. The reſt of the Jews frequently, on purpoſe, confound them with the Sadducees, and endeavour to make them odious under the Name of [a] Cutheans or Samaritans, Epicureans, &c. Theſe Caraïtes are not near ſo ſuperſtitious as the other Jews.

1. THEY reject the pretended [b] Oral Law, which was delivered to Moſes on Mount Sinaï; and in this Reſpect behave towards the Jews juſt as the Calviniſts do towards the Chriſtians. This Oral Law of Moſes is an eaſy agreeable Invention, which contributes towards bearing up the Yoke of ſo many trivial Punctilio's, which their Doctors have inſtituted, and enjoin'd the Jewiſh Church to obſerve, and inſenſibly made to paſs as Fundamentals of Religion.

2. THE Reſult whereof is, that their Judaiſm is more refin'd. They adhere cloſely, and even ſcrupulouſly to the Text of Scripture, upon Pretence that [c] Tranſlations, however juſt, ſtill always enervate the Force of the Original: They require an implicit Faith, and admit of no Debates on the Exiſtence of God, or the Divinity of the Law.

3. THE Caraïtes maintain, that the High Prieſt, or ſome Prophet (that is, ſome skilful and experienc'd Perſon, for it ſeems inconſiſtent that Prophecy ſhould be any ways here concerned) had the Direction and Appointment of the Feſtivals and Years, during the Continuance of the Jewiſh State: Whereas the reſt of the Jews make it the proper Buſineſs of the Head or Principal of the Sanhedrim. The latter inſiſt upon the Neceſſity of aſtronomical Calculations for the Regulation of their Years: The former pretend, that ſuch Regulation depends on the firſt Appearance of the New Moon, rejecting all Calculation and Intercalations as not of Moſes's Inſtitution. All this may be ſeen more at large in Baſnage's Hiſtory of the Jews, Lib. II. Chap. xvi. It cannot be queſtioned, but that this Conduct of the Caraïtes is owing to a ridiculous Prejudice and Prepoſſeſſion; for Moſes's Character could not poſſibly prevent the bringing a Cuſtom to Perfection, which of itſelf in no Reſpect related to Religion. But to this blind Regard which is paid to antient Errors, and the Founders of Cuſtoms, without Knowledge or Examination of them, many dangerous Superſtitions are very juſtly to be aſcrib'd.

4. THE Caraïtes differ from the other Jews in ſome Points relating to Inceſt, and the prohibited Degrees of Conſanguinity in Marriage.

5. THEY hold, that God's Attributes are his Eſſence. They conſider the Deity as a Cauſe which often produces different Effects by one and the ſame Operation. He influences all human Actions, and aſſiſts them, but ſo as it depends on their own Determination. All Things are in God's Hands, but the Fear of him. Health, or Sickneſs, which they attribute to the Soul, as diſpoſed to comprehend or not comprehend Truth, is a Notion of the Stoics.

6. THEY hold likewiſe, that there are Puniſhments and Rewards in a future State.

[a] Buxtorf. Synag. Jud. Lib. i. Chap. i.

[b] Or Tradition. F. Simon ſoftens this Article extremely, and pretends they reject only ſuch as are falſe, or doubtful. See Art. iv. and v.

[c] Yet they read the Scripture and their Liturgies in the Language of the Country where they reſide; at Conſtantinople in Greek, at Caffa in Turkiſh, in Perſia in Perſian; and in Arabic in all Places where the Arabic is the vulgar Tongue. See Dr. Prideaux's Connexion, Tom. IV. p. 72. Amſterdam Edit. 1722. and Baſnage's Hiſtory of the Jews, Lib. ii. Chap. xvi.

7. THEY

7. THEY live in the Expectation of the Meſſiah, but are againſt ſpending any Time in the Calculation of his Arrival, imagining it may be delay'd on Account of their Tranſgreſſions, and of the Slowneſs of Saturn's periodical Revolution, which is [a] the Star of the Sabbath, and the Jewiſh Nation. It is a Queſtion that might reaſonably be ask'd them, what Relation is there between that Planet and the Meſſiah, and how are they ſure that Saturn preſides over their Sabbath, or ſheds his Influence over the Jewiſh Nation?

8. THEY allow of no Image, Statue, or other Repreſentation whatſoever in their Houſes, and are againſt all ſorts of Trade and Commerce.

9. WHEN they meditate, they compoſe themſelves as much as poſſible, and endeavour to avoid all Diſtraction. When they pray, they make uſe of the Hebrew Language, as being in their Opinion really holy, and always turn their Faces towards Jeruſalem.

10. THEY are ſtricter Moraliſts than the other Jews.

11. THEY pay an exceſſive Veneration to their Tutors, inſomuch that Pupils never ſit down without their Permiſſion, and when they depart from them, walk backwards with their Faces towards them. Theſe Tutors are ſaid to be very charitable, and to teach ſuch as cannot pay them gratis [b].

THE Caraïtes and Rabbiniſts (for ſo they call thoſe Jews who are Enemies to the Caraïtes) curſe each other moſt heartily, and never are allied by Marriage, or any other Way whatever; and it is with great Reluctance that they admit any Caraïte to become their Proſelyte; a Caraïte, they ſay, muſt firſt turn Mahometan, or Chriſtian, before he can be admitted as a Rabbiniſt Jew. Might not one juſtly aſſert, that they look on this mutual Enmity as an Article of their Faith, ſince they ſo ſtrictly obſerve it; and indeed in this Point the Chriſtians do not fall much ſhort of them.

SADDUCEES.

THE [c] Sadducees, according to Mr. Baſnage, began to appear two hundred and forty Years before Jeſus Chriſt, altho' their Origin was of greater [d] Antiquity. They diſtinguiſhed themſelves at firſt only by refuſing to own the Authority of Tradition. It is alledg'd too, that they preferred the Books of Moſes before all the other Parts of the ſacred Scriptures, accounting the latter only as [e] the Compoſitions of Men venerable upon Account of their Sanctity.

1. THEY ſeem to have maintained, that Providence has no Influence over human Actions, and that in reality Mankind are abſolutely free.

2. THEY denied the Exiſtence of Angels, the Immateriality of the Soul, and the Reſurrection; concluding that there was no Spirit but God alone.

THEY held, that there was no other Happineſs to be expected but the preſent; that the Rewards and Puniſhments which God had ordained related to this Life only; and that no other Motive to ſerve God was to be regarded.

[a] Baſnage's Hiſtory of the Jews, Lib. ii. Chap. xvi.
[b] F. Simon has been exactly copied, in what relates to the Samaritans and Caraites, by Mr. Jovet in his Hiſtory of all Religions.
[c] Hiſtory of the Jews, Lib. ii. Chap. xiv.
[d] See Dr. Prideaux's Connexion, &c.
[e] Baſnage's Hiſtory of the Jews, Lib. ii. Chap. xiv.

PRINCIPLES ſo deluding, and ſo well adapted to lull Conſcience aſleep, drew over ſeveral Perſons of Diſtinction to their Party. Their practical Morality, however, was not ſo looſe as might be imagined, ſince they puniſhed Crimes with uncommon Rigour; and the Jewiſh Hiſtory repreſents them as auſtere in regard to Manners. Thus their Theory can hardly be brought to agree with their Practice.

THIS Sect continued long after the Deſtruction of the Jewiſh State, and ſeems even to have been confounded with the Caraïtes and [a] Samaritans. However, according to Mr. Baſnage, they are ſaid ſtill to ſubſiſt in Africk, though he produces no Voucher for it.

PHARISEES.

ALL modern Jews may come under the Denomination of Phariſees, except the Caraïtes and Samaritans; ſince their Religion accounts Traditions as Divine Commands, and frequently obſerves them more ſtrictly than the Law which was given to Moſes. At preſent, ſays a certain Author, the Jewiſh Religion is no more [b] than a Fabrick erected upon Phariſaical Tradition, and not in the leaſt on the Foundation of the Law and the Prophets. And it muſt be acknowledged, that the Jews, who reſide amongſt us, carry the Merit of their Traditions, and the Glory of the Talmud which contains them, to an extravagant Pitch; but it would be an Hyperbole to ſay, [c] It is become their Bible, becauſe the ſacred Scriptures are in conſtant Uſe among them, and all their Leſſons, Prayers, &c. are either directly or indirectly extracted from the Bible; let us therefore take the Middle Way. The preſent Jews may paſs, indeed, for Phariſees, on Account of their Reſpect for Tradition, and their ſtrict Obſervance of the Injunctions laid on them by their Traditionary Doctors: But this Punctuality and Exactneſs does not make them Phariſees in their Doctrines, ſince they declare in the Confeſſion of their Faith, That the Law which was delivered to Moſes is unalterable, and that God will never give them any other. Beſides, the preſent Jews and the antient Phariſees differ widely in their Practice; becauſe for the moſt part they are far from affecting ſuch an extraordinary Sanctity, and there are very few of them who take the Pains to look ſo demure, and put on the Phariſaic Mask.

ANOTHER Difference between the modern Jews and the Phariſees, is the Reſurrection of the Dead. The Phariſees [d] held the Metempſychoſis, or the Tranſmigration of the Soul from one Body to another, which they called Reſurrection: [e] But they denied this Tranſmigration to ſuch Men as were guilty of the moſt flagrant Crimes, and delivered over their Souls to eternal Torments for the Sins they had committed in this Life: And that the Souls of ſuch whoſe Sins were not of ſo deep a Dye, received their Puniſhment in thoſe Bodies into which they tranſmigrated. The modern [f] Jews, indeed, believe the ſame Reſurrection as the Chriſtians.

SOME charge the Phariſees with maintaining a kind of Fate or Deſtiny, which obliged Mankind to be neceſſary Agents; but others have ſoftened this Sentiment which diſhonours the Deity, and ſuppoſed that the Phariſees by ſuch a Fatality did not mean God's Providence, but ſomething elſe. They aſſert, therefore, that the Phariſees believed, that God from the Beginning had impreſſed a certain Force upon all Creatures, whereby they acted and moved, without any Occaſion for God continually to co-operate with them. They are accuſed by ſome with making ſecond Cauſes rely on the Influence of [a] Baſnage's Hiſt. of the Jews, Lib. ii. Chap. xv.

[b] Dr. Prideaux in his Connexion.
[c] Idem.
[d] Joſephus.
[e] Prideaux, ibid.
[f] Some of them believe the Metempſychoſis.

the

[a] the Stars, which is the ſort of Fatality that the Phariſees maintained. But in whatever Senſe this Notion is taken, it will inevitably rob Mankind of their Liberty.

THE antient Phariſees practiſed divers kinds of Penance, which at this Time would be no ways inferior to thoſe of the Monks of la Trape, and ſeveral other Penitents. For Example, they deprived themſelves of their natural Reſt, which is a Thing ſo abſolutely neceſſary: They ſtrewed little ſharp Flint Stones, Briars, and Thorns in their Beds; they faſted frequently, and for a long Time; they laſhed themſelves till the Blood followed their Stripes; they tore their Fleſh; they affected to ſhut their Eyes, or fix them ſtedfaſt on the Ground; to walk without regarding how or where they went, that they might beat their Heads againſt the Wall. [b] They wore the Law on their Foreheads, their Sleeves and the Hems of their Garments. They viſited the Tombs of the Saints of Iſrael, and adorned them with Memorials of their Piety; the Scriptures, however, deſcribe them as a more abandon'd Race than their Adverſaries the Sadducees. And 'tis remarkable, that notwithſtanding thoſe Auſterities to which the Phariſees in publick devoted themſelves, they were ſecretly engaged in the Intrigues of the Court. In ſhort, they were [c] ſmart Politicians.

Half-Jews, Sabbatites or Sabbatarians, Eſſenes, Herodians, &c.

SOME pretend, that there appeared Half-Jews in Sileſia, and elſewhere at the Time of Calvin's Reformation, and that there are ſome to be met with in divers Places. [d] One Seidelius is univerſally allowed to be their Principal. This Sect maintain, that the Meſſiah has no regard for the Heathens, and that he was deſigned for the Jews only, they being the Nation whom God in Truth honour'd with his Alliance. Seidelius farther maintain'd, that all Religion conſiſted in the Ten Commandments. [e] He placed Sacrifices and Ceremonies amongſt the Number of Rites peculiar to the (Jewiſh) Nation, which might be of Service in Divine Worſhip.

THERE are Sabbatarians in England, and other Places. They differ from the reſt of the Jews in nothing but a more ſtrict Obſervance of the [f] Sabbath.

As to the Eſſenes and Herodians, whoſe Sects extend no farther than the firſt Ages of Chriſtianity, we ſhall refer the Reader to the Learned, who have diſcourſed about them.

IN Holland the Jews make two ſeparate Societies, who are inveterate Enemies to each [g] other. The Germans are divided from the Spaniſh and Portugueſe, by a few particular Ceremonies, and ſome arbitrary Cuſtoms. The Difference conſiſts in the Practice of them, and not in the leaſt in the Oeconomy of their Religion; but 'tis notwithſtanding a great Obſtacle to their Re-union. Theſe Germans are more ſuperſtitious than all the Jews be[a] The modern Jews are ſtrongly prejudiced in Favour of this Influence. Nor are they alone; for many Chriſtians have endeavoured to eſtabliſh it; and indeed this Doctrine muſt be allowed to be agreeable and commodious; for if it takes off the Glory of acting well, ſo it does the Shame too of doing ill.

[b] By their Totaphots and Phylacteries.

[c] See what Joſephus ſays concerning Alexander Jannæus.

[d] Baſnage's Hiſtory of the Jews, Lib. ix. Chap. xxxiv.

[e] Theſe are Mr. Baſnage's Words.

[f] This we have ſaid upon the Credit of ſome of the Jews, to which we will ſubjoin what a learned and judicious Writer relates in his Memoirs and Obſervations upon England, p. 367. Edit. 1698. "There is a particular Sect —— of "Men known by the Name of Sabbatarians (or Seventh-Day Men;) they make Profeſſion of expecting the Millenary "Reign —— They are called Sabbatarians, becauſe they will not reſt on Sunday, but Saturday. They leave off Work "early on Friday Night, and are ſtrict Obſervers of their Sabbath. They adminiſter Baptiſm to adult Perſons only "—— Moſt of them will neither eat Pork, Blood, nor any Thing ſtrangled —— Their Morality is very ſevere, "and all their outward Deportment pious and Chriſtian-like. Theſe Sabbatarians therefore, are nothing elſe but "Chriſtians, who approve of the Practice of the Jews in ſome particular Points.

[g] Among the Portugueſe Jews they are called Benjamites, or of the Tribe of Benjamin.

ſides;

ſides; but they are notwithſtanding falſe and faithleſs to the laſt Degree. The Portugueſe Jews will not receive them into their Synagogue, neither will they intermarry with them. One ſingle Family, indeed, of Benjamite Jews has the Privilege of a Place in the Portugueſe Synagogue at Amſterdam; becauſe their Anceſtors entertained the Fugitive Jews of Spain and Portugal very charitably, and contributed to their Settlement there by their Interceſſion with the leading Men of the Republick. The Italian Jews too are look'd upon as Benjamites, but are not ſo much deſpiſed as the German; and yet a Portugueſe would not marry his Daughter to an Italian.

CHINESE JEWS.

THESE may be conſider'd as a particular Sect. The Difference between them and other Jews, according to Father Gozani, conſiſts in the following Particulars.

1. ALTHOUGH they will not admit of any Statue, or Image, yet they place the Frame, on which the Emperor's Name is written, in Moſes's Seat, which would be deemed a Prophanation by our European Jews.

2. THEY have Incenſe-Pots which they make uſe of in Commemoration of the holy Patriarchs, &c.

3. THEY mingle a great Number of Fables and idle Stories with the true Facts recorded in Scripture, in which very probably they endeavour not to be outdone by the Rabbi's and other European Jews. A curious Perſon would be glad to know whether it is in the Comment or the Text that they mingle thoſe Fictions.

4. THEY reſpect Confutius, and aſſiſt with the other Chineſe at the ſolemn Ceremonies which are performed in Commemoration of him.

5. THEY pay Funeral Honours to their Anceſtors, as the Chineſe do in Spring and Autumn, and ſet Meat before them; but they abſtain from Swine's Fleſh.

6. THEY ſeem to have no Idea at all of the Meſſiah.

VIII. Profeſſion of Faith of the JEWS. Some other Articles of their Belief which are not generally received.

THE faithful Jew muſt never ſwerve from this Confeſſion of Faith, which includes the thirteen fundamental Articles of his Religion [a] herein after mentioned.

1. I believe with a ſtrong and lively Faith, that God, bleſſed for evermore, is the Creator and Preſerver of all Creatures; that he did, does, and will create every Thing to the End of all Ages.

2. I believe, &c. that God is one, and that there is nothing like unto his Unity; that he has been, is, and ſhall for ever be the only God bleſſed for evermore.

[a] Ex Buxtorfii Synag. Judaicâ, Cap. iii.

3. I believe, &c. that God is incorporeal, incapable of being felt or comprehended as Matter is: In ſhort, that no other Exiſtencee is like unto him.

4. I believe, &c. that God is the Beginning and End of all Things.

5. I believe, &c. that God alone is to be adored, and that no other Being whatever is the proper Object of Adoration.

6. I believe, &c. that whatever is written in the Books of the Prophets is true.

7. I believe, &c. the Truth of the Prophecies of our Maſter Moſes, [a] (Peace be with him,) and that he is the Father and Chief of the Wiſe-Men who were his Contemporaries, and of all thoſe who have ſucceeded him down to our Time.

8. I believe, &c. that God delivered the Law to our Maſter Moſes [b], ſuch as we have it at this Day.

9. I believe, &c. that God will never change this Law, or give another.

10. I believe, &c. that God perfectly knows the moſt ſecret Thoughts of Man, and all his Works.

11. I believe &c. that God will reward the Righteous, and puniſh the Wicked.

12. I believe, &c. that the Meſſiah will come, and will always live in the conſtant Expectation of his coming.

13. I believe, &c. that God will raiſe the Dead, and tho' I know not when, yet it will be when he ſees moſt convenient. Hallowed be his Name for ever and ever. AMEN.

THESE Articles are expatiated on and expounded in [c] Baſnage's Hiſtory of the Jews, and Buxtorf's Synagogue. To theſe may be joined what Father Simon ſays of it in the preceding Diſſertations.

THERE are other Articles beſides theſe fundamental Ones, which, tho' not univerſally received, are not abſolutely rejected.

1. THE Jews have a profound Veneration for the Angels, but do not adore them, or make their Applications to them as Mediators or Interceſſors. They addreſs themſelves, however, to them on [d] certain Occaſions. There are ſome Jews, who, according to Buxtorf, attribute an extraordinary Virtue to a particular Prayer they call the ſeventy two Verſes. Theſe Verſes repeated with Fervency and Devotion have the Power of bringing down the Angels, and obliging them to aſſiſt the Suppliant. Roſs tells us, "that the Jews believe there is a good and a bad Angel always attending before the Sy-"nagogue, to obſerve who prays with moſt Ardour and Attention. Theſe Angels "take Care of the Habitations of thoſe who have every Thing clean and neat about "them, and retire therein with Pleaſure." Thus the good Man talks [e] in the Tranſlation of his Book by Thomas la Grue, Maſter of Arts and Phyſician. But he ſhould at

[a] Qui requieſcat in Pace. V. Buxtorf. ibid. This is an Oriental Compliment, conſtantly paid to the Name of Mahomet.

[b] Qui requieſcat in Pace.

[c] Lib. iv. cap. 1. Synag. Jud. Cap. 3.

[d] See a Prayer addreſſed to the Angels in Buxtorf. Syn. Jud. Cap. 8. but indeed 'tis now laid aſide.

[e] Amſt. Edit. 1672.

leaſt have told us the Name of the Author who furniſhed him with ſo remarkable an Incident.

2. THEY pray, as a learned [a] German tells us, to their Saints. [b] The Pilgrimage of the Jews to the Sepulchre of the Prophet Ezekiel, and the Miracles they aſcribe to this Prophet, ſeem to confirm it. The Jews would never publiſh ſuch Fables, ſays Mr. Bayle, if the Invocation of Saints was, in their Opinion, a Thing forbidden them. [c]

3. THEY admit of a Purgatory, and for eleven Months repeat the Prayer called Cadiſh every Day, in order to releaſe their Relations out of it. See Buxtorf's Synagogue, and Father Simon's firſt Diſſertation.

4. THE Church [d] prays for the Dead. The Relations of the Deceaſed meet, [e] and pray amongſt themſelves Night and Morning, during the Space of ſeven Days, for his Soul. They likewiſe beſtow [f] Alms and make Oblations in Favour of the Deceaſed's Soul.

5. THEIR Traditions, the Neceſſity whereof is conſtantly admitted, are a very full and ample Supplement to the Law received from Moſes. Theſe Traditions, for ought we know, may be tacitly expreſſed in the ſeventh, eighth and ninth Articles of their Confeſſion of Faith.

6. THEIR Sentiments with Reſpect to the Meſſiah are very various. Some believe his Coming is deferred on Account of the Sins of their Nation. Some of the Jewiſh Doctors aſſure us, there will come Two, One poor and deſpicable, the Other glorious and triumphant. The latter is expected to reſtore them to their original Splendor, and to deſtroy their Enemies. His Reign however ſhall laſt but for a Seaſon. In ſhort, ſome of their Doctors have aſſerted that the Meſſiah came long ago, and to live in the Expectation of him was vain and uſeleſs.

7. THEY do not always agree in their Sentiments relating to Paradiſe, Hell and the Reſurrection. Some flatter themſelves that Paradiſe will be a Manſion for them full of Delights, in which they include all ſenſual Enjoyments; where the Converſation of Women will be allowed, and admitted as a fundamental Article of ſubſtantial Pleaſure. We are convinced their Thoughts are agreeable to their Inclinations, and that Abundance of People would be charm'd with the pleaſing Proſpect of being raiſed from the Dead, if Religion would but ſecure this important Article.

[a] Baſnage's Hiſtory of the Jews, Lib. iv. cap. 10. art. 7.

[b] V. Bayle's Dict. Art. Ezekiel.

[c] This is not a Tenet of Religion with them. They have no Prayer addreſſed to the holy Patriarchs, but there is ſometimes this Form in their Prayers: By the Merit of Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob we beſeech thee to hear us. They make uſe of it, as they ſay, to humble themſelves the more before God; and as they don't think themſelves worthy to be heard upon Account of their own Virtue, they have Recourſe to that of Abraham, &c.

[d] Buxtorf. Syn. Jud. Cap. 29. Tota Eccleſia ſingulis Sabbatis pro defunctis orat, maximè pro illis qui aliquid ad Uſum Pauperum vel Synagogæ Conſervationem legârunt. He inſerts the Burial Service.

[e] The Reaſon why they pray in Company, is their Belief that God is ever preſent in an Aſſembly of ſeveral praying together. Theſe private Aſſemblies are not to conſiſt of above ten at moſt. If they exceed that Number, the Heads of the Synagogue have a Power to prohibit them, upon Account of the Prejudice they might cauſe to public Aſſemblies.

[f] Theſe Alms are beſtowed with great Vanity and Oſtentation. Some Jews have aſſured us, that the great Advantages ariſing to the Synagogue by ſuch Oblations, is the ſole Reaſon of its continuing in Uſe among them.

A

CONTINUATION

OF THE

THIRD DISCOURSE

ON THE

CEREMONIES of the JEWS, &c.

CONTAINING

An Explication of the Religious Customs of the Modern JEWS.

Crauklot inv.

G. Scotin Sculp.

CONTINUATION
OF THE
THIRD DISCOURSE
ON THE
CEREMONIES of the JEWS, &c.
CONTAINING
An Explication of the Religious Customs of the Modern JEWS.

IN the second Part [a] of this Dissertation we shall endeavour to shew, with as much Accuracy as possibly we can, the Difference that may be found in the very same Ceremony amongst the Jews who follow different Rituals: Which Ceremonies we shall divide into three distinct Classes. The first shall include those which relate to Ecclesiastical Councils, Places set apart for Divine Worship, Religious Officers and certain Aids and and Assistances designed for Prayer: The second shall treat of Festivals and Exercises of Devotion both public and private: The third shall be appropriated to such Ceremonies wherein Religion necessarily interposes.

The Ancient SANHEDRIM.

THE Origin of this Council may be found in the Eighteenth Chapter of Exodus. Moses selected seventy Partners to judge the People of Israel. This, according to the Opinion of many of the Learned, is the Rise of the grand Sanhedrim. Others insist, however, that 'tis of later Date by some Centuries, and must be looked for in the Time of the celebrated Maccabees.

[a] This Difference in their Ceremonies makes the Variation in their Rituals. And the different Conjunctures, Places, and People amongst whom the Jews have lived, are the Occasion of it. The German, Polish, Bohemian, Lithuanian, and Russian Jews, follow the same Ritual; but the Spanish and Portuguese have another, which still varies from that of the Levantin and Italian Jews. All these still disagree with those of Jerusalem, China, and some other Parts of the World.

THIS Council had formerly almoſt an abſolute and deciſive Power. Nay it was deem'd infallible in the Determination of all religious Debates; but ſo tender and eſſential a Point, which would have ſubjected the Belief of all the Faithful to ſeventy [a] Perſons only, is at preſent conteſted. The Power of judging Kings was likewiſe aſcrib'd to it; but this Point too is now as much diſputed as the other. This Council, had the Power of Life and Death, beſides a Right to interpret the Law, and take Cognizance of all Eccleſiaſtical Cauſes. Gabinius Governor of Syria aboliſhed all its Privileges in Favour of the Romans about fifty ſeven Years before the Birth of Jeſus Chriſt.

THE Grand Sanhedrim aſſembled in the Temple at Jeruſalem, and received Appeals from all the Courts of Judicature of the other Towns of Judea. Theſe inferior Courts were called Petty Sanhedrims, and conſiſted only of twenty three Members.

THIS is all that is requiſite to be ſaid on the Topic of the Grand Sanhedrim and Inferior Councils, both the one and the other being aboliſhed upon the Deſtruction of Jeruſalem. They were never able to re-eſtabliſh themſelves ſince; nor is any Thing related of them in the Hiſtory of our own Times, except that Council which the Jews held in Hungary in the laſt Century. The Ceremony and Particulars whereof are as follow, according to Mr. Baſnage's Account in Lib. IX. Chap. the 35. of his Hiſtory of the Jews. An Engliſhman, who pretended to have been preſent at it, oblig'd him it ſeems with the Relation.

THIS Council, which was held about thirty Leagues from Buda, in the Plains of Ageda, was aſſembled in order to enquire into all Matters concerning the Meſſiah, and to determine, after mature Deliberation, whether he was come or not. This venerable Aſſembly was compos'd of three hundred Rabbi's, encamped under Tents, the largeſt whereof was appropriated for their Hall. There the Aſſembly was to meet, and none were to be admitted who could not ſpeak Hebrew, and derive their Pedigree. One of the Tribe of Levi was elected Preſident, who being ſeated at a Table over againſt the Eaſtern Gate, and ſurrounded by all the Doctors of the Aſſembly ranged in a circular Form, propos'd all ſuch Queſtions as he thought proper.

THE firſt Day paſs'd in Acts of Courteſy and Complaiſance; they kiſſed each other in a very affectionate and friendly Manner, and excluded all thoſe Jews who could not prove their Deſcent. On the ſecond Day the Propoſition was drawn up in the following Terms; We are to enquire whether the Meſſiah be already come, or whether we are ſtill to expect him. Some of the Rabbi's were of Opinion that he was come; but it was carried in the Negative, and concluded, that the real Cauſe of ſo fatal a Delay was to be aſcrib'd to the Hardneſs of Heart and Iniquities of the People. The former were divided in their Sentiments: Some of them found the Marks of the Meſſiah in Elias, and others in Jeſus Chriſt. One Rabbi in particular inſiſted very ſtrenuouſly on the Miracles wrought by the latter, but was ſeverely reprimanded. The Fathers of the Council, in the next Place, debated on the Manner of the Meſſiah's coming, and concluded that he would appear in Pomp and Triumph; that he would make no Alteration in Religion, and would be born of a Virgin.

AFTER the Council had laſted ſix Days, ſix Eccleſiaſtics from Rome preſented themſelves before the Aſſembly. Firſt they endeavoured to prove to the Jews that the Meſſiah was come; and then entered into a pompous Deſcription of the Magnificence of the Ceremonies of the Church, the Dignity of her Worſhip, the Riches and Authority of her viſible Head, who was the Vicar of the Meſſiah. But Articles ſo directly repugnant to the Spirit of Judaiſm, were unanimouſly exploded, and a Kind of Anathema was pronounc'd againſt their God-Man, their Interceſſion of Saints, their Adoration of Images, and their Invocation of the Virgin Mary.

[a] Seventy two is the general Opinion.

WE

We have related the Hiſtory and Ceremony of this Council with Abundance of Pleaſure; but the Authority of our Engliſh Hiſtorians alone is not of ſufficient Weight to ſupport the Truth of it. For is it probable, that ſo auguſt an Aſſembly as this ſhould be countenanced by any Prince? Or that the Jews could have the Aſſurance to launch out into Invectives againſt Jeſus Chriſt, &c. in the Preſence of ſeveral Eccleſiaſtics come from Rome? That ſuch an Aſſembly ſhould have made no Noiſe in the World? And that we muſt rely on the Sincerity and Honour of one ſingle Man, on ſo important an Article?

After the Sanhedrim was aboliſh'd, the Jews ſubſtituted in its Room ſome particular Tribunals for the Deciſion of Caſes of Conſcience, and other religious Debates. Theſe Tribunals, which were afterwards called Houſes of Judgment, were a very imperfect Image of the Sanhedrim: They ſtill ſubſiſt, however, but their Authority is much more limited and reſtrained than formerly. Their Parnaſſim, who are Laymen elected by a Plurality of Voices, compoſe theſe petty Tribunals. 'Tis [a] their Buſineſs to collect the Money for Alms and Oblations, and diſtribute it to the Poor. They are the Regents of the Synagogue, provide all Neceſſaries for the Church, decide ſeveral Debates, and even ſome in Matters of Religion. In ſhort, they thunder out their Excommunications againſt Rebels and Apoſtates; but this is what very ſeldom happens.

The SYNAGOGUE.

SYNAGOGUES were eſtabliſh'd at their Return from the Captivity. We muſt have Recourſe to the Diſperſion of the Jews, which render'd them neceſſary to trace their Origin; for Part of the People reſiding at a great Diſtance from Jeruſalem, found it impracticable for them to go up to their Metropolitan Temple, in order to pay their Devotion in due Form. It was neceſſary, therefore, to eſtabliſh Aſſemblies or Synagogues in thoſe Places where the Prince allowed them Liberty of Conſcience. Theſe firſt Synagogues, however, are not to be look'd upon as Temples; the Law, indeed, was explained there, but no Sacrifices offered therein; and they were obliged to go directly, as often as poſſibly they could, to worſhip at Jeruſalem: That was the grand River of Salvation to which the ſmall Streams were ſooner or later obliged to pay their Tribute. When there were any Men in a Town, who were remarkable for their Virtue and Piety, the Faithful met at their Houſes, and paid their Devotions there. Theſe Aſſemblies were real Synagogues, though they did not bear that Denomination. The Rich ſometimes would ſelect Directors for their Conſciences; and the Levite mentioned in the eighteenth Chapter of Judges, ver. 19. can be taken for no other.

Formerly the Jews erected their Synagogues without the City, and ſurrounded them with Trees; but at preſent they chuſe ſome Eminence in thoſe Cities where the Exerciſe of Judaiſm is allowed. The Fabrick muſt be higher than the common Houſes; for, ſay they, The Houſe of our God muſt be magnificent. The inner Part of it is very accurately deſcribed by Leo of Modena in his firſt Diſſertation, Chap. X. The Synagogue muſt be ſo diſpoſed, that the Entrance may look towards the Place where they pray: that is, if they pray towards the Eaſt, the Door muſt ſtand Weſt; and this is ſo ordered, that they may bow towards the [b] Ark when they enter into the Synagogue.

The Seats there are all hired, the Income whereof is ſet apart for the better Support and Maintenance of the Synagogue; but no Seats are allowed between the Desk and the Ark, becauſe ſhould any one ſit there, he would turn his Back upon the Ark as he faces

[a] Vide firſt Diſſertation upon the Ceremonies of the Jews, Chap. xiv.

[b] The Hechal, where the Books of the Law are locked up. This Hechal is an imperfect Repreſentation of the Place where the Ark of the antient Jews reſted.

the

the Preacher. Such a Situation muſt needs reflect a Diſhonour on the Ark, and be Matter of great Scandal and Offence to the faithful Jews.

THE Jews are obliged religiouſly to obſerve the Reſpect due to the Synagogue, and to forbear talking of Buſineſs there [a], or even thinking on any worldly Advantages. They muſt likewiſe avoid ſleeping there; and throwing their Eyes all round about, &c. They muſt continue in a modeſt Poſture, and not ſuffer themſelves to run into any Indecency. We ſhall treat more at large on the Duties incumbent on a true Jew, when we come to the Ceremonies to be obſerved at their publick Prayers.

THE Jews call the Synagogue Beth Hakkeneſh, that is, The Meeting-Houſe.

FATHER Gozzani, a Jeſuit, has given us a very accurate and curious Deſcription of the Jewiſh Synagogue at China, which is as follows:

THEIR Synagogue ſtands Weſt, for the very ſame Reaſon that thoſe of our Jews ſtand Eaſt. Both the one and the other look alike towards Jeruſalem, which is to the Eaſt of Europe, and the Weſt of China. It is divided into three Parts, which may with Propriety be called Naves, and therein it reſembles our European Churches. The firſt and moſt holy anſwers in ſome meaſure to the Hechal of our Jews, but ſtill more exactly to the Holy of Holies of the Old Teſtament; where they keep the Books of Moſes's Law. The Principal of the Synagogue, who anſwers to the antient High Prieſt, and no other has the Privilege of going into that ſacred Place. Father Gozzani tells us, that he there ſaw twelve Tabernacles made in the Form of Arks, for the twelve Tribes of the Jews, and a thirteenth for Moſes, placed upon Tables, each having ſmall Curtains all round about it, and in it five Books of the Pentateuch, which they call Kim, written upon Parchment, and faſtned upon Rolls. The other Part of this Synagogue at China, where, according to Father Gozzani's Relation, there is a Chair raiſed above the reſt of the Seats, anſwers exactly enough to that Part of ours in Europe, where the Law is read on the Sabbath, and other ſolemn Feſtivals. This Chair is appropriated to the ſame Uſe amongſt them as the Theba: But it is very far otherwiſe as to the Hall, which Father Gozzani obſerv'd at his going out of the Synagogue, and which makes the third Nave. This very little reſembles the Place where the People meet in the European Synagogues, but anſwers more exactly to the Veſtibulum or Portico of the antient Temple. There Father Gozzani view'd a great Number of Incenſe-Pots, which were deſigned for Perfumes, with which, no doubt, but they honour the Memory of their great Men.

THIS Deſcription is extracted from the Seventh Collection of inſtructive and entertaining Letters written by various Miſſionaries.

The DEDICATION or CONSECRATION of the SYNAGOGUE.

IN this Place we ſhall introduce the Deſcription of a particular Ceremony, which muſt not be confounded with the Feſtival called Chanuccah: For of that we ſhall take proper Notice when we come to the Jewiſh Feſtivals.

[b] THE Ceremony here intended is that of the Dedication of the Synagogue of the Portugueſe Jews at Amſterdam, which is the moſt pompous and magnificent that ever was ſeen. This Synagogue was dedicated with all the Grandeur and Solemnity imaginable on [a] And yet it is uſual with them to talk of Buſineſs in the midſt of their Prayers.

[b] See the Plate.

the

B. Picart delineavit.

C. Du Bosc Fecit.

THE DEDICATION OF THE PORTUGUESE JEWS SINAGOGUE AT AMSTERDAM.

A. the Hechal where ỹ books of ỹ Law are kept. B. Theba or Desk where ỹ Hazan & Hacham read the Law. C. ỹ 2 Galerys for ỹ women. The dedication of the Sinagogue and & the Entring of ỹ books of the Law, were celebrated during the space of 8 days, upon ỹ 10th of ỹ month Menahem. 5435. which answers to our month of August 1675. they constantly make an annal commemoration of it.

LA DEDICACE DE LA SYNAGOGUE DES JUIFS PORTUGAIS, A AMSTERDAM.

A. l'Hechal ou on garde les livres de la Loy. B. Theba ou Pupitre ou le Hazan et Hacham lisent la Loy. C. Les 2 Galeries pour les femmes. La dedicace de la Synagogue et l'entree des livres de la Loy, se celebra pendant 8 jours, le 10e du mois de Menahem. 5435. qui se raporte au mois d'Aout, 1675. on en fait la commemoration tous les Ans.

the tenth Day of the Month Menahem, in the Year 5435, which anſwers to our ſecond Day of Auguſt 1675. The moſt conſiderable Men amongſt the Jews in that City marched in Proceſſion, with the Law richly adorned, and diſtinguiſhed the Entry of their ſacred Books into the Synagogue, by extraordinary Acts of Devotion and liberal Benefactions to the Poor. Their Piety was attended with a moſt raviſhing Concert of vocal and inſtrumental Muſic, and ſeveral pathetic Sermons, ſuitable to the Solemnity of ſo joyful a Day, which ought to be ranked among the happieſt their Nation ever ſaw ſince the Deſtruction of Jeruſalem. This Feſtival was celebrated eight Days together, and its Anniverſary is obſerved on the tenth Day of Auguſt every Year.

THIS Synagogue is erected on the Eaſt of the City. 'Tis one hundred and fifty Foot long, and one hundred broad, excluſive of the Court and the outward Walls; and its Height is ſeventy Foot to the Arch-Roof. Two Galleries for the Accommodation of the Female Sex run to the Right and Left the whole Length of the Synagogue, which is illuminated with five Rows of Lamps on the Sabbath-Day. The Hechal, and Theba or Desk, are compoſed of a ſcarce and coſtly Wood, called Xacharanda, which comes from the Indies. [a] Four Perſons of the higheſt Rank and Diſtinction amongſt the Jewiſh Nation laid the four Corner Stones in the Foundation of the Synagogue.

[b] THEY have made a Collection of ſuch Sermons as were preach'd on this Occaſion, the Texts whereof were choſen by their Preachers, according as they thought moſt ſuitable to the Dignity of the Subject, and no Hyperboles were wanting in their Illuſtrations of it. The Rabbi's gave a looſe to their Imaginations, and diſcovered Miracles in this Dedication. One Jew in particular found in a Paſſage of the Prophet [c] Iſaiah, not only the Erection of this Synagogue, but the very Name of William of Naſſaw, Prince of Orange, then Captain General of the ſeven United Provinces. This Diſcovery was an Original in its Kind.

Their ACADEMIES and SCHOOLS.

THE Jews call their Academies Bath Hammidraſch, Houſes of Interpretation, becauſe the Law with its Gloſſes and Rabbinic Commentaries are taught therein. The Inſtitution of Schools as well as Academies amongſt them is very antient; for the Prophets of old preſided over them; but we are not to imagine that the Gift of Prophecy was attained [d] there by any human Artifices. The Law, we preſume, was explained, Virtue recommended, and the Myſteries of Religion were there unfolded. Muſic and Poetry likewiſe, in all Probability, were taught in them, which were formerly two eſſential Parts of Religious Worſhip.

THE Schools are for the moſt Part adjacent to the Synagogue. There all the idle and impertinent Niceties of the Talmud are explained, and hot Debates are held there on Matters of little or no Importance. They may both eat and drink in theſe Schools, though not in the [e] Synagogue. The Deſire or Neceſſity of Application requires, as they imagine, a longer Stay in them: The Jews, notwithſtanding, reckon them more honourable than the Synagogues themſelves.

[a] Jeronimo Nunes d'Acoſta, Antony Alvarez, Manuel de Pinto, & David de Pinto.

[b] Baſnage's Hiſtory of the Jews, Lib. ix. Cap. 36.

[c] It is obſerved, that Women are in Hebrew called Naſſim. It is ſaid in Iſaiah, That ſeven Women ſhall take unto them a Husband, ſaying we will eat our Bread, &c. Seven Women (Naſſim) are in Alluſion to Naſſaw; and the Bread thoſe Women were to eat was the Duke of Villa-Hermoſa. Never was any Thing ſure more artfully apply'd!

" [d] They learnt, ſays the Diſcourſe on Freethinking, p. 225. to play upon Inſtruments of Muſic, and to drink, two " Qualifications which they eſteemed very conducive towards obtaining the prophetic Spirit:" that is, according to Dodwell in the ſame Treatiſe, a holy Enthuſiaſm.

[e] Buxtorf. Synag. Jud. Cap. 10.

ACCORDING to the Rabbi's, they are to frequent the [a] School with Chearfulneſs and Application, after they are well waſhed, and duly fortified with the [b] Zizith, and with Prayer. They muſt enter into it with Eagerneſs and Haſt, but depart from it with the utmoſt Reluctance: For there 'tis that they learn their Duty towards God, and the Time they are Strangers to that ſacred Knowledge is all loſt and ſhamefully miſpent. We muſt obſerve, likewiſe, that a Holy Trembling ought to ſeize all ſuch as enter the School or Synagogue: 'Tis alſo remarkable, that there is an Iron fixed at the Door of the German Synagogues to ſcrape the Dirt off their Shoes; for, according to Moſes, ſay they, the Ground whereon they tread is holy. It is very viſible, by Applications ſo forced and ſo apparently affected and impertinent, that after all unwearied Endeavours to arrive at the Eſſence of Religion, they are farther from it than if they had remained in perfect Ignorance.

Their JEWISH RABBI'S and DOCTORS.

THEIR Rabbi's are at the ſame Time their Tutors and their Preachers. Their Title or Denomination is very antient; for in the ſacred Scriptures both the Words Rabbi and [c] Rabboni are to be found, which are ſynonimous Terms. The Phariſees of old aſſumed this Title to themſelves with Abundance of Pride and Arrogance, pretending to be the ſole Maſters and Doctors of the People; and carried this Pretenſion of theirs to ſuch a Pitch, as to make the Law ſubject to their Traditions. And our bleſſed Saviour very ſeverely reprimanded them for this their inſolent Deportment.

IT muſt be allow'd that Titles are due to none but thoſe who deſerve them, and that, according to their Inſtitution, the wiſe, the learned, and all other great Men may with Juſtice and Modeſty aſſume them. At preſent theſe Titles are rejected and deſpiſed, and the Names of Rabbi, Doctor, Maſter, &c. procure little or no Reſpect: Nay, the Aſſumption of them is almoſt a Token of Ignorance and Folly.

THE Jewiſh Doctors, not contented with the Title of Rabbi, how highly ſoever they ought to have valued it, endeavoured afterwards to procure new ones, and in the Eaſt aſſumed thoſe of Mir, Mor, and Maran, each of them ſignifying Lord. In Spain they took upon themſelves the Name of Sages or Wiſemen; but thoſe Doctors were deemed inferior [d] to the Rabbi's. In ſhort, the Principals of their Academies entitled themſelves the Refuge, the Aſylum, [e] the Bed of the Law. Theſe pompous Denominations are no ways extravagant, in the Opinion of theſe Doctors, who think themſelves infallible in their Deciſions. But the Rabbi's, beſides the Privilege of preaching and inſtructing their Pupils, have that of binding and looſing, that is, of determining whether a Thing be forbidden or allowed. They create new Doctors, and ordain them by Impoſition of Hands, but they limit and reſtrain their Power as they ſee moſt convenient. One is confined to interpret the Law, or ſuch Queſtions only as relate thereunto; another to judge of Controverſies ariſing upon thoſe Queſtions. With theſe pompous Privileges, the Reſpect due to their Function is not always paid them, and they have more than once been expoſed to the Contempt and Ridicule of their own People. They ſit down with Eaſe and Comfort, however, under the Frowns of the World, imagining, that through the Sanction of ſo ſacred an Employ, the Gate of Paradiſe muſt always be open to them, though their Sins and Iniquities were never ſo flagrant. And thus it is, that ſuch as are at the Head of Religion flatter themſelves with Eaſe, that they are at [a] See below.

[b] See Buxtorf. Syn. Jud. Cap. 10.
[c] Or rather the ſame, for Rabbi is the Contract of Rabbenu, our Maſter.
[d] Baſnage's Hiſtory of the Jews, Lib. iii. Cap. 30.
[e] Marbitzi Tora, that is, he that puts the Law to reſt.

all

all Times ſecure of Heaven, and connot conceive, that after having labour'd by their repeated Inſtructions, at the Salvation of ſo many People, they themſelves can poſſibly be excluded from the Preſence of the Almighty: The Example of Moſes, however, who was never admitted into the Land of Canaan, after he had conducted the Iſraelites to the very Borders of it, is a Circumſtance not at all in the Rabbi's Favour.

The ELECTION of their RABBI'S, and the PRIVILEGES of their OFFICE.

WE have already obſerved, that the Rabbi's impoſe their Hands on all thoſe who are received into the Orders of the Jewiſh Church. The Origin of this Ceremony is to be met with in the thirty fourth Chapter of Deuteronomy. Moſes, juſt before he died, laid his Hands on Joſhua his Succeſſor, and gave him his Benediction. The Divines of the Reformed Churches, likewiſe, lay their Hands on the Candidates, whom they receive into the Miniſtry. When the Jewiſh Doctors have the Power of binding and looſing beſtowed upon [a] them, they have likewiſe the five Books of Moſes and a Key put into their Hands; intimating, no doubt, that they ſhall not preſume to open thoſe Myſteries with Pride and Arrogance, but when they do, ſhall baniſh all human Prejudices and Prepoſſeſſions.

AT preſent, according to [b] Buxtorf, the Rabbi's are elected with very little Ceremony. He who is to ordain the new Rabbi, publiſhes aloud to all the Congregation, either on the Sabbath or ſome other ſolemn Feſtival, that ſuch an one deſerves to be admitted amongſt the Rabbi's for his ſound Learning and religious Education, exhorts the People to own and reverence him as ſuch, and denounces Excommunication againſt all thoſe who neglect his Admonitions. He then gives the Candidate a Certificate of his Merit and Ability, and the Ceremony is often concluded with an elegant Entertainment given by the new Doctor to the old Rabbi's, now his Aſſociates, and the reſt of his Friends and Acquaintance. According to the Author above quoted, the young Rabbi has no Occaſion to be afraid of ſinking under the Weight of a ſevere Examination. A ſuperficial reading of the Talmud, a few trivial Niceties in Diſputation, and a conſtant Attendance on the Schools, are ſufficient Qualifications.

THE Chazan is obliged to call the Rabbi elect aloud, and invite him by the Name of Rabbi ſuch an one, Son of ſuch an one, to approach the ſacred Books of the Law. Our young Doctor, however, is not immediately to accept of this Invitation, but muſt firſt modeſtly excuſe himſelf, on account of his Inability, and the Weight of the Burthen impoſed upon him. After theſe Preliminary Compliments, he approaches the Law with a ſlow and ſolemn Pace, having his Head covered with the Taled.

THE Morenu, which Term ſignifies Inſtructor, is the Rabbi's Superior, and as it were their Preſident. This Dignity, formerly unknown to the Jews, was invented in Germany about the fifteenth Century.

THE Duty of the Rabbi's is to recommend Juſtice; to exhort the People to the Practice of Virtue and Integrity; to reſolve Doubts and Difficulties; to excommunicate all ſuch as are diſſolute and looſe Livers, and ſuch as prophane the Sabbath, and obſerve no Days of Penance; to marry, and to divorce; to interpret the Law, &c. Thus the Function of a Rabbi is difficult to diſcharge, though not very advantageous. There are few of them who make any Profit of their Dignity, but him

[a] Baſnage's Hiſtory of the Jews, Lib. vi. Cap. 5.
[b] Synag. Jud. Cap. 46.

who

who is called at Cologn and Francfort the Principal or Grand Rabbi; nor can the other Rabbi's create any new ones without his Permiſſion.

THE Privileges of this Office are to be free from all Taxes and Impoſitions. If a Rabbi has any Goods, he has a Right to ſell them firſt, and before all others, that the Time he ſpends in negotiating his Affairs, may be no Impediment to his Studies: He is the firſt, likewiſe, to be diſpatched in all Proceedings at Law, and is allowed to ſit upon the Bench with the Judges, &c. Some of theſe Privileges, however, are aboliſhed, the Jews having at preſent no Sovereign Authority.

The Chazan, the Sciamas, the Sacrificator, the Cohan, or Prieſt.

LEO OF MODENA has already treated of the Offices of the two former; thoſe of the two latter are now ſuſpended at leaſt, if not ſuppreſs'd, there being at preſent neither Temple, Victims, nor Sacrifices. We have nothing therefore to add to what Leo of Modena has ſaid relating to them. The Name of Cohen is little elſe but a Title of Honour.

The Taled or Veil; the Zizith or Taſſels; the Tefilin or Forehead-Pieces; and ſome other Cuſtoms with reſpect to their Prayers.

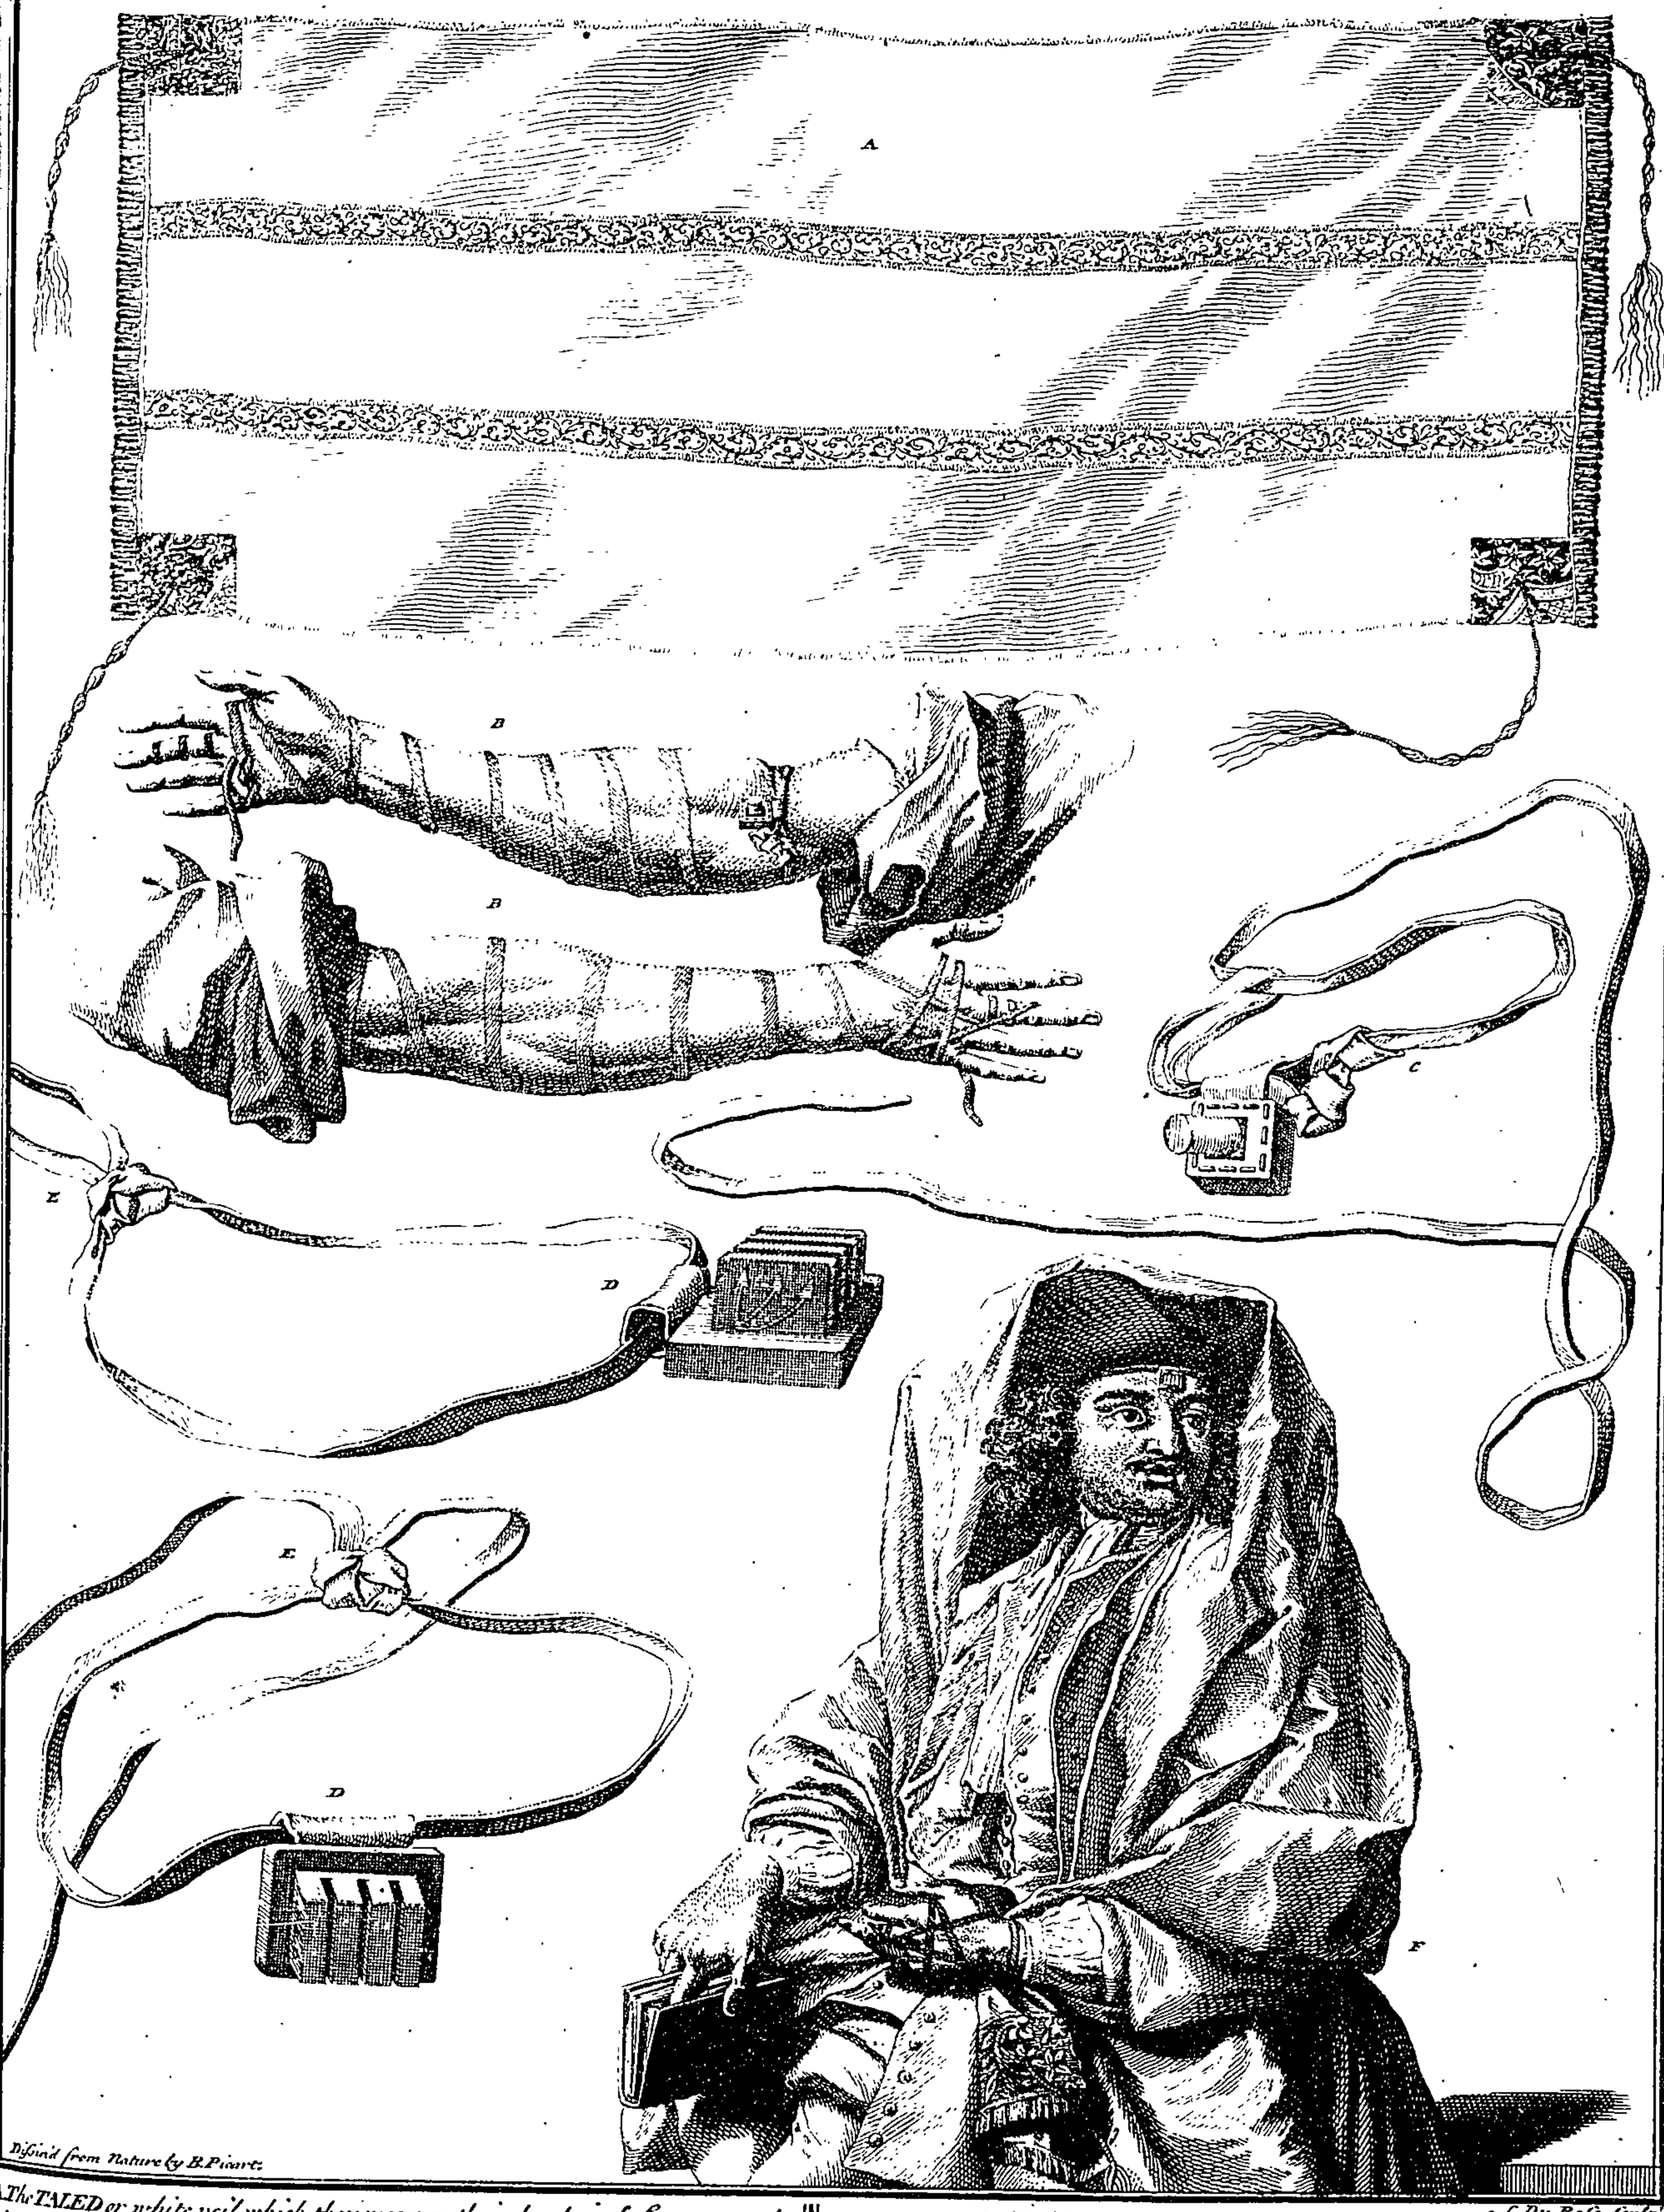
THE [a] Taled is a white ſquare Veil, with Strings and Taſſels. The Jews cover their Heads with it at the Synagogue, or twiſt it round their Necks, during the Time of Divine Service. When Moſes deſcended from Mount Sanai to the Camp of the Iſraelites, after he had the Honour of converſing with the Almighty Face to Face, the Glory of the Divine Majeſty ſhone out upon the Viſage of the Legiſlator, and the People's Eyes were dazzled with its [b] Brightneſs: For which Reaſon Moſes was obliged to cover his Face with a Veil, and this, according to the Jewiſh Doctors, was the Origin of the Taled. Some have been, likewiſe, of Opinion, that the Taled was invented to prevent Diſtractions during the Time of Devotion; and indeed the moſt ſerious cover themſelves all over with them. But, be that as it will, the Jews formerly wore a ſquare Dreſs, to each Corner whereof hung a Taſſel, which ſerved to diſtinguiſh a Jew from another Perſon. In Proceſs of Time that Dreſs grew out of Faſhion, and the Veil was ſubſtituted in its Room: The ſquare Habit, however, was not quite left off, but converted into a ſingle ſquare Piece of Stuff, of which Leo of Modena has given a ſufficient Deſcription. The faithful Jew is oblig'd to wear it conſtantly about him; for 'tis deem'd a Preſervative againſt Temptation, and a Check to the Commiſſion of any ſinful Action. The Strings and Taſſels belonging to this Piece of Stuff are called Zizith. Each String of the Zizith has five Knots in it, anſwering to the five Books of Moſes. When the true Jew puts it on, he muſt take Care that it hangs down before and behind, for he ought to be fortified and ſurrounded with the Precepts of the Law, as with a Rampart. We ſhall omit all the other Allegories [c]. In the Morning, whilſt he is putting it on, he muſt ſay, Bleſſed be God, who hath ſanctified me by his Law, and ordained me to wear the Zizith. This Benediction is to be repeated with the Eye upon it, and concluded before it is perfectly on the Body. Some ſalute it as they pronounce the Benediction.



[a] See the Plate.

[b] Exod. Chap. xxxiv. ver. 30. & ſeq.

[c] Buxtorf. Syn. Jud. Cap. 9. The Portugueſe Jews obſerve not theſe Practices ſo ſcrupulouſly as the German.

THE

Vol. I. P.

Dessiné from Nature by B. Picart.

C. Du Bosc. sculp.

A. The TALED or white veil which they wear on their heads in ye Synagogue during ye Divine Service. At each of ye 4 Corners hangs ye SISITH or tossle with 5 knots.
BB. Both Sides of the Arm represented with the TEFFILA on.
C. TEFFILA SCEL JAD or ye hand TEFFILA represented at large with ye knot in ye form.
DD. TOTAFOT alias TEFFILA SCEL ROSC or the TEFFILA for the Head.
EE. A Knot in form of ד behind the Head.
F. A Jew coverd with the TALED having TEFFELIN'S on his Head and Arm.

A. TALED, ou Voile blanc qu'ils mettent sur leur tête à la Synagogue pendant la priere, aux 4 coins duquel pend le SISITH, ou cordon à 5 noeuds.
BB. Le bras gauche vû en dehors, et en dedans avec la TEFFILA.
C. TEFFILA SCEL JAD, ou la TEFFILA de la main, en grand, et le noeud en forme de ד
DD. TOTAFOT, ou TEFFILA SCEL ROSC, ou la TEFFILA de la tête.
EE. Noeud en forme de ד derriere la tête.
F. Juif couvert du TALED ayant les TEFFILIN à la tête & au bras.

THE Zizith includes the ſix hundred and thirteen Precepts of the Law [a]. This the Jewiſh Sages have taken the Trouble to calculate, and from thence ariſes that abſolute Neceſſity they are under of being conſtantly covered with it, and making it a Part of their Devotion; for the Jew that is exact in this Particular, at the ſame Time obſerves the ſix hundred and thirteen Precepts, the Conſequence whereof is plain and manifeſt. We muſt have Recourſe to [b] Buxtorf, who gives Proofs of the Virtue of the Zizith extracted from the Writings of the Rabbi's.

LEO of Modena has given an accurate Deſcription of the Teffilin, or Fore-head Pieces, which the Grecians called Phylacteries. They are reckoned ſacred among the Jews, who trace the Inſtitution of them as high as Moſes, by Virtue of what he ſays to the People; Ye ſhall bind theſe Words for Signs upon your Hands. They ſhall be unto you as Frontlets between your Eyes, and ye ſhall write them on the Poſts of your Gates.

THEY put on the Teffilin for the Arm firſt, and afterwards that for the Head. On the contrary when they undreſs, they pull off that of the Head firſt, and then that of the Arm. The Ink which they make Uſe of in writing the Paſſages that are ſewed up in them, muſt be black and extremely clear: The Letters muſt be ſeparate and very diſtinct: The Paſſages muſt be written with the Right Hand: And no Razure muſt appear on the Parchment. In ſhort, were there to be the leaſt Blemiſh or Defect in them, the Prayers of him who was to uſe them would be ineffectual, and God would not hear his Supplications. Theſe Teffilin are for the moſt Part made uſe of in a Morning as ſoon as ever they riſe, the Mind being more free and diſengag'd, and in a better Frame to pray without Diſtraction: But if thro' any Accident the Teffilin ſhould unfortunately fall off the Arm or Forehead, the Jew to whom ſuch a Miſchance ſhould happen, and thoſe who are near him, in Caſe they be Jews, muſt faſt all the Day long. When they are eaſing Nature, they muſt put the Teffilin at leaſt four Cubits Diſtance from them, or, if they can find no better Expedient, muſt put them in a double Purſe, and lay them in their Boſom next the Heart. They muſt take Care too, never to wear them at a Funeral.

THEIR Women are not permitted to wear the Teffilin, becauſe they are ſubject to ſome certain Infirmities; beſides, according to their Doctors, 'tis ſufficient for them to ſay Amen to the Prayers of their Husbands. Some Jews who pretend to a greater Degree of Piety than their Neighbours, have ſometimes carried the Devotion of the Teffilin even into the Marriage-Bed; a very prudent and artful Contrivance to ſanctify an Action, where Devotion ſeems almoſt impracticable; and where doubtleſs the moſt confirm'd Piety is in Danger of falling into ſtrange Diſtractions.

LEO of Modena has given us already a Deſcription of the Mezuza [c]. The Synagogue has it not [d], it being a Place ſet apart for public Prayer, and not uſually inhabited. The Parchment of the Mezuza, upon which the Paſſage is written, muſt be rolled from the End of the Line to the Beginning, in order to read the Paſſage as the Parchment is unrolled; and as it is putting into the Pipe, God muſt be bleſſed, who hath inſtituted the Mezuza. They viſit it from Time to Time to ſee it does not ſpoil; and when they remove their Lodgings, 'tis cuſtomary to leave it in the Houſe behind them, for otherwiſe [e] the Devil would infallibly take Poſſeſſion of it. But this is a Compliment they never pay to any Chriſtian who takes their Apartments after them; for in that Caſe they carry the Mezuza along with them.

[a] V. Buxtorf. Syn. Jud. Cap. 9.
[b] Id. Ibid.
[c] Vide firſt Diſſertation, Chap. ii. Paragraph. 2.
[d] Buxtorf. Syn. Jud. Cap. 31.
[e] This is a Superſtition of the German Jews.

The Benedictions and Prayers of the Jews.

THE Jews have an infinite Number of Benedictions which extend to all sensible Objects; for they must neither undertake or touch any Thing whatever without lifting up their Hearts to God, and blessing his holy Name. This is in itself a very laudable Institution, and it is readily allow'd, that the first of all Devotions is that which suffers no Man to do any Thing whatever without blessing at the same Time the supreme Being. This pious Practice however, becomes insensibly a mechanic [a] Devotion. The hundred Benedictions of the Jews, for Example, are frequently pronounced with great Distraction, and in as much Hurry as a Scholar that hastens to the End of his Lesson. And from whence proceeds this Irregularity and Abuse? Why, every Thing which is reduced into System in the Practice of Religion, depends on an Order prescribed by the Church, and which is afterwards voluntarily impos'd upon oneself. However that may be, we insensibly accustom ourselves to the System, and Devotion becomes a Task which must be accomplish'd. The Misfortune is, that Men look upon this Systematic Piety as an Equivalent for their Irregularities, and strongly persuade themselves that it will appease the Wrath of an angry God. Hence proceeds the misguided Zeal of some professed Devotees for Forms, as well as that Exactness with which great Numbers of wicked People appear at Places set apart for divine Worship.

WE just before observed, that the Benedictions of the Jews extend to all sensible Objects; and we shall here add, that sometimes they have a strong Tincture of Pride in them, and that many of these Benedictions descend to the most insignificant Trifles. The Particulars of the latter would be tiresome indeed to our Readers, but we shall give them an Instance of the former. Among the Jews, the Men bless God [b] for being born of the Male Sex. This Benediction is an Affront to the Deity, for the softer Sex is as agreeable to him as theirs; since he has equally comprehended both the one and the other under his Covenant.

THE first Thing they are enjoin'd to do when they wake, is to bless and praise God, and to undertake no Affair of any Importance till they have said their Prayers. This likewise was a Pagan Precept which [c] Virgil has taken Notice of in one of his Eclogues. They are to go to the Synagogue betimes in the Morning with Fervency and Devotion, and in a Body, according to the fifty fifth Psalm, Verse the fifteenth. God enters the Synagogue as soon as the Door is opened, and provided there be ten Persons gathered [d] together in his Name, he is in the midst of them. As they go in, they say a few Verses out of the Psalms, bow towards the Hechal, then say in a low and humble Voice, one Verse extracted from the twenty fourth Chapter of Numbers; and lastly, repeat the Prayers, which the Chazan or Chanter sings, with the Rest of the Congregation [e].

THE reading of the [f] Scheman is perform'd in the same Manner Leo of Modena describes it. After this, [g] the whole Assembly is oblig'd to rise, and in that Posture to say their Prayers to themselves. The Chazan most commonly begins. Then each Man testifies his Respect by going three Steps backwards, and the Chazan begins to chant the eighteen [h] Benedictions, which in their Opinion, are very prevailing. No other Prayer

[a] Vide Leo of Modena's first Dissertation, Chap. 9.
[b] Buxtorf. Syn. Jud. Cap. 10.
[c] A Jove Principium, Musæ, Jovis omnia plena.
[d] Some of the German Jews do more.
[e] There has been for some Years a warm Debate between the Jews of Amsterdam upon this Question: Whether, at their coming into the Synagogue, they are privately to begin the Prayers, which the Congregation are repeating after the Chazan, or whether they are to go on with the Congregation in the Prayer then repeating.
[f] For this see the first Dissertation of Leo of Modena, Chap. xi.
[g] Basnage's History of the Jews, Lib. VI. Cap. xviii.
[h] The Jews attribute them to Esdras.

is ſo efficacious, or can be compar'd with them[a]. They muſt be pronounced ſtanding, with the Feet equally joined together, like thoſe of the Angels in Ezekiel, where 'tis ſaid, that their Feet were ſtraight, Chapter the firſt, Verſe the ſeventh. After theſe Benedictions they bow their Heads very low, then raiſe them a little, and afterwards perform their private Devotions either ſitting or ſtanding, as they think moſt convenient and decent. To dwell any longer on the various Prayers made uſe of by the Jews, would be very tedious, the Reader, however, that is inclin'd to be further inform'd, may conſult Buxtorf's Synagogue on that Occaſion.

As to their Poſture during divine Service, they are to ſtand without leaning as much as poſſibly they can: Their Heads are to be covered, and their Bodies girt with a Belt, to ſeparate the Heart from the lower Parts which are impure. Their Hands and Faces are to be carefully waſh'd before they preſume to enter into the Synagogue. They muſt not touch any Thing whilſt they are at their Prayers which is foul and naſty, and their Minds muſt be prepared at leaſt an Hour for their Prayers, before they repeat them.

THE Perſon who prays muſt turn towards Jeruſalem, join his Feet ſtraight, lay his Hands on his Heart, and fix his Eyes on the Ground. He muſt avoid gaping, ſpitting, blowing his Noſe, [b] or breaking Wind, with the utmoſt Precaution. They may pray aloud when at Home for the Edification and Improvement of their Servants; but at the Synagogue it is ſufficient to ſay their Prayers as ſoftly as they pleaſe, if they do but move their Lips; for it is requiſite that the Congregation ſhould be well ſatisfy'd that they do pray: It will be proper to add here two Circumſtances to prove the Neceſſity of this Maxim. Firſt, a Jew who obſerves another at his Prayers, may ſay Amen, and by that Means contribute to make the Prayer acceptable to the Almighty. Secondly, the Piety of the Faithful muſt ſtrike the People, and glare in the Eyes of the Publick. The modern Jews highly approve of theſe Phariſaical Maxims.

As to ſome minute Circumſtances relating to the Manner of their praying, we ſhall content ourſelves with referring our Readers to the tenth Chapter of Buxtorf's Synagogue.

WITH Reſpect to the Prayers of the Jews againſt Jeſus Chriſt, the Chriſtians, and all ſuch as apoſtatiſe from the Jewiſh Faith, there are ſome Inſtances to be met with in Buxtorf's Synagogue; but could no better Proofs be produc'd, the Accuſation would be eaſily rejected: For they are forced Applications, and owing to the Prejudice and Hatred of ſome Devotees. If it be true, that the Jews curſe Chriſt and Chriſtians, one may imagine it is done in a very myſterious Manner[c].

WHEN they depart from the Synagogue, they muſt never turn their Backs upon the Hechal, which contains the ſacred Books of the Law. They muſt go out ſlowly in Conformity to thoſe Words in Job, the fourteenth Chapter, and the ſixteenth Verſe, Thou haſt counted my Steps. Now God counts the Steps of ſuch as go out of the Synagogue, and rewards them. They muſt refrain likewiſe from caſting their Eyes upon any beautiful Objects that may raiſe their inordinate Affections: When ever they paſs the Gate of the Synagogue, they are oblig'd to put up an ejaculatory Prayer.

[a] Buxtorf. Syn. Jud. Cap. 10.

[b] If ſuch a Thing ſhould unfortunately happen, the Prayer muſt be deferred till the noxious Vapours are diſperſed; and when the Devotee is much preſſed by them, he muſt be ſo prudent as to diſcharge them at leaſt four Paces from the Place where he is praying. When he has done, he muſt offer this Prayer to God, and ſay devoutly, Lord thou haſt made Openings to our Body, which it is impoſſible to keep ſhut, &c. This Form of Prayer may be ſeen in Buxtorf's Synagogue, Chap. x.

[c] All that Roſſe has ſaid in his Treatiſe relating to the Religions of the World, of the Manner wherein the Jews pray, is very confuſed and imperfect.

The

The Alms of the Jews, their Vows, Confeſſions, Penances, Faſts, and Abſtinences.

LEO OF MODENA has given us a very exact Account of the Alms of the Jews; and we agree with him, that they are [a] very liberal and indulgent to their Poor: We ſhall take the Liberty however to add one Obſervation to what he has ſaid of their Alms, and that is, that they muſt not [b] receive any Charity from Chriſtians, nor other Strangers, nor even of Chriſtian Princes in public. They are allowed however to receive them in private, eſpecially if what their own People give be not ſufficient for their Maintenance.

AMONGST all the Things which relate to Religion, Vows are the moſt capable of leading Piety aſtray. A devout and zealous Eccleſiaſtic will permit whole Families to ſtarve under the religious Pretence of enriching a Pariſh; without giving himſelf the leaſt Concern about the Injuſtice of thoſe who devote their Eſtates to the Church. Convents abound and overflow with Riches, which the Devotion of Monks have no Manner of Occaſion for, whilſt the Children of thoſe who have devoted their Patrimony to religious Houſes, are begging for Subſiſtence. They conſecrate to God thoſe only, as they pretend, who are of no Service to the World; and yet a Virgin in her Bloom and in perfect Health, who might be tempted in all Probability to love her Neighbour, is frequently compelled to take the Veil, becauſe ſhe has been devoted to God, whom ſhe does not love, and perhaps never will, till Age comes on, and reminds her of her approaching Diſſolution. The ſame Misfortune attends Abundance of young Folks, who tho' well qualified to fulfil the Command of Increaſe and Multiply, are, thro' a raſh Vow of Continence in their tender Years, either oblig'd to employ their natural Talents irregularly, or not to exert them. Love and Diſdain create a vaſt Number of too raſh and inconſiderate Vows. In ſhort, Vows for the moſt Part are the Occaſion of great Abuſes in Religion. What Leo of Modena has ſaid relating to thoſe of the Jews, is ſufficient; for which Reaſon we ſhall introduce no Additions here of our own.

THE Jewiſh Forms of Confeſſion differ according to the Country in which they reſide. They have their great and their little Confeſſion, and both muſt be repeated ſtanding.

AETER Confeſſion ſome of the Jewiſh Devotees laſh themſelves: This Penance they call [c] Malkut, but 'tis neither general nor enjoin'd. The Ceremony is performed after the following Manner. Two of theſe Zealots perform it on each other alternately, and the Patient lies extended on the Ground, with his Face towards the North, and his Back to the South, but never Eaſt and Weſt, becauſe they are accounted Sacred, and the Reſidence of the Deity.

THE Perſon that does Penance receives thirty nine Strokes with a Bull's Pizzle, confeſſes himſelf, and ſmites his Breaſt during the Operation. He who ſcourges a Penitent, repeats the thirty eighth Verſe of the ſeventy eighth Pſalm, and at every Word he pronounces gives a Stroke [d]. The thirteen Words of the Verſe thrice repeated make thirty nine Strokes. After this the Patient riſes, and returns the ſame Favours to his

[a] Of this we have a very freſh Inſtance in the Manner wherein they aſſiſted their Brethren of Avignon, during the Plague in 1721. The Engliſh and Dutch Jews remitted conſiderable Sums, and aſſiſted them with all the Conveniencies of Life.

[b] This is what Buxtorf ſays, Syn. Jud. Cap. 44. But M. Baſnage on the contrary, ſays in his Hiſtory of the Jews, Chap. xix. that they are to receive thoſe Alms publickly.

[c] Buxtorf. Syn. Jud. Cap. 25.

[d] They are exactly thirteen in the Hebrew Text.

Brother

Brother Devotee. This Cuſtom is grounded on a Paſſage in Deuteronomy, Chapter the twenty fifth, Verſe the ſecond, which mentions forty Stripes; but the Reader may ſee in [a] Buxtorf, how the Rabbi's explain the Reaſon of reducing them to thirty nine.

[b] THE ſame Author will furniſh him with the particular Circumſtances of ſeveral private Faſts, which are kept by the Jews voluntarily, and without any Injunction. On the Eve of the Faſt, the Perſon that has vowed to faſt in private, offers his Blood, and the Fat of his Body as a Sacrifice to the Almighty; and this voluntary Penance is perform'd to bring them down. The Rabbi's, the Doctors of the Law, and all ſuch as are intended to be Inſtructors, are not obliged to obſerve theſe private Faſts, becauſe ſuch repeated Abſtinences exhauſt a Man's Spirits: They muſt keep however, thoſe Faſts which are ordained by the Church. They are enjoin'd not to faſt on a Feſtival, or on the Sabbath, and the Day of the New Moon.

The Ablutions of the Jews, and the Care which they are oblig'd to take in keeping their Bodies free from all Pollutions.

THE Jews practiſe the very ſame Thing out of a religious Principle, which Phyſicians recommend as agreeable and wholſome. As ſoon as they riſe, they diſcharge Nature; and foraſmuch as the ancient Jews thought that on thoſe Occaſions they ſtood moſt in need of the Protection of their Guardian Angel, they very civilly begged him not to be impatient, if Neceſſity obliged them to ſit longer than uſual. [c] After they have thus eas'd themſelves, they muſt not touch their Bodies with their Right Hand, that being appropriated to writing the Law, and handling the Phylacteries. The Left Hand is therefore to diſcharge its proper Office on ſuch an Occaſion. They muſt avoid likewiſe thinking on God, or pronouncing his ſacred Name at ſuch particular Times, and turning to the Eaſt or Weſt, it being God's Reſidence, but muſt always turn to the North or South. All Jews, however, do not think on the Particulars of this Practice with equal Exactneſs.

THEY always waſh immediately after ſuch a Diſcharge, and take the Baſon in their Right Hand, and then give it to the Left, which is the other's Attendant. When the former is clean, it waſhes the latter. They waſh as high as the Wriſt, and hold their Fingers in ſuch a Poſition that the Water they have made uſe of may not ſoil them. There are ſeveral other trivial Niceties to be obſerved; but we ſhall refer the curious Reader to Buxtorf's [d] Synagogue, and Baſnage's Hiſtory [e] of the Jews, where he will find them all inſerted.

THOSE who affect to be Devotees muſt have a larger Share of Patience than the reſt of Mankind, for their exact and punctilious Regularity is never without ſome Scruple or other; and the Jews, (particularly thoſe who are Germans) are plentifully provided with them. For the Water they have waſhed with they ſay muſt not be ſpilt; neither muſt they walk over it; or ſcratch themſelves before their Ablution, &c. They ſay, moreover, that the Omiſſion of any of theſe Circumſtances is often the Occaſion of ſome fatal Misfortunes. The Face muſt be waſhed with equal Precaution, and the Particulars of this Ablution fall nothing ſhort of the former.

[a] Syn. Jud. Cap. 25.
[b] Ibid. Cap. 30.
[c] Ibid. Cap. 8.
[d] Syn. Jud. Cap. 8.
[e] Chap. 19.

Their ECCLESIASTICAL PENALTIES and EXCOMMUNICATIONS.

THE Parnaſſim are the proper Officers for cenſuring ſuch particularly who live irregularly, and not according to their Law; and if their private Reprehenſions have Influence on the Offenders, they are at Liberty to make their Complaints in Public, which they do in a full Synagogue on the Sabbath. If a Man has converſed with a Woman that is unclean he muſt undergo the Scourge, and faſt for forty Days together. If a Husband kiſſes his Wife, nay, if he only touches her in ſuch a Condition, he expoſes himſelf to a forty Days Faſt; he is debarr'd from Wine and all hot Victuals, except on the Sabbath.

THE Civil Puniſhment for a Murderer is three Years Baniſhment; the Eccleſiaſtical Penalty is Flagellation in the Synagogue during the whole Term, and crying out whilſt he is under the Laſh, I am a Murderer. The Criminal muſt drink no Wine, nor eat any Meat during the whole Time of his Penance; he muſt let his Beard grow, wear dirty Linen and tatter'd Clothes; go bare-headed, or at leaſt be covered but once a Month, and have the Hand that committed the inhuman Fact in a Chain hung round about his Neck. There are ſome likewiſe who wear a Kind of Armour made of Iron, over their naked Fleſh, and others who lie at the Gate of the Synagogue, and expoſe themſelves to be trod under Foot by ſuch as go thither to their Devotions. Theft, and Aſſault, Perjury, &c. are puniſhed with a Penance in Proportion to the Nature of the Crime. No Criminal is puniſhed ſo ſeverely as the Adulterer. He is plung'd into cold Water for ſeveral Days ſucceſſively in the Depth of Winter, and in Caſe the Waters are frozen, he is ſet up to the Chin in the Ice, which is broke on Purpoſe, and oblig'd to remain there till an Egg is boiled hard. If the Crime happens to be committed in the Summer, he is then expoſed naked to the Bees or Ants. Theſe Penalties are repeated in Caſe the Enormity of their Crime requires it: If there be a Complication of Crimes, as, if the Adulterer purſues his unlawful Pleaſures, &c. the Penance continues for whole Years.

[a] BUXTORF, to whom we are oblig'd for theſe Particulars, does not inform us, whether theſe Penalties are ſtill in full Force and Virtue; but there is no Queſtion to be made, but that they are inflicted, at leaſt in Part, if the Caſe requires them. The Inſtance of [b] Acoſta is a Demonſtration, that Canonical Penalties are not abſolutely forgotten, tho' they are not now ſo common as they were in former Times.

EXCOMMUNICATION, it muſt be allowed, was eſtabliſhed by the Jewiſh Sanhedrim under the Government of the Maccabees, and is a Conſequence of that Cognizance of Crimes, and that Puniſhment of the Guilty, which that Tribunal aſſum'd to itſelf. There is good Reaſon to believe, that this Eccleſiaſtical Penalty is very different from that which is often mentioned under the old Law, under the Name of Retrenchment. When the Reign of Traditions began to be eſtabliſh'd, the Jewiſh Clergy us'd their utmoſt Endeavours to advance the Authority of the Church, and procure a profound Reſpect to the Deciſions of its Doctors. This laſt Circumſtance, in all Probability, contributed as much to the Birth of Excommunication as the firſt. This Penance appears in the Eyes of a Devotee with the Terror of Hell Flames, which make a more lively and laſting Impreſſion on ſuch Conſciences as are weakened by Fear and Superſtition, than the Sword of Juſtice.

[a] Syn. Jud. Cap. 47.
[b] Bayle's Dictionary, Article Acoſta.

THE

THE Jews have their Greater and Leſſer Excommunication. The Leſſer is, according to them, but of thirty Days Duration; but they may ſometimes be diſcharged from it at the very Inſtant it is iſſued out againſt them; an Inſtance whereof is to be met with in the Hiſtory of [a] the Jews. A Man that neglects his Duty to God, is excommunicated and abſolved almoſt at the ſame Time. Want of due Reſpect to a Doctor of the Synagogue likewiſe draws Excommunication upon the Offenders. In ſhort, all flagrant and crying Sins, Prophanation, Atheiſm, Debauchery, Schiſm, and Apoſtacy have the ſame Puniſhment.

EXCOMMUNICATION, in the Opinion of the Rabbi's, is of ſo ſharp and poignant a Nature, that it penetrates into the Body of the Criminal at two hundred and forty eight different Places. No one muſt preſume to approach him within ſix Foot. All human Aſſiſtance is deny'd him; no one of his own Family, though there be a Corpſe in the Houſe, or a Child to be circumciſed, muſt help him: How ſurpriſing are the Effects of a miſguided bitter [b] Zeal! His Death is not lamented; they ſet a Stone over his Grave, to denote, that he deſerves to be ſtoned. No Relation muſt go into Mourning for him; but on the contrary, they muſt bleſs God for taking him out of the World, and the Day of his Death is deemed a Feſtival, and a Day of Rejoicing, and they muſt accordingly ſpend it in Entertainments and Diverſions, and by dreſſing themſelves in all their beſt Attire, teſtify their unfeigned Joy to ſee the Church delivered from ſo impious a Member. A Conduct ſo outrageous and inhuman, is authorized by a Sentence ſtill more ſavage and cruel, which fully demonſtrates this Truth, That it is better to fall into the Hands of God than of Man. "They [c] excommunicate, anathematiſe, load with Im-"precations, and exterminate N. N. by the Book of the Law, by the Precepts which "are therein contained, by the Execration of Joſhua againſt Jericho, by that of Eliſha "againſt the Children who laugh'd him to ſcorn, by that with which he curſed Ge-"hazi, &c." They curſe him, moreover, by Heaven and Earth; they let looſe all the Powers of Darkneſs upon him, and devote him to the Malice of the Angels; they beg of God to diſable him from doing any Manner of Good, to deſtroy him ſoon, to make all Creatures his Enemies; to ſend a Whirlwind to daſh him to Pieces; to torment him with a Fever, and all other malignant Diſtempers incident to human Nature, to haſten his Death; to let him die in Deſpair, and after all, conſign him to utter Darkneſs. This Sentence is publiſhed with all the Solemnity imaginable, and thrice repeated in threeſcore Days; after which he is loaded with freſh Anathema's, if any more grievous can poſſibly be deviſed; but in caſe the Party excommunicated be an Apoſtate, they have the Privilege to carry him away, and murder him in the moſt barbarous Manner they think fit.

THE Beaſts, likewiſe, may fall under the Penalty of Excommunication. One of the Jewiſh Sages, but one, however, not arrived at that Degree of Patience which denotes a Man to be truly wiſe, excommunicated a Dog, for his Inſolence in gnawing one of his Shoes; and the Excommunication had the ſame Effect as material and real Fire would have had on the Dog's Tail.

THE Reader will find in Mr. Bayle's Dictionary, ſeveral flagrant Inſtances of the Evils that Men are expoſed to, who are ſo unhappy as to be excommunicated by the Church. Acoſta, abovementioned, found by woful Experience, that canonical Penalties are ſometimes more deſtructive, and attended with more fatal Conſequences than thoſe of the ſecular Arm. His Brethren treated him with the utmoſt Indecency and Ill-Manners; the very Children in the Streets were encouraged to inſult him and break his

[a] Baſnage, Lib. vi. Chap. 21.
[b] Buxtorf. Syn. Jud. Cap. 29.
[c] Baſnage's Hiſtory of the Jews, Lib. vi. Chap. 21.

Windows

Windows; they perfectly mobb'd him, and loaded him with the moſt direful Imprecations; they ſpat upon him, and the little Boys were animated to follow their Example; his Relations ſhunn'd him, as one infected with the Plague; and not a Soul would viſit him in his Sickneſs. The Virtue of the Excommunication thundered out againſt Acoſta was admirable: So long as this excommunicated Jew remained obſtinate, and confirmed in his Impiety, one of his Brothers was authoriz'd by it to detain all his Effects. The long Series of his Misfortunes compelled him at laſt to re-enter into the Pale of his Church, or at leaſt pretend to be reconciled to it.

THE Terms on which this Abſolution was procured, were loaded with ſuch a Penance as no Man of Honour could comply with. "He was conſtrained to mount the "Desk before a crowded Audience, and read aloud a Paper wherein he acknowledged "he had deſerved a thouſand Deaths. When he came down he had poſitive Orders to "withdraw to a Corner of the Synagogue to undreſs himſelf to the Waiſt, and pull "off his Shoes and Stockings. After this the Door-Keeper tied his Hands to a Pillar, "and the Chanter gave him the thirty nine Stripes; whereupon the Preacher came up "to him, obliged him to ſit down on Ground, and then gave him Abſolution: Pa-"radiſe was now no longer ſhut againſt him. Acoſta then put on his Cloaths, laid him-"ſelf proſtrate on the Ground at the Door of the Synagogue, and they who went out "trampled him under their Feet." This, according to Mr. Bayle, was the Ceremony of this Jew's Abſolution.

The SOLEMNITY of the SABBATH.

THE Sabbath is of divine Inſtitution, and to prophane it, is undermining one of the Foundations of the Jewiſh Religion. The Jews, however, are not contented with thoſe Advantages which God has promiſed to all thoſe who ſhall exactly obſerve the Duties of this Day, but their Rabbi's have encreaſed them very conſiderably. The Sabbath-Prayer, which is read or pronounced on Friday Evening, is a ſort of Reprieve, or Act of Indulgence to the Souls in Purgatory, which continues all Saturday, and during thoſe four and twenty Hours they are as expeditious as poſſible in drawing Water to refreſh themſelves; and the Sages have therefore charged them never to draw the laſt Drop out of a Ciſtern or Reſervoir, leſt thoſe Souls ſhould want it. The Damned are allowed to change their Poſture on the Sabbath-day, which is begun [a] ſooner than any other, in Order, and with an Intent to diminiſh the Pains of Purgatory. Many other Advantages, which both the Living and the Dead acquire by the ſtrict Obſervance of the Sabbath, we have thought proper to omit for fear of being too tedious and prolix.

THE Sabbath commences on Friday Evening, half an Hour before Sun-ſet, and the moſt neceſſitous Jew muſt have his Lamp lighted at that Time, though he begs the Oil which ſupplies it. It is the Women's peculiar Province to light theſe Lamps; Eve, by tempting Man to Sin, having extinguiſhed the Light of the World; that is, not to talk in Allegory, brought Death into it. She who lights them, extends both her Hands towards the Lamp as ſoon as it begins to burn, and repeats a Bleſſing adapted to this particular Occaſion [b]. The faithful Jew muſt always do ſome Work himſelf which may contribute to the Glory of the Sabbath, though his Retinue was never ſo numerous. On Friday they pair their Nails out of reſpect to the Sabbath, and the Ceremony of the Operation is thus performed. They begin with the Left-Hand, cut the little Finger firſt, then skip to the Middle Finger, after that on to the Index, then again to the Third, and ſo laſt to the

[a] Buxtorf. Syn. Jud. Cap. 15.
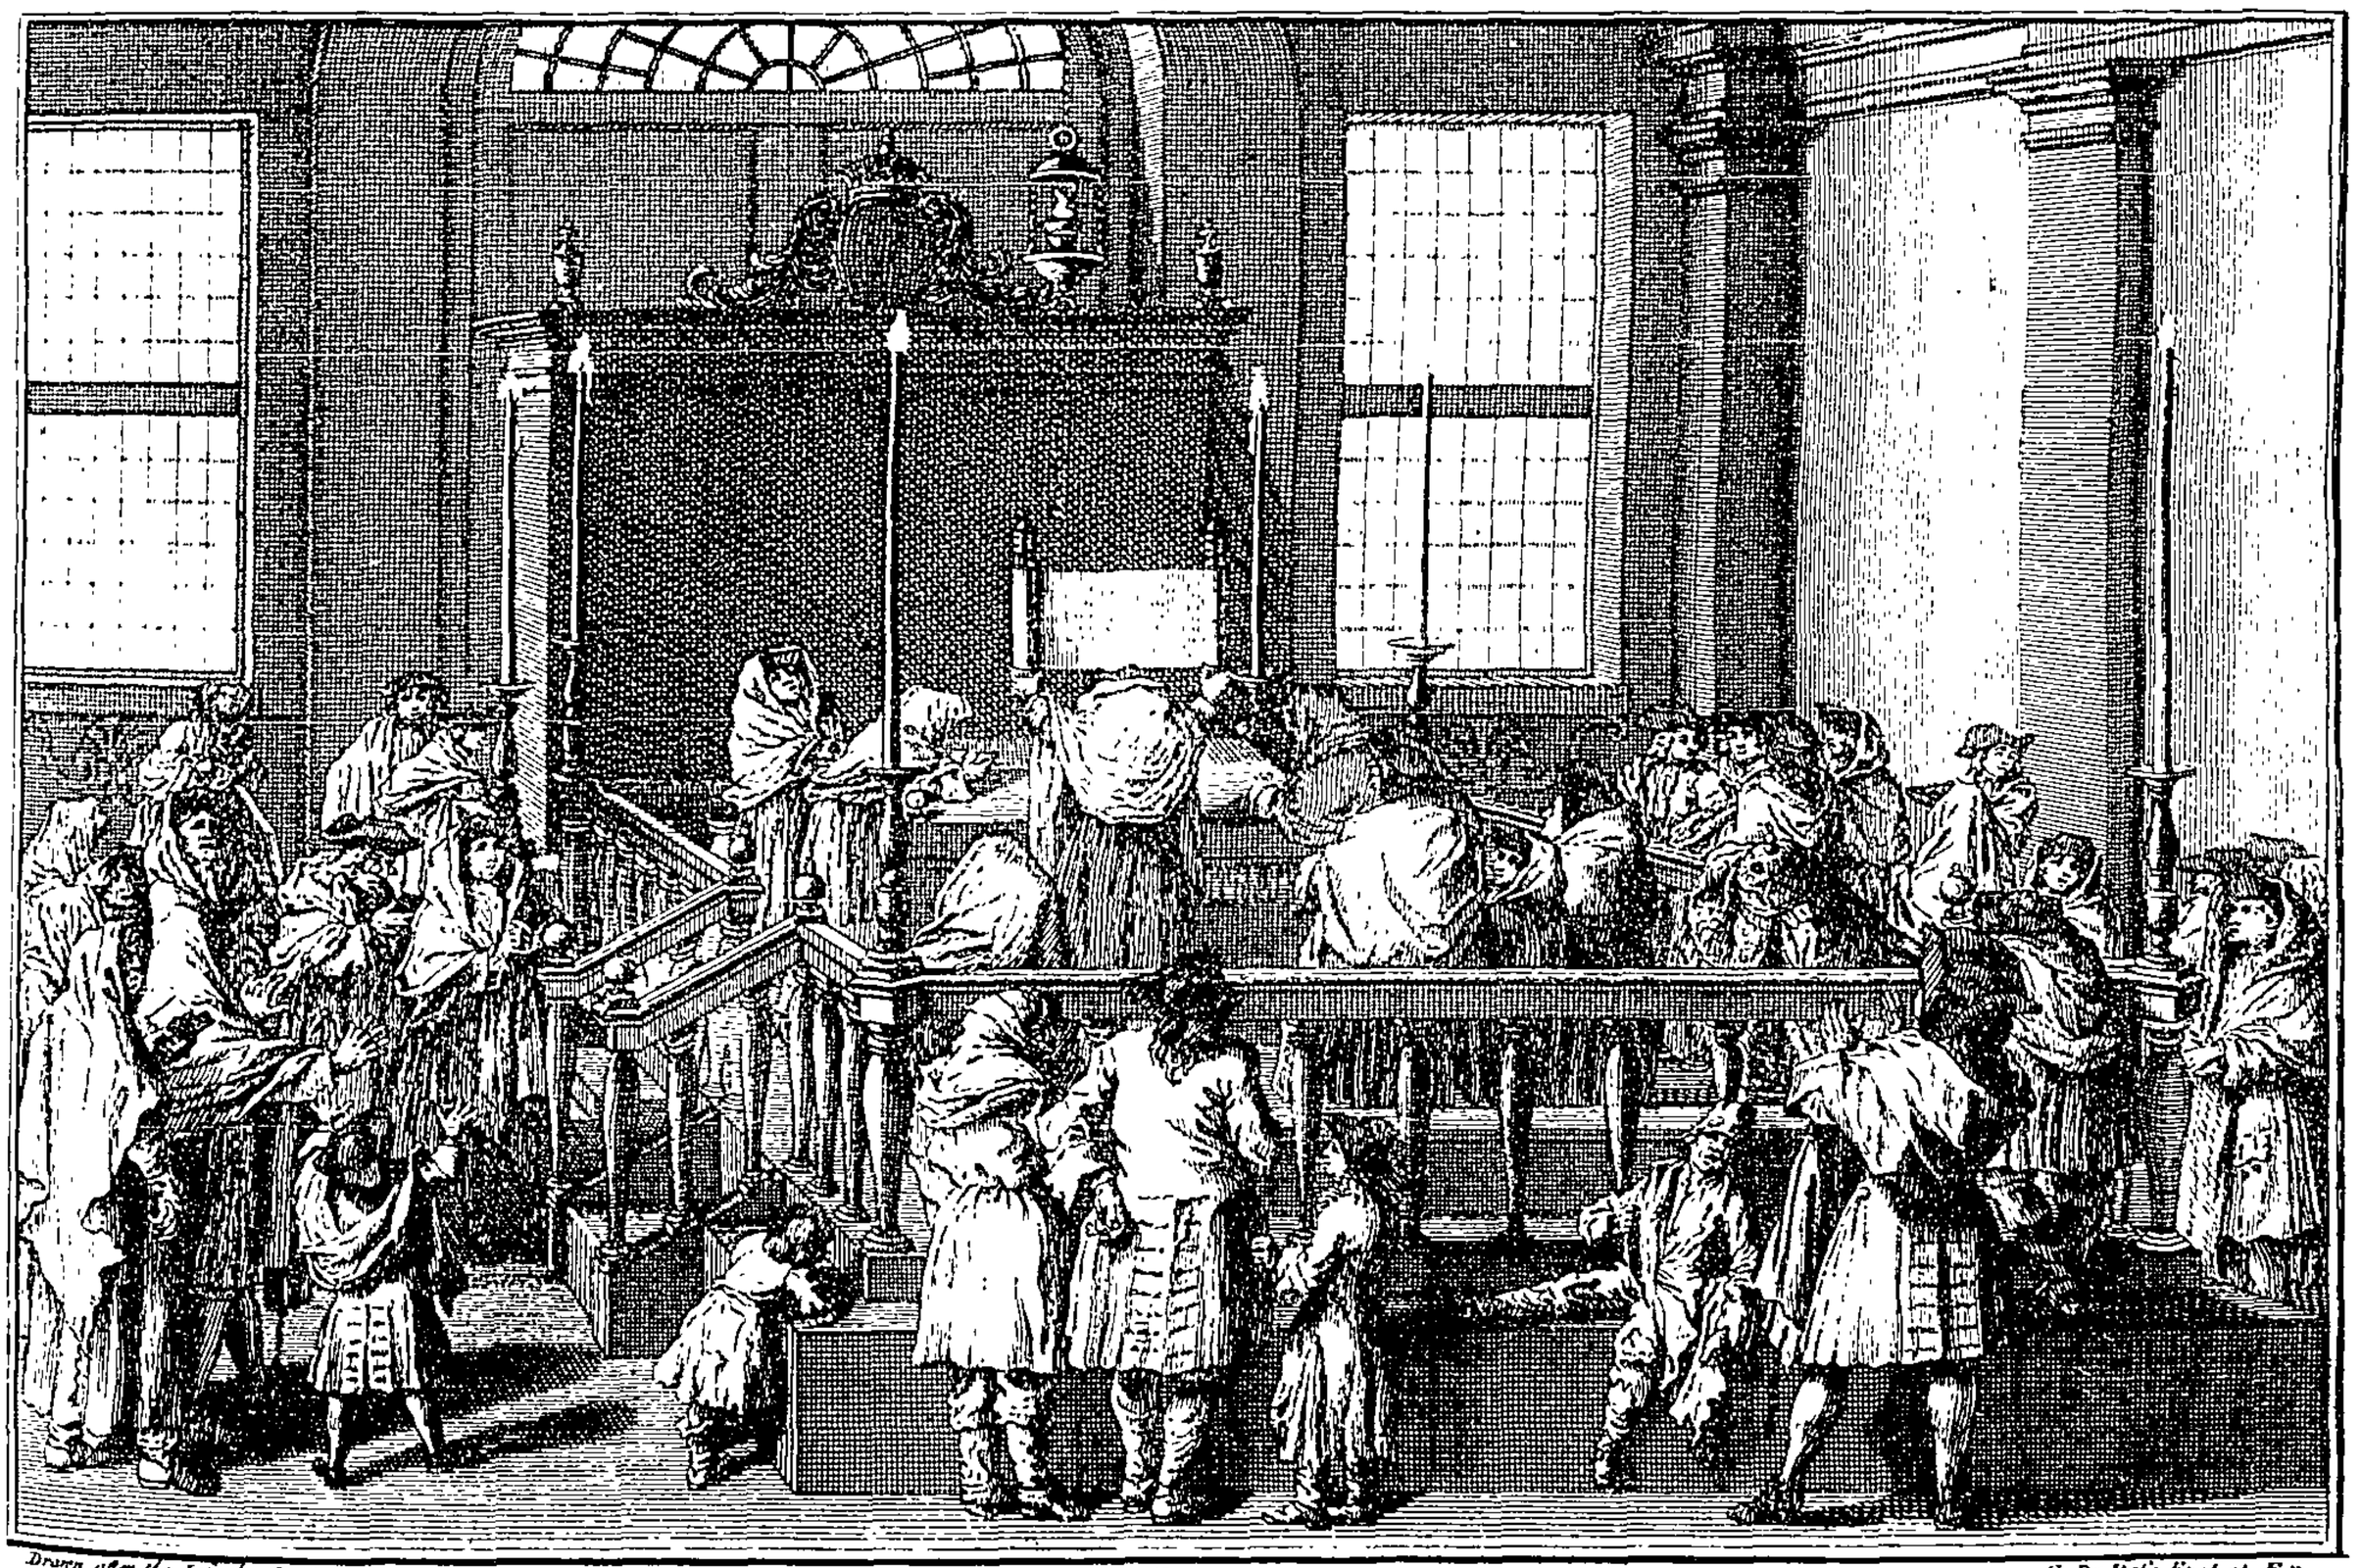
[b] Idem, Cap. 15.



Thumb.

the Sinagogue of the Portuguese Jews at the Hague.

A. the PRIESTS descendants of AARON giving the BENEDICTION to the PEOPLE. ——

A. Les PRÊTRES *descendans d'*ARON donnant la BENEDICTION au PEUPLE. ——

Drawn after the Life by B. Picart — C. De Bosse Excud et Ex.

The manner of holding up the LAW in y Sight of all the PEOPLE, before they begin to Read it.

*Maniere d'*EXPOSER la LOY au PEUPLE avant que de commencer a la LIRE. ——

Thumb. In the Right Hand, they begin with the ſecond or middle Finger, from that they proceed to the Little Finger, &c. Theſe Parings muſt not be thrown on the Ground, or trampled on, but burnt or buried under Ground.[a] At their Friday's Supper, which is the Commencement of their Sabbath, the Father of the Family, or Maſter of the Houſe, conſecrates and bleſſes the Bread and Wine. He begins with the latter, and all the Time looks ſtedfaſtly on the Sabbath-Lamps. This Attention is a kind of Remedy, which ſerves to repair the Diminution of his Sight which he ſuffered in the preceding Week. This is a Diſcovery which ſome of their Sages have very luckily found out. At the Bleſſing of the Bread, the Father of the Family holds it up on high with both Hands, whilſt he pronounces the Name of the Lord. Two Loaves are ſet upon the Table in Commemoration of the double Portion of Manna, which they collected upon Fridays. They are ordered to indulge themſelves on this Day; but above all, to be mindful of the Poor and Diſtreſſed, as well as to be kind to their Wives. Nay, to behave themſelves well [a] on the Night of the Sabbath, is an Affair of the laſt Importance, and ſuch conſiderable Advantages accrue from it, that he that ſhould then refuſe to careſs his Wife, would almoſt paſs for a Madman. We ſhall amuſe our Readers with ſome of them. Their Sages have declared, that the Duty of a Husband affectionately and warmly performed on the Sabbath, is an Act of Reſpect and Regard to God, and as ſuch is rewarded; for their indulging themſelves in all ſenſual Enjoyments teſtifies their ardent Deſire to pleaſe him. Such as are ſo happy as to ſee theſe Sabbath-Labours crown'd with any Fruit, may aſſure themſelves, that what is brought into the World is a choſen Member of the Jewiſh Faith, a Babe of Grace, an accompliſhed Diſciple of the Wiſemen, and who in Time will infallibly become one; but [b] the Mind and Heart muſt be lifted up to God, and remain ſo during all the Time of their conjugal Endearments.

THE Prayers and Bleſſings of the Sabbath are more numerous than thoſe of any other Day. It muſt be allow'd, that they would in general be very beneficial and inſtructive, did no Phariſaical Pride attend them. The Jews thank God, that by his Separation of them from the reſt of Mankind, he has reſerved and choſen their Nation from all others, as his only Favourites. This Diſtinction is never omitted in their Prayers; and however humble they would be thought to appear in the Eyes of God, they look upon themſelves as much ſuperior to the reſt of their [c] Fellow-Creatures. Their Phylacteries may be laid aſide on the Sabbath, if it ſuits with their Inclination.

[d] THE grand Ceremony of the Sabbath conſiſts in ſhewing the Law to the People. The Chazan performs this Office, and at the ſame Time ſays to the Congregation, Behold the Law which Moſes gave to the Children of Iſrael, the Law of the Eternal is perfect, &c. After he has thus ſhewed it, he lays it upon the Desk, and calls out [e] ſeven of the Congregation to read the Leſſon for the Day. The Cohen begins, a Levite follows, and the Lay-Members come [f] after. An eighth Perſon reads ſome Paſſages out of the Prophets, which Leſſon they call Haphtara; and all Perſons whatever, except they be Women, are admitted to read it. After all this, the Chazan lifts up the Book of the Law, and bleſſes the People; after which it is lock'd up, and the Prayers are repeated.

ON the Sabbath, and all other ſolemn Feſtivals, there is a Sermon preach'd in the vulgar Tongue, but they quote in the Hebrew all Paſſages out of the Bible, or Doctors of the Law. Theſe Sermons often abound with impertinent Citations. Several Ideas, very obſcure and very falſe, abundance of Noiſe and Agitation to expreſs a Heap of unintel-

[a] Buxtorf. Syn. Jud. Cap. 15.
[b] Idem ibid.
[c] Idem, Cap. xvi.
[d] Baſnage's Hiſtory of the Jews, Lib. vi. Chap 1.
[e] On Feſtivals, more or fewer Perſons are called; and the Number depends upon the Solemnity of the Day. The firſt Day of the Moon, four are called, on the Day of Expiation, ſix.
[f] Leo of Modena above.

ligible Riffraff, is ſometimes all the Merit which the Preacher and his Sermon can boaſt of: And this is to be aſcribed to their wrong Method of Study, more than any Thing elſe.

THEY have a kind of Commemoration of the Dead, and ſometimes, likewiſe, a Prayer for them upon the Sabbath [a], after which they are very charitable and beneficent. Some ingenious Jews and Men of Credit have aſſured us, that this Cuſtom is merely political, and has been introduced for no other Purpoſe but to turn to Advantage the Vanity of ſome wealthy and conſiderable Men, who affect to be laviſh on theſe public Occaſions; and this is a Snare which the Superſtitious are afterwards drawn into.

AFTER Evening Prayer the Bleſſing is again repeated, and the Jews unanimouſly return their Thanks to Almighty God. All the religious Ceremonies which are afterwards performed, are called Habdalla, and intended only to ſeparate the Sabbath from the following Week. Though Leo of Modena has [b] given us a Deſcription of this Habdalla, we ſhall once more follow Buxtorf, who gives it according to the Manner of the German Jews. This Ceremony is performed by the Maſter of the Houſe, who ſtands in the Preſence of his Family and Domeſtics. A Lamp or Flambeau is lighted, and a Box of Perfumes is near at Hand, and the beſt that can be purchaſed are never too good for the Habdalla. He takes a Glaſs of Wine or other Liquor in his Right Hand, and ſays, with a loud Voice, God is my Saviour, I will not be afraid, &c. Salvation cometh from God; I will take the Cup of Salvation, &c. After that he bleſſes the Liquor, and pours a Drop or two upon the Ground at the Beginning of the Benediction; which when over, he takes the Glaſs in his Left Hand, and the Perfumes in his Right; then bleſſes them, and ſmells to them, and makes all the Company do the ſame; after this he takes the Glaſs into his Right Hand again, goes up to the Flambeau or Lamp, and examines the Nails of his Left Hand very carefully by it; in the next Place he clenches that Hand, and opens it again directly a ſecond Time, examines the Nails of that Hand very near the Light, and repeats a third Benediction, in which he bleſſes God the Creator of Light. The ſame Ceremony is obſerved with reſpect to his Right Hand, and he concludes with taking the Glaſs into the ſame Hand, and bleſſing God, who hath ſeparated what is Holy from what is Prophane, Light from Darkneſs, the Jews from other Nations, and the Sabbath, from all other Days. As he pronounces the Benediction, he pours out a little Wine, ſwallows a few Drops of it, and then preſents the Glaſs to the Company.

THE Reaſon of this Ceremony is grounded by the Jews on God's dividing the Light from the Darkneſs, and what he hath ordained in the tenth Verſe of the tenth Chapter of Leviticus, to ſeparate that which is Holy, from that which is Prophane. In ſhort, it repreſents the Diſtinction which God has made between them and other Nations, who are prophane with reſpect to them. The Perfumes at the Cloſe of the Sabbath, and whilſt the Habdalla is performing, ſerve to correct the noiſom Stink of Hell, whoſe Gates are then open for the Reception of the [c] Damned. This is the Notion of the German Jews, but ſome others, who are very learned, ſay, with more Reaſon, that Light and Perfumes are Hieroglyphicks of the Law which God gave to the Jews, and of that [d] Holineſs, which we ought never to loſe Sight of in the Courſe of our Labours. As to the Nails, they are looked upon as an Emblem of Fruitfulneſs or Strength, conſidering they grow in ſo ſhort a Time. There are divers other Reaſons given for this Examination of their Nails, which are more trifling and impertinent than the two former. The pouring out of the Wine is an Image of the Plenty which we expect from our

[a] Buxtorf. Syn. Jud. Cap. 16.
[b] Leo of Modena above.
[c] Buxtorf. Syn. Jud. Cap. 16.
[d] An Odor is often taken in the Scripture for Holineſs. It is commonly ſaid of a Man who has led a good Life, that he died in the Odor of Sanctity.

La-

Labours. Some Jews waſh their Eyes with it, and look upon it as an excellent Strengthner of the Sight. Others make uſe of it as the Catholicks do Holy Water, and ſprinkle their Houſes, Beds, Cradles, Infants, and every Thing elſe that is ſubject or liable to the Inſuls of the Devil.

The NEW MOON.

WOMEN are exempted from all Labour on this Feſtival; but Men are allowed to follow their Vocation as [a] uſual. The Jews pretend the New Moon is in a peculiar manner the Women's Feſtival, in Commemoration of their Liberality in parting with their moſt valuable Jewels to contribute to the Magnificence of divine Service. This Action, ſo glorious to a Sex, whoſe Pride principally conſiſts in Dreſs and Appearance, and to whom nothing is more dear, was performed on the New Moon of the Month of March.

SOME Jewiſh Devotees faſt on the Vigil of this Feſtival, and beg of God, that the New Moon may prove propitious to their Wiſhes.

SOME few Days after the Jews, being aſſembled by Night on a Tarraſs, or in an open Court, conſecrate, as it were, this Planet by praiſing God, who hath been pleaſed to renew the Moon, and who will in the ſame Manner, renew the Jews his Elect, &c. The Prayer concludes with a Bleſſing addreſſed to God, through the Moon, the Work of his [b] Hands. Three Leaps, which are to be regarded as the Tranſports of a holy Joy, attend this Benediction; immediately after which, they ſay to the Moon, may it be as impoſſible for my Enemies to hurt me, as it is for me to touch thee. Theſe Words are ſucceeded by ſeveral Imprecations againſt their Enemies. This Ceremony is not equally in uſe with all of them. As to Eclipſes, ſome of the Superſtitious look upon them as ill Omens, but the Jews in general, at leaſt ſuch as live amongſt Chriſtians, have more Senſe than to be ſtartled at ſuch Phænomena of Nature.

The PENANCE of the Month ELUL.

THIS Month anſwers to our Auguſt, which the Zealots ſpend in Penance and Mortification; they examine their whole paſt Conduct, and from that Time take a firm Reſolution to lead better Lives for the [c] future. The Italian Jews riſe before 'tis Day during this Month, to pray, and confeſs their manifold Sins and Iniquities to God, and to perform other Acts of Humiliation; but the German Jews practiſe this but four Days before the new Year. As ſoon as Elul is come in, a Horn is ſounded in the Synagogue Night and Morning, for which two Reaſons are aſſigned. [d] Moſes went a ſecond Time to the Top of Mount Sanai, very early in the Morning on the firſt Day of Elul, to receive the new Tables of the Law from God's Hands, and did not come down till the tenth of Tiſri, the Day on which they celebrate the Feaſt of Expiation; and he ordered them, they ſay, to ſound a Horn in the Camp of the Iſraelites, whilſt he went up into the Mountain, that they might no longer ſay, we know not what is become of this Moſes, &c. 2. The Sound of the Horn imprints on the Sinner's Mind a Dread of God's Judgments, and induces him to [e] Repentance. They imagined, likewiſe, that

[a] Buxtorf. Syn. Jud. Cap. 22.
[b] Ibid. Cap. 23.
[c] Buxtorf. Syn. Jud. Cap. 23.
[d] Vide Exodus, Chap. xix. and xxxiv.
[e] Buxtorf. Syn. Jud. Cap. 23.

the

the Sound of the Horn deaffens the Devil, and makes him forget that the New Year begins ſo ſoon; which renders him incapable of riſing up in Judgment againſt them. The ſounding the Horn, however, is diſcontinued on the Eve of the New Year, the Feaſt of the Moon of Tiſri, which is the firſt Month of the Year, is not celebrated, or at leaſt not till after the Day of Expiation.

THE Penances of the Month Elul conſiſt in plunging themſelves into cold Water, confeſſing themſelves, beating their Breaſts hard with their Fiſts whilſt in the Water, and ſcourging [a] themſelves. Thoſe who have a ſincere Regard for the Circumciſion of the Heart, and aim at an entire Regeneration, add Alms to the Auſterities of the Penance. On New-Year's Eve they ſay all their Prayers [b] faſting. Theſe Penitents are fully perſuaded that God enters into a Compoſition with them, and remits at leaſt a conſiderable Part of their Sins. They are not, like the Calviniſts, of Opinion that notwithſtanding all their Repentance they are unprofitable Servants, but on the contrary, imagine, that their Acts of Humiliation are very meritorious.

The FEAST of the NEW YEAR.

ON this Day the [c] Horn is ſounded, to give the Jews Notice, that they are to hearken with Attention and Humility to the Judgments which God has denounced againſt Sinners, and to thank him for his Favours and Support during the Year which is expired. This Feſtival continues two Days, and the Synagogue is obliged to pray with a loud Voice, and in an humbler Poſture than at other Times. The Jews in Germany ſend their Children to the Grand Rabbi to receive his Bleſſing, and when they ſit down to Table the Maſter of the Family takes a Piece of Bread, and dips it in Honey, ſaying, May this Year be ſweet and fruitful, and all his Friends and Acquaintance do the ſame. A [d] Sheep's Head is a favourable Diſh, and ſeldom omitted at this Entertainment, and if there is any Credit to be given to their Rabbi's, who are ſhrewd Judges on ſuch Occaſions, they will never fail to eat Fennel, Garlick, and ſome other Things of the like Nature on this Day.

WE have already mentioned the Sounding of the Horn. He who performs that Office ſtands in the Place where the Law is read. The whole Congregation ſtand as well as he. The Inſtrument is made of a Ram's Horn, being a Memorial of Iſaac's Ram. It is crooked, repreſenting, as they ſay, the Poſture of a Man in a State of Humiliation. The Time appointed for blowing this Horn is from the Riſing of the Sun to its Setting.

THE antient Jews formerly laid all their Sins upon a He-goat, which afterwards they drove into the Deſart; but the [e] modern Jews, inſtead of a Goat, now throw them upon the Fiſh. After Dinner they repair to the Brink of a Pond, and there ſhake their Clothes over it with all their Force. This Practice is taken from a Paſſage of the Prophet [f] Micah.

[a] The Malkut.

[b] This Devotion does not hinder the German Jews from eating; ſo Buxtorf ſays, Chap 23. of his Synagogue.

[c] See the Figure of the Horn in the Cut.

[d] This myſtical Heads repreſents that of the Ram, ſacrificed inſtead of Iſaac. Geneſis Chap. xxvii. Buxtorf. Syn. Jud. Chap. 24.

[e] The Germans. Vide Buxtorf. Syn. Jud. Cap. 24.

[f] Chap. vii. ver. 19. He will have Compaſſion on us; he will ſubdue our Iniquities, and caſt all our Sins into the Depths of the Sea.

The

The VIGIL of the CHIPUR or Day of EXPIATION.

THE ten firſt Days of the Year are ſet apart for Acts of Humiliation and Sorrow for their Sins, and returning to God by a ſincere Converſion. The ſupreme Being, according to the Jews, examines the Actions of Mankind during the firſt nine Days, and pronounceth Sentence on the Tenth. They faſt, pray often, mortify themſelves, and ſhew the external Marks of an extraordinary Piety, in Order, that on the Day of the Chipur, they may be enrolled in the Book of Life, and blotted out of the Book of Death, wherein their Names would be found without Repentance.

THE Jews have long practiſed the Capara. This Ceremony was performed on the Vigil of the Feaſt of Expiation. [a] The Men made Choice of a Cock, the Women of a Hen, and big-bellied Women of both. The Father of the Family, or Maſter of the Houſe holding the Cock in his Hand, pronounced ſeveral Paſſages out of the Pſalms, and the Book of Job; after which they ſtruck their Heads thrice with the Cock, and at each Blow ſays, This Cock ſhall ſtand in my Stead; he ſhall attone for my Sins; he ſhall die, but I will live. This Ceremony thus repeated three Times, becauſe it repreſented the Expiation of his own Sins, thoſe of his Family, and thoſe of his Domeſticks, was copied from the [b] Practice of the ancient High Prieſt. After the three Blows given, he twiſted the Cock's Neck round and ſtrangled him, to intimate to the Sinner, that he had deſerved to die; he cut his Throat, to intimate that he ought to have had his Blood ſpilt; he threw with all his Might againſt the Pavement, to intimate, that he had deſerved ſtoning; and at laſt roaſted him, to the End that the Sinner might do himſelf Juſtice, and comprehend, that the Puniſhment of being roaſted in Fire everlaſting, was due to his Demerits. After this the Entrails of this Animal were thrown upon the Top of the Houſe. Two Reaſons might be aſſigned for the Juſtification of this remarkable Cuſtom: 1. They are of Opinion, that Sin proceeds from the Heart and other Entrails. Things ſo unclean therefore and deteſtable, were to be expoſed to the Birds of the Air. The Egyptians, likewiſe, formerly threw the Entrails of the Dead into the Nile for the ſame Reaſon. 2. They endeavoured, perhaps, to imitate their Anceſtors under the antient Law, who uſed to ſend a He-Goat into the Deſart loaded with the Iniquities of the People. This Cock, it is obſervable, was to be white, as being in their Opinion moſt proper to be charged with their Sins; for they imagined a Cock of any other Colour, had his ſufficient Load. After the Death of the Cock, they repaired to ſome Sepulchres to ſay their Prayers, and afterwards gave away, in Money to the Poor, as much as the Cock thus ſacrificed was really worth. Formerly they left the Cock behind them for the Uſe of the Poor; but they reflecting on the Quality of the Fleſh thus covered with Iniquities, refuſed [c] it.

THEY likewiſe prepare themſelves by Ablutions, in order to ſolemnize themſelves the Day of Expiation; they order Wax-Tapers or Candles for that Day, and each particular Perſon carries his own Light to the [d] Synagogue. In Germany, indeed, each Man has one, but not the Women; in other Places the Women carry theirs as well as the Men. Some Devotees carry two, one to light the Body, and the other the Soul. For the moſt Part they aim at a perfect Reconciliation with all their Enemies on this Day; nay, they ſeek them in order to ſue for Peace, and ask Pardon of all ſuch as they have any ways offended. If this amicable Intention is refuſed, they proteſt againſt ſuch Refuſal before three Witneſſes, and thrice return to the Charge; after which the Penitent's Conſcience

[a] Buxtorf. Syn. Jud. Cap. 25.
[b] Leviticus, Chap. xvi. ver. 17.
[c] This Ceremony is very rarely practiſed.
[d] Buxtorf. Syn. Jud. Cap. 25.

is entirely diſengaged from all Animoſities and inveterate Hatred. This Conduct of theirs is doubtleſs, a very proper Means to procure the Good-will and Friendſhip of thoſe whom they have injur'd. Tho' the Offence may be attended with never ſuch aggravating Circumſtances, they have not always the Courage to decline a Reconciliation ſo importunately requeſted; but may it be always ſincere; may they not think they have a good Right to diſcredit it, under Pretence of re-eſtabliſhing it on the tenth Day of another Year? Two things, however, contribute to make this Method very advantageous; the Effect it has on the Conſciences of Men of Honour and Integrity, and the Reparation to which it obliges the Pride of [a] others.

The FEAST of EXPIATION, or the CHIPUR:

THIS is the Feſtival mentioned in the ſixteenth and twenty third Chapters of Leviticus, and the ſeventeenth Verſe. When the Feſtival commences, they aſſemble in the Synagogue, where each Man lights his Candle, and chants out the Prayers and Anthems in a loud, but melancholy Tone. To give the Jews their Due, they obſerve with extraordinary Exactneſs each individual Thing that may be called the external Part of Repentance, and as Imitation is very prevalent on ſuch Occaſions, the Spectator can ſcarcely forbear feeling a ſharp Remorſe for his own Sins; when he obſerves ſo many external [b] Signs of godly Sorrow at once conſpicuous in a Jew, who is going to accompliſh his Repentance, and condemn himſelf in the moſt ſolemn Manner before God, by a long Account of his manifold Tranſgreſſions. This Confeſſion is alphabetically digeſted, each Sin has its proper Letter, and is by that Means recollected by the Penitent with greater Eaſe.

THE Women likewiſe light up Candles at home, and according as the Light burns, prognoſticate their good or ill Fortune.

THE Jews explain the Diſtreſs of the Soul, mentioned in the twenty-third Chapter of Leviticus, by a total Privation of every Thing that can refreſh the Body, or agreeably amuſe the Mind; but they except Children under eleven Years of Age, Women who are with Child, ſuch as are newly delivered, or that give ſuck; all ſick Perſons, and all old Men.

ON the firſt Evening of the Feſtival, thoſe who have led a ſcandalous and diſſolute Life are not only admitted, but invited into the Congregation; for ſuch are among the Faithful, as [c] Galbanum among Perfumes. Two Rabbi's, who ſtand one on the Right and the other on the Left of the Chanter, perform this ſolemn Invitation, and declare to the Congregation, That they are allowed to pray with the Wicked. After which the Chanter opens the Hechal, and ſings a Prayer of a moderate Length, which the Congregation repeat after him, but not ſo loud as to be heard. This cancels all raſh Vows, Oaths, and Reſolutions of the preceding Year, in caſe they were made voluntarily, without any Compulſion.

SOME Penitents ſpend the whole Night, and ſometimes all the next Day, without changing their Places, and ſtanding all the Time, conſtantly engaged in Prayer and Meditation;

[a] Roſſe, Author of the Religions of the World, in his Deſcription of the Ceremonies performed on the Eve of the Chipur, is, as uſual, very confuſed and careleſs.

[b] Theſe Signs are dirty tatter'd Cloths, Mourning, or Shrouds; a melancholy and dejected Countenance; a long Beard; down-caſt Eyes, made languid by Penance, and diſpoſed to Weeping; an holy Eagerneſs determining the Penitent to preſs thro' the Croud of Devotees, and be foremoſt in the Synagogue; and ſo perfect a Diſtraction, as to deprive him of the Uſe of his Senſes, whilſt he is running over the Alphabet of his Sins. In ſhort, an exact Diet that exhauſts the animal Spirits, leaving him but juſt enough to ſupport the Body, during the Meditation of the Soul.

[c] Vide Buxtorf. Syn. Jud. Cap. 26.

THE SEARCH for the LEAVEN &c.

A The Mistress of the family puts Leavened Bread in various places, to the end that her Husband in his search may find it.

L' EXAMEN du LEVAIN &c.

A. La Maitresse de la maison qui met du PAIN LEVÉ en divers endroits, afin que son Mari qui en fait la recherche en trouve.

Drawn after the Life by B. Picart.

C. Du Bose Fecit et Ex.

THE PASSOVER of the PORTUGUESE JEWS.

1. A Dish containing a Shoulder bone of Lamb and a hard Egg. 2. A Dish of bitter Herbs. 3. A Dish consisting of Fine Apples, Almonds, Hazlenuts &c. bashed & beaten all together, representing the manner of their making Bricks in Egypt. 4. Sauce for the bitter Herbs. 5. Half a Leavened Cake, which the Master of each family breaks in pieces & Distributes among the Guests AB. On this occasion all the Jewish Servants are excluded. 6. A Napkin which covered the Cake. 7. A Basket containing y Matzot or Passhal bread.

LE REPAS de PAQUES chez les JUIFS PORTUGAIS

1. Le Plat ou est un Os d'Epaule d'Agneau avec un Oeuf dur. 2. Plat ou sont les Herbes ameres. 3. Plat de Pommes, Pommes d'grandes Canelle &c. hachées et cuites ensemble, representant la matiere dont ils faisoient les Briques en Egypte. 4. Plat avec la Sauce pour tremper les Herbes ameres. 5. Moitié du Gateau des Levées, dont le Pere de Famille rompt des morceaux, qu'il distribue à tous ceux qui soupent à table. AB. tous les Domestiques Juifs sont à la même table, avec lui. 6. Serviette, sous laquelle le Gateau a été caché. 7. Panier ou sont les Matzot, ou Pain de Paque.

dition; but those that spend the Night at their own Houses, must be at the Synagogue again by Break of Day, and pursue their Repentance. At the Close of the Day, the Rabbi extends his Hands towards the People, and gives them the Benediction [a] of Moses, which the People receive with great Humility and Devotion, covering their Faces with their Hands, imagining that God is behind the Rabbi; and that Man for that Reason ought not to have the Assurance that cast his Eyes upon him. Thus the Hand of God cover'd the Face of Moses whilst that holy [b] Legislator humbled himself before his divine Majesty for the Sins of the Israelites; and this, in all Probability, is the real Rise of this Custom.

As soon as the Benediction is over, the Chazan goes up into the Desk, and sounds the Horn, and after the Solemnity of Expiation is finished, the Feast of the New Moon begins. Some Jews prepare their Tents for the Feast of Tabernacles immediately after the Expiation.

A JEW, that has perfectly compleated the Task of Repentance, which the Synagogue ordains on Account of the Chipur, may with Impunity treat common Zealots with Scorn and Contempt; since God has assured him, that [c] from thenceforth he may eat his Bread with Joy, and that his good Works are accepted. This is perfect Pharisaism, but we must except some, whose Devotion is more nice, and who are for such an effectual Repentance, that the divine Mercy may never be exposed to any Return to it in four and twenty Hours.

The FEAST of the PASSOVER.

THE Jews observe this Festival with all the Punctuality imaginable. They prepare the Grain which is necessary for the unleavened Bread at that Time at least thirty Days before, and the Care they take in the Choice and Preservation of it is very extraordinary. [d] It is never carried, for instance, to be ground on a Horse's Back without a Saddle, for fear it should be heated; they must unsew, wash and sew again the Sack wherein this Grain has lain from one Passover to another. The Examinations of the Leaven are almost infinite, and the Scruples which they create to Jews of the least Delicacy in Religion, are not a [e] few. The Sun itself is not sufficient to give Light into those Creeks and Corners of the House, where any Crumbs of leavened Bread may unfortunately have slipt in; they take a [f] Candle, therefore, and if the Master of the Family is in the least conscious that his Sight is weak, and may deceive him, he takes his Spectacles out without any more ado, the better to pry into and examine the Cracks and Crevices of the Walls. This Search, tho' thus strict, does not give him entire Satisfaction; for after all his Endeavours by Night, by Day, by the Light of the Sun, by Candle Light, and the Assistance of his Spectacles, he beseeches God to make up the Defects of his Search: That all the leavened Bread which is in the House, as well what he has found, as what he has not, may become like the Dust of the Earth, and be reduced to nothing.

THE Sabbath which precedes the [g] Passover, is called the Grand Sabbath. On that Day they have a Sermon upon the Paschal Lamb. Two Days at least before the Passover all their Implements of Houshold are cleaned, and very often all or most of them are entirely new. The Jews are as scrupulous with Respect to the Composition of their unleavened Bread, as in their Search for that which is leaven'd, and in the Preparation

[a] Numbers, Chap. vi.
[b] Exodus, Chap. xxxiii.
[c] Buxtorf. Syn. Jud. Cap. 26.
[d] Basnage's History of the Jews, Lib. vi. Chap. 9.
[e] The German Jews observe these Things with much more Care than the rest of them.
[f] It must be Wax.
[g] Buxtorf. Syn. Jud. Cap. 17.

of the Grain. The Water for the Paſte of the former is examined and preſerved with all the Care imaginable. He who draws it [a], would do well to lift up his Heart to God at the ſame Time; and if he ſaid a Prayer moderately loud, the Water would be the better for it. It would not be amiſs, if the Maſter of the Houſe, or Father of the Family ſhould have a Hand one way or other in making the unleavened Bread; if he cannot, or muſt not touch the Paſte, at leaſt he ſhould be an Eye-Witneſs of this pious Operation; he ſhould give free [b] Courſe to ſuch ſmall Bits of Paſte as fall off from the large Maſs, and full Liberty to the Cats and Mice to eat them, as they roll down upon the Ground; and to encourage thoſe who knead it by his godly Exhortations.

She who makes the Paſte takes a Lump of it, and therewith makes a Cake and burns it, which Cake, under the old Law, belong'd of Right to the Sacrificator. Care muſt likewiſe be taken, to make the Paſte in a Place that is no Ways expoſed to the Sun, and to knead it without Intermiſſion, for fear it ſhould ferment. This unleavened Bread is made flat, and for the moſt Part round, is very inſipid and full of Eyes; but the Rich, and ſuch as are us'd to indulge their Appetites, mingle Eggs and Sugar with this Bread of Affliction.

They burn in a very ſolemn Manner all the Leaven which by their ſtrict Examination they could poſſibly find, and the Veſſel likewiſe in which it was put. This Practice is grounded on a Paſſage in [c] Exodus.

The Table at which they ſit to eat their Paſſover, is covered and ſet out to the beſt Advantage by their Women. The Maſter of the Family ſits down to it with his Children and Domeſticks. Some unleavened Loaves are ſet upon this Table, and a Plate covered, in which there are three myſterious Cakes, one for the High Prieſt, one for the Levites, and a third for the People, the Blade-Bone of a Shoulder of Lamb, or at leaſt ſome Part of [d] it. When the Shoulder is ſerved up whole at this Ceremony, they have a hard Egg with it. To this they add a Diſh of Meat repreſenting the Bricks which their Anceſtors were formerly forced to make in Egypt. This Meat is a thick Paſte compoſed of Apples, Almonds, Nuts, Figs, &c. which they dreſs in Wine, and ſeaſon with Cinnamon broke only into Pieces, to repreſent the Straw that they made uſe of in the making of their Bricks. In another Diſh they have Lettice, Chervil, Creſſes, wild Succory and Parſly. Theſe are their bitter Herbs. A Cruet full of Vinegar is ſet on the Table near the Sallet.

[e] They are oblig'd to ſit down to Table, like People whoſe Time is very precious, and who are in a Hurry. After the Conſecration of the Paſſover, every one in Company, even Infants in the Cradle, have a Glaſs of Wine. They waſh their Hands either before or after the Conſecration. The Maſter of the Houſe muſt ſit in an Arm-Chair, with his Left Elbow on the Table, the Gueſts being in the ſame Poſture; this is an Air of Liberty which they give themſelves, in Commemoration of that which their Fore-fathers recover'd when they departed out of Egypt. The Glaſs being empty, each Man dips a few of the bitter Herbs in Vinegar, whilſt the Maſter at the ſame Time repeats a Prayer ſuitable to the ſolemn Occaſion. He then breaks the Levites Cake in two, and conceals one of the Pieces under his Plate, to intimate the Manner in which the Iſraelites eſcaped, when they hid their unleavened Bread in a Hurry; then he takes the other, and holding it up with the Shoulder of the Lamb, beſpeaks the Family, who are likewiſe to lay their Hands upon the ſame Diſh, in the Words following;

[a] Buxtorf. Syn. Jud. Cap. 17.

[b] The Father on this Occaſion ſays, Let all the Bits of Paſte, broken off the Maſs, be free; but all Jews are not ſo ſcrupulous as to the Compoſition of their unleavened Bread.

[c] Exodus, Chap. xii. ver. 12.

[d] The Portugueſe Jews have this Bone on the Table during the whole eight Days of the Paſſover.

[e] This is particularly obſerved by the German Jews.

lowing; behold the Bread of Sorrow and Oppreſſion, which our Fore-fathers did once eat in Egypt; let him that is hungry draw near and eat. This is the Sacrifice of the Paſchal Lamb, &c. The Shoulder of Lamb, is after this, again ſet upon the Table, and a ſecond Glaſs of Wine is ſerv'd all round, but the Plate or Basket wherein the Cakes were, is ſet aſide[a]. This Shoulder repreſents, they ſay, the powerful Arm of the Lord, who delivered them from the Oppreſſion of the Egyptians.

THIS Ceremony ended, the Father of the Family orders an Hymn to be ſung, which conſiſts of a pious Recital of the miraculous Deliverance of their Anceſtors. This Hymn is begun by a young Child, whoſe Buſineſs it is[b] likewiſe to ask the Queſtions relating to the Ceremonies of the Paſſover, the Particulars whereof the Father explains, and gives a Reaſon for each reſpective Myſtery. When they come to that Part of the Hymn which makes mention of the ten Plagues of Egypt, they ſplaſh a little of the Wine out of the Glaſs with their Finger. This is an Intimation, that they wiſh thoſe Plagues may be remov'd far from them. Immediately they raiſe their Voices, which they had before lower'd, drink off their Wine, and go on with the Hymn. The Maſter of the Houſe now waſhes his Hands a ſecond Time, there being good Reaſon to ſuppoſe that he had ſoil'd them ſince his ſitting down to Table; takes one of the Cakes, and after Conſecration breaks it, and preſents a Piece of it to every one in Company; but leaves the other Cakes untouch'd, becauſe in this Night of Tears and Sadneſs, they muſt ſit down contented with a Morſel of Bread. This Bread and their bitter Herbs muſt be eaten with the Paſte abovementioned, after which they fall directly on the[c] Lamb. The Entertainment being almoſt over, the Maſter of the Houſe takes one half of the Cake which he had conceal'd under his Plate, eats one Bit himſelf, and then breaks off ſmall Pieces for the Reſt of his Family[d]. They muſt eat nothing after this, but they drink a third and a fourth Glaſs of Wine. At laſt, the Maſter taking the Glaſs, beſeeches God to pour out his Wrath over thoſe Nations, who acknowledge him not. [e] Theſe four Times which they drink about are four Myſteries. The Rabbi's have with Abundance of Precaution extended theſe Obligations which are ſo proper to keep the Vulgar in Awe, and ſecure their Reſpect.

'TIS obſervable, that the Jews make a great Difference between the ancient and modern [f] Way of celebrating the Paſſover. 1. Formerly they uſed to eat the Lamb roaſted whole. Ever ſince their Sacrifices have been aboliſhed, which could be offer'd no where but at Jeruſalem, they roaſt one Part of it and boil another, nay, ſometimes cut it in Pieces, which is enough to prevent its being ſacrificed. 2. The Want of their Sacrifices obliges them at preſent, to ſuppreſs ſeveral Hymns which relate to the Paſchal Lamb. 3. The Diſperſion of the Jews obliges them likewiſe to beg of God to re-eſtabliſh Jeruſalem, the Temple, and its Sacrifices, and to deliver them at this Day, as he formerly did their Fore-fathers from the Tyranny of the Egyptians. 4. The modern Jews conclude their Meal with the unleaven'd Bread, but in former Times they ended it with the Lamb. 5. They now omit girding their Loins, taking a Staff in their Hands, and pulling off their Shoes when they eat the Lamb; all which was practis'd under the ancient Law; but they take care to preſerve, however, that Humility and Attention which are due to this religious Ceremony. They decline their Heads all the Time they are eating; and ſuch Jews as are eminent for their Piety, put nothing into their Mouths, without meditating on the Myſtery with the utmoſt Reſpect and Veneration.

[a] Buxtorf. Syn. Jud. Cap. xviii.

[b] In Intimation of what is written, Exod. Chap. xii. 26. and other Places. When your Children ſhall ſay unto you, what mean you by this Service.

[c] That is, where it is ſerved up to the Paſſover Meal.

[d] Buxtorf. Syn. Jud. Cap. xviii.

[e] Hereby are typified four Benefits conferred by God on the Jews, and which are contained in Exod. vi. 6, 7. Vide Buxtorf. Syn. Jud. Cap. xviii.

[f] Baſnage's Hiſtory of the Jews, Lib. vi. Cap. 9.

The FESTIVAL of PENTECOST.

THE Jews call the fifty Days which are computed between the Passover and the Pentecost, Homer-days. The Reason of this Name of Homer, is given in the twenty third Chapter of Leviticus, and the tenth and subsequent Verses.

AT the Pentecost five Persons read the Sacrifice of the Day, and the History of Ruth; because frequent Mention is made there of the Harvest. At this Time they regale themselves with all Sorts of Dainties made of Milk, which in their Opinion is a Symbol of the Law, both on Account of its Sweetness and its Whiteness; and as the Jews take a Pride in having, as far as is possible, the most express and lively Images of the most remarkable Circumstances that occurred at the Birth of their Religion, they never forget to serve up to Table on this Day a Cake made moderately thick, which they call the Cake of Sinai; and this is to remind them of Mount Sinai, on which God gave them the Law.

THIS is all that is very remarkable in this Festival except what has been already said upon it by Leo of Modena. They called it formerly the Feast of the Harvest, because the first of their Corn and Fruit was at that Time offer'd, which was the Close of this Solemnity: But this can never be in Europe, Harvest falling always much later than Whitsuntide. It might however bear this Name in the Land of Canaan, Arabia, and the Neighbourhood of the Red-Sea. Some certain Institutions, and even the most religious ones, depended at their Origin, on Times, Places, and other Circumstances. Such as are of this Kind should gradually be abolished; but Mankind, notwithstanding, adhere to them, with all the Strictness imaginable, even at a Time when they are grown perfectly useless. It is evident, that their Unprofitableness renders them ridiculous; and yet they will be continued as long as the World endures.

AT the Pentecost the German Jews adorn their Candlesticks, Lamps, and the Pulpit of the Hechal with Flowers and Abundance of odoriferous Herbs. The Portuguese Jews formerly did the same, and 'tis at present practis'd by the Italians.

The FEAST of TENTS or TABERNACLES.

THIS Festival is the Representation or Figure of the Journey and Sufferings of the Israelites in the Wilderness of the Red-Sea, and of the Goodness and Mercy of Providence, which preserved them forty Years together, in frightful and barren Deserts, without Houses, always expos'd to the Injuries of the Weather, but never incommoded by them.

THE Jews spend the Time of this Festival under Tents, which they set up either before or behind their Houses, either in the Court-yard or in the Garden[a]. No Tent must be more than twenty Cubits high, nor less than ten Spans. Each must be built in as an agreeable and as airy a Place, and free from all ill Smells as possibly can be. Such as are rich adorn them with Tapestry, over which they hang Boughs of Trees loaden with Fruit: Sometimes with Oranges, and Limons, &c. very often with Boughs of barren Trees only, such as Gourds, or even no more than Willow. These Tents are hung round with Leaves on the Outside to the Top, but not covered with them: Particular Care must be taken, that they do not lose their Verdure: In short, they must neither be set up under any House, nor under any Tree.

[a] See the Cut.

DURING

the PROCESSION of PALMES of the PORTUGUESE JEWS.

PROCESSION des PALMES chez les JUIFS PORTUGAIS.

B. Picart delineavit.

C. Du Bosc. Fecit.

JEWISH ENTERTAINMENT during the FEAST of TABERNACLES.

REPAS des JUIFS pendant la FÊTE des TENTES.

During this Feſtival, they go to the Synagogue with one [a] Branch of Palm, three of Myrtle, and two of Willow, all tied up together, which they carry in their Right Hand, and a Branch of Citron with its Fruit in their Left. Theſe are brought ſo near as to touch each other, and in turning them round, ſhake them firſt towards the Eaſt, then towards the South, then towards the Weſt, and laſtly, towards the North. Under each of theſe Branches there is a Myſtery contain'd. The Palm, as it bears an inſipid Fruit, is the Emblem of the Hypocrite; the Myrtle, as it has a moſt agreeable Smell, altho' it be barren, reſembles thoſe who perform good Works without the Law; the Willow is an Image of the Wicked, and the Citron of the Righteous. They take a ſolemn Tour round the Desk with theſe Branches in their Hands. Formerly they perform'd this Ceremony at Jeruſalem round the Altar.

The ſeventh Day of this Feſtival is a grand Day. The Myrtle, the Palm, the Citron are then laid aſide, and with their Willow Boughs only they go [b] ſeven Times round the Desk. The Prayers are repeated with greater Precipitation than uſual, for which they aſſign this Reaſon; [c] that during their Journey in the Wilderneſs, they were obliged to be expeditious in all their Actions, even in divine Service itſelf. Seven Tranſcripts of the Law are taken out of the Hechal, and the Desk is adorn'd with Flowers; and foraſmuch as this and the Day following, which is the eighth Day of the Feſtival, are Days of Rejoicing for the Synagogue, they indulge themſelves in ſuch extravagant Expreſſions of their Joy, that ſuch as do not penetrate into the myſterious Part of the Jewiſh Ceremonies, are ſurpris'd at their Conduct. They throw themſelves into a thouſand antic Poſtures, they repeat their Prayers with much Noiſe, and in a prodigious Hurry, and make the Benches ring again with their Willow Branches. The Mind of Man, which is always forward to paſs a diſadvantageous Judgment of any Thing that ſhocks him, and the Myſteries whereof he does not rightly comprehend, can ſcarce forbear condemning ſuch Acts of Devotion, as are ſo frantic and extravagant. The Coolneſs of Piety ſuits but ill with ſuch warm Sallies, and People who are not accuſtom'd to Figure and Myſtery, are imprudent enough to ask ſuch as are pleaſed to worſhip God in that Manner, whether it be allowable to jumble the Service of God with Ceremonies which expoſe Religion to Contempt and Ridicule. The ſeven Tours round the Desk are performed, as they ſay, in Commemoration of Joſhua's Proceſſion round the Walls of Jericho.

This Feſtival of Tents or Tabernacles begins at Home with ſome particular Benedictions, and is ſucceeded by a Supper. They amuſe themſelves at Table as agreeably as ever they can. Private Devotion muſt ſucceed the Public; and the Father of the Family never begins to conſecrate the Feſtival, till he has firſt been at Prayers in the Synagogue till Night. During the whole Feſtival, they ought to lodge in their Tents, but conſidering how open they are built, Devotion could not be able to bear out againſt the Injuries of the Weather, eſpecially in cold Countries.

They leave their Tents at the End of the eighth Day, as ſoon as Night draws on.

[a] See the Figure of theſe Branches in the Cut.

[b] This is performed by the Parnaſſim, and the Reſt of their Clergy; and this is the Manner of the Jews of the Spaniſh Rite.

[c] Baſnage's Hiſtory of the Jews, Lib. vi. Cap. 17.

The FESTIVAL of the LAW.

THIS Feſtival is on the ninth Day after that of Tabernacles [a]. It was inſtituted by their Rabbi's, and celebrated on the twenty third of September. The Jews at this Time rejoice, becauſe God has been ſo gracious as to allow them once more to read and meditate upon the Law. Almoſt every one knows that the ſacred Books of Moſes are divided into [b] fifty two Sections or Leſſons, and that one is read every Sabbath; thus the laſt Leſſon falls upon the ninth Day from the Feaſt of Tabernacles, or the Sunday then next following.

THE Night on which the ninth Day begins, after a few Prayers, all the [c] Books of the Law are taken out of the Ark, and carried in Proceſſion round the Deſk, and the Chanter walks at the Head of them. The next Morning, the ſame Ceremony is repeated, and all thoſe Books, except three [d], are carried back into the Hechal. The End of the Law is read out of the Firſt, the Beginning out of the Second, and what concerns Offerings in the twenty ninth Chapter of Numbers out of the Third. This is the Account which Buxtorf gives of it, but for the Generality they only read the Beginning and the End of the Law out of two different Books. The two Perſons appointed to read them, are called the Spouſes of the Law. This is perform'd whilſt the People are making loud Acclamations, and the Rabbi's pretend it is [e] an excellent Preſervative againſt the falſe and malicious Imputations of the Devil.

ON the Day whereon this Ceremony is performed, all Eccleſiaſtical Offices are appointed, and particularly thoſe which relate to their Law. Theſe are ſold to the beſt Purchaſer, and the Money ariſing from the Sale thereof is appropriated to the Maintenance of the Poor, and the Repairs of the Synagogue. Buxtorf, who has obliged us with the Particulars, which are ſuch as he had actually ſeen in the German Synagogue, tells us what theſe Offices are.

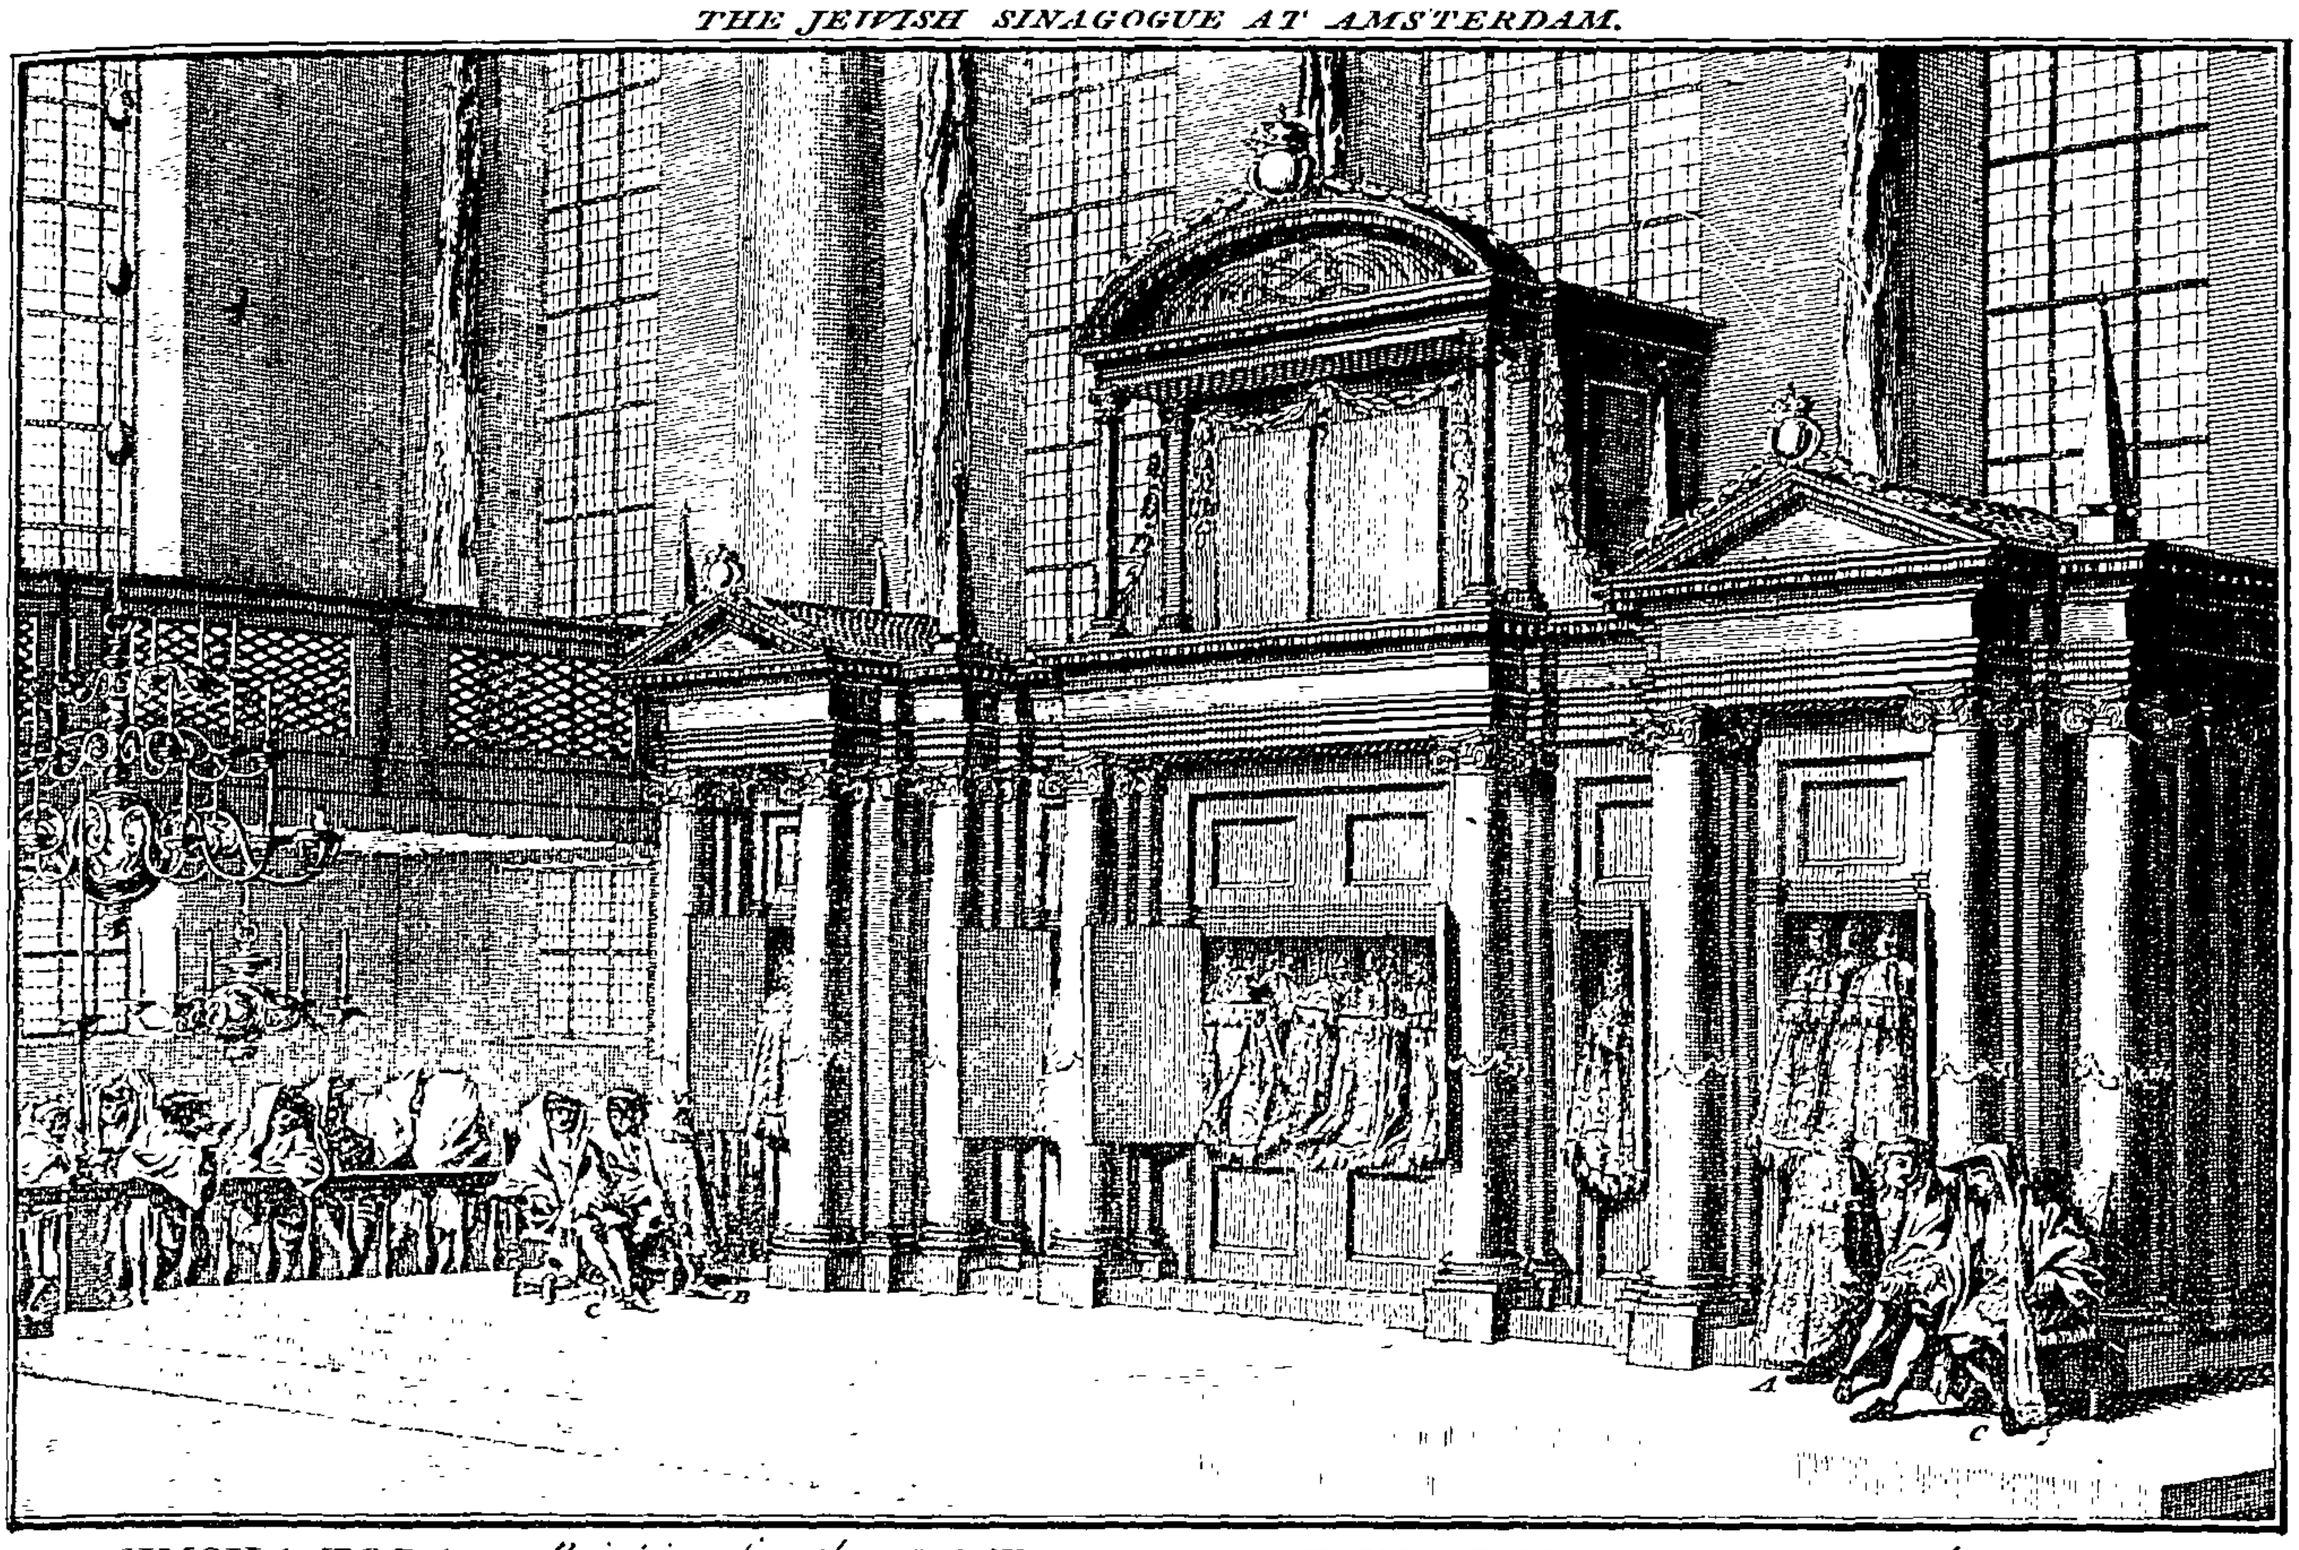
1. THAT of lighting the Lamps of the Synagogue.

2. THAT of diſtributing the Wine, for the public Conſecration of the Sabbath and all other ſolemn Feſtivals, to ſuch Poor as have no Money to buy for themſelves.

3. THAT of rolling and unrolling the Books of the Law.

4. THAT of lifting up the Books of the Law, and preſenting it ſo lifted up to the Congregation.

5. THAT of touching the Wood and the Strings which are made uſe of in rolling up and faſtening the Volume of the Law. This Wood they call the Wood of Life; and the young Men are fond of purchaſing this Office, becauſe they flatter themſelves that the Touch of this Wood will prolong their Lives, preſerve their Health, and make them both wiſe and prudent.



6. THAT of reading ſome Portion out of the Law on ſolemn Feſtivals.

7. THAT of being ſubſtituted in the Room of thoſe who behave themſelves with Imprudence and Indecency in any of the abovementioned Functions.

THE Sabbath which immediately enſues this Feſtival is called the Sabbath in the Beginning.

[a] Buxtorf. Syn. Jud. Cap. xxvii.
[b] Baſnage's Hiſtory of the Jews, Lib. vi. cap. 29, called 34.
[c] One of theſe Books of the Law is delineated in the Cut, wherein are the Inſtruments for Circumciſion.
[d] Buxtorf. Syn. Jud. Cap. xxviii.
[e] Ibid.
[f] Sabbath Bereſkith, on Account of this laſt Word, which is the Beginning of Geneſis.

THE JEWISH SINAGOGUE AT AMSTERDAM.

SIMCHA TORA or Rejoicing for the LAW.

A. Cadan Beresçid B. Cadan Tora, being the Spouses of the Law, and Represent the Kings of Israel, who on the last day of the feast of Tabernacles were obliged to open and close the Lessons of the Law. Cadan Tora reads first, and then Cadan Beresçid. CC. two Parnassins

SIMCHA TORA ou JOYE pour la LOY.

A. Le Cadan Beresçid B. Le Cadan Tora, ou Epoux de la Loy, representant les Rois d'Israel qui etoient obligez de commencer, et de finir la Lecture de la Loy, le dernier jour de la fête des Cabanes. Le Cadan Tora est celui qui la finit, le Cadan Beresçid, est celui qui la recommence. CC Deux Parnassins.

The SPOUSES of the LAW conducted home.

A. the same day that Cadan Tora makes an end of reading the Law: he is convey'd home in the evening by Cadan Beresçid on his right hand, a parassin on his left followed by other parassins, friends and Relations, and guarded by Officers, and in Return when Cadan Beresçid Reads the Law, Cadan Tora waits on him in the same order: giving him the middle place in his turne.

LALANIERE de conduire les EPOUX de la LOY chez eux.

A. Le Cadan Tora, le jour qu'il finit la lecture de la Loy, il est reconduit le soir, par le cadan Beresçid, qui est a sa droite, et un Parnassin a sa gauche, suivi des autres Parnassins, de Parens, et Amis, escorté de quelques Sergens, Et le jour que le Cadan Beresçid commence la Loy, le Cadan Tora le reconduit à son tour, dans le même ordre, avec cette diference que le Cadan Beresçid occupe allors la place du milieu.

The Feaſt of Lights, in the Hebrew Tongue call'd Chanuccah, or Dedication.

LEO OF MODENA [a] has given us the Origin of this Feſtival. 'Tis not ſufficient to light up Lamps in the Synagogue, in the Order he [b] mentions, but they muſt practiſe it at home likewiſe; and the Regularity of their Worſhip requires the Light to be on the Left-hand of him that enters the Houſe. The Mezuza is on the Right, as is already obſerved; ſo that they walk between two [c] Commandments. 'Tis the Women's peculiar Province to light their Lamps.

THEY likewiſe celebrate on this Feſtival the Commemoration of the Dedication of the Tabernacle, and read the ſeventh Chapter of Numbers.

THERE are certain Prayers appropriated to this Feſtival, and among the reſt one in Praiſe of God, who hath ordained the lighting up of Lamps upon ſolemn Days. This Feſtival is kept eight Days ſucceſſively, becauſe the Circumciſion, which is to be performed on the eighth Day, was ſuſpended, or ſuppreſſed by the Enemies of Judaiſm, in the Time of the Maccabees, thoſe celebrated Champions and Saviours of the Jewiſh Nation.

The FEAST of the PURIM.

THE Word Purim, from whence the Name of this Feſtival is derived, is Perſian, and ſignifies Lots. It is the Plural of Pur, and the two Days devoted to this Solemnity are ſo called by the Jews, becauſe Haman, their inveterate Enemy, had [d] caſt Lots to deſtroy them on thoſe two Days.

THE Faſt kept on the Vigil of this Feſtival is of the Rabbi's Inſtitution; but in all Probability the Feſtival was appointed by one of the [e] Prophets, who was Contemporary with Haman. But be that as it will, the Purim is, as it were, the Jewiſh Carnival, and celebrated at the ſame Time as that of the Chriſtians: There is this Difference, indeed, the Jews mourn and do Penance before it commences. The Faſt ſhould continue three Days, and the moſt devout of them are ſtrict Obſervers of it; but for the Generality they reduce it to one Day of Humiliation. "They give the Poor in the "Morning ſufficient to enable them to enjoy themſelves at Night; and the Rich often "ſend them Diſhes from their own Tables for their more elegant Entertainment. At "this Time they collect the half Shekel formerly paid to the Temple, and diſtribute it "amongſt thoſe who go in Pilgrimage to Jeruſalem, in order to avoid the Fatigue of "a tedious Journey at the Reſurrection, and to be nearer the Valley of Jehoſaphat.

"AT Night they repair to the Synagogue, where the Book of Eſther is read over, and "explained to the Congregation by the Chazan. The Reader is allow'd to ſit at this "Leſſon, whereas he muſt ſtand when he reads the Law. After he has unroll'd the Vo-"lume, he pronounces three Prayers, to return Thanks to Almighty God for calling "them to have a Share in this Ceremony, for delivering them out of the mercileſs "Hands of Haman, and ſuffering them to live to this Feſtival. In the next Place he "reads the whole Hiſtory of Haman and Eſther. In this Leſſon there are five particular "Places, in which he raiſes his Voice to ſo high a Pitch, that Women and Children

[a] Firſt Diſſertation, Part iii. Chap. 9.
[b] Buxtorf. Syn. Jud. Cap. xxviii.
[c] Lighting up of Lamps is one, the Mezuza is another.
[d] Eſther, Chap. ix.
[e] Haggai, or Malachi, according to Baſnage's Hiſtory of the Jews, Lib. VI. Chap. xvii.

" may well tremble at the Sound of it. He endeavours, by theſe extraordinary Ele" vations of it, to awaken ſuch as may ſleep, or (rather) to teſtify his Joy. He is obliged " to read the Names of Haman's ten Children in one Breath, and when the Name
" of that Perſecutor is pronounced, the Synagogue rings with their Exclamations. . . . . .
" In ſome Places they engrave the Name of Haman on a Stone (or on Wood) and the Mo" ment it is read, they ſtrike it with all their Force againſt another Stone, crying out,
" Let the Name of the Villain periſh, and be buried in Oblivion. Theſe Acts of Devo" tion are cloſed with Imprecations on Haman and his Wife, and Bleſſings on Morde-
" chai and Eſther, and with Praiſes to God for the Preſervation of his People. After this
" they depart from the Synagogue, in order to ſit down at Table and refreſh themſelves,
" and return the next Morning, to hear the Book of Eſther read a ſecond Time. . . . . .
" After which, they indulge themſelves in all Manner of Luxury and Exceſs; inſo-
" much that this Feſtival was formerly confounded with the Bacchanalia of the Heathens."
This Deſcription of that Feſtival is taken almoſt verbatim [a] from M. Baſnage, only we have ventur'd to correct an Expreſſion or two as Occaſion offered.

GAIETY is ſo inſeparably connected with the Purim, that there is not a profeſt Jew, but what gives a looſe to his good Humour. One would imagine ſome Pains were required to paſs from the moſt rigorous Penance to the moſt extravagant Tranſports of Joy in almoſt one and the ſame Moment, and to make an immediate Tranſition from one to the other. Nothing, however, is more eaſy or more common. Theſe two Extremes meet together, and the two different Characters under which Men appear upon theſe Occaſions will juſtify the Compariſon of them to a well-temper'd Sword-Blade, which bends with Eaſe, and in a Moment with equal Eaſe recovers its former Poſition.

THERE are particular Prayers and Bleſſings for this Day, as well as all their other ſolemn Feſtivals.

THE Names of the ten Sons of Haman are written in a very peculiar Manner in the [b] Magillah, and are ranged like ſo many Bodies [c] hanging on a Gibbet.

The Faſts which are inſtituted by the SYNAGOGUE.

LEO OF MODENA has omitted [d] none of the Faſts of Command. That of the ſeventeenth of Thamuz, anſwering to June, has ſeveral Reaſons aſſigned for the Obſervation of it. The Tables of the Law which were broken in Pieces, the Idolatry of the Golden Calf, the Abolition of the daily Sacrifice, the Prophanation of the Temple by the Idolatry of Manaſſes, are all at that Time commemorated, and Part of the Subjects of their Affliction.

THE Faſt which they celebrate on Account of the Deſtruction of their two Temples is very remarkable. The Meal which precedes it muſt be ſparing and modeſt. They who ſincerely bewail the Confuſion of Jeruſalem, will admit but of one Diſh at their Table at that Time; will neglect every Thing that is able to gratify their Taſte, or ſooth their Vanity, and will eat little, and drink leſs. The Germans [e] eat nothing but Herbs and Eggs on this Day, imagining that in them they diſcern the Image of Mourning and Sadneſs; and formerly they would eat nothing but Bread dipp'd in Water, with a little Salt to it. This piteous Meal was eaten with Tears and Groans as they lay proſtrate on the Ground before the Hearth, clothed in Sackcloth, and ſometimes covered with Aſhes.

[a] Hiſtory of the Jews, Lib. VI. Chap. xvii.
[b] This Name the Jews give to the Book of Eſther.
[c] Vide Buxtorf. Syn. Jud. Cap. xxix.
[d] Vide Firſt Diſſertation, Part III. Chap. viii.
[e] Idem Cap. xxx.

A Cruice of Water ſtood by the Penitent to quench his Thirſt, and repair his Strength worn out with Affliction. His Silence was uninterrupted but by Sobs, his Feet were bare, and to compleat his Sorrows, his Bread was often mixed with Aſhes and Gravel.

[a] THE Night of this Faſt was to be attended with all the Inconveniencies they could deviſe. Their Beds were to be hard, their Bolſters very low, and their Sheets very rough and coarſe. Some would have nothing but Stones for their Pillows. The next Day they never read the Law, for that rejoices the Heart: Nor do they ſalute each other. The Day after the Faſt is a Day of Sorrow too, whereon they abſtain from Meat and Wine; and tho' not ſo ſolemn as the firſt, bears the viſible Marks of Sorrow and Affliction. On the Eve of this Day they go into the Synagogue without Shoes, ſit down on the Ground, and read the Lamentations of Jeremiah, by the Light of a much dimmer Lamp than uſual; and at each Verſe that begins with any Hebrew Word of the ſame Signification with that of How, they raiſe their Voice in a very moving Tone. In ſhort, they who commemorate the Deſtruction of the Temple with the greateſt Fervency and Devotion, practiſe in private every Thing that is capable of inſpiring them with Sorrow, with the utmoſt Exactneſs.

LEO OF MODENA has treated of all the other Faſts of the Synagogue; but there are others beſides them which are not generally received. The Calendar annexed to theſe Explications, will furniſh the Reader with the ſeveral Names of theſe Faſts, and of ſome other Feſtivals.

The DEVOTION of Monday and Thurſday.

BUXTORF has obliged us with a [b] Deſcription of this Devotion. One of the ten Precepts which Eſdras gave to the Jews of the Captivity, according to the Account in the Talmud, was to read publickly in the Synagogue every Monday and Thurſday ſome Portion of the Law, in a particular Manner, and with all the Devotion due to the Dignity of the Subject. By another of his Precepts the ſame Days are appointed for the Trial of all Cauſes. Moſes, add they, went up the ſecond Time to Mount Sinai on a Thurſday, and returned the Monday following with the ſame Tables of the Law; and the [c] Phariſee in the Goſpel in all Probability made Choice of theſe two Days for his weekly Faſts. In ſhort, there are particular Prayers for Mondays and Thurſdays.

SOME remarkable Ceremonies accompany their expoſing and reading the Law, of which Buxtorf will furniſh us with the Deſcription, according to what he has ſeen practiſed in the German Synagogues. There are two ſmall Sticks faſtened to the Book of the Law, by which 'tis held to prevent its being touched; becauſe otherwiſe it might often be polluted by unclean Hands; and thoſe Sticks are called the Wood of Life. Leo of Modena has given us a very particular Account how ſcrupulous the Jews are in the Choice of the Vellum whereon their Law is to be written, the Ink, the Character, the Manner of Writing, the Ark in which it is to be lock'd up, &c. for which Reaſon we ſhall ſay no more on all theſe Topicks. The Volume of the Law is wrapped round with a kind of Band or broad Ribband, embroidered with Needle-work. Each Child brings his own into the Synagogue. On this Band is uſually embroider'd the Name of the Child, his Parents, his Age, and Birth-Day. The Father of the Child gives it to the Officer that has the Care of the Wood of Life, and he gives it to his Brother Officer, who rolls and unrolls the Law. This Perſon covers the Book with theſe Ribbands ſo as the Letters which are embroidered thereon ſhall turn towards, and even touch the Law if poſ-

[a] Vide Firſt Diſſertation, Part III. Chap. xxx.
[b] Syn. Jud. Cap. 14.
[c] Luke, Chap. xviii. ver. 10.

ſible, ſible. Beſides which, the Law has, moreover, a very neat Silk Cover. A thin Silver Plate is fixed to it by a ſmall Silver Chain. This Plate is made hollow, and encloſes ſeveral leſſer, on which are engraved the Names of the Feſtivals and other ſolemn Days, whereon the Law is required to be read. On the great Plate are theſe Words, The Crown of the Law, or theſe, the Holineſs of the Lord.

When the Chazan takes this ſacred Volume out of the Ark, the Congregation ſay, Let God ariſe, and let his Enemies be ſcattered. As ſoon as he ſhuts the Ark they all repeat a particular Benediction. When he takes this Volume into his Hands he pronounces a Bleſſing ſuitable to the Action, and the Congregation anſwer him by another. When he carries it to the Desk, the moſt ſerious, who are near enough, preſs forward to kiſs it; the reſt endeavour at leaſt to touch it with their Hands.

They lay the Law on a Silk Carpet ſpread upon the Desk; afterwards the Seghen unties the Ribbands, opens the Book, and orders the Chazan to appoint what Perſons he thinks proper for reading it.

When the Leſſons are over, the Officer whoſe peculiar Buſineſs it is to lift up the Law, takes it, opens it, and lifts it as high as ever he can. When he has thus opened and raiſed it, he turns it Eaſt, Weſt, North, and South. Upon this the Congregation ſay, Behold the Law which Moſes gave to the Children of Iſrael.

After this Ceremony is over, ſuch as have purchaſed the Privileges of rolling up the Law, and touching the Sticks of Life, approach to perform their Office: The whole Congregation likewiſe come forward to kiſs, or at leaſt to touch the ſacred Wood. Two Fingers only have the Honour to touch it; both of them muſt forthwith be laid upon the Eyes, that Touch having given them a ſupernatural Virtue to ſtrengthen the Sight, and cure ſore Eyes. This Wood likewiſe confirms Health, reſtores the Sick, and is of ſingular Service to all Women labouring with Child that look upon it.

As the Women are excluded from all Religious Ceremonies, and remain lock'd up in their Galleries, without any Poſſibility of being concern'd in them, they are content to view them at an humble Diſtance, and to enjoy their Zeal by pious Glances caſt thro' their Lattices, and by approaching the Edges of thoſe Lattices where they ſtand in the Synagogue as cloſe as poſſibly they can.

There are ſome Benedictions likewiſe which accompany the Law when it is carried back into the Hechal, whilſt it is carrying, and laſtly, whilſt it is replacing in it; after which they conclude their Prayers, and depart from the Synagogue. As they are going out, they lift up their Hearts to God.

The Jewish Calendar for the Year 1722.

This Calendar of the Hiſtory of the Jews, calculated for the Year 1722, is extracted from Mr. [a] Baſnage, and we hope it will prove an agreeable Amuſement to our Readers.

[b] Execute the Judgment of Peace and Truth in your Gates.

Year [c] 483 [d] From the Creation of the World.
1722 Of the Chriſtian Æra.

[a] Lib. vi. Cap. 29.
[b] Zachar. Chap. viii. ver. 16.
[c] The Jews cut off the Thouſands in this Calculation; thus the Year 483 is 5483.
[d] We omit the Epocha's of leſs Note.

Year 3887 From the FLOOD.
3535 From the Nativity of our Father ABRAHAM;
Peace be unto him.
3245 From the Deſcent into EGYPT.
3115 From the Nativity of our Maſter MOSES;
Peace be unto him.
3035 From the DEPARTURE out of Egypt, and the Publication of the Law.
2995 From the Entrance into the Land of CANAAN.
2555 From the Building of the TEMPLE.
2279 From the CAPTIVITY of the TEN TRIBES.
2145 From the DESTRUCTION of the FIRST TEMPLE.
2075 From the Building of the SECOND TEMPLE.
2030 From the CESSATION of PROPHECY.
1655 From the RUIN of the SECOND TEMPLE.
1582 From the Compoſition of the MISCHNA.
1244 From the Compoſition of the Babyloniſh TALMUD.
1232 From the Nativity of MAHOMET.
1128 From the Commencement of the FAITH of the ISHMAELITES. i.e. of MAHOMETANISM.
327 From the BANISHMENT out of FRANCE.
231 From the BANISHMENT out of SPAIN.
223 FROM the BANISHMENT out of PORTUGAL.

Let us beſeech Almighty God, to rebuild his Temple and Altars. Into Sion ſhall the Saviour come, and with him Plenty of all good Things to the Houſe of Iſrael, AMEN. God grant that it may be ſo.

1. IT muſt be obſerved, that the Jewiſh Year conſiſts of 354 Days, and that a Month is intercalated every three Years, which makes a Year of thirteen Months.

2. THEIR Civil Year commences in Tiſri, which anſwers to September; their Eccleſiaſtical Year in Niſan, that is March.

3. As M. Baſnage has thought proper to inſert in his Calendar ſuch Feſtivals which are aboliſhed, and but little regarded, we have exactly copied him. His Calendar runs as follows:

I. Month Civil. VII. Eccleſiaſtical.

Days. The Month of Tiſri, or September.

I. New-Year's-Day. The Feaſt of Trumpets, Levit. Chap. xxiii. ver. 24. Numb. Chap. xxix. ver. 17.

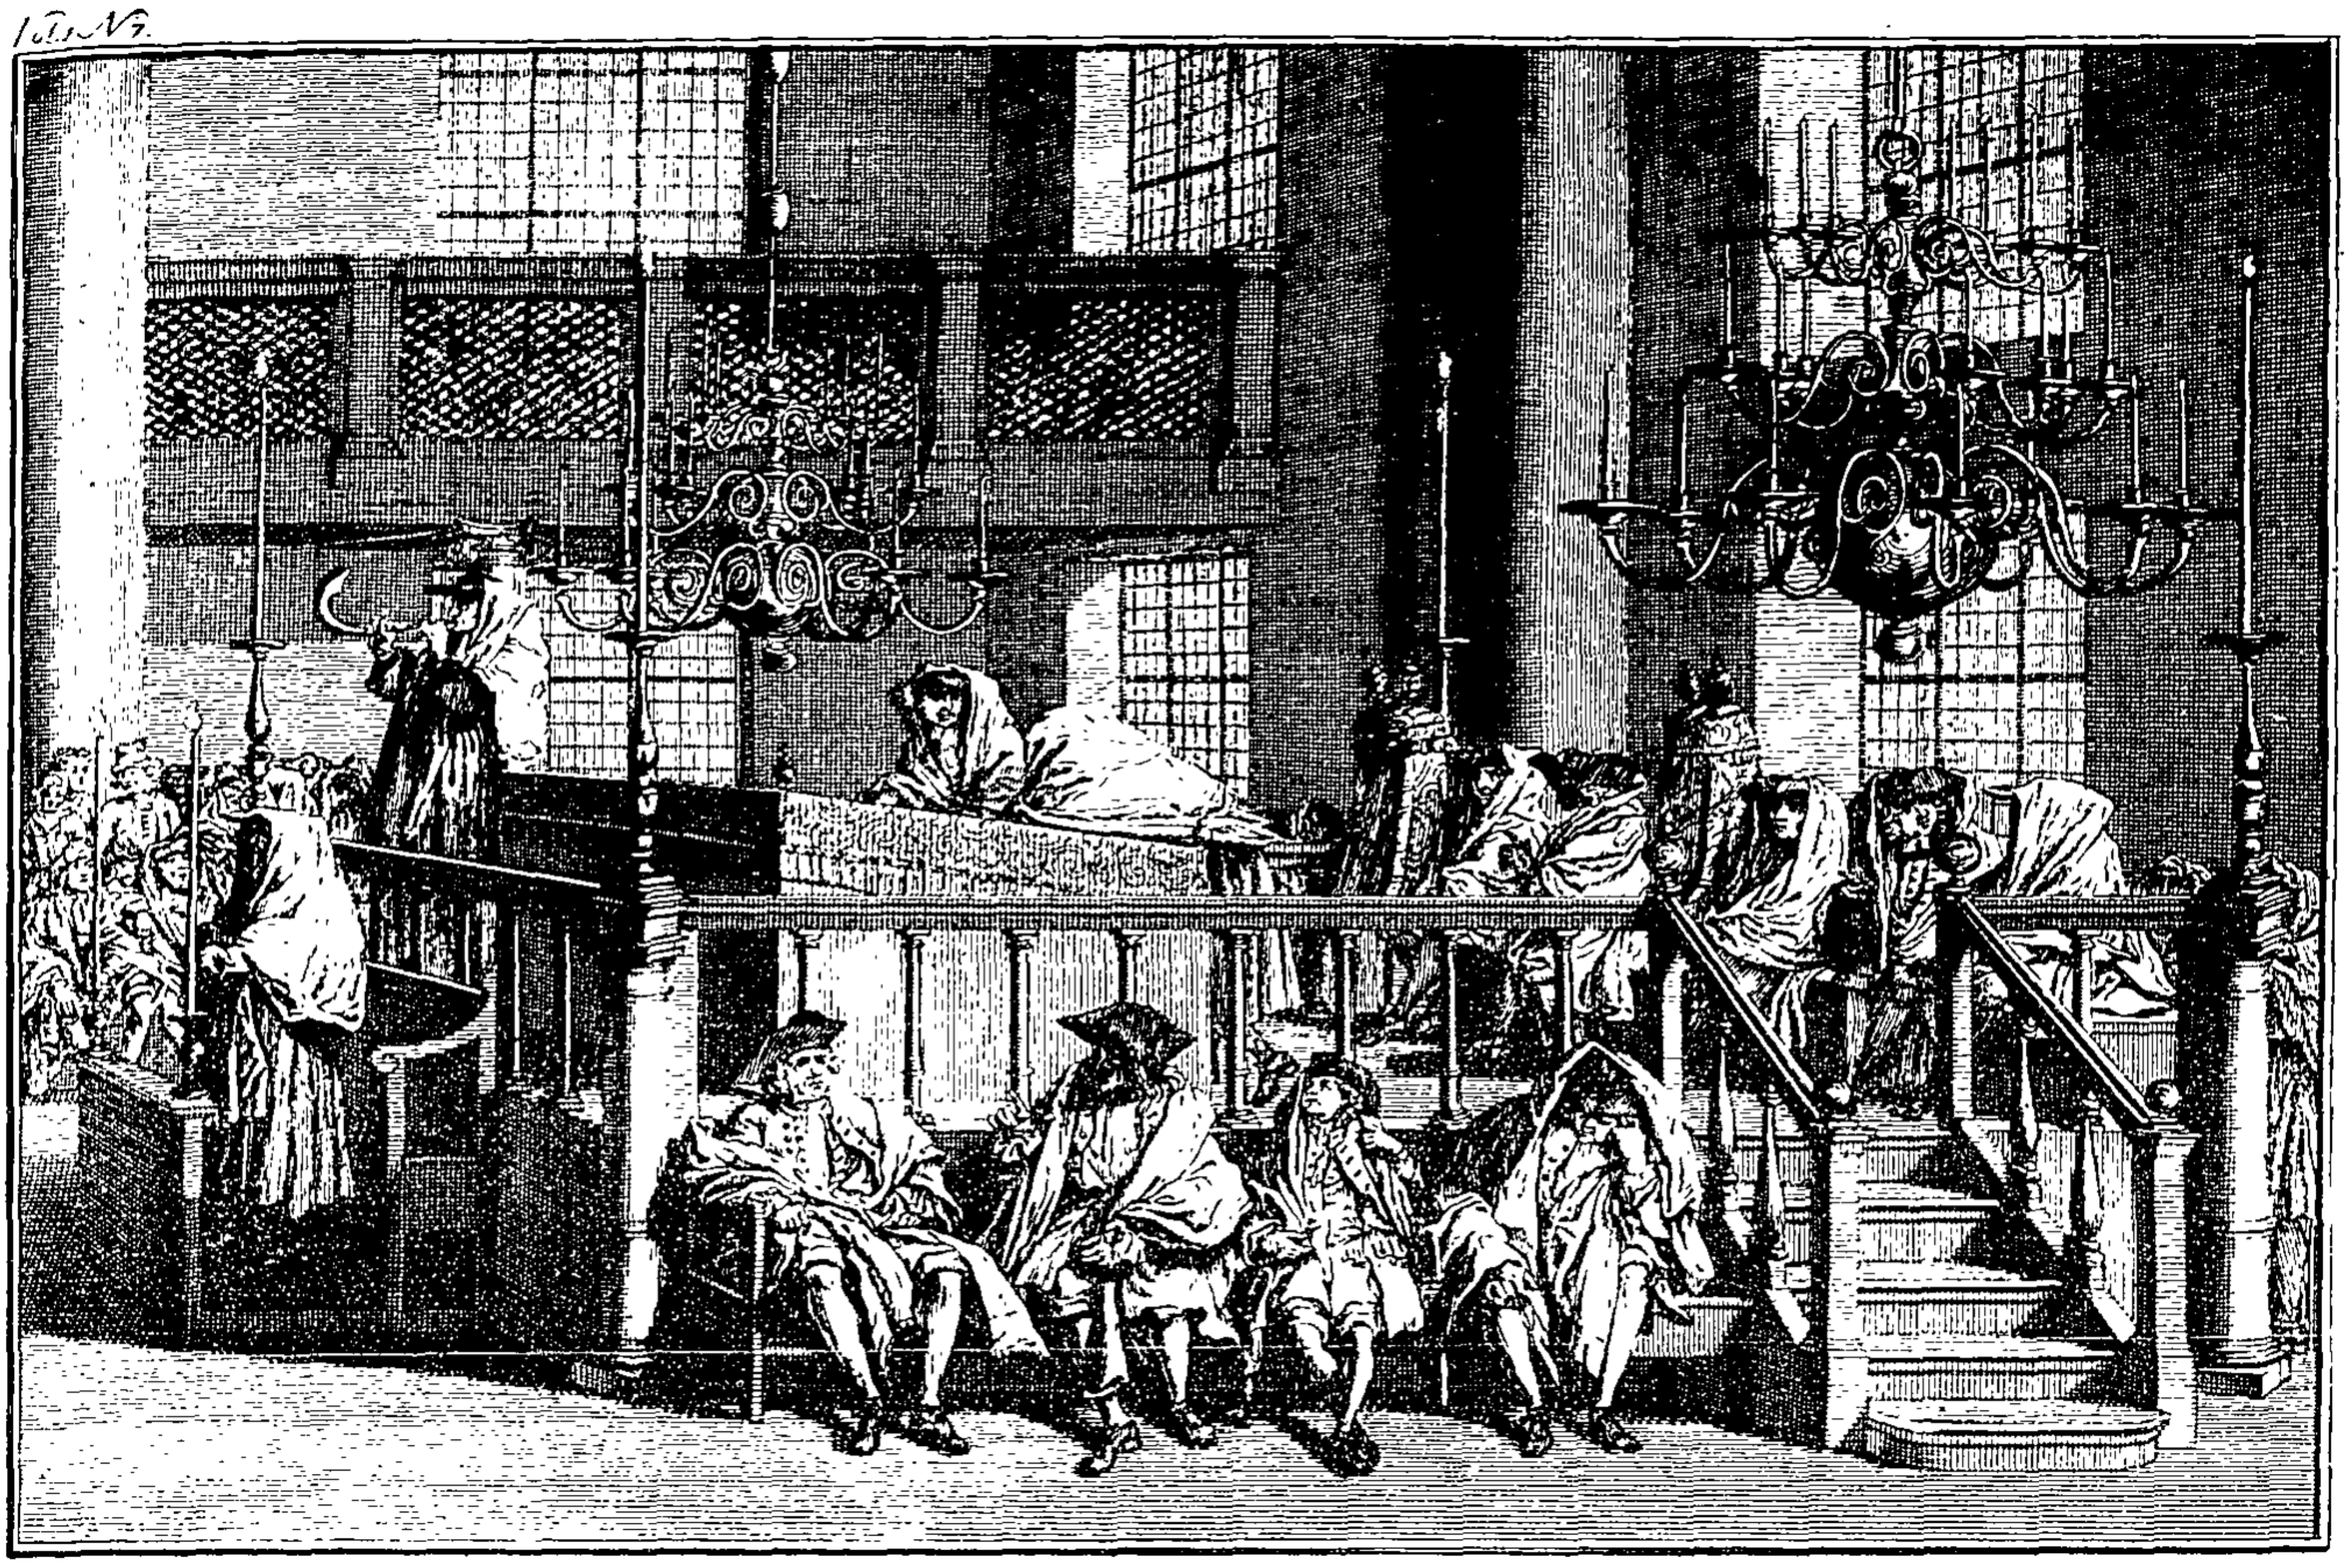
THEY aſſign ſeveral Reaſons for ſounding the Trumpet. 1. Becauſe Iſaac being laid upon the Altar, a Ram, which was entangled by the Horns in a Thicket was ſacrificed in his Stead. 2. Becauſe Moſes, being returned to Mount Sinai to beg of God new Tables of the Law, commanded them to ſound their Trumpets through the whole Camp, to prevent the People from relapſing into Idolatry. They are of Opinion that the Trumpet ſhould be ſounded from the firſt Day of Auguſt to the twenty eighth, conſtantly Night and Morning after their Prayers, in Commemoration of this Action of Moſes. 3. Laſtly, The People are thereby exhorted to prepare themſelves for the Day of Judgment, which is the firſt Day of the Year, becauſe God judges all the Iſraelites at that Time.

Days.

THEY have a thouſand Scruples, both with reſpect to the Trumpets they make uſe of, and the Manner wherein they ought to uſe them. It muſt be the Horn of a Ram; that of a Bull or a Cow is unlawful. It muſt be crooked rather than ſtraight. If one of theſe Horns ſhould happen to be ſtolen, they would uſe it notwithſtanding; becauſe the Injunction to ſound the Trumpet, and the Prohibition to ſteal, are two different Commands: But if the Horn has been ever uſed in any idolatrous Act, they muſt throw it away. They are not allowed to embelliſh it either with Gold, or any other Ornament of Value. 'Tis good tho' there ſhould prove a Crack acroſs it; but it is unfit for Uſe if there be a Crack lengthways. They are to make as great a Noiſe as ever they can: Nay, the Women have the Privilege of blowing it.

THEY riſe early upon New-Year's-Day; go to the Synagogue, ſay their Prayers, and afterwards take the Books out of the Cheſt. On this Day five Prieſts, a Levite, and three Iſraelites are appointed to read the Law: And One of them reads the firſt and ſecond Chapter of the Prophet Samuel to the tenth Verſe. Then he whoſe Buſineſs it is to ſound the Trumpet riſes, and taking the Horn, repeats theſe Words.

Bleſſed be thou, O our Lord God, Sovereign of the Univerſe, who haſt ſanctified us by thy Laws, and ordained us to hearken to the Sound of the Trumpet. Bleſſed be thou, O my God, who haſt given us Life, and Health, and ſafely brought us to the Beginning of this Day.



AFTER this, the Horn is ſounded, and there are three different ways for the Execution thereof, which muſt be ſtrictly obſerved by ſounding thrice each particular Way, which are called Tiſchrath, Taſchiath, and Tarath.

WHEN the Horn is thus ſounded, the following Petition is repeated; Remember the Covenant of Abraham, and the Sacrifice of Iſaac. There is ſome Variation in the Form uſed by the Spaniſh Jews; for they begin with theſe Words; Bleſſed are the People whoſe Hearts are ever joyful: After which they beſeech Almighty God to remember the Covenants which he made with their Fore-fathers. They begin to ſound the Horn, and ſay R. Amnon's Prayer, Give Strength to Holineſs; after which they begin to ſound again, and repeat the Trumpet Prayers, becauſe the Word שופרות Shopparoth, is therein frequently repeated; and after they are over, the Ceremony is concluded with blowing the Horn again.

III. A FAST for the Murder of Gedaliah, who was Governor of Judea, and of the Jews who were left there after the Conqueſt of it by Nebuchadnezzar: Many of whom were killed as well as Gedaliah, thro' the Treachery of Iſhmael, 2 Kings Chap. xxv. Verſe 25. On the ſame Day a Feſtival was appointed in the Time of the Aſmoneans to commemorate a Miracle which God wrought in Time of Perſecution. Their Pleadings were then in Writing, and each Debtor was obliged to ſet the Name of God to his Note. Such a Day, ſuch a Year of John the High-Prieſt, and Servant of the Living God. Whereupon their Sages appointed them to pay their Debts the Day following, and cancel their Notes; which was done accordingly; but they were aſtoniſhed to ſee the Name of God effaced. They were of Opinion thoſe Notes were void, and that a Feſtival ought to be ordain'd in Commemoration of the Miracle, Selden's Calendar.

V. A FAST for the Death of twenty Iſraelites, and of Hakkiba, the Son of Joſeph, who had been taken Priſoner.

Tom. IV.

Le SON du COR au PREMIER JOUR de L'AN. ‖ SOUNDING the HORN on NEW YEARS-DAY.

B. Picart. del. C. Du. Bosc. excu.

Le CHIPUR, ou le JOUR du PARDON tel qu'il se célèbre chez les JUIFS ALLEMANDS.
The CHIPUR or Day of Forgiveness Observed by the Jews in GERMANY.

Days.

VII. A FAST for the Sin of the Golden Calf, and the Command which God gave to deſtroy the People in the Deſart by Sword and Famine.

X. THE Day of Attonement. We have already explained the Manner in which this Feſtival is celebrated.

XV. THE Feaſt of Tabernacles. This has likewiſe been before explain'd.

XX. THE Octave of the Feaſt of Tabernacles.

XXIII. THE Day of Joy and Rejoicing for the Law. שמחת תורה. By which is meant thoſe Benedictions with which Moſes bleſſed the People before he died; on which Account the two laſt Chapters of Deuteronomy, and the firſt of Joſhua, together with the Book of Eccleſiaſtes, are always read on that Day.

II. The Month of Marcheſvan, conſiſting of XXIX Days; XV. October.

VII. A FAST, on which they lamented the fatal Calamity that befel Zedekiah and his Children, who were all maſſacred in their Father's Preſence; and he himſelf had his Eyes put out by the Order of Nebuchadnezzar.

XX. A FAST, for the Propitiation of thoſe Sins which were committed during the Feaſt of Tabernacles. This Faſt is renew'd on the twenty ſecond and twenty ſixth of the ſame Month.

XXIII. A GREAT Feſtival appointed in the Time of the Aſmoneans, when the Altar which the Gentiles prophan'd was demoliſh'd, and the Stones conceal'd, till a Prophet ſhould determine what was to be done with them. Upon which a new Altar was erected, the Court and ſuch Places as had been polluted, were purified, and Sacrifices offered with great Solemnity and Rejoicings. Selden's Calendar.

XXV. A DAY of great Joy and Rejoicing, in Commemoration of the Jews Repriſal on their Return from the Captivity of Babylon, of ſeveral Places from the Cutheans, which they had taken Poſſeſſion of in their Abſence. Selden.

XXVII. A DAY of Rejoicing likewiſe, becauſe R. Johonan, Son of Zachai, in his Controverſy with the Sadducees triumphed over thoſe Heretics, who were for eating what was offered to God, inſtead of permitting it to be conſumed upon the Altar, Leviticus, Chapter the twenty third, Verſe the fifteenth.

III. The Month of Caſleu; November, even XXX. Days.

III. A DAY of Rejoicing on Accouut of the Aſmoneans removing from the Court the Statues and Images which the Gentiles had ſet up there during the Perſecution. This Day was conſecrated as a ſolemn Feſtival. Selden.

VII. A FAST, on Account of Jehoiakim's burning the Prophecies of Jeremiah which Baruch had tranſcrib'd: But there is a Variation as to the Day on which this Faſt is kept; ſome obſerving the third, and others the twenty eighth of this Month.

ON the ſame Day they commemorate the Death of Herod the Great, Son of Antipater, who was an Enemy to their Sages, and a Subverter of their Diſcipline. The Rabbi's have given it as their Opinion, that there is Joy in Heaven when when the Wicked leave the World: And for the Confirmation of it, produce ſeveral Paſſages of the Scripture, and the Inſtance of Adonijah, whom Solomon put to Death, the firſt Book of Kings, Chapter the ſecond, Verſe the twenty-fifth. Selden.

Days.

XXI. The Day of Mount Garizim. The Rabbi's tell us, that the Samaritans ſent Ambaſſadors to Alexander the Great, on his Arrival in Judea, in order to procure his Aſſent to the Deſtruction of the Temple at Jeruſalem; and in Hopes to ſucceed the better therein, they firſt obtained the Privilege of purchaſing Part of Mount Moriah. But Simeon the Juſt, their High Prieſt, going out to meet Alexander, the Monarch was aſtoniſh'd at the Majeſtic Deportment of the Pontiff, and ask'd the Purport of his Commiſſion. Simeon anſwered, that it was to prevent the impious Intentions of the Samaritans. Treat them, ſaid Alexander, as you think proper, and in a Moment the Jews ſeized on the Samaritan Deputies, bored their Heels, tied them to their Horſes Tails, and dragged them over Briars and Stones as far as Mount Garizim, which they plowed up, and ſowed with Tares, as the Samaritans propos'd to do by Mount Moriah: And this Day is inſtituted as a Feſtival in Commemoration of that Triumph.

XXIV. The Feaſt of Dedication: At which Time the Altar was purified, which was profan'd by Antiochus. This is a very ſolemn Feſtival, and laſts eight Days, the firſt Book of Maccabees, the fourth Chapter, and the fifty ſecond and fifty ninth Verſes; the ſecond Book of Maccabees, Chapter the ſecond, Verſe the ſixteenth. It is likewiſe called The Feaſt of Lights.

To this Day ſome have added the Feaſt of Judith, on Account of the Addition which is made to her Hiſtory in the Vulgate: The Feſtival in Commemoration of this Victory was ranged by the Hebrews amongſt the Number of their ſolemn Days; and has been celebrated by the Jews ever ſince. Sigonius and Torniel have inſerted it in the Calendars of the Jewiſh Feſtivals. But the Words of the Vulgate are not to be found in the Greek, ſo that it is an Interpolation by ſome Impoſtor, who was zealous to maintain Judith's Honour, or rather the Truth of her Hiſtory. Her Feſtival is not inſerted in the Calendars compos'd by the Jews themſelves, nor even in Selden's, tho' much more copious than any of the others. Sigonius made his according to the Dictates of his own Imagination.

IV. The Month of Tevеth, or December, odd XXIX. Days.

VI. A Fast on Account of the Tranſlation of the Septuagint made in the Reign of Ptolemy. The Jews are of Opinion that their Law was prophaned by this Verſion, tho' perform'd by Jews; and aſſert that God, to teſtify his Diſpleaſure, diffus'd a terrible Darkneſs over the Face of the Earth for three Days. But the Helleniſt Jews, and they who were diſpers'd, had a ſingular Regard for this Tranſlation, as it was abſolutely neceſſary for them, as well as the Fathers of the Chriſtian Church; neither of them underſtanding the Hebrew Tongue.

IX. A Fast, for which they can aſſign no Manner of Reaſon.

X. A Fast on Account of Jeruſalem being beſieged by the Babylonians.

XXVIII. A Festival on Account of the Reformation of the Sanhedrim: The firſt Eſtabliſhment whereof, according to the Jews, is as follows. Alexander Jannæus was peculiarly indulgent to the Sadducees, and introduc'd ſuch a Number of them them into the Council, that ſcarce one of them, except the Preſident Simeon, the Son of Sharach, was Orthodox; and theſe Sadducees were ſo illiterate, that they could not juſtify their Debates with any Citations from the Law. Upon this the Preſident was oblig'd to make an Order, whereby no Perſon ſhould be admitted to ſit in Council but thoſe who could give a Reaſon for their Opinions, and ground them upon the Law. The next Day he propoſed an intricate Queſtion. A young Prieſt undertook to decide it; but finding himſelf incapable, requeſted the Indulgence of a Day's Time to prepare his Anſwer. He deliberated upon it, but to little Purpoſe, and being aſhamed of his Incapacity to ſolve the Propoſition, had not the Aſſurance to appear amongſt them. Simeon, Preſident of the Council, improv'd this Opportunity, and fill'd up the Vacancy with an Orthodox Iſraelite; the Number of ſeventy one being never to be diminiſhed. By this Stratagem he expell'd all the Sadducees one after another out of the Council. And this Feſtival was inſtituted in Commemoration of this Expulſion as ſoon as fully accompliſh'd. Selden's Calendar.

Days.

The Month of Schebath; or January, even XXX. Days

II. A FESTIVAL in Commemoration of the Death of Alexander Jannæus, who was an implacable Enemy of ſuch Iſraelites as were Phariſees. One Day being very much indiſpos'd, he arreſted ſeventy of them out of the Sanhedrim, in order to have them impriſoned, and ordered the Jailer, in Caſe of his Death, to cut all their Throats. The King died; but the Queen ſent his Ring to the Jailer, ordering him to be inform'd, that his late Majeſty was directed in a Dream to ſet the Iſraelites at Liberty; and that his Ring was the indiſputable Teſtimony of his Royal Will. The Sages were thereupon immediately diſcharg'd, and the King's Death, which the Queen had induſtriouſly concealed till her Deſign was executed, was forthwith publiſh'd. For this a Feſtival was inſtituted. Selden's Calendar.

VIII. A FAST on Account of the Death of thoſe juſt Iſraelites who lived in the Days of Joſhua; Judges, Chapter the ſecond, Verſe the tenth.

XXII. A DAY of Rejoicing, becauſe Niskalenus, who had ordered Images to be ſet up in the Temple, died upon the Interceſſion of the Jews. Upon this they began to break to Pieces all the Images he had erected. It was likewiſe reſolved therefore, that a Feſtival ſhould be inſtituted in Commemoration of this Deliverance. Selden's Calendar.

FORASMUCH as it is difficult to determine who this Niskalenus was, and foraſmuch as the Jeruſalem Talmud aſſures us, that Simeon the Juſt heard the Bathcol, or Daughter-Voice, which iſſued out of the Holy of Holies, ſaying, Galychus is dead, and his Decrees are now void, and of no Force and Virtue; Selden takes it for granted, that it was in the Time of Simeon the Juſt, when this Event happened; and that Galychus and Niskalenus were the ſame Perſon: But it is more reaſonable to ſuppoſe that it was Caligula, who was ambitious to have his Statue erected in the Temple; and that they commemorated their Deliverance from his Tyranny and Oppreſſion.

XXIII. A FAST on Account of the Aſſemblies and ſome Battles of the Iſraelites againſt the Tribe of Benjamin, to revenge the Indignity offered to the Concubine of a Levite, Judges, Chapter the twentieth.

XXIX. A FESTIVAL on Account of the Death of Antiochus. Selden's Calendar.

VI. The Month of Adar; February, odd XXIX. Days.

Days.

VII. A FAST, on Account of the Death of Moſes.

VIII. A FAST, on Account of the Schiſm between Hillel and Shammai, and the Diviſion of their Schools.

VIII. A DAY of Trumpets, for Rain.

And IX. As the Holy Land was very Mountainous, and the Drought often occaſioned a Dearth, they prayed earneſtly for Rain; and two ſucceſſive Days were kept for this Purpoſe, one for the preſent Year, that is to ſay, to pray for it for their preſent Neceſſities, and the other for the Year enſuing: For they provided againſt Futurity, and prayed to God before-hand for the Year that was to come. Selden's Calendar.

XII. THE Feaſt of Tyrinus, or Turianus, who having procured Lollianus and Papus, two Brothers and Proſelytes to Judaiſm, to be arreſted at Laodicea, would have compell'd them to violate the Law. The Crime he would have obliged them to commit is clearly expreſſed. They were ordered to make uſe of the Water, which was poured out for them to waſh in, from a Veſſel conſecrated to Idols, and whereon the Images of the Gods were curiouſly wrought; but they refuſed, and ſuffered Martyrdom; in Commemoration whereof they celebrated their Feſtivals. In the Decrees of the Popes, Semacoth, added to the Babyloniſh Talmud, Tyrinus is affirmed to be Trajan, and he is there called by his Name טרניאנוס Trajanus. In the Ghemara of the Jeruſalem Talmud this Feſtival is likewiſe fixed on the twelfth of this Month. But R. Jacob Bar Acha aſſerts, that the Feſtival of Tyrinus, or the Day on which Lollianus and Papus ſuffered Martyrdom, had been neglected and laid aſide. Selden's Calendar.

XIII. THE Faſt of Eſther: But on this Day they commemorate the Death of Nicanor, who was killed by an Aſmonean, 1 Maccab. Chap. vii. ver. 43. This Faſt is inſerted in the Babyloniſh Talmud. Selden's Calendar.

XIV. THE Feaſt of Lots, Purim; or the Deliverance of the Jews by Eſther.

And XV. WE have already treated at large on this Feſtival.

XVII. The Flight of the Sages. Alexander Jannæus, a partial Friend of the Sadducees, and an implacable Enemy of the Phariſees, had determined to maſſacre the latter; but they fled into Syria (or the Eaſt) and went and dwelt at Koſtikus. The Inhabitants, who were Idolaters, purpoſed to kill them; wherefore they fled again in the Night, and this Feſtival is obſerved in Commemoration of their Flight. Selden's Calendar.

XX. FOR Rain God ſent in a Time of Dearth. This appears to have happened in the Reign of Jannæus, whilſt Simeon the Son of Sharach was Naſci of the Sanhedrim, who inſtituted this Feſtival, becauſe God never ſends his refreſhing Rain but for the Merits of Iſrael; for which Reaſon it is written, God ſhall open his Treaſure for thee: For thee, that is, on Account of thy Merit.

XXVIII. A FESTIVAL, becauſe when the Grecian Princes had charg'd the Jews not to circumciſe their Children, or obſerve the Sabbath, and at the ſame Time enjoined Days. joined them to pay divine Adoration to their Idols, the Jews ſurpriſed, made their Applications to a Woman whom the Romans themſelves frequently conſulted, and ſaid to her, Are we not of the ſame Father, and Children of the ſame Mother? Why then oppreſſeſt thou us with ſuch rigorous Edicts? Upon which they ſucceeded in their Requeſt, and for that Reaſon appointed a Feſtival for this Deliverance. Selden's Calendar.

VII. Month Niſan; March, XXX. Days.

The Eccleſiaſtical Year begins in this Month; for which Reaſon the ſacred Writers always call it the Firſt: and the Paſſover is celebrated on the fourteenth of the Moon of Niſan.

I. A FAST, on Account of Nadab and Abihu, the Sons of Aaron, who were conſumed by Fire from Heaven, for putting ſtrange Fire into their Cenſors. It is ſurpriſing, that the Jews ſhould faſt ſo long in Commemoration of thoſe whom God miraculouſly puniſhed for a public Prophanation. But it is ſtill more wonderful, that they ſhould be ſo little verſed in their own Hiſtory, as to place this Faſt on the firſt of Niſan, when ſacred Hiſtory aſſures us, that it happened on the eighth of the Month.

X. A FAST on Account of the Death of Mary, the Siſter of Moſes; and alſo on Account of there being no Water in the Deſart of Iſin, where ſhe died, which occaſioned the People to murmur againſt their Legiſlator, Numb. Chap. xx. ver. 1. and following.

XIV. THE Feaſt of the Paſſover, which continues ſeven Days.

XV. THE Feaſt of Azyma, or unleavened Bread, with which begins their grand Feſtival, or Feſtival by Way of Eminence; for at that Time they were not allowed to act as on the former Day.

XVI. THE Feaſt of the Firſt-fruits which were offered unto God; as Grain, &c.

XXI. THE ſeventh Day of Azyma, and the laſt of the Paſſover.

XXVI. A FAST, for the Death of Joſhua.

VIII. Month Jiar; April, XXIX. Days.

X. A FAST, to repent for the Sins committed in the Celebration of the Paſſover; as alſo an Account of the Death of Eli, the High-Prieſt, and the taking of the Ark under his Direction, 1 Sam. Chap. iv. ver. 11.

XVII. A FAST as the former.

XXIII. A FAST for Samuel's Death.

IX. Month Sivan; May, XXX. Days.

VI. THE Feaſt of Pentecoſt, or The Feaſt of the Seven Weeks.

XII. THE ſecond Day of Pentecoſt is a Feſtival likewiſe.

Days.

XXIII. A FAST, becauſe Jeroboam, who had ſeparated the Ten Tribes, gave Orders that the Firſt-fruits ſhould not be carried up to Jeruſalem.

XXV. A FAST on Account of the Murder of Rabban Simeon, the Son of Gamaliel.

XXVII. A FAST, becauſe Chanina, the Son of Thradion, was burnt on this Day, and the Book of the Law with him.

X. Month Thammuz; June, XXX. Days.

XVII. THE moſt ſolemn Faſt of all; for on this Day the Tables of the Law were broken by Moſes, the perpetual Sacrifice ceaſed, and Jeruſalem was taken.

XI. Month Ab; July, XXX. Days.

I. A FAST for the Death of Aaron.

XI. A FAST, becauſe God had at that Time ſworn, that the Iſraelites ſhould never enter into the Land of Canaan, but ſhould die in the Deſart.

XVIII. A FAST, becauſe the Lamp of the weſtern Branch of the Golden Candleſtic, went out in the Reign of Abaz.

XII. Month Elul; Auguſt, XXIX. Days.

THIS Month they prepare themſelves for their New-Year's-Day, by Waſhing, Purification, and Prayer.

Their MANNER of admitting PROSELYTES.

WE ſhall not enter into a particular Detail of the various Orders of Proſelytes, or of the Figure which they made in the antient Jewiſh Church, this Subject having already been ſufficiently treated on by ſeveral of the learned; [a] and Mr. Baſnage having given us an Extract in his Hiſtory of the Jews, Chap. VI. and VII. of the ſixth Book, of what they have ſaid on that Article.

THE Ceremonial of a Proſelyte's Admiſſion was after this Manner: Having declared his Intention, [b] he was to make Profeſſion of the Jewiſh Religion, and take upon him the Obſervation of all its [c] Ceremonies. Three Perſons inſtructed him in the Law, examined him very carefully, and admitted him by Circumciſion, Baptiſm, and Sacrifice.

AFTER this the Proſelyte was circumciſed, unleſs he happened to be born amongſt thoſe People who obſerved the Practice of it, viz. the Ethiopians, the Natives of Colchis, the Idumeans, &c. for in that Caſe they only drew ſome few Drops of Blood from the Member that was to be circumciſed, and ſuch Blood was called The Blood of the Covenant. Three Witneſſes were directed to be preſent at the Operation, in order to make [a] What Dr. Prideaux ſays hereon, Part II. Lib. v. of his Connection, &c. is ſufficient to ſatisfy the moſt curious Reader.

[b] Baſnage's Hiſtory of the Jews, Lib. VI. Chap. vii.
[c] The Jews had two Kinds of Proſelytes. Thoſe called Proſelytes of the Gate were under no other Obligation than that of forſaking Idolatry, and following the Religion of Nature, as laid down in the ſeven Precepts of Noah. But thoſe called Proſelytes of Juſtice were obliged to obſerve the Law of Moſes, and were admitted by Circumciſion, Baptiſm and Sacrifices, and partook of all the Privileges of the natural Jews; Prideaux's Connection, Part II. Lib. v.

it

it the more Authentic, and after the Wound was healed, the Proſelyte was baptiſed. This Cuſtom, how antient ſoever, or from whenceſoever it might ariſe, ſignified without doubt, that the Proſelyte was pardoned as to his paſt Conduct, and was under an indiſpenſable Obligation to lead a new Life for the Future. The ſame three Witneſſes were likewiſe obliged to be preſent at his Baptiſm: But when a Woman was baptiſed, they were to retire, and turn their Backs towards her as ſhe came out of the Water. The Water was to touch every individual Part of the Body, without which the Baptiſm was irregularly performed. A Sacrifice completed the new Convert's Admiſſion in Judaiſm, after which he was declared and reputed a Jew; he renounced his temporal Advantage, even changed his Name; he was a new Man, a new Creature.

THIS is a Ceremony, however, but ſeldom ſeen now-a-days; for Policy does not permit the Jews to extend the narrow Bounds of Judaiſm by Converſions; and it may be ſaid in their Commendation, that they avoid burthening the Conſciences of Men, by Scruples which for the moſt Part are the Effects of Controverſy. A quiet Life, and a good Trade, are at this Time the ſole Objects of their Ambition.

CIRCUMCISION.

WOULD Modeſty permit us to ſearch to the Bottom of this Ceremony, it might be demonſtrated both by Quotations from the Antients, and Reaſons [a] drawn from natural Philoſophy, and the Nature of the Member on which Circumciſion is performed, that this Operation was accounted conducive and neceſſary to Cleanlineſs, as well as Health. And in ſome of the Southern Countries, [b] the Women themſelves are obliged to undergo a ſort of Circumciſion, to free themſelves from ſome certain Inconveniences.

THE Ceremony of Circumciſion, by God's Will, is become the Sign of the Alliance which he made with the Jews, and is a Symbol of that Purity of Heart, without which the Worſhip paid to the ſupreme Being cannot ſubſiſt. But before we enter into a De-

[a] It is not to be queſtion'd but that Circumciſion owes its Riſe to the warmer Climates. The People of the North never thought of it, the Coldneſs of the Climate making it unneceſſary; and the Sharpneſs of the Humours of the Body much leſs dangerous, and not corrupting ſo eaſily. The Mahometans either borrowed it from the Jews, or retained it as a national Cuſtom, and ſince made it the Teſt and Seal of their Religion. The Ceremonial of it is at ſome Times and Places very odd and whimſical, as will appear by the following Inſtance:

The Inhabitants of Macaſſar cauſe the Perſon who is to be received into the Number of faithful Muſſulmans by Circumciſion, to ſit upon the Head of a Buffalo or wild Ox; and whereas the Turks circumciſe at the Age of twelve or thirteen Years, in Commemoration of Iſhmael, whom they own as their Patriarch, theſe begin it ſooner, viz. at ſeven or eight. The Child is bath'd ſome Time before he is ſeated on this ſacred Head; after which the Prieſt brings the Head, ſets it upon a Mat, covers it with a Piece of white Linnen, and places the Child upon it, who ſits gravely between the two Horns, with his two Hands acroſs his Breaſt, whilſt the Prieſt makes a Diſcourſe like a true Muſſulman, wherein the Macaſſarian Eloquence is not at all ſpared, and the Child encouraged to bear with Patience the Pain of this religious Operation. The great and innumerable Bleſſings and Pleaſures which are both here and hereafter to be the Reward of his Submiſſion to the Law of the Muſſulmans, are laid before him; but at the ſame Time that theſe eternal Joys are expoſed to his View, which are the infallible Conſequences of holy Circumciſion, if he appears unwilling to undergo the Operation, the intolerable Evils he will be loaded with, both in this and the other World, and which are the infallible Conſequences of his Diſobedience, are denounced againſt him. All this Pomp of Eloquence is for the moſt part beyond the Child's Capacity. But when this is over, ſomething more ſenſible than theſe Promiſes are neceſſary. After this Exhortation, therefore, the Prieſt ſtains the Child's Forehead with the Blood of the Head whereon he ſits, and makes him pronounce the Confeſſion of the Mahometan Faith. Then three of the Prieſts advance; one takes the Left Hand, and the two others the Feet. A ſkilful Operator comes forward, holding two Sticks in his Hand, which are very thin and ſmooth, wherewith he draws the Skin, Part whereof is to be cut off with a very ſharp Knife which he holds in his Right Hand. The Prepuce is put into a Baſon, and at the ſame Time buried at the Foot of the Stairs of the Houſes. This is taken from M. Gervaiſe's Deſcription of the Kingdom of Macaſſar; but we have here abridged it, referring the Reader to the Religious Ceremonies of the Eaſt-Indies, for a more particular Account of it. We muſt not omit obſerving, that this Ceremony is very advantageous to the Prieſts and Phyſicians of Macaſſar, and that Prieſts of all Religions are the ſame.

[b] In ſome Parts of Afric, if we may believe Leo Africanus, there are Men whoſe Profeſſion it is to circumciſe the Women, whoſe Cry is, who will be cut?

The Inhabitants of Macaſſar likewiſe circumciſe their Girls.

ſcription of this Ceremony, let us conſider what paſſes from the Time of a Woman's Labour to the Time of the Circumciſion. During her Labour, eſpecially where there is any [a] Danger, a Rabbi is ſent for, to repeat the Pſalms and a Prayer in her Behalf: And in caſe of a Boy, there is extraordinary Rejoicing; but in caſe of a Girl, their Mirth is more moderate. The Father is congratulated in the former Caſe; Vows are made, and the Babe's Health is drank, and from that Inſtant great Preparations are made for his Introduction [b] eight Days after into Judaiſm, by the Means of Circumciſion. But on the Night before the Operation their Joy is doubled, and Viſits are made to the Mother, who begins to be able to bear the Gaiety and Noiſe of Company. No one muſt be preſent that is not of Age, that is, full thirteen Years old. The Circumciſer is ſent for on the Day of the Ceremony, and no Women are to intermeddle in the Affair, they not wearing the Livery of Judaiſm; the utmoſt they are permitted is to cut off the Prepuce, if they cannot get a Man to perform it; and even in that Caſe there muſt be all the Proof imaginable of their Capacity and Experience.

SUCH as are moſt skilful and expert are appointed to perform this Ceremony. Tho' the Office of a Circumciſer is not [c] fixed; yet he who actually is in Poſſeſſion of that Place, may be known by a long ſharp Thumb-Nail.

THIS Ceremony, and the Inſtruments proper to it, are repreſented in the Plate ſubjoined to this Deſcription of it. A Piece of Glaſs, a Stone, a Knife, or a Raſor, may be indifferently made uſe of in the Operation, but the modern Jews for the moſt Part uſe a Raſor. The Child that is to be circumciſed muſt be fomented in a warm Bath; and due Care is always taken to have his ſwaddling Clothes neat, and his Clouts clean; for [d] ſhould they by Chance be dirty, they muſt be cleaned before he can be circumciſed. The Godfather holds him upon his Knees, and ſits upon a Stool with an empty one near him, [e] which is the Place of Honour appointed for the Prophet Elias. A Preparatory Hymn is [f] ſung whilſt the Implements for the Ceremony are ready to be produced. One carries a Candleſtic with twelve Tapers in it, which repreſents the twelve Tribes of Iſrael; two others hold each of them a Cup full of red Wine; a fourth commonly carries the Raſor, and a fifth the [g] Sand-diſh, into which the Circumciſer throws the Prepuce, which together with the Sand is left to the Devil, that the Curſe againſt the Serpent which was conceived in theſe Terms, Duſt ſhalt thou eat, &c. may be fulfilled. Others aſſert, with ſome Appearance of Reaſon, that the Part thrown into the Sand is an allegorical Repreſentation of the numerous Poſterity promiſed the Jews, of which it is ſaid, that it ſhould be as the Sand of the Sea: At laſt comes one with a Baſon in which is the Oil, Lint, &c. Amongſt the German Jews, ſome Friend of the Family for the moſt part carries the Diſh. They never ceaſe ſinging till the Godmother appears, who goes no farther than the Door of the Room where the Operation is performed. After this, the Ceremony is completed after the Manner deſcribed in the Plate hereunto annexed. Leo of Modena has given ſo particular an Account of it, that we have nothing farther to add upon that Topick.

[a] Buxtorf. Syn. Jud. Cap. 4.

[b] The Reaſon for their Choice of the eighth Day is explained divers Ways. Vide Baſnage's Hiſtory of the Jews, Lib. vi. Chap. 8.

[c] Buxtorf. Syn. Jud. cap. 4.

[d] Idem ibid.

[e] Some one expreſly cries out, This is Elias's Seat.

[f] Baſnage's Hiſtory of the Jews, Lib. iv. cap. 7.

[g] In ſome Parts of Germany the Jews conceal the Prepuce, and Sand wherein it is put, under the Almemar or Desk of their Synagogue; but the Circumciſer firſt ſucks the Wound three Times, and as often ſpits it into the Sand. Among the Portugueſe Jews the Mohel or Circumciſer carefully preſerves all the Prepuces of thoſe whom he has circumciſed in his Life-time; and when he dies, they are put into his Coffin, and buried with him.

WHEN

a dish cover'd with Sand where they lay the prepuce:

a little dish containing the plaisters.

a Phial of astringent powders — a plaister.

the Circumcision knife.

Pincers to hold the prepuce.

a Bandage to bind down the plaisters.

a Small Silver Rod over which they draw the prepuce.

A. a Small Chest in which are Contain'd the names of all the Members of ye Synagogue, they draw from thence by lot the Names of Seven Persons appointed to Carry & read ye Law, this Chest is Divided into 4 parts, ye first marked 1. contains ye names of ye Levites. 2 is for ye names of ye Levites as they have done reading. 3 ye names of all ye other members of ye Synagogue. 4 a place for putting in the names of ye latter who have read before B. SEFFER TORA or the Roll of ye Law open. C. ye Roll of ye Law closed up & bound round wt a large Ribbon. D ye Roll of ye Law with its ornaments. E. RIMONIM Silver ornaiments wt bells set upon ye two extremities of ye top of ye Roll. F. Touche to guide ye Reader.

A. Petit Cofre où sont les noms de tous les Membres de la Synagogue d'où l'on tire au sort les noms de sept personnes destinés à porter et à lire la loi. Le petit Cofre est divisé en quatre parties, la premiere marquée 1. contient les noms des Levites. 2. est pour mettre les noms des Levites à mesure qu'ils ont lû. 3. les noms de tous les autres Membres de la Synagogue. 4. place pour mettre les noms de ceux d'entre ces derniers qui ont déja lû B. SEFFER TORA, ou le Rouleau de la Loi ouvert. C. Le Rouleau de la Loi fermé & entouré d'un ruban fort large. D. Le Rouleau de la Loi avec ses ornements. E. RIMONIM Ornement d'argent à Sonnettes qui se met aux deux extremitez d'enhaut du Rouleau. F. Touche qui sert à guider celui qui lit.

When the Wound is waſhed and bound up, the Father returns his Thanks to Almighty God, and begs a Bleſſing on the Child, in which the Company joins: The Circumciſer likewiſe prays for the Infant Jew, after he has waſhed his Hands, and taken Wine, &c. in the Manner [a] deſcribed by Leo of Modena. The Circumciſion of a ſick Child is deferred 'till it is in ſome meaſure recover'd: And yet no one can be deem'd a Jew without Circumciſion, as no one can be a true Chriſtian without Baptiſm. If the Child dies before he is circumciſed, ſuch Jews as are preciſe and ſcrupulous, take off the Prepuce before its Burial, and give it a Name, that the Parents may claim him at the Reſurrection.

In ſome Places all the Company, but the Godfather, ſtand during the whole Ceremony.

There is ſome ſmall Variation in the Bleſſing which is given to Baſtards newly circumciſed, who are thought not to deſerve thoſe Benedictions which are given to legitimate Children.

Some Children are born with all the Marks of Circumciſion. On theſe a ſlight Inciſion only is made, to draw at leaſt a few Drops of Blood from the Part, which otherwiſe muſt have been circumciſed.

It is with this Ceremony as with all others: They inſenſibly acquire an abſolute Power, which degenerates almoſt into Tyranny, and at laſt aſſume the Place of Virtue and Religion.

On the Bathing of their Women for their PURIFICATION.

As Leo of Modena has treated [b] of the Purification of Women, we ſhall only give a few Inſtances of the Precautions and Scruples they are obliged to uſe, in order that the Bath which is for their Purification, may not be [c] uſeleſs. The Water muſt abſolutely cover them all over, and it is better ſtill if it waſhes their internal Parts. They muſt open their Mouths every now and then, extend their Arms, ſtretch their Fingers, raiſe and fall their Breaſts, that no Uncleanneſs may remain about them: And if any Accident ſhould happen to them whilſt they are bathing, no one whoſe Hands are unwaſhed muſt preſume to touch them. The Woman who bathes is obliged to have another with her to teſtify the Regularity of her bathing. This Ablution is accompanied by Benedictions ſuitable to the Occaſion. It is remarkable that the Germans differ in ſome Things from the Portugueſe.

The Redemption of the FIRST-BORN.

The First-born were formerly devoted to the Almighty, and they properly belonged to him, who was ſo gracious as to ſpare the Jews when he deſtroyed the First-born of the Egyptians. Leo of Modena [d] has given us a Deſcription of this Ceremony, which is repreſented in the Plate hereto ſubjoin'd. We ſhall add one particular Circumſtance only taken from [e] Buxtorf.

[a] Diſſertation upon the Ceremonies of the Jews, Part IV. chap. viii.
[b] Idem, ibid. Chap. v.
[c] Buxtorf. Syn. Jud. Cap. 5.
[d] Diſſertation on the Jewiſh Ceremonies, Part IV. Chap. ix.
[e] Syn. Jud. Cap. 6. The Father gives ſeven Florins and ten Pence at leaſt, which amounts to the five Shekels of the old Law.

If the Father of the Firſt-born dies before the thirtieth Day, which is the Time appointed for his Redemption, the Mother is under no Obligation to redeem him. She hangs, however, a ſmall Piece of Silver about his Neck, on which is engraved ſome Words which denote that he has not been redeemed, and belongs to the Prieſt: But when he arrives at Age, he is obliged to redeem himſelf.

The Education of their CHILDREN.

THE [a] Children of the Jews muſt never go bare-headed. They muſt accuſtom themſelves from their Infancy to wear the Girdle which ſeparates the Heart from the lower Parts. The Heart muſt take no Cognizance of what paſſes below it: And the Child is moreover obliged in his Morning Prayer to ſay, Bleſſed be God, who hath girded Iſrael with Strength. If he ſhould unfortunately forget his Girdle, a Prayer is loſt. Thus the moſt trivial Cuſtoms degenerate into religious ones.

THE Jews inſtruct their Children very early in the Study of the Law, and of the whole Scripture. They charge them never to pronounce the Name of God but with the moſt profound Reverence and Reſpect; and exhort them to honour their Parents and Superiors, and ſtrictly to obſerve the Precepts of the Synagogue.

A CHILD is deem'd of Age at [b] thirteen Years and a Day old, and from that Time commences to ſin on his own Account; for before his Father was anſwerable for him. He is declared of Age before ten Jews, to whom the Father gives a particular Account of the Care he has taken of the Child, and concludes with a Declaration, that he waſhes his Hands from all the Iniquities which in his Youth he might be guilty of. The Witneſſes confirm this Declaration, and then the Father ſays a Prayer ſuitable to the Occaſion.

AT eighteen or twenty at fartheſt they are obliged to marry ſuch as are of Age. Thoſe who are ripe betimes, and are ſuſpected to indulge their Paſſions, are married ſooner. Tho' this Precaution is juſt enough, yet it does not always prove ſucceſsful.

The ESPOUSALS of the JEWS.

THE Jew, by the Chriſtian Law, is at Preſent under an Obligation to marry but one lawful Wife only. In the Eaſt, indeed, where Mahometaniſm authorizes Poligamy, he may have as many as he pleaſes, and lie abroad with Impunity, fearleſs of being reproached with beſtowing his Favours elſewhere. In our Climates, it is true, the Husband will ſometimes go aſtray, and beſtow on others what his Wife only has a Right to demand: But Religion, however, does not countenance him in ſuch clandeſtine Practices. Poligamy is an Inlet to a thouſand Inconveniencies. It can ſcarcely be conceived how the Jews prevented Feuds and Animoſities in their Families. There was no other Means, indeed, to keep them quiet, than by reducing their Women to a very great Subjection, if not to Slavery itſelf. However, it is very certain, that the Women have very little to ſay, in thoſe Countries where Poligamy prevails.

THE Promiſe of Marriage is made before Witneſſes, and the intended Bridegroom ſays to his intended Bride, Be thou my Spouſe, and at the ſame Time puts a Ring upon

[a] Buxtorf. Syn. Jud. Cap. 7.

[b] Idem ibid. They who are for making Diſcoveries on thoſe Lands, that Venette has ſo learnedly deſcribed in his Tableau de l' Amour, may make very uſeful ones by the Help of the Miſhna. There one may find at what Age a Child is bound by any Vow, or by Marriage; the Signs of being arrived at Age; what Proofs we are to look for on the Body of him or her ſo at Age; by what Height, &c.

her her Finger; but this Ceremony is not obſerved in all Places. Sometimes whole Months, nay Years, roll away, before they come to Conſummation: But in the mean Time they viſit, they court, ogle, and make a thouſand Proteſtations. Such Love-Toys muſt needs tire the Patience of all ſuch as know no more of Marriage than the Theory. But however reſolute, and fond of the Battle a Soldier may be, he muſt not preſume to attack the Enemies Lines till his General commands him. The Day which the Rabbi's have aſſigned is Wedneſday, which, if poſſible, muſt be in the firſt Quarter of the Moon, or Thurſday, according to Leo of Modena, for Widows, and Friday for Spinſters. And this Day, if poſſible, muſt be in the firſt Quarter of the Moon.

DURING the Eſpouſals, the Bride's Portion is fixed, and the Day agreed upon for conducting her home. [a] Marriage Articles are drawn up accordingly, whereby the Bridegroom covenants to give her a Sum of Money by Way of Jointure, and all his Effects, to his very Cloak, are engaged for the due Performance thereof, but are not liable to be demanded till after the Husband's Death. This ſort of Portion is the ſame for all Maids, whether rich or poor; and the Rabbi's have ſettled it at about fifty Crowns; which they have rated ſo moderately, to accommodate, as they ſay, poor Maidens, and render their Marriage eaſy. The Wife, however, muſt deliver every Thing that deſcends to her by Inheritance from her Father into her Husband's Hands. As what the Husband ſettles on her is not to be paid till after his Death, it is deemed only an Acknowledgment of a Jointure aſſigned to the Widow.

WHEN the Parties have ſettled the Portion and Jointure, and given their mutual Conſent to the Marriage Articles, a ſhort Benediction is repeated, and the young Couple afterwards break Water-Pots or Pitchers, which Action, according to [b] Buxtorf, is an Emblem of Plenty and Proſperity; but as far as we can find, it may as well preſage Sorrow and Contention. We would rather ſay, therefore, that the Company's Joy breaks out in Honour of the Bride and Bridegroom. Irregularity and Diſorder are at ſuch Times very allowable, and add a Grace to the Nuptial Ceremonies.

[c] THE eight Days which precede the Marriage are grand Days: They laugh, ſing, dance, caſt away Care, and give a looſe to Pleaſure. It is as difficult at ſuch a Time for them not to meet with perfect Satisfaction and Delight, as it is eaſy at another to find melancholy Subjects to diſcompoſe them. The intended Husband and Wife, according to Buxtorf, ſtay at home during theſe eight Days.

ON the Evening before the Nuptials the Bride bathes with all that Regularity before particularly expreſſed in the Article of Purification; and the Women accompany her to the Bath.

[d] THE Bridegroom preſents the Bride with a Wedding Girdle, and ſhe gives him another; but the Bride's has Gold in it, and the Bridegroom's only Silver. We ſhall for Modeſty's ſake, conceal from the unlearned Reader, the myſtical Meaning of the Gold and Silver in the two Girdles. But, however, for the Amuſement of the more curious, we have inſerted below Buxtorf's Latin Explication of it. [e]

[a] Baſnage's Hiſtory of the Jews, Lib. vi. cap. 22.
[b] Buxtorf. Syn. Jud. cap. 39.
[c] Idem ibid.
[d] Idem ibid.
[e] Mihi cauſam quærenti reſpondit Judæus argento ſemen virile utpote album, innui, auro vero ſemen muliebre, &c.

The WEDDINGS of the JEWS.

THE Plate which relates to the Explication of this Ceremony contains two Figures; one whereof repreſents a Wedding of the German Jews, and the other a Portugueſe Wedding. We ſhall add ſome few Particulars to thoſe contain'd in Leo of Modena's Deſcription of this Ceremony, and of what paſſes after the Celebration of it. The Glaſs which the Bridegroom breaks and throws upon the Ground, and the Aſhes which in ſome Countries are thrown upon the new-married Couple, repreſent, according to ſome, the Deſtruction of Jeruſalem: But it is thought, and with much greater Appearance of Reaſon, that the former Action repreſents the Frailty of Life, and the latter the little Solidity which there is in Riches.

ON the Wedding-Day the Bride and Bridegroom dreſs in all the Grandeur and Magnificence their Circumſtances will admit of, and the Bride is conducted in Pomp to the Houſe intended for the Celebration of the Nuptials, by ſeveral married Women and Maidens, who are her Friends and Acquaintance. She is firſt bare-headed, and her Hair all looſe and in Diſorder. After this, ſhe is ſeated between two venerable Matrons, and her Friends flock round about her, comb her Head, curl her Hair, dreſs her, and put on her Veil: For her Virgin Modeſty forbids her to look her intended Husband in the Face: In this ſhe imitates the chaſt Rebecca, who cover'd her Face when Iſaac caſt his Eyes upon her. At Venice the Bride wears a ſort of Curls or Favourites, which they call Benetes, in Imitation [a] of thoſe which God himſelf, according to the Rabbi's, adorned Eve's Head with, when he married her to Adam.

THE Bride thus dreſs'd and veiled [b] is ſeated under a Canopy ſupported by four young Lads, or otherwiſe by four Pillars. The nuptial Throne is for the moſt part in ſome Garden or open Court, and there the nuptial Benediction is to be pronounced. The Bridegroom is conducted thither by his Bridemen, Friends, &c. and the Bride too by her Train. The whole Company cry out, Bleſſed be the Man that cometh. Then the young People, holding Flambeaux in their Hands, ſing their Epithalamiums. The Bride turns three Times round the Bridegroom, and [c] he twice round his Bride; which Turns of the latter are grounded upon what [d] Jeremiah ſays; that a Woman ſhall compaſs a Man. In Germany the Gueſts throw ſome Grains of Corn at them, and at the ſame Time ſay to them, Increaſe and multiply.

IN the Plate which repreſents the Wedding of the German Jews, the Bride ſtands at the Bridegroom's Right Hand, becauſe the Pſalmiſt ſays [e], Upon thy Right Hand did ſtand the Queen. The Time for her turning about the Bridegroom is at Noon, and then ſhe is cover'd with a Taled or Veil. This Ceremony, however, is not ſolemnized exactly after the ſame Manner in all Countries; for, according to Buxtorf, the Rabbi pulls the Bridegroom's Taled over the Bride's Head, in Imitation of Boaz, who [f] threw the Skirts of his Robe over Ruth [f]. This Ceremony might alſo repreſent the ſtrict Alliance of Marriage, conjugal Modeſty, &c. Afterwards the Rabbi preſents the new-married Couple with ſome Wine, and repeats the nuptial Bleſſing; and when the Bridegroom has drank, he puts a Ring on the Bride's Finger, and ſays, Thou art my Spouſe, &c. After this, Wine is brought to them a ſecond Time, whereof both drink a little, and throw the reſt upon the Ground. It is obſervable, that if the intended Bride be a Maid, the Glaſs is narrow, but wide if a Widow, the Myſtery whereof I ſhall leave to the Reader's own Explication, and refer him to Leo of Modena for the reſt of the Ceremony.

[a] Buxtorf. Syn. Jud. cap. 39.
[b] Id. ibid. and Baſnage's Hiſtory of the Jews, Lib. vi. cap. 22.
[c] Baſnage ſays twice, Buxtorf once.
[d] Chap. xxxi. Ver. 22.
[e] Pſalm xlv.
[f] Ruth, chap. iii. ver. 2. according to the Geneva Tranſlation.

Vol 1.

NUPTIAL CEREMONY of the PORTUGUESE JEWS.

A. The husband breaking the glass.
B. The wife vailed.
CC. The Wife's two Godmothers.
DD. The husband's two Godfathers.
E. The Rabin. F. singing men
G. A person who registers the alms-deeds promised by the assembly.

CEREMONIE NUPTIALE des JUIFS PORTUGAIS.

A. le Marié cassant le verre.
B. la Mariée voilée.
CC. le 2 personnes servant de Marraines a la Mariée.
DD. les 2 personnes servant de parrains au Marié.
E. le Rabin. F les Chantres.
G. Celui qui écrit les Aumônes que les Assistans promettent.

B Picart delin

C Du Bosc Exc.

NUPTIAL CEREMONY of the GERMAN JEWS.

A. The Bridegroom presenting y Ring to the Bride both being under the Tuled.
BB. The Brides two Godmothers.
CC. The Bridegroom's Godfathers.
D. The Rabin. * the backside of the Sinagogue.
E. A Singing Man with a bottle of drink for the married Couple
F. two boys who go before the married couple with adorned Sticks in their hands.

CEREMONIE NUPTIALE des JUIFS ALLEMANDS.

A. le Marié donnant l'Anneau à la Mariée tous deux sous le Tuled.
BB. les 2 Marraines de la Mariée.
CC. les 2 Parrains du Marié.
D. le Rabin. * le derriere de la Sinagogue.
E. le Chantre tenant la Bouteille pour faire Boire les Epoux.
F. deux garcons avec des Batons ornez qui marchent devant les Mariez.

Fowls of ſome kind or other are always a Part of the Wedding-Dinner, which are ſanctified by ſeven ſeveral Benedictions. The firſt Diſh preſented to the Bride is a Hen with an Egg, and after ſhe has been ſerv'd, the Gueſts help themſelves to the Remainder. The Hen is very emblematical, and denotes the future Fruitfulneſs of the Bride, and preſages that ſhe ſhall be delivered with as much Eaſe as a Hen lays her Egg. The Entertainment is attended with all the Diverſions which are cuſtomary on ſuch joyful Occaſions. The Bridemen attend the Bridegroom to his Bed-chamber, and this is the laſt Act, or finiſhing Stroke of the Play.

After the new-married Woman has granted her Husband the laſt Favour, he leaves her, and comes near her no more for a certain Number of Days.

We ſhall not enter into the Inſide of the new Family, nor entertain the Reader with a long Detail of all the particular Duties of the conjugal State. The Jews have their Doctors to inſtruct them exactly on thoſe Points. It is expected that the Huſband ſhould diſcharge his Duty; and as to the Women, their firſt Concern will be to bring forth choſen Veſſels for the Jewiſh Faith.

Their Divorces.

After their Weddings we place their Divorces, which would ſoon follow the former in Life, did not the Laws of civil Society prevent it; and there are few, perhaps, who, without ſuch legal Conſtraints, would have Religion or Honour enough to bear with Patience to their Lives End, the Diſguſts and Failings which they meet with in each other after a few Months Co-habitation.

Adultery and Fornication are the principal Cauſes of Divorce, and almoſt the only Ones that are lawful. Theſe enormous Crimes were puniſhed in former Times with much greater Severity than they are at preſent; though even then, they very frequently evaded the Rigour of the Law, Inſtances whereof frequently are to be met with in antient Hiſtory. Adultery in either Sex is at this Day capital in Swiſſerland; and indeed Husbands themſelves have Opportunities enough in general to revenge the Affronts of the Marriage-Bed: But why then ſhould not the Wife have the ſame Liberty againſt a diſſolute Husband, who inſults and injures her by his vicious Courſes? And if the jealous Italian be allowed to raiſe [a] Entrenchments for the Security of his Wife's Honour, why ſhould ſhe be denied the ſame Privilege?

In the Sequel of this Work, when we come to treat of Civil Cuſtoms, we ſhall give a Deſcription of the Pains and Penalties inflicted on Adulterers, &c. Nor will this be the leaſt agreeable Part of it.

The Jews have now loſt, alas! the ſtanding Miracle of the bitter Waters; a deplorable Loſs to the Jealous and Revengeful, who would with the utmoſt Satisfaction behold her, who diſhonoured the Brow of her Husband, burſt with them. Their Wives are now no longer expoſed to that fatal Swelling, which thoſe Waters created, and may make Aſſignations in full Security; for the Scandal of Divorce is too trivial a Puniſhment for a Wife of an amorous Conſtitution. Some pretend, that after the Miracle of the bitter Waters ceaſed (which happened very probably about the Time of the Captivity) Divorces grew much in Faſhion, ſince there was no Method of diſcovering the Coquetry of the Jewiſh Ladies, who being free from the Effects of a Miracle, which often prov'd fatal to them, perhaps gave a looſe to Love,

[a] The Girdle of Chaſtity.

and

and obliged their Husbands to have recourſe to a Separation. But by Degrees Divorces grew too common: A bare Suſpicion was ſufficient Ground for them; and the Women, in their Turn, ſtudied how to [a] get rid of their Husbands.

In Proceſs of Time, the Jews being compelled to live under the Laws of Chriſtian Princes, could not put away their Wives ſo eaſily as before; ſtronger Reaſons were required, and the Rabbi's themſelves multiplied Difficulties to render Divorces leſs practicable.

We ſhould here make no Additions to any thing that Leo of Modena has ſaid upon this Subject, if it were not neceſſary to deſcribe this Ceremony after the Manner in which it is practiſed by the German Jews [b]. 'Tis perform'd at the Door of the Synagogue. The preſiding Rabbi places himſelf at the Entry, with his Face towards the Eaſt. Beſides the Parties concerned, there are two other Rabbi's, a Notary and two Witneſſes, who attend; the Elder of whom ſtands on the Right Hand of the preſiding Rabbi, and the other on his Left; the Notary, the Husband, and his Wife, face the Preſident; and the two other Rabbi's make, as it were, the two Wings. The Preſident asks the Husband if he is determined to break off all future Friendſhip, &c. and after the Queſtions are fully anſwer'd, the Preſident and the Witneſſes read the Bill of Divorce, and the Teſtimony thereof ſubſcribed by the two laſt. Afterwards the Rabbi addreſſes himſelf to the Notary, and asks him if he wrote the Bill, and upon ſuch Vellum as was given him by the Man to be divorced, with his Ink and Pen, &c. After which he directs his Diſcourſe to the two Witneſſes, puts the ſame Interrogatories to them, and asks them very particularly whether they ſubſcribed, and in what Manner. In the next Place the Wife is examined. When ſhe receives the Bill of Divorce her Hands muſt be open, her Palms join'd at the Wriſt, and her Rings, if ſhe has any, muſt be pulled off. The Rabbi folds up the Bill, delivers it to the Husband, and orders him to keep it till he is directed to put it into the Hands of his Wife whom he intends to divorce, and exhorts the Witneſſes to be attentive. At the ſame Time he dictates to the Husband the Compliment he is to make to her, who is ſhortly to belong to him no more, which he repeats Verbatim. This Compliment conſiſts in informing her in a few Words, that he will henceforwards have nothing to do with her; and as the leſs is ſaid on either Side upon ſuch Occaſions is the better, the Jewiſh Doctors have been ſo cautious as to cut off every thing ſuperfluous in it. At the Concluſion of this Compliment, the Husband gives the Writing to his Wife, who immediately cloſes her Hands, by the Preſident's Direction, and puts it into her Pocket, or conceals it ſomewhere under her Cloaths, which the Preſident immediately calls for, and reads over again, and again interrogates both the Notary and Witneſſes. This Circumſpection of his is no ways blameworthy; by this Means perhaps he endeavours to give them Time to repent. But a Remorſe very ſeldom happens on theſe Occaſions. When Matters are carried to ſuch a Pitch, they are paſt Reconciliation. If upon this Interrogation there is no Oppoſition, the Rabbi pronounces Sentence, cuts the Bill of Divorce into the Form of a Croſs, and charges the Wife thus divorced not to marry in leſs than three Months. Sometimes indeed he keeps it by him without cutting it.

The Wife muſt have her Face cover'd till the very Inſtant that the Preſident directs his Diſcourſe to her.

[a] Joſeph. Antiq. Lib. XV. Cap. 11.
[b] Buxtorf. Syn. Jud. Cap. 40.

Their

Their Taking off the SHOE.

EVERY Circumſtance of this Ceremony is deſcribed by Leo of Modena. We ſhall only add [a] ſome of the Interrogatories of the Rabbi, who officiates, that the Reader may know on what Points they turn. He asks the Parties concern'd whether it is three Months ſince the Deceaſe of the Husband? whether the Widow was his Wife, and whether ſhe be full twelve Years of Age? This laſt Interrogatory, doubtleſs, is never exhibited but where the Woman is very young, it being prepoſterous to put ſuch a Queſtion to a Widow of Forty. Whether the Deceaſed, and he to whom the Widow has a Right to make her Claim, were Brothers and Children of the ſame Father? and laſtly, whether the Widow be faſting? After the Refuſal of the Brother-in-Law to marry her, the Ceremony proceeds: The Shoe is put upon his right Foot, whilſt, for the Generality, he leans againſt the Wall. Then the Woman, by the Rabbi's Direction, comes forward, takes off her Brother-in-Law's Shoe with her right Hand, holds it up to publick View, then throws it on the Ground with Indignation and Reſentment; and laſtly, ſpits directly at his Feet, who has not the Sneer on his Side; for the Spectators immediately ſhout at him, and nothing is heard but repeated Acclamations to his Shame and Confuſion.

[b] THE Talmud asks how a Woman, who wants her right Hand, can perform this Ceremony? And the Reſolution of the Queſtion is, that ſhe may take off the Shoe with her Teeth,

The Travelling JEW.

WE are now to conſider the Jew on his Travels. [c] Let him be at what Diſtance he will from the Place where he ſet out, he muſt ſay a Prayer with his Face turn'd that way, and repeat ſome Paſſages out of the Scriptures which relate to Travellers, wherein Superſtition has very often a conſiderable Share. There is a Form of Prayer on Purpoſe to implore and engage the Aſſiſtance of the Angels. May the Angel Michael, ſay they, ſtand on my right Hand; may Nemuel go before me, Shaatſiel behind, and the divine Majeſty reſt on my Head, &c.

THEY have a Form of Prayer likewiſe for ſuch as travel by Sea.

The Sick and Dying JEW.

WE ſhall now ſpeak of a much more important Journey, their Journey to a future State. One who is dangerouſly ill, ſhould, from the very Beginning of his Indiſpoſition, conſider, that the Hour of Death is at Hand; and yet it requires a great Degree of Courage to look on the Diſſolution of his Being with Patience and Reſignation; for to ſuch as are taken up with the Enjoyment of this Life, 'tis next to Annihilation.

THE Jew, when he is Sick, and thinks himſelf in Danger, makes an humble Confeſſion of all his Sins before ten Witneſſes. Diſſimulation in ſuch a Circumſtance is of little Importance. [d] The Form of this Confeſſion is alphabetically digeſted, to [a] Buxtorf. Syn. Jud. Cap. xli.

[b] Id. Ibid.
[c] Buxtorf. Syn. Jud. Cap. xliii.
[d] Of theſe there are two Forms in Buxtorf's Syn. Jud. Cap. xlix.

eaſe, no doubt, the Memory of the Illiterate and Superſtitious; for a Man of Senſe addreſſes himſelf to the Almighty, in a Manner different from the Vulgar; and if he ſins againſt a greater Light, he repents with more Judgment. They pray for their Sick in the Synagogue, as we pray for ours in the Church. The dying Man changes his Name, to cheat the Devil, and ſhew he bids adieu to his old Sins; makes Proteſtations, beſtows his Charity on the Poor, and ſeriouſly reflects on his dangerous Condition, in hopes by a ſincere Repentance to procure the Reſtoration of his Health, and the Bleſſings of this Life, or to prevail with the divine Mercy, and obtain Salvation in that which is to come.

[a] AT Venice the Rabbi who viſits the Sick reads the 20th, 38th, and 91ſt Pſalms, to which he adds a Prayer of a conſiderable Length to implore the divine Mercy for the Perſon in particular, and in general for all who are afflicted in Mind, Body, or Eſtate, and then pronounces the Abſolution.

WHEN the ſick Perſon is juſt expiring, and the fatal Moment, which ſeparates the Soul from the Body, is at Hand, ſome ſalute him as they take their laſt Farewel; but this muſt not be looked upon either as a Duty incumbent on them, or as any Conſequence of Judaiſm; for 'tis a very antient Cuſtom, and depends at leaſt as much upon a tender Affection for the dying Perſon, as upon Cuſtom. The Heathens received the laſt [b] Breath of ſuch as were dear to them.

WHEN the dying Perſon is giving up the Ghoſt, they muſt rend ſome Part of his Clothes, which is a Relic of an antient Cuſtom of the primitive Jews. This Rent is generally made [c] on the right Side of the Fore-part of the Clothes, and muſt be about half a Quarter of a Yard long. When they mourn for a Father or Mother, all the Clothes in general muſt be rent on the right Side, whereas the left Side of the outward Garment is only torn if 'tis for a diſtant Relation. There are ſeveral Particulars to be met with in Leo of Modena, which we have purpoſely omitted.

Their FUNERAL CEREMONIES.

AS ſoon as they cloſed the Eyes and Mouth of the Deceaſed, they wrap him up in a Sheet, cover his Face, [d] bend his Thumb cloſe to the Palm of his Hand, and tie it with the Strings of his Taled; for he goes to the other World with his Veil on. The Thumb thus bent ſtands in the Form of Shaddai, which is one of God's Attributes: This is the Reaſon which the Jews give for a Cuſtom, which ſecures the Body from the Devil's Clutches. The Deceaſed in all other Reſpects has his Hand open, as a Teſtimony that he relinquiſhes all his worldly Goods. The Body muſt be thoroughly waſhed, to denote that the Deceaſed purified himſelf from the Pollutions of this Life by a ſincere Repentance, and was ready and prepar'd to receive a better from the Hands of the Almighty. Buxtorf ſays, [e] that they burn Wine, and put an Egg in it, and therewith anoint the Head of the Corpſe. Some perform this Unction at their own Houſes, and others at the Houſe of the Living; that is, in the Hebrew Dialect, the Church-Yard. He adds, that after this Ablution all the Pores of the Body are ſtopped up.

[a] Buxtorf's Syn Jud. Cap. xlix.

[b] Virg. Æneid. Lib. IV. Et ſi quis ſuper halitus erret, ore legam. Stat. Hærentemque animam non triſtis in ora mariti tranſtulit.

[c] From Top to Bottom, whereas that of the antient Prieſts was formerly from Bottom to Top. In Holland the Jews make it on the Top near the Buttons, and at the Expiration of ſeven or eight Days have it ſewed up again. In ſome Parts of Germany the Jewiſh Women who loſe their Husbands are to tear their Head-Dreſs. It is ſaid, that if the Widow intends to marry again, ſhe is only to pretend to do it; for if ſhe actually tears them, it is a certain Sign that ſhe intends to remain a Widow.

[d] Buxtorf Syn. Jud. Cap. xlix.

[e] Id. Ibid.

THE

The ACAFOTH, or the Seven turns round the Coffin:

Les ACAFOTH ou les sept tours autour du CERCUEIL.

Stuart delineavit. C Du Bosc Ex.

The Assistants throws mould upon the CORPS.

Les ASSISTANTS jettent de la terre sur le CORPS.

THE Devotees are buried in the Clothes which they wore on the Day of Chipur. But be that as it will, their Bodies are dreſſed in clean white Linen, and put into a Coffin, with ſome holy Earth as they call it, and a Stone under the Head, or, according to Leo of Modena, a Bag of Earth.

SUCH as in the Life-Time of the Deceaſed neglected to be reconciled with him, muſt touch his great Toe, and beg his Pardon, that the Deceaſed may not accuſe them at God's Tribunal. The Corpſe muſt be laid on its Back.

BUXTORF, who gives us this Ceremony, as it is obſerv'd by the German Jews, ſays, that as ſoon as the Coffin is convey'd out of the Houſe, a Brick, or broken Pot is [a] thrown after it, to denote that they drive away all Sorrow, by ſending the Body out of Doors.

A Benediction, or rather a kind of Funeral Oration is made for the Deceaſed over the Grave; [b] Bleſſed be God, ſay they, who faſhioned thee, &c. O ye Deceaſed, God knoweth, of what Number ye are, and one Day he will reſtore ye to Life, &c. After the Benediction and Encomium on the Deceaſed, in caſe he deſerve one, the Prayer, called the Juſtice of the Judgment is repeated.

AFTER the Coffin is nailed down, ten choſen Perſons of the moſt conſiderable Relations and Friends of the Deceaſed turn ſeven Times round the Coffin, and all the Time offer up their Prayers to God for his departed Soul. This is the Practice in Holland, where the Deſign of the Plate which repreſents this Ceremony was drawn from the Life. When the Coffin is let down into the Grave, they take particular Care to place it at ſome Diſtance from any other [c] Coffin; and as ſoon as it is lodg'd, every one covers it with Earth, either with a Spade, or with their Hands, as repreſented in the Plate.

THEY ſeldom mourn for ſuch as are Suicides, or die under Excommunication. So far are they from regretting the Loſs of them, [d] that they ſet a Stone over the Coffin, to ſignify that they ought to be ſtoned to Death, if they had their Demerits.

FOR the reſt we refer the Reader to Leo of Modena.

Their MOURNING.

THE Jewiſh Diet in the Time of their Mourning may properly be called the Bread of Affliction. Whilſt they are at their Meals, during the Depth of their Mourning, every Word and Action ſerves to revive their Sorrow. They eat on the Ground, and ſit bare-footed. Conſolations are for ever indeed beſtowed on them, but ſuch as might probably be term'd bitter, ſince the impertinent and conſtant Repetition of them only contributes to augment their Griefs. The three firſt Days muſt be ſpent in uninterrupted Sighs and Tears, at leaſt they muſt do ſo in outward Appearance, though 'tis all Hypocriſy and Deceit. They ſtill lament for the ſeven Days following; but their Grief begins then a little to abate, yet ten ſeveral Perſons come every Night and Morning to pray with and comfort the Afflicted, to commend the Deceaſed, to pour out their Grief for the Loſs of ſo dear a Friend, and to beſeech Almighty God

[a] Teſta.
[b] Baſnage's Hiſtory of the Jews, Lib. VI. Chap xxvii.
[c] The Coffins muſt not only not touch one another, but there ought to be particular Graves for each Corpſe.
[d] Buxtorf Syn. Jud. Cap. xxix.

to have Mercy on his Soul. At laſt, after the Expiration of ſeven Days, the Mourner goes to Prayers at the Synagogue, has Lamps lighted up, and [a] diſtributes his Alms in Behalf of the Deceaſed; but 'tis thirty Days notwithſtanding before he is permitted to bathe, perfume, or ſhave his Beard. Naſty Clothes, all over Powder, an affected Slovenlineſs, with Reſpect to the Nails, Beard, and Hair, are the viſible and fulſom Tokens of this thirty Days Mourning, and paint out the Jew as a Man juſt riſen from the Grave. But after all their Mourning is regulated according to the Cuſtom of the Country where they reſide, one eſſential Circumſtance in this Mourning is the Cadiſh or Prayer which the Son is to repeat every Day for eleven Months together, for the Comfort of his Father's Soul, which ſuffers in [b] Purgatory all that Time.

MURETUS, in his Funeral Ceremonies of all Nations, has given a tolerable Account of thoſe which relate to the Jews. As to Roſſe, he is ſcarce worth our Notice, being ſo very confuſed and incorrect. This Author has nothing in him to gratify a judicious Reader, and the ignorant Tranſlator of him has perfectly disfigured the Original.

The COMMEMORATION of the DEAD.

THE Commemoration of Death, and the Reſpect due to the Faithful who are departed this Life, have given Riſe to this Ceremony. The Sight of Tombs, Skeletons, and Funeral Preparations, inſtruct us how very little of the Man remains. From thence proceeds that Veneration for them, mingled with a kind of Fear and Devotion, which, in a Manner, engraves the Virtues of the Dead in the Hearts of the Living, and endeavours to keep up the Memory of thoſe, whom the Worms have long ago conſumed.

THE Jewiſh Zealots from time to time go and ſay their Prayers at the Tombs of their Relations and Acquaintance. Such as have a real Regard for their deceaſed Parents, keep the Anniverſary of their Deaths as a ſtrict Faſt.

CUSTOMS in LIFE wherein RELIGION has a SHARE.

WE ſhall touch upon no Cuſtoms but what have a Dependance on Religion, in order to avoid confounding thoſe which are Civil with thoſe that are purely religious; though Judaiſm unites them more ſtrictly [c] than any other Religion whatſoever. This may be attributed to their firm Adherence to Tradition, which has conſecrated a vaſt Number of indifferent Things, and to the Style which they have aſſumed amongſt all other Nations of the elect People of God. And this has obliged them to diſtinguiſh themſelves from the reſt of the World by particular Cuſtoms, which they have introduced and made a Part of their religious Worſhip.

No Day muſt paſs without reading ſome Portion of the Law at home, nor muſt any Affair be undertaken till they have firſt implored the divine Bleſſing upon it, a Removal of all wicked Thoughts far from them. It is well known with what Precaution the Jews avoid eating any thing which the Law has pronounced impure: And yet ſome of their Devotees carry their Scruples ſtill farther, and imagine Nature muſt be regularly diſcharged once a Day, that what they eat may not be polluted. The

[a] The Jews in Holland place ſix Candleſticks on the Rail of the Hechal, three on one Side, and three on the other, in Honour of the Dead.

[b] The Talmud calls it Gehennah.

[c] This is an Error; the Mahometans grounding all their Civil as well as Eccleſiaſtical Policy on one Baſis, the Alcoran.

waſhing

washing their Hands is an Article likewise of the last Importance. [a] A certain Rabbi has asserted, that there is no Difference between eating Bread with their Hands unwash'd, and conversing with a common Strumpet.

[b] THE German Jew sets Bread and Salt upon his Table, but the Loaf, if possible, must be whole. He cuts it without making a Separation, takes it up with both his Hands, sets it down again upon the Table, and blesses it. His Guests answer Amen. Afterwards he rubs it with Salt, and whilst he is eating it, is as silent as a Carthusian. The Bread thus consecrated, is distributed to all who are at Table. If he drinks Wine, he blesses it as he did the Bread before; takes it in his Right Hand, lifts it up, and pronounces the Benediction over it; and all other Drink, Water only excepted, is consecrated in the same Manner. The Master of the Family concludes with Psalm xxiii. and then every one eats what he thinks convenient, without further Ceremony.

THE Salt, as to the religious Intention of it, is typical of the antient Sacrifices. Meat, without Salt, has no Savour, which is prov'd from a Passage in Job, Chap. vi. Ver 6. This is civil Policy confirm'd by Religion. The Ceremony of cutting the Loaf without Separation, has the same Reason to support it; and a Passage from Psalm x. 3. is a Voucher for its Solidity. The Master of the House holds the Bread in both his Hands, in Commemoration of the [c] ten Precepts relating to Corn; and each Finger is the Representation of one of them.

A MODEST Deportment at Table is much recommended; so likewise is Temperance and Sobriety. Their [d] Bread must be kept in a very neat Place, and preserved with all imaginary Care. They must talk but little, and with Discretion at Table, because, according to the Opinion of the Rabbi's, the Prophet Elias, and each respective Guest's Guardian Angel, are present at all Meals. Whenever that Angel hears any Thing indecent uttered there, he retires, and a wicked one assumes his Place. They never throw down Bones of Flesh or Fish upon the Ground; but, however, this Caution is not the Result of Cleanliness only, but Fear, lest they should hurt any of those invisible Beings. The Knife that cuts their Meat, must never touch what is made of Milk. Whatever they eat or drink; whatever, in short, strikes the Senses in any Manner, must be blessed. They never rise from Table, without leaving Something for the Poor; but the Knives must be removed before they return Thanks, because it is written, Thou shalt set no Iron on the Altar. Now a Table is the Representation of an Altar, at saying Grace before, or returning Thanks after Meat. When all is over, they wash their Hands.

As the Meal began with a Glass of Wine, so it ought to conclude with one. Before they return Thanks, a Glass full of pure Wine is set ready, which is taken into the Right Hand, and a Benediction said over it.

AT Night they must say their Prayers with Abundance of Exactness; but before they begin, they must be reconciled, or at least use their utmost Endeavours so to be, with all their Enemies. When they undress themselves to go to Bed, they must pull off the Left Shoe before the Right, observe all the Rules of Decency, and speak no more after saying an ejaculatory Prayer by the Bedside; and if they cannot repose themselves to Rest, they must improve their Time in pious Meditations. Married People, indeed, who lie together, may lawfully employ their Thoughts another Way; [e] but nevertheless they should lift up their Hearts to God, and pray for virtuous Children. The Head or Bolster of [a] Buxtorf. ex Talmud.

[b] Id. Ibid. Cap. xii.
[c] Id. Ibid.
[d] If we are to believe the Talmud, an Angel condescends to perform the Office of guarding the Bread. Vide Buxtorf, Cap. xii.
[e] Syn. Jud. Cap. xiii.

the Bed muſt ſtand South, and the Feet North, but never Eaſt or Weſt. This Situation muſt be ſtrictly obſerved, out of a due Regard to the Temple and City of Jeruſalem.

We ſhall ſay nothing of Dreams, nor of the Duties of the Marriage-Bed; a particular Detail on ſo luſcious a Subject, though a merry Amuſement, might prove offenſive to the Reader.

There is ſomething very particular as to the Stuffs which the Jews wear; they are forbidden, for Inſtance, to wear a Mixture of Woollen and Linnen in the ſame Stuff. As the Men muſt not dreſs themſelves like Women, ſo the Women are not allowed to diſguiſe themſelves in Men's Apparel. A Jew muſt avoid every Thing that may make him appear effeminate; Jewels, Pomatums, Paint, Patches, Spaniſh White, &c. muſt be baniſhed from the Toilet of the modeſt Jew, and left to the Fops and the Ladies; together with the Glaſs, and all the childiſh and affected Airs, which are the Conſequences of conſulting it. The faithful Jew muſt learn to be upon his Guard, to ſhew a great Soul, and with Patience ſuffer the fine black Locks he had at twenty five, to turn grey at forty five. He muſt deſpiſe the Uſe of Nippers, or of any ſuch Compoſitions as help to diſcolour the Beard, ſmooth the Wrinkles, or fill up the Holes in his Face, or to faſten in falſe Teeth. This is the Duty incumbent on a devout Jew; but we will not ſay, that all of them inviolably obſerve it.

As there are Laws and Rules relating to the Beard, it muſt not wholly be omitted. The German Jews wear their Beards from the Extremity of one Jaw to the other, like a Cord, which is divided by a Tuft into two equal Parts, which falls very agreeably from the Chin upon the Breaſt.

As to their Kitchen-Furniture, they muſt never uſe any Utenſils that a Chriſtian or any other Infidel has made uſe of before them. They throw boiling Water, or a hot Iron into any Tin or Stone Veſſel, to correct any ill Uſe which a Chriſtian might poſſibly have made of it; and if it be intended for Milk Food, a Mark is ſet upon it, to diſtinguiſh it from thoſe which are uſed for Meat, which have their Mark likewiſe. The Knife for cutting their Meat is alſo diſtinguiſhed from that with which they cut Fiſh, or any Thing made of Milk. When a Knife has been any Ways miſapplied, the German Jews paſs it through the Fire, or put it into ſcalding Water.

We ſhall not treſpaſs on the Reader's Patience, by giving him a long and tedious Detail of an infinite Number of trifling Punctilio's concerning their Salt-Sellers, Frying-Pans, &c. their ſcrupulous Method of locking up in diſtinct Cupboards, and ſeparately waſhing ſuch Utenſils as have been made uſe of for Milk, and ſuch as have ſerved for Meat; the Caution that muſt be taken not to cook Meat and Milk near each other, the Choice of Eggs, their Refuſal of Milk, Butter, or Cheeſe, which belong to Chriſtians, &c. The ſtrict Obſervation of theſe Rules makes a particular Study by itſelf, and takes up a conſiderable Part of the Life of the German Jews.

When they knead the Dough for Bread, a Piece thereof muſt be cut off, and thrown into the Fire. This was formerly a Fee which belong'd to the Prieſt, by the expreſs Commandment of Moſes [a]. If this be neglected whilſt it is Dough, it muſt be obſerv'd when it becomes Bread; and if they buy or bake their Bread at a Chriſtian's, they give it a private Mark, or have it kneaded before their Faces. Some Remarks likewiſe might be made as to their Wine, and all kinds of Drink; but we refer ſuch as are more curious than ordinary to Buxtorf [b]. It ſhall ſuffice to ſay, that the Jews ſtrain every Thing they drink with the utmoſt Precaution; [c] for if any living Thing

[a] Numb. xv. 20, 21.
[b] Buxtorf. Syn. Jud. Cap. xxxv.
[c] This Deciſion is taken from a Rabbi's own Mouth.

ſhould

ſhould die in the Liquor, it would be capable of polluting him that drinks it, ſhould he ſwallow it, or ſo much as perceive that it was there: But if he be not apprized of it, it is an involuntary Sin, and he is blameleſs.

IN general, the Laws of drinking, through the great Communication of the Jews with the Chriſtians, are now a-days but little regarded.

THEY obſerve now as formerly the Diſtinction of clean and unclean Animals. The German [a] Jews have a Ritual or Form for their Butchers; but if any Caſe ſhould ariſe which might perplex or confound the Butcher, he is obliged to conſult a Rabbi. The Profeſſion of a Butcher depends on this Ritual, which he is carefully to ſtudy, and be preſent for many Years at the killing of Beaſts to learn the Method of it, and how to judge of their Defects: After which he may be advanced to the Office of a Butcher, and the Rabbi will give him proper Powers. Theſe Formalities are neceſſary in a Religion where the Buſineſs of a Butcher may create ſuch Caſes of Conſcience, and ſuch Scruples as may require a Rabbi's whole Attention. Their Method of killing Beaſts is this:

THEY firſt tie the Animal's Fore-feet together, and then cut its Throat. Immediately after they examine whether the Point of their Knife be not blunted, or the Blade bent; for theſe two Accidents might have frightened the Beaſt, and prevented the Effect of the Stroke: The Circulation of the Blood might have ſtopped through Fear, be congealed in the Heart, and the Animal thereby become unclean. After this, the Entrails are taken out, and the noble Parts are firſt examined to ſee if there be no Defect in them, ſuch as a preternatural Swelling, any hard Skin, or Excreſcence; or if there be no congealed Blood, &c. and ſome Sand is thrown over the Blood, as preſcribed in Leviticus, Ch. xvii. Ver. 13. The Beaſt being killed, and his Blood let out with all imaginable Precaution, his Nerves, Veins, and Arteries, are taken out; as for the Fat, which is likewiſe taken off, it may be uſed, after it is cleared from the Blood with Salt Water. The Jews muſt have nothing to do with the Thigh on account of [b] Jacob's wreſtling with the Angel: But thoſe of the Italian Rite, if we may credit Buxtorf [c], elude this Prohibition.

AGRICULTURE has its particular Obſervations, but we ſhall add nothing to what Leo of Modena has already ſaid upon that Subject.

ALL the Firſt-born of clean Animals belong to God; but as they are not now in a Condition to offer them up in Sacrifice to him, they are permitted to kill and eat them, as ſoon as the leaſt Defect is diſcern'd in them. To ſave the Trouble of keeping them long, they procure ſome Defect to be made in them [d].

The Oath and Form of Abjuration of a JEW, who is a Proſelyte of the GREEK CHRISTIANS.

1. WITH Reſpect to the Oath, the Jew is ſworn on the Books of Moſes, and the Old Teſtament. It is highly reaſonable to attack a Man's Conſcience by that which is the chief Object of Reſpect in Religion, or by that which contains his Rule of Faith.

[a] Buxtorf. Syn. Jud. Cap. xxxvi.
[b] Geneſis xxxii.
[c] Syn. Jud. Cap. xxxvi.
[d] Id. Cap. xxviii.

2. THE

2. THE Greek Chriſtians uſe great Precautions to ſecure the Jew, who has renounced his Religion. What follows is an Extract from Mr. Baſnage of the Form of their Abjuration [c]. The Proſelyte is obliged to declare before the Prieſt, that neither Hope nor Fear have any Share in his Converſion; that 'tis owing neither to Poverty, the Love of Riches and Honours, or any other wordly Motive whatſoever. He is likewiſe obliged to declare that he has been guilty of no enormous Crime which prevails on him to change his Religion to avoid the Puniſhment of it; to renounce in the moſt ſolemn Manner the whole Jewiſh Worſhip, and nominate each particular Cuſtom of his Religion; and to abjure the Hereſies and Sects, which are the Branches of Judaiſm, the Scribes, the Doctors of the Synagogue, and the Meſſiah, whom they expect. After this the Convert repeats a very ample Confeſſion of Faith according to the Doctrine of the Greek Church; to which he adds, That he does it with Sincerity, that he renounces Judaiſm with his whole Heart, and that he will never have any Commerce or Converſation with thoſe whom he has deſerted. He concludes with devoting himſelf to all the Maledictions of the Law, if ever he happens to relapſe into the Errors of the Synagogue.

NOTWITHSTANDING all theſe Precautions to prevent any Relapſes, yet they are very frequent. The moſt direful Curſes have nothing ſhocking in them, when once a Man is fully perſuaded that they are denounced by a Religion which God abhors. We may appeal to the Conſciences of Chriſtians to prove this Fact. Is the Catholick ſtartled at the Proteſtant's Maledictions? or does the Proteſtant turn pale when the Vatican darts its Excommunication-Thunder againſt Hereſy?

[c] Hiſtory of the Jews, Lib. IX. Cap. xxix.

THE

THE

CEREMONIES

AND

RELIGIOUS CUSTOMS

OF THE

VARIOUS NATIONS of the KNOWN WORLD.

Together with

HISTORICAL ANNOTATIONS,

And feveral

CURIOUS DISCOURSES,

Equally Inſtructive and Entertaining.

VOL. I. PART II.

Containing the Religious Cuſtoms of the ROMAN CATHOLICKS, &c.

Illuſtrated with a great Variety of

FOLIO COPPER-PLATES,

Deſign'd by

BERNARD PICART.

TO THE READER.

WE ſhall give you in this ſecond Part a Deſcription of the Ceremonies obſerved by the Roman Catholic Church, which are for the moſt Part very [a] myſtical and magnificent. There are none for which [b] Symbolical Authors will not ſhew a Reaſon and Neceſſity, out of ſuch Books as they imagine [c] of equal Authority with the Apoſtolic Writings; and yet they are not obſerv'd in all Catholic Countries alike. There are ſome, for Inſtance, practiſed in Italy alone, and which are unknown, or at leaſt neglected in France and other Places. We have collected them all with as much Exactneſs as poſſibly we could. But notwithſtanding all our Care, in Caſe we have been guilty of any Omiſſions, we hope the Reader will conſider that theſe Ceremonies are in a Manner innumerable, that the Prieſts themſelves are not able to remember the whole Syſtem of Chriſtian Myſteries, and are obliged to have Recourſe to Books, in order to behave according to the Forms preſcribed them: In ſhort, that the various Circumſtances which attend the Ceremonies of the Roman Catholicks, render the Deſcription of them very difficult and prolix.

Since we have confeſs'd that theſe Ceremonies are myſtical, we muſt of Neceſſity repreſent them to Chriſtians as the external Acts of Religion. We ſhall deſcribe them with all the Veneration due to their Character, and be very cautious how we prophane Things, which are become venerable by Virtue of their Conſecration; and which have, for many Ages, kept our People ſtedfaſt in their Religion. Moreover, we ought to ſhew the ſame Reſpect to them, as we would to our Parents when very antient. We bear with their Infirmities, becauſe of the Weight of Years, under which they are ſinking. All the Difference is this, that the Antiquity of our religious Cuſtoms ſupports itſelf with abundance of Vigour, and will continue ſo to do for Ages to come: They have inherited a ſtrong parental Conſtitution, and even in their Infancy [d] exhauſted their Parents of all their nutritious Subſtance.

The leaſt we can do, is to acknowledge that [e] Ceremonies are requiſite for the common People, and that without them Religion would make but a mean and contemptible Ap-

[a] A great Number of Indians were brought over to Chriſtianity by theſe pompous Ceremonies, when firſt the Portugueſe ſettled in the Eaſt-Indies. Thoſe Infidels were delighted to find Images and other Repreſentations in the Chriſtian Church, attended with the Appearances of a Worſhip which ſeemed not altogether new or ſtrange to them; they gave the Names of Brama, Ram, and Wixnou, to ſeveral of our Saints.

[b] We call him a Symbolical Author, who has given us a Deſcription of, and a Key to the Ceremonies.

[c] Caſalius and other Myſtical Writers often quote the Conſtitutions, which are come down to us under the Name of St. Clement, and other Authors, but their genuine Authority is ſuſpected amongſt the Learned: It is true, however, that the Roman Catholic Ceremonies in general are very antient; and their Antiquity is the beſt Argument we can give in favour of them.

[d] It cannot be deny'd but that Chriſtianity is adorned with the Spoils both of the Jews and Pagans. Our moſt celebrated Authors are of that Opinion. Du Choul, among others, at the End of his Diſcourſe concerning the Religion of the old Romans ingenuouſly acknowledges the Couformity, which there is between the Ceremonies of the Chriſtians and thoſe of the Romans and Egyptians. Caſalius ſays the ſame in his Treatiſe upon the Egyptian, Roman, and Chriſtian Ceremonies.

[e] The common People have neither Time, Opportunity, nor Knowledge ſufficient to form any Judgment of their Belief. Religion is in ſome Meaſure given them by their Parents with their Birth, and in ſuch a Situation they muſt have ſomething that may affect their Senſes, and draw their Attention by its Pomp and Grandeur. This is the Drift of thoſe Ceremonies, which the Roman Catholick Church has preſerved. From thence we conclude that the Vulgar having received their Religion as a free Gift, and which in the ſame Manner they beſtow upon their Children; they may very well be diſpenſed with from comprehending, or fixing their Thoughts upon it. They may love God without knowing him, and pray without underſtanding what they ſay to him; the outward Practice will ſave them, &c.

pearance;

pearance: and though this may ſeem to ſome a mean and groveling Notion, yet 'tis what very well ſuits with vulgar Minds, not able to form more elevated Thoughts on religious Matters. Religion may be compared to a ſtately Structure, in which ſome very common Materials are made uſe of, and ſuch as in themſelves are infinitely below the Dignity of the Building: But there are others us'd at the ſame Time, which are noble, and far above the Reach of a common Genius; theſe are wrought with Art, and the Work is ſo exquiſitely fine, that a great deal of their Judgment is required to diſcern Beauties. Men of Taſte will adhere to theſe, while the others ſtrike the Eyes of the ignorant Populace only. Happy are they who can raiſe their Minds to what is moſt ſublime and myſterious in Religion, and leave the material Part to vulgar aud abject Souls! but few, alas! very few there are of the former. Some Men cannot, and others will not part with their ſenſual Notions.

Of all the particular Branches of this long and laborious Work, this will be the moſt expoſed to the heavy Imputation of Compliment, which, amongſt the Literati, is look'd upon almoſt as ſcandalous, as that of Plagiary. We ingenuouſly confeſs the Charge is juſt, and that we have often quoted long Paſſages extracted from Authors, without any Art or Diſguiſe. We found them to our Purpoſe, and made uſe of them as Neceſſity required it. The Reader muſt conſider, that as to religious Ceremonies, it is of the laſt Importance to deſcribe them, as they are to be met with in their original and unſuſpected Authors; nay, ſo far are we from attributing any Merit to ourſelves upon this Account, that we lay no Claim to the Reflections, which are interſperſed amongſt theſe Relations. Some there are that value themſelves for a happy Turn, or a fine and uncommon Thought borrowed from others. An obſcure and almoſt forgotten Author is with Impunity pillag'd; there is no one will take the Trouble to ſee his Injuries redreſt; but how ſhall ſuch Acts of Injuſtice be prevented, ſince ſeveral of our moſt celebrated [a] Authors are at this Day plunder'd in the Face of the whole Republick of Letters? In ſhort, to omit the petty Larceny Offenders, who ſteal ſlily and in the cleaneſt Manner they can, a Thought from One, and a Thought from Another, moſt Books now a-days may be very aptly compared to turn'd Cloaths; [b] a dexterous Taylor can make them up again ſo artfully, that the moſt skilful Judges of Dreſs ſhall often miſtake them for new.

[a] The Abbe de Bellegarde is guilty of this Crime in his Art of knowing Men, which he ſtole from a Treatiſe intituled, The Fallacy of the human Virtues: The firſt Volumes of a certain Hiſtory of Lewis XIV. are vamped out of the Memoirs of Cardinal de Retz and Mr. Joly; the Hiſtory of the Revolutions of Sweden, by the Abbe de Vertot, has been under Contribution to that of Charles XII. King of Sweden, &c.

[b] The Engliſh very ingeniouſly give the Name of ſecond-hand Authors to thoſe Writers, who make bold with other Mens Works: But we have ſome Men, who are Authors at a third and fourth Hand.

A

DISSERTATION

ON THE

CHRISTIAN RELIGION,

According to the PRINCIPLES of the

ROMAN CATHOLICS.

I. An IDEA of CHRISTIANITY in general.

IT is very natural for Mankind to boaſt of the Merit and Virtues of that Party, which they have eſpous'd; but their Conduct in this Particular is not always grounded on a perfect Knowledge of the Cauſe; but very often is the meer Reſult of Cuſtom, and an eſtabliſh'd Prejudice and Prepoſſeſſion. It would be to little Purpoſe to expatiate on this Topic, and I think it ſufficient to obſerve, that Nothing is more common than this Way of Proceeding in Points of Religion; nay, we are very favourable to ſuch as act in this Manner; and Self-Love makes us indulge them, though they contend for the Cauſe of their Religion, under the Banner of Prejudice; for this is what we ourſelves require from Atheiſts and Libertines, and from all thoſe who may accuſe us of Partiality in any Reſpect relating to the Chriſtian Religion. If they are unwilling to excuſe us, on Account of the Excellence of its Morals, and the Miracles which attended its firſt Eſtabliſhment, we hope for their own Sakes they will judge favourably of us.

IF we conſider the Chriſtian Religion with Regard to its Principles, it cannot be denied, but that they are very obſcure and difficult to be underſtood, and that its Myſteries are above the Reach of human Comprehenſion. The Obſcurity of them, no doubt, is owing in a great Meaſure to the Subtilties introduced by ſeveral Philoſophers, who became Proſelytes to Chriſtianity in the firſt Ages of the Church, and who afterwards becoming Doctors, endeavour'd to explain the Myſteries of the Chriſtian Religion by Arguments borrowed from the Platonic and other Pagan Syſtems of Philoſophy. Their Succeſſors likewiſe (by their labour'd Explanations) added new Obſcurities to thoſe which they found before; and the human Paſſions inſenſibly blending with theſe Syſtems, Nothing more was wanting to render the Chriſtian Religion an impenetrable Myſtery. To this, no doubt, is owing the Origin of that infinite Number of Sects and Hereſies, which have ſprung up in the Church; each of which lays Claim to a primitive Purity of Doctrine, the Characteriſticks of divine Inſpiration, a Right of Superiority, and a perfect Knowledge of the Way to Heaven; and there is not one which (indirectly at leaſt) can forbear damning all the reſt, who diſſent from it.

THE Excellency of its Morals is a Demonſtration of the divine Original of the Chriſtian Religion. It conſiſts not in idle philoſophical Speculations, or perpetual Grimace and Affectation, but in a ſteady Practice of the Duties it requires, without the leaſt View of Recompence from Men; it neither ſeeks their Admiration, nor attempts to dazzle their Eyes and deceive them; and this Practice being grounded on God's poſitive Commands, is entirely conformable to the Conduct, which its divine Founder obſerved whilſt upon Earth. If ſuch as believe not in Jeſus Chriſt would but diligently compare his Precepts with thoſe of the greateſt Lawgivers of Antiquity, and his Life and Actions to thoſe of the moſt celebrated Philoſophers, we are of Opinion, they would be ſo far from looking upon him as a notorious Impoſtor, that they would conſider him at leaſt as a divine Perſon, and one who all along acted by a ſupernatural Power; but we are perſuaded that ſuch Enemies of the Chriſtian Religion, as are known by the Name of Libertines, and are proud of the Title, are actuated by the ſame Spirit as thoſe who attempt to eſtabliſh Anarchy in Government, and to overthrow its Laws. Theſe laſt are for acknowledging no Power at all, but treat good and bad Princes equally as Tyrants; and the former would have no more Veneration for Lycurgus and Solon, than for Chriſt and Moſes, if the Precepts of thoſe Pagan Lawgivers appear'd to them as formidable by their Severity, as thoſe of the Founders of the Jewiſh and Chriſtian Religion.

[a] THE Chriſtian Religion, in Regard to the Practice of it, conſiſts in the moſt exact Imitation, that can poſſibly be conceiv'd of the infinite Perfections of the ſupreme Being. From hence we muſt derive that ſolid Virtue, that Power which it gives us to ſubdue our Paſſions, and that Satisfaction which we receive from the Obſervance of thoſe Laws, to the utmoſt of our Abilities, which God hath preſcribed to Mankind, whilſt the Wicked are attempting to overthrow them, and by their irregular and diſſolute Practices to confound the Diſtinctions of Good and Evil. We may reaſonably believe, that God is pleaſed with ſeeing us copy his Perfections, and comply with his Laws. This Principle naturally leads us to the Acknowledgment of Rewards and Puniſhments in a future State; they being very imperfectly diſtributed in this World, and Men often forſaking, and even oppreſſing Virtue, whilſt Vice is rewarded, we muſt have Recourſe of Neceſſity to the juſt Judgment of an eternal Being. Reaſon alone (were it not baffled and bewilder'd by the Prevalence of our Paſſions, and by bad Example) would inform us, that whatever is repugnant to the infinite Perfections of the ſupreme Being, or tends to obſtruct the eternal Laws of Juſtice, deſerves a Puniſhment equal to the Crime. From whence

[a] See the ſecond Volume of a Treatiſe on Natural Religion, entitled, The Exiſtence and Attributes of God, by Dr. Clarke.

whence it follows, that the Light of Reaſon being inſufficient of itſelf to direct us, there was a Neceſſity for the Aſſiſtance of Revelation, to teach us that the Righteous will be rewarded hereafter in Proportion to their ſhining Virtues; and the Ungodly receive thoſe Puniſhments, which are due to their Demerits. This Revelation is to be met with in the Chriſtian Religion, and the Origin, the Life of its great Author, the Weakneſs and Ignorance of ſuch as propagated it by ſuch Means as they were not capable of inventing, and the Teſtimony which even its Enemies themſelves are obliged to give in its Favour, are convincing Arguments of its Veracity. There is no moral Precept therein which is not conformable to the Perfections of the divine Nature, and which does not tend to promote the Happineſs of Mankind: All its Injunctions agree with our Ideas of natural Religion in its Purity; its Laws have no other View but our Preſervation; no other Motives are made uſe of to prevail on us to obey them, but ſuch as are becoming the Wiſdom of God. We muſt acknowledge, indeed, that this Morality is attended with ſome extraordinary Principles, which cannot be comprehended by the Light of Nature; in order, however, to diſcern them right, let us be permitted to approach them with the Eye of our weak Reaſon, and conſider them in that primitive Simplicity, which preſerved them ſo long from the heavy Weight of Controverſy, under which they have groaned ever ſince. If notwithſtanding, there ſtill remain ſome very great Difficulties, we are at a Loſs to know why they are not removed, in the mean Time a ſerious Inquiry will demonſtrate, that the Characters of Chriſtianity are perfectly conformable to the Attributes of the Divine Majeſty; that the moral Part never indulges Men's Paſſions; that it has no other View than the Preſervation and Happineſs of Mankind; that there never was an Example upon Earth equal to that of Jeſus Chriſt and his Apoſtles; and that none of the moſt inveterate Enemies of the Chriſtian Faith, ever invented any Thing, but what was very much inferior to it both in Practice and Speculation.

II. An Idea of the Chriſtian Religion purſuant to the Tenets of the Roman Catholics in particular.

HAVING given the Reader an Idea of Chriſtianity in general, it will not be amiſs to deſcend to Particulars. We ſhall therefore begin with the Roman Catholic Religion, which, tho' the Proteſtants have forſaken it for ſeveral Reaſons too tedious here to be examined into, neither indeed is it our preſent Province to enquire into its Authenticity, yet Order and Method oblige us to look upon it as the eldeſt Daughter of Chriſtianity, without perplexing ourſelves with any of the Pretenſions of the other Sects. Nay, there is one Thing in particular to be offer'd in Favour of the Roman Catholics, which is, that their Religion is in ſome meaſure Monarchical, and ſubject to the Authority of one Perſon; and likewiſe maintains, that a Separation from it of what kind ſoever, if it deſtroys the Unity of the Church, excludes a Chriſtian from Salvation. It ſeems likewiſe, that according to the Idea of the Roman Catholics, the Church is like a Body Politic: Unity is abſolutely neceſſary in both the one and the other; and [a] if there be any Abuſes, we are to bear them with Patience, and beſeech God to convince ſuch of their Errors as are fallen into them, without following their bad Example ourſelves.

THE Roman Catholics hold all the fundamental Tenets of the Chriſtian Religion. They worſhip one only God, the Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt. They acknowledge,

[a] There is nothing, ſay the Clergy of France in the Acts of their General Aſſembly held Anno 1682, in our Belief, that can offend a reaſonable Mind, unleſs the Abuſes of ſome particular People which we condemn, or certain Errors which are falſly imputed to us, or the Interpretations of ſome Doctors, which are neither received nor authoriſed by the Church, are taken for our Belief.

that that they are to put their Confidence [a] in God alone, through the Merits of his incarnate Son, who was crucified and roſe from the Dead for our Juſtification. They receive with the ſame Certainty, all the other Articles of the Apoſtles Creed. The Proteſtants do not differ with them in Relation to the Fundamentals of this Belief; but pretend, that they have made a vaſt Number of Additions, whereof ſome are repugnant to the Apoſtles Creed, and weaken very much the fundamental Tenets. They farther pretend, that the Roman Catholics are too indulgent in their Toleration of an infinite Number of Cuſtoms, which deviate from the Spirit of Chriſtianity: Whereto the Romans reply, that it is neceſſary to determine how far theſe Practices are pernicious, and to prove indiſputably, that ſuch pretended Additions as are complained of, are in Reality Additions, and moreover, contrary to the Articles of the Creed. Opinions have been multiplied to that Degree by Controverſy, that it is morally impoſſible to decide any Thing with Reſpect to theſe Additions: [b] And as for Cuſtoms in general, they alledge, that they are no Articles of Faith, and [c] are even liable to change, according to the Genius of each Nation.

We ſhall not here enter into the Merits of this Diſpute; but only produce the Belief of the Roman Catholics in its utmoſt Purity, as M. Boſſuet has obliged us with it in his Expoſition of the Catholic Catechiſm, which is ſtrengthened by unqueſtionable Authorities, and is entirely conformable to the Decrees of the Council of Trent

I. "To begin, ſays he, with the Adoration which is due to God, the Catholic "Church teaches, That it principally conſiſts in believing, that he is the Creator and "Lord of all Things; that 'tis our Duty to adhere to him with all the Faculties of "our Souls, through Faith, Hope and Charity, as being the ſole Object that can make us "happy by the Communication of that Summum Bonum, which is himſelf.

"This internal Adoration which we render unto God in Spirit and in Truth, is at"tended with its external Signs, whereof Sacrifice is the Principal, and can be offer"ed to God alone; becauſe Sacrifice was ordained to make a publick and ſolemn Ac"knowledgment of God's Sovereignty over us, and of our abſolute Dependance on "him.

"The ſame Church teaches, that all religious Worſhip ought to terminate in God, "as its neceſſary End; and that if the Veneration which is paid to the bleſſed Virgin "and the Saints, may be termed religious; it is becauſe it relates of Neceſſity to God.

II. "The Church in telling us, that 'tis beneficial to pray to the Saints, teaches us "to pray to them in that Spirit of Charity, and according to that Order of brotherly "Love, which inclines us to requeſt the Aſſiſtance of our Brethren living upon Earth; "[d] and the Catechiſm of the Council of Trent concludes from this Doctrine, that if the "Quality of Mediator which the Holy Scriptures attribute to [e] Jeſus Chriſt, received the "leaſt Prejudice from the Interceſſion of the Saints who dwell with God, it would re"ceive no leſs an Injury from the Mediation of the Faithful, who live with us upon "Earth.

"This Catechiſm fully demonſtrates the great Difference there is between the "Manner of imploring God's Aid and Aſſiſtance, and that of the Saints: [f] For, it ex-

[a] Boſſuet. Expoſ. of the Cath. Doctr. p. 3. Bruſſels Edit. 1698.

[b] They make many other Replies, which we cannot well quote without entring into a Controverſy; whereof this Subject hath produced on both Sides an infinite Number of Volumes; which in general contain nothing of Chriſtianity in them, but the bare Name.

[c] As for Example, there are a great many Cuſtoms in Uſe at Rome, which are not at all obſerved in France.

[d] Cat. Rom. Part 3.

[e] Tit. de cultu & Invoc. Sanct.

[f] Part IV. Tit. Quis orandus ſit.

preſly

" prefly declares, [a] that we pray to God either to beſtow on us ſome Bleſſing, or to deliver us from
" ſome Misfortune; but ſince the Saints are more acceptable in his Sight than we are, we beg
" of them to be our Advocates only, and to procure for us ſuch Things as we want. For " which Reaſon we uſe two Forms of Prayer widely different from each other, ſince when
" we make our Applications to God himſelf, we properly ſay, HAVE MERCY ON US, HEAR
" US. But when we addreſs ourſelves to the Saints, we only ſay, PRAY FOR US: By " which we are to underſtand, that in whatever Terms thoſe Prayers, which are directed " to the Saints are conceived, the Intention of the Church and of her faithful Servants,
" always reduces them to that Form; as this Catechiſm farther confirms in the Se" quel.

" [b] BUT the Words of the Council itſelf ought well to be conſider'd, which being " intended to direct the Biſhops how they ought to ſpeak of the Invocation of Saints,
" oblige them to teach, That the Saints who live with Jeſus Chriſt, put up their Petitions
" unto God for the whole Race of Mankind; that it is meet and advantageous to invoke
" them in an humble and ſubmiſſive Manner; and implore their Aid and Aſſiſtance, to ob- " tain God's Favours for us, through his Son our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, who alone is our Saviour
" and Redeemer. The ſame Council afterwards condemns ſuch as teach a contrary " Doctrine. To invoke the Saints, according to the Opinion of that Council, is to " requeſt their Prayers to procure us God's Bleſſings through Jeſus Chriſt. And what" ever we obtain by the Mediation of the Saints, is doubtleſs through Jeſus Chriſt and
" in his prevailing Name; the Saints themſelves praying through Jeſus Chriſt only, and " their Prayers being anſwered in his Name alone.

" THE ſame Council in few Words clearly explains the Intention of the Church, when ſhe " offers up to God the holy Sacrifice in honour to, and in Commemoration of the Saints.
" This Honour which we pay them in the Act of Sacrifice, conſiſts in naming them as the " Favourites and faithful Servants of God, to whom our Prayers are directed; in the Thankſ-
" givings which we direct to him, for the Victories they have gained, and in humbly praying,
" that he will vouchſafe to ſhew us Mercy thro' their Interceſſions. [c] St. Auguſtin himſelf
" ſays, we ought not to believe that the Sacrifice was offered up to the holy Martyrs,
" tho' it was the received Practice of the univerſal Church in thoſe Times to offer it over " their Bodies, and in Commemoration of them, i. e. near the Places where their ſa-
" cred Relics were depoſited. [d] The ſame Father adds, that it was cuſtomary to comme" morate the Martyrs at the Communion Table, in the Celebration of the Sacrifice, not
" with an Intention to pray for them in the ſame manner as for the other Dead, but rather
" that they ſhould pray for us. [e] The Council of Trent uſes almoſt the ſame Words as St. Au-
" guſtin did, to aſſure true Believers, that the Church does not offer up Sacrifice to the Saints,
" but to God alone who has crowned them; and accordingly that the Prieſt never addreſſes
" himſelf to St. Peter or St. Paul, in theſe Terms, I OFFER UP UNTO YOU THIS SACRI-" FICE; but he deſires their Aſſiſtance, with Thankſgivings unto God for their Victories, ſup-
" plicating that thoſe whom we commemorate upon Earth may vouchſafe to pray for us in " Heaven. This is the Manner in which we reverence the Saints in Hope to obtain
" the Bleſſings of God through their Mediation; the principal of which is the Imita" tion of them, to which we are highly excited by their great Examples, and by the " Veneration and Regard, which we pay to their bleſſed Memories, in the Preſence of " the Almighty.

[a] Part IV. Tit. Quis orandus ſit.
[b] Seſſ. 25. dec. de Invoc. &c.
[c] De Civit. C. xxvii.
[d] Tract. 84. in Joan. Serm. 17. de Verb. Apoſt.
[e] Concil. Trident. Seſſ. 22. c. iii.

" No Catholic (the illiterate Vulgar, or ſuch as are fond of having them continue in " Superſtition excepted) ever imagin'd, that the Saints were acquainted with our Ne- " ceſſities, or even with the Deſires of our Hearts, on Account of which we pray un- " to them in ſecret, by Virtue of their own Knowledge. The Church ſays no more, " than that ſuch Prayers are very advantageous to all that make uſe of them, whether " the Saints have their Intelligence by the Miniſtry and Correſpondence of the Angels, " who (according to the Scriptures) are acquainted with our Tranſactions, being by " God's Decree appointed as miniſtring Spirits to concur with us in the Work of our " Salvation; or whether God himſelf by any particular Revelation makes our Thoughts " known unto them; or, in ſhort, whether the Secret be reveal'd to them in his infi- " nite Eſſence, in which all Truth is comprehended. The Church therefore has come " to no particular Determination, as to the various Ways, which God is pleaſed to make " uſe of for this Purpoſe.

" BUT whatever be theſe Ways or Means, it is moſt certain, that the Church does " not aſcribe any of the divine Perfections to created Beings, as Idolaters were wont to " do, ſince ſhe does not acknowledge any Degree of Excellency in the greateſt Saints, " but what is deriv'd from God; nor aſcribe any Merit to them in his Sight, but " what is due to their Virtues; nor any Virtue, but what is a Gift of his Grace; nor " any Knowledge of human Occurrences, but what is communicated to them by him; " nor any Power to aſſiſt us, but through their Interceſſion; nor, in ſhort, any Hap- " pineſs in them or us, but by a perfect Submiſſion and Conformity to the divine " Will.

" UPON a fair Enquiry into our internal Ideas, with Regard to Saints, it will plainly " appear, that we do not place them above the Condition of Creatures, and from " thence a Judgment ought to be form'd of the Nature of that external Honour which " we pay unto them; external Worſhip being ordain'd to expreſs the internal Senti- " ments of our Souls.

" BUT inaſmuch as this Honour, which the Church pays to the Saints, principally " appears before their Images and ſacred Relics, it will be proper to explain the Belief " of the Church in both theſe Particulars.

" III. As to Images, we are expreſly forbid by the Council of Trent[a], To believe there " is any ſuch divine Virtue in them, as to induce us to pay divine Adoration to them, and " enjoin'd to ask no Favours of them, to put no Truſt and Confidence in them, but to reve- " rence them only in Honour of the Originals which they repreſent.

" ALL theſe Precautions of the Council are ſo many Marks or Tokens to diſtinguiſh " us from Idolaters, ſince we are ſo far from believing as they do, that there is any " Thing of a divine Nature ſubſiſting in Images, that we do not ſo much as allow " there is any other Virtue in them, but that of heightening our Devotion, and revi- " ving in us the Remembrance of their Originals.

" 'TIS upon this Foundation likewiſe that the Honour which is paid to Images is built. " Who, for Inſtance, can deny, but that the Image of Jeſus Chriſt crucified, when " we fix our Eyes ſtedfaſtly upon it, renews in us a lively Idea of him who loved us ſo " as to die for us[b]? As long as that Object before our Eyes prolongs the Remembrance " of ſo ineſtimable a Bleſſing in our Minds, we are prompted to ſhew how far our " Acknowledgment extends, by ſome external Tokens of Gratitude; and by our Hu-

[a] Concil. Trident. Seſſ. 25. dec. de Imv. &c.
[b] Galat. ii.

" miliations

" miliations before the Image, we ſignify how high our Devotion riſes to its divine " Original. To ſpeak therefore preciſely, and in the Stile of the Church, when we " honour the Image of an Apoſtle, or a Martyr, our Intention is not ſo much to re- " verence the Image, as to honour the Apoſtle, or Martyr, in its Preſence. Theſe are " the Words of the Roman Pontifical [a]; and the Council of Trent likewiſe expreſſes itſelf " in much the ſame Terms.

" In ſhort, the Senſe in which the Church honours Images, may be fully underſtood " by the Reverence which ſhe pays to the Croſs and to the New Teſtament. Every " one knows that when the Members of the Church bow down before the former, they " worſhip him, [b] who bore our Tranſgreſſions on the Wood of the Croſs; and that if they " bow before the latter, when they ſtand up in Honour to it, and kiſs it with " Reverence, all ſuch Teſtimonies of Reſpect terminate in thoſe eternal Truths, which " are contain'd in it.

" The Reſpect which is paid to Relics, in Imitation of the primitive Church, muſt " be underſtood in the ſame Manner. We look upon the Bodies of the Saints, as ha- " ving been Victims offered up to God by Martyrdom or Penance, without any Ways " diminiſhing that Duty and Reſpect, which we owe to God himſelf, &c.

" Nothing can be more unjuſt than to charge the Church with making all Piety " conſiſt in this her Devotion to the Saints, ſince the Council of Trent, as we have al- " ready obſerv'd, only aſſures the Faithful that this Cuſtom is [c] good and advantageous, " without any further Additions. The Church therefore only condemns ſuch as reject " this Practice, either out of Contempt, or Error; and, indeed, they ought to be con- " demn'd, ſince the Church is not to permit wholſome Cuſtoms to be deſpiſed, nor a " Doctrine which has been authorized by Antiquity, to be condemned by new " Teachers.

" IV. [d] As to the Point of Juſtification, we believe, That our Sins are freely remit- " ted by the divine Mercy, for the Sake of Jeſus Chriſt; [e] and that we are ſaid to be " freely juſtified, becauſe neither Faith nor good Works, which precede our Juſtification, " can merit that Favour.

" We believe, that our Sins are not only cover'd, but perfectly obliterated by the " Blood of Chriſt, and by the Grace of Regeneration, which far from depreciating the " Idea which we ought to have of the Merits of that Blood, on the contrary ſtrength- " ens and improves it.

" Thus the Righteouſneſs of Jeſus Chriſt is not only imputed to his faithful Servants, " but actually communicated to them by the Influence of the holy Spirit; ſo that " they are not only reputed juſt, but even ſanctified by his Grace.

" If our Righteouſneſs were Righteouſneſs only in the Eyes of Men, it would not " be the Operation of the Holy Ghoſt; it is a Righteouſneſs therefore even before God, " ſince God himſelf, by repleniſhing our Hearts with Charity, creates it in us.

" Our Righteouſneſs, however, is not complete, becauſe we are oblig'd to ſtruggle " with our worldly Luſts; the continual Sighs therefore of a Soul that repents of its

[a] V. Pont. Rom. de bened. Imag. Seſſ. 25. dec. de Inv. &c.
[b] 1 Pet. ii.
[c] Seſſ. 25. dec. de Inv. &c.
[d] Concil. Trident. Seſſ. 6. c. ix.
[e] Ibid. c. ii.

" Sins,

" Sins is the moſt neceſſary Duty of Chriſtian Righteouſneſs, and this obliges us to " acknowledge that our Righteouſneſs in this Life, conſiſts rather in the Forgiveneſs of " our Sins, than in the Perfection of our Virtues.

V. " As to the Merit of good Works, the Catholic Church teaches, that eternal " Life ought to be propoſed to the Children of God, both as a Grace mercifully promiſed " them by the Means and Mercies of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and as a Reward faithfully " beſtowed on them for their good Works and Merits, in Conſequence of that Promiſe. " Theſe are the expreſs Terms of the Council of Trent. But that the Pride of Man- " kind ſhould not flatter itſelf with the Idea of a preſumptuous Merit, [a] the ſame Coun- " cil teaches, That the whole Worth and Value of Chriſtian Works ariſes from a ſanc- " tifying Grace, which is freely granted us in the Name of Jeſus Chriſt; and is the Re- " ſult of that conſtant Influence which this divine Head has upon his Members.

" And it is manifeſt from the Precepts, Admonitions, Promiſes, Threatnings and Re- " proofs of the Goſpel, that we muſt work out our Salvation by the Motions of our " Will, with the Grace of God which aſſiſts us: But we are to lay it down as a firſt " Principle, that Free-Will can conduct us to our everlaſting Happineſs, no farther, than " as it is actuated and raiſed up by the Holy Ghoſt, &c.

" We openly declare, that we cannot be acceptable to God, but in and through Jesus " Christ, nor do we apprehend how any other Senſe can be imputed to our Belief. " We ſo perfectly place all the Hopes of our Salvation in him alone, that we daily di- " rect the following Petition to God in the Sacrifice: Vouchſafe, O God, to grant unto us " Sinners, thy Servants, who truſt in the Multitude of thy Mercies, ſome Share and Society " with thy bleſſed Apoſtles and Martyrs, into the Number of whom we beſeech thee to re- " ceive us, having no Regard to our own Merit; but pardoning us thro' thy Grace in the " Name of Jesus Christ our Lord.

" The Catholics, without Exception, teach, that Jeſus Chriſt only, who was both " God and Man, was able by the infinite Dignity of his Perſon to offer up a ſuf- " ficient Satisfaction to God for our Sins; but having made an abundant Recompence " for them, he had Power to apply that infinite Satisfaction to us two ſeveral Ways; " either by an abſolute Remiſſion, without the leaſt Reſerve of any Penalty; or by ex- " changing a Greater for a Leſs, that is to ſay, an eternal into a temporal Puniſhment. " As the firſt is the moſt perfect and conformable to his divine Goodneſs, he makes uſe " of that firſt of all, in the Sacrament of Baptiſm: And we believe, that he uſes the ſecond " in the Forgiveneſs which he grants to ſuch as after Baptiſm relapſe into Sin, he being " in ſome meaſure compelled thereto, through the Ingratitude of thoſe who have abuſed " his firſt Favours: For which Reaſon they are to ſuffer ſome temporal Puniſhment, " tho' the eternal be taken off.

" We are not from thence, however, to conclude, that Jeſus Chriſt has not made " a complete Satisfaction for us: But on the contrary, that as he has gained an abſolute " Right over us, by the infinite Price which he paid for our Salvation, ſo he forgives us our " Tranſgreſſions upon ſuch Terms, and under ſuch Laws and Reſtrictions, as he thinks " convenient.

" We ſhould be highly unjuſt, as well as ungrateful to our Saviour, were we ſo pre- " ſumptuous as to queſtion his infinite Merit, under Pretence, that tho' he has forgi- " ven us Adam's Tranſgreſſion, yet he has not at the ſame Time exempted us from all " the Conſequences of it; leaving us ſtill liable to Death, and to ſo many other temporal

[a] Ibid.

" and

" and ſpiritual Infirmities which that Sin has created. It is ſufficient for us, that Jeſus Chriſt
" once paid the Price, by which we ſhall one Day be totally freed from all thoſe Evils
" with which we are now oppreſs'd. It is our Duty to receive every Part of his Favour,
" with Humility and Thankfulneſs, conſidering the Steps whereby he is pleaſed to pro" mote our Deliverance, in ſuch a Manner as his Wiſdom has appointed for our Welfare,
" and for a more clear Manifeſtation of his Goodneſs and Juſtice.

" For the ſame Reaſon we ought not to be ſurpris'd, that he who has been ſo in" dulgent to us in our Baptiſm, ſhould become more reſerved after we have violated
" our firſt moſt ſacred Engagements. It is juſt, and even good for us, that God, in for" giving the Sin, together with the everlaſting Puniſhment, which we had juſtly de" ſerved, ſhould lay us under ſome temporal Affliction, were it only to confine us to
" our Duty; leſt by too eaſily throwing off all the Ties of Juſtice, we ſhould grow
" preſumptuous, and make an ill Uſe of that Pardon, which we had ſo freely ob" tained.

" In order therefore to ſatisfy that Obligation, we are ſubject to certain Penances
" which ought to be performed on our Parts with Repentance and Humiliation; and it " is the Neceſſity of theſe Works of Expiation which obliged the Primitive Church to " inflict thoſe Puniſhments upon Penitents that are term'd Canonical.

" When the Church, therefore, impoſes thoſe painful and laborious Penances upon " Sinners, and they undergo them with Patience and Humility, this is called Satisfac" tion; and when the Church ſhews any Regard either to the ardent Devotion of the " Penitents, or to other good Works which ſhe preſcribes; and remits any Part of the " Puniſhment due to them, that is term'd Indulgence.

" [a] The Council of Trent propoſes nothing more relating to Indulgences; but that the " Church had the Power of granting them from Jeſus Chriſt, and that the Practice of them is
" wholſome; which Cuſtom, that Council adds, ought ſtill to be preſerved, tho' with Mode-
" ration, leſt Eccleſiaſtical Diſcipline ſhould be weakened by too great a Toleration: From " whence 'tis manifeſt, that the Articles of Indulgences only regards Diſcipline.

" Such as depart this Life in Peace and Charity, and are notwithſtanding ſubject
" to thoſe temporal Puniſhments which divine Juſtice has reſerved for them, muſt ſuf-
" fer them in the other World; and the whole Chriſtian Church in the earlieſt Ages
" did for that Reaſon offer up both Prayers, Alms, and Sacrifices for the Faithful departed
" in Peace, and in the Communion of the Church, with a lively Hope and Expectation
" of their being relieved by thoſe Acts of Devotion. [b] This is what the Council of Trent
" propoſes we ſhould believe with Reſpect to Souls confined in Purgatory, without de" termining either the Nature of their Puniſhments, or ſeveral other Things of the like " kind; in Regard to which that holy Council exacts abundance of Precaution, con" demning thoſe who ſay any Thing that is uncertain and precarious.

" The Sacraments of the New Teſtament are not only ſacred Tokens of Grace, or " Seals which confirm it to us, but Inſtruments of the Holy Ghoſt, which apply and " confer it on us by Vertue of the Words pronounced, and the outward Action per" formed on our Behalf, provided we do not prevent the Effects of it by our own evil
" Diſpoſitions.

" When God annexes ſo high a Prerogative to external Signs, which in their Nature bear
" no Proportion to ſuch excellent Effects, he plainly ſignifies that, beſides all that we

[a] Contin. Seſſ. 25. dec. de Indulg.
[b] Seſſ. 25. de Purg.

" can do inwardly thro' our good Inclinations, a ſpecial Operation of the Holy Ghoſt,
" and a particular Application of the Merits of our bleſſed Saviour, repreſented to us by
" the Sacraments, muſt ſtill intervene to ſanctify us. This Doctrine therefore cannot be " rejected without offering an Indignity to the Merit of JESUS CHRIST; and to the In" fluence of the divine Power in our Regeneration.

" WE acknowledge ſeven Signs or Sacraments ordain'd by Jeſus Chriſt as the ordinary " Means by which the New Man is ſanctified and made perfect. Their divine Inſtitu-
" tion appears from the ſacred Scriptures, either by the expreſs Words of Jeſus Chriſt
" himſelf, or by Grace, which according thereto, is annexed to them, and denotes of " Neceſſity an Order from God.

" [a] As Infants cannot ſupply the Defects of Baptiſm, by Acts of Faith, Hope, and " Charity, or by any Vow hereafter to receive that Sacrament, we believe, that if they do " not actually receive it, they are in no wiſe Partakers of the Grace of Redemption;
" and ſo dying in the Guilt of Adam, have no Share at all in Jeſus Chriſt.

" [b] IMPOSITION of Hands practiſed by the bleſſed Apoſtles, for the Confirmation of " the Faithful againſt Perſecutions, having its chief Effect in the internal Deſcent of the " Holy Ghoſt, and the Infuſion of his gracious Gifts, ought not to have been rejected
" by our Adverſaries on Pretence that the Holy Ghoſt does not at preſent deſcend viſibly
" upon us. And indeed all Chriſtian Churches down from the Apoſtles, have religiouſly
" preſerved that Practice, making uſe likewiſe of the ſacred Ointment in Baptiſm, to ſhew
" the Virtue of that Sacrament by a more expreſs Repreſentation of the Unction of the " Holy Ghoſt.

" [c] WE believe that it was the Will of Jeſus Chriſt, that thoſe who have ſubmitted
" themſelves to the Authority of the Church by Baptiſm, and have afterwards violated
" the Laws of the Goſpel ſhall be ſubject to the Deciſion of the ſame Church in the " Tribunal of Penance, [d] where ſhe exerciſes the full Power granted her of Abſolution
" and Remiſſion of Sins.

" THE Terms of the Commiſſion which is given to the Miniſters of the Church, to " forgive Sins, are ſo general that it would be preſumptuous to reduce it only to " public Sins; and as when they pronounce Abſolution in the Name of Jeſus Chriſt, they " only obſerve the expreſs Terms of that Commiſſion, ſo the Sentence is looked upon as " paſs'd by Jeſus Chriſt himſelf, in whoſe Name they are appointed Judges. He is " the inviſible High Prieſt, who abſolves the Penitent inwardly, whilſt the Prieſt performs
" the ſame Office externally.

" As this judiciary Power is a Reſtraint on Licentiouſneſs ſo neceſſary; ſuch a plen" tiful Spring of wiſe Counſels, and ſo ſenſible a Conſolation to thoſe who are ſorry for " their Sins, when their Abſolution is not only pronounced to them in general Terms,
" after the manner of the Reformed Miniſters, but they are effectually forgiven by
" the Authority of Jeſus Chriſt, after a particular Examination and Knowledge of the " Cauſe, we cannot imagine, that our Enemies can look on the Loſs of ſo many Ad" vantages, without ſome Regret, and being in ſome meaſure aſhamed of a Reformation
" which has rejected ſo pious and wholſome a Practice.

[a] Baptiſm.
[b] Confirmation, Acts viii. 15, 17.
[c] Penance and Sacramental Confeſſion.
[d] Mat. xviii. 18. John xx. 23.

" [a] THE Holy Ghoſt having annexed to extreme Unction (according to St. James) " an expreſs Promiſe of Remiſſion of Sins, and Relief of the Sick, there can be No- " thing wanting to make this ſacred Ceremony a real Sacrament. [b] 'Tis to be obſerv'd, " however, that the ſick Perſon, according to the Doctrine of the Council of Trent, " receives more Conſolation and Relief in Soul than in Body; and as ſpiritual Benefit " is ever the principal Object of the new Law, it is that which we muſt chiefly expect " from this holy Unction, in caſe we are duly prepared for it; whereas corporal Relief in " Sickneſs is only granted unto us with Reſpect to our eternal Salvation, according to the " ſecret Deſigns of divine Providence, and the different Degrees of Preparation and " Faith, which are to be met with in the Faithful.

" [c] UPON our conſidering, that Jeſus Chriſt has given a new Turn to the holy State of " Marriage, [d] by reducing it to the conſtant and indiſſoluble Union of two Perſons only; " and likewiſe reflecting that this inſeparable Union is a Mark or Token of his eternal " Union with his Church, it will be very eaſy to comprehend, that the Marriage of the " Faithful is attended with the Holy Ghoſt and the Grace of God; and we ought to " extol and magnify the divine Goodneſs, for having thus conſecrated the very Princi- " ples of our Birth.

" [e] THE Impoſition of Hands, which our ſpiritual Miniſters receive, being attended " with ſo immediate an Influence from the Holy Ghoſt, [f] and with ſo perfect an Infu- " ſion of Grace, ought to be reckon'd alſo among the Number of Sacraments.

" [g] THE real Preſence of the Body and Blood of Jeſus Chriſt in the Sacrament of the " Euchariſt, is firmly eſtabliſh'd by the Words of the Inſtitution, which we underſtand " in the literal Senſe; and to ask us the Reaſon why we do ſo, would be as impertı- " nent as to ask a Traveller why he follows the high Road. There is Nothing in the " Words which Jeſus Chriſt makes uſe of in the Inſtitution of this Myſtery, that in- " duces us to take them in a figurative Senſe; and this Reaſon is ſufficient, in our Opi- " nion, to determine us in Favour of the former. But we are ſtill more confirm'd in " this Belief, when we reflect on the Deſign of the Son of God in this Myſtery, which " I ſhall endeavour to explain as clearly as poſſible, and upon ſuch Principles as I " imagine cannot be diſallowed of.

" [h] 'TIS evident, therefore, that theſe Words of our Saviour, Take, eat, this is my " Body which is given for you, ſhew us, that as the antient Jews were not only united " in Spirit at the Sacrifice of the Victims which were offer'd up for them; but were " alſo Partakers of the Fleſh which was ſacrificed, which was a Sign to them of the " Share they had in that Oblation; ſo Jeſus Chriſt having offered up himſelf a Sacri- " fice for us, it was his Pleaſure that we ſhould in Reality partake of the Fleſh of " that adorable Victim, that the actual Communication thereof might be a laſting Teſ- " timony to each of us in particular, that he had not only aſſumed his Body, but made " a Sacrifice of it for us.

" [i] GOD commanded the Jews not to eat of the Sin-Offering, to ſhew them thereby " that there was no real Expiation made for Crimes, either under the Law, or by the

[a] Extreme Unction, Jam v. 14.
[b] Seſſ. 14. c. 2. de Sac. extr. Unct.
[c] Matrimony.
[d] Mat. xix. 5. Eph. v. 32.
[e] Holy Orders.
[f] 1 Tim. iv. 2 Tim. i.
[g] The Euchariſt.
[h] Mat. xvi. Luke xxii.
[i] Levit. vi. 30.

" Blood

" Blood of Animals; and all the People were under an Interdict as it were, by that " Prohibition, ſo that they could have no actual Share in the Remiſſion of Sins. Now " by a Reaſon directly the reverſe, it was requiſite that the Body of our Bleſſed Saviour, " which was a true Sacrifice offered up for our Sins, ſhould be eaten by the Faithful, " to denote, that the Remiſſion of Sins was thereby fulfilled, under the New Teſta- " ment.

" [a] God likewiſe forbad the Jews to eat any Blood; and one Reaſon for that Prohi- " bition was this, That Blood was given for the Expiation of our Souls; but, on the " contrary, our Saviour directs us to drink his Blood, becauſe [b] it was ſhed for the Re- " miſſion of Sins.

" Thus the eating of the Body, and drinking the Blood of the Son of God, is " as real at the holy Communion, as Grace, Expiation of Sins, and Participation of " the Sacrifice of Jeſus Chriſt, is actual and effectual under the new Covenant.

" As he was willing, however, to try our Faith in this Myſtery, and free us at the " ſame Time from the Horror of eating his Fleſh, and drinking his Blood, under their " proper Species, it was neceſſary for him to give them to us, diſguis'd under a Species " of another Nature; and if theſe Conſiderations induc'd him to let us eat the Fleſh " of our Sacrifice in another Manner than the Jews did, yet he was not for that Rea- " ſon oblig'd to take any Thing away from the Reality and Subſtance of it.

" It appears therefore, that for the Accompliſhment of the ancient Types, and in " order to put us into the actual Poſſeſſion of the Sacrifice that was offered up for our " Sins, it was Jeſus Chriſt's Intention to give us in Reality his Body and Blood, which " cannot be denied..... We can never agree, that thoſe Words ſhould be receiv'd on- " ly in a figurative Senſe, becauſe the Son of God, who was ſo careful to explain " every Thing to his Apoſtles, which he taught them under Parables and Figures, ſaid " Nothing of that Kind to explain this Matter; and it is evident from thence, that " he left theſe Words in their natural Signification. It is as eaſy for the Son of God " to cauſe his Body to be in the Euchariſt, by ſaying, This is my Body, as to cure a " Woman of her Diſeaſe by ſaying, [c] Woman, be thou free from thine Infirmity; or to " preſerve a young Man's Life, by ſaying to his Father, [d] Thy Son liveth; or, in ſhort, " to pardon the Sins of him who was ſick of the Palſy, by ſaying to him, [e] Thy Sins " are forgiven thee.

" Without enquiring therefore into the Manner how Jeſus Chriſt performs " his Word, we ſtick to the literal Senſe of it; for he who does whatever he pleaſes, " can by his Word bring whatever he ſays to paſs; nay, it had been eaſier for the Son " of God to ſtrain the Laws of Nature to confirm his Words, than for us to reconcile " our Senſe to forc'd Conſtructions, which overthrow all the Laws of Speech.

" These Laws of Speech inform us, that ſuch Signs as naturally expreſs " and ſtand for any Thing, often aſſume the Name of the Thing ſo repre- " ſented; becauſe it is natural for them, as it were, to raiſe the Idea thereof in the " Mind. The ſame Thing happens likewiſe in Signs of Inſtitution, though with ſome " Reſtrictions, when once they are received, and we are accuſtom'd to them; but " when any Sign is eſtabliſh'd, which of itſelf bears no Affinity to the Thing ſignified,

[a] Levit. xvii. 11.
[b] Mat. xxvii. 28.
[c] Luke xiii. 12.
[d] John iv. 50.
[e] Mat. ix. 2.

" as for Example; for a Piece of Bread to repreſent the Body of a Man, to have a " Name given it without any Interpretation, and before any one has agreed upon it, " as Jeſus Chriſt did in his holy Supper, is a Thing unheard of; and we find no " Precedent of it in all the ſacred Scriptures; nay, we might venture to ſay, in all the " Books that were ever wrote.

" HAVING laid down the Tenets of the Church relating to theſe Words of Jeſus " Chriſt, This is my Body, we muſt inform you of her Opinion concerning thoſe which " he added to them, [a] This do in Remembrance of me. It is evident that it was the De- " ſign of the Son of God to oblige us thereby to commemorate the Death which he " ſuffered for our Salvation; and St. Paul concludes from this Paſſage, that we exhibit " the Death of the Lord in that Myſtery. Now we muſt not perſuade ourſelves, that " this Commemoration of our Lord's Death excludes the real Preſence of his Body; on " the contrary, if we reflect on what we have juſt explain'd, it will evidently appear, " that this Remembrance is grounded upon the real Preſence; for as the Jews, at the " eating of their Peace-Offerings, remember'd they had been ſacrificed for them; ſo " likewiſe when we eat the Fleſh of Jeſus Chriſt, our Victim, we ought to remember " that he died for us. It is the ſame Fleſh therefore eaten by the Faithful, which not " only revives in us the Memory of his being offered up for us, but confirms us in the " Truth of it; and far from being able to ſay, that this ſolemn Commemoration, which " Jeſus Chriſt enjoins us to make, excludes the real Preſence of his Fleſh, we find, on " the contrary, that this affectionate Remembrance of him required of us at the holy " Table, as being offered up for us, is grounded upon that ſame Fleſh being really " taken there; ſince in Reality we cannot poſſibly forget that he gave his Body as a " Sacrifice for us, when we ſee that he ſtill gives us daily the ſame to eat.

" X. As it was not meet and proper [b] that our Senſes ſhould perceive any Thing in " this Myſtery of Faith, ſo neither was it convenient that any Thing ſhould be changed, " with Regard to them in the Bread and Wine of the Euchariſt. Upon which Ac- " count, as we perceive the ſame Species, and feel the ſame Effects as before, in that " Sacrament, we ought not to be any Ways ſurpriz'd, if ſometimes, and in ſome Senſe " it ſhould go under the ſame Denomination. Yet our Faith, inviolably adhering to " his Words, who does whatſoever he pleaſes, both in Heaven and Earth, acknowledges " no other Subſtance on this Occaſion, than that which is meant by thoſe very Words; " that is to ſay, the very Body and Blood of Chriſt, into which the Bread and Wine " are changed; and this is what we call Tranſubſtantiation.

" THE Reality, however, internally contain'd in the Euchariſt, does not prevent it " from being a Sign, with Reſpect to what appears externally to our Senſes; though, " indeed, 'tis a Sign, that far from excluding the Reality, carries it of Neceſſity " along with it; for in Effect, theſe Words, This is my Body, pronounced over the " Species which Jeſus Chriſt made Choice of, are an indiſputable Sign to us, that he " is preſent; and though Things are ſtill the ſame in Appearance to our Senſes, yet " our Souls frame a different Idea of them, from what they would have done, had not a ſu- " perior Authority intervened. Theſe Species therefore, which by a continued Train of " natural Impreſſions uſually formed in our Bodies, were wont to repreſent the Subſtance " of Bread and Wine, inſtead thereof by Authority of him, in whom we believe, be- " gin to expreſs and denote a quite different Subſtance; for we ſubmit our Judgments " to him who ſays, That what we take, and what we eat, is his Body; and ſuch is the " Energy of theſe Words, that they will not allow us to take theſe external Appearances for " the Subſtance of Bread, but for that of the Body of Jeſus Chriſt there preſent; ſo that the Preſence of ſo adorable an Object, being confirmed to us by this Sign, we do " not in the leaſt ſcruple to pay our Adorations to it.

[a] Luke xxii. 19. 1 Cor. ii. 24.
[b] Of Tranſubſtantiation, of Adoration, and in what Senſe the Euchariſt is a Sign.

" I SHALL not expatiate on the Article of divine Worſhip, becauſe all ſuch as main- " tain that Jeſus Chriſt is preſent in the Euchariſt, muſt of Neceſſity pay their Ado- " ration to it.

" MOREOVER, being once convinced that the omnipotent Words of the Son of God " perform whatever is intended in the Pronunciation of them, we believe upon very " good Grounds, that they have their Effect, in the Lord's Supper the Moment they " are ſpoken; and by Conſequence we acknowledge the real Preſence of the Body " before our Participation of it.

" THESE Particulars premiſed, the Sacrifice which we acknowledge in the Eucha- " riſt will admit of no farther Difficulty.

" WE have obſerved, that there are two Actions in that myſterious Sacrament, really " diſtinct, though relative to each other. The one is the Conſecration of the Bread " and Wine, which are thereby changed into the Body and Blood; and the other is " the Manducation, whereby we are made Partakers of that heavenly Food.

" THE Body and Blood are in the Conſecration myſtically ſeparated, becauſe Jeſus " Chriſt ſaid diſtinctly, This is my Body; this is my Blood; which affords us a lively and " effectual Image of his violent Death.

" THUS the Son of God is ſet on the ſacred Table, by Virtue of thoſe Words, " clothed in the Signs which repreſent his Death; and this is wrought by the Conſe- " cration: This religious Action moreover carries with it an Acknowledgment of the " divine Sovereignty, inaſmuch as Jeſus Chriſt, who is actually preſent, renews and per- " petuates the Memory of his Obedience, even to his dying on the Croſs; ſo that No- " thing can be wanting to make it a true Sacrifice.

" IT is not to be queſtion'd, but this Action being diſtinct from the Eating, muſt in " itſelf be acceptable to God, and incline him to look down upon us with a favour- " able Eye, becauſe it ſets before him the voluntary Death which his well-beloved " Son ſuffered for our Iniquities; or rather exhibits that very Son, under the Signs of that " Death, whereby his Anger was appeaſed.

" ALL Chriſtians muſt acknowledge, that the Preſence only of Jeſus Chriſt is a " moſt prevailing Means of Interceſſion before Almighty God, for Mankind in gene- " ral, [a] according to what the Apoſtle ſaith, that Jeſus Chriſt appears before the Face " of God in Behalf of us. For which Reaſon we believe, that Jeſus Chriſt being pre- " ſent on the ſacred Table under thoſe Signs of Death, intercedes for us, and conti- " nually ſets that Death which he ſuffered for his Church, before his heavenly Fa- " ther.

" IT is in this Senſe that we ſay, Jeſus Chriſt offers himſelf up to God for us in " the Euchariſt; and in this Manner, we believe, that by this Sacrifice God becomes " more kind and indulgent to us; and for this Reaſon we call it propitiatory.

" WHEN we conſider what Jeſus Chriſt performs in this Myſtery, and that we ſee " him through Faith actually preſent on the holy Table under theſe Signs of Death,

[a] Heb. ix. 24.

" we

" we unite ourſelves to him in this Condition; we preſent him to God as our only Ob-
" lation, and our only Propitiator through his Blood, proteſting that we have nothing to " offer up to him but Jeſus Chriſt and the infinite Merit of his Death. We conſecrate
" all our Prayers through that divine Sacrifice, and when we offer up Jeſus Chriſt to " God, we are at the ſame Time inſtructed to offer up ourſelves as living Sacrifices to
" the divine Majeſty, in and thro' him.

" SUCH is the Chriſtian Sacrifice, infinitely different from what was obſerved un" der the Law: A Spiritual Sacrifice worthy of the new Covenant, where the Offering " that is preſent is only ſeen thro' Faith; where the Word is the Sword which myſti-
" cally parts the Body from the Blood; where by Conſequence the Blood is only ſhed in " Myſtery, and where Death hath no Share but by Repreſentation: And 'tis neverthe-
" leſs a true and real Sacrifice, ſince Jeſus Chriſt is really contained therein, and offered
" up to God under that Figure of Death; but a Sacrifice of Remembrance too, which " is ſo far from taking us off from the Sacrifice of the Croſs, as our Adverſaries object
" againſt us, that it rather unites us to it by all its Circumſtances, inaſmuch as it not " only relates entirely thereto, but can neither truly be, nor ſubſiſt without that Rela" tion, from which it receives all its Virtue.

" THIS is the expreſs Doctrine of the Catholic Church, as ſet forth in the Council of " [a] Trent, which teaches that this Sacrifice was only ordained as a Repreſentation of that " which was once accompliſh'd on the Croſs; to perpetuate the Memory of it for ever; and
" to apply unto us the ſalutary Virtue of it for the Abſolution of thoſe Sins which we daily
" commit. So that the Church is ſo far from thinking any Thing deficient in the Sa" crifice of the Croſs, that on the contrary ſhe believes it to be ſo perfect, and ſo per" fectly ſatisfactory, that every Thing afterwards performed, is only inſtituted to cele" brate its Remembrance, and apply the Virtue of it to us.

" THE ſame Church thereby acknowledges, that all the Merit of the Redemption of " Mankind reſults from the Death of the Son of God: And 'tis very apparent from what " has been already ſaid, that in the Celebration of the divine Myſteries, when we ſay,
" God we offer up unto thee this holy Offering, we do not pretend by that Sacrifice to make " or offer unto him a new Payment of the Price of Salvation; but to employ the Me" rits of our bleſſed Saviour there preſent, together with the infinite Price which he once
" paid for us on the Croſs.

XI. " JESUS CHRIST [b] being really preſent in the Euchariſt, his Grace and Bene" diction are not annexed to the Species, that are the Objects of our Senſes, but to the " very Subſtance of his Fleſh, which is both living and endued with an enlivening Faculty,
" on account of the Divinity united to it. All therefore that believe in this Reality,
" ought not to ſcruple the receiving of the Communion only under one Species, ſince
" they receive all that is eſſential to the Sacrament, in ſo much a more ample and cer" tain Manner as the Separation of the Body and Blood not being real, (as we have al" ready obſerv'd) they entirely and individually receive him, who alone is able fully to re-
" pleniſh us.

" 'TIS on this ſolid Baſis that the Church interprets the Precept of the Communion,
" and has pronounced, that we may receive the Sanctification which that Sacrament
" confers under one Species only; and when ſhe confined the Faithful to that Species
" alone, it was not out of any Contempt for the other; but on the contrary, to prevent the " Abuſes which the Confuſion and Negligence of the People had occaſioned in theſe lat-

[a] Seſſ. 22. c. 1.
[b] The Communion under both Species.

" ter

" ter Ages; reſerving to herſelf the Power of re-eſtabliſhing the Communion under " both Kinds, whenever it ſhall prove more conducive to Peace and Unity.

XII. " JESUS CHRIST having eſtabliſhed [a] his Church by preaching, the unwritten " Word was the firſt Rule of Chriſtianity; and when the ſacred Writings of the New " Teſtament were added to it, that Word loſt nothing of its Authority on that Account; " which is the Reaſon we receive all that has been taught by the Apoſtles, either writ- " ten, or oral, with equal Veneration, wherein we follow [b] St. Paul's expreſs Declara- " tion, and we look upon it as a certain Proof that any Doctrine comes from the Apo- " ſtles, when it is received by all the Churches of Chriſt, without our being able to point " out its firſt Beginning. Nor can we refuſe to receive every Thing ſo eſtabliſhed, with " all the Submiſſion due to the divine Authority.

XIII. " THE Church being inſtituted by God to be the [a] Guardian of the Scriptures " and of Tradition, from her 'tis we receive the canonical Writings.

" BEING thus inſeparably united to the ſacred Authority of the Church by means of " the Scriptures, which we receive from her; from her likewiſe we receive our Tradi- " tion, and by means thereof are taught the true Senſe of the Scriptures. Whence it " comes to paſs, that the Church profeſſes to teach nothing as coming from herſelf, nor " to invent any new Doctrine; but only follows and declares divine Revelation by the " inward Direction of the Holy Ghoſt, graciouſly given to her for her Guide and In- " ſtructor.

" THE Diſſention which aroſe relating to the Ceremonies of the Law in the Apoſtles " Time, demonſtrates, that the Holy Ghoſt makes the Church his Interpreter; and their " Acts have taught all Ages to come, by the manner of deciding that Controverſy, the " Authority by which all Diſſentions of that kind are to be concluded. So that when- " ever there ſhall ariſe any Diſputes, which may create a Diviſion among the Faithful, " the Church ſhall always interpoſe her Authority; and her Biſhops being aſſembled, ſhall " ſay after the Apoſtles, [d] it ſeemed good to the Holy Ghoſt, and to us: and when ſhe hath " once ſpoken, her Children ſhall be taught not to make new Enquiries into the Articles ſhe " hath reſolved, but humbly to ſubmit to her Deciſions. In complying herewith, we " ſhall imitate St. Paul and Silas, who delivered that firſt Decree of the Apoſtles to the " Faithful, and who far from ſuffering them to re-examine what had been determined, " [e] went from Town to Town, and charged them to keep the Inſtitutions of the Apoſtles.

" THIS is the Manner in which the Children of God ſubmit to the Deciſion of the " Church, believing they hear the Oracles of the Holy Ghoſt from her Mouth; for " which Reaſon in the Creed, after we have repeated, I believe in the Holy Ghoſt, we " immediately after add, the holy Catholic Church. By which Article we oblige ourſelves " to acknowledge a perpetual and infallible Truth in the univerſal Church, ſince that " very Church, in which we believe at all Times, would ceaſe ſo to be, ſhould ſhe ceaſe " to teach that Truth which God was pleaſed to reveal. Whoever therefore ſuſpects " that the Church makes an ill Uſe of her Authority, to eſtabliſh the Spirit of Untruth, " has no Faith in him, by whom the Church is governed.

" THIS ſupreme Authority of the Church is ſo requiſite for the Regulation of all the De- " bates which ariſe in Matters of Faith, and the Senſe of the Scriptures, that even the [a] The Word written, and unwritten.

[b] Theſſ. ii. 24.
[c] The Authority of the Church.
[d] Acts xv. 28.
[e] Acts x. 4.

" PRO-

" Proteſtants were at laſt obliged to re-eſtabliſh it among themſelves, after they had " exploded it as an inſupportable Tyranny.

" WHEN the People called Independants openly declared, that every Chriſtian ought " to follow the Dictates of his own Conſcience, without ſubmitting to the Authority of " any eccleſiaſtical Body or Aſſembly, and for that Reaſon refuſed to ſubmit to Synods; that " of Charenton, which was held in the Year 1644, condemned that Doctrine on the ſame Ac" count, and for the ſame Inconveniencies, as cauſed us to reject it. That Synod ſays
" in the firſt Place, that the Error of the Independants conſiſts in teaching, that every " Church ought to be regulated by its own Laws, without being dependant on any Perſon
" whomſoever in eccleſiaſtical Concerns, and without lying under any Obligation to acknow- " ledge the Authority of Convocations, or Synods for their Government and Conduct. And " afterwards concludes, that this Sect is as pernicious to the State, as to the Church; that " it is an Inlet to all Irregularities and Extravagances, that it obſtructs all Means for the " Rectification of them, and that if it once got firmly eſtabliſhed, there might proceed from
" it as many Religions, [a] as there are Pariſhes and private Meetings. By theſe laſt
" Words, 'tis plain that this Synod in the Eſtabliſhment of Dependency had an Eye prin" cipally to Matters of Faith; ſince it declares the greateſt Inconvenience Chriſtians were " liable to fall into from Independency, was, that it might occaſion as many Religions as
" Pariſhes. It is requiſite therefore, according to the Doctrine of this Synod, that every " Church, and with much more Reaſon, every private Perſon ſhould depend in Matters of " Faith on a ſuperior Authority, which reſides in a Number of Perſons; to which the Faith" ful ought to ſubmit. For the Independants do not refuſe to ſubmit themſelves to the " Word of God in the Senſe, they think it is to be underſtood; nor to receive the De-
" ciſions of Synods, when upon due Examination they find them reaſonable. But re-
" fuſe to ſubmit their Judgment to that of any Convocation, &c.

XIV. " [b] THE Son of God having determined that his Church ſhould be one " only, and firmly built on Unity, has eſtabliſhed and ordained the Primacy of St. Pe- " ter to maintain and cement it, for which Reaſon 'tis, we acknowledge that very Prima-
" cy in his Succeſſors, to whom we therefore owe the very ſame Submiſſion and Obe" dience which the holy Councils and Fathers have always recommended to the " Faithful."

THIS is the Expoſition of the Doctrine of ſuch Chriſtians as are known by the Denomination of Catholics, with the Addition of Roman made by thoſe of the Proteſtant Communion. This Doctrine appears here ſimple, void of Difficulties, and eaſy to be underſtood, and all who profeſs the Belief of it, are truly united to the Body of the Church. To her the good Chriſtian is implicitly to ſubmit; for Reaſon, which at all Times is fond of Enquiries, with Reſpect to Chriſtianity, is a moſt dangerous Rock to ſplit upon; a Chriſtian who is any ways dubious ought to conſult his Curate, whoſe Expoſitions muſt always agree with the Deciſions of his principal Paſtor. Thus an humble Sheep ſubmiſſively bows to the Crook. The principal Paſtor is the Pope, whoſe Infallibillity in Matters of Doctrine, and whoſe Deciſion, (in the Opinions of ſome People) ſecures everlaſting Salvation to all ſuch as firmly adhere to him. The Gallican Church rejects that Infallibility, and ſets a Council above the Pope; and indeed is it not very natural to believe, that the whole Body of the Church has full Power to decide abſolutely in Matters of Doctrine [c]? Let the Pope be at the Head of that Body,

[a] This Inconvenience predominates in thoſe Countries where too great a Liberty of Opinions is tolerated, and where it is even allowed to publiſh them: On the other Hand, they who either out of Policy or Fear, hold their Tongue and pretend to conform, are Hypocrites.

[b] The Authority of the holy See and of Epiſcopacy.

[c] The following Objection may be ſtarted againſt this Principle. The Council repreſents the Church of Chriſt, and and in Conjunction with it, form a compleat Syſtem of Doctrine if he pleaſes; for then we ſhall eaſily believe, that the Deciſions of ſuch an auguſt Aſſembly will be conformable to the Goſpel of Jeſus Chriſt: But that the Pope alone ſhould decide as the ſupreme Judge, this the Church cannot admit of no farther than his [a] Deciſions are agreeable to the Doctrine of Jeſus Chriſt. When the Pope deviates from the true Senſe of the Scriptures, we can never look on him as Chriſt's Vicar. The Church has then a Right to diveſt him of that Authority with which ſhe had entruſted him, in the Name of the Saviour of the World; and he is no longer to be obey'd; but every Believer muſt ſubmit to the [b] Chair of St. Peter, till ſuch Time as 'tis poſſeſſed by a legal Pontiff.

The Fundamental Opinions of the JANSENISTS.

WHAT we have juſt before mentioned obliges us to take ſome Notice here of thoſe People, who are called Janſeniſts. This Sect owes its Birth to Janſenius, a Doctor in Divinity of the Univerſity of Lovain, and Biſhop of Ipres. The looſe Doctrine of ſome [c] of the Jeſuits relating to Grace and Predeſtination, ſo far prevail'd in the Divinity Schools, that [d] two Univerſities thought themſelves obliged to condemn it in the Year 1640. That Doctrine was likewiſe brought before the holy See in a judicial Way, and yet, inſpite of all Oppoſition, continued to make a conſiderable Progreſs. Janſenius was determined to defend the Faith of the Church, and the Grace of Jeſus Chriſt. He oppoſed St. Auguſtin to thoſe new Doctrines, and wrote a [e] Diſſertation upon Grace, wherein the whole Doctrine of that great Father is diſplay'd. This Treatiſe was attacked by the Jeſuits, who charged Janſenius with maintaining the five [f] following dangerous and Calviniſtical Hereſies.

1. THAT Jeſus Chriſt only prayed, and died for ſuch, as are to be ſaved.

2. THAT Man can neither reſiſt, nor reject Grace, even tho' he intends it, and endeavours to do it; and therefore, when he has Grace, he is conſtrained to do good by an abſolute Neceſſity, and when he has it not, is compelled to do evil.

3. THAT we do not co-operate with Grace in our good Works, and that we have no Share in the Merit of them.

4. THAT we have never had any Liberty of Indifference ſince Adam's Fall, to incline us (in caſe we will) either to one Thing or another.

5. THAT our Sins are neither free nor voluntary; except in their Cauſe, which is Adam's Tranſgreſſion. He alone was free, all other Sins are committed by Compulſion and Neceſſity, the Weight of Concupiſcence over-ruling the Will.

and conſequently its Deciſions are thoſe of the Church; but the Council decides by a Majority of Votes: If the Majority of Votes therefore ſhould declare in Favour of an Error, what Remedy would there be? For Diſobedience to the Deciſions of the Church would be ſchiſmatical, and a Submiſſion in ſuch a Caſe heretical.

[a] This is what induced that Part of the Clergy of the Gallican Church, which oppoſes the Conſtitution of Clement IX. to appeal to a future Council.

[b] They who oppoſe the Conſtitution pretend that we ought to diſtinguiſh between the Pope and his Chair. The Proteſtants make a Jeſt of this Diſtinction, and ask what that Chair is? They propoſe this Queſtion too, whether a Subject who is diſobedient to his Prince, becauſe he commands them to do thoſe Things, which are contrary to the Good of the State, can clear himſelf of the Crime of High Treaſon, by ſaying, that though he diſobeys the King, yet he ſubmits to his Throne.

[c] Father Molina, and Father Leonard Celſus.

[d] The Univerſities of Lovain and Doway.

[e] Auguſtinus. See the Hiſtory of Janſeniſm, Tom. I. p. 4. Edition of 1700. that Book was wrote before the Year 1636. as appears by the Privilege granted in 1635. but not publiſhed till the Year 1640. and then dedicated to the Cardinal Infant.

[f] Taken from the Hiſtory of Janſeniſm, Tom. I. p. 20. Edit. 1700.

JANSENIUS's

JANSENIUS's Book, entitled Auguſtinus, from which theſe Propoſitions were pretended to be extracted, gave Birth to [a] ſeveral Diſcourſes on the Topick of Grace; but this ſcholaſtic Controverſy not concluding to the Satisfaction of the Moliniſts, they immediately applied to the Pope, in order to overthrow the new Auguſtinus, which was at laſt condemned in Form by a Bull [b] of Pope Urban VIII. The Janſeniſts pretend, that this Bull was compoſed by [c] a Perſon entirely devoted to the Jeſuits. The Differences, however, occaſioned by the Doctrine of Janſenius, had like to have occaſion'd great Diſorders in the Low-Countries, becauſe the Divines (who were inſpired, as they ſaid, with a Zeal for Orthodoxy) took care to magnify [d] Objects in an extraordinary Manner.

JANSENIUS, under the fictitious Name of Patrick, had ſome Years before wrote a Book entitled, [e] the French Mars, againſt the Miniſtry of Cardinal Richlieu; but that Stateſman revenged himſelf, by encouraging all Sorts of Writing, and preaching againſt the Doctrine of Janſenius, which began to ſpread and prevail in France. Thoſe Preachers and Doctors, who were devoted to the Cardinal, were ſeconded by the Jeſuits, and all of them thus united [f] proved powerful Adverſaries to that Doctrine.

AFTER the Death of Urban VIII. the Affair of Janſeniſm was again revived, and Things at firſt ſeem'd ſomewhat favourable to that Party; but the Moliniſts ſtill ſo artfully contriv'd Matters, that by their Intrigues the Deciſions were all given againſt Janſenius. It would be to no Manner of Purpoſe to enter into the Diſcuſſion of all the Tranſactions on this Account, and of an infinite Number of Polemic Writings, which were produced by the Opinions of both Parties, on the Subject of Grace. The Archduke Leopold uſed his utmoſt Endeavours in the Year 1648. to have Janſeniſm condemned in the Low Countries; and the Moliniſts were of Opinion, that the moſt expeditious Method to deſtroy that Party, would be [g] to exclude them from all Dignities and publick Employments. The Expedient ſeemed very well calculated to tempt the Ambition of thoſe who could never be induc'd to believe any Truths that were inconſiſtent with their Intereſt, how excellent ſoever they might be in all other Reſpects. This Reſolution was attended with a [h] Formulary, or Profeſſion of Faith, which all thoſe who were admitted to any Employments were oblig'd to acknowledge upon Oath, the Form whereof may be ſeen in the Hiſtory of Janſeniſm, already quoted in the Notes, as well as the Manner in which Janſenius and the Bull relating to him were then treated in Spain. What occaſioned ſome Mirth in theſe Debates, which notwithſtanding the Importance of the Subject, and the Gravity of the Divines, made both Parties at laſt the Objects of Ridicule, was the Titles which they both gave to their Writings. The Names of Buckler, or Shield, and ſeveral others of the like Kind,

[a] During the Years 1641, 1642, and 1643.

[b] This Bull was granted March 6. 1642. and not publiſh'd at Rome till June 19. 1643. The Janſeniſts gave out, that the Bull was ſpurious, or at leaſt were willing that it ſhould be looked upon as ſuch, by Reaſon of ſeveral Variations which were obſerved in the Copies of it, and becauſe it openly condemned the Doctrine of St. Auſtin. This Bull met with no better a Reception in France; for it was there refuted by ſome ſmart Obſervations, which at that Time gave as much Uneaſineſs to the Court of Rome, as the Remarks made in our Time upon the Conſtitution Unigenitus.

[c] Vide Hiſtory of Janſeniſm, Tom. I. p. 48. Ed. of 1700.

[d] They exclaimed loudly againſt the Hereſy which was upon the Point of being introduc'd in thoſe Countries. They repreſented to his Holineſs, that there was an End of the Catholic Religion, and that Manicheiſm and Calviniſm would ſoon get the upper Hand. Vide Hiſtory of Janſeniſm, Tom. I. p. 61.

[e] Patricii Armachani Mars Gallicus: He compoſed it in Latin, but it was afterwards tranſlated into French.

[f] Iſaac Habert, Theologal (or principal Prebend) of Paris, preached in the Metropolitan Church, when the Orthodoxy of his Zeal made him reckon forty Hereſies in the Doctrine of Janſenius. But ſome Time after, this Doctor's Zeal flagging, thoſe Hereſies were reduced to twelve, and at laſt ſtood at five, which are the Capitals.

[g] The ſame Scheme is follow'd at this Day, in order to oblige the Janſeniſts to receive the Conſtitution Unigenitus.

[h] The great Fault of this Formulary, as well as of all Oaths in general which compel a Submiſſion is, that they always make Hypocrites.

did did not seem strong enough to express the Purport and Design of these kinds of Writings. One of these Doctors (whose true Name was Fromond) assumed that of [a] Vincent the Mild, and administer'd an Antidote against the Tenets of the Molinists. Another published the [b] Torch of St. Austin. Father Veron, the Jesuit, made a Gag for the Jansenists. Some Divines of his Order had a strong Inclination [c] to extinguish St. Austin's Torch; but Fromond thought himself under an Obligation to find [d] Snuffers for it. But we shall pass over these Writings, and the Authors of them, to come to the Letter which sixty eight Bishops of France subscrib'd, in Hopes to obtain of Pope Innocent X. an Enquiry into, and a [e] Condemnation of the five remarkable Propositions which follow, upon which, they said, it was most dangerous to hold Disputations.

I.

THERE are some of God's Commandments which are impossible to be kept by the Righteous, even when they are inclin'd to observe them, and use their utmost Endeavours to fulfil them, according to the Strength they are endued with at that Time. They want, over and above, the Grace of God, to render them possible.

II.

A MAN in the State of fallen Nature never resists inward Grace.

III.

IT is not requisite that a Man should have a Liberty free from Necessity, in order to merit, or not to merit, in the State of fallen Nature. 'Tis sufficient that he hath a Liberty free from Constraint.

IV.

THE Semi-Pelagians allowed of the Necessity of an inward preventing Grace for every Action, even for the Commencement of Faith; and yet they were Heretics for maintaining that Grace to be such, as that the Will of a Man could either resist or obey it.

V.

IT is Semi-Pelagianisme to assert, that Jesus Christ died, or shed his Blood for all Mankind, without Exception.

THE Jansenists pretended, that the Molinists laboured to have these Articles censur'd, for no other Purpose, but to make the Censure fall on St. Augustin, and on the Doctrine of efficacious Grace; but be that as it will, the Letter signed in the Name of [a] Vincentii Lenis Theriaca.

[b] Lucerna Augustiniana.
[c] Responsio seniorum Facultatis Duacenæ adversus Lucernam, &c.
[d] Emunctorium Lucernæ.
[e] If we may believe the Author of the History of Jansenism, that Censure was made in a most irregular Mauner. Cardinal Barbarini being over-persuaded by the repeated Requests of the Jesuits, committed the Affair of Jansenius to his Council of Conscience; whereof three Jesuits composed a good Part. The Question was put, whether the Bishop of Ipres's Austin should be condemned or not, and the Number of those who voted for that Book had the Majority by one Vote over those who were for condemning it; but the Adversaries of Jansenius order'd it so, that Albizzi the Assessor, who strenuously opposed Jansenius, and did not use to sit in that Council, was admitted into it on Purpose to join his Vote to the Molinist Cabal. The Votes, however, were still equal; but Cardinal Barbarini, who ought to have no Vote in his own Council of Conscience, voted notwithstanding against Jansenius; by which Means the Number of those who decided for the Censure, exceeded by one Vote those who were against it. History of Jansenism.

the

the Clergy of France, was ſent to Pope Innocent X. in the Year 1650, which created a new Paper War, of which we ſhall not enter into the Detail. In the ſame Year Pope Urban the VIIIth's Bull againſt Janſeniſm was publiſhed in Poland.

[a] SEVERAL other Catholic Powers were at the ſame Time ſollicited to write to, and unanimouſly requeſt the Pope to condemn the five Propoſitions, which were imputed Janſenius.

POPE Urban the VIIIth's Bull had already been publiſhed in the Roman Catholic Low-Countries; but not to the Satisfaction of the Court of Rome, on Account of a Clauſe inſerted in the Publication, viz. Save the Rights and Privileges of that Country. [b] In the Year 1652. the Pope conſtituted a Congregation for examining into the Controverſy concerning Grace. This Congregation, which was expected to have judged favourably of the Janſeniſts, was not, however, [c] indulgent to them at the Concluſion, though Innocent the Xth certainly was [d] no Friend to the Jeſuits; but his Holineſs cenſur'd Janſeniſm, and the pretended Propoſitions of Janſenius, with no other [e] View, than barely to eſtabliſh his own Authority and Infallibility. Janſenius was branded at laſt by a Bull of this Pope, iſſued May 31. 1653. His Holineſs, after having ſeriouſly implored the Aid of the Holy Ghoſt, according to the Words of the Bull, in Favour of his Grace, condemned the five Propoſitions, without giving any explanatory Declaration in what Senſe he condemned them. This Bull was poſted up, and publiſhed at Rome, on the 9th of June following, and afterwards receiv'd in France; though it did not paſs [f] there without Examination and Remarks made upon it by the Janſeniſts. But in ſhort receiv'd it was, nor did the Behaviour of thoſe who [g] occaſion'd it to be receiv'd appear altogether regular. After the Publication of it at Paris, the Pulpits rung with the moſt bitter Invectives againſt the Hereſy of the Janſeniſts; and, without entering into the Truth or Falſity of the Propoſitions, which were thus cenſur'd, we may be allowed to ſay, that the Zeal of thoſe Preachers was ſomewhat ſcandalous; the Reſult of which was, an Increaſe of Diſorders [h] and mutual Animoſities. The Year [i] 1656. produced the celebrated provincial Letters of Paſchal, under the Name of Louis de Montalte, which had like to have prov'd fatal to the Society of Port Royal, which was always accounted the Bulwark of Janſeniſm. In the mean Time the terrible Menaces, which tended to declare incapable of all Offices, and even to deprive of their Livings, all thoſe who would not receive the Bull, mollified ſome of its Opponents [k]. Pope Alexander VII. iſſued out an-

[a] The Jeſuits. Vide Hiſtory of Janſeniſm already cited.

[b] Ibid. Tom. II.

[c] Cardinal Spada, Preſident of that Aſſembly, was an Enemy to the Diſciples of St. Auſtin, as the Hiſtory of Janſeniſm tells us, Tom. II. Edit. of Holland 1700. and in this Quality of Preſident he ſucceeded Cardinal Roma, who was not their Enemy.

[d] The Jeſuiſts, ſays the Hiſtory of Janſeniſm, which we quote, were ſo far convinced of the Pope's Indifference to them, that fearing he would pronounce Judgment to their Diſadvantage, they were ſtudying Ways and Means to elude his Cenſure, without Prejudice to the Infallibility of the Holy See, by inſiſting it was very true, that the Pope was infallible in his Deciſions; but that it was no Article of Faith, that Innocent X. was a lawful Pope.

[e] It is upon this very Principle that Pope Innocent XIII. ſupports the Intereſt of the Conſtitution Unigenitus with ſo much Vigour.

[f] Vide Hiſtory of Janſeniſm, Tom. II. p. 154.

[g] Ibid. p. 155, and 156.

[h] In the Year 1655. the Anti-Janſeniſts cauſed the Stone, upon which was engrav'd an Inſcription in Praiſe of Janſenius, to be taken off his Tomb. In 1672. another Stone was put in the Place of the former, with an Epitaph much leſs liable to be expoſed to the Inſults of the Moliniſts; but the ſame Zeal ſome Time after remov'd that likewiſe.

[i] The ſame Year a Penſioner of Port Royal, who was ſorely afflicted with a Fiſtula Lacrymalis, was cured by the holy Thorn; and this Miracle, which made a great Noiſe, was induſtriouſly refuted by the Moliniſt Party.

[k] The Archbiſhop of Sens defied the Biſhop of Toulouſe (de Marca) to produce the five Propoſitions in Janſenius's Auguſtinus, but de Marca not being able that Way to defend himſelf, replied, that there was no Room to diſpute it, ſince the Pope had declared it. The Archbiſhop of Sens thought that no ſatisfactory Anſwer, but when the Biſhop of Toulouſe, and the other Deputies of the Aſſembly of the Clergy declared, that whoſoever did not ſubmit to the Bull, ſhould loſe their Livings; the Archbiſhop, overcome by ſo perſuaſive an Argument, ſubmitted without a Moment's Heſitation.

other Bull the ſame Year, whereby he expreſly declared, that the five Propoſitions [a] were Janſenius's, and that they had been condemned in the Senſe of that Biſhop. About the End of the Year 1659. a particular [b] Set of Fanatics roſe up againſt the Janſeniſts, under the Name of The Brothers of the Society of the bleſſed Sacrament. One Father Eudes, preaching before the Queen Mother in 1660. conjured her by the Holy Euchariſt to extirpate the Janſeniſts with Fire and Sword; and the Court of France in 1661. ſo ſtrenuouſly preſſed the ſigning of the Formulary, as to raiſe an inexhauſtible Fund of Diſtinctions, on all Sides, to try by what Means the Signature might be compaſs'd or evaded. And indeed it was a real Struggle between the Fleſh and the Spirit. The two Port Royals were perſecuted very ſeverely, in order to make them ſign; and the Archbiſhop of Paris [c] laid aſide all his Gravity on that Occaſion. The Reſentment of this Prelate fell heavy on the Ladies of that Community, becauſe they would not ſpeak contrary to their Sentiments, nor believe that five Propoſitions were inſerted in a Latin Book, which they had never read, nor were able to underſtand. Pope Alexander VII. thundered out another Bull againſt Janſeniſm in 1665. and reſolv'd, in order to deſtroy them totally, to make them ſubſcribe to a Form of his own compoſing, which was generally ſigned; [d] purely and ſimply by ſome, and with a Diſtinction of Right and Fact by others.

At laſt Pope Clement IX. made Peace in 1668. between both Parties, [e] which gave much Satisfaction to that Part of France, which had a true Spirit of Chriſtianity; though it afterwards proved to be only a Suſpenſion of Arms, which is a plain Demonſtration that it is much more difficult to reconcile Churchmen than ſecular Princes. This War has been moſt remarkably renewed, and carried on, from the Time that Clement the XIth publiſhed his Bull [f] in the Year 1713. againſt the hundred and one Propoſitions extracted from the New Teſtament of F. Queſnel. That Bull, according to the Janſeniſts, entirely deſtroys all Chriſtian Morality, at leaſt we may be well ſatisfied, that it was very ill calculated to maintain it in its Purity.

QUIETISM.

THE Quietiſts are accounted a Sect truly pernicious to the Chriſtian Church. Their ſpiritual Refinements tend to debaſe the Majeſty of Religion, and the Nature of the Holy Ghoſt, and to render the Elevation of the Heart to God, a [g] mere mechani-

[a] It is aſſerted, that the Enemies of Janſenius cauſed the five Propoſitions to be printed upon a Sheet, and having inſerted it into one of the Books of Janſenius's Auguſtinus, preſented it to the Pope; which Artifice convinc'd and determin'd his Holineſs. Vide Hiſtory of Janſeniſm, Tom. II.

[b] Theſe People were likewiſe called Hermits of Caen. The Hiſtory of Janſeniſm, Tom. II. p. 448. informs us, that they aſſociated themſelves with other Viſionaries, under the Conduct of Father Bagot, a Jeſuit. They gave out, that their Smell was ſo curious, that they could diſtinguiſh a Janſeniſt by the very Scent. So exquiſite a Senſation ought to have render'd the ſigning of Formularies uſeleſs, or at leaſt have taught them to know thoſe that ſigned Bona Fide, from thoſe who ſubmitted out of Weakneſs only, in Order to comply with the Times. The Sieur de Bernieres was Superior of the Fanatics of Caen; and they determin'd to give out, that all the Curates, excepting two, in that City, were Janſeniſts. An extraordinary Communion preceded this Publication, after which they ran about the Streets half naked, making ſuch Declarations as we have already mention'd. Some Time after, a young Woman aſſembled ſome other Fanatics with ſeven Prieſts, who, when they had turned their Caſſocs, made themſelves Girdles of the Barks of Trees, and beſmear'd their Faces all over with Dirt, and thus walked round the Town of Seez, howling and praying for the Converſion of the Janſeniſts.

[c] After having armed himſelf with Excommunication againſt the Nuns of Port Royal, he treated them with barbarous and abuſive Language. Vide Hiſtory of Janſeniſm, Edit. of 1700.

[d] And this was tranſacted with ſo much Ignorance by ſome of them, that there were ſeen Mandates, wherein Janſeniſm was called the Hereſy of Cornelius Janſenius, ſirnamed Auguſtinus. Vide the Hiſtory of Janſeniſm, Tom. III. p. 204. Ed. of Holland.

[e] Clement IX.'s Peace.

[f] Called the Conſtitution Unigenitus, it was dated Sept. 8. 1713.

[g] The firſt Principle of the Quietiſts is, that the Soul muſt make no Reflections, and make uſe of the Will by an internal Recollection, and a Contemplation, which they call acquired. The Body remains, if poſſible, in a perfect State of Tranquillity, whilſt the Soul thus enjoys theſe ſpiritual Gifts.

cal

cal Operation. Myſtical Notions have appear'd [a] in many Ages of the Church. The Montaniſts, [b] the Gnoſtics, &c. were no doubt fond of them. We may form a Judgment [c] of the extraordinary Doctrine of the Quietiſts, by the Particularity, Oddneſs, and Extravagance of their Language.

[d] THEY lay it down as a Maxim or Principle, [e] that when once we have devoted ourſelves to God, that Act ſubſiſts for ever, without any Neceſſity to repeat or renew it. All that remains to be done, is never to take from God what we have given him, by acting contrary to his divine Will; unleſs this happen, the Eſſence and Continuance of our Reſignation to God, and Conformity to his Will, laſt for ever. The trivial Faults which we commit without due Reflection, do not deſtroy the eſſential Point of Conformity; even our moſt diſtracting Employments do not interrupt the Act of conſtant Love; [f] nay, if it ſo fell out, that a Man ſhould think no more of God, there would be no Occaſion for a Man to renew this Gift of himſelf, which has ever ſub-

[a] The Origin of myſtic Notions is to be met with in the Canticles; not but we acknowledge it to be Holy Writ; all that we would inſinuate is, that Pretenders to Regeneration have in different Times miſapplied and abuſed its Notions and Allegories. From thence it is that they have drawn the Marriage of the Soul with Jeſus Chriſt, the chaſte Conſummation thereof, and the Marriage Portion of the Soul eſpouſed to the Word. We find myſtical Notions and Expreſſions in the Fathers, of the firſt Ages of Chriſtianity, which they borrowed, perhaps, from Plato and other heathen Philoſophers. Bayle in his Critical Dictionary, under the Article of Plotinus, calls the Quietiſts Plagiaries of the Platonics. "The End, ſays he, to which Plotinus directed his Thoughts, was to unite himſelf "to the great God. He attained to it by an unſpeakable Efficacy; and this is the unitive Method of our Quietiſts." The Followers of Foe in China teach a Sort of Quietiſm, which requires ſuch as purſue real Happineſs, to give themſelves up intirely to Meditation, yet ſo as to make no Uſe of their Underſtanding. The Reader may have Recourſe to Bayle's Remarks upon this Subject, under the Articles of Spinoza and Taulerus. Arnold has made a large Collection of myſtical Notions in his Hiſtory of myſtical Theology, in Order to juſtify, after his Manner, the Antiquity and Sublimity of it; and tho' he goes through every Age very laborioufly, to ſhew the Progreſs it has made down to our Time, yet it was never truly reduc'd into a Syſtem, till ſince the Writings of John de la Croix (John à Cruce;) but after him thoſe myſtical Notions overſpread Religion with ſome Violence to the Time of Molinos, a Spaniſh Prieſt, who was condemned at Rome in the Year 1687. in the Pontificate of Innocent XI. You may ſee the Abettors of that myſtical Theology, with a Catalogue of their Works, in Arnold's Latin Treatiſe juſt mentioned.

[b] The Gnoſtics had Notions like thoſe of the Myſtics, for they conſidered the Soul of Man as the intimate Subſtance of God; and the Jargon of our myſtical People is an evident Proof, that this is one of their principal Errors. The Penances, Auſterities, Propheteſſes, and the Paraclet, or Holy Ghoſt of the Montaniſts, very nearly reſemble the Notions of the Quietiſts; but there is a greater Conformity between them and the Sect of the Beggards, which appeared in the fourteenth Century; of whom we ſhall ſpeak more at large in another Annotation.

[c] We ſhall firſt give a Specimen of it, drawn from the Inſtruction concerning the different Sorts or Degrees of Prayer by Mr. Boſſuet; who took it from the Writings of John Ruſbrok. "The contemplative Soul views God by a Light, "which is the divine Eſſence; ..... and even the Soul is that divine Light itſelf. ..... The Soul ceaſeth to be in "the Exiſtence which in its own Nature properly belonged to it. It is changed, transformed, ſwallowed up in "the divine Being, and flows into the ideal Being, which it had in the divine Being, from all Eternity. It is ſo "entirely loſt in that Abyſs, that no Creature can find it. We very much queſtion whether the moſt profound "Commentator could ever be able to penetrate into ſuch ſubſtantial Darkneſs."

[d] Part of what we have here ſaid relating to Quietiſm, is taken from the Inſtruction upon the Degrees of Prayer, by Mr. Boſſuet; but the Quietiſts do not abſolutely admit of every Thing which that Prelate lays to their Charge.

[e] Inſtruction upon the Degrees of Prayer, p. 21. Ed. of Paris, in a Paſſage taken from Malaval and F. John Falconi. Molinos endeavours to confirm this by Examples. "Would it not, ſaith he, be an extravagant Thing for a Man "who is in the Preſence of the King to ſay to him from Time to Time, Sir, I believe your Majeſty is here? It would "be the ſame Caſe, ſuppoſing the Soul that ſeeth God with the Eyes of a lively Faith, ſhould ſay, Lord, I believe "that thou art preſent, &c. When any Perſon is ſet out on a Journey to Rome, every Step he takes forwards his "Journey, without the Neceſſity of ſaying every Time he ſets one Foot before the other, I am going to Rome." Molinos in his Spiritual Guide, Lib. I. Chap. xv.

[f] Inſtruction upon the Degrees of Prayer, &c. p. 43. This Notion appear'd abominable to the Adverſaries of Molinos, That Chriſtian who hath no diſtinct View of Jeſus Chriſt muſt inevitably loſe Sight of his Humanity; but it may not be proper, perhaps, to inſiſt too ſtrongly upon this Argument. The Myſtics in all Probability did not conſider the Conſequences that might be drawn from thence againſt the Diſtinction of the Perſons in the ſacred Trinity. The Author of an Engliſh Letter, which may be met with in a Collection of Tracts relating to Quietiſm, printed at Amſterdam in 1688. pretends to juſtify Quietiſm in that Article; he alledges, that the Roman Catholics imagin'd there was much more Harm in it than really there is, becauſe they fall into another Extreme, Which, ſays he, is the believing that Jeſus Chriſt is adorable, omnipotent, and omniſcient, by his Humanity conſidered in the Abſtract. He pretends likewiſe, that Molinos and his Followers were for oppoſing as much as poſſible the Torrent of Superſtitions, which that Opinion had introduc'd: He attributes to it the Origin of Crucifixes, the Adoration of the Croſs, and of the Euchariſt, &c. There ſeems to be ſome Partiality here. The Spiritual Guide, however, ſeems to acknowledge in the ſixteenth Chapter of the firſt Book, the Humanity of our Saviour; but requires we ſhould entertain a much more noble Idea of that Humanity, than for the Generality is entertain'd of it; and by conſequence enervates the ſuperſtitious, not the religious Part of the Worſhip.

ſiſted,

ſiſted, juſt as a Marriage ſtill ſubſiſts between a Husband and his Wife, tho' they are diſtant from each other, and have had no Correſpondence together in Writing for a long Time: That Marriage, I ſay, ſtill ſubſiſts, unleſs Adultery or ſome other Act of Falſhood and Injuſtice ſhould diſſolve it. It muſt be acknowledged that this Principle of Quietude and Contemplation (which, as they ſay, is attended with a perfect Reſignation to the divine Will) is capable of introducing a Corruption of Morals. It has a Tendency likewiſe to obliterate and ſet aſide all thoſe Acts of Faith which are contained in the Apoſtles Creed, together with the Petitions which are in the Lord's Prayer, &c. all which the Quietiſts are not bound to, ſince, according to them, nothing is required for ſuch as live in a State of Contemplation, but one conſtant and univerſal Act only. It is an Act of Faith to meditate on Jeſus Chriſt, and we muſt doubtleſs have him in our Thoughts when we rehearſe the Creed, or read the Goſpels; but all this is of no Service to the Quietiſts. " A Soul " that has not thought of Jeſus Chriſt under any Capacity whatever for the Space of twenty " Years together, finds that all his Virtue ſubſiſts in her inwardly by Virtue of her " State; tho' ſhe hath no diſtinct View of Chriſt at all." So ſublime is that State of Contemplation! Perhaps it may not be improper to examine how Mr. Boſſuet refutes that Suppreſſion of the Acts of Faith, in the Inſtruction on the States or Degrees of Prayer.

To purſue the Recital of thoſe Subtilties, wherein the Quietiſts ſoar, as it were, above the Clouds; they imagine themſelves obliged to annihilate all their Deſires, after the Soul is once confounded, loſt, and annihilated in the divine Eſſence. " [a] The Soul muſt " be dead to its Deſires .... muſt have a Will as if it had none, comprehend as if it " comprehended not, and think as without Thought, nay, without having any Incli- " nation towards Annihilation itſelf, &c. which is the Reſult of the Knowledge which it " has of that contemptible State wherein it is. It conſiders itſelf as abſolutely incapable " of meriting any Thing, and acknowledges itſelf even unworthy of poſſeſſing " Virtue." Some Myſtics add this Exception, unleſs thoſe Petitions and Deſires were immediately inſpired by God, and the Holy Ghoſt ſuggeſted ſuch Motions as might incline us to ſuch Deſires thro' the divine Will. Were we to make no Petitions to God, but what he himſelf inſpired us with, and the holy Ghoſt ſuggeſted, we might thereby, 'tis true, retrench an infinite Number of inſignificant Prayers; but under that Pretence we ſhould fall into another Extreme; for we ſhould either make no Petitions to God at all 'till we were under a particular Inſpiration; from whence it would follow that we ſhould frequently remain in an abſolute State of Inaction: Or otherwiſe we might imagine, that we had a Right to aſcribe thoſe irregular Motions which the Fleſh may raiſe in the moſt perfect [b] Contemplation to the Inſpiration of the Holy Ghoſt. This Reſignation and Confuſion (if we may call it ſo) and Annihilation in God is carried to ſuch a Pitch, that a [c] perfect Indifference whether we are in Grace or not, whether we are acceptable to God, or hated by him, or whether we have or have not any Affection for him, may be inferred from them. This is the refined Senſe which they give to that Part of the Lord's Prayer, Thy will be done.

THE Quietiſts by their Doctrine exclude all Reflection, and [d] Molinos is expreſs thereupon. According to them the Act of reflecting is a Conſequence as it were of the State

[a] Molinos's ſpiritual Guide, p. 194. & 196. Holland Edit. 1688.

[b] Vide, In the Inſtruction concerning the different States of Prayer by Mr. Boſſuet, the Refutation of their Apology for that Doctrine, in which they pretend to exclude no Requeſts but ſuch as are attended to, and no Deſires but what are perceived by our Senſes. All Nonſenſe, full of Errors and Fanaticiſm, in whatever Senſe it be taken.

[c] Mr. Boſſuet infers this Conſequence againſt the Quietiſts, and yet it does not appear, that this is ſo expreſly found in Chap. xix. xx. and xxi. of the third Book of Molinos's Spiritual Guide, wherein he treats of the true and perfect Annihilation.

[d] The Underſtanding, ſaith he, caſts off all Reflection and Reaſoning: God cauſes the Soul to advance by Means " of the obſcure Knowledge of a ſimple Faith, &c. Guide, Introd. Sect. 1. N, 2. The Soul being once deprived of " the Capacity of Reaſoning, cannot with all its Efforts make ſo much as one ſingle Reflection." Ibid. Lib. I. Chap. 2. N. 6. From this Doctrine may be drawn fatal Conſequences; may we not ſay, that it helps to palliate thoſe unruly Tranſports of the Body, which frequently we are not Maſters of even in the contemplative State? Is the pretended

State of Imperfection: But a Man is ſtill much more imperfect, when diveſted (as we may term it) of his Will, he becomes a Machine, to be wound up at the Pleaſure of a Providence, which abſolutely deſtroys the Liberty of all human Actions. If we conſider all the Conſequences which naturally follow from theſe Principles, we ſhall find that this is the true Notion Quietiſm entertains of the Deity.

It follows, therefore, from the Principles of Quietiſm, that ſuch Actions as are perform'd without Reflection, muſt prove infinitely acceptable to God; ſince ſuch Actions as are unperceived, or confuſedly perceived, are the moſt perfect; but how is it poſſible to be loſt and annihilated in God by ſuch Acts; ſince God is the ſupreme Reaſon? Can we pleaſe him in acting without Reflection? On the contrary, if in Conſequence of that Reaſon which God has beſtowed on Men, ſuch virtuous Actions as are produced by Reaſon, come the neareſt to God's infinite Wiſdom, how can we love Virtue without Reflection? We refer our Reader to the [a] Works of Mr. Bouſſet, whom we have already quoted, for a Refutation of thoſe Principles, as well as a Vindication of what the Myſtics call the Vice of Multiplicity, that is, a daily Revival of the Acts of Faith, Hope, and Charity. It is manifeſt, that if we were obliged to ſet aſide our Wills, to ceaſe from reflecting on our Actions, and exclude even thoſe Petitions which we may, and ought to make to God for obtaining his Favours, theſe Acts would become Errors in Piety and true Holineſs.

[b] The paſſive Prayer of the Quietiſts requires no Meditation; (this is an eſtabliſhed Maxim among them, almoſt needleſs to be repeated) and is nothing but a mere paſſive Contemplation. It may be performed at all Times without taking us off from any Affairs we are engaged in; for the Way of ſeeking after God is ſo natural and eaſy, (and we may ſay ſo involuntary, and according to them ſo imperceptible) that the very Air we breathe cannot be more ſo, nor our Reſpiration more uninterrupted. If we could prevail on our erring Brothers, ſays one of theſe Quietiſts quoted by Mr. [c] Boſſuet, ſimply to believe, and pray; inſtead of diſputing ſo much, they might gently be brought back to God; ſo that to employ either Controverſy or any other Arguments for the Converſion of Hereticks, is by Conſequence uſeleſs, and Labour loſt.

The Soul [d] that conceives a ſincere Love and Affection for God, finds herſelf immediately expoſed to the Fire of Temptations; yet ſhe never believes with ſo much Certainty, as when ſhe is thus tormented and afflicted. Her Doubts and Fears, with Regard to her believing, or not believing, conſenting or not conſenting, are the Effects of the Delicacy of her Love, &c. This Love (ſay the Quietiſts) requires, that the faithful (Quietiſt) ſhould utterly forſake [e] his Neighbour till God takes him out of that State (of Quietude) in which he is. "Leave that Care, ſaith Molinos, to him, and remain "quiet, altogether inſenſible to all Things, and perfectly reſigned to his divine Will. "You are not indolent on that Account." Divine Love purifies the Soul, whilſt God is preparing in it [e] a paſſive Diſpoſition, and trying it by the Fire of [f] Affliction and intended Suſpenſion of our Senſes, whilſt we plunge in the myſtical Road, and are loſt in God, any Thing more than a mere Illuſion? Trace theſe Principles Step by Step, and you will find that this Prayer of the Soul is nothing but Vain-glorious Nonſenſe. 'Tis in vain to tell us that Abſence of Reaſon is one of the greateſt Bleſſings can befal the Soul; and that it is a Proof, that God conducts it by Faith and Silence, &c. Molinos's Spiritual Guide, p. 18. Edit. of Holland.

[a] Book 5. and 6.

[b] The Paſſive Prayer, or Prayer of Peace and Quietude, is likewiſe called that of ſimple Preſence, ſimple Intent, and ſimple Reſignation in God, according to the Expreſſions of St. Francis of Sales in his Treatiſe on the Love of God; to bear and ſuffer the Oppoſitions which are made againſt our own Motions or Inclinations, is in devout Terms called the Impreſſions received from God, wherein Man hath no Part. See Boſſuet's Inſtruction, &c. Book vii.

[c] In the Infancy of Chriſtianity it is true, that Method was practicable. The Operations of the Apoſtles were all Supernatural: the Holy Ghoſt by his immediate Influence acted upon thoſe whom he intended to convert.

[d] Molinos's Spiritual Guide, Introd. Chap. x.

[e] Ibid. Lib. II. Chap. iii.

[f] Molinos's Guide, &c. Lib. III. Chap. iv.

ward Anxieties, &c. A Man at ſuch a Time feels a paſſive Dryneſs, attended with Darkneſs, Anguiſh, Contradiction, and inward Deſpondings, &c. The Heart is then ſo oppreſſed, and ſo full of Bitterneſs, that a Man is not able to raiſe it up to God; nor to perform any one Act of Faith, Hope, or Charity. It is the Love of God, however, that occaſions all this Diſtraction; but, according to the Quietiſts, it acts thus for no other Purpoſe but to appropriate the Heart of the Myſtic to itſelf. Molinos calls this State which we have been deſcribing, the firſt ſpiritual Martyrdom. [a] The other ſpiritual Martyrdom, which is more advantageous and meritorious, is the Property of ſuch only as are already advanced towards Perfection and ſublime Contemplation. This conſiſts in the Fire of divine Love, with which the Soul is inflamed and conſumed by amorous Torments: The Abſence of its Lover ſometimes diſtracts her; at other Times ſhe ſinks under the ſweet, but heavy Weight of the divine Preſence. This is by them called ſighing, ſuffering, and dying with love; the Conſequence whereof to the Soul, is a Conception of internal Happineſs equally Myſterious and Spiritual [b], which in the End operates externally by Means of the infuſed Contemplation. This is the Account Molinos gives us of that State, by which God imperceptibly raiſes the Soul to a perfect Repoſe, by an intimate Penetration of his Light. What we have already offered is ſufficient, we preſume, to give the Reader an Idea of the [c] Love of God, according to the Principles of the Quietiſts: But [d] we ſhall ſhew in the Notes the Conformity which there is between their Opinions and that of the [e] Beguards.

We

[a] Id. Ib. Lib. III. Chap. iv.

[b] This internal Happineſs is deſcribed by Molinos, ibid. Lib. III. Chap. xiii. and xvi.

[c] A Book of conſiderable Length, and of a very ſingular Character might be made, were all the uncommon Terms, which the Quietiſts uſe to expreſs their Love of God, and all the Effects thereof to be collected; the loweſt of their Ideas are, that this Love illuminates, inflames, and conſumes. The gayeſt Poets do not expreſs their ſelves more emphatically than theſe contemplative Souls, who continually talk the Language of the moſt paſſionate Lovers.

[d] Theſe Beguards, whom the Council of Vienna condemned under Pope Clement V. believed, 1. That a Man may in this Life attain to ſo high a Pitch of Perfection, as to be incapable of Sinning, and have no Occaſion for Grace. Molinos, almoſt in the ſame Senſe tells us, that the celeſtial Indifference which ſucceeds the Suppreſſion of Requeſts, reinſtates us in the happy Innocence which our firſt Parents loſt; that by Prayer the Soul returns to its Primitive Purity, and that the Spirit of Concupiſcence is deſtroy'd, &c. Molinos in his third Book, Chap. ii. N. 7. of his Spiritual Guide, ſays ſomething very like this likewiſe; however, he ſeems ſoon after to contradict himſelf, by adding, that illuminated Souls are not the leſs convinced of their Miſery and Failings, &c. On the other Hand, one of Molinos's Propoſitions condemned by the Bull of Innocent XI. is this; that a Soul that has attained to myſtical Death can have no other Will but that of God, becauſe God has taken its Will from it. Theſe are all downright Contradictions. 2. The Beguards held, that a Man ought neither to faſt nor pray in the State of Perfection; which indeed follows of Courſe; for if a Man be perfect, why ſhould he humble himſelf before God? That intimate Communication with God, in the midſt of that Peace and Tranquility which is deſcribed by the Quietiſts, neceſſarily condemns a Spirit of Humiliation. 3. The Beguards pretended to exempt themſelves both from human and eccleſiaſtical Laws; Quietiſm, it ſeems, ſets up a kind of Independency: With the Principles of a Quietiſt it is a hard Matter to prove a good Subject. 4. The Principles of the one and the other plainly eſtabliſh a ſupreme Happineſs even in this Life. Read the ſeveral Accounts which Molinos gives of ſupreme Happineſs of inward Peace, and of what he calls Internal Solitude, &c. 5. The Beguards were of Opinion, that they ought not to riſe up at the Elevation of the Body of Jeſus Chriſt, nor pay any Honour to it, pretending that the State of Contemplation did not permit them to think on the Myſtery of the Sacrament of the Euchariſt; nor of the Sufferings of the Humanity of Jeſus Chriſt. The Suppreſſion of all Acts of Faith has a Tincture at leaſt of this Doctrine, and Mr. Boſſuet's ſecond Book of his Inſtruction may be hereon conſulted. 6. The Beguards declared, that imperfect Man only ought to practiſe virtuous Actions, but the perfect Soul is exempted from them. This Propoſition comes the neareſt that is poſſible to a Suppreſſion of all Acts; the 31ſt of the Propoſitions which were condemned by Innocent XI. determines that the Virtues ought to be baniſhed. To give the Reader a complete Information of the great Likeneſs between the Quietiſts, who were followers of Molinus and the Beguards, we muſt quote ſome Paſſages that expreſs the Characters of the latter; which we have extracted from a German Author cited by Mr. Boſſuet. "They do not act, ſays Taulerus; but as the Inſtrument waits for the "Workman, ſo likewiſe do theſe Men wait the divine Operation: Doing nothing, and pretending that their Ope- "ration would be an Impediment to the Work of God. Thus fixed to a vain Tranquility, they practiſe none of "the Virtues in this peaceful State; they neither praiſe God, nor pray to him, (becauſe they look both on the one and the other as intereſted Acts;) Molinos, in the 19th of his condemned Propoſitions, ſaid that he who loves God according to the Dictates of Reaſon, or the Conception of the Underſtanding, does not love God; and that a Soul which cannot ſuppreſs the Deſire of loving him, ſhews that it loves after its own Way: which is indulging its own Choice. In ſhort, the Authors who were Contemporary with the Beguards, found in them the Paſſiveneſs and Annihilation of the modern Quietiſts; their Ceſſation of Deſires, and Suppreſſion of their Acts of Grace and Virtue, &c.

[e] Beſides the Fanatical Notions which are aſcribed to the Beguards and Quietiſts, the World has given them both abominable Characters. It muſt be allowed, that a Suppreſſion of Acts of Virtue leads one naturally thereunto. Let a Man become never ſo Spiritual, he always is under a Dependance on thoſe Objects which ſurround him,

and

We muſt now ſay ſomething of Molinos himſelf, and of the Progreſs his Opinion made at its firſt Riſe. This Prieſt, who was a Spaniard by Birth, and of a conſiderable Family, was of an auſtere, melancholy Conſtitution. He always deſpiſed, (as is reported,) the [a] external Practices of the Church, and all popular Acts of Devotion. In the Year 1675. he publiſhed [b] his Spiritual Guide, with the Approbation of five Divines. There are ſome beautifnl Paſſages, 'tis true, to be met with in that Treatiſe: But take it altogether, it principally conſiſts of ſublime Nonſenſe and crude indigeſted Notions, as is conſpicuous enough from what we have already quoted. The French Tranſlation is incorrect. As to the Approbations of the five Divines, one would imagine that either they had never peruſed the Book, or did not underſtand it, or had but ſlightly [c] examined it. It gained its Author, however, a great Reputation, who met with Encouragement from ſeveral [d] Perſons of great Diſtinction in the Church; amongſt whom were ſome French, who pretended to make uſe of him in order to reunite the Roman Catholics and the Proteſtants. Pope Innocent XI. ſhew'd him particular Marks of his Favour and Protection; and from that Time the Molinoſiſt Devotion gained Ground among the Romans. Several devout Men as well as Women laid aſide the Roſary and their Beads; mental Prayer prevail'd, and the Jeſuit's Chairs for Confeſſion were more neglected than uſual; this was (as it is ſaid) the principal Cauſe of Molinos's Misfortunes. They wrote againſt his new Hereſy, and F. Signeri was the Perſon who diſtinguiſhed himſelf moſt on that Subject. He attacked him ſtrenuouſly on this Propoſition, Whoſo poſſeſſeth God, poſſeſſeth likewiſe Jeſus Chriſt. [e] He pretended, that it might induce the Faithful to forget the Humanity of our Saviour. The Inquiſition at laſt took Notice of theſe Controverſies, but Molinos at that Time triumphed over his Enemies. Soon after, indeed, they charged him again with new Accuſations, and made Inquiries whether Molinos was not of Jewiſh or Moriſco Extraction. Quietiſm, however, ſpread ſo faſt, that Mr. Burnet in his Travels thro' Italy, reckons there were twenty thouſand Quietiſts in Naples. This ſpiritual Propagation brought Molinos into new Troubles, and if we may Credit the Author of the Letter already mentioned, that Affair was treated of as a political Concern. 'Twas inſinuated to his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty, that Molinos being a Spaniard, would draw all thoſe of his Opinion into the Intereſt of his Maſter the King of Spain; and all the Quietiſts would prove by that Means ſo many ſworn Enemies to France. This was the Pretence, as we are inform'd, which was made uſe of to incenſe the King of France, who thereupon gave Orders to Cardinal d'Etrés his Ambaſſador at Rome to proſecute Molinos and his Diſciples. [f] His firſt Impeachment was for holding and carrying on criminal Correſpondences. After this they repreſented to his Holineſs, that the common Father of all Chriſtians ought not to harbour Hereſy in the Vatican, whilſt the eldeſt Son of the Church was uſing his utmoſt and by Conſequence cannot ſupport himſelf by mere Contemplation. There would always be ſome groſs Souls amongſt thoſe contemplative People, who would ſink under the Weight of their Senſes, and become guilty of all thoſe obſcene and brutal Actions which are aſcribed to them. Theſe ſpiritual Flights of the Myſtics carried to ſuch a Pitch, muſt ſoon or late inevitably bring them under ſome ſhameful Dilemma's. It is proper, however, in this Place to diſtinguiſh Speculation from Practice: Becauſe they who eſtabliſh Principles, do not always foreſee the Conſequences that may be inferred from them, nor the unguarded Expreſſions that may introduce Corruption of Morals.

[a] Abſtract of an Engliſh Letter in the Collection of Tracts relating to Quietiſm, printed in the Year. 1688.

[b] Ibid.

[c] The firſt Approbation aſſerts, that this Book is intelligible in the moſt abſtruſe Matters; and that the Author does not diviate from the Holy Scriptures, &c. The ſecond and third ſay much to the ſame Purpoſe. The fourth enters farther into Particulars, and is indeed more judicious; the Author of it was a Jeſuit, who did not approve of the Book farther than he could judge of it, by the continual Elevation in which Molinos keeps up the Mind. But even with this Reſerve, the Approbation diſpleaſed the Society, and the Author of it, 'tis pretended, was no more heard of; the fifth Approbation is full of Nonſenſe worthy the Capuchin that gave it.

[d] See the Abſtract of the Letter quoted above in the Collection, &c.

[e] See before Note [a], This Propoſition is not to be found in expreſs Terms in the Spiritual Guide. But Malaval ſaith expreſly, that Jeſus Chriſt is greater by his Divinity than by his Humanity, that whoſoever conſtantly thinks on God, conſtantly thinks likewiſe on Jeſus Chriſt. Altho' this Author often does not underſtand himſelf, yet the Words ſeem capable of a rational Explication.

[f] See the Letter already quoted.

En-

Endeavours to extirpate it. In ſhort, Molinos was impriſoned in the Year 1685. and ſoon after ſeveral Clergymen and Laymen too were confined on Suſpicion of giving themſelves up to Contemplation and mental Prayer. Had this Sect been tolerated any Time, we ſhould doubtleſs have ſeen ſome fatal Revolution in the Practices of the Church, particularly if Innocent XI. who [a] was made to paſs for the Abettor of Quietiſm, had ventur'd publickly to declare himſelf its Protector. After theſe firſt Proceedings, Orders were given for a circular [b] Letter to be ſent to all the Prelates of Italy and of Chriſtendom, to acquaint them, that in ſeveral Parts of their reſpective Dioceſſes there were Societies of Quietiſts form'd, who taught abominable Errors. Thoſe Prelates were exhorted at the ſame Time to uſe their utmoſt Endeavours to diſperſe ſuch Aſſemblies, to make choice of proper Directors, and to act in ſuch a Manner as that the antient Cuſtoms might be exactly preſerv'd; but ſince the Power of the Church is not formidable enough to curb her worldly Children, unleſs ſupported by civil Puniſhments, the ſame Prelates were prudently directed to proſecute the Quietiſts before temporal Judges. It was high Time to come to this Extremity, for mental Prayer had already got the better of the Roſary, as we before obſerv'd; and ſeveral devout Perſons began to neglect Images, and leave off counting their Prayers. Molinos was at laſt condemned, and eſcaped the Flames upon no other Conditions, than a public Confeſſion, (though in all Probability not a ſincere one) of his Crimes; but he was however confined [c] to a Priſon, where he continued to the Day of his Death. [d] The Reader will [e] in the Notes find Part of the Ceremonial of his Abjuration, as we have extracted it from a Letter inſerted in the Collection of Tracts relating to Quietiſm, publiſhed in the Year 1688.

IT is very remarkable, that the Inſtrument of Molinos's Condemnation, and the Bull of Innocent XI. charge him with hurrying the Faithful into [f] ſhameful and enormous Practices, without mentioning any one in particular.

[a] See the Letter wherein it is ſaid, that the Inquiſition took the Liberty to examine the Pope upon this Subject; but this is wholly groundleſs.

[b] This Letter was written by Cardinal Cibo, on Feb. 18. 1687. it contained nineteen Articles or Propoſitions, which were charged upon the Quietiſts, among the reſt the 4th deſtroys the Humanity of Jeſus Chriſt, the 5th all Acts of Penance, the 7th and 13th aboliſh Images, the 9th the Sacrifice of the Maſs, and the 10th the Invocation of Saints. The Letter does not quote the Author from whom theſe heretical Propoſitions are extracted.

[c] In 1687. he was ſixty Years old, according to the Dutch Edition of Maimbourg.

[d] He died in 1692.

[e] "Some ſhort Time before this Solemnity, the Pope granted a plenary Indulgence to all who as ſhould be there "preſent, and the Proclamation that was made of it, together with the Deſire every one had to ſee the Concluſion of an Affair which had held the Public in Suſpence for above two Years, brought ſuch a vaſt Concourſe of "People to the Place where Molinos was to make his Abjuration, that one muſt have paid very dear, or have had "a conſiderable Intereſt to get a good Place. He was very neatly dreſſed in new ſacerdotal Clothes, and made ſo "handſome an Appearance, that his very Enemies allowed he had all that was capable of charming the Fair Sex. "When he came out of the Priſon, they put him into an open Chariot, with a Dominican Friar to accompany him; "and when he was arrived at La Minerva, they left him in a Gallery for ſome Time. He turned his Eyes on every "Side with great Preſence of Mind, bowing to thoſe who ſaluted him, and during all that Time was only heard "to ſay theſe Words: You ſee, Gentlemen, a Man who has been defamed, but is very penitent; infamato ma pentito. "From thence they carried him to Dinner, where he was entertained in a very elegant Manner, after which he "was taken back to the Church in Triumph, as it were, and born upon the Shoulders of ſome of the Sbirrhi, who "were in the open Chariot. When he was brought to the Place appointed, he made a very ſubmiſſive Bow, "but ſhew'd no Fear or Confuſion in his Face; his Hands were bound, holding in them a Wax-Taper; and while "two Monks dreſs'd in long Robes were reading his Accuſation aloud, ſome People were placed not far diſtant, "who at the reading of ſome particular Articles, cried out, Burn him, burn him; which the Mob repeated; for "due Care had been taken to incenſe them ſo far againſt this unfortunate Man, that had not the Sbirrhi and the "Guards oppoſed them, he had fallen a Victim to their Fury and Reſentment. He was carried back to Priſon, "and as ſoon as he came to the Cell where he was to be confined for the Remainder of his Life, he entered it "with a great deal of Tranquillity and Reſignation, calling it his Cloſet; then taking Leave of the Friar who had "accompanied him, Father, ſaid he, farewell, we ſhall ſee one another again at the Day of Judgment, and then it will "appear who is in the right, You or I.

[f] Mr. Palafox Archbiſhop of Seville's Letter likewiſe ſpeaks of Theſe abominable Exceſſes of the perfidious Molinos. Vide the Pieces immediately following the Inſtruction concerning the different States of Prayer, by Mr. Boſſuet.

A

CONTINUATION

OF THE

DISSERTATION

On the CEREMONIES of the

ROMAN CATHOLICS:

Being a

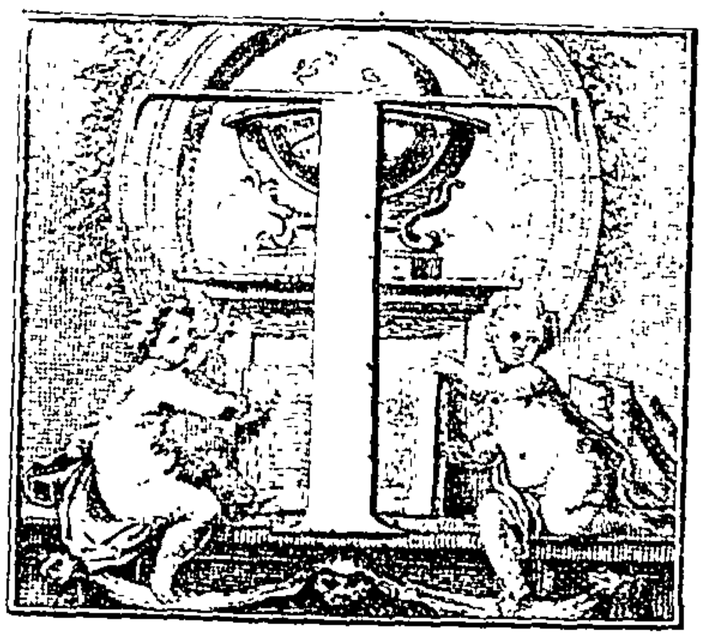
Defcription of their CEREMONIES.

A

CONTINUATION

OF THE

DISSERTATION



On the CEREMONIES of the

ROMAN CATHOLICS:

Being a

Deſcription of their CEREMONIES.

The Authority of the CHURCH; the Head of the UNIVERSAL CHURCH.

THE Church [a] is one, 'tis viſible, holy, and Catholic, or Univerſal, eſtabliſh'd by the Hand of God, on a ſolid Baſis, who has beſtowed on it the Power of Opening the Gates of Heaven to all true Believers, and ſhutting them to all Heretics and Infidels. It likewiſe has the Power of pardoning and abſolving Sins, and excommunicating all ſuch as are diſobedient, &c. This Church is both triumphant and militant. [b] The former is the illuſtrious Society of thoſe bleſſed Spirits and Saints, who having triumphed over the World, the Fleſh, and the Devil, enjoy everlaſting Happineſs in Peace and Security. The latter is the Congregation of all true Believers upon Earth, who are conſtantly oblig'd, during their whole Lives, to reſiſt the World, the Fleſh, and the

[a] Catech. of the Council of Trent.
[b] Ibid.

Devil.

Devil. Jeſus Chriſt is the immediate Governor of that Part of the Church which is triumphant in the Heavens; but as the Church Militant required a viſible Head or Director, he has ſubſtituted one in his Room, who is accounted by all true Catholics, [a] as the ſole and ſovereign Depoſitary of the Faith, and perpetual Director of the Belief of all true Chriſtians. His Authority has been all along ſupported and maintain'd in thoſe Kingdoms that have preſerved the Catholic Faith, which he governs by an almoſt infinite Number of Men, whom he conſtantly keeps in Pay; 'tis he likewiſe who is commiſſion'd to diſtribute [b] ſpiritual Arms amongſt all true Believers in the World, and to promote ſome of them to the higheſt [c] Preferments in Heaven, at a limited and determinate Time after their Admiſſion into the Church Triumphant, and to confer on others [d] ſuch Briefs as will one Day intitle them thereunto. It muſt not here be objected, that he breaks in upon the Prerogative of Jeſus Chriſt; ſince, on the contrary, no true Believer can enter into Heaven, but through the Recommendation of this his viſible Vicegerent. The Church has given him all that Power which ſhe received from Jeſus Chriſt, to open and ſhut the Gates of Heaven. He is the Perſon who forgives Sins, and who has the Privilege of making what was unlawful lawful, by his Diſpenſations; out of his Treaſury he draws thoſe Indulgencies which he makes uſe of to reclaim and enliven ſuch as were dead in their Treſpaſſes and Sins to a ſpiritual Life. It is in his Power, whenever he thinks proper, by the Means of [e] certain Fines, to re-eſtabliſh ſuch as had been degraded for their Crimes. In a Word, it is he who pronounces Anathema's and Excommunications againſt Heretics, Rebels, and Tranſgreſſors; but is kind and indulgent to thoſe who pay due Reſpect to his paternal Authority, and like a fond Parent bears with all their human Frailties, in Caſe they expreſs but an unlimited Love and Regard for him.

The Supremacy of the POPE.

THIS viſible Head is called the Pope; but the Catholics are divided in their Notions, with Regard to his Power. Some of them think he is inferior to a general Council, of which we ſhall take farther Notice very ſhortly. Mean while 'tis certain, that he takes Place of all Chriſtian Princes, as the Vicar of Jeſus Chriſt here upon Earth. The Emperors in former Times went to Rome, to receive the Imperial Diadem from the Hands of his Holineſs, and there ſolemnly promiſed and bound themſelves [f] by the Trinity, by the Wood of the Croſs, and by the Relics of the Saints, to exalt and ſupport the Church and its Head to the utmoſt of their Power. They took the Oath, the Form whereof the Ceremonial of the Roman Church has preſerved and tranſmitted to us, before their Entrance into the City of Rome. At length, after the Church and its

[a] Chiefly by the Tramontanes and ſome others.
[b] Indulgences, Agnus Dei's, and Beads, &c.
[c] The Canoniſations of Saints.
[d] Beatification.
[e] Theſe Taxes are not now ſo common and exorbitant as in former Times; and we cannot in this preſent Age accuſe the Court of Rome of that ſordid Avarice which occaſioned a French Poet to write the following Epigram:

Lubin venant ici de Breſſe
Fut prié par frere Zenon
D'en apporter grace en ſon nom,
Pour avoir ſanglé ſon aneſſe.
Lubin le fit, & de retour,
Eh bien, dit l'autre, en mon amour
As tu fait quelque tripotage?
Oui, dit Lubin, & ſans gloſer
Pour peu de Jules davantage,
On t'ent permis de l'epouſer.

[f] Sacrar. Ceremon. Lib. I. Sanctam Romanam Eccleſiam, & ſanctitatem ſuam Rectorem ipſius exaltabo ſecundum meum poſſe ad vitam, &c.

Head

Head had perfectly ſecured their own Rights and Privileges, the Emperor was admitted; upon which Occaſion the Clergy went out to meet him in their ceremonial Habits, and tender'd him the Croſs to kiſs. His Holineſs ſitting on a Throne receiv'd him, before the firſt Portico of the Church of the Apoſtles. [a] There his Imperial Majeſty uncover'd himſelf, and knelt down as ſoon as ever he ſaw the Vicar of Jeſus Chriſt. Afterwards he drew nearer, and approach'd him gradually, with one Knee always upon the Ground. Laſtly, he kiſſed his Holineſs's Feet [b] after a very devout Manner, as a Teſtimony of his Reſpect to the Saviour of the World. But before his Imperial Majeſty could be crown'd, he was oblig'd to take a new Oath, wherein Nothing was omitted that might eſtabliſh the Pope's Prerogative, and the Security of the Church's Domains. After the Coronation there was a ſolemn Proceſſion, in which his Imperial Majeſty appear'd for the firſt Time, with his Crown on his Head, his Sceptre in one Hand, and a Globe in the other; but as he went out of the Baſilica, he put all his Regalia into the Hands of one of his Officers, in order to hold the Pope's [c] Stirrup, whilſt he mounted his Horſe; nay, he even took the Bridle, and for ſome conſiderable Time led the Horſe of the Servant of the Servants of Jeſus Chriſt, [d] who, to teſtify his Humility, pretended he could not admit of ſo extraordinary a Submiſſion; and did not conſent till after ſeveral Compliments on both Sides, to receive, for the Sake of [e] Jeſus Chriſt, the Honour his Imperial Majeſty did him. We muſt refer the Reader to our Notes for ſeveral Particulars of the Emperor's Duty to the Pope, [f] after we have pointed out ſome peculiar Circumſtances which demonſtrate that the holy Father is far above all Kings, ſince he is Vicegerent of God, and Regent of the Univerſe. Under this Denomination he has divided the new World between Spain and Portugal, he has a Right to St. Paul's Sword, and with it to give apoſtolical Chaſtiſement to ſuch as deſpiſe or diſregard his Deciſions relating to the Chriſtian Faith, [g] and to ſet the golden Crown on the Head of his Imperial Majeſty, who is the firſt Prince of the Chriſtian World: [h] He never riſes off his pontifical Throne, nor uncovers himſelf to any Perſon whomſoever; nor does he ever condeſcend to honour any one with a Salute, by the leaſt Inclination of his Head. As to his Imperial Majeſty, indeed, he does him the Favour to riſe a little to him, on his Admittance to the Kiſs of Peace, after he has paid his Reſpects to the Pope's Feet. His Holineſs, however, ſometimes ſalutes ſuch Princes as have the Honour of an Audience of him, with a ſlight Inclination of his Head; but then he [i] is not in his pontifical Robes; and though he condeſcends to be courteous and complaiſant, he is under no Obligation to it. [k] 'Tis proper to obſerve here, that the Pope's Nuncio's and Legates take Place of the Ambaſſadors of all crowned Heads.

[a] In this Place the auguſt Functions of the Popes are perform'd.

[b] Pedes in reverentiâ Salvatoris devotè oſculatus. Vide Sacr. Cerem. Lib. I.

[c] Stapham tenet, quoad Pontifex equum aſcenderit, &c. Ibid.

[d] Pontifex, dum Imperator humilitatis officia vult exhibere, debet aliquantulùm modeſtè recuſare, Ibid.

[e] Cum aliquibus bonis verbis, honorem non in ſuam perſonam, ſed illius cujus locum tenet recipiendo, &c. Ibid.

[f] It is obſervable, that after the Emperor had taken the Oath to his Holineſs, he was cloathed in the Amice and Surplice. The Canons of St. Peter did him the honour to admit him as a Brother, and to look on him as a Subject of the Pope, to whom all Preferments belonging to the Hierarchy of the Church are ſubject. Whenever it pleaſed his Holineſs to be carried on his Servants Shoulders, the Emperor was to be one of the Aſſiſtants; he was to pour out Water to waſh his Holineſs's Hands before he ſat down to Table, to give him his firſt Plate, &c. Vide The Roman Ceremonial.

[g] Imperator tribus coronis ornari oportet; argenteâ Aquiſgrani, ferreâ Modentiæ in Lombardiâ, & aureâ Romæ, Ibid. John I. ſent Ambaſſador to the Emperor Juſtin, by Theodoric King of the Goths in Italy, was the firſt who gave the Imperial Ornaments to any Emperor, which he did to Juſtin. The Pope's Succeſſors have inſiſted on this Privilege in very high Terms.

[h] Ibid. Lib. III. c. ii.

[i] Cum non ſit in Pontificalibus, Ibid.

[k] Non ex officio, ſed ex laudabili humanitate, Ibid.

Of COUNCILS.

A COUNCIL [a] is an Aſſembly which repreſents the whole Body of the Univerſal Church. The Name of Council is given likewiſe to provincial and national Aſſemblies of the Clergy, who at ſuch Times, however, only repreſent a Part of the Church. A Council is compoſed of eccleſiaſtical Deputies from the ſovereign Powers of Chriſtendom, who repreſent their reſpective Nations, and alſo [b] of other Prelates, Doctors, &c. of particular Churches, all aſſembled together in a free Place, where, without Conſtraint, they may apply themſelves to the Reformation both of Manners, and of Doctrine; to the Regulation and Eſtabliſhment of Church-Diſcipline, &c. And thus aſſembled they have an Authority to cenſure Biſhops, Cardinals, and even his Holineſs himſelf, if his Conduct is blame-worthy; as alſo Power to depoſe any of them, when the Good of Religion requires it. In ſhort they form an Aſſembly, which [c] by its Superiority, being able to check the unjuſt Proceedings of Popes, by ſubjecting them to the Church in Points of Faith, and declaring them Schiſmatics and Heretics whenever they deviate from it, has more than once prov'd very fatal to the See of Rome. Thoſe of Piſa, of Conſtance, and Bale, are inconteſtable Inſtances of the Truth of this Aſſertion.

As to the Ceremonies obſerv'd at the Calling of a Council, as there has not been one ſince that of Trent, we ſhall deſcribe them juſt as we find them in Father Paul's Hiſtory of that Council, who aſſures us, there was not leſs Debate nor leſs Embarraſſment in ſettling the Rank and Precedency of the Biſhops, &c. than if an Affair merely civil [d] had call'd them together; that the Fathers of the Council inſiſted upon having the Aſſembly-Room hung with Tapeſtry, without which they were apprehenſive that the Council might be deem'd a Body of Tradeſmen and Mechanics. Pope Paul III. iſſued out one Bull for calling it, and a ſecond for opening it; both which were read and [a] The Council here ſpoken of is that which they call œcumenical or univerſal.

[b] There muſt be a Diſtinction made between the Fathers of the Council, and the Divines, Ambaſſadors, &c. for Inſtance, in January 1546. there were at Trent forty three Fathers, and beſides them twenty Divines; afterwards about ſixty Fathers, and in the third Seſſion above two hundred. Theſe Fathers were, properly ſpeaking, the Council. It is foreign to our Purpoſe to enquire whether it may be denied the Title of œcumenical in ſome of its Seſſions, and whether it was a free one or not, &c. The Council of Conſtance was in the ſame Manner an œcumenical Council; for, according to Mr. Lenfant's Preface to his Hiſtory, "There muſt have been at it thirty Cardinals, "four Patriarchs, twenty Archbiſhops, about an hundred and fifty Biſhops, above an hundred Abbots, fourteen "Auditors of the Rota, above an hundred and fifty other Prelates, as well Generals of Orders as Priors, ſent "from ſeveral Parts, and above two hundred Doctors." A Council ſeems in our Opinion to be œcumenical, when all Chriſtian Potentates are invited to ſend their Deputies, with one Accord, to examine into both Doctrine and Manners, with a Promiſe that no Violence ſhould be uſed in ſuch Examination.

[c] The Tramontanes, who are more faithful Servants of the Pope than any other Chriſtians, imagine that a Council has no other Authority than what the Pope pleaſes to admit of, and pretend that his Holineſs alone has the Right of calling one; and labour to perſuade us, that the Pope's Determination alone is as valid as an œcumenical Council. Caſalius a Roman Prelate, and conſequently zealous for the Pope's Authority, in his Latin Diſſertation on the Ceremonies of the antient Chriſtians, endeavours to prove, that the Emperors never had any Right to call a Council without the Pope's Authority. He abounds with the Subtilties of an Italian, attempting thereby to confute the impious Calvin, who maintained the contrary. Vide the following Note.

[d] In the earlieſt Ages of the Church they aſſembled together without any Ceremony; for the Holy Ghoſt alone then preſided in their Councils, and Chriſtian Charity was then conſidered before any worldly Proſpect; but Intereſt and Punctilio afterwards crept in. He who was the moſt learn'd, or the moſt conſiderable Man, either on Account of the Dignity of his City, or his Church, endeavoured to direct the Aſſembly, to propoſe and opine upon Matters. When the Church once began to be ſettled, and Religion found herſelf countenanc'd by temporal Power, Difficulties in Doctrine and Diſcipline broke in upon the public Peace and Tranquillity, from the Ambition of the Clergy; and this laid Princes and Magiſtrates under an Obligation to introduce themſelves into the Aſſemblies; and they in their own Right, and as political Sovereigns, began to ſummon them, be preſent at them, ſettle Forms for them, propoſe and give Sentences therein upon ſuch Differences as aroſe; yet ſo as to leave the principal Debate, which was the Cauſe of their being call'd, to the Determination of the Clergy; all which appears by the Records of ſeveral Councils. At that Time there were no Preliminaries, no Ceremonies; but they immediately enter'd upon Buſineſs. Vide Father Paul's Hiſt. Counc. of Trent, Lib. II.

regiſter'd

regiſter'd in the [a] firſt Seſſion. On the Day of opening it, the Legates and Biſhops, dreſs'd in their pontifical Robes, together with their Divines, the Clergy of Trent, and all the People went in a ſolemn Proceſſion to the Cathedral, where the firſt Legate ſung the Maſs of the Holy Ghoſt. Then the Legates in the Pope's Name made an Harangue, wherein, after hinting at the Occaſion of that auguſt Aſſembly, they exhorted the Fathers to lay aſide all Paſſion and Prejudice, to judge righteouſly, to have no other View but God's Glory, and the Good of the Church; Qualities which ſeem eaſy to be attained when taught in Theory only, but in Practice they are in Reality extraordinary difficult. After this Exhortation they all knelt down, pray'd awhile to themſelves, and then the Preſident [a] recited the Prayer which begins with [b] Adſumus Domine, Sancte Spiritus. The Litanies were ſung, next the Deacon read the Goſpel, Si peccaverit frater tuus; and after this the Veni Creator was likewiſe ſung, and then the Fathers ſeated themſelves according to their reſpective Ranks. The Preſident read the Decree with an audible Voice, and ask'd them if it was their Pleaſure to order and direct that the General and Holy Council of Trent ſhould be opened to the Glory of God, &c. to which each of the Fathers in his Turn anſwered, Placet; the Legates firſt, then the Biſhops, and the Reſt of the Fathers; of which the Notaries drew up a public Act. Laſtly, the Te Deum was ſung, and the Legates returned home after the firſt Seſſion, the Croſs being carried before them, and they being attended by the Fathers, who had laid aſide their pontifical Habits. The Ceremonies were almoſt the ſame at all the other Seſſions. Such as would be fully inſtructed in the Orders of the Court of Rome, relating to the Diſpoſition of the Place and Seats for a General Council, may conſult the Particulars thereof in the [c] Roman Ceremonial. We ſhall only take Notice, that the Aſſembly-Room muſt be neatly adorned, and in Caſe the Pope be preſent, his Throne muſt be erected at the Upper End, and due Care muſt be taken that there be two Seats on the Right and Left Side of the Throne for the Deacons Aſſiſtants. If the Emperor appears in Perſon at the Council, he is to be ſeated [d] next the Pope, and at his Right Hand, but ſo as to acknowledge the Superiority of his Holineſs; for the Emperor's Seat, for inſtance, reaches no higher than [e] the Biſhop of Biſhops Footſtool, and even this Honour is reſerved only for his Imperial Majeſty, for there is but very little Difference between the Seats of Kings and thoſe of Cardinals. In this Hall, or Aſſembly-Room, there muſt be an [f] Altar for Maſs, with a Croſs upon it, and the Euchariſt, or the Relics of the Saints. At the ſame Altar the Holy Ghoſt is implor'd to ſend his Bleſſing upon his Religious Aſſembly.

THE Roman Ceremonial gives us the Order and Rank of ſuch as have a deliberative Vote in Council.

1. THE Pope as Head of the Chriſtian Church.
2. THE College of Cardinals.

[a] Before the firſt Seſſion opens, the Roman Ceremonial, Lib. I. fol. 61. Edit. 1516. directs a Faſt for three Days. In caſe the Pope appears in Perſon at the Council, he and the Fathers of the Council, with the Clergy of the City, go in Proceſſion to the Hall of the Aſſembly in their pontifical Robes. The Pope or ſome other Prelate at the opening of the firſt Seſſion, ſings the Maſs of the Holy Ghoſt: after which the Cardinals, and the Fathers of the Council clothed in their Robes of Ceremony, ſalute his Holineſs in their Turns. High Maſs is ſeldom ſung at the other Seſſions. His Holineſs for the moſt Part hears a private Maſs, and afterwards goes to the Council in his ſcarlet Cope, and with the precious Mitre on his Head; where before the Altar he makes an Harangue to the Aſſembly, and then goes to his Throne; the Cardinals after that put on his Sandals, and quam dilecta, a Verſe of one of the Pſalms, is recited.

[b] 'Tis the Pope that repeats it when he aſſiſts at the Council. By this comprehenſive and devout Prayer, immediate Aid is ask'd of the Holy Ghoſt; that he would pleaſe to guide and direct the Council, to inſpire the Fathers with juſt Judgments, to baniſh the Spirit of Diſorder and Diſcord far from them, and not to ſuffer them through Ignorance to fall into Error, or be biaſſed by Bribes, or be ſurpriſed by outward Appearances.

[c] Lib. I. fol. 59. Edit. 1516.

[d] Then the two Aſſiſtants leave their Places, and ſeat themſelves over againſt his Holineſs.

[e] Locus ubi ſedet Imperator non ſit altior loco ubi tenet pedes Pontifex.

[f] Altare cum cruce, & ſacra Euchariſta, ſive reliquiis ſanctorum.

3. THE

3. THE Patriarchs.
4. THE Primates.
5. THE Archbiſhops.
6. THE Biſhops.
7. THE Abbots.
8. THE Generals of Religious Orders. All theſe, as we have already obſerved, properly ſpeaking, compoſe the Council: The Doctors, Divines, &c. making their Appearance therein only to aſſiſt or direct the Fathers by their Learning, and their Advice.

Of PROVINCIAL SYNODS.

EVERY Biſhop ought to hold an annual Synod[a] in his own Dioceſs; and every Archbiſhop a Provincial one once in three Years; and this is by the Antients called a Provincial Council. This laſt Synod repreſents the Church of the Province, and the Archbiſhop is Preſident of it as Metropolitan and Head of the Clergy of that Province. He alone is authorized to call it; which he does by circular Letters directed to his Suffragan Biſhops, and to all thoſe who have a Right to aſſiſt at this Eccleſiaſtical Aſſembly. The Mandamus for calling it is fix'd up at the Porch of the Cathedral,[b] a Month or two before they meet; now the Curates of the ſeveral Pariſhes are to exhort all the Faithful the three laſt Sundays to Devotion, Faſting and Penance, in order that God may pour down his Bleſſing upon the Synod, and repleniſh them with his holy Spirit. The Clergy themſelves, during this Time, muſt endeavour to lead new Lives, lay aſide their Ambition, ſubdue their Paſſions, abſtain from evil Actions, and clothe themſelves with Humility, an Ornament which they are not over fond of.

THE Aſſembly is ranged in the following Order. The Archbiſhop's Seat is raiſed under a Canopy near the Altar. The Biſhops ſit in a Circle over againſt him; the Abbots and other Clergy ſit behind them. Thus the whole Convocation forms two Semi-circles.

[c] ON the Day before the Synod is held, the Bells of the Cathedral, and of the reſt of the Pariſhes, are all rung, from the firſt Veſpers till the Archbiſhop enters the Church where the Convocation meets. On the Day of the Synod, all the Clergy reſort betimes in the Morning to the Archbiſhop, and put on their proper Robes. Thoſe of the Archbiſhop are the Amict, the Albe, the Girdle, the Stole, and the archiepiſcopal Mitre; thoſe of the Biſhop, the Rocket, the Amict, the Chaſuble, and the epiſcopal Mitre; of the Abbot, the Chaſuble and plain Mitre; of the Canon, the Chaſuble, the Planet, and Dalmetica; the Colour muſt be red. After this, the venerable Aſſembly marches in Proceſſion to the Church, praying all the Way to Almighty God, and ſinging his Praiſes, whilſt the Bells ring, and the Organs continually play. At their Entrance into the Church, they are ſhewn the precious Relics of ſome Saints, which they behold with the utmoſt Reverence and Reſpect. Then the Maſs of the Holy Ghoſt is ſung: That ended, the Archbiſhop lays aſide ſome Part of his pontifical Veſtments, puts on the Cope or Chaſuble, kneels down before the Altar, and ſings an Anthem, which his Clergy likewiſe on their Knees repeat after him. But tho' their Devotion may ſeem never ſo fervent, their Ambition to maintain their Rank is ſtill always conſpicuous; and in the midſt of this ceremonious Sanctity, every one inviolably preſerves his Privileges; no Abbot for inſtance daring to intrude himſelf among the Biſhops. Some learned Divines ought to be called to theſe Synods; not that they have any caſting Vote therein, but ſerve as Counſellors to give their Opinions, and may be called the Prompters of the Synod.

[a] Piſcara Praxis Cerem. Lib. I. Sect. 10. Cap. 39.
[b] Cerem. Epiſc. Lib. 1.
[c] Cerem. Epiſc. Ibid.

[c] AT

[a] At the End of each Seſſion, the Metropolitan, having the Croſs before him, bleſſes the Aſſembly; and at the Cloſe of the laſt, the Decrees of the Synod are ſolemnly confirmed, and one of the Deacons ſays, Recedamus in Pace, Let us depart in Peace. The Archbiſhop admits his Suffragans to the Kiſs of Peace, and they ſalute each other, at leaſt with a ſeeming Sincerity: I ſay ſeeming, becauſe Eccleſiaſtical Peace is a very nice and tender Point, which the ſmalleſt Suſpicion of Hereſy is able to diſſolve for ever.

The POPE'S SPIRITUAL JURISDICTION.

WE are now to conſider his Holineſs no longer as a Temporal Prince, but in his Spiritual Capacity of Biſhop and Head of the Church. To which Purpoſe after we have given an Idea of the Ceremonies of the Conclave, and the Artifices and Stratagems of the Cardinals, to advance a proper Object to the Pontificate (in which Particular 'tis evident the Holy Ghoſt is ſilent) we ſhall ſpeak of the Ceremony of his Adoration, Coronation, entring into Poſſeſſion, &c. whence we ſhall proceed to ſuch Ceremonies as Chriſt's Vicar himſelf obſerves, and cauſes to be obſerved, as firſt Prince of the Church. All other Particulars we ſhall rank under civil Ceremonies. He whom the ſacred College advances to the Papal Dignity, poſſeſſes, as Succeſſor to St. Peter, [b] the higheſt Degree of Power and Fortune to which human Induſtry can poſſibly raiſe a Man in the Eccleſiaſtical Way.

1. THE Pope iſſues out his Bulls for the anointing and inſtalling all Archbiſhops and Biſhops in Chriſtendom, which, if we may believe a Writer who pretends to have been in the Service of a ſovereign Pontiff, amount to ſix hundred and twenty ſeven, without reckoning thoſe who are called Archbiſhops and Biſhops in partibus Infidelium. He adds, "[c] That under theſe Archbiſhopricks and Biſhopricks there are ſeventeen thouſand two "hundred Pariſhes, nine thouſand five hundred Monaſteries of Men, two thouſand four "hundred Monaſteries of Women, three thouſand ſeven hundred Abbies of Men, and "one thouſand Abbies of Nuns." From whence he draws this Concluſion, That ſuppoſing only eight or nine Perſons in each Community, Monaſtery and Abbey, the Pope has at leaſt three hundred thouſand Eccleſiaſtics, or Perſons always at his Command, and devoted to his Intereſt, who altogether muſt doubtleſs make the ſovereign Pontiff [d] very formidable.

2. THE Cardinals, who are ſeventy in Number, and compoſe at this Time the Eccleſiaſtical Senate, [e] were no more than Deacons formerly, to whom the Care of diſtributing Alms to the Poor of the ſeveral Quarters of Rome was then entruſted; for which Reaſon they were called Diaconi Regionarii, and as they reſpectively aſſembled thoſe Poor together in ſome particular Churches of their ſeveral Diſtricts, accordingly they aſſumed the Name and Title of thoſe Churches. They began to be called Cardinals under the Pontificate of S. Sylveſter. In Proceſs of Time this Office grew much more conſiderable, and by ſlow Degrees arrived at that Pitch which we now ſee it in: So that it has for a long Time been the Reward of thoſe who have been faithful Servants to the Church and to his Holineſs. Nor do Princes themſelves look upon it as the leaſt Dimunition of their Honour to become Members of the College of Cardinals. The holy Father often confers this Dignity on the Subjects of Kings, as a Token of his paternal Affection; none however but his Spiritual Children can nominate to this Honour. This Method of proceeding greatly advances the Authority of the ſovereign Pontiff, and conſiderably augments the Revenue of St. Peter.

[a] Piſcara Praxis Cerem. Lib. I. Sect. 11. Cap. xxxix.
[b] Father Maimbourg expreſſes himſelf thus,
[c] Tableau de la Cour de Rome.
[d] Roma caput mundi quicquid non poſſidet armis
Religione tenet. ——— S. Proſper.
[e] This is taken from Nodot's Memoirs of the Court of Rome, and from ſome other Writers.

3. THE Spiritual Sovereignty with which his Holineſs is inveſted, authoriſes him to levy Subſidies, grant Briefs, and ſettle and collect [a] Tythes; and the Privilege which he has of canoniſing Saints, impoſing and ſhortening Penances, granting Indulgences, and buying off Sins, diſtributing Agnus's, &c. his Diſpenſations, Pilgrimages; in ſhort, all the Acts of Devotion of Sovereign Princes attached to the Holy See, are ſo many various Methods which contribute to enrich the Vicar of Jeſus Chriſt, and to keep the true Believers within the Bounds of their Duty. [b]

PRELIMINARIES obſerved before the CARDINALS enter the CONCLAVE in Order to ELECT the POPE. The various Methods of ELECTING him; and the Artifices and Stratagems made uſe of at his ELECTION.

FOUR Cardinals of ſeveral Orders, who are the Dean, or firſt Cardinal Biſhop, the firſt Cardinal Prieſt, the firſt Cardinal Deacon, and the Cardinal Camerlengo or Chamberlain, conjointly ſhare the Adminiſtration of Affairs during the Vacancy of the Holy See and the holding the Conclave. The three former are entruſted with the Adminiſtration of Juſtice, and all Affairs relating to civil Government. The laſt after [c] he has broken

[a] The Annates.

[b] Theſe Annates, theſe Works of Piety, &c. are Teſtimonies of the filial Obedience which Princes owe to the Pope, and of that Superiority which he has a Right to aſſume over them. As Succeſſor of Jeſus Chriſt, his Holineſs diſpoſes of thoſe Tributes for the Benefit and Advantage of the Church Militant, and to preſerve the Pomp of divine Worſhip, and heighten the Devotion of the Faithful. From hence it is that he draws the Funds appropriated to the recruiting of his Spiritual Troops. Without them, whence could he have wherewithal to preſerve the Rank of an infinite Number of Generals and Officers, who make War upon the Powers of Hell, and lead the Armies of the Church againſt the Enemy with undaunted Courage and Reſolution? How would he be able to defray the Expences of an infinite Number of Stratagems in War, which the Hope of Gain has invented? If Chriſt's Vicar was ſtill poor, as doubtleſs formerly his Predeceſſor was, if, in Imitation of him, he refuſed all Temporal Dignities and Revenues, let it be frankly and honeſtly confeſſed, with what an Air the Clergy would look on the Chriſtian Religion, and its eternal Felicities. Do but take away from ſuch as ſerve in the Armies of the Church, all Hopes of worldly Advantage, all Honours and Profits, the Privilege of making open War, of living at their own Diſcretion, of demanding Contributions; leave the Prelates nothing but the Conſolation of the Holy Choſt, and you will ſee the ſtately Fabrick of Religion ſoon fall to the Ground. But as I have thus juſtified the Pope's Right to the Sovereignty he has acquired in the Church, it will be proper in this Place to lay before the Reader at one View the twelve Arcana or Methods made uſe of to defend this Right, being as it were the twelve Pillars of it. They are all inſerted in Cardinal Pallavicini's new Goſpel.

1. The Annates already mentioned, declare the holy Father to be the ſole or univerſal Patriarch; in that he has a Right to receive them from all the Churches of Chriſtendom inſtead of Tythes due to the Biſhops, &c. His Holineſs receives theſe Annates, on Account only of the Temporal Emolument which is annexed to Spiritual Grace.

2. and 3. The Penſions, Benefices and Commendams; the Temporal Advantages whereof induce an infinite Number of Chriſtians to ſerve God's Church.

4, 5. Plurality of Benefices, and an abſolute Power to diſpoſe of them as he ſees convenient.

6, 7. The calling greater Cauſes before himſelf, and the reſerving of Caſes.

8. Frequent Jubilees, and Indulgencies.

9. Diſpenſations granted for Money; a Method of which we have already ſpoken.

10. The Exemption of Chapters: A Method which cauſes an infinite Inequality and Diſtance between the Biſhops and his Holineſs, and ſubjects immediately the Chapter to its rightful Sovereign.

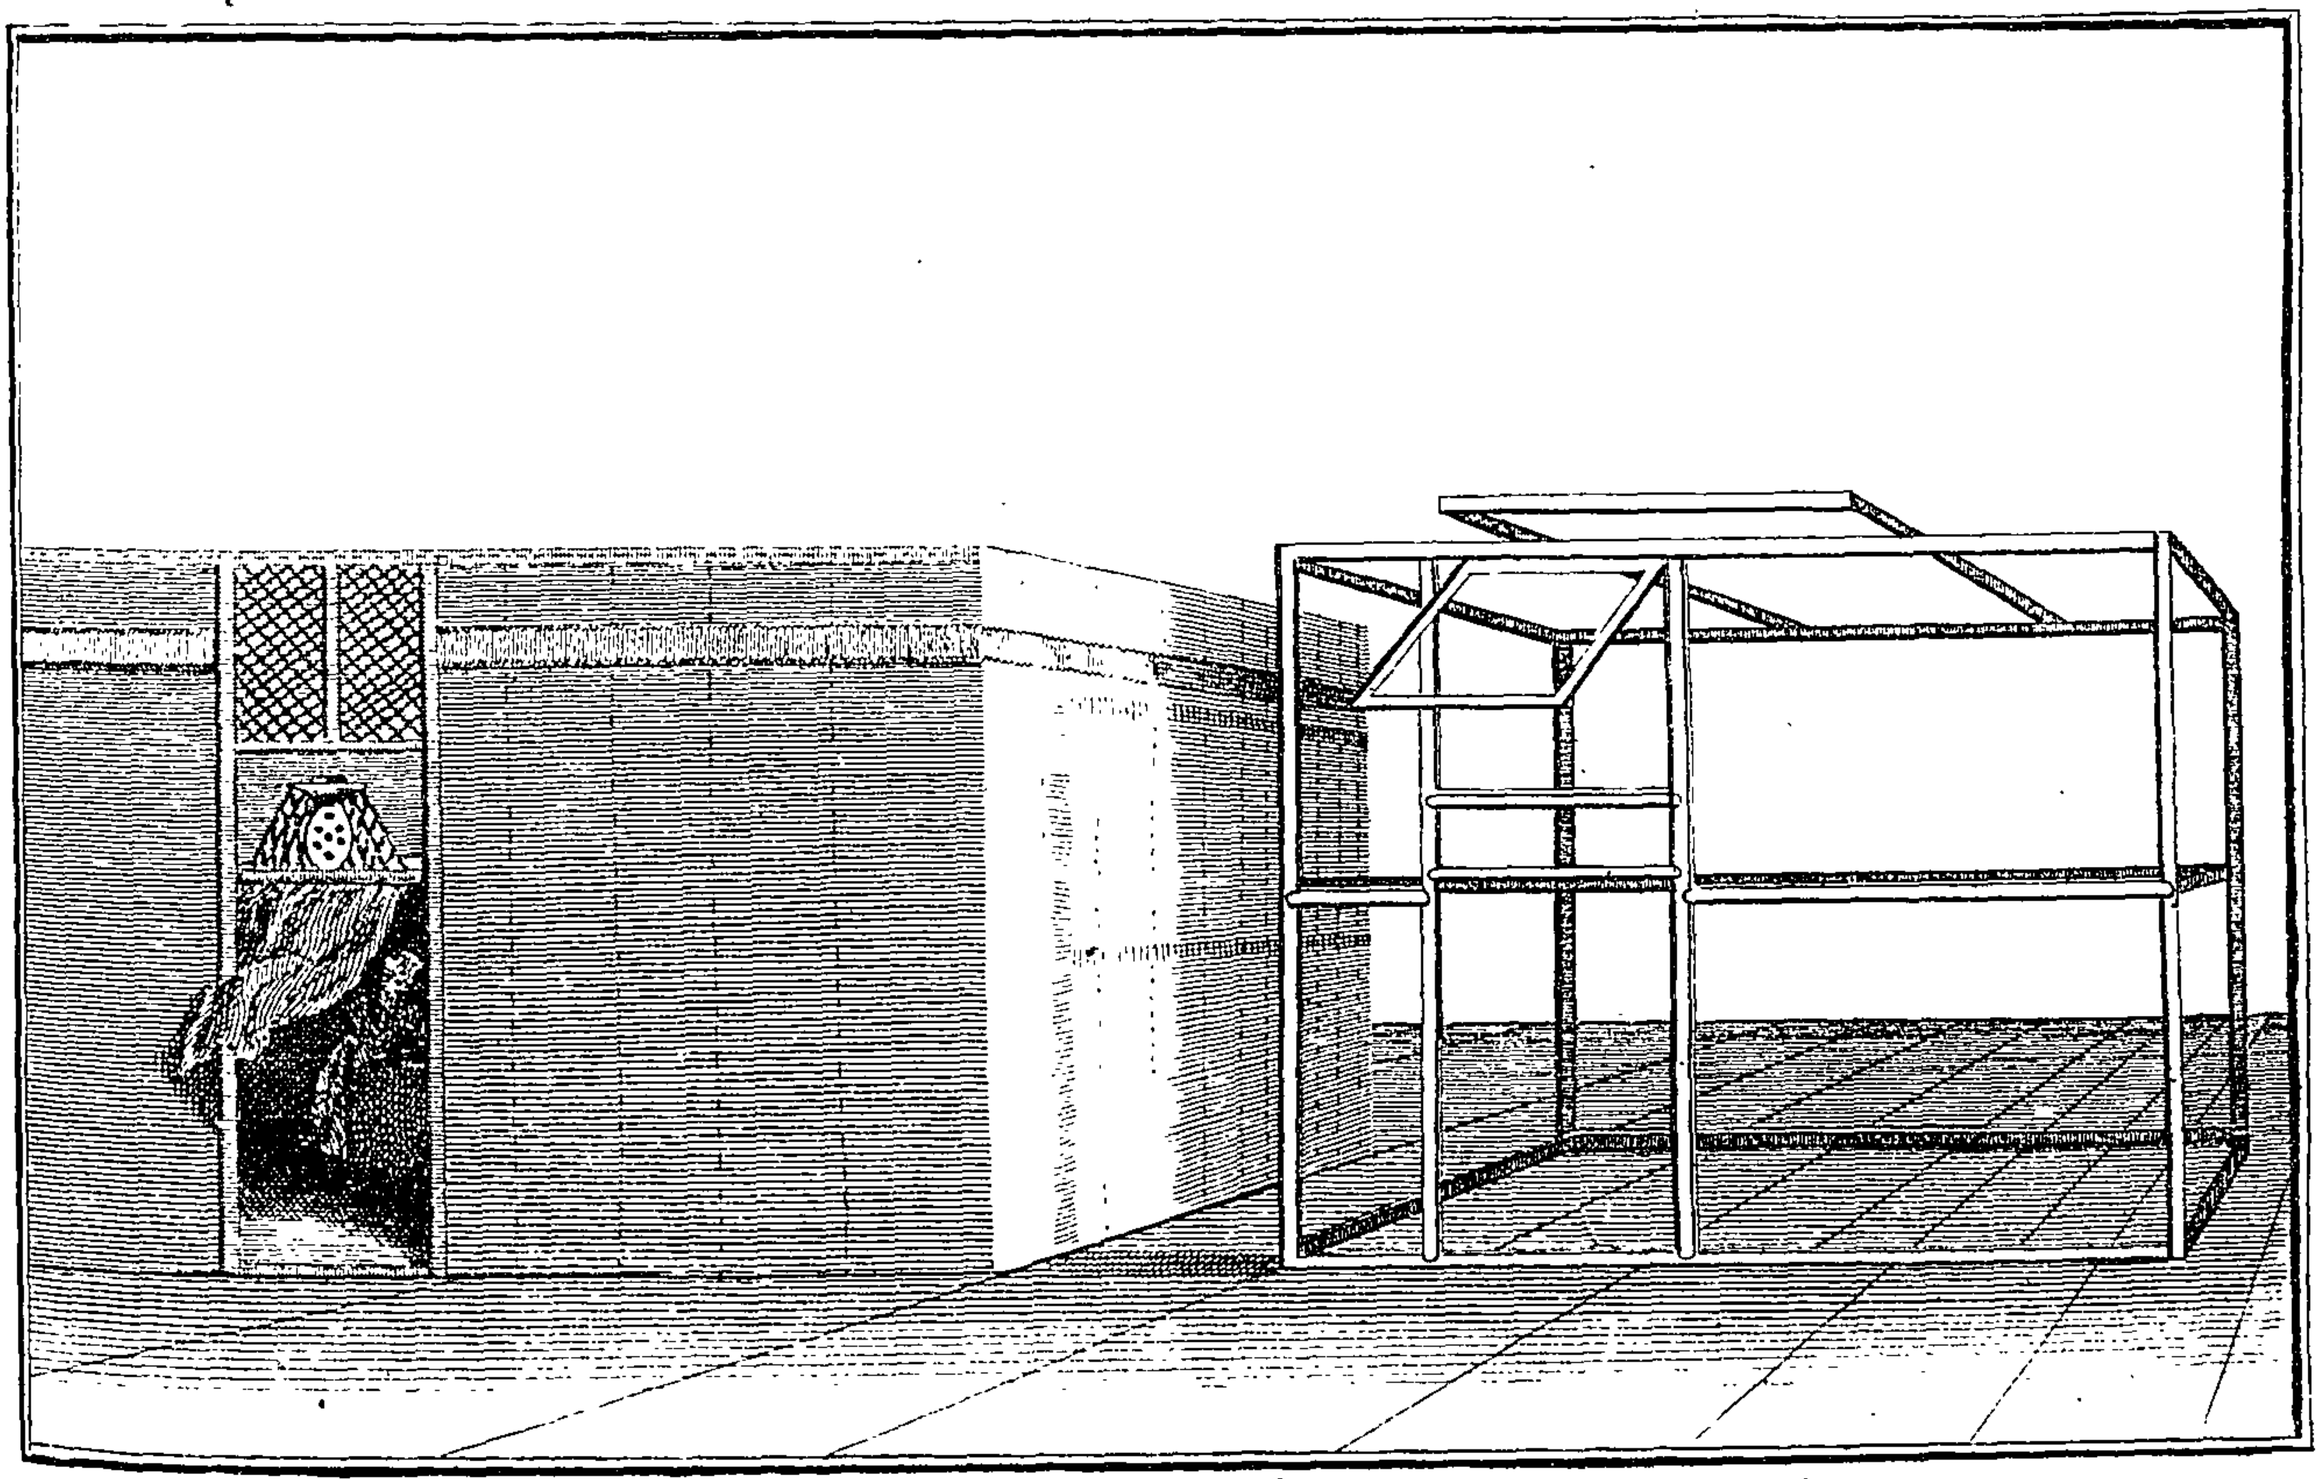
11. The Privileges and Immunities of Monks, which Cardinal Pallavicini artfully compares to the full Powers which the Roman Generals received from their Republic, when they were making War in Provinces at a great Diſtance from the Senate.

12. The Inquiſition.

[c] He breaks the Seal of the Church called the Fiſherman's Ring in the Preſence of three Cardinals, and the Vice-Chancellor breaks open the Seal of the Chancery, in the Preſence of the chief Officers who belong to that Court. The Impreſſion of the Fiſherman's Ring is St. Peter holding a Line with a Bait to it in the Water, and is made Uſe of for thoſe Briefs which are ſeal'd with red Wax. The Seal for Bulls bears the Figure of St. Peter and St. Paul, with a Croſs on one Side, and a Buſt with the Name of the reigning Pope on the other: When a Pope dies, the Buſt and Name are defaced, without damaging the reſt of the Seal; this laſt is only uſed for Bulls ſealed with Lead.

Ego	Cardinalis
O	O
Eligo in Summum Pontificem E. D. meum D. Cardinalem
O	O

Nomen.



Signa.

The printed Side of a Scrutiny Bill.

Figure representant le côté imprimé d'un Billet pour le Scrutin.

The Reverse of a Bill of Scrutiny and Accessus Adorned with flourishes.

Figure Representant le Revers d'un Billet pour le Scrutin, & pour l'accès: couvert de Fleurons.

The Structure and workmanship of the Cardinals Cells or apartments.

La Structure et la charpente des Cellules des Cardinaux.

broken or eraſed the Seals made uſe of for the Bulls, and other Diſpatches of the deceaſed Pope, [a] orders Money to be coined in his Name, with the Device of the vacant See.

POLICY exerts all her Arts, and ſets every Spring ſhe has in Motion at the Election of a Pope; nor do they always wait for the Death of the preſent Chief or Head of the Church, to begin thoſe Cabals and Intrigues which are proper for advancing him, whom they eſteem a fit Perſon to ſucceed in the Pontifical Throne: And although the College unanimouſly invoke the Aſſiſtance and Aid of the Holy Ghoſt, to direct them in the Choice of a Vicar of Jeſus Chriſt, yet their Eminences uſe all the artful Precautions imaginable one would think to prevent him from being any Ways concerned in the [c] Election. That Invocation may be reckon'd

[a] This Money bears two Keys in the Form of a Croſs under the Gonfalon or Flag of the Church, with this Motto, Sede Vacante.

[b] It is very probable, that in the earlieſt Ages of the Church, the Roman Clergy elected the Pope, and ſome will have it, that the People too were concern'd in it. In Proceſs of Time Odoacer, King of the Eruli, ordered there ſhould be no Election without his Conſent. Theodoric King of the Goths made the ſame Pretenſions in Italy; but the Law which Odoacer had made hereupon was abrogated in 502. by the Stratagems and Contrivances of Pope Symmachus; which did not hinder Theodoric, however, from nominating Felix IV. Pope in the Year 526. The Princes who ſucceeded followed the Example of their Predeceſſors, reſerving to themſelves the Right of confirming the new elected Pope, who could not take Poſſeſſion of the Pontificate without the Prince's Conſent. The Emperors of the Eaſt, having eſtabliſhed their Authority in Italy, retained for ſome Time the Right of approving and confirming the Clergy's Choice; but the Popes at length ſhook off this Yoke by the Generoſity of Lewis the Debonaire, Lothaire I. and Lewis II. who granted them Freedom of Election. In the tenth Century there were ſeveral Popes elected and depoſed at the Caprice of the Roman Nobility and Italian Princes, which obliged the Emperors to concern themſelves again in thoſe Elections, whence this Right was diſputed for a whole Century between the Emperors and the Popes. At laſt the Cardinals had the Power of Election reſigned to them, without the Senate, the People, or the Emperor being any ways concerned therein; and ever ſince the Election of Pope Celeſtin II. who came to the Pontificate in 1143, independent of the Roman People, or the Emperor's Miniſters, they have been in the Poſſeſſion of this Right. Honorius III. who was elected Pope in 1216. made an Order, that the Election ſhould be made in a Conclave. Gregory X. who held the See in 1271. ſettled, in a General Council held at Lions, the Form, Laws, and Proceedings of Election as they now are; but before his Time we are told that Innocent III. had ordered all Elections to be made three ſeveral Ways; by Scrutiny, Compromiſe, and Inſpiration.

We will briefly explain thoſe ſeveral Ways of electing a Pope by ſome few Remarks borrowed from the Hiſtory of Conclaves; the Relations of the Chevalier Corraro, the Idea of the Conclave, a ſmall Work printed in 1676. from Caſalius in his Diſcourſe De Chriſtianorum ritibus; and from another Diſſertation entitled Tableau de la Cour de Rome. We ſhall begin with the Election by Scrutiny, which is the only Way that has been uſed for a long while, and contains all the Formality that appears moſt eſſential for making the Election of a Pope canonical. And yet the Scrutiny is no more than mere Ceremony, ſince the ſeveral Factions of the Cardinals muſt unite beforehand in the Choice of the Perſon. This Harmony and Agreement is brought about by the moſt refined and delicate Strokes of Policy, and for the moſt Part comes on after their Eminencies have found out by ſeveral Scrutinies, the Diſpoſition of the ſacred College. Then, if the Votes for any of the Candidates come near the Number required, it is a very common Practice for the other Factions to fall off and ſwim down the Stream, and thereby contribute to the Pope's Election, fearing to draw on them his Hatred by a fruitleſs and unſeaſonable Oppoſition. Theſe are the Policies which the common People aſcribe to the Influence of the Holy Ghoſt.

The Scrutiny therefore conſiſts in collecting and examining Votes, given in by printed Billets, which the Cardinals put into a Chalice that ſtands on the Altar of the Chappel, where they are met together to chuſe the Pope. Theſe Billets are prepared by the Maſters of the Ceremonies, who put them into two golden Baſons placed at each End of a long Table, which ſtands on the Side of the high Altar, each of which Billets is a Span or Palm long, and half a Span broad, and are divided into eight equal Parts by parallel Lines taking up the whole Length of each Billet, as well on the Inſide as the Out; that is, the Reverſe of the Billet when rolled up. On the firſt Space rolled inward, theſe two Words Ego Cardinalis, ſtand at a ſmall Diſtance from each other to make Room for the Proper Name. The ſecond is a Blank, in which the Cardinal writes his Sirname and Titles. The third has two O's at each End, for the Cardinal's Seal, which for the Generality he has made on Purpoſe; For he never uſes his Coat of Arms on this Occaſion. The fourth is filled up with Eligo, &c. as in the Plate hereunto annexed. The fifth is for the Sirname and Titles of the Cardinal propoſed to be Pope. The ſixth is as the third. The ſeventh continues a Blank, and the eighth is filled up with a Motto, which the Cardinal, whoſe Name the Billet bears, makes Choice of out of the Scripture. The Reverſe of each Billet is divided likewiſe into eight equal Parts, and almoſt all of them are filled up with Flouriſhes, that the Writing on the other Side may not appear through; of which likewiſe you have a Repreſentation in the Print. Before the Scrutiny begins, little Bills, having the Names of all the Cardinals on them, are put into a Bag, with an Intent to draw thence three Scrutineers, three Overſeers of the Sick, and three Reviſors.

The Cardinals uſe all the Art imaginable to diſguiſe their Hands. They themſelves write what we have juſt before mentioned on the Scrutiny Billets; or if they have not Skill enough to conceal their Hands, they make uſe of an unknown Hand, that it may not be known who it is they vote for. Theſe Billets are wrapt up with all poſſible Dexterity and Addreſs, that it may be a Secret to whom they belong; after which they cloſe them in their Hands and take their Places; and then the Scrutiny begins in the following Manner. Every Cardinal takes the Billet thus written and folded up between the Thumb and the Forefinger of his Right Hand, and holding it up to the View of the other Members of the ſacred College, carries it to the high Altar, kneeling down upon the firſt Step, where he ſays an ejaculatory Prayer ſoftly; then goes up to the Altar, and takes the Oath aloud; after which he puts his Billet upon reckon'd among such Ceremonies as strike the Vulgar by their Appearance [a]: The Cardinals are oblig'd to enter the Conclave ten Days after the Death of the Pope; but before that they hear the Mass of the Holy Ghost in the [b] Gregorian Chappel, and some Bishop makes a Latin Harangue, exhorting them to make choice of a Person who is worthy to fill the Chair of the Prince of the Apostles. After this their Eminencies march in Procession to the Conclave, two by two, according to their Rank, attended by the Swiss Guards, and a vast Crowd of People, the Chorus all the while singing the Veni Creator. Being arrived at the Conclave, they take Possession of their Cells by Lot, after which they all go to the Paulin [c] Chappel, where the Bulls for the Election of the Pope are read, and the Dean of the sacred College exhorts the Assembly to act in Conformity to them. When this is over, the Cardinals are allowed to go Home to Dinner, but must return to the Conclave before three at Night; and the Master of the Ceremonies acquaints them, that they ought not upon the Patten which covers the Chalice, and from thence slides it into the Chalice, and then returns to his Place. This Office is perform'd by the Overseers of the Sick, for such Cardinals as are indisposed. They present the Scrutiny Billets to such Cardinals, together with a Box in the Form of an Urn, with a very small Hole in it, at which the sick Man puts in his Billet; nor can the Billet be got out again, but by opening the Box, which is carried to the Chappel, opened before all the Cardinals present, and then the Billet is put into the Chalice in the Manner already described.

Before the Scrutiny begins, the Sacristin, who is always an Augustin Friar, says the Mass of the Holy Ghost. The Scrutineers stand near the great Altar, to mix and open the Billets in the Chalice, and to see that the Scrutiny proceeds in due Form. The last Scrutineer takes these Billets one after another, and first shewing them to the Cardinals, puts them into another Chalice. If there are more or less Billets than there are Cardinals, he burns all he finds in the two Chalices, and each Cardinal makes a new one till the Scrutiny comes right. When the Billets are equal to the Number of Cardinals, the Scrutiny is published in the following Manner: The Heads of the three Orders of Cardinals go up to the high Altar, take the Chalice in which the Billets are put, carry it to the Table beforementioned, and then retire, and the three Scrutineers come and seat themselves at the Table, with their Faces towards the Cardinals. The first Scrutineer turns the Chalice upside down upon the Table, opens each Billet in the Place where the Vote is written, and looks upon the Name of the Cardinal who is therein voted for; and still as he opens them, he puts them into the Hands of the second Scrutineer, who looks likewise on the Name, and gives it to the third, who reads the Name aloud. Mean while the Cardinals mark each Name upon a Sheet of Paper, on which all their Names are printed. Those who are named set down also the Votes given them, to see if they have a sufficient Number to be elected. This Number must be at least two thirds.

The last Scrutineer files all these Billets, that none of them may be lost, and the File is kept in View, till he has put it into a Chalice set apart for that Purpose. When the Scrutiny is over, the Billets are again told over, and three Revisors examine them; and they are burnt when the Election has been approved as canonical. But, however, it is then allowable to unrol them quite, when a thousand Pieces of Falshood and Perfidiousness appear. If the Votes do not rise to a sufficient Number, Billets are taken in order to chuse the Pope by Way of Accessus. We must inform the Reader by the Way, that there scarcely ever is a Scrutiny without this Accessus, and that it is a Thing but seldom, if ever, heard of, that the holy Father should be chosen by the former Way only. The Accessus therefore is to correct the Scrutiny. In this they give their Votes by other Billets, on which is written Accedo Domino, &c. when they join their Vote to another's; or Accedo Nemini, when they keep to their first Vote. The Accessus is performed in the same Manner as the Scrutiny; only they do not take the Oath again. The Scrutineers examine the Billets of the Accessus, as well as they did those of the Scrutiny, and the Cardinals after the same Manner, set down the Votes which are gained thereby to any of the Candidates.

The Practice of the Accessus is derived from the antient Method of debating in the Roman Senate; when one Senator was of another's Opinion, he rose up and went over to his Collegue. This was called Pedibus ire in Sententiam, and such Senators Pedarii. When they kept their Places, they said, Accedo ad Sententiam.

After the Revisors have very accurately examin'd the Votes of the Accessus, and find the Election to be perfectly canonical, they send for three apostolical Notaries into the Chapel where the Election was made, who, upon inspecting the Billets and other Pieces which the Scrutineers and Revisors lay before them, draw up a Memorandum of the Election. All the Cardinals who have assisted at the Conclave sign and seal this Record; after which the Scrutineers burn all the Billets, both of the Scrutiny and the Accessus, in Presence of all the Cardinals.

The Pope is elected by Compromise, when the Cardinals, disagreeing in their Choice, engage by mutual Compromise to refer themselves for it to some particular Cardinals of Probity, and to acknowledge him whom they shall nominate by Virtue of the Power to them given for that Purpose, as duly elected. The Election by Way of Inspiration is in some Measure riotous and tumultuary. A select Number of Cardinals of different Factions, who have determin'd to put every Thing to the last Push, begin to cry out, such a one is Pope, as it were by Inspiration. They make their Attempt this Way, when they think they are strong enough to carry it. Adoration is the same as Inspiration, which is when two thirds of the Conclave, being agreed in the Person, go in a Body and adore and acknowledge the Pope they approve of, as Head of the Church. The Elections by Way of Compromise, Inspiration, and Adoration, but seldom happen. The Scrutiny and Accessus are the usual Ways generally observ'd.

As soon as the Pope is elected, it is customary for his Domestics and the Populace to plunder his Cell in the Conclave, and the Palace in which he resided.

[a] This is taken from the Dissertation before the History of Conclaves.

[b] So called because Gregory XIII. dedicated it to St. Gregory of Nazianza, and caused the Body of that Saint to be deposited there.

[c] So called from its being founded by Paul III.

to

MASSE of the HOLY GHOST | La MESSE du SAINT ESPRIT | The CARDINALS entring the CONCLAVE | L'ENTREE des CARDINAUX au CONCLAVE.

The CARDINALS SCRUTINY for the ELECTION of a POPE. | La SCRUTIN des CARDINAUX pour L'ELECTION d'un PAPE. | First general CONGREGATION of the CARDINALS. | Premiere CONGREGATION generale des CARDINAUX.

B. Picart del. C. Du Bosc Fecit et Ex.

INSPECTION into the PROVISIONS. | L'EXAMEN des VIVRES. | The MANNER of carrying PROVISIONS into the CONCLAVE | MANIERE dont on porte les VIVRES au CONCLAVE.

to ſhut themſelves up, without they are determin'd to continue there as long as it ſhall laſt, as the Bulls order and direct; and ſuch as afterwards go out cannot return again. The Governor and Marſhal of the Conclave poſt their Soldiers in ſuch Order as we ſhall immediately deſcribe, and in ſuch Places as they judge moſt requiſite for the Safety of the Election. The Embaſſadors of Princes, and all ſuch as have any Intereſt in the Election of a future Pope, are allowed to continue in the Conclave for the firſt twenty four Hours[a]; and then it is, that, forgetting the Inſpirations of the Holy Ghoſt, they make [b] Cabals, and form Negotiations, the Myſteries of which are very difficult to be dived into. When all ſuch as are not to remain in the Conclave are gone out, the Doors are ſhut, the Conclave is wall'd up, and Guards are poſted at all the Avenues. The Cardinal Dean, and Cardinal Camerlengo, viſit the Conclave, to ſee if it be well ſhut, and an Act thereof is drawn up by an Apoſtolical Notary.

None but the Cardinals, and two Conclaviſts for each, (one an Eccleſiaſtic, and the other a Soldier, remain in the Conclave.) Such Cardinals as are Princes, or old, or infirm, are ſometimes allowed three. The reſt appointed for the Service of the Conclave are the Sacriſtin, the under Sacriſtin, a Secretary, an under Secretary, a Confeſſor who is always a Jeſuit, two Phyſicians, a Chirurgeon, two Barbers, an Apothecary, and their Apprentices, five Maſters of the Ceremonies, a Bricklayer, a Carpenter, ſixteen Porters or Valets, for hard Labour.

[c] Though the Office of a Conclaviſt be [d] incommodious and uneaſy, yet on Account of its Privileges 'tis very much ſought after. A Conclaviſt may aſſign the Penſions which he has out of Benefices for a particular Sum, which ſaid Sum is determin'd by the Privilege, which the Pope elect grants to him who makes the Aſſignment. This Office likewiſe gives a Man the Privilege of being a Citizen in any Town he ſhall make choice of within the Eccleſiaſtical Juriſdiction; beſides which, the Pope, after his Election, diſtributes a Sum of Money to each Conclaviſt. But theſe are but ſmall Perquiſites in compariſon of the other Advantages which this Office procures; for it gives an Opportunity and Means of knowing all that paſſes in the Conclave, and of managing the Tempers of the Cardinals by all the Artifices of Italian Cunning and Complaiſance. A Conclaviſt is ſometimes the ſecret Agent of the Miniſters of crowned Heads. Every Officer, however, of the Conclave takes an Oath not to reveal any of its Secrets.

The Order obſerv'd at Rome during the Conclave.

To [e] prevent the Diſorders which might poſſibly ariſe from an Inter-Regnum, the Governor of Rome iſſues out Orders to deter all Perſons, except the Guards,

[a] Till three at Night. When it ſtrikes three, a Maſter of the Ceremonies rings a Bell, after which every Body retires, except thoſe who are to remain in the Conclave, which is then walled up. Taken from Lunadoro.

[b] No ſooner is a Pope choſen, but the Cardinals begin to think on a Succeſſor for him, and Projects and Parties are formed during his Life-time, and he who has any ſecret Thoughts of being elected muſt diſguiſe his Sentiments from the Time he enters into Orders, till he is conſtituted a Cardinal. They who are deſirous of being inform'd what a Papable Subject is, and what is to be done to be thought one, the Management of the non-papable Cardinals, and the Cabals of public Miniſters, ſhould read the Idea of the Conclave, printed in 1676. Corraro's Account of the Court of Rome, and the Hiſtory of the Conclaves; or, if he had rather, The Picture of the Court of Rome, by Aimon, who has copied the preceding Writers verbatim.

[c] Taken from the Idea of the Conclave in 1676.

[d] The Author of the Idea, &c. thus expreſſes thoſe Inconveniencies. . . . . "He muſt be ſhut up in a little Corner "of his Maſter's Cell, and do every menial Office for him. He muſt fetch his Victuals and Drink, which that "Cardinal's Officers give him in from without, through an Inlet that communicates to all his Quarter, twice every "Day. . . . . He is to wait on his Maſter at Table, to keep every Thing very clean, and when he has done, to ſerve "himſelf; not to mention the other Inconveniences of a very ſevere Confinement, where no Light is received, but "at Windows half mured up . . . . . and where the Air, when it is hot Weather, may at length break the ſtrongeſt Conſtitutions."

[e] Hiſtory of Conclaves, and Lunadoro.

from carrying Arms, either in the Day-Time, or the Night; and all ſuch as tranſgreſs are ſeverely puniſhed. Three Cardinals, whom they call the Heads of the Orders of the ſacred College, are elected, as we have already obſerv'd, to take care of the City, and the Governor muſt give an Account of every Thing to them. They have the Adminiſtration of Juſtice, and of the Treaſury; and, in ſhort, every Thing that relates to Affairs of State.

THE Clergy of Rome, both ſecular and regular, are oblig'd to go every Day in Proceſſion to St. Peter's, to implore the Aid and Aſſiſtance of God in the Election of his Vicar, and march round the Vatican, ſinging the [a] Veni Creator.

WHEN the Conclave is ſhut up, the under Maſter of the Ceremonies goes thrice every Hour through the whole Conclave, ringing a little Bell at ſix in the Morning, and two in the Afternoon, in order to call the Cardinals ad [b] capellam Domini; and when it rings laſt, each Cardinal comes out of his Cell, attended by his Conclaviſts, one of whom carries his Standiſh into the Chapel where the Scrutiny is to be, and the other his Cope and Cap, which his Eminence puts on when he enters the Chapel. This Cope is nothing like what they wear at any of their other Ceremonies. It is a kind of Crimſon Cloak, with a long Train; in all other Reſpects 'tis made like a Monk's Cowl, and is faſtened with a Claſp.

[c] To gratify the Reader's Curioſity, we ſhall deſcribe this Chapel. At the upper End of it is painted the laſt Judgment, by Michael Angelo (though Nodot places it in the Paulin Chapel.) The Floor, and the Benches on each Side, for the Cardinals, are covered with green Cloth. The Seat for the Dean of the Cardinals is on the Right Hand as you come in, and for the firſt Deacon overagainſt him on the Left. We have already obſerv'd, that there is a long Table placed before the Altar, and two Diſhes or Baſons upon it filled with printed Billets for the Scrutiny and Acceſſus. On the Middle are alſo placed two Chalices for the Billets, a Bag wherein the laſt of the Cardinal Deacons puts the Balls intended for ballotting for the Scrutineers, Overſeers of the Sick, and the Reviſors; and a Picture for taking the Oath, before the Cardinals put their Billets into the Chalice.

A Deſcription of the CONCLAVE.

SOME Hiſtorians, who have treated on the Conclave, have given it the Denomination of a petty Republic; and ſuch it will appear with reſpect to the ſeeming Equality of all the Cardinals who are ſhut up in it, and maintain'd at the Coſts and Charges of the Apoſtolic Chamber. The Conclave is not fixed to any one determinate Place, nay we have ſeveral Inſtances [d] in Hiſtory of its being held in different Places. Though the Conſtitutions of the Church allow the Cardinals to make choice of ſuch Place for the Conclave as they think moſt convenient, yet it is generally held in the Palace of St. Peter, in the Vatican, on Account of the magnificent Buildings, the Advantage of its ſpacious open Square, and its Galleries, which are ſufficient to contain that prodigious Number of Servants who go backwards and forwards twice a Day, to attend on the Cardinals. The Spaciouſneſs of the Piazza before the Palace, and the Church of St. Peter's, where the Ceremonies are perform'd, being contiguous to it, are [a] This is the Hymn of the Holy Ghoſt.

[b] This is the Chapel of the Scrutiny, being that of Sixtus IV. The Scrutiny is taken twice every Day. Vide Lunadoro, The Hiſtory of Conclaves, or their Copyiſt, Aimon's Tableau de la Cour de Rome.
[c] Hiſtory of Conclaves.
[d] That for Clement V. was held at Perouſe. Vide Hiſtory of Conclaves.

far-farther Inducements for the fixing their Choice on the Vatican, to hold the Conclave in.

THE Conclave is a Row of little pretty [a] Cells, made of Wainſcot, at the Coſt and Charges of the Apoſtolic Chamber, where the Cardinals are ſhut up whilſt they are employed about the Election of a Pope. Every Cell has ſome ſmall Portion partition'd off for the Conclaviſts, and is numbered, and drawn for by Lot, as we have already mention'd. They are all ranged in one Line along the Galleries and the Hall of the Vatican, but with a ſmall Interval or Space between them. Thoſe Cardinals who are Creatures of the deceaſed Pope, order theirs to be hung with a purple Stuff, and the reſt have them hung with green Serge; the Seats, Table, and Bed too, are covered with the ſame, and over each Cell are the Arms of the particular Cardinal to whom it belongs. There is a long Corridor runs between the Cells and the Windows, to let the Light received at the Windows in upon the Conclave; and this Light is received in at the Cells by little Glaſs-Windows placed towards the Corridor. The Plan of theſe Cells may be ſeen in the [b] Plate hereunto annexed.

THE Swiſs, who guard the Door of the Vatican without, keep Centry before it Day and Night, and board up [c] the Doors of the Gallery opening into St. Peter's Square, where a Guard is likewiſe kept. In the Square is a Body of Troops commanded by the General of the Church, who for the generality is continued by the College of Cardinals. He has an Apartment in the Vatican, adjoining to the Prelate's, who is Governor of the Conclave. Near the Caſtle of St. Angelo there is another Body of Troops, the Soldiers whereof are raiſed by the [d] Mareſchal of the Church, who moreover places Centinels round the Conclave, and principally at the Gate where the [e] ſeven Inlets or Towers are, thro' which their Eminencies receive their Proviſions.

NEITHER the Cardinals, nor any of thoſe other Perſons who are ſhut up in the Conclave with them, can be ſpoken to, but at particular Hours, and then it muſt be aloud, and in the Italian or Latin Language.

The Manner of carrying Proviſions to the CARDINALS, whilſt ſhut up in the CONCLAVE.

BEFORE any Proviſions, intended for the Conclave, are permitted to be carried in, the Prelates who guard the Inlets carefully examine them, leſt, under Pretence of furniſhing their Eminencies with Neceſſaries, Letters ſhould be delivered to them, either from the Miniſters of foreign Princes, or other Perſons who have an Intereſt in the Election of the Pope.

[a] They are but ten Foot ſquare.

[b] See the third and fourth Figure in the Print.

[c] Taken from Lunadoro.

[d] This Charge belongs to the Family of the Savelli, by an Indulto from the Popes, on Account of its great Antiquity. Whilſt the See is vacant, the Mareſchal is oblig'd to be at the chief Gate of the Conclave Night and Day.

[e] It muſt be obſerved likewiſe, that there is a great Gate of the Conclave, which is never opened but to let out the Cardinals or their Conclaviſts, when they happen to be indiſpos'd in the Conclave. This Gate and the Inlets have one Lock within, and another without. The outſide Keys of the Inlets are kept by a Prelate, who is ſtiled the Governor of the Conclave, and thoſe on the Inſide by the Maſters of the Ceremonies. The outſide Keys belonging to the Maſter-Gate are in the Cuſtody of Prince Savelli; and thoſe belonging to the Inſide are kept by the Cardinal Camerlengo, who likewiſe keeps thoſe of the little Wicket, which is open'd only for the Audiences which thoſe Cardinals, who are the Heads of the ſeveral Orders, give. There are outſide Keys likewiſe to this Wicket, kept by Prince Savelli. In ſhort, as if all theſe inſide and outſide Keys were not ſufficient, a ſtrong Chain is hung acroſs the Inſide of the Maſter-Gate, the Key whereof is in the Poſſeſſion of the grand Maſter of the Ceremonies.

" [a] EVERY Day about Noon, and towards the Evening, the Officers of each Cardi" nal come in the Coaches belonging to their Masters into St. Peter's Square, and alight-
" ing go to the Steward of the Conclave, and demand their Master's Dinner; or, if he " has his own Kitchen, go and fetch it, and then carry it to the [b] Inlet in the Order
" hereafter mentioned. First, the Cardinal's two Staff-Bearers, appear each with his wooden " Mace, painted in a purple Colour, having his Eminency's Arms upon them. In the " next Place marches his Valet de Chambre, with his silver Mace. After him his " Gentlemen follow two and two bareheaded. After them the [c] Maitre d'hotel, with a " Napkin on his Shoulder, attended by the Butler and the Carver. The Staff-Bearers,
" who follow them, carry the Cardinal's Victuals and Drink on a Lever, whereon
" hangs a large Kettle, containing several Pots, Plates, Dishes, &c...... others carry " large Baskets, in which are Bottles of Wine, Bread, Fruit, &c. When they get to
" the Inlet, or Turning-Box, they name aloud the Cardinal to whom they belong, that " his Valet de Chambre, who attends within the Conclave, may come forward and have " Provisions taken in by Porters, who carry them to the Cardinal's Cell. All these Pro" visions are carefully and strictly examined by the Prelate, who, with one of the Ro-
" man Conservators, is on Watch, to prevent any Letter or Note from slipping in; nay,
" they have an Authority to uncover the Meat, for Fear of any Deceit. All the Bottles
" and Flaggons must be of Glass or Chrystal, without any Covers, to the End that what " is contain'd in them may the more easily be discern'd; but this Examination is not car" ried to the utmost Severity, because all the Precautions they could possibly make use
" of, would not obstruct the Cardinals from finding out Ways and Means to carry on " their Intrigues, and know what passes without. There are some of them, who, by " Virtue of a certain Composition, can conceal several Lines written on the Skin of a " Fowl, without the Examiners being able to discover any Thing of the Matter; and
" very often, all the Eatables, which at such a Time are served up to their Eminencies
" Tables, are contrived for so many Symbols and Hieroglyphics.

" WHEN the Provisions are entred, one of the Pope's running Footmen, who stands
" by in his purple Robe, with his silver Mace in his Hand, shuts the Door of the In" lets. The Assistant-Prelate after that observes whether all is fast, and seals the Lock " with his Coat of Arms. The Masters of the Ceremonies do the same within. As " to the Prelates who assist at this Function, they are deputed by the College, and consist " of an Auditor of the Rota, or Clerk of the Chamber, a Prothonotary, a Referenda-
" ry, &c. all dependent on the Governor of the Conclave."

The Adoration paid to the POPE after his Election.

" [d] AS soon as the Pope is elected, the Cardinals, who are the Heads of their re" spective Orders, ask his Holiness's Consent, and the [e] Name he is determin'd
to

[a] Taken from the Tableau de la Cour de Rome, who borrowed it from Lunadoro.

[b] They are called Ruote in the Italian. And 'tis through them that the Cardinals and Conclavists talk with the People that are without. Their Eminencies through them give Audience to Ambassadors, and all those who are to receive any Orders from the sacred College, as the Governors of Rome, and of the Borgo of St. Peter, &c. who never go into the Conclave after it is shut up. There is no Manner of Difference between an Audience of the Pope, and those of the Cardinals. Three Genuflexions are made to them, and the Reason is, because the Pope is among them, though not yet elected. It is but reasonable therefore to pay this august Assembly the same Homage and Respect as is due to the Pope himself, since he is actually Incognito in the Conclave. Vide Discourse on the Conclave, prefixed to the History of Conclaves.

[c] In Italian, Scalco.

[d] Extracted from the Tableau de la Cour de Rome; the Author of which for the most Part borrows all he says Verbatim from an Italian Treatise, entitled, Relazione della Corte di Roma, e de' Riti da osservarsi in essa, &c.

[e] Sergius III. or IV. who was before called Os Porci; that is Swine's Face, was the first Pope who thought proper to change his Name upon his Exaltation to the Pontificate; which Method his Successors have followed Vide Fascic. Temp.

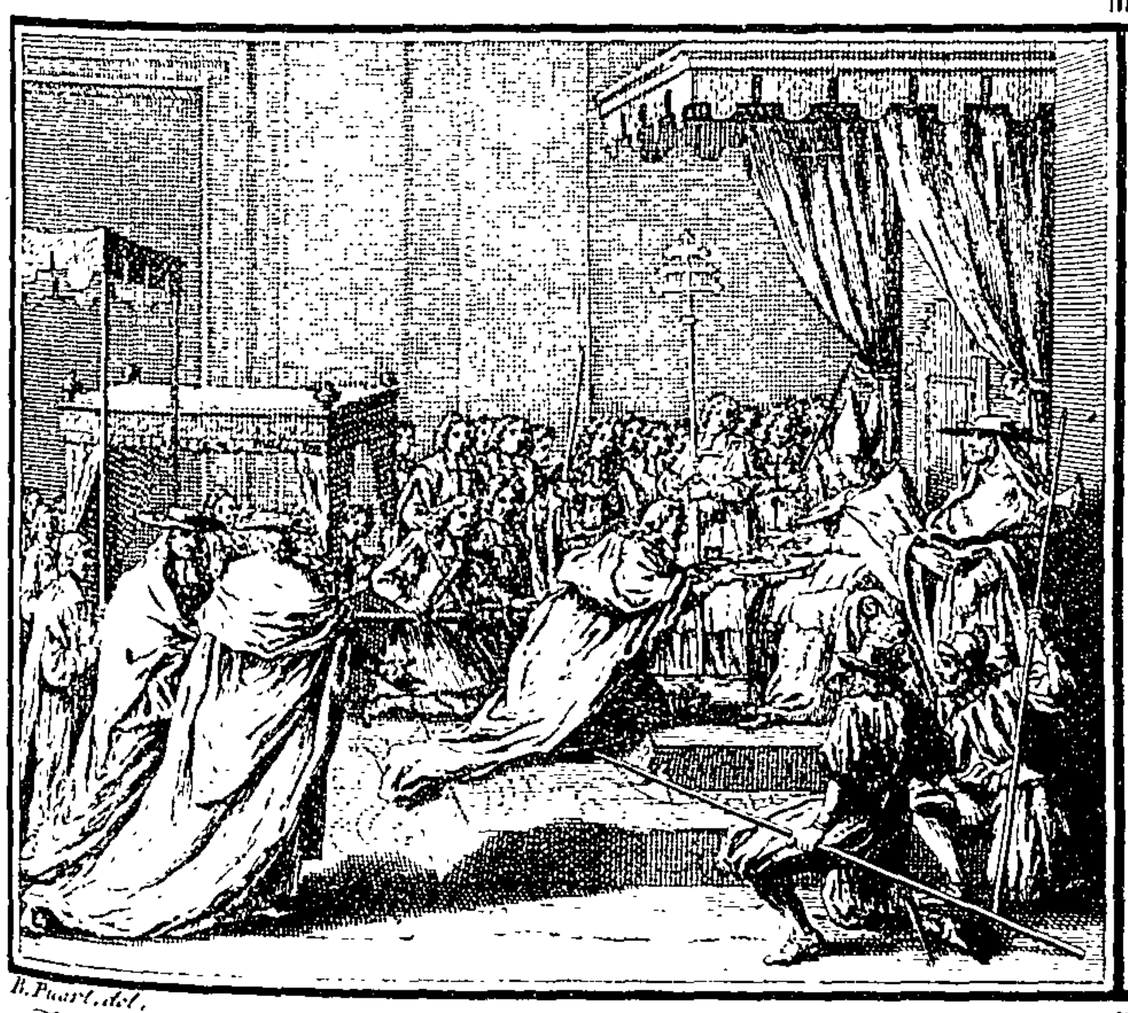
The ADORATION of the POPE. Sitting on the high ALTER of S.t Peters

L'ADORATION du PAPE sur le grand AUTEL de S.t PIERRE.

The ADORATION of the POPE in the Chapple.



L'ADORATION du PAPE dans la CHAPELLE.

The POPES CORONATION.
Le COURONNEMENT du PAPE.

Hards of flax burnt before the POPE.
Les ÉTOUPES brulées devant le PAPE.

R. Pearl. del.

C. Du. Bosc. exc.

The KEYS presented to the POPE in the porch of S.t Gohn of Lateran.

Les CLEFS presentée au PAPE dans le portique de S.t Jean de Latran

The JEWS presenting the PENTATEUCH to the POPE in the COLLISEUM

Les JUIFS presentant le PENTATEUQUE au PAPE dans le Colisée.

" to aſſume in this Alteration of his State; upon which the [a] Fiſherman's Ring is im" mediately given him. The Maſters of the Ceremonies draw up a formal Inſtrument " of his Declaration, and deliver in a Duplicate of it to the College. The two firſt Cardinal-
" Deacons conduct the new Pope behind the Altar, where, with the Aſſiſtance of the Maſ-
" ters of the Ceremonies, and the Sacriſtin (who is always an Auguſtin Monk) they take off
" his [b] Cardinal's Habit to put on the Pontifical, which is a white Taffeta Caſſoc, a
" Linen Rochet, a Camail, and a Cap both of red Sattin, with Shoes made of red Cloth
" embroidered with Gold, and a Golden Croſs on the upper Part. The Pope, being
" thus pompouſly dreſs'd, is carried in his Chair before the Altar of the Chapel ap" pointed for the Election, and there the Cardinal-Dean firſt, and after him the reſt of " the Cardinals [c] adore his Holineſs upon their Knees, kiſſing his Foot, and his Right
" Hand: After which the holy Father [d] takes them up and gives them the Salute of Peace
" on the Right [e] Cheek. After this the firſt Cardinal-Deacon, preceded by the Maſter
" of the Ceremonies, who carries the Croſs, and by a Choir of Muſicians who ſing the " Anthem, Ecce ſacerdos magnus, &c. behold the High Prieſt ſo acceptable to God, and ſo
" juſt, goes to [f] the great Lodge of St. Peter, where the Maſter Maſon takes care to have
" the Door opened, that the Cardinal may paſs into the Balcony to acquaint the People
" with the Pope's Election, crying with an audible Voice, Annuntio vobis gaudium mag-
" num, habemus Papam, &c. I bring you glad Tidings, we have a Pope, &c. Then one " of the large Culverins of St. Peter's is diſcharged, but without Ball, to give the Go" vernor of the Caſtle of St. Angelo Notice to diſcharge all his Artillery: All the Bells of " the City fall a ringing at the ſame Time, and the Air reſounds with the chearful
" Sound of Drums, Trumpets, and Kettle Drums.

" During the Roar of the Artillery, the Sound of the Bells, and the Melody both " of Vocal and Inſtrumental Muſick, the Romans inceſſantly break out into ſolemn
" Vows and loud Acclamations for the new Pope. [g] The ſame Day, about two Hours
" before Night, the Pope, having his Cope and his Mitre on, is carried and ſet upon the " Altar of Sixtus's Chapel, where the Cardinals in their purple Copes come, and a " ſecond Time adore the new Pontiff, who is ſeated upon the Relics of the Altar Stone.
" This Adoration is celebrated in the ſame Manner as the former, the Muſicians all the " Time ſinging Anthems ſuitable to the ſolemn Occaſion. In the mean Time the En-
" cloſures of the Conclave are broken, or taken down, and the Cardinals, having the " Muſic before them, deſcend into the Middle of St. Peter's Church. The Pope follows
" them, carried in his pontifical Chair under a red Canopy embelliſhed with Gold " Fringe. His Bearers ſeat him on the great Altar of St. Peter, where the Cardinals
" pay their Adoration to him a third Time, and the [h] Foreign Ambaſſadors after them,
" before a prodigious Number of Spectators, with which this ſpacious Church is crouded
" to the utmoſt Extent of the very Porch. Te Deum is then ſung, and the Cardinal-Dean,
" who is on the Epiſtle Side, reads the Verſes and Prayers appointed for that Purpoſe
" in the Roman Ceremonial. After this his Holineſs is ſet down on the higheſt Step of " the Altar. A Cardinal-Dean takes off his Mitre, and then he ſolemnly bleſſes the " People. His Pontificalia are then taken off, and twelve Chairmen in long ſcarlet

Faſcic. Tempor. Some are of Opinion that the Popes did not change their Names till the Time of John XII. who was before named Octavian, and held the Pontificate in 956. long after Sergius II. and many Years before Sergius VI.

[a] This Particular is extracted from a Book entitled, Sacrar. Cerem. Eccleſiæ Romanæ Lib. III. L. 1. The Tableau, &c. of which this is an Extract, takes no Notice of it.

[b] Theſe Clothes are given to the Clerks of the Ceremonies. Vide Cerem. Eccl. Rom.

[c] Genuflefſi, Relaz. della Corte di Roma.

[d] Da ſua S. è fatto levar in piedi, Ibid.

[e] On each Cheek, nell' una e nell' altera guancia, Ibid.

[f] La loggia della Benedizione, Ibid.

[g] Tableau de la Cour de Rome, he takes it from the beforementioned Treatiſe.

[h] Prælati nobiles. Cerem. Eccl. Rom. Lib. I.

" Cloaks hanging down to the Ground, place him in his Chair, and convey [a] him on " their Shoulders into his Apartment."

As to the kiſſing his Holineſs's Feet, it is doubtleſs a very antient Cuſtom. Baronius pretends to give an Inſtance of [b] it in the Year 204. and it appears that afterwards the Emperor Juſtin I. Pepin King of France, Frederic Barbaroſſa, &c. all kiſſed the Pope's Feet. The Time, however, when this Cuſtom became conſtantly practiſed is not exactly known. Tho' this Ceremony, conſider'd in the Opinion of the Vulgar, as an Inſtance of the Veneration and Eſteem which Chriſtians have for his Vicar, it will appear, in the main, that it is entirely referred to Jeſus Chriſt alone. By obſerving 1. that the Pope's Slipper has a Croſs upon it, which is the Emblem of CHRIST crucified. [c] The Succeſſors of St. Peter, enlightned by the Holy Ghoſt, in order to prevent any ſuperſtitious Abuſe, which a blind Zeal too often leads People into, have order'd that their Sandals ſhall have this Croſs on the Upper Leathers: So that it is not his Holineſs's Feet, but the Croſs of JESUS CHRIST crucified that is kiſſed; and this is a Demonſtration, that the Pope is [d] Servant of the Servants of JESUS CHRIST. 2. Tho' the Croſs was not on the Upper Leather, yet the Dignity of the Perſon might juſtify this Adoration; and 3. the Sanctity of the ſovereign Pontiff would ſtill be a farther Juſtification of it. His Feet in ſhort ought to be kiſſed after the ſame Manner, and with the ſame Reſpect, as the [e] Croſs and other holy Images are kiſſed.

THE Adoration is ultimately referred to God. It is not to the Pope that 'tis paid, but to JESUS CHRIST, before whom Mary and Magdalen fell down and [f] worſhipped. We are of Opinion, however, without preſuming to derogate from the Dignity of the holy Father, or depreciate the Reſpect due to the holy See, that Part of the Honours which are paid to the Pope, ariſe and ſpring from thoſe paid to [g] the antient Roman Emperors, whether as ſupreme Pontiffs, that is, Heads of the Religion of the Romans, or as Sovereigns of the State; but we muſt add at the ſame Time, that theſe Honours are now look'd upon as reaſonable, juſt and neceſſary; and Pope Innocent III. uſed to ſay, That [h] the Church being the Spouſe of CHRIST's Vicar, brought him in Marriage a full Power over all Temporal as well as Spiritual Concerns. That the Mitre is the Emblem or Symbol of the Latter, as the Crown is of the former; and that they both intimate to all Chriſtians, that he is King of Kings, and Lord of Lords.

[a] Stephen II. was the firſt Pope that was ever carried upon Men's Shoulders after his Election. The illuſtrious Men of old Rome were carried in a ſort of Litter (Leſtica) by their Slaves. In all Probability the Cuſtom of carrying the Pope on Men's Shoulders was gradually introduced after the Fall of Paganiſm at Rome. As for Stephen II. it appears, from the Character given of him by Platina, that his Merit contributed very much to that Honour being done him.

[b] Pedibgna ad Caium Papam ſe contulit, ad pedeſque procidens eos ex more exoſculata eſt.

[c] Divino ſpirante lumine appoſuerunt Crucem ſupra eorum Sandulia, &c. Caſalius de Chriſt. ritibus.

[d] Unde proteſtantur ſummi Pontifices eſſe ſe ſervos ſervorum ejus quem ipſi repræſentant per Crucem. Ibid.

[e] Caſalius, Ibid.

[f] S. Mat. Chap. xxviii.

[g] Exempla ſunt tum de Caio Caligulâ, Nerone, Othone, Trajano, Adriano & Diocleſiano, qui alios ad oſcula genuum, & pedum admiſerunt; præſertim ultimus. Joh. Steph. de oſculo Romani Pontificis, Cap. viii. compares the Rights of his Holineſs's Pontificate with thoſe of the ſovereign Pontiffs of Pagan Rome, and to that End conſult Dionyſ. Halic. for the Deſcription of the latter.

[h] Eccleſia Sponſa, ſaid he, non nupſit vacua, ſed dotem mihi tribuit abſque pretio pretioſam, ſpiritualium plenitudinem, & latitudinem temporalium. In ſignum ſpiritualium contulit mihi mitram, in ſignum temporalium dedit mihi coronam: Mitram pro ſacerdotio, coronam pro regno: Illius me conſtituens vicarium, qui habet in veſtimento & femore ſuo ſcriptum, Rex Regum, & Dominus Dominantium.

The POPE'S CORONATION.

SINCE the Pope is Head of the univerſal Church, ſovereign Arbiter of its Rights and Privileges, the Spiritual Father of the Kings of the Earth, &c. it is but reaſonable, that the external Teſtimonies of his Dignity ſhould be anſwerable to the Majeſty of his Rank, and the Sublimity of his Functions. He wears the [a] Keys as a Sign of the Power he has to open the Gates of Heaven to all true Believers, and the Triple [b] Crown to inſtruct and inform the Chriſtian World, that he is both High Prieſt, Emperor, and King.

THE Preparations [c] for his Coronation are no ways inferior to thoſe for the moſt auguſt Princes of the Univerſe. If he be a Deacon only, the Cardinal Dean, after his Election, conſtitutes him both Prieſt and Biſhop in Sixtus's Chapel, to which on the Day of his Coronation he goes in [d] his Cardinal's Habit, ſupported by two Prelates, who [e] are the Gentleman of his Bed-Chamber and his Cup-Bearer. The Pages of the Privy-Chamber and thoſe of Honour, and the Chaplains to the Pope, who walk with his Holineſs, are preceded [f] by thoſe who are called the Pages Extra Muros, and the Squires of the deceaſed Pope. The Ambaſſadors, the General of the Church, the Princes of the Throne, the Governor of Rome, the Captains of the Light Horſe, of the Swiſs, and the Ancepeſados, all make their Appearance and aſſiſt at this Ceremony, as well as the Cardinals, who are clothed in red, that is, in their Caſſoc, Rochet, what the Romans call their Mozzette, with their red Calotte on their Head. The Proceſſion being arrived at Sixtus's Chapel, the Cardinals put on their red Copes at their Entrance into it. Two Cardinal-Deacons give the Pope his Pontificalia; the Ceremony whereof is as follows. [g] The firſt Maſter of the Ceremonies girds on the Falda of Taffeta under the Rochet, and puts upon his Head the red Sattin Berrette. His Holineſs then goes into Chapel; where the Cardinals riſe up, and make him a very profound Bow, at his firſt Appearance, and the holy Father receives the Submiſſion of his Spiritual Children like an indulgent Parent. The Gentlemen who attend on their Eminencies are on their Knees, and his Holineſs ſtands with his Back againſt the Altar. Afterwards one of the two Cardinal-Deacons takes off his red Berrette, and his Companion puts on another of white Taffeta: They likewiſe take off his red Mozzette, and dreſs him in the Amict, the Albe, the Girdle, the Stole, and the red Chaſuble, embroidered all with Gold. The firſt Cardinal-Deacon puts the precious Mitre upon his Head, whilſt the firſt Maſter of the Ceremonies ſings the Ex-

[a] St. Peter has two Keys at his Girdle. One of Paradiſe, which repreſents the Power which he has of giving Abſolution; the other of Hell, which ſhews his Power of excommunicating Sinners: And he has a third given him, denoting his univerſal Knowledge, and his Infallibility, which is the neceſſary Conſequence of it. Theſe three Keys repreſent likewiſe the Pope's Power, as God's Vicegerent, as Superior to all the Monarchs of the Earth, and laſtly, his Right of depoſing thoſe Monarchs. See Caſalius de ritibus, &c.

[b] The Triple Crown, or Triregne, which is an Italian Term, would be very antient, if it were true, that it took its Riſe from Clovis the firſt Chriſtian King, who ſent it to Pope Hormiſdas, as a Teſtimony of his holding his Kingdom from God, and not from his Sword. That Preſent was ſent by the ſaid French King to St. Peter himſelf, and to no one beſides himſelf, and was accordingly hung up before the Altar where the Bones of that holy Apoſtle are reſerved. The Uſe of the Triregne then did not begin at the Coronation of Hormiſdas's Succeſſor. Vide Bonani Hierarch. Cap. lxvi. Pope Urban V. was the firſt who wore a Triple Crown. The Pontiffs before him wore but one.

[c] The firſt Coronation which is mentioned in the Hiſtory of the Popes, was that of Damaſcus II. in 1048. Before Marcus II. who was created Pope in 336, none are repreſented with the Crown, in the Prints prefixed to the Lives of the Popes by Ciacconius. During the Perſecutions of the Church under the Heathen Empire, the Popes only wore the Crown of Martyrdom. We ſhall have Occaſion to be more particular on the Papal Crown, when we come to their various Sorts of Dreſſes. We ſhall only obſerve here, that, according to ſome Hiſtorians, the Popes wore a cloſe Tiara with a Crown upon it, till Boniface the VIIIth. who added a ſecond. In former Times the Pope was crowned before the Baſilica of St. Peter.

[d] The white Caſſoc, the Rochet, the ſhort Mantle or Cope of Red Sattin, and the red Capuch. Lunadoro Relaz. della Corte di Roma.

[e] Dreſſed in a red Cope with a Capuch lined with red Taffeta.

[f] They have no Capuch but a red Robe, Ibid.

[g] Extracted from Lunadoro.

tra with an audible Voice: After which one of the Apoſtolic Sub-Deacons takes up the Croſs that is carried before the Pope; and the Cardinals pull off their Berrettes in Honour of the ſacred Wood.

THE Croſs is carried in the following Order. The Pope's Gentlemen go before it two by two, followed by the Courtiers of the new Succeſſor of St. Peter, dreſſed in their ceremonial Habits. The Pages Extra Muros march next, and after them the conſiſtorial Advocates, the Gentlemen of the Privy-Chamber, the referendary Prelates, the Biſhops, Archbiſhops, and Patriarchs, the Pope's Chaplains who carry the Triple Crown and the Mitre, &c. The Croſs comes after theſe Chaplains, and is followed by the Cardinal-Deacons two and two on a Breaſt, and they by the Cardinals, Prieſts and Biſhops, in the ſame Order. Their Eminencies are followed by the Roman Conſervators, the Caporions, &c. The holy Father is carried to Church in a Chair in the midſt of this ſolemn Proceſſion, ſurrounded by his Guards, and an infinite Number of People, who, if we may be allowed the Expreſſion, eagerly gorge down his Holineſs's Benedictions, in Hopes by their Aſſiſtance to ſtorm as it were the Gates of Heaven. The Knights of St. Peter and St. Paul ſupport the Canopy, under which his Holineſs is carried; and in that Order the Proceſſion proceeds to St. Peter's Church.

" [a] UNDER the Portico of St. Peter near the holy Gate, there is a Throne erected for " the Pope, where he ſits under a Canopy, having likewiſe Benches railed in for the Car- " dinals round about it. The Canons, and all thoſe who enjoy any Benefice in St. Peter's " with their Cardinal High-Prieſt at the Head of them, come and kiſs the holy Fa- " ther's Feet: After which he is carried to the Foot of the high Altar, attended by an " infinite Number of People making loud Acclamations; he there kneels down and prays " before the holy Sacrament bare-headed; and is immediately carried from thence to " the Gregorian [b] Chapel. There he ſeats himſelf on a Throne, ſurrounded by the Fo- " reign Ambaſſadors, the Princes of the Throne, and other Perſons of Rank and Diſ- " tinction: The Cardinals in their red Copes, the Prelates, &c. then pay their Ho- " mage to him: The former kiſs his Hand, and the others his Knee;" after which his Holineſs gives the People his Benediction, who return him their Thanks by extraordinary Acclamations, and other public Teſtimonies of their general Joy.

THIS Ceremony being over, the Cardinals, Biſhops, and other Prelates put on their white Robes, whilſt the Canons of St. Peter ſing an Anthem in the Choir. The Pope waſhes his Hands four Times. The firſt Time the Water is preſented him by the firſt Roman Conſervator; the ſecond in Time of Maſs, by the General of the Church; the third, by the moſt Chriſtian King's Ambaſſador; and the laſt, by his Imperial Majeſty's Ambaſſador. They are indiſpenſibly obliged to the Performance of this Religious Duty, if preſent at the Solemnity.

WE ſhall induſtriouſly avoid the Relation of ſuch Circumſtances as we think of too minute and trifling a Nature, leſt we ſhould treſpaſs on the Reader's Patience; we ſhall inform him, therefore, in as few Words as poſſible, [c] that the holy Father in the next Place is undreſs'd, in order to put on other Robes, the Colour whereof is a Type or Symbol of his Purity and Innocence. He muſt now be look'd upon as having ſhaken off the ſinful Man, in order to become a new Creature. The Acolytes preſent theſe new Veſtments to the Cardinal-Deacon, and he clothes his Holineſs in a white Garment, who, in the Language of the Scripture, is to preſide in the Temple of the Lord. He dreſſes him in his Caſſoc, Amict, Albe, Girdle, Dalmatica, Stole, Gloves and Mitre, embroidered with [a] Taken from the Tableau de la Cour de Rome.

[b] Lunadoro ſays ſo.
[c] Lunadoro.

Gold,

Gold, and ſet with Jewels. The Proceſſion then begins, during which the firſt Maſter of the Ceremonies carries a lighted Wax-Taper in one Hand, and a Baſon in the other, in which the Pomps and Vanities of this wicked World are exhibited to the holy Father, under the Repreſentation of Caſtles and Palaces made of Flax, which the Maſter of the Ceremonies ſets fire to three Times, ſaying to his Holineſs each Time, [a] Behold, holy Father, how the Glory of this World paſſes away!

" [b] THE whole Proceſſion being arrived at the Foot of the high Altar, on which ſtand " ſeven large ſilver gilt Candleſticks with large lighted Wax-Tapers in them, (like thoſe " which are carried by the ſeven Acolytes before the Croſs) the Pope makes a conciſe " Prayer on a praying Desk, and then riſing, begins the Introibo of the Maſs, having the " Cardinal-Dean on his Right Hand, as Aſſiſtant Biſhop in his Cope; and the Cardinal-" Deacon of the Goſpel on his Left, and behind him two Cardinal-Deacons Aſ-" ſiſtants.

" AFTER his Holineſs has made the ſolemn Confeſſion, the Dean of the Rota, who holds " his Mitre, gives it to the two Cardinal-Deacons Aſſiſtants, to ſet it upon his Head. He " goes in the next Place and ſits down [c] on his Throne, before which each of the three " firſt Cardinal Prieſts reads a Prayer for his Coronation. After which the holy Father " deſcends from his Throne, (or his Chair according to Lunadoro,) his Mitre is taken off, " and the firſt Cardinal-Deacon aſſiſted by the ſecond dreſſes him in the Pallium," ſaying to him, [d] Receive the Pallium, which repreſents to you the Duties and Perfection of the Pontifical Function: May you diſcharge it to the Glory of God, and of his moſt holy Mother the bleſſed Virgin Mary; of the bleſſed Apoſtles St. Peter and St. Paul; and of the holy Roman Church.

THE Cardinal-Deacon of the Goſpel puts three Diamond Buttons on the three Croſſes of the Pallium, the holy Father aſcends the Altar with the [e] Pallium on his Shoulders, but without his Mitre, kiſſes the Book of the holy Evangeliſts, puts Incenſe into the Thurible, and thurifies the Altar. After this the Mitre is again ſet on his Holineſs's Head, and the firſt Cardinal-Deacon thurifies him three Times ſucceſſively; and the Ceremony cloſes with a Salute which that Cardinal gives him on his Left Cheek and his Stomach, as the two other Cardinals likewiſe do after him.

THIS Ceremony being over, the Pope returns to his Throne, where all the Cardinals come, and after taking off their Mitres, pay him their Adorations. All the Clergy come likewiſe and adore him, each according to his Quality, and all in their ceremonial Habits. The Patriarchs, Archbiſhops, and Biſhops kiſs his Foot, and his Knee; the Abbots and Penitentiaries of St. Peter his Knee only.

AFTERWARDS the Pope riſes, lays down his Mitre, aſcends the Altar, ſings or reads the Introite and the Kyrie, &c. ſings the Gloria in Excelſis with an audible Voice, and, as ſoon as the Prayer of Maſs is ſaid, inſtantly reſumes his Place. Then the firſt Cardinal-Deacon

[a] Pater ſancte, ſic tranſit gloria mundi. The ſecond Maſter of the Ceremonies, on this Occaſion, preſents the Fire to the firſt. The Ceremony of burning the Flax is performed between the Gregorian Chapel, and that of the Apoſtles. Vide Lunadoro. This Ceremony ſeems to owe its Birth to what was practiſed at the Coronation of the Greek Emperors: For in the midſt of all the Pomp and Splendor of their Coronation, on one Hand, they were preſented with a Vaſe filled with Aſhes and dead Men's Bones, and on the other with Flax, to which Fire was ſet; by this double Emblem reminding them of their Mortality, and of the Fate of all worldly Honours.

[b] Tableau de la Cour de Rome.

[c] Or in the Chair wherein he was carried. Nella ſedia geſtatoria, nella quale era ſtato portato. So ſays Lunadoro.

[d] The Latin is a little paraphraſed. The Form runs thus: Accipe pallium, ſanctam plenitudinem pontificalis Officii, ad honorem omnipotentis Dei, & glorioſiſſimæ Virginis, Mariæ ejus matris, & Beatorum Apoſtolorum Petri & Pauli, & Sanctæ Romanæ Eccleſiæ.

[e] Col Pallio indoſſo.

deſcends into the [a] Confeſſion of St. Peter, [b] attended by the Apoſtolical Sub-Deacons, the Auditors of the Rota, the conſiſtorial Advocates, &c. who walk in two Ranks, with their white Copes, and their purple Amices over them. The Cardinal-Deacon ſings there with a low Voice [c] the Exaudi Chriſte, to which the Clergy who follow him anſwer, [d] Domino noſtro a Deo decreto ſummo Pontifici & Papæ, &c. The Exaudi, &c. are three Times repeated as well as the Salvator Mundi, which is afterwards added by the ſame Cardinal, and to which the Clergy anſwer, [e] Tu illum adjuva. Then follow the Litanies of the Saints. The Latin Epiſtle comes after thoſe Litanies, and the Greek after the Latin; the one is ſung by the Greek Sub-Deacon, and the other by the Latin. The Muſicians in the Choir ſing the Gradual, a Cardinal-Deacon ſings the Goſpel in Latin, another the ſame in Greek, and the Maſs cloſes with ſome particular Ceremonies, which we ſhall hereafter enter into a Detail of; but we muſt not forget that as ſoon as Maſs is over, the holy Father goes into [f] his Chair again without pulling off thoſe Robes which he has worn during the Celebration of it. Then the Cardinal-Arch-Prieſt of St. Peter, attended by two Canons, preſents the Pope with a white Damask Purſe, in which are twenty five Julio's, old Money. The Chapter and Canons of St. Peter make him this Preſent as a [g] Teſtimony that he has [h] ſung Maſs well. This Money the holy Father gives to the Cardinal-Deacons, who ſang the two Goſpels, and they beſtow it on their Train-Bearers.

To conclude, the Pope is carried to the Benediction-Pew, accompanied by his Cardinals, and Prelates. The Canopy under which he is carried, is ſupported by the Roman Conſervators and the Caparions: Two of the Grooms in red Liveries carry Fans of Peacocks Feathers on each Side the Chair. The Cardinals and Prelates all ſtand, whilſt the two firſt Cardinal-Deacons, in Quality of Aſſiſtants, help his Holineſs to aſcend the Throne, which was ſet up by the ſacred College the Day before in the Middle of the Pew. As ſoon as the Pope is ſeated, the Choir ſing the Anthem [i], Corona aurea ſuper caput, &c. with the Reſponſes; after which the Dean reads the Coronation [k] Prayer. The ſecond Cardinal-Deacon takes off his Holineſs's Mitre, and the firſt puts the [l] Triple Crown on his Head, ſaying, [m] Receive this Tiara embelliſhed with three Crowns, and never forget, when you have it on, that you are the Father of Princes and Kings, the ſupreme Judge of the Univerſe, and on the Earth, Vicar of JESUS CHRIST our Lord and Saviour, &c. Nor does his Holineſs ever forget this Exhortation. After this he bleſſes the People

[a] This is a Place under the Altar where the Relics of the Martyrs lie.
[b] Lunadoro.
[c] Hear, O Chriſt.
[d] Our Lord the Pope, Sovereign Pontiff inſtituted and ordained by God.
[e] O Saviour of the World help him.
[f] Setta geſtatoria. Lunadoro.
[g] This in Church Latin is called Presbyterium.
[h] Pro bene cantatâ Miſſâ.
[i] A Crown of Gold ſhall be on his Head, &c.
[k] God is therein beſought " to grant that the Pope may govern the Church with Edification; as the Father of Kings, and Director of all true Believers, over whom God has appointed him," &c.
[l] This Conic Cap, adorned with three Crowns glittering with Jewels, is of ineſtimable Value. That which Pope Paul II. conſecrated, though loaded with Jewels, was not to be compared with the Triregne of Clement VIII. valued, as they ſay, at 500,000. Pieces of Gold. As to Paul II. he is the firſt Pontiff who took the Pains to adorn his Triregne with Jewels; but this Succeſſor of St. Peter was ſo paſſionately fond of them, that he bought up the fineſt he could procure, to ſet them in his Cap. The Tiregne of Martin V. had as many Pearls on it as weigh'd five Pounds and an half, beſides fifteen Pound Weight of Gold. That of Paul V. was ſtill of greater Value. Nor is there any Thing unreaſonable in all this, ſays Father Bonani, who has given us theſe Particulars in his Hierarch. Eccl. ſince the Pope governs the Kingdom of Chriſt as his Viceroy, now this Kingdom is infinitely ſuperior to all the Empires of the Univerſe. The High-Prieſt of the Jews wore on his Head and Breaſt the richeſt Things that could be procured, as Types or Emblems of the Majeſty of the ſupreme Deity. The Pope repreſents that of the Saviour of the World, and nothing expreſſes it like Riches. The Prieſts of the Heathen Deities alſo wore Crowns of precious Stones; it would be very unjuſt, therefore, to refuſe one of the ſame kind to him who is the High-Prieſt of the Chriſtian Religion. But we muſt here obſerve that the two Strings of the Pontifical Tiara, repreſent the two different Manners of interpreting the Scripture; one according to the myſtical, and the other according to the literal Senſe.
[m] Accipe Tiaram tribus coronis ornatam, & ſcias te eſſe Patrem Principum & Regum, Rectorem orbis, in terrâ Vicarium Salvatoris noſtri Jeſu Chriſti, &c three

three Times, and two Cardinals publiſh a plenary Indulgence both in Latin and Italian. After this the Pope withdraws to his Apartment in the Vatican, and in his way through Sixtus's Chapel, the Cardinal-Deacons take off his Pontificalia. The firſt Cardinal-Prieſt, in the Name of the whole ſacred College, makes him the Compliment ad multos annos, that is, wiſhes he may enjoy his Pontificate for many Years. In the mean Time, the Artillery of the Caſtle of St. Angelo roars out a tripple Diſcharge, which is heard all over the City. The Horſe as well as the Foot are under Arms. Every Houſe is gaily illuminated, all the public Places blaze with Bonfires, and the Sky is, as it were, ſet on Fire by an infinite Number of Rockets. All Converſation turns on Balls, Entertainments, and Concerts of Muſic; and every Man thinks himſelf obliged to be as expenſive as his Circumſtances will admit of, to celebrate in a proper Manner the Acceſſion of the new Pontiff. They may gratify themſelves with an infinite Variety of Diverſions, ſince there is no want of ſuch as are ſtrictly virtuous, as well as thoſe which are vicious to the laſt Degree. Rome, in ſhort, at this Time breathes nothing but Mirth, and if theſe publick Rejoicings repreſent the Warmth and Fervency of a Zeal truly Apoſtolical, Rome may then be ſaid to be Holineſs in the Abſtract.

[a] The ENTERTAINMENT which his HOLINESS formerly gave on his CORONATION Day.

WE ſhall here endeavour to give the Reader an adequate Idea of the Magnificence of this Entertainment. [b] At the upper End of the ſpacious Hall, where the Pope gave it, was a Theatre erected pretty high; [c] in the Middle ſtood a Table, at which his Holineſs took his Seat of Honour, on a Throne pompouſly adorned, and under a Canopy [d] in all Reſpects anſwerable to the Magnificence of his Throne, and the Dignity of his ſacred Perſon. On the [e] Left-Hand Side-board ſtood a vaſt Number of Gold and Silver Veſſels. In this ſame Hall, upon the Right-Hand, [f] but much lower than the Theatre before-mentioned, was a Table ſet out for the Cardinals, Biſhops, and Prieſts, and another ſtill lower [g] for the other Prelates of the Church. At the lower End of the Hall, there was a very capacious handſom [g] Buffet ſet out, to which there was an Aſcent by ſeveral Steps, and another Table prepared for the Ambaſſadors, and Nobility of the Court of Rome, &c. Some other Particulars we have omitted. The Emperor, if he happened to be preſent at the Pope's Court, had a Table to himſelf upon the ſame Theatre where his Holineſs's Table ſtood, and at his Right-Hand. His Seat was not near ſo pompous and magnificent as that of the Pope's; and as to Kings, they ſat at the Cardinals Table, after the firſt Cardinal-Biſhop. The Laity of the higheſt Rank, though [i] Princes, or the Children of Kings, were obliged to wait at Table on Chriſt's Vicar. His Holineſs came into the Entertainment dreſſed in all his Pontificalia, between two Cardinal-Deacons, attended by the ſacred College, &c. all in their Ceremonial Habits. Before the holy Father ſat down to Table he waſhed his Hands in State. His Imperial Majeſty held the Baſon, the firſt Cardinal-Biſhop poured out Water for him; and [k] two Cardinal-Deacons gave him

[a] Extracted from the Roman Ceremonial.

[b] In Capite Aulæ erit ſuggeſtus ad quem triplici gradu aſcenditur, Cerem. Eccl. Rom. fol. XVIII. Edit. of 1516.

[c] In medio quadratus Thalamus ſurget Palmi altitudine, ſuper quo menſa paratur Pontificis. Ibid.

[d] Cum panno aureo ſuper Caput. Ibid.

[e] The Buffet.

[f] Infra ſuggeſtum. Ibid.

[g] Here the Ceremonial only mentions Prelates, pro aliis Prelatis. The Cardinal-Deacons have their Table over againſt the other Cardinals, both raiſed but one Step.

[h] In fine Aulæ parabitur magna credentia cum pluribus gratibus ad magnificentiam, &c. Ibid.

[i] Etiam ſi ſint fratres aut filii Regum. Ibid.

[k] Diaconi (ſerviunt) mantile hinc inde tenendo. Ibid.

the

the Napkin. The other Cardinals, the Prieſts, the Nobility, &c. all kneel'd down and remain'd bare-headed, during this Ceremony. As for the Emperor, he did not waſh his Hands with ſo much State and Grandeur. The firſt Cardinal waſhed after him, and then the King of the Romans, if he was preſent; and though all the crowned Heads in Chriſtendom had been there, [a] they would have had no other Privilege on this Occaſion, than that of being mingled with the ſacred College; provided always that Eminence ſhould take Place of Majeſty. The Emperor officiated at Table, in the Quality of Carver, and gave his Holineſs his firſt Plate, and even went for it out of the Hall. Some other Particulars we have omitted, for Fear of being too tedious.

The POPE'S taking Poſſeſſion.

AS ſoon as the Pope's Coronation is over, he is to take Poſſeſſion of his Sovereignty at the Church of St. John de Lateran, which is his Cathedral, and the [b] Metropolitan of all the Churches under his Holineſs's Juriſdiction, throughout Chriſtendom. This Ceremony is performed ſome few Days after the Coronation, in the moſt ſolemn and pompous Manner that can poſſibly be imagin'd. By the [c] Roman Ceremonial it appears, that formerly it was on the very Coronation Day. This is the Order of the Proceſſion, which generally begins at St. Peter's Church.

" [d] TWELVE [e] Trumpets and Twelve Light Horſe begin the Proceſſion, conſiſting of " ſix Ranks, of four Horſe each, followed by the Cloak-Bearers belonging to the Car- " dinals, who, each ſends his own, well mounted, with ſcarlet embroidered Cloak- " Bags. After them march the Mace-Bearers of the ſame Cardinals, all on Horſeback " likewiſe, with ſilver Maces on their Shoulders, on which are the Arms of their Emi- " nencies.

" THE Gentlemen and Almoners of the Cardinals, Ambaſſadors, and Princes, with " [f] ſeveral Gentlemen and Roman Barons, follow immediately after..... Several Ance- " peſado's prance about with their naked Swords out of the Ranks, to regulate the " March. Then come four of the Pope's Querries (who, according to the Roman Ce- " remonial, Lib. I. follow the Taylor, Barber, &c.) with large red Copes; and then his " Taylor and two Cloak-Bearers dreſt alike, with [g] two velvet Portmantles, embroidered " with Gold. The Pope's Grooms of the Stable, in looſe Coats of red Serge follow " them, leading [h] the white Jennets, which the Kingdom of Naples is obliged annually " to ſend ro his Holineſs as a Tribute or Homage from the Sovereign of that King- " dom; for the Pope alledges, that it is a Fief of the Pontifical See. Theſe Jennets " have ſilk Houſings, with gold Fringes, and Leaves of Silver Plate, half-relievo. After [a] Si plures Reges, mixti erunt cum primis Cardinalibus, primò Cardinalis, deinde Rex ſucceſſivè, Ibid.

[b] An Inſcription over the great Gate of this Church juſtifies what we have here advanced. Vide Tableau de la Cour de Rome. " The Kings of France are Protectors of this firſt Church of the Univerſe, and to this End their " Arms are fixed over the principal Gate, and the Canons who belong to it..... commemorate it, &c." Nodot. Memoirs de Rome.

[c] Vide Cerem. Eccl. Rom. Lib. I.

[d] Tableau de la Cour de Rome.

[e] The Treatiſe entitled, Relazione della Corte di Roma e de' Riti da oſſervarſi in eſſa, &c. from whence the Author of the Tableau de la Cour de Rome has taken almoſt everyThing he has ſaid relating to that Court. He mentions but one Trumpet. We muſt here inform the Reader, that the French Author, whom we follow, has drawn up the Deſcription which he has given of this Proceſſion, after that of the Italian Author, who gives the particular Deſcription of Innocent X.'s taking Poſſeſſion.

[f] Theſe ſometimes are glad to march promiſcuouſly among the Gentlemen and Almoners of the Cardinals, to avoid Debates about Precedency. Vide the Treatiſe entitled, Il maeſtro di Camera in the Relazione, &c. before quoted.

[g] The Pontifical Habilliments of his Holineſs are packed up in theſe two Portmantles. Vide Cerem. Eccl. Rom. Lib. I. After the Taylors march the Barber, &c. according to the Roman Ceremonial, and the Maeſtro.

[h] The Maeſtro di Camera ſays twenty, the Roman Ceremonial twelve, ſo that the Number is not determin'd.

" them

The POPE going in CEREMONY to take POSSESSION of the PONTIFICATE in Saint JOHN'S of LATERAN, which is the CAPITAL of all the CHURCHES under his JURISDICTION.

Triumphal Arch

Trumpets

Kettle Drums

A Company of Curaſſiers

B. Picart, fe.

C. Du Bo. ſc. fecit.

Le PAPE va prendre poſſeſſion du PONTIFAT dans l'Egliſe de S.t JEAN de LATERAN qui eſt la Capitale de toutes celles qui relevent de la juridiction du PAPE dans la CHRETIENETE.

" them come ſeveral Mules, capariſon'd and border'd with red Velvet, and gold Fringe,
" ſeveral of his Holineſs's Domeſtics leading them by the Bridle.

" [a] THREE Litters covered with red Velvet, or ſcarlet Cloth, embroidered with Gold,
" follow them. Two Officers on Horſeback march before the Litters, and the Pope's
" Maſter of the Horſe on Horſeback, with his Staff-Bearers, who walk on Foot, cloſe
" this Part of the Proceſſion.

" [b] THE Roman Nobility, and the Titulars, march next, without any Order or Re" gulation, to avoid Diſputes of Precedency, mounted upon ſtately Horſes, whoſe Manes
" are adorned with a great Quantity of Ribband of divers Colours. All the Nobility
" are attended by their Staff-Bearers on Foot.

" FIVE of the Pope's Mace-Bearers come after in long full Gowns, of purple Cloth,
" faced with black Velvet, with their Maces and enamell'd Collars. Fourteen Drums
" come next on Foot, dreſs'd in red Satin, flowered with Gold, wearing Plumes of " Feathers in their Hats, and each of them bearing an Enſign of the fourteen Quar" ters, or Diſtricts of Rome. A Band of the Pope's Trumpets follow them, dreſſed in " Scarlet, laced with Gold. After them walk the Apoſtolical Gentlemen of the Bed-
" chamber, and the Pages of the Chamber, extra Muros, all dreſſed in Scarlet, the " Commiſſary and Fiſcal of the Apoſtolical Chamber in Purple, the conſiſtorial Advo" cates in Black, the Chaplains of the inferior Part of the Pope's Family in Scarlet, the " Pages of the Privy Chamber, thoſe of Honour, and the four Participants, who " are the laſt of this Diviſion, and are dreſſed in Purple, and carry the Pope's four " crimſon Velvet Hats [c].

" AFTER them come forty Officers of the Roman People, mounted on ſtately
" Horſes, viz. the Judges, the Juſticiary Maſters, Secretaries, Notaries, Comptrollers,
" Fiſcal, &c. dreſſed in long ſenatorial Robes, and black Velvet Hats; the Houſings of " their Horſes are likewiſe all of black Velvet.

" THE Regiſters of the high Court, the Clerks of the Chamber, the Auditors of the " Rota, and the Maſter of the ſacred Palace, march on the Left Hand of the Dean of " the Rota, and are followed by fourteen Marſhals of the Roman People, dreſs'd in " white Satin Veſts, and purple Satin Waiſtcoats, with black Velvet Caps. The four" teen Captains of the reſpective Quarters, or Diſtricts of Rome, follow them, clothed
" in long Robes, of crimſon Velvet, lined with ſilver Tiſſue, with white Satin Breeches,
" laced with Gold, and black Velvet Caps, adorned with precious Stones.

" [d] THE Governor of Rome, and the Roman Conſervators, come next, leaving a " Place vacant, on the Governor's Left-Hand, for the Senator of Rome, who does not " make his Appearance in the Cavalcade, on Purpoſe to avoid giving the Precedency
" which the Governor diſputes with him. The Princes of the Pontifical Throne, the

[a] The Roman Ceremonial makes a Sumpter-Horſe precede theſe Jennets, as alſo twelve running Footmen (curſores Papæ) dreſſed in Red, walking two and two, each with red Streamers in their Hands; theſe are followed by the Enſigns of the Quarters of Rome (Vexilliferi Capitum Regionum) likewiſe dreſſed in Red; then comes the Enſign of the Roman People, that of the Teutonic Order, of the Pope, of the Church, and, laſtly, that of St. John of Jeruſalem.

[b] The Maeſtro di Camera makes the Pages of the Chamber, extra Muros, walk before the titular Nobility, as appears in the Print hereunto annexed, &c. after whom he places the Pages of the Chamber, who carry the Pope's four Hats; but the Roman Ceremonial ranges theſe latter after the twelve Jennets. In the Maeſtro di Camera the Regiſters, &c. walk after them who carry the four Hats.

[c] They are carried on high Poles covered with red Velvet, both according to the Maeſtro, &c. and the Roman Ceremonial.

[d] This is different in the Relazione della Corte, &c.

" Pope's Relations, and the Embaſſadors of crown'd Heads, march with all their Re-
" tinue, according to their reſpective Characters; and two Maſters of the Ceremonies,
" belonging to the Pope, follow them, and go before the Apoſtolical Sub-deacon, [a] who " carries [b] the Triple Croſs, revers'd towards the Pope. This Sub-deacon marches be" tween two Officers, who have red Wands in their Hands [c].

" THEN follows the Pope in [d] a Litter in the Midſt of fifty young Roman Gentle" men, dreſſed in white Sattin, the Staff-Bearers and running Footmen of the Pope, to" gether with the Gentlemen of the Bedchamber ſurrounding the Litter. The Captain " of the Swiſs Guards marches at the Head of two Files of Horſe, who guard his Ho-
" lineſs. The Litter in which the Holy Father is carried, is lin'd with red Velvet,
" embroidered and fringed with Gold; and he himſelf is clothed in a white Satin Caſ-
" ſoc, with the Rochet Stole and Mozzette all of red Velvet, if 'tis Winter, or of red
" Satin, with a Calot of the ſame under his red Hat, if Summer.

" THE Pope's Maſter of the Chamber, his Cup-Bearer, Secretary, and Phyſicians,
" likewiſe walk near the Litter, and before the Swiſs Guards. The Cardinals follow
" on Horſeback, two and two, in the Midſt of ſome Halbardeers, immediately after " the Pope's Guard. After their Eminencies come • the Patriarchs, Archbiſhops, Bi-" ſhops, Apoſtolical Prothonotaries, Auditors, Treaſurers of the Apoſtolic Chamber,
" and referendary Prelates of both Seals. Laſtly, After the Relays, and the Pope's " Trumpets, the Proceſſion cloſes with two Companies of light Horſe, with their Of" ficers before them, pompouſly dreſſed; the Officers in ſcarlet Coats, with very nar" row Hanging-Sleeves, of yellow and red Velvet, which makes a very handſome Ap" pearance, as they march with their Lances reſted.

" THE Rout they take is along the Borgo of St. Peter, to the Bridge of St. Angelo,
" from thence ..... to St. Andre della Valle ..... and ſo to the Capitol, where the Ro-
" man People erect a triumphal Arch for his Holineſs; and the Senator preſents him
" with the Keys in Campo, and having a Sceptre in his Hand, makes an Oration, which
" the new Pontif ſtops to hear. From thence the Cavalcade proceeds to Campo Vac-
" chino, where the Duke of Parma erects another triumphal Arch before his Palace.
" They then croſs the Colliſeum, where the Jews likewiſe have another erected, under " which they preſent his Holineſs with Moſes's Pentateuch [f] in Hebrew. Their Ad-
" dreſs conſiſts in an Exhortation to him, to reverence the Law of Moſes; and an humble
" Requeſt of his Protection. He in Anſwer lets them underſtand, that he has a profound Re-
" ſpect for this divine Law, tho' at the ſame Time he rejects their falſe Interpretations of it.

[a] Veſtito con mantellone e cappello largo, with the Rochet, and a broad-brim'd Hat.

[b] The Triple Croſs is the Sign of the Pope's Spiritual Juriſdiction over the whole World. Pope Sylveſter I. was the firſt, they ſay, who had it ſolemnly carried in Public; but the Cuſtom was afterwards laid aſide till Leo IV. who revived it. The Cardinal-Deacon, who proclaims the Pope's Election to the People, at the ſame Time ſhews them the Croſs.

[c] After the Sub-deacon, and thoſe who attend him, the Roman Ceremonial ranges twelve Perſons on Foot, dreſſed in Red, who carry twelve lighted wax Tapers before the Holy Sacrament. Two others on Horſeback, alſo dreſſed in Red, march immediately after the Holy Sacrament, each with a ſilver Lanthern in his Hand. After them comes the Holy Sacrament, carried on a white Jennet, with a little Bell. Fourteen Roman Citizens carry the Canopy by Turns. The Sacriſtin follows on Horſeback with a white Wand in his Hand, &c. This Cavalcade ſhall be farther ſpoken of, when we come to deſcribe the Manner of carrying the Holy Sacrament, when his Holineſs goes any where out of Town.

[d] The Pope does not always ride in a Litter. He is ſometimes mounted on a white Jennet, according to the Roman Ceremonial, and eight Gentlemen carry the Canopy over him. A King, nay the Emperor (were he preſent at the Ceremony) would be obliged to hold his Holineſs's Stirrup, and lead the Horſe by the Bridle. Vide Cerem. Lib. I. When the Pope goes in a Chair, and the Emperor is at Rome, he muſt be one of the Chairmen; but in a Moment's Time he is relieved. The eight Noblemen, who ſupport the Canopy, are likewiſe relieved by eight Roman Citizens as far as St. John de Lateran.

[e] Con mantellone & cappello grande, Ibid.

[f] For the Origin of this Cuſtom, ſee p. 175.

" After

" After which the Jews retire, without making the leaſt Reply, and the Cavalcade,
" leaving the Colliſeum, goes forwards, thro' the Streets hung with Tapeſtry, and crowded " with an infinite Number of Spectators, directly to St. John de Lateran.

[a] THE Differences which we have obſerved in the Deſcription of this Ceremony, ſhew that it is not always ſolemniz'd after the ſame Manner. [b] The Clergy of St. John de Lateran come out to meet this ſolemn Proceſſion, in the Manner as repreſented in the Print, where we ſhall alſo be entertain'd with the Manner his Holineſs is receiv'd in this Cathedral.

The CEREMONIES which are obſerv'd on receiving the POPE, at the Church of St. John de Lateran.

" [c] THE Pope being arrived at the great Gate of St. John de Lateran, quits his " Litter, or diſmounts in caſe he is on Horſeback, [d] the Cardinal-Arch-Prieſt
" preſents

[a] The Print repreſents Pope Clement XI.'s taking Poſſeſſion, and is engrav'd after the Roman Original.

[b] During the Proceſſion, Money is now and then thrown among the Populace, to keep off the Croud, ad preſſuram dimovendam, ſays the Roman Ceremonial.

[c] Tableau de la Cour de Rome.

[d] Prior canonicorum Lateranenſium, ſays the Roman Ceremonial, offert crucem oſculandam Pontifici, quam diaconus Cardinalis accipit & ad os Pontificis, cui prius tiaram extraxit, ponit. Oſculatâ cruce Pontifici ponitur mitra, & regnum datur in manibus auditoris. Ipſe verò Pontifex a priore & canonicis prædictis ducitur ad marmoream ſedem, ante portam principalem a ſiniſtrâ ſtantem, quæ ſtercoraria appellatur, & ibi eum ſedere faciunt, qui ità tamen ſedet, ut magis jacere videatur; ad quem mox accedentes Cardinales elevant eum honorificè, dicentes; ſuſcitat de pulvere egenum, & de ſtercore erigit pauperem, ut ſedeat cum principibus & ſolium gloriæ teneat. Surgens Pontifex, accipit de gremio camerarii ſibi aſſiſtentis quantum pugno poteſt complecti pecuniarum, ubi tamen nihil prorſus ſit argenti aut auri, & ſpargit inter populum dicens, Argentum & Aurum non eſt mihi, quod autem habeo hoc tibi do..... præcedentibus canonicis, & cantantibus Te Deum Laudamus. Pontifex cum Cardinalibus intrat Eccleſiam, & ante altare majus ſupra faldiſtorium procumbens ſine mitrâ aliquantulum orat. Deinde ſurgens benedicit populo, dicens ſit nomen Domini benedictum, &c. Inde cum mitrâ aſcendens ad ſedem eminentem, ſedens recipit ad oſculum pedis canonicos Lateranenſes. Deinde . . . . aſcendit ad Palatium Lateranum per portam quæ eſt in eccleſiâ, & cum perventum fuerit in . . . . . aulâ concilii, ſedet Pontifex in ſede ſibi paratâ apud tabulam lapideam in capite aulæ quæ dicitur menſura Chriſti, &c. . . . . Finitis laudibus Papa procedit ad capellam ſancti Sylveſtri. Ibi ante portam capellæ ſunt duæ ſedes porphyreticæ perforatæ . . . . . ſedet Pontifex ſuper primam . . . . . Prior eccleſiæ accedit & genuflexus dat Pontifici ferulam in manus, ſignum correctionis & regiminis, & claves ipſius baſilicæ ac palatii, in ſignum poteſtatis claudendi & aperiendi, ligandi atque ſolvendi. Surgit deinde Papa . . . . . & ſedet in alterâ ſede porphyreticâ ad aliam partem, & ibi reſtituit eidem priori ferulam & claves, & ab eodem præcingitur, ſuper planetam ſedens, cum cingulo quodam ſericeo rubro, cum burſâ etiam ſericeâ & rubrâ, in quâ ſunt duodecim lapides pretioſi cum muſco. Tum Pontifex præcinctus & ſedens, e gremio camerarii capit denarios argenteos . . . . & ſuper populum ſpargens dicit, diſperſit, dedit pauperibus: juſtitia ejus manet in ſæculum ſæculi . . . . Ducitur deinde Pontifex ad ſancta ſanctorum, ubi ſuper faldiſtorium ſine mitrâ genuflexus orat. Inde ſurgens cum mitrâ revertitur ad capellam ſancti Sylveſtri. Ibi ſedet ſuper ſedem ſibi paratam, tum deponit mitram, chirothecas, pallium, planetam, & aſſumit pluviale & mitram ſimplicem, & ſedens dat presbyterium hoc modo, Cardinalibus duos aureos & duos groſſos argenteos. Veniunt Cardinales & profundè caput inclinant ante Pontificem, porriguntque & mitram apertam, in quâ Pontifex immittit pecuniam. Illi acceptâ pecuniâ manum Pontificis oſculantur. . . . . Alii prælati genuflectunt ante Pontificem & accipiunt in mitrâ unum aureum & unum groſſum, & oſculantur dextrum genu Papæ. Alii verò prælati & officiales accipiunt in manu tantundem, & oſculantur pedem, &c. This Extract of the Ceremonial contains ſeveral Particulars, which, at this Time, in all Probability, are either alter'd or aboliſh'd, ſince the Author of the Deſcription of the Court of Rome and its Ceremonies, before quoted, makes no Mention of them. The moſt remarkable we ſhall here tranſlate, juſt as the Latin Ceremonial deſcribes them. The firſt Canon of St. John de Lateran preſents his Holineſs with the Croſs to kiſs. The Cardinal-Deacon takes it, and puts it to the Pope's Mouth, having firſt pull'd off his Tiara; and after the Croſs is kiſſed, puts it on again. The Papal Crown is put into the Hands of the Auditor; then the Pope is conducted by the Prior and Canons aforeſaid, to a Seat before the principal Gate, on the Left Hand, which the Ceremonial calls the Stercorary, where he repoſes himſelf ſo as to be half lying down, or, more properly ſpeaking, laid along; then ſome of the Cardinals go up to him, and take him up with Abundance of Reverence and Reſpect, ſaying, He taketh the Indigent out of the Duſt, and raiſes the Poor from off the Dunghill, to ſeat him amongſt Princes, and place him upon the Throne of Glory. The Pope, riſing, takes a Handful of Money out of the Lap of a proper Officer in waiting, and throws it amongſt the People, (but there is neither Gold nor Silver in it) ſaying, Silver and Gold I have none, but ſuch as I have I give unto you. (We ſhall not preſume to ſay theſe Words are luckily employed, for that may very reaſonably be denied.) After this, his Holineſs goes into the Church, with the Canons and Cardinals before him; then he bleſſes the People, and admits the Canons to kiſs his Feet; and after that is carried to the Palace of St. John de Lateran. He enters the Council-Hall, where Laudes, &c. are ſung. From thence he paſſes on to St. Sylveſter's Chapel, at the Gate whereof are two hollow Seats, on which the holy Father ſeats himſelf, one one after the other. As ſoon as he is ſet down on the firſt, he is preſented with the Keys and the Ferula, which is the Token of his Authority and magiſterial

" preſents him the Croſs [a] to kiſs; after that his Holineſs aſcends the Throne, which is " prepared under the Portico, where his Pontifical Robes and his Mitre are put on. " Whilſt he is on this Throne, the Canons of St. John de Lateran come and kiſs his " Feet, and the Cardinal-Arch-Prieſt makes an Oration, in the Name of the Chapter, " and delivers him the Keys of the Church; one of which is Gold, the other Silver, " both laid [b] in an enamell'd Baſon, with Flowers in it.

" As ſoon as that Ceremony is over, the Cardinals put on their ſacred Ornaments, " and the Pope walks towards the great Gate of the Cathedral, where the Cardinal-" Arch-Prieſt gives him a Sprinkler, with which he takes Holy Water, and ſprinkles " the People; [c] then the ſame Cardinal incenſes his Holineſs three Times. After this " he goes into his Chair, and his Staff-Bearers carry him along the Nave of the Church, " under a Canopy which is ſupported by the Canons of St. John of Lateran, to the " high Altar where he prays. He is in the next Place carried into the Choir, to a " Throne, where the Cardinals come and pay him their Obeiſance; then the two Car-" dinal-Deacons put on and take off the Mitre, as the Ceremonial preſcribes, whilſt he " gives the Benediction. When this is over, he is carried into the Palace of St. John " de Lateran, where ſeveral Anthems are ſung, at the Cloſe whereof the Cardinal-" Prieſt ſays ſome particular Prayers. The Tiara, when the Prayers are over, is again ſet " upon his Holineſs's Head, and he is carried into an open Place, over the Porch of " the Baſilica of St. John, from whence he gives the People twice his heavenly Bene-" diction.

AFTERWARDS the Pope preſents the Cardinals with ſome Gold Medals. The principal Treaſurer throws ſeveral Silver Medals, with his Holineſs's Arms upon them, ſtruck on Purpoſe, amongſt the Populace, who from all Quarters rend the Air with loud Acclamations, Long live his Holineſs, &c.

The POPE's Robes of State.

AS [d] ſoon as the Election is over, his Holineſs is dreſſed in a white woollen Caſſoc, with Shoes made of red Cloth, whereon is embroider'd a gold Croſs, the Mozzette, or red Velvet Camail, the red ſilk Girdle, with gold Claſps, the Rochet, and red Berrette. After that they give him [e] the Amict, a white Linnen Albe, tied with a red Silk String, and a Stole ſet with Pearls. If he be a Prieſt, or a Biſhop, this laſt is put about his Neck; but if he be a Deacon only, he muſt wear it on his Left Shoulder, if only a Sub-Deacon, it is totally laid aſide.

[f] IF the new Pope happens not to be in Orders, they muſt be conferred on him. In caſe he is a Deacon only, and deſirous to be ordained a Prieſt, Prieſt's Orders muſt giſterial Corrections, and when he is on the other, he gives them back to the firſt Canon or Arch-Prieſt, that is the Prior, who puts him on a ſilk Girdle, whereto is faſtened a Purſe, containing twelve precious Stones, to repreſent the twelve Apoſtles; and likewiſe ſome Perfume. The Chamberlain, who performs this ſacred Office, gives him a few Pieces of Silver, which he throws among the People, ſaying, He hath diſtributed to the Poor, his Juſtice ſhall endure for ever. After this he returns to St. Sylveſter's, and from thence goes on, and ſays a Prayer in the Holy of Holies. He then returns to St. Sylveſter's, where he gives Medals and other Pieces of Gold and Silver to the Cardinals, Prelates, and other Eccleſiaſtics of inferior Rank, who all in their Order do homage to his Holineſs.

[a] The Pope is on his Knees, ſtando noſtro ſignore in ginocchione. Vide Relaz. della Corte, &c.

[b] The gold Key denotes the Power of abſolving, the ſilver one that of excommunicating. Caſal. de Veter. Chriſt. rit. The Reaſon which he gives for it is this, becauſe Silver is not ſo valuable as Gold. A very grave and ſhrewd Reaſon truly!

[c] And ſprinkles himſelf too, Ibid.

[d] Relaz. &c. Tableau de la Cour de Rome. Cerem. Eccl. Rom. before cited.

[e] Cerem. Eccl. Rom. Lib. I.

[f] Id. Ibid.

firſt

firſt be conferred on him, and then he muſt be conſecrated a Biſhop. " [a] The Car-
" dinal-Deacon, who is always Biſhop of Oſtia, and to whom the Right of conſecra-
" ting the Pope has been long granted, performs all thoſe Ceremonies in Sixtus's
" Chapel."

THE holy Father, when at Home in his private Dreſs, [b] wears a white Silk Caſſoc, a fine Linnen Rochet, and a red Velvet, or Carnation Satin Camail. His Holineſs wears a Fur Cap in the Winter, and a Satin one in the Summer. During Lent, Advent, and all Faſt-Days, a white woollen Caſſoc, with a red Cloth Camail; but from Eaſter-Eve to the Saturday following, he wears a white Damask Camail.

HIS Pontifical Robes are of two Sorts. When he celebrates Maſs, he wears, beſides the Caſſoc, the Rochet, the Amict, the white Linnen Albe, the Stole, the Maniple, the Dalmatica, the Chaſuble, the Mitre, and Gloves; all which are very magnificent, and anſwerable to the Dignity of Chriſt's Vicar, and St. Peter's Succeſſor; but their Colour is altered according to the Circumſtances of Time, and depends upon the Solemnity of the Feſtival. The holy Father celebrates Whitſontide, and all Feſtivals of Martyrs, in Red [c]; Eaſter, and all Feſtivals of Virgins, in White; Lent, Advent, and all Eves on which Faſting is preſcrib'd, in Purple; Eaſter-Eve, and all Maſſes for the Dead, in Black. On Chriſtmas Night he wears a Capuche, and a black Velvet Cope, which he wears alſo all the laſt Week of Lent; during which Time he puts on no Mitre, and Nothing but a red Cloth Mantle. When the holy Father has the Tiara on his Head in publick, he wears a white Calot under it, and in private a red one.

THE holy Father [d] aſſiſts at all Conſiſtories and Congregations in his uſual Dreſs, except at the firſt after his Election, and then he puts on the Cope and the Mitre. His principal Buſineſs at that Time is to return the ſacred College his Thanks for all their Services.

[e] WHEN his Holineſs does not wear the Mitre, or Tiara, he walks between the two moſt antient Cardinals; the reſt follow two and two, the Biſhops firſt, after them the Prieſts, and the Deacons laſt. This is quite the Reverſe to the Order which is obſerved when the Pope has on the Tiara or Mitre; for then the Cardinals go two and two before his Holineſs; the Deacons firſt, the Prieſts next, and the Biſhops laſt.

[a] Tableau de la Cour de Rome.

[b] Relazione della Corte di Roma, &c. di Lunadoro.

[c] By the Red is ſymbolically repreſented the fiery Tongues mentioned when the Holy Ghoſt deſcended upon the Apoſtles, and the Blood of Chriſt's Martyrs; by the White, the Joy which the Reſurrection of our bleſſed Saviour muſt create in the Hearts of all true Believers, and the Chaſtity of thoſe Virgins whoſe Feſtival is kept; by the Purple, the pale aſh Colour of ſuch as obſerve the Faſts, Vigils, and Abſtinences of Lent, according to the Preſcription of the Church; by Black, the Sorrow which the Death of Chriſt muſt occaſion in the Chriſtian's Heart, &c. It is of Conſequence not to be ignorant of Things, the Neglect whereof makes a great Chaſm in the Piety of ſome Devotees.

[d] Tableau de la Cour de Rome.

[e] Id. Ibid.

The Order and Ceremonies which are obſerv'd when the POPE holds a CONSISTORY, extracted from the Roman Ceremonial for the Year 1516.

WHAT we are going to amuſe the Reader with upon this Head, [a] is extracted from the Roman Ceremonial. The Pope holds Conſiſtories when he receives Princes, or their Embaſſadors; when he canonizes any Saint, or treats of any important Affair, either Civil or Eccleſiaſtical; when he promotes Cardinals, &c. When a Conſiſtory is to be held, the Pope's Throne is erected in the great Hall of the Apoſtolic Palace. This Throne is almoſt ſquare, and about twelve Palms [b] wide, to which he aſcends by three Steps. His Holineſs ſits down on a Seat adorned with Cloth of Gold, or ſomething like it, under a Canopy of the [c] ſame, both equal to each other in Point of Magnificence. The Foot of the Throne [d] is cover'd with red Cloth. The Cardinal-Biſhops and Prieſts ſit on his Right-Hand, [e] below the Throne; the Deacons on his Left, but ſo as to have their Faces towards the holy Father. Between the Seats of the Cardinal-Biſhops and Prieſts, and thoſe of the Deacons, there is a conſiderable [f] Space left for People to paſs and repaſs.

WHEN his Holineſs goes to hold a public Conſiſtory, he walks with the Mitre on his Head, and is dreſſed in his Amict, Albe, Stole, and red Chaſuble, the Croſs and Cardinals preceding him. The Proceſſion being arriv'd at the Conſiſtory Chamber, the holy Father takes his Place, and then the Cardinals, having firſt made him a profound Bow. The Archbiſhops, Biſhops, Prothonotaries, and other Prelates, ſit on the Steps of the Throne; the Sub-Deacons, Auditors, Clerks of the Chamber, and Acolytes, with their woollen Copes, [g] on the loweſt Step; [h] and the Eccleſiaſtical Officers of the Pope's Court [i] on the Ground, between the Cardinal-Seats. The Pages of the Chamber, and the Secretaries, ſit alſo on the Ground, between the Prelates and Eccleſiaſtical Officers. The Nephews of the reigning Pope, in caſe he has any, and ſome other Roman Princes, ſit on each Side the Throne, and are for that Reaſon called Princes of the Throne. Embaſſadors and other foreign Miniſters are ſeated on the Right Hand of the Throne, between the Steps and the Wall, which is the Place for the greateſt Quality. The other Gentlemen are on the Left, among the Pope's domeſtic [k] Officers. The Conſiſtorial Advocates ſit behind the Cardinal-Deacons, and the Proctors of Princes, with the fiſcal Proctor, behind the Cardinal-Biſhops, who takes place of the other Proctors. The Entrance of the Paſſage leading to the Throne is fill'd up by the Pope's Guard. The Maſter of the Sacro Hoſpitio ſtands between the Guard and the End of the Row of Cardinal-Prieſts. The Clerks of the Ceremonies are at the Head of that of the Deacons, for the greater Convenience of executing the Pope's Orders. When the Pope holds a Conſiſtory for judicial Cauſes, each Advocate, who has any Motion to make, ſtands behind the Cardinal-Prieſts, over-againſt the Pope; and having opened his Cauſe,

[a] Cerem. Eccl. Rom. Lib. I. Sect. 9. Cap. i.
[b] The Palm is an Italian Meaſure of eight Inches, or thereabouts.
[c] Supra caput pendebit aureus pannus, Ibid.
[d] Planum totum . . . . . coopertum erit panno coccineo, Ibid.
[e] A dextra infra ſolium, Ibid.
[f] Spatium decem palmorum aut duodecim.
[g] Et eum eis in ultimo (gradu) Ibid.
[h] Super terram inter ſedilia Cardinalium.
[i] Curiales togati, Ibid.
[k] Familiares.

he

he throws [a] his Petition to the Eccleſiaſtical Officers, who take and preſent it to the Vice-Chancellor. Laſtly, When the Conſiſtory is concluded, the two eldeſt Cardinal-Deacons come forward to ſupport the Pope, and then the whole Aſſembly return in the ſame Order as they came.

PRIVATE Conſiſtories have not ſo many Ceremonies, and are held in ſome private Apartment, at a Diſtance from the ſacred Palace. There are no Steps to the Pontifical Seat, only a kind of [b] open Bench, without an Alcove, and another of a ſmaller Size, which ſerves as a Footſtool to go up to the largeſt one. Each of the Cardinal-Biſhops and Prieſts is ſeated [c] according to his Rank; the eldeſt Cardinal ſits next the Pope, on his Right Hand, and the eldeſt Cardinal-Deacon next him on his Left. There are [d] Benches before their Seats, on which their Eminences ſet their Feet; and the Aſſembly is ſo rang'd or diſpos'd, that the laſt Cardinal-Deacon is next the laſt Cardinal-Prieſt, who has a Bell in his Hand, to call ſuch Attendants as wait to receive any Orders. The Pope's Seat is cover'd with red Cloth; but thoſe of the Cardinals are painted only in that Colour, and have the Pope's Arms upon them. The Space which lies between his Holineſs and their Eminences, is covered with a large Carpet. When this Eccleſiaſtical Senate have any State-Affairs, or any Matters relating to the Church, under Deliberation, [e] every Body but the Cardinals go out, and when they come to give their Vote, [f] they are obliged to do it ſtanding.

PRIVATE Conſiſtories are convened in the Manner following. Two Meſſengers dreſt in purple Gowns, with each a black Rod or Wand in his Hands, go ever Sunday at Prayer Time to the Apoſtolic Palace. They wait at the Gate till the Pope has ended his Devotions, and as ſoon as he comes out of the Chapel, they make him the following Compliment on their Knees, O moſt holy Father, long may you enjoy Life and Health! Is there to be a Conſiſtory To-morrow? To which the Pope anſwers, Yes; and thereupon the Meſſengers add, And ſo may there be for many Years to come; ad multos annos. From thence they go round to all the Cardinals Houſes, make them a Compliment likewiſe on their Knees, and acquaint them that there is to be a Conſiſtory. Conſiſtories were ſummoned by the Sound of a Bell till the fifteenth Century, which was therefore called the Conſiſtorial Bell. The Meſſengers having given the ſacred College the Information, as before-mentioned, call a Conſiſtory, by fixing up a Paper at the Door of the Apoſtolic Chancery. But it is ordered by a Decree of the Congregation of Rites, of the ſixteenth of February 1630. that the Cardinals be ſummoned to Conſiſtories, Chapels, Congregations, &c. by no other Way than by going to their reſpective Abodes.

THERE is one Conſiſtory called half-private, differing from both the public and private ones. In the private, Biſhoprics are propoſed, and Candidates for them are preſented, the Pallium is likewiſe granted here, and the Mouths of Cardinals are ſhut and opened, &c. Theſe Conſiſtories are held on Monday's once in fifteen Days. The half-private, for the moſt part, deliberates on ſuch Matters as peculiarly relate to the Eccleſiaſtical State; ſuch as Debates with foreign Potentates. On theſe Occaſions, ſuch Perſons only as are concerned in the Affairs in Diſpute are admitted to ſpeak in the Conſiſtory (either perſonally, or by Proxy.) Here they deliberate alſo upon the Canonization of Saints.

[a] Cedulam ſuæ ſupplicationis inter ſedentes in terram curiales projicit, Ibid.

[b] Scabellum habet magnum, ſuper quod Pontifex tenet pedes, & aliud parvum, per quod ad majus aſcenditur, Ibid.

[c] A dextra & a fronte ſedent Epiſcopi & Presbyteri, &c.

[d] Scabella pro pedibus Cardinalium ante Pontificem locantur, &c.

[e] This is called the Extra Omnes. The Door is then ſhut, and none come in, or go out, till the Conſiſtory breaks up. The laſt Cardinal-Deacon rings the Extra Omnes with his little Bell.

[f] They muſt then be ſtanding and bareheaded, and have Nothing in their Hands.

IN

[a] IN private Conſiſtories his Holineſs is dreſs'd in a white Silk Caſſoc, a Rochet, a Mozzette or Camail, a Stole, and a red Velvet Cap laced with Silver; or if it be in the Summer, in a Carnation Sattin one laced in the ſame Manner, and the red Cloth Shoes as before deſcribed.

As ſoon as the Door of the Conſiſtory is lock'd, and the Cardinals have had Audience of his Holineſs, their [b] Copes muſt be ſpread all over their Rochets, ſo as they be entirely covered thereby. If any Cardinal comes in after the Conſiſtory is ſeated, he [c] makes a profound Bow to the holy Father, in the Middle of the Hall where they are ſitting, and then, beginning at the Right Hand, inclines his Head to all the Cardinals preſent, who riſe up to receive this Salutation.

THE Reaſon given by a celebrated [d] Doctor of the Church, quoted by Father Bonanni to vindicate the Pomp and Magnificence, in Dreſs and Ornaments, which diſtinguiſh the Vicar of Jeſus Chriſt from the reſt of Mankind, muſt not here be omitted. As God, ſays he, made himſelf known to Men by his Incarnation, ſo they make themſelves known by their Dreſs. From whence, by Conſequence, the Sovereign Pontiff ought to be particularly pompous and ſplendid in his Dreſs, and the People ought likewiſe to be fully convinced, by the Magnificence of thoſe Ornaments, that the Perſon who wears them is the true Prince of the Church, and the Succeſſor of St. Peter: For, as Father [e] Bonnani very juſtly obſerves after St. Paul, the carnal Man underſtands not the Things which are of the Spirit of God, but he comes to the Knowledge of inviſible Things by thoſe which are viſible. Beſides, we are well perſuaded that if his Holineſs be but conſidered as [f] King of Kings, Lord of Lords, and only Prince of Chriſtians; and if it be obſerved that his [g] Authority is more extenſive than that of the moſt powerful Emperors, who are abſolutely tied up by his Deciſions, it will be paſt all Diſpute, that the Pope ought to be as much diſtinguiſhed from the People as the greateſt Monarchs are. A Man muſt be a Janſeniſt, or at leaſt a Calviniſt, to contradict it.

The DIVINE SERVICE, or the CANONICAL HOURS.

BEFORE we enter into a Deſcription of the Pope's Chapel, and of the various Ceremonies of the Maſs, it will be proper to premiſe a ſhort Account of the divine Service in general.

THIS Service [h] conſiſts of Prayers and Holy Leſſons, [i] which the Church has appointed to be read every Day by the Clergy, at particular Hours. This Service is called the Canonical Hours, becauſe it was ordained by the Canons of the Church, which not only [a] Relazione della Corte di Roma, di Lunadoro.

[b] Devono diſtender le Cappe ſopra a' Rochetti, in modo che rimanghino itnieramente coperti, Id.
[c] Id. Ibid.
[d] Card. Bellarm.
[e] Hierarch. Eccl. Ch. cxvii.
[f] Ladiſlaus King of Hungary thus ſtiled Pope Nicholas V.
[g] Plus terrarum lex Romanorum Pontificum, quam Imperatorum obtinuit, S. Greg. L. II. Epiſt. 75. F. Bonanni perfectly well applies the following Verſes of Rutilius to the Pope.

Omnia perpetuos quæ ſervant ſidera motus,
Nullum viderunt pulchrus Imperium.

[h] Alet's Ritual.
[i] There are Inſtances of Canonical Hours, as ſome pretend, to be met with in the ſacred Scripture: The Matins in Pſal. cxviii. or according to the Hebrew, cxix, Prime in Pſal. xcii. Tierce in Acts Chap. ii. Sexte in Chap. x. of the ſame Book, None in Chap. iii. and Veſpers in our Lord's Laſt Supper; but they undoubtedly derived their Original from Judaiſm. The Heathens had likewiſe their Matins; and the Egyptians ſaluted their Gods every Morning. They had their Primes, Seconds, and Tierces, which we call Prime, Tierce, Sexte, &c. Du Choul on the Religion of the Antients.

preſcribed

preſcribed the Hours in which it is to be ſaid, but likewiſeevery particular Circumſtance which relates thereunto. Theſe Circumſtances, however, are not abſolutely the ſame in all Churches. This Office, or Order of divine Service, is likewiſe called the Breviary, by a modern Term which ſome are of Opinion was not introduced till after its Abridgment; for it was much longer formerly than at preſent.

THE Clergy being ordained and eſtabliſhed for the Edification of Chriſtians, their firſt Obligation is conſtantly to repeat their Breviary, that is, to pray to God for the Church, to ſing the divine Office with Devotion, to keep up a Taſte for Piety in Chriſtian Souls, and to adminiſter ghoſtly Comfort and Conſolation to the reſpective Flocks entruſted to their Care. If they apply their Minds to theſe ſacred Duties, they muſt of Neceſſity renounce all political Intrigues, and State Affairs, which turn the Man of God into a fawning Courtier. Nor does the Breviary ſuit better with that agreeable Gallantry which wins over the Ladies Hearts, and makes the Eccleſiaſtical Poſſeſſor of it a neceſſary Companion in all their Parties of Pleaſure.

THE Office is to be ſaid in a ſtanding Poſture, purſuant to the antient Cuſtom of the Church, and upon the Knees on Days of Penance only. Such as treat on Church Ceremonies, tell us, [a] that Genuflexion is a Mark of Sorrow and Contrition; but Standing is not only a Type of Joy, and of raiſing the Mind with Chearfulneſs to God, but of the Reſurrection too, which is the Object of the Chriſtian Faith.

[b] THE Office conſiſts of ſeven Hours, if Matins and Lauds are reckon'd as one, but eight in caſe they be divided. In the primitive Ages of the Church it was compoſed but of ſix Parts, which were Tierce, Sexte, and None, for the Day; and for Night, the Evening, Midnight, and Morning Prayers. At preſent they are divided, as we have already obſerved, into ſeven or eight. Matins for Night; Lauds for the Morning; Prime, Tierce, Sexte, None, for the Day; Veſpers for the Evening; and Complin for the Beginning of the Night. Writers on Ceremonies likewiſe inſiſt that Matins repreſent the Occurrences of the Paſſion-Night; that Lauds are appointed to commemorate CHRIST's Reſurrection, Prime to contemplate the ignominious Treatment which he met with at the Houſe of Caiaphus, and to humble ourſelves at the Sight of thoſe Indignities and Affronts; that Tierce is principally deſigned to return God Thanks for the Sanctification of his Church by the Holy Ghoſt, Sexte to honour the Crucifixion of our Lord, and None to bring to our Remembrance the Myſtery of his Death, which happened at this Hour; that Veſpers were ordained to commemorate his Coming, which, according to an Hymn of the Church, was towards the Night of the World, and the Hour of Complin to implore the Protection of the Almighty during the Night, as had been done at Prime for the Day. The proper Hour for ſaying Matins is the Night; but Lauds, which are now as it were incorporated into Matins, were ſaid heretofore at Break of Day. Both theſe Offices, being called without Diſtinction Matins, are now ſaid towards the Cloſe of the Night. The Hour of ſaying Prime is directly after Sun-Riſing, for which Reaſon 'tis called Prime, becauſe the Antients began their Day at that Time, and divided it into twelve Hours, which were unequal, as the Days were longer or ſhorter; and by the ſame Rule is Tierce fixed at the third Hour of the Day, and anſwers to nine a Clock at the Equinoxes; Sexte at the ſixth, which is always Noon; None at the ninth Hour, or about three a Clock in the Afternoon; Veſpers towards the Evening, and Complin after Sun-ſet. Due Care is taken that theſe [c] Offices be all carefully perform'd at, or very near, the ſet Times here ſpecified.

[a] Alet's Ritual.
[b] Ibid.
[c] Except Veſpers, which during Lent are ſaid before Dinner, on Account of thoſe who cannot keep Faſt, according to the Preſcription of the Church, till the uſual Hours of Veſpers. In Winter, that is, from All-Saints to Eaſter, Veſpers

NOT only ſuch Eccleſiaſtics as are in holy Orders, but every Nun [a] and Friar likewiſe, who has made ſolemn Vows, and all who hold Benefices are under an Obligation to ſay the Office; inſomuch that whoſoever neglects this Duty is guilty of a mortal Sin, and ought to reſtore the Revenues of his Benefice; eſpecially if he has not performed other Functions which depend thereon, or if no other [b] reaſonable Obſtructions may juſtify the Omiſſion. A ſubtil Prieſt ſhall artfully enlarge the Bounds of his Duty, and eſcape the Guilt of a mortal Sin by Evaſions which never enter into the Thoughts of ſuch as are ſincere.

THE Service ought to be ſaid in the Church before the holy Sacrament, or in an Oratory, or ſome other decent and proper Place. The Attention, that is, an entire Application of the Mind and Heart of him who repeats the Office, is alſo abſolutely requiſite, that he may not be cenſured as one who honours God only with his Lips. It is after this Manner that ſome Prieſts and Monks honour him, who having made it an eſtabliſh'd Rule to ſay it over at the Hour appointed, mumble over their Prayers in the utmoſt Hurry, that they may ſhew themſelves equally punctual in paying what is due both to God and Man. The Books which treat on this Subject enlarge much on the Attention which is requiſite in reading or repeating the Breviary, and explain the various Kinds of Attention Men may have; with many other Things requiſite for the ſecular and regular Clergy, who too frequently ſay their Office without any Attention at all.

The CEREMONIES obſerved in the POPE'S CHAPEL.

" [c] THERE are for the Generality forty Papal Maſſes appointed to be celebrated " every Year in his Chapel; three by the Pope himſelf, thirty by the Cardinals, " and ſeven by the Archbiſhops and Biſhops-Aſſiſtants. [d] The Pope, if not indiſpoſed, " ſays Maſs on Eaſter, Whitſon-day, and Chriſtmas-day. The other thirty ſeven Chapel " Maſſes are ſaid in his Preſence on the Feſtival Days ſet down in the Pontifical, a " Catalogue whereof would be uſeleſs as well as tedious.

" THERE are five particular Times for ſinging Matins in the Papal Chapel, that is " to ſay, on Chriſtmas-Eve, the three Days called Tenebræ in Paſſion-Week, and the ſe- " cond of November, which is appointed for performing the Office for all departed " Souls. The Cardinals, each in his Turn, ſing the Leſſons at Matins on Chriſtmas- " Eve; but they are ſung by Muſicians at all other Matins.

" ON the Eves of ſolemn Feſtivals the Pope and Cardinals aſſiſt at the firſt Veſpers " in the Chapel; but his Holineſs never attends the ſecond. There are ten marked in Veſpers are ſung at two a Clock, and the reſt of the Year at three. After Veſpers, the Curates or Vicars ought to catechize Youths, unleſs it has been already done at Maſs, after the Prone or Sermon. The Evening Prayer follows.

[a] Alet's Ritual.

[b] Theſe may be ſeveral Accidents occaſioned by Sickneſs: For Inſtance, the Loſs or Dimunition of the Sight. But ſuppoſing that one of theſe Evangelical Labourers ſhould have loſt it by ſome notorious Debauchery, or conſiderably have weakened it by too aſſiduouſly repeating the Acts of Charity of the Cordeliers of Catalonia, ſo well painted by la Fontaine, could ſuch a one produce ſufficient Reaſons to excuſe an Incapacity which he had brought upon himſelf? The Curate, who, like that des Bigarrures, mentioned by the Sieur Des Accors, could not read the largeſt Letters of a Breviary, though he could diſcern the ſmalleſt Points of a Dice, would not appear more excuſable than the former.

[c] Tableau de la Cour de Rome. A modern Author has added ſeveral Remarks to this Account, but they are all tranſcribed from the Italian Writers.

[d] Lunadoro in his Relazione, &c. ſays the Pope celebrates Maſs on Chriſtmas-Day, Eaſter-Sunday, and the Feſtivals of St. Peter and St. Paul.

" the

" the Pontifical, at which he is generally preſent. All theſe [a] Services are, for the moſt " Part, kept at the Apoſtolic Palace; in the Pauline Chapel, when the Pope is at " Monte Cavallo; and in Sixtus's Chapel, when he tarries any conſiderable Time at the " Vatican; except Eaſter-Sunday, and the Feſtival of St. Peter, when he goes to that " Saint's Church, and the Aſſumption of the bleſſed Virgin, when he goes in Proceſ- " ſion on Horſeback to the Church of St. Mary Major; and ſome other particular " Occaſions, when he goes out of the Vacican, and Monte Cavallo, in Order to viſit " ſome particular Churches or Baſilica's in Rome.

" WHEN his Holineſs goes out to hold a Chapel, he is carried in an Elbow Chair to " the Apartment where his Robes are: But as ſoon as he is equipp'd, he gets into an- " other Chair, which is [b] carried on the Shoulders of twelve of his Grooms, who are " dreſſed in long ſcarlet Cloaks, which reach down to their Heels. When he goes to " St. Peter's, he is carried under a Canopy by the Knights of St. Peter, with two " Grooms before him dreſſed in the ſame Manner. Each of them carries a [c] large Fan " of Peacock's Feathers, at the End of two Sticks faſten'd to the Arms of the Chair, " ſo that the Pope, when he is ſeated, ſeems to have two Wings on his Shoulders, " which are conſtantly kept in Motion, by Means of the two Sticks that paſs under- " neath. This whole Machine is lined all over with Brocade embelliſhed with Gold " Embroidery.

" ON the Sundays in Advent and Lent, his Holineſs goes on Foot to his Chapel, by " way of Humiliation. The third Sunday in Advent, and fourth in Lent, he is car- " ried, they being privileged Days ſet apart for Rejoycing.

" WHEN the Pope goes on Foot from Sixtus's Chapel to the Pauline Chapel, and car- " ries the Sacrament for the forty Hours Prayer on the firſt Sunday in Advent, and for " the Sepulchre on Holy Thurſday, he is ſupported under each Arm by the two eldeſt " Cardinal-Deacons. A Perſon of the higheſt Diſtinction, [d] (ſuppoſing there be ſuch a " one preſent) holds up the Tail of his Cope and Caſſoc. Two Apoſtolical Prothono- " taries, who are Aſſiſtants, bear up the Fringes and Skirts of his Cope before.

" WHEN the Pope celebrates Maſs himſelf, all the Cardinals appear in white Damask " Robes laced with Gold, obſerving this Difference, that [e] the Cardinal-Biſhops wear " Copes, the Cardinal-Prieſts Chaſubles, and the Cardinal-Deacons the Tunics, and all " of them white Damask Mitres. The Biſhops wear Copes too, but inſtead of being [a] Eight of theſe ſolemn Maſſes are celebrated in St. Peter's, and three in the other Churches. The twenty nine others at the Apoſtolic Palace, in Sixtus's Chapel. Vide Seſtini.

[b] Taken from Seſtini's Maeſtro di Camera.

[c] The Fan is one of the moſt eſſential Parts of the Pope's Dreſs. When he is carried on Men's Shoulders, the Day of the holy Sacrament, Candlemas-Day, Palm-Sunday, and other ſolemn Feſtivals, with his Triregne on, two Fans which are borne by two Grooms on each Side his Holineſs's Chair, keep him from being moleſted by the Flies, &c. Theſe Fans are myſterious. Caſalius, de ſacris Veter. Chriſtian. Ritibus, quotes a Paſſage from St. Jerom, to prove that the Fan denotes Continence, as the Flies, driven away by the Fan, denote Luxury. A celebrated Biſhop (Suarez) quoted by Father Bonanni, is of Opinion, That the holy Apoſtles inſtituted the Uſe of ſacred Fans, and makes no Queſtion but the Holy Ghoſt inſpired them with the Invention. This divine Inſtitution is luckily tranſmitted down to us. The Apoſtle St. James has recommended the Uſe of Fans in his Liturgy, which is to be met with among the Conſtitutions of St. Clement. Few, indeed, who read are ignorant that theſe Conſtitutions are falſly aſcribed to St. Clement; but however, ſince the Seraphims covered the Face of God on his Throne with their Wings, it may well be allowed the Pope, who is God's Vicegerent, to imitate the Divinity after a faint Manner, by cauſing himſelf to be fanned with Peacock's Feathers; it is thus that his Dignity ſhines out in the Eyes of the Chriſtian World. We have made uſe of Suarez's own Expreſſions. 'Tis obſervable that he aſſures us, the ſinging, or rather crying, of the Peacock drives away Serpents. The Peacock is a Type of Jeſus Chriſt, and the Serpent of the Devil.

[d] If ſuch a Perſon is abſent, the firſt Prothonotary performs the Office.

[e] This is what Seſtini ſays. The Cardinal-Deacons have on the Amict and Tunic; the Prieſts the Amict, and Planet (or Chaſuble); the Biſhops, the Amict and Pluvial (a ſort of Cope) and Surplice; and all of them wear a white Satin Mitre; this is very different from the Author of the Tableau, &c.

white

" white, like thoſe of Cardinals, they are made of rich Party-colour'd Silks, embroider'd " with Gold; but their Mitres are of white Linen only, ſewed upon Paſt-board. The " Penitentiaries of St. Peter's go likewiſe to the ſame Chapel in their Chaſubles of di- " vers Colours. But when the Pope does not celebrate Maſs himſelf, the Cardinals " wear nothing but the Rochet cover'd with their Copes, and ſuch Prelates as have a " Right to wear it too, have only ſhort Mantles over it, whilſt thoſe who have no Right " remain in their purple-coloured Robes." We muſt obſerve, That their Eminencies, and all the dignified Clergy, who can ſave themſelves the Trouble of walking, [a] attend the Pope in their Coaches, when they are to aſſiſt at a Pontifical Maſs. The Cardinals, as ſoon as they enter the Apoſtolical Palace, pull off their Gloves, and lay down every Thing they have in their Hands in Order to put on their Copes in a Chamber ſet apart for that particular Purpoſe. Their Eminencies Train-Bearers are obliged to give them the Amict to kiſs before they put it on. As ſoon as the Cardinals are dreſs'd they go into his Holineſs's Dreſſing-Room or Veſtry. The two Cardinal-Deacons Aſſiſtants perform the Office of robing him; after which the Vicar of Jeſus Chriſt, the whole Chriſtian Senate, and their Inferior Officers, go and humble themſelves before the Almighty in the following Order.

The ORDER of the POPE'S PROCESSION when he goes to hold a CHAPEL at St. PETER'S.

" THE [b] firſt who file off from the Veſtry to the Chapel are the Cardinals Gentle- " men; then the Pope's Pages of the Chamber, and his Chaplains; after " them the Conſiſtorial Advocates, and Abbreviators of the High Court, with the " Acolytes in their Surplices, followed by the Auditors of the Rota, and the Chamber- " lain of the ſacred Palace on the Left-Hand of the Dean of the Rota. Theſe are " followed by the Apoſtolical Sub-Deacons and ſeven Acolytes bearing [c] ſeven Candle- " ſticks.

" THE Croſs is carried by an Apoſtolical Sub-Deacon, in a purple Caſſoc with a " Rochet and Cope of the ſame Colour. The Crucifix is turned [d] towards the Pope during

[a] Maeſtro di Camera di Seſtini.

[b] Tableau de la Cour de Rome, who has tranſcribed it almoſt verbatim from Seſtini.

[c] With lighted Tapers. Vide Seſtini.

[d] F. Bonanni in his Gierarchia Eccleſiaſtica, Chap. xcii. gives us the following Account of the Cuſtom of carrying the Croſs (or rather the Crucifix) before the Sovereign Pontiff; " The Croſs is carried on the End of a Pike about " ten Palms or Spans long. The Image of our Saviour is turned towards the Pope, and the Chaplain who carries it " walks bareheaded when his Holineſs goes in Public, or is carried on Men's Shoulders: But when he goes in a " Coach, or a Chair, the Chairman carries the Crucifix on Horſeback, bareheaded, with a Glove on his Right- " Hand, with the Left he manages his Horſe.

" In all ſolemn and religious Ceremonies, at which the Pope aſſiſts in his ſacred Robes, an Auditor of the Rota " carries the Crucifix at the ſolemn Proceſſion on Horſeback, dreſſed in a Rochet and Capuche (or Sort of Cope) " purple-colour'd; but there are three Days in Paſſion-Week, on which he and the ſacred College go to Chapel " in Mourning, without the Croſs being born before him.

" It is very much queſtioned, whether St. Peter or his Succeſſors had the Croſs carried before them till St. Syl- " veſter the Firſt's Time, and we much queſtion it ourſelves." It is ſuppoſed, and with very good Reaſon, that That Apoſtle, and his immediate Succeſſors, had no Opportunities of attending to Ceremonies: If they obſerved any, it muſt have been in private; becauſe they lived under Princes who were ſworn Enemies to the Chriſtian Religion. And would not ſuch have accounted carrying the Croſs in public an Inſult upon their Religion? Beſides it is certain, that the Apoſtles and their Diſciples thought of nothing but eſtabliſhing the Church. They who afterwards thought of Ceremonies were already perfectly at their Eaſe. " The Primitive Chriſtians, continues Father Bonanni, carried " the Croſs in their Hand" (to prove which he quotes Surius, an Author whoſe Merit is well known and then ſeems inclined to determine for the Antiquity of the Cuſtom of carrying the Croſs in Public.) " It will be found, ſays he, " that St. Clement I. eſtabliſhed divers Cuſtoms, and among others appointed, That as often as the Sovereign Pontiffs " went abroad, they ſhould take with them the Banner of the Croſs; from whence we may conclude, that this Practice " began about ſeventy Years after St. Peter. Where this Opinion followed, we muſt believe that the Pontiffs, who preceded

" during the Proceſſion, though this be contrary to the uſual Practice of the Court of " Rome. The ſame Sub-Deacon ſings the Epiſtle upon this Day. His Place is bought, " and coſts about three thouſand Crowns, bringing in eight per Cent. yearly. On each " Side the Croſs are two Sorts of Vergers, with [a] red Wands, and long purple Mantles " that trail upon the Ground.

" AFTER the Sub-Deacon march the Penitentiaries [b] of St. Peter's, the [c] Biſhops, " Archbiſhops, Patriarchs, [d] the Governor of Rome, and the Cardinal-Deacon Aſſiſ- " tants, on the Right and Left of the Cardinal-Deacon, who is to ſing the Goſpel. Then " come the Swiſs Guards, with their Captain at the Head of them; ſome carrying Hal- " berds, and others being dreſs'd in Armour, having broad two-edged Swords, all " naked, in their Hands.

" IN the Middle of the Guards ride the Captains, and the General of the light Horſe, " the Roman Conſervators, the Princes of the Throne, the Pope's Relations declared " Princes, and the Ambaſſadors of crowned Heads. After all theſe comes the Pope.... " followed by his Chamberlain and Cup-Bearer, the Apoſtolical Prothonotaries, the " Clerks of the Chamber, Generals of Orders, Referendaries, and the reſt who have " Places at the Chapels.

" WHEN the Pope goes to Chapel without his Mitre, [e] which he does for the moſt " Part at Matins, and all the holy Week, he immediately follows the Crucifix, be- " tween the two eldeſt Cardinals. The others follow two and two; after them come " the Governor of Rome, the Patriarchs, Archbiſhops, Biſhops, and other Prelates, in " quite the contrary Order of Precedency to what we juſt now mentioned, viz. thoſe " of the higheſt Quality firſt, whereas on the greateſt Solemnities they walk laſt; it " being a Cuſtom long ſince introduc'd among the Clergy of Rome, to yield the hindmoſt " Places, as the moſt honourable, to thoſe who are advanced to the higheſt Prefer- " ments in the Eccleſiaſtical State.

" UPON entring the Pauline Chapel, they ſalute the officiating Prieſt, who is dreſs'd " for ſaying Maſs, and ſtands on the Epiſtle Side, with his Back to the Altar; after " which each goes to his Place, ſays a ſhort Prayer on his Knees; then riſes, and re- " mains ſtanding till his Holineſs comes in. The ſame Ceremony is obſerv'd at en-

" preceded St. Clement, never appear'd in Public without the Croſs before them, and that St. Clement only confirmed " this Cuſtom. But be that as it will, St. Sylveſter was not the firſt who practiſed it.

" Anaſtaſius, the Librarian, in his Life of Leo IV. who flouriſhed in the ninth Century, ſpeaks very clearly of " this Ceremony, and what he ſays demonſtrates it was much more antient. In ſhort, it is not to be queſtion'd, " but that, after Peace was reſtored to the Church in the Reign of Conſtantine the Great, St. Sylveſter and his Succeſſors " had the Holy Croſs carried before them with more Pomp and Magnificence than before. It was a Trophy of " that Victory which the Church had juſt gained over Hell, and a Proof of the Sovereignty which Jeſus Chriſt our " Saviour put into the Hands of the ſovereign Pontiffs, his Vicegerents.

" Many Reaſons, adds F. Bonanni, authoriſe this Cuſtom. It is a laſting Memorial of the Sufferings of Jeſus " Chriſt, and of the Succeſſors of St. Peter's Adherence to the Saviour of the World. It is, as it were, the Bulwark " of the Pontiff, and all faithful Chriſtians, and animates them to imitate Chriſt's Example. Laſtly, It is the true " Mark of the Pontifical Dignity, and repreſents their Authority in the Church, as the Roman Faſces formerly did " that of their Conſuls and other Magiſtrates.

" The Crucifix turned towards the Pope, denotes the particular Protection of Jeſus Chriſt." There are ſeveral other Myſteries which are couched under the Manner of carrying the Croſs; but as we have pointed out ſome of them, we hope it is ſufficient.

[a] I cuſtodi con le Mazze, e co' i collari di Maglia, ſays Seſtini.

[b] With the Planet and Berrette. Vide Seſtini.

[c] All with the Pluvial, and white Linen Mitre, Idem.

[d] Then come the Cardinal-Deacons, Prieſts, and Biſhops. Afterwards the two Cardinal-Deacons Aſſiſtants, on each Side the Cardinal-Deacon, &c. Then the Ambaſſadors and Princes walk about the Pope, carried in a Litter under a Canopy, &c. as before obſerved. The Pope's Chamberlain and Cup-Bearer walk at ſome Diſtance; after the Pope come the Participant Prothonotaries, ſome other Prelates, and the Generals of Orders. This is the Order of the Ceremony, according to Seſtini.

[e] On the Night of Chriſtmas, and at Matins in Paſſion-Week, according to Lunadoro.

" tring St. Peter's, where they ſalute the Cardinal Arch-Prieſt, whoſe Place is at the " Head of the Chapter, or Canons, next the Door of the Choir." When the Pope does not celebrate Maſs himſelf, there are ſome ſmall Variations which we ſhall point out to the Reader. [a] 1. Neither the Surplice nor any other Ornament is then worn; their Eminencies, however, go into the Dreſſing-Room, with their Surplices hung a-croſs their Arm. 2. The Penitentiaries, &c. who otherwiſe ſhould go before the Croſs, walk after his Holineſs. 3. The Cardinals directly follow the Croſs, &c.

WHEN his Holineſs goes to hold a Chapel at any other Church, the Proceſſion is juſt the ſame as we have already deſcribed it. They file off in the ſame Order out of the Veſtry-Room to the Church, where the firſt Thing they do, is offering up their Heart to God, before the ſacred Body of Chriſt preſent on the Altar.

THE ſame Order is obſerv'd, when the Head of the Church Militant is convey'd in a Chair to Sixtus's Chapel, in order to ſet the Faithful an Example of Humiliation; for if he walks on Foot, 'tis only on Days ſet apart for turning the Heart more particularly to God, as in Lent, &c. at which Time, as we have already taken Notice, his Holineſs is in a Courſe of Penance, and is ſupporred by two Cardinals. One of the Participant Prothonotaries bears up the Fringes of his Cope before; and if any Prince be preſent, he is obliged to hold up the Train of this ſacred Veſtment.

A Deſcription of the POPE'S CHAPEL, according to F. BONANNI.

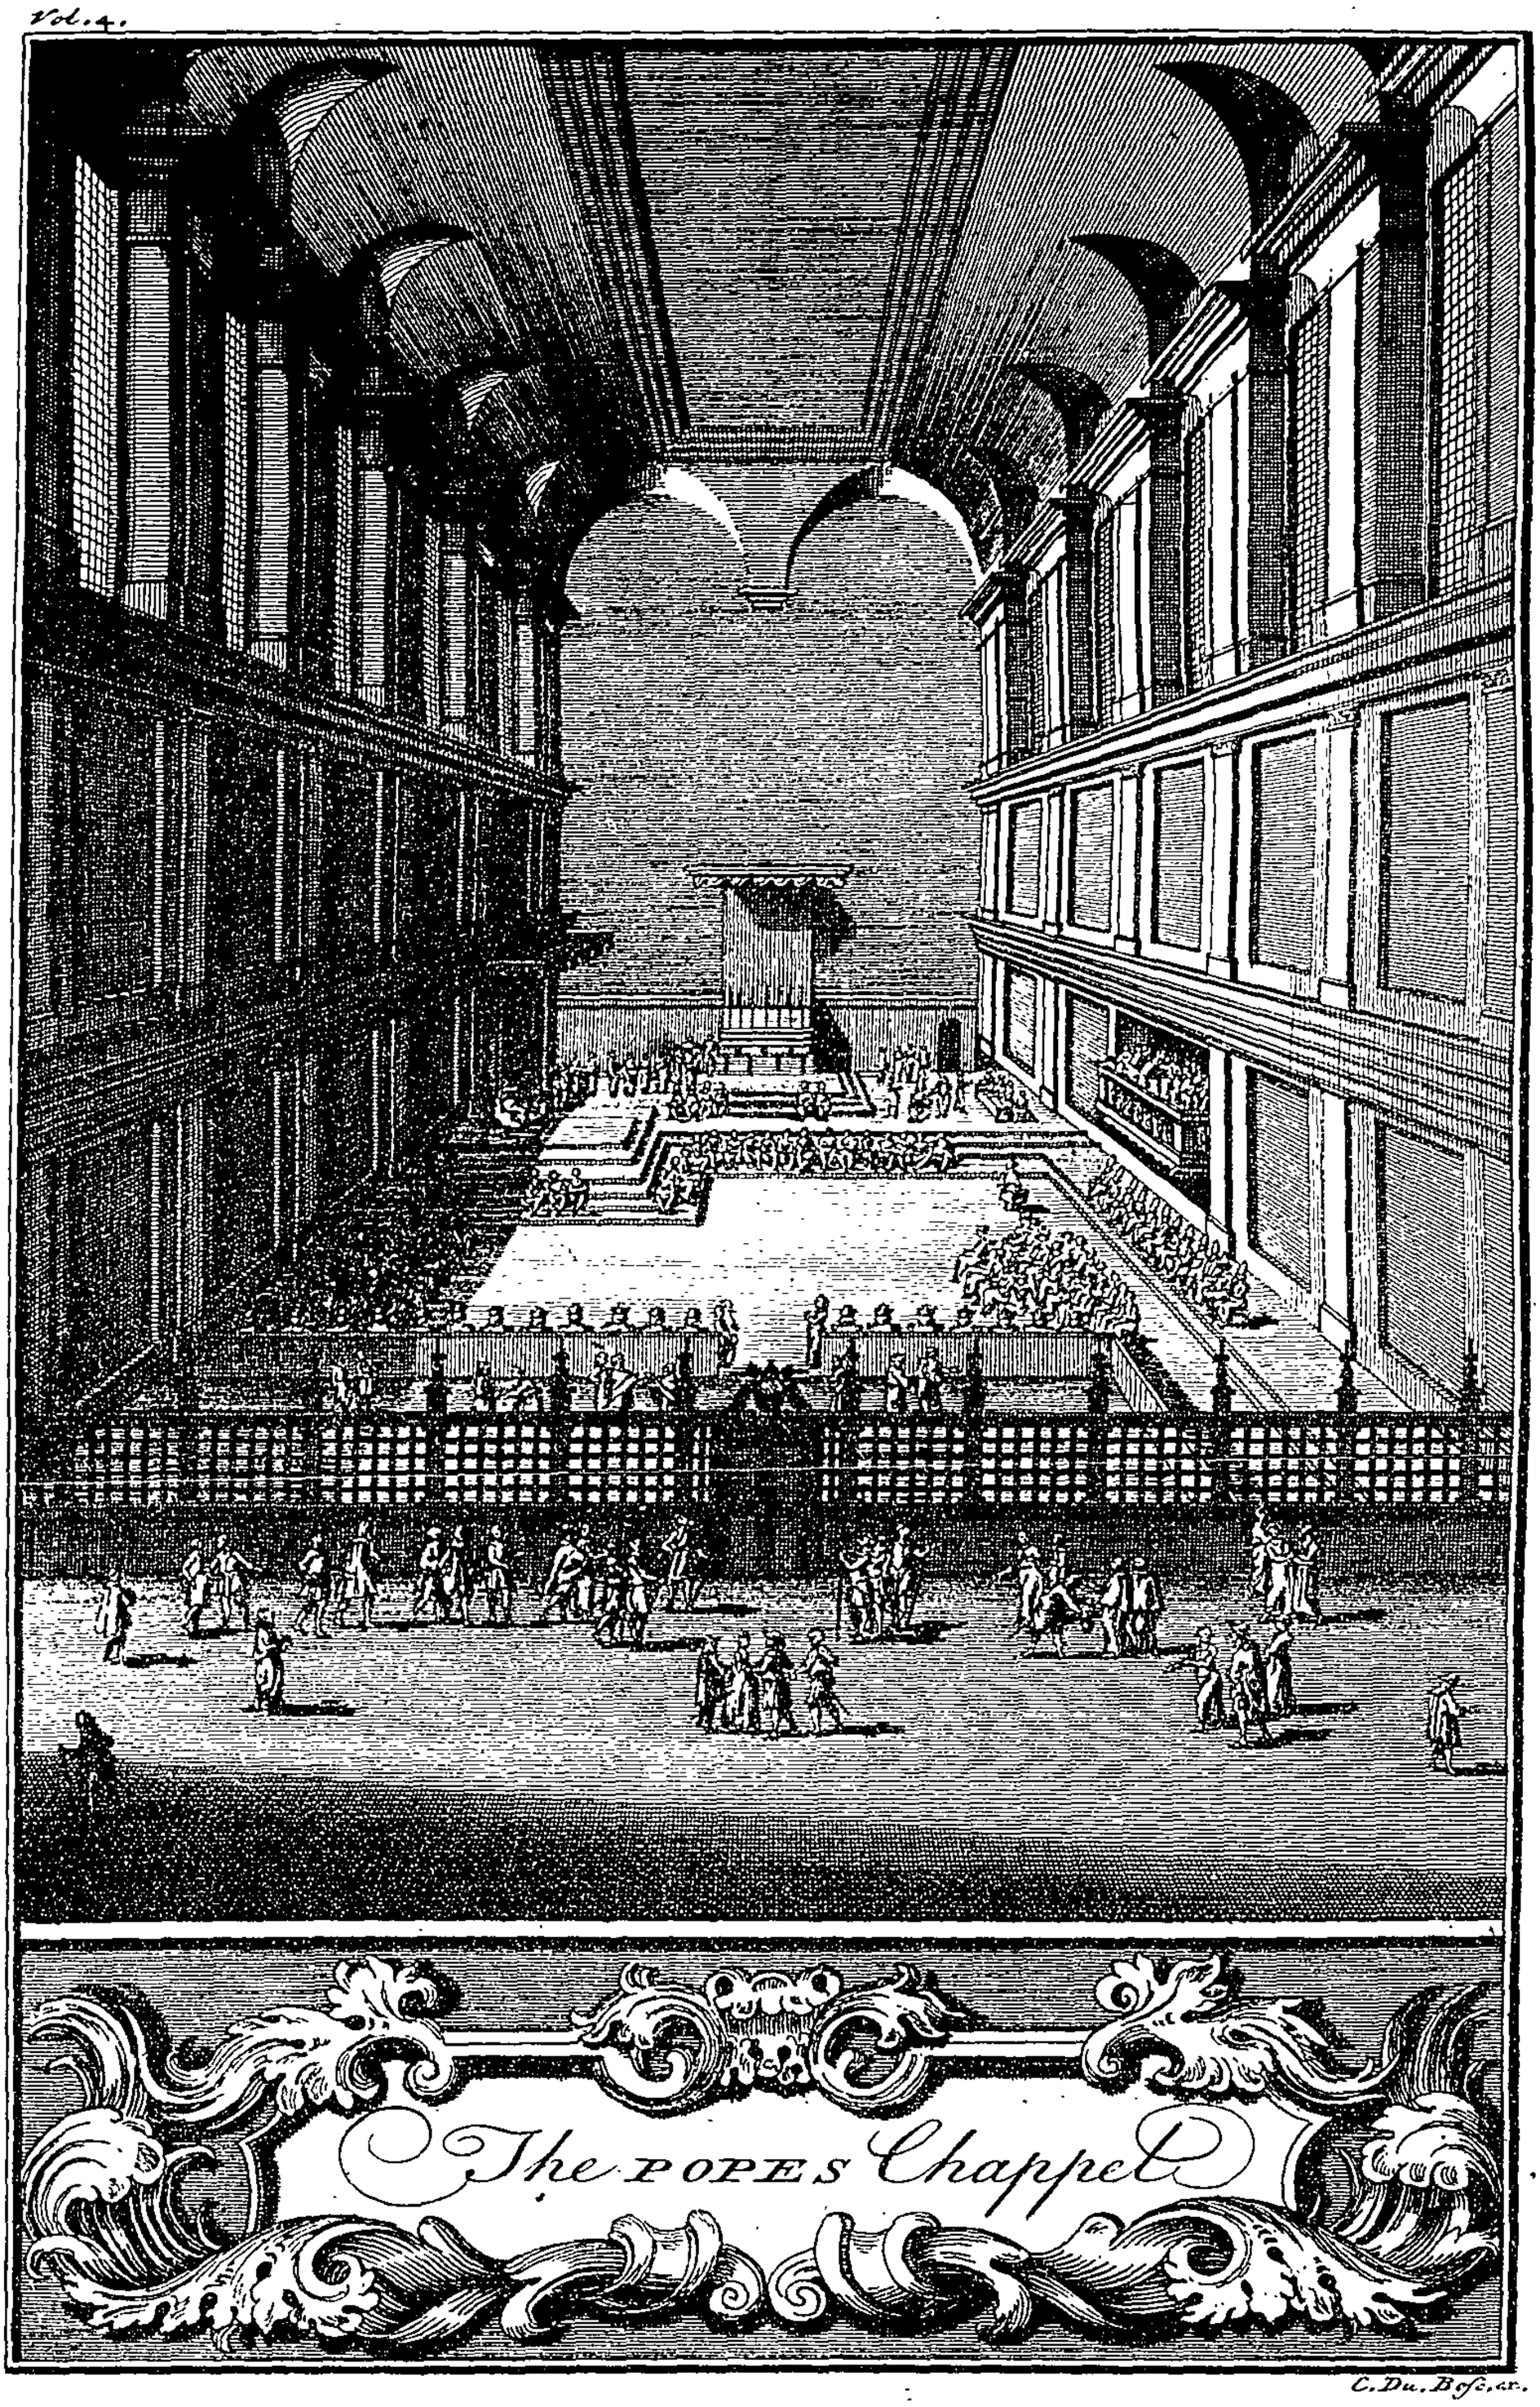
WE ſhall take this Deſcription from the [b] Eccleſiaſtical Hierarchy of the reverend F. Bonanni, and give you a Plan with it, which was originally engraved at Rome. The Figures denote the Ranks of thoſe who are obliged to attend, either on Account of their Dignity, or their Office; but before we go ſo far, it will be neceſſary to give the Reader an Idea of the Sanctuary itſelf. It conſiſts of the following Parts, the Throne, the Benches, the Area, the Rails, the Veſtibulum, the Presbyterium, the Alley or Paſſage, the Choir, and the Gallery.

1. [c] THE Place where the Throne ſtands. This is a Kind of Alcove, where his Holineſs's Throne is placed before the Goſpel Side of the Altar.

2. THE Seats for the Cardinals, which are fix'd round the Altar and the Throne. The next Seats are thoſe for Ambaſſadors and Prelates.



3. [d] THE ſquare Space which lies before the Steps of the Presbyterium, and is ſurrounded by the Benches juſt mentioned. This is ſet apart for Monks, and the [e] Officers of the Pope's Court. The Palatines have not the Privilege of ſitting there.

4. HERE is a kind of Balliſter [f] which ſeparates this holy Court from the Populace. Four, ſix, or ſeven Lights, more or leſs, are ſet up here, according to the Solemnity of the Day.

[a] Seſtini.
[b] This Deſcription takes up the whole cxxvi. Chap. of the Book.
[c] Suggeſtum ſive Thalamus, locus elevatus, ubi ſedes Pontificis ampla, ſolium ſive thronum dicta, &c.
[d] Septum.
[e] Togati Curiales.
[f] Cancelli.

5. THE

Vol. 4.

The POPES Chappel

C. Du. Bosc. ex.

5. THE Veſtibulum lies between the Square (Septum) under the Steps of the Presbyterium; and this is the Place for [a] the Pages of the Chamber, and the Advocates.

6. THE Alley, or Paſſage, runs from the Gate to the Altar.

7. THE Choir is for the Muſic.

8. THE Gallery where the Altar ſtands, and a [b] Seat for the Perſon who officiates.

THE Altar is embelliſh'd with [c] ſeven Candleſtics, in which are large Wax-Tapers: This Number is myſterious, and is juſtified by ſolid Reaſons. The Uſe of Lights, as Cardinal Baronius obſerv'd, was eſtabliſhed by the Apoſtles, who borrow'd it from the Jews. There muſt never be leſs than two of theſe Candleſtics at the Altar; but when there are four, they repreſent the four Evangeliſts, who enlighten'd the Church by their divine Precepts; for which Reaſon the primitive Chriſtians gave the Form of Ezekiel's four Beaſts to the Feet of the Candleſtics, which were lighted up at their religious Ceremonies. On ſome particular ſolemn Days, ſix are ſet upon the high Altar of ſome Churches, in Imitation of the ſix Branches of the Moſaic Candleſtics, which are mentioned in the twenty fifth Chapter of Exodus. A Biſhop who officiates pontifically has ſeven to light him. [d] The Croſs is to be placed before the middlemoſt Taper, ſomewhat higher than the Candles; but with Reſpect to the Altar of the Pope's Chapel; though beſides the ſeven Candles placed on it, ſeven Acolytes go before the Croſs, and [e] the Deacon who is to ſing the Goſpel, each having a Taper in his Hand. When his Holineſs ſings Maſs ſeven more are added, and ſix at Veſpers.

As to the Croſs being plac'd before the Candles, it is a very ancient Cuſtom, and, according to F. Bonanni, handed down to us from the Apoſtles by Tradition; To the End, ſays Cardinal Bona, that the Prieſt, who celebrates the Myſtery of the Maſs, may conſtantly have before his Eyes the Paſſion of our Bleſſed Saviour, of which the Croſs and the Sacrifice of the Maſs are Types or Symbols. And one Argument which ought to convince us, that the Croſs is an eſſential Part of that divine Worſhip which is performed at the Altar, is the Miracle of which [f] F. Gretzar has preſerved the Memory. A Spaniſh Prieſt was obliged to ſay Maſs before a Perſon of Diſtinction, but having forgot the Croſs, he would not preſume to celebrate it. Upon which an Angel, perceiving the holy Prieſt's Perplexity and Confuſion, fetched a Croſs immediately, and placed it upon the Altar, in Sight of all the Aſſembly. This Croſs is religiouſly preſerved, and continues to be the Object of the Veneration of the Faithful.

[a] Cubicularii Togati.

[b] Faldiſtorium, whence perhaps comes the French Word Fauteuil, an eaſy Chair. We are told this portable Seat, which is uſed for the Functions of the Biſhop, repreſents his Dignity, Power, and the Reverence and Reſpect which ought to be paid him. The learned Caſalius, who has written upon the Rites of the Chriſtian Church, firſt made this curious Diſcovery. It is he too who found out the Independency of the Church, in the Form of the Epiſcopal Seat. He obſerves, that this Seat is not ſupported on any Side, and from thence concludes it to be a Repreſentation of the Church, which has no viſible Support; that is, according to this Prelate, that it in no wiſe depends upon Mankind, and that it ought not to acknowledge any Authority but that of Jeſus Chriſt, the Sovereign of the World, who afterwards reſigned his temporal Kingdom to St. Peter and his Succeſſors.

[c] Caſalius, in his Treatiſe on the Rites of the antient Church, aſſures us, That the Lamps and Tapers which give Light to religious Myſteries, have often furniſhed both Oil and Wax for a Multitude of Miracles. Devils have been caſt out, the Dead raiſed, and the Sick healed. He beſides aſſures us, that the Light of Tapers is a Type of the Goſpel-Light, which diſpels the Darkneſs of Infidelity and Ignorance. F. Bonanni, from whom we have borrowed this Deſcription, quotes a Paſſage from Macri, from whence it may be concluded, that the ſeven Candleſtics are an Admonition to the Biſhop, to adorn himſelf with the ſeven Gifts of the Holy Ghoſt; and this Thought is, in his Opinion, ſo much the more juſt, as ſome Fathers entertain'd the ſame Notion as to the Moſaic Candleſtic.

[d] Piſcara Praxis Ceremoniar. p. 29.

[e] Id. Ibid.

[f] Bonanni, Chap. cxxvi. of his Hierar. Eccl.

[a] POPE INNOCENT III. order'd the Croſs to be placed in the Middle of the ſeven Candleſtics, to give Chriſtians an Idea of Chriſt's Interceſſion between the Jews and Gentiles, whom he has united into one Church.

THE Pontifical Throne, marked Figure 2. is on the Goſpel-Side, which is appropriated not only to the Pope, but to Biſhops [b] likewiſe, when the Altar is contiguous to the Wall of the Chapel.

[c] THE Church Militant is a lively Repreſentation of the Church Triumphant. In the latter Chriſt ſits on a Throne, with the Elders on Seats beneath: In the former the Head of the Univerſal Church, and every Biſhop (who in his Dioceſs is the Repreſentative of that Head) are to have the principal Place. The reſt have inferior Places, round the Altar and the Epiſcopal Seat, each according to his Rank and Degree in the Eccleſiaſtical Hierarchy. St. Peter's Chair, [d] which Time has miraculouſly ſpared, and which is preſerved with all imaginable Care in the Baſilica of the Vatican, will doubtleſs tranſmit, to whole Ages to come, an Idea how St. Peter was ſeated in the Church.

THERE is no Ceremony whatever which does not contain ſome myſterious Meaning or another. A good Catholic with the Eyes of Faith diſcovers an infinite Number of eſſential Truths, which the carnal Man has not Strength to diſcern. Theſe Myſteries accompany, in a more peculiar Manner, every Thing that has the leaſt Relation to Eccleſiaſtical Hierarchy, which we are aſſured does Nothing without Reaſons drawn from the pureſt Chriſtianity, and without Views which are perfectly Spiritual. We ſhall point out one of them, to juſtify a Circumſtance which ſome Perſons of a ſuperficial Judgment might, perhaps, look on as the Effect of human Caprice and Extravagance; I mean, that exact Care which is taken to alter the Colour of the Seats, according to the Solemnity of the Day.

THE Cuſtom of [e] covering the Pontifical Throne, and the Seats of Biſhops, [f] with rich Stuffs, is very antient. Baronius aſſures us, that it was practiſed in the earlieſt Ages of the Church; and 'tis evident, that even in St. Auſtin's Time, the Prelates placed themſelves on Seats raiſed higher than the reſt of the Aſſembly's; and which, no doubt, were more commodious, and more richly adorned. But be that as it will, it is highly reaſonable, that the Leaders of the Church ſhould be ſeated in the moſt conſpicuous Place, the better to ſee and be ſeen by the Congregation. This Diſpoſition is ſo natural, that it would be to no Manner of Purpoſe to inſiſt any longer upon it; but we ſhall obſerve, notwithſtanding, that amongſt the antient Chriſtians, the Pontifical Throne was always raiſed higher than the other Seats, and that it has not at preſent the ſame Place in the Pope's Chapel, as it formerly had in Chriſtian Churches; for then 'twas placed in the Middle of the Semicircle of the Tribune, as well as the Altar, after ſuch a Manner, that the Pope at once did view both the Altar and the People. The Seats for the Clergy were ranged on each Side, as they are at preſent in the Churches of St. Clement and St. Nezeus, where the Biſhop's Seat is erected three Steps higher than thoſe which ſurround it.

[a] Bonanni, Chap. cxxvi. of his Hier. Eccl.

[b] Si altare inhæreat parieti. Piſcara Lib. II. Chap. iii. Praxis Cerem.

[c] Id. Ibid.

[d] Bonanni Hierarch. Eccl. Chap. cxxvi. 'This Chair St. Peter uſed for the Epiſcopal Functions, and it was brought from Antioch to Rome. It is compoſed of Wood inelegantly carved, but in Proceſs of Time ſome pious Artiſans made an Addition of ſome Ivory Figures. Pope Stephen's Chair is likewiſe ſtill preſerved, which Pope Innocent XII. made a Preſent of to the Grand Duke of Tuſcany, and is now at Piſa.

[e] Bonanni Hierarch. Eccl. Chap. cxxvi.

[f] The Pontifical (or Epiſcopal) Throne was formerly more or leſs richly adorned, in Proportion to the good or bad Circumſtances of the Pariſh; but it appears that in the firſt Centuries the Cuſtom was to line it with fine Linen. Vide Bonanni, Chap. cxxvi. Hierarch. Eccleſ.

WE

We ſhall mention one Word more relating to the Pontifical Chair. This Chair, we have already obſerv'd, was lin'd with rich Silks; and we muſt add, that when it was Marble, it was embelliſhed with Sculpture. On Good Friday all its worldy Decorations are taken away; the Pope officiates that Day clothed in a Robe of Mourning and Humiliation; that is to ſay, covered with a very coarſe, red, woollen Cope. His Holineſs at that Time, in ſome Meaſure, reſigns the Majeſtic Dignity and Grandeur of Chriſt's Vicegerent, in order to lament, with Tears and unfeigned Sorrow, the Death of the Saviour of the World.

[a] The Canopy likewiſe is to be met with amongſt the Antients, which adds to the Luſtre of the Pope's Majeſty; but that, however, which is over his Seat, is not ſo large as that over the Altar.

The Figure 3. ſhews the Seats which are ranged on each Side the Chapel for the Cardinals, who aſſiſt at the Ceremonies there, in red or purple Copes, according to the Office of the Day.

Thoſe which are lin'd with Tapeſtry, are raiſed from the Ground by Steps, marked with the Figure 4. The Trainbearers of the Cardinals ſit there in purple Copes, or Surplices, and Rochets over them, at ſuch Times as their Eminences wear their Mitres.

The Apoſtolical Court obſerves the following Order in placing themſelves at Chapel; and the Figures refer to the Print hereunto annexed.

5. The firſt Cardinal-Deacon ſeated at the Right Hand of his Holineſs.
6. The ſecond Cardinal-Deacon at his Left.
7. The Cardinal-Biſhops.
8. The Cardinal-Prieſts.
9. The Cardinal-Deacons.
10. Foreign Ambaſſadors.
11. Dukes.
12. Patriarchs, and Biſhops Aſſiſtants.
13. The Governor of Rome.
14. Envoys, or Eccleſiaſtical Legates.
15. Biſhops of the firſt Order.
16. Biſhops of the ſecond Order.
17. Biſhops of the third Order.
18. Abbots, Prothonotaries, Generals of Orders, and Penitentiaries.
19. Procurators general of religious Orders.
20. Lay-Gentlemen.
21. The officiating Cardinal.
22. The Deacon and Sub-Deacon Aſſiſtants.
23. The Cardinal's Aſſiſtant.
24. Chaplains to him who officiates.
25. They who are to give the Water.
26. A Sort of [b] Buffet, call'd the Credence.

[a] The Canopy is a ſquare Cloth of State, made of rich Silk, or ſome richer Stuff, which is hung over the Altar, and Pontifical Chair. As to its Colour, it muſt be alter'd according to the Solemnity of the Day.

[b] This Buffet, or Table, is call'd Credence, from the Italian Word Credenza; and one of theſe ſtands on each Side the Altar, if there be Room. The Size of theſe Tables is not abſolutely determin'd, but 'tis an eſſential Point that they be covered with a fine, white, clean Cloth, which muſt reach all over the Table, down to the Ground. On the Table, on the Epiſtle-Side, ſtands every Thing neceſſary for Celebration; but no Image. That on the Goſpel-Side ſerves for holding the ſacred Veſſels. Vide Piſcara Prax. Sacr. Cerem. Lib. II.

27. The Sacriſtin, and Pontifical Croſs.

28. Two Gentlemen of the Privy Chamber. The Auditor of the Rota, who holds the Pope's Mitre when taken off. He holds it near his Neck, under his Cope or Surplice, when he has one on. A white Linen Scarf, with which he holds the Pontifical Mitre. He that carries the Croſs is laſt, and has his Seat among the others.

29. The Muſic-Desk.

30. Senators.

31. Conſervators.

32. Barons and Knights.

33. Apoſtolical Subdeacon.

34. Firſt Auditor of the Rota.

35. Chamberlain of the ſacred Palace.

36. Auditors of the Rota.

37. Apoſtolic Acolytes.

38. Abbreviators of the high Court.

39. Gentlemen of the Privy Chamber to the Pope.

40. Gentlemen of the Chamber Participants.

41. Chamberlains.

42. Conſiſtorial Advocates.

43. The Pope's Phyſician.

44. Train-Bearers of the Cardinals.

45. [a] The Faldiſtorium, or armed Chair, for him who officiates.

46. The chief Maſter of the Ceremonies ſtanding.

47. The firſt Cardinal-Prieſt in waiting.

48. The ſecond Maſter of the Ceremonies.

49. Perſons appointed for the Service of the Pontifical Chapel.

50. The Choir of Muſic.

51. The Maſter of the Sacro Hoſpitio. The 'Squires. The Captain of the Swiſs Guards.

52. The Pope's Mace-Bearers.

53. The Swiſs Guards.

54. The Preacher.

[b] THERE are beſides two Clerks in the Pope's Chapel, who were formerly called the Bell-Clerks. The Reaſon of that Denomination is unknown, becauſe there are no Bells made uſe of in this Chapel. All we can ſay of it is but Conjecture. But they were ſo called, in all Probability, from ringing a Bell to give Notice to the Muſic, to begin the Office at the ſame Time as it was given out at St. Peter's to the Clergy of that Church. They might likewiſe be ſo named, on Account that when his Holineſs is on a Journey with the holy Sacrament, it is their Buſineſs to ring ſuch a Bell; and this is particularly mention'd in an antient Ritual at Avignon. But however that may be, when theſe Clerks at ſuch a Time attend the Venerabile in the Pope's Journies, they muſt be dreſſed in Red; but at Chapel in Purple, and in Surplices. One of theſe Clerks is of Neceſſity obliged to be a Prieſt, in order to be qualified for taking the holy Sacrament off the Horſe, and carrying it to the Altar as often as Maſs is celebrated during a Journey. Theſe Clerks likewiſe have the Right and Privilege to go along with it on Horſeback, with Lanthorns in their Hands. They decorate the Altar, light up the Wax-Tapers, cover the [c] Tables of the Altar, prepare the Seat for the officiating-Prieſt,

[a] He muſt be an Acolyte to whom the Care of this Seat is committed; and as the Art of placing and diſplacing it in Time, &c. requires an active and experienced Man, Care muſt be taken to chuſe an Acolyte of Judgment and Vivacity. Thus ſays Piſcara, Prax. Sacr. Cerem. Lib. I. Chap. xiv.

[b] All this is taken from F. Bonanni, Chap. cxxvi. Hierarch. Eccleſ.

[c] See before.

ſet

ſet the Benches and Cuſhions in Order, dreſs the Aſſiſtant, take Care of the Cenſer, and preſent the Wine and Water which are to be made uſe of in the Maſs, &c.

THERE are many of our Readers, who perhaps, may be often diſguſted at the ſcrupulous Regularity which is obſerved in all theſe Religious Ceremonies here deſcribed; but to this we anſwer, That the Devotion of a Multitude of People would be perfectly diſcompoſed, ſhould the leaſt of theſe Practices, to which their Eyes have been long accuſtomed at ſuch Times, be forgot or omitted. As for Example, there are ſome Devotees, perhaps, whoſe Piety is revived by the Variation of Colours in the Dreſs which is to be worn by him who officiates. When the Red takes Place of the Violet, they may poſſibly lift up their Hearts to God with greater Eaſe and Alacrity. The Pomp and Equipage of the Vicar of CHRIST, (tho' he whilſt on Earth was the humbleſt of Mortals,) ſtrikes Devotion into others. An Altar cover'd with its Decorations, a Prieſt dreſſed in his ſacerdotal Robes, the various Ceremonies which he makes uſe of at Maſs, prepare us for the moſt ſolemn of all Myſteries. People are ſo much accuſtom'd to them, that if the Prieſt be not dreſs'd decently, or if any Ceremony be omitted, they cannot think of the Myſteries intended by them. Had the Cuſtom of turning round, as the Turkiſh Derviſes do, or of meaſuring ſo many Acres of Land with one's Body, like certain Faquirs of the Mogul's Country, been introduced for ſome Ages paſt into the Chriſtian Religion, as Acts of Devotion, the People in all Probability would have accuſtomed themſelves thereunto. 'Tis only Cuſtom that makes us look with Veneration on the Habit of a Prieſt, and with Contempt on the wide Trowſers of a Swiſs: If there were as ſettled a Veneration for thoſe Breeches, as there is for a Cordelier's Weeds, or a Prieſt's Caſſoc, we ſhould doubtleſs find out great Myſteries in them. The Wideneſs, for Inſtance, might point out to us the Extent of Religious Virtues; the Number of the Plaits in them, the infinite Number of Religious Duties; and the Diſpoſition of them, the Order to be obſerved in fulfilling them, &c.

The Ceremonies of the MASS.

HAVING ſaid thus much relating to the Pope's Chapel, we ſhall now give a particular Explication of the Ceremonies obſerved at the Sacrifice of the Maſs, [a] which the Catholics look upon as the moſt acceptable of all Adorations, and the moſt effectual of all Prayers. The Church not only prays herſelf, at this Sacrifice, which the Prieſt offers up to God in the moſt ſolemn and majeſtic Manner that human Nature has been capable of deviſing; [b] but Jeſus Chriſt, by the Sacrifice of his own Body, offers up to his Father the moſt perfect Adoration that can poſſibly be paid to him, ſince it is offer'd by a God. In ſhort, it is Jeſus Chriſt, who alone and always acts in this Sacrifice. The Prieſt is but his Miniſter, his Inſtrument, his Organ: 'Tis Chriſt that leads and directs him, and makes the Action of the Prieſt effectual, who offers him as a Propitiation for Sin; ſo that however corrupt [c] the Prieſt may be in his Morals, the Sacrifice is equally ſalutary to the Church.

" As

[a] Some of the learned pretend to derive the Word Maſs from a Hebrew Root, which ſignifies Offering; tho' 'tis very improbable, ſince the People of the Eaſt do not uſe it; and ſome other Etymologies of it are as forced. 'Tis readily agreed, that the Word is corrupted from Miſſio, which is entirely Latin, and of antient Uſe.

[b] Explanation of the Ceremonies of the Maſs.

[c] God can adminiſter true Sacraments by thoſe who are not of his Church, and it is hereby, that the Holineſs of the Sacrifice of the Maſs is juſtified, tho' celebrated by a vicious and ungodly Prieſt, againſt any Objections of Heretics, they have not thought fit to diſpute the Validity of Baptiſm, though conferred by a Perſon out of their Communion, becauſe Baptiſm is performed in the Name of the Father, &c. and it is Jeſus Chriſt who baptiſes. So, properly ſpeaking, wicked Prieſts do not celebrate Maſs, or offer up the ſacred Body of Jeſus Chriſt, but he through them offers up himſelf. The Proteſtants themſelves allow, that a wicked Paſtor may perform the Offices of Chriſt's Miniſtry, in the ſame Manner as a diſſolute Miniſter of State, or an Ambaſſador, who has neither Religion nor Virtue,

" As [a] Man ſtands every Day in need of a Sacrifice, both for the acknowledging God's " abſolute Power, and the obtaining of him the Remiſſion of Sins, he would be " wholly incapable of offering him any Victim that would be acceptable to his Sovereign " Majeſty, and make an Attonement for his Tranſgreſſions, if Jeſus Chriſt had not gi- " ven himſelf to him, and for him, in the Sacrifice of the Maſs. . . . . God cannot re- " ject this Hoſt, ſince his Son, the Object of his Love and Affection, is therein offered " up to him . . . there is this Difference between the bloody Sacrifice of the Croſs, and the " bloodleſs one of the Maſs; that in the former Jeſus Chriſt offered himſelf for Man- " kind, without either their offering him, or themſelves with him; but in the latter " our bleſſed Saviour offers himſelf, and is offered by us; the Church offers him up to " God, and herſelf with him," &c.

On Sundays before High Maſs the Holy-Water is made; after which follows a Proceſſion. The Faithful ought to be preſent at Maſs with a Conſcience void of Offence; and in Order to ſhew them the Neceſſity of ſuch internal Purity, they are ſprinkled with a Water ſanctified for that Purpoſe by a ſolemn Benediction. The Proceſſion is a Preparation of the Hearts of the Congregation of the Faithful for the holy Sacrifice of the Maſs. The Prieſt and Clergy make this Preparation by their Spiritual Hymns and the Elevation of the Croſs, which is carried before the Clergy whilſt they move in a ſolemn Manner round the Church, or the Places adjacent to it.

[b] The Maſs conſiſts of two principal Parts, viz. the firſt from the Beginning to the Offering, which was formerly called the Maſs of the Catechumens, and the ſecond, from the Offering to the Concluſion, called the Maſs of the Faithful. All People, without any Diſtinction, were preſent at it till the Offering; becauſe in this firſt Part the Leſſons from Scripture, and the Preaching of the Goſpel, were included, from which none were to be ſhut out. But after the Sermon, none were permitted to have a Share in the Sacrifice, but ſuch of the Faithful as were duly qualified to partake of it; the Catechumens were ordered to depart, together with thoſe who were poſſeſſed, and the Penitents, who were not only ſhut out, and kept from the Communion, but even the Sight of the Myſteries; for which Reaſon the Deacon cried out, [b] Holy Things are for ſuch as are holy, let the Prophane depart hence.

The thirty five following Prints hereunto annexed repreſent to the Reader the various Actions of the Prieſt at Maſs. Devotion has diſcover'd in all theſe Actions which the Church hold to be myſterious, and of Service to the Belief of the Faithful Chriſtian, a compleat Allegory of the Paſſion of our Lord. The Myſteries and Allegory are what we are now to explain.

1. Figure.

The good Chriſtian, who is deſirous to lift up his Heart to God whilſt the Prieſt goes to the Altar, is to regard this Action, as an Alluſion to Chriſt's Retreat with his his Apoſtles to the Garden of Olives. He went thither in order to prepare for the offering up himſelf as a Propitiation for the Sins of Mankind; thus the Prieſt going to the Virtue, may, however, ſtill ſerve his Maſter well, and even make Religion and Virtue contribute to the Service of the State. It is moreover ſufficient for the Prince to have appointed him, in Order for his being obey'd in all Things relating to the Execution of his Charge. The Proteſtants farther diſtinguiſh between the internal and external Action. The latter is what apears to our Eyes outwardly in the Motion of the Paſtor, and which offers nothing but what is human to our Sight; but the former is the Direction of him; who is the Soul of the Paſtor, and it is this Director who gives Strength to the Action, who perſuades, ſanctifies, &c. We ſhall not here mention the Eſſence of Ordination, which is ſuch, that thereby a Prieſt remains always a Prieſt, even without actually performing the Functions of Prieſthood, his Character being indelible.

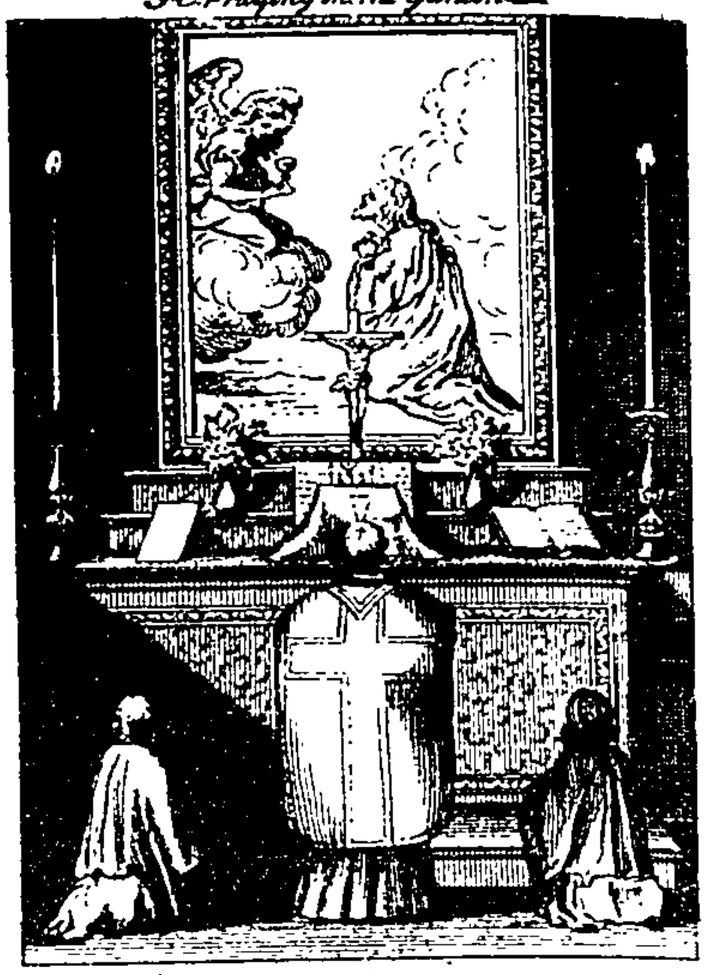
[a] Explication of the Ceremonies of the Maſs.

[b] Idem.

[c] This has been thought by ſome an Imitation of the Myſteries of Paganiſm; but we ſhould rather declare it the univerſal Practice of all Religions, in order to exclude the Prophane.

Vol.



Jesus Christ goes into the Garden of olives

the PRIEST goes to the ALTAR.

THE CEREMONIES observed IN SAYING MASS. Represented IN Thirty five COMPARTMENTS; with their mistical ALLUSION to the DEATH and PASSION of our BLESSED SAVIOUR

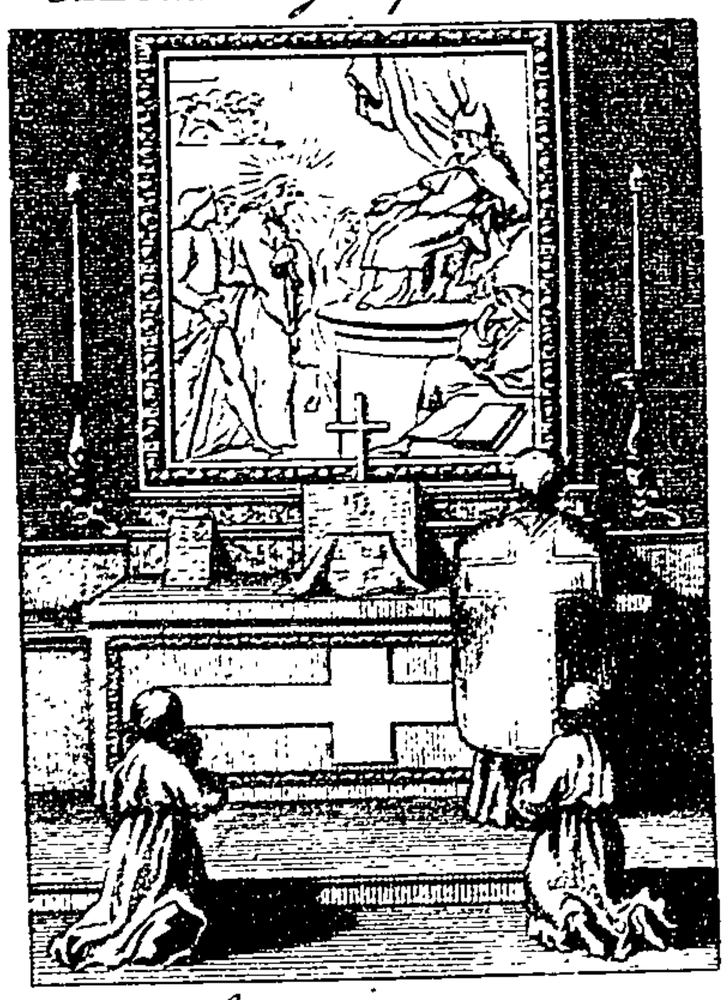
J:C Praying in the Garden

the PRIEST begins MASS.

Jesus Christ Prostrating himself Sweats blood

the CONFITEOR.

Jesus Christ betray'd with a Kiss.



the PRIEST Kisses the ALTAR.

J:C is taken and bound ȳ PRIEST goes to ȳ Epistle side of ȳ ALTAR.

Jesus Christ brought before Annas, the INTROITUS.

St Peter denies Christ thrice.

the PRIEST says the KYRIE ELEYSON.

J:C looking on Peter makes him weep

the PRIEST turning to the people says DOMINUS VOBISCUM.

Sub. le Clerc ddin.

C. Du Bosc Ex.

Altar, is preparing himſelf for the Sacrifice of the Hoſt, which is the ſacred Body of JESUS CHRIST.

2. FIGURE.

BEFORE the Prieſt begins Maſs he ſays a Preparatory Prayer. The Faithful ought likewiſe to join their Hearts in Prayer with him, and contemplate on the inward Conflicts of the Saviour of Mankind, when he prayed in the Garden of Olives, and thought himſelf forſaken by his Father. The Prieſt, when at the Foot of the Altar, ought to look upon himſelf as one abandoned, driven out of Paradiſe, and baniſhed from God's Preſence by the Fall of Adam.

3. FIGURE.

JESUS CHRIST, proſtrate in the Garden of Olives, ſweated Blood on the Evening before he was to ſuffer the moſt ſhameful and cruel Death. In this diſconſolate Condition, he confeſſed to God his Father the Sins and Iniquities of the whole Race of Mankind. This is the Idea (we are told) which the Prieſt's Confeſſion at the Altar ſets before the Chriſtian's Eyes, and conſiſts of a Series of Reflections made by him at the Foot of the Altar. He implores God's Pardon for his own Sins, and thoſe of the Congregation. He conſiders, that the Action he is then undertaking requires a Heart purified not only from all mortal, but from venial Sins likewiſe. The People are to join with the Prieſt in his Confeſſion.

4. FIGURE.

THE Prieſt afterwards goes up to the Altar, and kiſſes it; which is the Token of his Reconciliation with God, and of the Reconciliation of the Faithful through him. But this Image does not hinder them from forming another, which is this: The Kiſs thus given to the Altar, may repreſent that of the Traitor Judas; a happy Kiſs! ſince it deliver'd Jeſus Chriſt into the Hands of his Executioners, and by that Means the infamous Apoſtate contributed to our Salvation, without any Intention ſo to do.

5. FIGURE.

AFTER the Prieſt has kiſſed the Altar, and whilſt [a] the Introite is ſinging, he thurifies the Altar, that he may offer up to God the Prayers of the Faithful, ſignified by the Perfume. His Action of turning himſelf towards the Epiſtle-Side is allegorical alſo; but Care muſt be taken not to carry the Allegory too far; by the Force, however, of Meditation, the Faithful may make the Prieſt's Action repreſent Chriſt's being taken, and bound, in order to be delivered into the Hands of his Enemies.

6. FIGURE.

JESUS CHRIST is carried before the High-Prieſt of the Jews: The Introite is applied to this Circumſtance of our Lord's Paſſion. The Introite is called the Entrance and Beginning of the Maſs, and varies every Day according to the Myſtery or Feſtival which is to be celebrated. [b] The Kyrie Eleiſon, which ſignifies, Lord have Mercy upon us, is a

[a] Pope Celeſtin is thought to be the firſt who had the Pſalms ſung in Anthems. St. Gregory the Great afterwards aſſigned thoſe Anthems to their particular Uſes, as the Introite, the Reſponſes, the Offertory, the Communion, &c. and collected them into a Book called the Antiphonal. Vide Bona.

[b] Kyrie Eleiſon, ſignifies, Lord have Mercy upon us. It is natural for Man to have Recourſe to God even when he does not ſo much as think of it: Beſides this is the Form in all the Prayers of Jews, Pagans, Chriſtians, &c. But the Chriſtian Church has endeavoured to conſecrate it in a particular Manner in its Worſhip. The Force of Cuſtom is ſo prevalent, that a Chriſtian, who ſays, Lord have Mercy upon upon me, in Greek, would think it might have leſs Virtue, perhaps, in the Vulgar Tongue. We will not, however, venture to be poſitive in it: But ſtill it is ſurpriſing, that the Latin Church ſhould have affected to rob the Greeks of this Form alone, without any ſatisfactory Reaſon that can be aſſigned for it. But however that be, 'tis certainly very antient.

Greek Prayer, immediately following the Introite, and is three Times addreſſed to each of the Perſons in the ſacred Trinity, to ſhew how much we ſtand in Need of God's Goodneſs and Mercy. A warm Devotee may find an exact Relation between the Entrance of the Maſs, and that of Jeſus Chriſt into the Houſe of Annas.

7. FIFURE.

As to the Relation between the Repentance of St. Peter after the three Denials and the Kyrie Eleiſon, it is more perfect. The Prieſt implores the Goodneſs and Mercy of the Supreme Being in Behalf of himſelf, and the Congregation of the Faithful. Devotees are perſuaded, that this Idea preſents them with that of St. Peter's Tears. To ſin againſt God, is to diſown and deny him. We muſt therefore repent as that Apoſtle did.

8. FIGURE.

[a] AFTER the Introite and Kyrie Eleiſon, our Lord is underſtood to ſhew himſelf to the Faithful, by the Prieſts giving out, and the Choirs continuing the Gloria in Excelſis. It is likewiſe called the Hymn of the Angels, becauſe it begins [b] with the Words which the Angels ſung immediately after our Saviour's Nativity. This Hymn expreſſes the Church's Veneration for the infinite Majeſty of God, &c. But it is omitted on Days of Humiliation, and at Maſſes for the Dead. The Prieſt, with Reverence and Reſpect, kiſſes the Altar, and continues to do ſo every Time he turns towards the People. He ſalutes the Aſſembly, ſaying, Dominus vobiſcum, the Lord be with you. In pronouncing theſe Words, he muſt look with an Eye of Charity upon the Congregation of the Faithful, and by his Looks affect their Hearts, and move them to Repentance. It was thus that our Lord looked on St. Peter with an Eye of Pity and Compaſſion, and made that Apoſtle inwardly ſenſible of The Lord's being with him. The People return his Salutation in theſe Terms, & cum Spiritu tuo, and with thy Spirit. The Prieſt and People alternately ſalute each other divers Times during the Maſs, to ſhew the Harmony which there ought to be between them in the Celebration of the Myſteries. The Prieſt who officiates turns to the Altar, and reads the Collect, which is a Prayer containing a Summary as it were of all that the Church begs of God in the Office of the Day.

9. FIGURE.

THE Prieſt reads the Epiſtle, which alludes to the Accuſation brought againſt JESUS CHRIST before Pontius Pilate. This Leſſon is called the Epiſtle, becauſe 'tis frequently extracted from ſome Epiſtle of the Apoſtles. The World, the Fleſh, and the Devil, uſe their utmoſt Endeavours to turn the Chriſtian's Heart againſt Chriſt, who is deſirous to devote himſelf wholly to him. This is the Relation which may be found between theſe two Actions. The Imagination of a devout Chriſtian, directed by Contemplation, will with Eaſe diſcern much more Myſtery here than we have mentioned.

10. FIGURE.

THE Gradual [c] is ſung after the Epiſtle. 'Tis ſo called [d] from going up into the Gallery to ſing it, as the Practice is in many Churches at this Day. It is a Preparation for the Leſſon extracted from the Goſpel, to whch is added the Hallelujah: But from Lent to Eaſter, which is a Time of Mourning and Humiliation, ſome Verſes out of one of the Pſalms are ſung inſtead of the Hallelujah; which, as they are ſung in a flow and me-

[a] Explication of the Ceremonies of the Maſs.

[b] The Sequel of this Anthem is attributed to Pope Teleſphorus, who lived one hundred and fifty Years after our Saviour. Others aſcribe it to Pope Symmachus, who lived three hundred and fifty Years after. The Truth is, its Author is not certainly known.

[c] The Gradual began to grow into Uſe, according to ſome, in the Time of Pope Honorius, about the Year 633. others think it much more antient.

[d] Explication of the Ceremonies of the Maſs.

lancholy

Jesus Christ accused before Pilate

The Priest reads the Epistle

J.C. accused before Herod makes no reply

The Priest bowing down before the Alter says MUNDA COR &C.

Jesus Christ sent back from Herod to Pilate

The Priest reads the Gospel

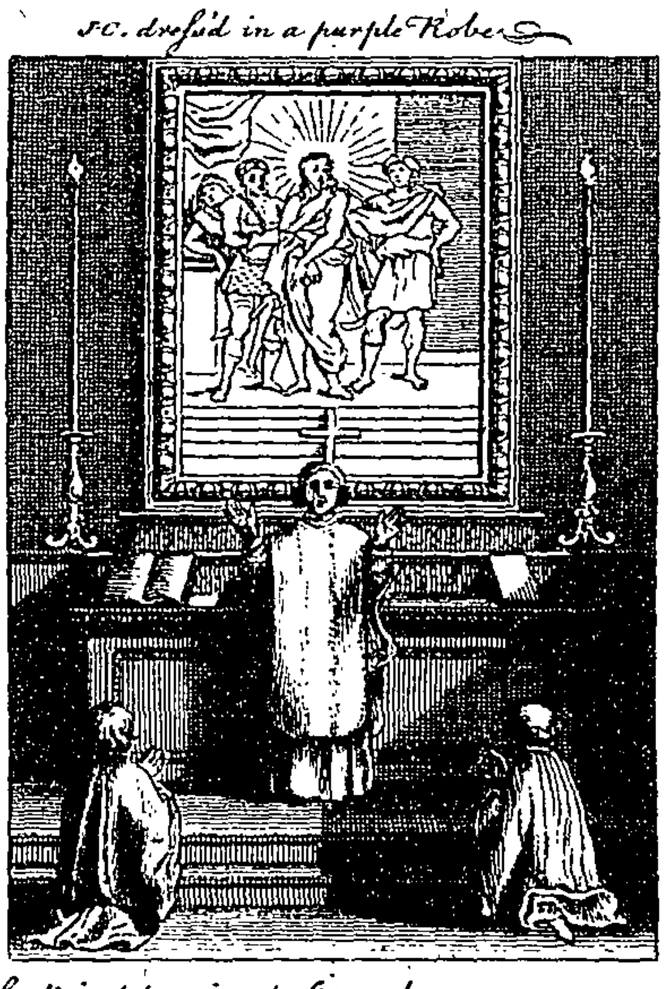
J.C. Strip'd in order to be Scourged

The Priest unvails ye Chalice

J.C. tied to the Pillar, and Scourged

The oblation of the HOST.

J.C. Crowned with Thorns.



the Preast after offering up ye Chalice covers it.

Pilate washes his hands and declares J.C. to be innocent

The Priest washes his hands.

J.C. dress'd in a purple Robe

the Priest turning to ye people says ORATE FRATRES

J.C. condemned to be crucified.

the Preast reads the Preface

Seble Clerc del.

O Du Bosc Ex.

lancholy Tone, are called the Tract. In the mean while the Deacon preſents the Incenſe to the Prieſt, who bleſſes it; ſaying over it, [a] May God bleſs thee to whoſe Honour thou ſhalt be burnt. The Prieſt either kneeling, or lowly bowing to the Altar, repeats to himſelf the Prayer which begins with theſe Words, Munda cor, &c. The Prieſt and People are now to look upon themſelves as going to anſwer before the Tribunal of the King of Kings. This is the Idea which the Prieſt's Action ſignifies in the tenth Figure.

11. Figure.

The Prieſt is in this Print ſeen reading the Goſpel, and Jeſus Chriſt ſent from Herod to Pontius Pilate. The Explication of the Ceremonies of the Maſs, furniſh us with this Allegory. The Goſpel is carried from the Right-Side of the Altar to the Left, which is an Emblem of the preaching of it to the Gentiles after the Refuſal of the Jews, and their Contempt of its Doctrines. In the ſame Manner Jeſus Chriſt, after he had been deſpiſed and inſulted by Herod, who is the Emblem of the Jews, is carried before Pilate, the Symbol of the Gentiles. Pilate, indeed, on this Occaſion, refuſed to hear our bleſſed Saviour, or at moſt, if he did, it was with Coldneſs and Indifference; but Allegories, like Compariſons, are only juſt in one particular Point of Light.

12. Figure.

For which Reaſon alone, the Parallel between the uncovering the Chalice and the Scourging of our Saviour will be found exact. The Chriſtian, who ſees the Chalice uncovered, is to repreſent to himſelf the Manner in which our bleſſed Lord was ſtriped in order to be ſcourged. But this Compariſon muſt be made by Way of Reverſe. The Prieſts Action is glorious and pompous, and commands Reſpect. The Scourging of our Savoiur made the Jews and Romans inveterate againſt him, as that Puniſhment was baſe and ignominious.

13. Figure.

After the Goſpel is read the Prieſt moves. We ſhall ſay but little here relating to the [b] Sermon which follows the reading and perfuming the Goſpel, which the Prieſt kiſſes: The Choir likewiſe ought to kiſs it, while the Prieſt ſays, Behold the ſacred Law, &c. whereto the Choir anſwers, I believe with my Heart, and confeſs it with my Mouth.. The Prieſt adds, May our Sins be blotted out by the Words of the Goſpel. The Reader muſt obſerve, that after the Sermon the Creed is ſung by the whole Congregation, &c. which being concluded, and the Prieſt having kiſſed the Altar, turns to the People, and ſalutes them again in the Terms already mentioned. The Offertory follows next, and the Prieſt then offers up the Hoſt, which has ſome Relation to the Scourging, which was the Introduction to Chriſt's Suffering, as the other is the Preliminary to the Sacrifice of the Maſs.

14. Figure.

The Prieſt elevates the Chalice, in order to offer it according as was preſcribed for Oblations by the Law (of the Jews) and then covers it. Jeſus crowned with Thorns ſhewed he was going to be elevated as a Victim, offered up to his Father for the Salvation of Mankind. It is well known, that the Victims of the Pagans were crowned before they were ſacrificed to their Idols.

[a] Ab illo benedicaris, in cujus honore cremaberis.
[b] It will be ſpoken to lower.

15. Fi-

15. FIGURE.

THE Prieſt bleſſes both the Bread and the Wine which he has offered up to God. He afterwards bleſſes the Frankincenſe, and perfumes the Bread and Wine, praying, that the ſweet Smell of this Sacrifice may be more acceptable to him than the Smoke of Victims ſacrificed to him under the antient Law. In the next Place the Altar is perfumed. Laſtly, The Prieſt waſhes his Fingers in Imitation of our Saviour, who waſhed his Apoſtles Feet; or rather, as a Memorial to Chriſtians, that it is not ſufficient, in order to celebrate the Myſteries of the Maſs, to have a Conſcience void of all criminal Offences, but that they muſt cleanſe themſelves likewiſe from the leaſt Imperfections. Many other Things might be added; but we ſhall only inform the Reader farther, that Pilate's Action is figured in it, who waſhed his Hands, and thereby declar'd that our Lord was innocent.

16. FIGURE.

As ſoon as the Prieſt has waſhed his Fingers, he makes a profound Bow to the Middle of the Altar, and addreſſing himſelf to the ever-bleſſed Trinity, makes a ſecond Oblation of the Bread and Wine. He then turns himſelf to the People, and exhorts them to pray to God, that the Sacrifice which is going to be offered, may be acceptable in his Sight; to which the People anſwer: And then the Prieſt prays in a low Voice, which Prayer is one of the Secretums of the Maſs. The Imagination of a devout Chriſtian will find out ſome Conformity between the Prieſt turned towards the People, and Chriſt covered with a purple Robe. We ſhall be ſilent as to this Particular, that we may not loſe ourſelves in the boundleſs Ocean of Alluſions.

17. FIGURE.

AT the Cloſe of this Secretum, which is to be look'd upon as the Treaſury in which the Prieſt ſhuts up the Prayers which the Faithful have juſt before repeated; he raiſes his Voice, and ſays, [a] Per omnia ſæcula, For ever and ever, &c. after which [b] he exhorts the People to lift up their Hearts, for the Hour of Conſecration is at Hand. The Words of the Prieſt are now about to bring down the Lord of Heaven and Earth upon the Altar, and the People anſwer [c] that they are in the Diſpoſition which is required of them. The Prieſt then [d] exhorts them to return their Thanks to God for it; to which the People again anſwer, That [e] it is meet and requiſite ſo to do. The Prieſt after this addreſſes himſelf in a Prayer to God the Father. This is called the [f] Preface, which is followed by the Sanctus, Holy, holy, holy is the Lord, &c. which the People ſing, in Order to celebrate the Glory and Majeſty of the Supreme Being. This Part of the Maſs is thought to bear ſome Affinity to Chriſt's Condemnation; but the Reader will eaſily judge whether there is that Conformity or not.

[a] Per omnia, &c. The People anſwer, Amen. Dominus vobiſcum; the People anſwer, & cum Spirito tuo.

[b] Surſum corda. The Miniſters of the Pagans, in their Religious Ceremonies, formerly uſed the Words, Hoc age, That is, Mind your Duty. The Proteſtant Miniſters, when they adminiſter the Sacrament, frequently repeat theſe Words, Lift up your Hearts. Thus all Religions adopt ſome Forms for the Celebration of their Myſteries. He who is a Paſtor of the People (in any Religion whatever) will obſerve to pronounce theſe Forms in ſuch a Manner as to awe and affect the People. He will compoſe his Eyes, Geſtures, and Voice, ſo as to gain the Eſteem and Attention of his Auditors.

[c] Habemus ad Dominum.

[d] Gratias agamus Domino.

[e] Dignum & juſtum eſt.

[f] The Preface, as it appears, is a wholſome Admonition from the Prieſt to the Faithful. Its Inſtitution is attributed to Pope Gelaſius I. but ſo eſſential a Part of Religious Worſhip is in all Probability much more antient; it being ſo natural, that it is to be found in all Religions; at leaſt, they have ſome Form equivalent to it.

18. FI-

J:C bearing ỻ Crosse he is to dye upon that we might live the PRIEST joyning his hands prays for the faithfull that are living.

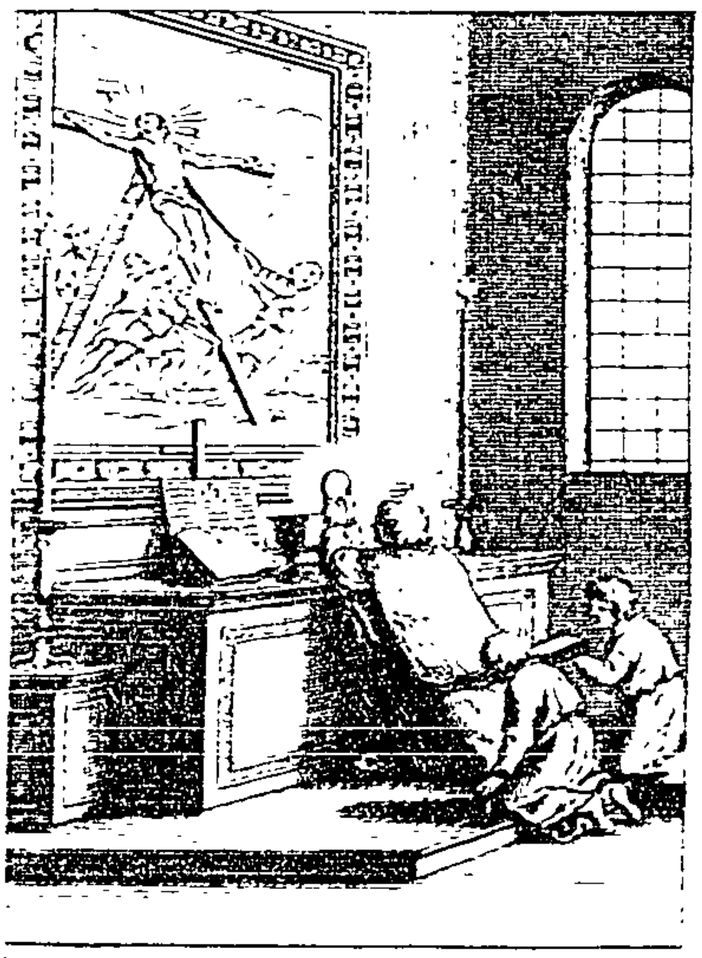
Sᵗ Veronica offers J:C her handkerchief



the Priest extends his hands over the HOST and CHALICE.

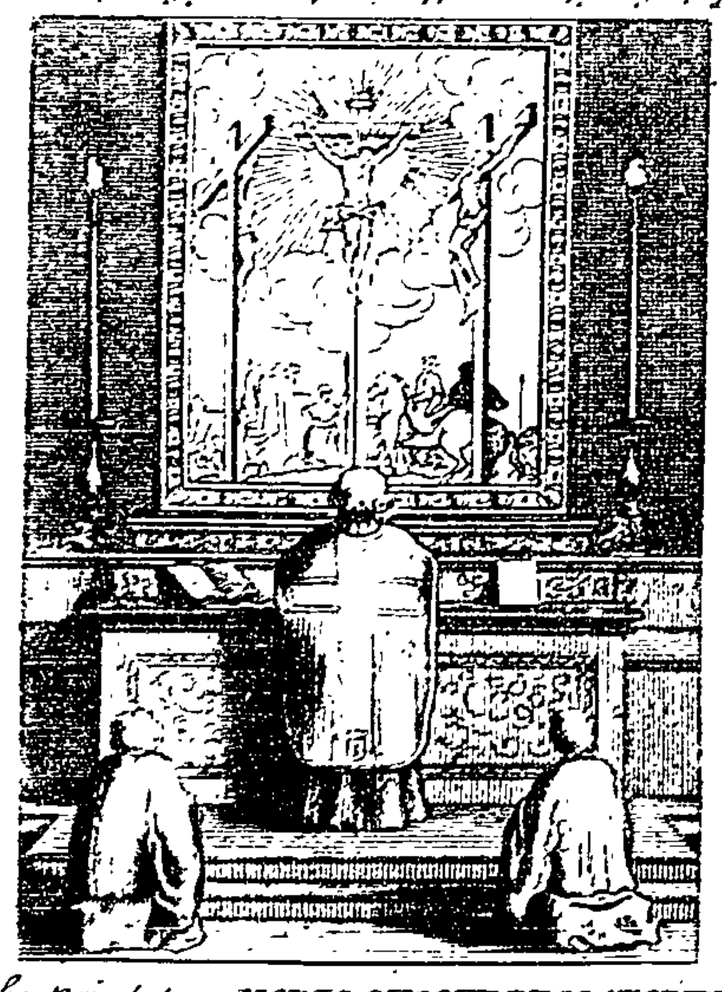
J:C Nail'd to the Crosse.

the PRIEST makes Signs of the Cross upon the HOST & CHALICE.

J:C is raised up in the air

the Priest adores the host before Elevation thereof

the Blood of J:C shed upon the Crosse



the Elevation of the Chalice

J:C prays for his Enimies

the priest commemorates ỻ faithfull deceased

J:C comforts ỻ good thief with ỻ promise of going to paradise

the Priest says NOBIS QUOQUE PECCATORIBUS

J:C recommends St John as her son to the B: Virgin at the PATER NOSTER &c.

J:C gives up his Ghost to his Holy Father

The priest divides ỻ HOST.

Sabᵃ Clouwdon.

C Dᵘˢ Bosc Exᵉ

18. FIGURE.

WHAT follows the Preface is called the [a] Canon, which begins thus, Te igitur clementiſſime Pater, &c. We therefore humbly beſeech thee, O! moſt merciful Father. In this Part of the Maſs, the Living are commemorated in ſuch Manner as is mentioned in the Remark, by praying to God for the Redemption of their Souls, the Hopes of their Salvation, &c. This Part of the Maſs is applied to Chriſt who bare the Croſs, and went to die for us, that we might live.

19. FIGURE.

THE Prieſt, ſoon after this Commemoration, covers the Hoſt and Chalice with his Hands; a Cuſtom, which, as well as the Elevation, was obſerved by the Jewiſh and Gentile Prieſts, who, in former Times, laid their Hands upon the Beaſts they intended to ſacrifice, and afterwards elevated Part of the Victim. This Impoſition of Hands denotes that Union which there is between the Perſon who ſacrifices, and the Hoſt which is offer'd up; and here the Prieſt teſtifies, that he offers himſelf up a Sacrifice to God, as far as he is able, for the Salvation of Mankind. The People are mentally to accompany the Prieſt, and beg of God, that he would vouchſafe to receive that Teſtimony. In ſhort, the Impoſition of the Prieſt's Hands upon the Hoſt and Chalice, ſerves to preſerve in a good Chriſtian's Mind the charitable Action of [b] St. Veronica, who very officiouſly gave her Handkerchief to Chriſt when he was led to ſuffer Death. It is owing to this charitable Act of St. Veronica, the Memory of which will laſt for ever, that the Image of our Saviour is now preſerved in the Vatican.

20. FIGURE.

THE Prieſt makes the Sign of the Croſs over the Hoſt and Chalice, and pronounces the Words whereby Chriſt inſtituted and ordained the Sacrament of the Euchariſt, for the Performance of the Conſecration. Our Saviour, therefore, who by his Pronunciation of them at the Laſt Supper, changed the Subſtance of Bread and Wine into that of his Body and Blood, here works the ſame ineffable Alteration by his Almighty Power. This Part of the Maſs is the true and lively Repreſentation of the Sacrifice of Chriſt Jeſus upon the Croſs.

21. FIGURE.

THE Adoration, likewiſe, of the ſacred Hoſt by the Prieſt, and his Elevation of it to be worſhipped by the People, in the moſt perfect Manner repreſent our Saviour lifted

[a] That is, a Rule; this Part, which never alters, contains the Order, Rule and Words by which the Conſecration is to be performed. The Prieſt therein recommends ſuch Perſons, in a particular Manner, for whom he is going to offer the Sacrifice. For altho' this Sacrifice be offer'd for the whole Church, as a Continuation of the Sacrifice of the Croſs, yet a particular Commemoration of ſome Perſons is always made, &c. Explication des Prieres de la Meſſe.

[b] One of the devout Women who followed Chriſt, when he bore his Croſs, and was going to ſuffer, ſeeing him all over Blood and Sweat, took off the Linen or Handkerchief that was on her Head, and preſented it to him, who wiped himſelf with it, and as a Teſtimony of his Gratitude left three Prints of his Face on it, the Handkerchief being thrice doubled. One of theſe ſacred Faces is at Jeruſalem, another at Rome, and a third in Spain. The Woman to whom this Handkerchief belonged, whom Tradition has always called Veronica, went, 'tis ſaid, to Rome, where ſhe cured Tiberius of a dangerous Diſtemper, by the Application of the holy Face. This Handkerchief fell afterwards into the Hands of Pope Clement I. but we cannot poſitively determine by what Means it was handed down to Conſtantine's Time, who depoſited it in the Baſilica of St. Peter. John VIII. who was Pope in 705. conſecrated a Chapel to it. Chifflet, in his Treatiſe De linteis Sepulchralibus, mentions the Tranſlations of this Relic, to which we refer the Reader.

When it is produced to the Roman People, they muſt firſt proſtrate themſelves before it, and then implore God's Mercy ſeveral Times. The Pious obtain conſiderable Indulgences on this Occaſion. In France we have ſeveral Copies of this famous Original. Thoſe of Montreuil, and Cahors in Gaſcony, have acquired great Reputation by the Miracles and extraordinary Cures performed by them.

up upon the Croſs, for ever adorable, but more particularly at the Time of his [a] Sufferings.

22. FIGURE.

AFTER the Prieſt has conſecrated the Chalice, by pronouncing the Words of our Saviour, This is the Cup of my Blood, &c. he lifts up the Blood of our Lord Jeſus, that the People may adore it, and by their Prayers beg of God the good Effects of that Sacrifice which he is then offering.

23. FIGURE.

BY Virtue of this Sacrifice, the Prieſt afterwards recommends to God the Souls of all the Faithful, who are in Purgatory, and more eſpecially of thoſe whom he is under ſome particular Obligation to remember. This Prayer has a Relation to that which our Saviour made on the Croſs for his Enemies. This Alluſion would be thought a little forced, if the Pious did not look upon themſelves by Way of Humility amongſt the Number of his Enemies, who by their Sins crucify him afreſh every Day, and account themſelves as dying in their Sins, and not to be reſcued from the Flames of Purgatory, but by the prevailing Power of that Sacrifice which the Prieſt offers for thoſe who are ſuffering in that purging Fire.

24. FIGURE.

AFTER this he raiſes his Voice, and, ſmiting his Breaſt, begs God's Bleſſing on himſelf and the Congregation, through the Mediation of ſuch Saints as he expreſly nominates. He likewiſe implores the divine Majeſty to grant both him and them a Place in his Kingdom, as the penitent Thief did of Jeſus Chriſt upon the Croſs.

25. FIGURE.

HE elevates the Hoſt and Cup, and ſays the per omnia before mention'd, after which he repeats the Lord's Prayer. " The Signs of the Croſs, which he makes on the Hoſt, " the Chalice, and the Altar, repreſent to God that bleeding Sacrifice which his Son " offered up to him of himſelf upon the Croſs, to do him that infinite Honour which " the whole Creation could not; and the ſame is ſignified by all thoſe Signs which the " Prieſt makes on the Hoſt, Chalice, &c. during Maſs." The Reader is here to obſerve, that the Prieſt having ſaid ſoftly what is to be pronounced in this Manner in the Canon of the Maſs, at Length exalts his Voice. As the Bread which is offer'd by the Faithful is only bleſs'd with a Deſign to be diſtributed among them in the Communion, he here repeats the Lord's Prayer aloud, in order to prepare them for it, and for this laſt Part of the Maſs, which is the Conſummation of the Sacrifice; and when he comes to Give us this Day our daily Bread, the Deacon takes the Paten, and lifts it up, and ſhews it to the People, to inform them that the Sacrament is going to be adminiſter'd. He then returns it to the Prieſt. The devout Chriſtian, who is going to partake of the Sacrament, then becomes a true Child of God, and may with Boldneſs make his Addreſſes to him as his Father; he then makes a ſpiritual Contract or Covenant with Chriſt; and this is the Relation which we find between the true Chriſtian and St. John, whom our Saviour made the Virgin Mary acknowledge as her Son.

[a] Explication des Ceremonies de la Meſſe. The Prieſt is to extend his Hands when he ſays the Lord's Prayer, that his Body may repreſent the Figure of the Croſs, which is the Enſign of Chriſtianity.

26. Fi-

26. FIGURE.

AFTER the Lord's Prayer, the Prieſt ſays a private one to God, to procure his Peace by the Mediation of the bleſſed Virgin and the Saints. When he has done, he puts the ſacred Hoſt upon the Paten, and breaks it, which repreſents very naturally, to the devout Chriſtian, the Agony of our Saviour, who recommended his Soul to his heavenly Father, after having been offered up to him as a Propitiation for that Sin, which had broken the Peace, and ſeparated Man from his Maker.

27. FIGURE.

WHILST the Prieſt is putting a Part of the Hoſt into the Chalice, the true Chriſtian, with the Eyes of Faith, is to follow Chriſt deſcending into Limbo.

28. FIGURE.

THEN the Prieſt ſays, and the Choir ſing, the [a] Agnus Dei, &c. thrice over, and the Prieſt as often ſmites his Breaſt. This Action is an Alluſion to the Sorrow of Chriſt's Diſciples, who, having ſeen his Sufferings, returned home, ſmiting their Breaſts.

29. FIGURE.

AFTER the Agnus Dei, the Prieſt ſays a private Prayer, by which he once more prays for the Peace of the Church. When that Prayers is over, he kiſſes [b] the Altar and the Inſtrument [c] of Peace, which is preſented to him by the Deacon; the Deacon receives it from him again, and then it is ſent round to all the Congregation, with theſe Words ſaid to each particular Perſon, Peace be with you. Whilſt the Peace, or Paxis, is kiſſing, he prepares himſelf for the Communion by two other Prayers ſaid to himſelf. When the Hoſt, he firſt adores it, and then ſays in a low Voice, I will eat of the celeſtial Bread, &c. and ſmiting his Breaſt, adds theſe Words; [d] I am not worthy that thou ſhouldſt enter my Houſe, &c. which are thrice repeated. After he has partaken of our Lord's Body, he uncovers the Chalice, and repeats this Verſe of Pſalm cxv. (according to the Vulgate) What ſhall I give unto the Lord for all the good Things which he hath done unto me? He goes on with the reſt of that Verſe, I will take the Cup of Salvation, &c. He makes the Sign of the Croſs, with the Chalice, ſaying, May the Blood of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt keep my Soul, &c. When the Prieſt has received the Communion, he adminiſters it to the People. To the Prieſt's communicating is applied the Burial of our Lord's ſacred Body, who died, was buried, and deſcended into Hell, that we might live. After the Prieſt and People's communicating, the Choir ſing the Anthem called the Communion.

30. FIGURE.

AFTER this, the Prieſt putting [e] Wine into the Chalice, in order to take what is called the Ablution, repeats a ſhort Prayer, by which he begs of God, that this Communion, which to the outward Senſe appears a temporal Remedy, may prove to [a] O Lamb of God, who takeſt away the Sins of the World, &c.

[b] The Kiſs, in Token of Peace, and out of a religious Principle, is one of the moſt antient Cuſtoms in the Church. The Kiſs of Peace was given formerly after the Lord's Prayer, to which were added theſe Words; Peace be with you. Theſe Kiſſes might occaſion very carnal Thoughts. The Inſtitution of the Inſtrument of Peace is attributed to Pope Leo II. who lived about 683. but ſome make it much more modern.

[c] This is call'd the Paxis, being a ſmall Plate of Silver, or Gold, with the Crucifix engraved or raiſed upon it.

[d] Domine, non ſum dignus, &c.

[e] The Wine of Purification.

the

the Heart of the Faithful a Means to obtain a bleſſed Eternity. Afterwards he cauſes Wine and Water to be poured out for the ſecond Ablution, and accompanies this Action with another ſhort Prayer; [a] and then ſalutes the Congregation. Theſe Ablutions allegorically repreſent the waſhing and embalming the Body of our Lord dead on the Croſs, and offered by the Prieſt. 'Tis from this Body that the ſpiritual Balm diſtils, which brings Health to the Soul of faithful Communicants.

31. FIGURE.

THE Prieſt ſings the Poſt-Communion. This is a Prayer in which he begs of God the good Effects of the Sacrament then juſt received. The good Effects here requeſted, by which is typified Chriſt dead, are the glorious Reſurrection of the regenerate Chriſtian. The Poſt-Communion may be look'd on as a Repreſentation of our Saviour's Reſurrection.

32. FIGURE.

THE Action of the Prieſt, when he turns towards the Congregation, and ſalutes them, is an agreeable Image of Chriſt's Appearance to his Mother and his Diſciples. The Prieſt thus turned towards them, ſalutes them as the Ambaſſador of Chriſt, and anounces his Peace to their Souls, who dies, if we may be allowed the Expreſſion, and riſes again every Day by the Hands of the Prieſt, for all true Chriſtians.

33. FIGURE.

THE laſt Prayers, and the Beginning of St. John's Goſpel, which the Prieſt repeats after the Sacrifice of the Maſs, are inſtructive Leſſons, which revive in the Heart of a Chriſtian, thoſe Doctrines which Jeſus Chriſt, after his Reſurrection, taught his Diſciples, for forty Days together.

34. FIGURE.

WE have already ſeen Chriſt ſacrificed by the Hand of the Prieſt; in the Poſt-Communion we have ſeen the Figure of the Reſurrection, and in this Print we ſee that of his Aſcenſion. The Congregation is diſmiſſed with theſe Words; Ite, Miſſa eſt; [b] Depart, the Maſs is concluded. To which they anſwer, God be thanked. Thus Jeſus Chriſt received, by his glorious Aſcenſion, the eternal Reward of that Sacrifice which he himſelf offered upon the Croſs, both as Prieſt and Victim. The Sacrifice of our Saviour on the Croſs, is the true and genuine Maſs, taking in all its Parts, which, by the Explication which we have juſt given of them, more fully appears.

35. FIGURE.

LASTLY, The People receive the Benediction from the Perſon [c] who officiates, or the Biſhop, if he happens to be preſent, which is a perfect Repreſentation of thoſe Bleſſings ſhowered down by our Saviour upon his Apoſtles, by the Miſſion of the Holy Ghoſt.

THE

[a] He waſhes his Hands and Mouth, wipes the Chalice, folds up the Corporals and other Linen, the Uſe of which we ſhall explain when we come to the ſacred Veſſels and the Linen.

[b] In the Ceremonies of the Worſhip of Iſis, the Prieſts ſent the Congregation away much after the ſame Manner, being call'd The Diſmiſſion. Vide Polyd. Virgil. The Calviniſt Miniſters, after giving the Benediction taken from the Book of Numbers, diſmiſſed the People with this Form, Depart in Peace, and may the God of Peace be with you, &c.

[c] This Benediction muſt be given after kiſſing the Altar, with Eyes erected to the Heavens. The Arms muſt be extended, and then gently brought back towards the Stomach, that the Hands may join in an affectionate Manner for the Congregation of the Faithful. This Extenſion of the Arms, and joining the Hands, are both myſterious,

The Soul of JC descends into Limbo

the priest puts a small part of the Host into the CHALICE.

JC. being expired several people return smiting their breasts. &c.

the priest smites his breast repeating three times AGNUS DEI &c.

The Body of JC. interr'd in a New Sepulchre

The Priest receives the Communion

The Body of JC. is imbalmed

the Priest takes the ABLUTION.

the Resurrection of Jesus Christ

the Post-communion.

JC appears to his Mother and his Disciples.

the Priest turning to the people says DOMINUS VOBISCUM.

JC. appears to, and instructs his disciples for 40 days.

the LAST COLLECTS.

JC. in the presence of his Disciples, ascends into Heaven.

the Priest turning to the People says ITE MISA EST.

JC. Sends the H: Ghost to his Apostles.

the Priest gives Benediction to the Congregation.

Sibile Clero del.

C. Du Bosc Fec.

THE Order in which all are placed who come to Maſs ought not to be omitted. The Sanctuary, otherwiſe called the Presbyterium, is appointed for the Perſon who officiates, and his Aſſiſtants; the Choir for the Clergy who are dreſs'd in Surplices; the upper Part of the Nave for the Men, and the lower for the Women.

THE Congregation muſt kneel from the Beginning of the Maſs to the Kyrie, ſtand during the Aſperſion of the holy Water, kneel again during the Prayer which follows it; then ſtand at the Gloria in Excelſis, and kneel during the Prayers. They may ſit from the Beginning of the Epiſtle to the Goſpel, and then they muſt ſtand again. They ſit at Sermon, and kneel at Prayers. They ſtand whilſt the Prieſt repeats the firſt Words of the Creed; then ſit; but kneel, and bow when he comes to & incarnatus eſt, &c. was conceived by the Holy Ghoſt. They afterwards ſit to the Concluſion of the Creed, but ſtand up when the Prieſt ſays Oremus. The People ſit likewiſe till the Preface, at which they ſtand. They kneel at the Sanctus, and till after the Communion, riſe when the Prieſt ſays Dominus vobiſcum, kneel again till after the Prieſt's Benediction, and then ſtand again during laſt Goſpel; and the Benefit and Advantage which may be reaped from the various Poſtures which the Church directs to be obſerved during Maſs, is this; Kneeling is a Token of the ſincere Chriſtian's Humiliation and Repentance; Standing denotes the Confidence with which he ought to addreſs his Prayers to God, and the Reſolution with which he ought to execute his divine Will; and Sitting ſhews the Steadineſs requiſite for perſevering in his Service.

DURING the Celebration of the Maſs, no Perſon whoſoever ſhould talk, look about him, or be ſeen in any indecent Poſture. The Fair Sex ſhould never exert their Charms, or make uſe of their conquering Power, in Preſence of the Supreme Being. As for the Men who are armed with Chriſtian Modeſty, they ought to uſe their utmoſt Endeavours to repel the Weapons of Coquetry. Their Eyes ſhould be Strangers, if I may be allowed the Expreſſion, to their female Pariſhioners; ſhould never know where the Ladies are in the Congregation of the Faithful. Rich Clothes, naked Breaſts, ſprightly, rolling, wanton, black Eyes, never fail of taking off the Chriſtian's Attention from the Duties of divine Service.

MODESTY is no leſs commendable in the Prieſt. A Prieſt of a freſh and clear Complexion, who carries a Sort of Health about him, which may be called agreeable, and knows how to ſhew the Talents which Nature has beſtowed on him in the faireſt Light, who has a moving and harmonious Voice, who affects a languiſhing and polite Devotion, who lifts his Eyes up to Heaven with an affable Humility, adminiſters the Sacrament with a plump white Hand, which he takes care to ſhew upon all Occaſions, gives his Bleſſing to the Congregation with an amorous Eye, may pretend by his Geſtures, which are eloquent enough, but ſtudied at his leiſure Hours, that he thinks on Nothing ſo much as the Salvation of their precious Souls; ſuch a Prieſt, however, ſaves very few ..... nay, 'tis well for him if he ſaves his own.

THE Benefits of the Maſs are the Participation of public and common Prayer, the mutual Union of all the Faithful, the Edification which one receives from the other, and the Submiſſion and Obedience which is paid in Public to the Church. The Cuſtom long ſince eſtabliſhed, of ſaying Maſs in Latin, which at preſent the leaſt Part of the Congregation underſtands, ought not to be objected as an Imperfection; for, on the contrary, there is a great Advantage reſults from it, which both Jews and Catholics rious, and ſhew the Charity with which the Prieſt calls his ſpiritual Brethren to God. When he pronounces the Benediction, he muſt lean in an engaging ſweet Poſture towards the Altar. Theſe Rules are preſcribed by the Italian ſymbolical Authors. Vide Piſcara, Baudry, and others.

are very ſenſible of; that is, Uniformity of Service, and the Pleaſure of being able, by Virtue of a Habit, to accompany the Curate of the Pariſh. The Jews have their Service in Hebrew; but as that Tongue is unknown to many of them, Recourſe is had to Tranſlations, whereby the Jew can exactly keep up with the Rabbi. The Hours in the Vulgar Tongue are of equal Service to the Catholic; not to mention mechanical Devotion, that glorious Guide, and [a] Road to Piety, ſupported by a tolerable Memory and long Practice, which has been tranſmitted down through ſo many Ages, from Father to Son, and will endure to lateſt Poſterity. How great Strangers ſoever the Catholic or Jew may be in any Country, with the Aſſiſtance which we have now given them, they will never be at a Loſs for a Prieſt or a Rabbi.

DIFFERENT MASSES.

WE ſhall ſpeak of the Maſſes of Paſſion-Week as ſoon as we come to the Ceremonies obſerv'd in Eaſter, and of ſome Circumſtances of the firſt epiſcopal Maſs, when we treat of the Biſhop's Conſecration. We intend in this Place to deſcribe what is peculiar to high or ſolemn Maſs, to ſome papal Maſſes, and to the Maſs for the Dead. We ſhall paſs over an infinite Variety of [b] other Maſſes, which have Nothing particular in them but the Name.

HIGH MASS, SOLEMN MASS, EPISCOPAL MASS.

WHEN [c] there is to be a ſolemn Maſs, [d] if 'tis a Biſhop who officiates, he is attended to Church by the Canons and other Officers of the Church, who go and wait upon him in State and Grandeur at his Palace; but if it happens to be too far diſtant from the Church, the whole Chapter, who wait at the Church-Gate, as ſoon as ever his Lordſhip appears in Sight, advance to meet him, and when he draws near to the Church, the Bells are rung to give the People Notice of it, and the Moment he ſets his Foot within the Church, the Organs begin to play. The Maſter of the Ceremonies

[a] L'Enfant petit, ſi-tôt qu'il eſt levé,
Dire on lui fait, Pater Noſter Ave.
Semblablement le Credo des Apôtres,
Et en après qu'a dit ſes Patenôtres,
Le dit Enfant, par ferme coûtumiere,
Du pain demande à quelque chambriere.
Taken from an old French Poet, quoted by Bayle, Tom. V. of his Queſtions d'un provincial.

[b] Such are the Maſs of St. Mary of the Snow; which is celebrated on the fifth of Auguſt, the Maſſes of the Saints; that of St. Margaret Patroneſs of thoſe Women who lie in; that of the Feaſt of St. John Baptiſt, at which are ſaid three Maſſes, on Account of the triple Myſtery to be met with in the Life of this Saint, which are, Baptiſm, the Nazarеat, and the Quality of Forerunner of Jeſus Chriſt: Such likewiſe is the Maſs of the Innocents, at which the Gloria in Excelſis and Alleluiah are omitted, and it being a Day of Mourning, the Altar is in purple. Vide Caſal. de Ritib. &c. It is now above a Century ſince ſome French Saints have loſt their Maſſes, by the Authority of Pius V. and Clement VIII. who reformed the Miſſal; for Inſtance, S. Bigobert, S. William, S. Maur, S. Bonet, &c. are degraded, that ſome Italian Saints may be ſubſtituted in their Room. As to ordinary Maſſes, there are ſome which are ſaid for the Chriſtian's Soul, and contribute towards fetching him out of Purgatory, or at leaſt to relieve him there. Whoever has any Thought of his Salvation, muſt never forget this important Point. A neceſſary Fund muſt be left by Will to the Curate, to reſcue him from thoſe temporal Pains which he has merited. It often happens in Spain, Portugal, and Italy, that the Souls of the Faithful are the immediate Heirs of the Treaſures which they leave behind them in this World. The dying Man ſometimes bequeaths twenty or thirty thouſand Maſſes to his Soul, charging the Paſtor, on whom he principally relies, to remit this Stock to him in the other World, immediately after his Deceaſe. There are likewiſe private Maſſes ſaid for ſtrayed Goods, for the Health of Beaſts, as well as Men, for Travellers, for returning God Thanks, &c. Theſe Maſſes, as well as thoſe beforementioned, are called, without Diſtinction, Votive Maſſes. The Difference between High and Low Maſs is well known; that which is ſaid at Sea is called a Dry Maſs, becauſe the Cup is omitted, leſt the conſecrated Wine ſhould be ſpilt by the Ship's Motion. Vide Durant. Rat. and Caſſand. de Rebus Liturg.

[c] There are ſeveral Sorts of ſolemn Maſſes. Such are the Collegiate, the Pontifical, thoſe celebrated before the Pope, Cardinals, or Biſhops, that of Chriſtmas, that of Paſſion-Week; ſome of which we ſhall take Notice of in their proper Places. In this Place we ſhall only mention the Epiſcopal Maſs.

[d] This Deſcription is taken from Piſcara, Baudry, and the Ceremonial of Biſhops.

gives

B. Picart. del.

C. Du Bois. sc.

A SOLEMN HIGH MASS celebrated in the CATHEDRAL CHURCH of PARIS

MESSE SOLENNELLE ou GRAND MESSE Celebree dans la CATHEDRALE de PARIS

gives the Sprinkler to the head Canon, who preſents it to the Biſhop after he has kiſs'd both that and his ſacred Hand. His Lordſhip ſprinkles himſelf, and then the Canons, with it, in the Name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt; and then goes and ſays a Prayer before the Altar, on which ſtands the Holy Sacrament, at a Desk prepared for that particular Purpoſe, and does the ſame at the high Altar. From thence he withdraws into the Veſtry, and there puts on ſuch Ornaments as are ſuitable to the Solemnity of the Maſs, in the following Manner.

THE Sub-Deacon goes to a little Cloſet contiguous to the Altar, and takes from thence the Epiſcopal Sandals and Stockings, which he elevates and preſents to the Biſhop. Then he kneels down, pulls off his Lordſhip's Shoes and Stockings, who is in the Midſt of ſeven or eight Acolytes all upon their Knees, as well as the Deacon, who ſpreads the Prelate's Robes, ſo as that Nothing indecent may be diſcern'd in putting on his Stockings. [a] Two Acolytes, after they have waſh'd their Hands, take the ſacred Habiliments, hold them up, and give them to the two Deacons Aſſiſtants, to put upon the Biſhop as ſoon as he has waſhed his Hands. The Deacon ſalutes the Biſhop, takes off his upper Garment, and puts on his Amict, the Croſs whereof he kiſſes; then they give him the Albe, the Girdle, the Croſs for his Breaſt, the Stole, and the Pluvial. He kiſſes the Croſs that is upon each of them, one after another, and thereby teſtifies the extraordinary Veneration which he has, or ought to have, for the Croſs of Chriſt. The Deacons Aſſiſtants likewiſe ought moſt devoutly to kiſs thoſe ſacred Veſtments. As ſoon as the Biſhop is ſeated, they put his Mitre on, and a Prieſt preſents him with the paſtoral Ring. The Deacon gives him his right Glove, and the Sub-Deacon his Left, which each of them kiſs, as alſo the Hand they have the Honour to ſerve. In every one of theſe Circumſtances there are ſome petty Ceremonies to be obſerved, the Particulars whereof we ſhall leave to ſuch Chriſtians as are more curious than is requiſite in their Enquiries into Myſteries; 'tis much more material to acquaint the Reader, that ejaculatory Prayers have been adapted to each individual Piece of the Epiſcopal Robes, and that the Devotion of this Ceremony is ſupported and confirm'd by the ſinging the Office of [b] Tierce.

THE Biſhop being thus dreſs'd, in all his [c] Habiliments, his Clergy range themſelves round about him. Two Deacons, who are Canons, place themſelves on each Side of him, both in their Dalmatica's, and after them a Deacon, and a Sub-Deacon. The Incenſe-Bearer appears with the Cenſer, and a Prieſt with the Navet, out of which the Biſhop takes Incenſe, puts it into the Cenſer, and gives it his Benediction. After this he kiſſes the Croſs, which is upon the Veſtry-Altar, and goes in Proceſſion to that other, where he is to celebrate Maſs. The Incenſe-Bearer walks at the Head of the Proceſſion; two Wax-Candle-Bearers, with lighted Tapers in their Hands, march next, on each Side of him who bears the Croſs. All the Clergy follow them, the Sub-Dea-

[a] The Deacons, Acolytes, &c. are to be in their proper Robes. This Remark ſhall ſuffice for all the Ceremonies we ſhall hereafter deſcribe.

[b] The Tierce has been already explained, under the Head of Canonical Hours.

[c] There is ſome Myſtery in each of the Biſhop's Ornaments. The Stole repreſents the Yoke of the Goſpel. The Biſhop's Shoes are taken off by virtue of what God ſaid to Moſes, Put off thy Shoes from off thy Feet, &c. Iſaiah himſelf admired this Ceremony, when he ſays, Oh how beautiful are the Feet of ſuch as love Peace! The Dalmatica, which is in the Form of a Croſs, intimates to the Deacon, that he muſt be crucified to the World. The Albe repreſents the Purity of the Prieſt's Soul. The Paſtoral Ring points out the Biſhop's ſpiritual Marriage with the Church. To make the Compariſon ſtill nearer, we might ſay, that the Biſhop uſes her as ſeveral Husbands do their Wives, whom they abandon for Miſtreſſes. His Gloves ſignify, that he is to be inſenſible of his good Works, or that he muſt direct them to a ſpiritual End; the Girdle, that he is to be girded with Juſtice and Virtue; the Sandals, that he ought from thenceforth to walk in the Paths of the Lord; the two Horns of the Mitre repreſent the Old and New Teſtament; the Shepherd's Crook, his Correction and paternal Authority. The Pluvial, which in former Times was a Dreſs for Travelling and Fatigue, from whence it manifeſtly took its Name, ſhews the Miſeries of this Life, which is ever expoſed to Temptations and human Infirmities; thus a Biſhop, who has for a long Time been groaning under the heavy Weight of ſeveral fat Benefices, whenever he puts on the Pluvial, becomes a living Image of the true Chriſtian, whoſe Life is expoſed to perpetual Temptation. We have borrowed theſe Alluſions from the moſt able Dealers in Myſtery, ſuch as Caſalius and others.

con,

con who is to ſing the Epiſtle, carries before his Breaſt, the Book of the New Teſtament, ſhut, in which is the Biſhop's Maniple. A Deacon and a Prieſt, with their Pluvials on, march before the Biſhop, who, for the Honour of [a] his Dignity, leans humbly on his two Deacons Aſſiſtants, with the Shepherd's Crook in his Left-Hand, and his Right ſomewhat raiſed, always ready to give his Benedictions to thoſe good Chriſtians whom he meets with in his Way. The Biſhop, being now advanc'd to the Altar, ſalutes his Clergy with one ſingle Bow of the Head. When he is on the loweſt Step of the Altar, he delivers his Crook to the Sub-Deacon, and the Deacon takes off his Mitre. Then the Prelate and his officiating Clergy make a profound Bow to the Croſs on the Altar; after which the Clergy all withdraw, except the Sub-Deacon who has the Charge of the Epiſcopal Crook, the Incenſe-Bearer, two Deacons Aſſiſtants, one [b] Prieſt Aſſiſtant, who ſtands at the Biſhop's Right-Hand, one Deacon at his Left, and one more behind this. The Biſhop ſays the Confiteor [c], and the Choir ſing the Introit. At the End of the Confeſſion, the Sub-Deacon takes the Maniple, which was in the Book of the New Teſtament, kiſſes it, and preſents it to the Biſhop for the ſame Purpoſe; then kiſſes his Lordſhip's Hand, and puts it on his Left Arm; in the mean Time the Canons dreſs'd in their Robes repeat the Confeſſion. After this the Biſhop goes up to the Altar, praying, and continuing his Prayer, or rather ſaying a new one, he leans towards the Altar, extending his Arms upon the Table of it, and kiſſing it with Affection in the Middle, whilſt he makes mention of the ſacred Relics which are therein contained. The Sub-Deacon preſents him the Book of the New Teſtament, which he kiſſes. The Incenſe-Bearer comes forward with the Cenſer and Navet, which he delivers to the Deacon, and the Biſhop receives them from him, in order to bleſs the Incenſe. The Perſon who officiates then takes the Cenſer, perfumes the Altar, gives it back to the Deacon, takes the Mitre from another Deacon, goes to the Epiſtle Side, and is thrice perfum'd there by the Deacon who holds the Cenſer. After this Ceremony is over, the Biſhop kiſſes the holy Croſs, takes the Croſier in his Left-Hand, and, leaning upon his two Deacons Aſſiſtants, whilſt the Deacon and Sub-Deacon continue at the Altar, goes to his Epiſcopal Throne. There laying aſide his Mitre, and making the Sign of the Croſs, from the Forehead down to the Breaſt, he reads the Introite out of a Maſs-Book, which the Aſſiſtant-Prieſt holds for him, whilſt another has a Wax-Taper in his Hand to light his Lordſhip. The two Deacons Aſſiſtants point with their Finger to the Place where he is to read; then all ſing the Kyrie together; after which the Biſhop puts on his Mitre and his Gremial, which is a Sort of ſacerdotal Apron, and ſits down. The two Deacons Aſſiſtants ſeat themſelves on each Side of him, and the Aſſiſtant-Prieſt ſits down on a Stool. They all riſe when the Choir concludes the Kyrie; then the Biſhop turning towards the Altar, gives out the Gloria in Excelſis with an audible Voice, which he continues ſaying with his Miniſters. We have expatiated a little too largely on the Preliminaries to the Epiſcopal Maſs; being willing the Reader ſhould be fully informed, how a Biſhop is prepared for ſacrificing the Body of Chriſt; but with Reſpect to the reſt of his religious Performance, we ſhall be very conciſe.

THERE is Nothing very remarkable relating to the Gradual, the Allelujah, and the Goſpel, unleſs it be that the laſt is uſher'd in by a kind of Proceſſion. The Maſter of the Ceremonies walks firſt, after him the Incenſe-Bearer, and then the Light-Bearers, each

[a] Honoris Causâ. Baudry Manuale Sacr. Cerem. p. 165.
[b] An Arch-Deacon, or Arch-Prieſt. Vide Cerem. Epiſc.
[c] The pagan Prieſts likewiſe practiſed Confeſſion. Before they drew near to their Altars, or ſacrificed, they prayed the Gods to pardon their Sins, and by a voluntary Confeſſion prevented the Chaſtiſement they were afraid of, both on their own and their People's Account, in caſe they ſhould fail to acknowledge their Tranſgreſſions. Perhaps they both were of Opinion, that they might afterwards look on themſelves as regenerate. This Idea has loſt Nothing of its Force among Chriſtians. They who think themſelves eaſed of the Burthen of their Iniquities, by a long and vain-glorious Penance, eaſily forget their old Sins, and imagine, whenever they pleaſe, that they are in a fit State for a ſpiritual and intimate Converſation with the Supreme Being.

with

with a burning Taper. A Sub-Deacon follows, with his Hands joined, as if he was ſaying his Prayers. The Deacon comes next, with the New Teſtament bore upon his Breaſt. This devout Aſſembly paſſing in Review before the Altar, ſalute it with bended Knees as they paſs along, and when they are arrived at the Place for reading the Goſpel, the Deacon, who then ſtands between the two Taper-Bearers, turns to the Right of the Altar, opens the Book, and begins the Leſſon out of the Goſpel. When the Deacon ſays Dominus vobiſcum, the Biſhop riſes, and lays aſide his Mitre and his Gremial. When he comes to theſe Words, Here beginneth the holy Goſpel, he makes the Sign of the Croſs; and, to conclude, bleſſes himſelf by another Croſs; after which the Prelate reſumes his Croſier, then makes the Sign of the Croſs again, and all his Miniſters follow his Example.

THE Goſpel being read, he who officiates kiſſes the Book, and all of them return in the ſame Order as they came. The Aſſiſtant-Prieſt incenſes the Biſhop.

IN the next Place the Biſhop preaches, or ſome Canon, who is a Prieſt, performs that Office for him. After Sermon, the Deacon, who ſung the Goſpel, goes to the Left Hand of the Biſhop, and leaning a little forward ſays the Confiteor before him.

AFTER this Confeſſion is over, the Aſſiſtant-Prieſt publiſhes the Indulgences, and the Biſhop gives the Abſolution. If there be no Sermon, they go on from the Goſpel to the Creed, which is repeated in Form like all the reſt.

THE Offertory follows the Creed. The Biſhop reads it ſtanding and bare-headed. When he has done, he returns to his Seat, and puts on his Mitre. One Deacon takes off his Paſtoral Ring, another his Gloves, and ſome ſubſtantial Lay-Man preſents him [a] the Baſon to waſh his Hands. The Arch-Deacon, whom the Ceremonial conſtantly calls the Aſſiſtant-Prieſt, gives him the Napkin. His Lordſhip goes up again to the Altar, ſupported by his two Aſſiſtants; the Sub-Deacon goes to the Credence, and by the Help of two Acolytes, puts on his Shoulders the Veil which covered the ſacred Veſſels, after ſuch a Manner, as that it hangs a little lower on the Right Side, than on the Left. Then with his Left Hand he takes the Chalice and Paten, on which are two [b] Hoſts, duly prepar'd, and cover'd with a Palle. The Right Hand lies lightly over the Veil, the longeſt Side whereof is made uſe of to cover the Chalice. An Acolyte follows the Sub-Deacon to the Altar with Wine and Water. The Deacon preſents the Paten to the Perſon who officiates: All this Part of the Maſs, which is celebrated in a ſolemn Manner by the Biſhop, is performed as in common Maſſes.

THE Aſſiſtant-Prieſt muſt take care that the Prelate, who officiates, exactly follows the Rubric of the Maſs. [c] He may with ſome Propriety be called his Prompter. Some of the Miniſters muſt ſtand on each Side the Altar, with lighted Tapers, to honour the Elevation of the Sacrament.

WHEN the Biſhop elevates the Hoſt, the Deacon, who kneels on his Right Side, takes up the Border of the Celebrant's Planet. He obſerves likewiſe the ſame Ceremony at the Elevation of the Chalice. We muſt not omit informing the Reader, that an Acolyte incenſes three Times together the Body and Blood of our Lord, during the Elevation of both one and the other. After that, the Miniſters who attended the Myſteries

[a] The Ceremony of waſhing of Hands before the Sacrifice, was uſually practiſed by the Pagans, and is ſo to this very Day.

[b] Mundæ, Cerem. Epiſc. Lib. II.

[c] Suggerit illi ſubmiſſâ voce, vel modeſtè nutu indicat, ſi memoriæ lapſus, vel aliâ de causâ deficeret. Vide Cerem. Epiſc.

of the Sacrifice with their [a] lighted Tapers, withdraw without the [b] Presbyterium, to extinguiſh them, unleſs they aſſiſt in the Adminiſtration of the Sacrament.

AFTER the Agnus Dei, the Aſſiſtant-Prieſt places himſelf at the Biſhop's Right Hand, and a Deacon on his Left. The former kneels, whilſt the Celebrant ſays a ſhort Prayer, then riſes again immediately, and both of them kiſs the Altar. The Celebrant gives the Peace to the Prieſt, who turns his Left [c] Cheek to receive it. After this mutual greeting with a holy Kiſs, the Aſſiſtant-Prieſt diſtributes the Peace he has received amongſt the Choir, and begins his pious Munificence with the Clergy of the higheſt Quality in all the Congregation. As to the Laity, they are made to kiſs the Inſtrument of Peace, as they call it, which at leſs ſolemn Maſſes is conſtantly made uſe of inſtead of an immediate Kiſs. There is no Variation in what follows to the End, from the Ceremonies obſerv'd at common Maſſes.

THIS Deſcription will give the Reader a general Idea of what are called ſolemn Maſſes. See the Cut hereunto annex'd, repreſenting the Choir, &c. of our Ladies Church at Paris.

The SOLEMN MASS celebrated by the POPE.

WE ſhall not here undertake a Deſcription of every particular Ceremony which is to be obſerved at the Pope's Chapel, from his firſt Entrance into it, for the Performance of his Devotions, till he goes out again. Such a long Account would be perfectly tedious. The Reader is not fond, perhaps, of knowing [d] that there muſt be a Cardinal-Deacon on the Left Hand of his Holineſs, to take off his Mitre, an Auditor of the Rota to receive it; another Cardinal-Deacon to be at his Holineſs's Right Hand, to take off his Hat, or Berettino; that whilſt the Holy Father is at Prayer, the Cardinal who celebrates Maſs, advances to ſay the Confiteor, and that then one of the two Aſſiſtants muſt ſtand at a Diſtance, after which his Holineſs begins the Confiteor; that at the Indulgence he who officiates draws a little back, to receive the Maniple from the Sub-Deacon of the Chapel; and that the Cardinal-Deacon, who was withdrawn at ſome conſiderable Diſtance, approaches his Holineſs, and goes through the Confeſſion with him; after which the other Cardinal-Deacon gives him his Cap, which he had taken ſome Time before with his Mitre. The Deacon on the Right Side [e] extends the Strings of the Mitre. Both of them, as they lead the Pope to his Throne, hold the End of his Pluvial. Every Time Chriſt's Vicar lifts up his ſacred Hand to make the Sign of the Croſs, or give the Benediction, the Cardinal-Deacon only, who is at his Right Hand, holds up the Pluvial; but when his Holineſs raiſes both his Hands, the Cardinal-Deacon who is at his Left helps likewiſe to hold it up.

WE ſhall omit the profound Bows, Genuflexions, &c. of the Cardinal-Deacons at the Agnus, and the Kiſſes of Peace which the Pope beſtows upon them; neither ſhall we enlarge upon all the Congees of their Eminences, (which are much more ceremo-

[a] The Cuſtom of Lamps or Tapers burning in Temples and at Altars, has always been obſerved as well by Jews as Gentiles; and ſtill continues amongſt the former, there being Night and Day a Lamp burning before the Hechal. The antient Heathens punctually obſerv'd this Practice, which has Nothing idle or ridiculous in itſelf, but the Abuſe that may be made of it among ſome illiterate Devotees, who think their Prayers much more effectual, becauſe they pray to God, or recommend themſelves to ſome Saint, by the Light of a Candle burning before his Image. Were the Candle to be taken away from ſuch People, they would loſe themſelves in their Prayer Books, and all the Springs of their Devotion would be diſcompos'd.

[b] The Reader has been already informed what this is. That Part of the Church likewiſe which is appropriated for lodging the Curate, bears the ſame Denomination.

[c] Appropinquat ſiniſtram genam ſuam ſiniſtræ celebrantis. Vide Cerem. Epiſc.

[d] Vide The Maeſtro di Camera of Seſtini.

[e] Inſulæ.

nious

nious than devout,) at their Entrance into the Chapel. Their firſt Reſpects are paid to the Altar, their ſecond to him who officiates, if dreſs'd in his Robes; their third to ſuch of their Brethren as are there before them. The Cardinals, being in their reſpective Places, ſay a ſhort Prayer upon their Knees, and then riſing continue in that Poſture till the Chapel is full, and his Holineſs ſeated. Their Eminences ſalute him [a] with a Bow, but the People kneel, in order to receive his Benediction, which he never fails to give them as he goes along. The Diſſertations on the Ceremonies obſerved at his Holineſs's Court, take notice of ſeveral other Particulars, much more trivial and inſignificant than thoſe we have already mentioned.

His Holineſs being ſeated, the Cardinals pay him their Obeiſance after the following Manner: They riſe from their reſpective Stations, and go, with their Cowls trailing after them, to ſalute the Altar in the firſt Place, which is the Throne of Jesus Christ; in the next they ſalute his Vicar, and kiſs his Hand. Retreating a Step or two, they make a ſecond Congee to this viſible Head of the Church. They ſalute in the laſt Place their Collegues, the Ambaſſadors, and Princes. Being return'd to their Seats, they ſtand bareheaded, till the reſt of the Cardinals have performed the ſame Ceremonies; but when the ordinary Prelates go to pay their Obeiſance in their Turn, their Eminences ſit down and are covered. Theſe Prelates, who are Archbiſhops, and Aſſiſtant Biſhops, Penitentiaries of St. Peter's, &c. do Homage only when his Holineſs officiates. The Archbiſhops and Biſhops kiſs his Knee only, but the Penitentiaries more humbly kiſs his Foot.

These are ſome of the Ceremonies which this Apoſtolical Court, than which there is no one ſo ceremonious in all the World, obſerve in their Devotion. It was requiſite we ſhould give the Reader an Abſtract of them, before we enter'd upon ſeveral other Particulars which relate to the Pope's ſolemn Maſs. We ſhall here tranſcribe Aimon's Account of them in his Tableau de la Cour de Rome. " A Pontifical Solemn Maſs is different from " thoſe which are celebrated by Cardinals or Prelates, in two Particulars, always ob- " ſerved when his Holineſs himſelf officiates. The firſt is this, the two Goſpels are ſung, " one in Greek, and the other in Latin. The ſecond, that the Communion is different in " the Papal Maſs, and performed after the following Manner. After the Agnus Dei is " ſung, [b] his Holineſs goes to his Throne. The Cardinal-Deacon of the Goſpel ſtands " in ſuch Manner on the Epiſtle Side, with his Hands cloſed together, that he cannot on- " ly ſee the Sacrament on the Altar, but the Pope likewiſe going to his Throne. " When his Holineſs is ſeated, the Deacon goes and takes the conſecrated Hoſt upon " the Paten, covered with a Veil, and turning to the People, elevates it three Times " ſucceſſively, that is to ſay, in the Middle, and at each End of the Altar. After that " he gives it to the Sub-Deacon, who carries it to his Holineſs. In the mean Time, " the ſame Deacon takes the Chalice, in which is the conſecrated Wine, and, having " elevated it three Times as he did the Water before, carries it to the Pope, who adores " Jeſus Chriſt under both Kinds, as ſoon as they are brought to him; which he per- " forms by a moderately low Bow of half his Body, in a [c] ſtanding Poſture; and

[a] Seſtini.

[b] The Pope, according to Cuſtom, conſecrates at the Altar, but it is remarkable that he receives the Communion only at his Throne. Several Reaſons are given for this whimſical Practice, which perhaps is no better grounded than on the Caprice or Pride of ſome antient Pontiff. Though we ſhall not enumerate all the Reaſons, there is one, however, too particular to be omitted. The Altar, ſays Roccha, repreſents the Hall where our Lord, when he was at Supper, inſtituted the unbloody Sacrifice of his Body; but the Pope's Throne repreſents the Croſs of Jeſus Chriſt, and his Holineſs's communicating the bloody Sacrifice of our Lord. A Man muſt exert the moſt lively Imagination, to find out that the Pope ſeated on his Throne, in all his pontifical Ornaments, and appearing in the utmoſt Splendor, repreſents Jeſus Chriſt upon the Croſs, covered with Ignominy and Diſgrace, and overburthen'd with a diſhonourable Humility.

[c] This Poſture of the Pope's taking the Communion, with his Face towards the People, is thought to repreſent Chriſt's Agony upon the Croſs.

" when

" when the Deacon and Sub-Deacon are come cloſe to him, they place themſelves, one " at his Right Hand, and the other at his Left. His Holineſs takes [a] the large Hoſt " which is upon the Paten, and communicates, putting it into his Mouth with his " own Hand; he then gives two ſmall ones to the Deacon and Sub-Deacon, who are " kneeling, and kiſs his Hand before they receive them; the Deacon, however, ſtill " holds the Chalice, till the Aſſiſtant Cardinal-Biſhop, dreſs'd in his Cope, comes up " to the Pontifical Throne, where the Pope's Veſtry-Keeper preſents him with a ſmall " gold Pipe, one End whereof he dips into the Chalice, and his Holineſs at the ſame " Time lays his Hand on the other, and inclining his Head a little, in order to touch " it with his Lips, [b] ſucks up ſome ſmall Part of the conſecrated Wine, leaving the " reſt to the Deacon, who carries the Chalice to the Altar, and there ſucks up ſome " of the remaining Wine, and leaves a few Drops for the Sub-Deacon, who drinks it " without the Pipe, as alſo that which is poured out for the Ablution of the Chalice, which " he wipes with the Purificatory, or white Linen Cloth. In the mean Time his Holi- " neſs gives the Kiſs of Peace only to the Deacon, and the Communion only under " one Kind, to the other Cardinals, Ambaſſadors, Princes, and Prelates, and ſome- " times to private Perſons, who are deſirous of receiving it from him; after which he " returns to the Altar, and goes through the Maſs with the uſual Solemnities."

We have already taken Notice of the Purſe which is preſented to the Pope, with twenty five Julio's in it of antique Money, pro bene cantata Miſſa.

The other ſolemn Maſſes have likewiſe Something particular in them; we ſhall only deſcribe, however, what is moſt remarkable in the high Maſs on Chriſtmas-Day, when his Holineſs officiates; who, being dreſs'd in all his Pontifical Ornaments, (the moſt remarkable whereof on this Occaſion are the white Pluvial and precious Mitre) by the Cardinal-Deacons already in their Robes, bleſſes the Incenſe preſented to him by the Thurifer. After that, the Pontiff goes to Church, preceded by the Roman and other Prelates, who all wear white Mitres.

[c] The Incenſe-Bearer, and ſeven Acolytes, each with a Wax-Taper in his Hand, walk before the Croſs-Bearer; and a Clerk of the Chamber before the Incenſe-Bearer, who holds a Sword lifted up, with a Cap upon it; which is a Repreſentation, perhaps, of the irreſiſtable Power and Efficacy of the Pontifical Sword, which Chriſt's Vicar has inherited from St. Paul, with that of freeing Chriſtians from the Bondage of the Devil, by a Right acquired by the Son of God, whoſe Nativity is then celebrated; it may be an Emblem likewiſe of the Church's Freedom, or rather that of the Clergy, under the Government of his Holineſs. We ſhall take no Notice of the reſt who make up this holy Proceſſion, they being the ſame as walk on other Occaſions. But ſhould the Emperor, or any other ſovereign Prince, happen to be at Rome at that Time, he muſt carry the Train of the Pope's Mantle, as we have already remark'd upon other Ceremonies. Two Cardinals likewiſe hold up the two Ends of it. His Holineſs walks in a very ſtately and majeſtic Manner, under a Canopy ſupported by eight Gentlemen, who

[a] The Pope receives the Hoſt on the Left Side, and the Pipe which he dips into the Chalice on the Right, becauſe Jeſus Chriſt, when he was crucified, was pierced, as they pretend, on the Right Side. The Cardinal-Deacon and Sub-Deacon, who communicate at the ſame Time with his Holineſs, and in both Kinds as well as he, repreſent the twelve Apoſtles, to whom Chriſt gave the Sacrament at his laſt Supper with them. We ſhall here obſerve, that the Privilege of receiving the Communion under both Kinds is granted to ſome Princes; the Emperor, for Inſtance, and King of France. His moſt Chriſtian Majeſty always communicates under both Kinds, at his Coronation, and at the Time of his Deceaſe.

[b] This Cuſtom of ſucking the Blood of Chriſt through a Pipe is very antient, and was formerly obſerv'd in giving the Communion to the Laity. Vide Rhenanum in Tertullian. For the exceſſively devout Clergy, fearing leſt one Drop of our Saviour's Blood might be ſpilt, through the Indiſcretion or Awkwardneſs of the Populace, thought fit to prevent ſuch an Accident by introducing the Uſe of this Pipe; which has ſince been reſerved for the Pope's Service.

[c] Cerem. Eccl. Rom. Lib. II. Sect. 2.

are

are of the firſt Rank and Diſtinction; and if the Sons of Kings were to have the Honour to be preſent at this ſolemn Proceſſion, they could at moſt but walk with the firſt Cardinal-Prieſt.

As ſoon as the Pope is got into Church, he paſſes on to a Chapel, changes his Robes, and then ſits down. The Cardinals come and bow to him, and kiſs the Hem of the holy Father's Pluvial on the Right Side; then come the other Prelates in Order, and kneeling three Times, kiſs his Right Knee. The Latin and Greek Deacons, who aſſiſt his Holineſs, ſtand in Readineſs at the Altar. After ſome Anthems are ſung, a Veſtry-Keeper [a] puts on the Arms of a Latin Sub-Deacon a ſmall Napkin, whereon are laid his Holineſs's Stockings and his Sandals. The Sub-Deacon carries all together to the Pope, with his Hands held up to his Eyes. The Acolytes follow him, and whilſt the Sub-Deacon and a Gentleman of the Privy Chamber get under the holy Father's Pluvial, to put on his Stockings and his Sandals, the Acolytes take care to ſpread the Borders of the Pluvial. [b] Whilſt the Sub-Deacon is putting them on, the Aſſiſtant-Biſhops who are preſent at this religious Ceremony, hold before his Holineſs a Book and a Wax-Taper, who with his Aſſiſtant-Deacons ſings an Anthem and a Pſalm, in the moſt devout Manner. The Choir ſing Tierce, during which the Pope riſes, and an Aſſiſtant-Biſhop goes up to him with the Pontifical; two Taper-Bearers attend with Lights in their Hands, the Pontiff takes off his Mitre. It is obſervable, that at all the Ceremonies of the Maſs, at which he officiates, this is taken off and put on at leaſt a dozen Times. An Aſſiſtant-Biſhop lays the Pontifical on his own Head, that his Holineſs may read the Offices for the Day, and another Aſſiſtant ſupports the Book with one Hand, and holds a Taper in the other. When the Pontiff is ſeated again, and his Mitre put on, he is preſented with ſome Water to waſh him; [c] four Laymen of the firſt Rank and Diſtinction wait on the Servant of Servants, in this Ceremony; and theſe Noblemen are the chief Potentates of Europe, if they happen to be at Rome. Neither Dignity nor Rank make any Exception on their Behalf, becauſe the Pſalmiſt has ſaid, that he (his Holineſs) ſhall waſh his Hands [d] amongſt ſuch as are clean or innocent. Whilſt this Ceremony is performing, the People are on their Knees, but the Prelates are ſtanding and bare-headed. His Holineſs having waſhed, the Goſpel-Deacon, aſſiſted by two other Deacons, and a Sub-Deacon, takes off his Mitre, Pluvial, and Stole, in order to put on ſeveral other Robes, which the Acolytes bring him from the Altar, viz. the Girdle, the Breaſt-Croſs, the Dalmatica, the Tunic, the Albe, the Gloves, &c. all which muſt be moſt devoutly kiſſed, and the Pallium, the Croſs whereof his Holineſs kiſſes. Laſtly, They put the Ring on his Finger, called the Pontifical Ring. His Holineſs thus equipped, and [e] followed by two Auditors, holding up the Corners of his Pluvial, [f] humbly proceeds to the Confiteor before the Steps of the Altar. We ſhall ſay Nothing of the Proceſſion, ſince there is Nothing that is particular in it. The three youngeſt Cardinal-Prieſts advance to kiſs the holy Father's Mouth and his Breaſt; and, whilſt he receives their Compliments, the Sub-Deacon, who ſtands behind him, [g] puts his Hands upon his Shoulders to ſupport him.

The Goſpel-Deacon cenſes his Holineſs, and he the Altar; after that he returns the Cenſer to the Goſpel-Deacon, and, going towards the Middle of the Altar, receives the [a] Subdiaconus Latinus accedit ad altare, cui mappulam quandam ſuper brachia ponit & ſuper eam caligas & ſandalia, quæ ambabus manibus ad oculos elevatis ad Pontificem defert. Hunc ſequuntur Acolyti, quibus extendentibus fimbrias plevialis Papæ, ſubdiaconus cum uno ex ſecretis cubiculariis Papæ ſubtus intrant & . . . . . caligas & ſandalia imponunt, Cerem. Eccl. Rom. Lib. II. Sect. 1.

[b] Id. Ibid.

[c] Id. Ibid.

[d] Or, according to other Tranſlations, I will waſh my Hands in Innocence.

[e] Cerem. Eccl. Rom. Ibid.

[f] Supplicabundus vadit ad confeſſionem ante gradus altaris, Ibid.

[g] Manibus retro ad ejus ſpatulas appoſitis, Ibid.

Kiſſes of the two Goſpel-Deacons, and of the Aſſiſtant-Deacons. In the next Place he kiſſes the Altar, reads the Introite and Kyrie out of the Pontifical, which the Aſſiſtant-Biſhop carries on his Head, as we have already obſerved, inſtead of a Desk. His Holineſs being ſeated, they lay the Gremial (a Kind of Napkin or Apron) on his Knees, and when he riſes they take it away. The Latin and Greek Sub-Deacons ſing the Epiſtle in their reſpective Languages; which finiſhed, the two Sub-Deacons, and the Maſter of the Ceremonies, kiſs the Feet of the holy Father, who reads the Epiſtle and Gradual in his Turn. There is nothing particular from this to the End of the Creed, unleſs that ſeven Acolytes, who each carry a lighted Taper, ſurround the holy Father whilſt he walks to read the Goſpel.

AFTER the Creed, his Holineſs waſhes his Hands again. As ſoon as the Latin Deacon has put the Corporal, the Ciborium, Purificatory, &c. in Order, all which the Sub-Deacon gives him, a Veſtry-Keeper goes to the Credence, and from thence takes the Chalice and Paten, on which Paten there is a ſmall Gold Spoon. He covers the whole with a Veil about his Neck made of Cloth of Gold, and lays them on the Altar on the Epiſtle-Side, after they have been firſt well wiped. The Latin Deacon takes three Hoſts, [a] and lays them in Order upon the Paten, where they wait for his Holineſs, whoſe Mitre is put on, and his Ring and Gloves taken off, and he waſhes his Hands again after the Offertory. As ſoon as he has done waſhing, his Ring is given him again; he goes up to the Altar, the Latin Goſpel-Deacon takes off his Mitre again, and two Cardinal-Biſhops, Aſſiſtants to his Holineſs, ſets the Maſs-Book on the Altar on the Goſpel-Side. One of the [b] Aſſiſtant-Biſhops informs the Pontiff what he is to ſay, and with his Finger points him out what Paſſages he is to read.

OF the three Hoſts which are unconſecrated, and lie upon the Paten, the Latin Goſpel-Deacon takes one, with which he touches the other two, and then gives it the Veſtry-Keeper to eat. [c] He takes a ſecond, touches the Chalice and Paten with it, and then gives it to the ſame Veſtry-Keeper, who eats it as he had done the former, and alſo taſtes the Wine and Water that is to be made uſe of for the Maſs. The third Hoſt the Pontiff takes, and conſecrates. We paſs over the Mixture of the Wine and Water, the Conſecration of the Chalice, the Perfumings, and all the other Circumſtances to the End, as having nothing particular in them. To conclude, his Holineſs pours down amongſt the Congregation ſeveral Indulgences for many Years, and a great many Quarantins of Pardons [d].

The MASS for the DEAD.

THE Rubric of the Miſſal [e] prohibitsthe ſaying any Maſſes for the Dead on Sundays, and double Feſtivals. No Maſs of that Kind muſt be ſaid on Chriſtmas-Day, the Epiphany, Eaſter, and Aſcenſion-Days, &c. If there be but one Maſs in any Pariſh Church, it muſt not be that for the Dead (except certain Days); becauſe it is unjuſt, that, for the Comfort and Conſolation of one deceaſed Perſon, a vaſt Number of good Chriſtians, who are living, ſhould loſe the unſpeakable Advantage of ſo ſacred a Myſtery. We ſhall refer ſuch to the Rituals, as would be completely informed of every Particular, relating to all the Maſſes which are ſaid for the Deceaſed. We ſhall not here mention the vaſt Sums of Money which accrue to the Clergy on theſe Occaſions. But we may venture to ſay,

[a] Ponit eas ordinatim ſuper patenam, ſicque Papam exſpectant, Ibid.
[b] Dicit, quæ ſunt dicenda, & ea digito ſuo Papæ ſemper oſtendit, Ibid.
[c] This Ceremony was occaſioned by Victor the IIId's being poiſoned by a Wafer.
[d] Concedit plenariam indulgentiam tot annos, & totidem quadragenas de veră indulgentia, Cerem. Eccl. Rom.
[e] Baudry, Manuale Cerem.

without

without depreciating the Dignity of ſo very venerable a Sacrifice, that the Maſſes for the Dead prove to them a real Peru; for which they are obliged to the Superſtition of ſome Devotees whoſe Charity extends [a] even to receiving the Communion for the Dead, in hopes of giving them Eaſe by an Act of Devotion, which Chriſt ordained for the Living only: But that is not the only Corruption to which the Maſs is expoſed; the Reader will find ſeveral remarkable Inſtances in what follows.

LAWYERS, who are retained againſt one another in a Cauſe, have each of them a Maſs ſaid for their good Succeſs. Maſs is ſaid for the Diſcovery of loſt Goods. That of the Holy Ghoſt is ſaid to detect a Thief, or to prevent his making his Eſcape from the Place where the Robbery has been committed. In Italy, St. Anthony of Padua's Maſs is ſaid for the Recovery of any ſtray'd Goods. The Avarice of the Clergy may be one great Cauſe in all Probability of theſe Practices, who have multiplied them to the Degree they are at at preſent. This is a ſhocking Truth, and we are ſorry to ſpeak it: But how can we bear to ſee Chriſtianity made the Sport and May-game of a Set of ſelf-intereſted Men?

WE ſhall chuſe [b] for the Subject of this Deſcription, the moſt ſolemn Maſs for the Dead, which is that which the Biſhop himſelf celebrates. The melancholy Occaſion of the Ceremony does not admit of any pompous Decorations on the Altar. All the Flowers, Feſtons, Relics, and Images are remov'd. Six yellow Wax Lights, and a Croſs in the Middle, are the only Ornaments. Two other Tapers of the ſame Kind give Light to the Credence, which is covered with a very plain ſmall Table-Cloth, where all the Ornament is no more than what is abſolutely neceſſary for ſo mournful an Occaſion; ſuch as a Maſs-Book, a Holy-Water-Pot, a Sprinkler, a Thurible, a Navet, and a black Cloth for Abſolution. The Acolytes ſpread a black Cloth upon the Altar, and the Biſhop officiates likewiſe in Black. As ſoon as Maſs is over, he puts on a Pluvial of the ſame Colour; the Dreſs of his Miniſters, the Epiſcopal Chair, and the Pontifical Books are all black. The Biſhop who celebrates this melancholy Maſs, has no Croſier in his Hand, no Gloves on, nor his Sandals upon his Feet; nor does he ſay the Judica, the Reminiſcaris, the Quam dilecta, nor ſeveral Prayers which are ſaid at other Maſſes. After the Confiteor, he kiſſes the Altar but not the Book; nor do the [c] Miniſters kiſs any Thing whatever during the Celebration of it; for Kiſſes on ſuch melancholy Occaſions are forbidden. They do not croſs themſelves at the Intriote, nor is the Altar perfumed with Frankincenſe at the Beginning of this Maſs. In ſhort, not to mention ſeveral other Differences which are of leſs Moment to the Laity than the Clergy, we ſhall only obſerve, that the Perſon who officiates does not ſmite his Breaſt at the Agnus, that he does not give the Kiſs of Peace, that he concludes the Maſs without the uſual Bleſſing, that no Indulgences are publiſhed; and that the Deacon, if it be a general Maſs for many, ſays the Requieſcant in Pace in the plural Number for the Repoſe of the Dead.

THE Homily follows, and the Pulpit for that Purpoſe is hung with Black; and if it be a particular Maſs for any private Perſon, remarkable for his Quality or Virtues, his immenſe Fortune and charitable Endowments, the Maſs, for the Reſt and Tranquility of his Soul in the other World, is followed by a Funeral Panegyric, in which the Orator diſplays, as far as he is able, all the Beauties of Rhetoric, and [d] endeavours to add new Graces

[a] Thiers de plus neceſſaire de toutes les Devitient.

[b] This Deſcription is taken from Cerem. Epiſc. and from Baudry.

[c] Miniſtri nihil prorſus oſculantur, Baudry. Prohibentur oſcula in hac miſſa, Id.

[d] Above all Things, a Panegyriſt muſt be laviſh of his Rhetorical Flouriſhes on ſuch Occaſions; and, rather than and inſipid on the Merits of the Deceaſed, rob both the Antients and Moderns of ſuch exalted Encomiums as he ſhall think applicable to the Deceaſed. He muſt endeavour artfully to copy the beautiful Turns, ingenious Compliments, and pompous Phraſes, which regularly employ the Aſſemblies of a celebrated Academy. The Orator muſt take all poſſible Care to conceal his Hero's Defects, and mention none but his good Qualities. If the Party de-

Graces to old thread-bare Encomiums, which, in the earlieſt Ages of the World, were the Reſult of Eloquence, and which Flattery and Diſſimulation will never ſuffer to die, or grow out of Faſhion.

A CHAPELLE [a] Ardente, or a pompous Repreſentation of the Deceaſed, is erected, adorned with Branches, and illuminated with yellow Wax-Lights, in the Middle, or ſome other Part of the Church, or round the Monuments of Perſons of Diſtinction. If the Deceaſed be not buried in that Church, this Chapel may be placed in the Nave, if he be a Layman; or, if a Clergyman, in the Choir, in Caſe it be diſtinguiſhed from the Presbyterium; for it is never allowed of in the Presbyterium. The Head of a Prieſt is turned towards the Altar, and the Feet of a Layman. After the Homily they proceed to the Abſolution of the Deceaſed, much after the following Manner. The Goſpel of St. John being read, the Perſon who officiates, with the Deacon, and Sub-Deacon, return to the Middle of the Altar, from whence, after one Genuflection, or one profound Bow, in caſe there be no Tabernacle, they go to the Epiſtle-Side. The Sub-Deacon, when at the Bottom of the Steps, takes the Croſs, and after he and the Deacon have laid aſide their Maniples, all of them go together to the Place where the Chapelle Ardente, or Repreſentation, is erected, in the ſame Order as if to the Interment of the Corps. The Incenſe-Bearer, and he who carries the Holy-Water, walk firſt; the Sub-Deacon follows, between the two Light-Bearers with the Croſs; after them come the Choir, with yellow Tapers in their Hands. The Perſon who officiates with the Deacon on his Left-Hand, walks laſt, and no one except himſelf is covered, unleſs they go out of the Church, and then indeed they are all covered as well as he.

BEING arrived at the Chapelle Ardente, where the Celebrant is to give the Abſolution to the Deceaſed, the Incenſe-Bearer, and the Acolyte who is the Holy-Water-Bearer, place themſelves in that Part of the Chapel which fronts the Altar, but ſomewhat inclining to the Epiſtle-Side, and behind the Perſon who officiates, who has the Deacon on his Right Hand. The Sub-Deacon who carries the Croſs, and two Light-Bearers, ſtand at the other End, at the Head of the Corps, a little towards the Goſpel-ſide. When they are all placed, the Perſon who officiates uncovers himſelf, and, taking the Ritual out of the Deacon's Hands, begins the Abſolution of the Deceaſed by a Prayer, the firſt Words whereof are, Non intres in Judicium, &c. (Enter not into Judgment, &c.) We ſhall omit ſome of the Reſponſes that come afterwards, ſuch as the Libera nos Domine, &c. to come to the Benediction of the Incenſe, after which the Celebrant walks round the Repreſentation, ſprinkling it with Holy-Water, perfuming it on both Sides, and making Abundance of Bows and Genuflections. When he has performed the great Work of Abſolution, he ſays the Pater, and thereupon turns to the Croſs, repeating ſeveral Verſes and Prayers which are inſerted in the Rituals. Laſtly, he makes the Sign of the Croſs on the Repreſentation, and ſays the Requiem for the Deceaſed, to which the Choir anſwer, Requieſcat in Pace, (Let him reſt in Peace.) It is certain, however, that he does not reſt immediately after his Departure, and that in his Journey from this World to the next, he muſt at leaſt croſs over Purgatory, though he might prove ſo fortunate as not to bait by the Way. We think ourſelves obliged thus to explain the Repoſe which theſe Men of God procure for Souls, and for themſelves by the Revenues deceaſed has gained a Reputation, by any public Endowments, or Liberalities to the Church, or by a Retirement as advantageous to the Convent which he has made Choice of as beneficial to his own Soul; ſuch a Circumſtance he will ſet in the faireſt and cleareſt Light, which, by Way of Canonization, has procured to ſeveral Saints the principal Places in Heaven. If the Hero riſing from an obſcure Extraction, has, as it were, flown with rapid Wings to the higheſt Poſts in the State, 'tis his Buſineſs to prove, that Fortune never raiſes groveling Souls. In ſhort, if the Orator be a profeſſed Panegyriſt, if he has a Penſion for praiſing both the Living and the Dead, he will wiſely imitate a certain Orator, who always had a Set of Dedications, Speeches, and Funeral Orations ready for Sale, with Blanks for the Names, which he filled up as faſt as he diſpoſed of them.

[a] A Chapelle Ardente is all the Funeral Pomp which ſurrounds the Body, or the Repreſentation of the Perſon deceaſed.

an-annexed to theſe mortuary Maſſes. After the Abſolution, the Celebrant and his Attendants return in the ſame Order as they came.

Excess of Devotion often occaſions ſcrupulous Perſons to procure ſeveral Abſolutions for their deceaſed Friends. The Dead, however, once thoroughly abſolved, ſhould find themſelves, one would think, but very little the better for five or ſix additional Abſolutions: But on the other Hand, if the Clergy have more Trouble, they find their Account in it. The Ceremonial of the Biſhops ſpeaks of Abſolution being repeated by ſeveral Prelates, and deſcribes it after this Manner.

Four Biſhops place themſelves at the four Sides of the Chapelle Ardente. The youngeſt goes to the Right of the dead Man's Feet, the ſecond to the Left towards his Head, the third to the Left of his Feet, and the fourth to the Right of his Head. The Celebrant ſits in his Epiſcopal Chair, as before-mentioned, having the Incenſe-Bearer and Holy-Water-Bearer behind him. The deceaſed thus ſurrounded, as it were, by the five Biſhops, is no longer expoſed to the Malice of the Devil, who, in this happy Situation, dares not attack him. The Celebrant gives him the firſt Abſolution, ſaying, Non intres, &c. After him, the firſt of thoſe four Biſhops who are placed at the four Corners, ſprinkles and perfumes the Repreſentation on each Side three Times, going quite round it. After this ſome Verſes are repeated, and whilſt the Requiem is ſinging, the Miniſters attend the ſecond Biſhop, who riſes in his Turn to go his Round. He ſprinkles, perfumes and repeats in the ſame Manner, as the former, a few Prayers and Verſes, and then all of them return to their reſpective Places. Whilſt the third is coming to give his Abſolution, the Reſponſes are begun. Laſtly, The fourth gives his, and the Choir ſing Libera me Domine, &c. Then the Celebrant ſprinkles and perfumes the Repreſentation in the ſame Manner as the reſt, ſays the Prayer of Abſolution, to which the Choir anſwer, Amen, pronounces the Requiem, and the Muſic, if there be ſeveral Perſons deceaſed to be abſolved, ſings the Requieſcant in Pace; alias Requieſcat.

The Ceremonial adds, That theſe four or five Abſolutions are never obſerved or given but at the firſt Funeral Solemnities of the Deceaſed. At [a] Anniverſaries, and after the nine [b] Days Mourning, there is never but one performed.

[a] The antient Grecians, convinced by Reaſon and Tradition, That a Man was not perfectly annihilated in the Grave, but that his nobler Part was not, like Matter, corruptible annually celebrated the Commemoration of their Heroes, which Solemnity was performed round the Monuments of thoſe illuſtrious Dead. The Chriſtians of the earlieſt Ages barely imitated them, though ſince it has been carried much further. All Human Inſtitutions are pure and ſimple at firſt. The Anniverſaries of the Grecians, for immortalizing the Memory of their departed Heroes, induced the Living to imitate them, in order, like them, to obtain everlaſting Happineſs. The Deſign of the Anniverſaries of the Chriſtians, was to encourage Men in the holy Practice of Religion, and to ſhew that ſuch as die in God, live in him; and ought always to live in the Remembrance of the Church. The Death of the Chriſtian whoſe Anniverſary was celebrated, was deſcribed to the People; and they begged of God, that they might die like him. After this an Oblation was made, and converted to ſupply the Neceſſities of the Church. When once the Notion obtained, that this Oblation could deliver the Soul of the Deceaſed from many crying Sins, every Man was willing to eaſe his deceaſed Friends. Fathers made Oblations for their Children, Children for their Parents, and Wives for their Husbands. Mercenary Chriſtian Prieſts, finding their Intereſt concerned, encouraged all well-meaning and devout Perſons in making thoſe charitable Oblations, of which they reaped the Advantage, and then firſt began to ſhew a more than ordinary Concern for the Souls of the Righteous. Some ſay, that praying for the Dead, which was in Uſe among the Heathens, crept into the Church towards the End of the ſecond Century, and Hiſtory informs us, that public Prayers were made for the Soul of Conſtantine the Great. The Writers of the firſt Ages of the Church alſo inform us, that Souls often returned from the other World to beg the Aſſiſtance of the Living in this. Some Proteſtants are of Opinion, that Maſſes for the Dead were not introduced till the ſixth Century.

[b] The nine Days Devotion for the Dead, in uſe amongſt Chriſtians, has ſome Conformity with the ſame under the Heathens. The Romans mourned for their Dead nine Days, offered expiatory Sacrifices for them all that Time, and made ſeveral Feaſts, called Cœna Novendiales, accompanied with Vows and Prayers for the Deceaſed. They likewiſe ſacrificed to their Manes at their Sepulchres, and were perſuaded this Devotion was no ſmall Eaſe to their Souls. Their Service for the Dead was called Inferiæ, whether performed immediately upon their Interment, or at their Anniverſary.

[a] WHEN there is no Chapelle Ardente, the Acolytes lay a black Cloth before the Middle of the Altar; the Celebrant, who has on each Side of him, the Incenſe-Bearer and the Holy-Water-Bearer, turns towards this Cloth, and taking the Sprinkling-Stick from the firſt Deacon, ſprinkles and perfumes the Cloth three Times ſucceſſively.

WHEN the Pope and Cardinals aſſiſt at Maſſes for the Dead at Rome, their Eminencies are dreſt in Purple; the Cardinal, who is grand Penitentiary, ſings the Maſs; his Holineſs is cenſed at the Offertory, and ſings the Prayers for the Dead over the [b] Catafalque. The firſt Cardinal-Prieſt gives the Springling-Stick and Incenſe to the holy Father; but the Cardinals pay him no Homage at this Ceremony. After Maſs, their Eminencies wait on his Holineſs home, and after that go and pay their Devotions before the holy Sacrament at St. Peter's. From thence they viſit the Monuments of the Popes, and ſay a few Prayers for them [c].

WE ſhall refer ſeveral Remarks to the Ceremonies which precede or accompany Funerals.

The DEVOTION paid to the CROSS.

WE place the Devotion of the Croſs, which is on no Account whatever to be diſpenſed with in all the Ceremonies of the Chriſtian Religion, after the Ceremonies of the Maſs. We have already mentioned the Cuſtom of carrying the Croſs before the Pontiff.

IT hath been remarked, [d] That among the antient Egyptians the Letter Tau, which is a Kind of a Croſs, ſignified a future State, and they repreſented their God Serapis with this Letter on his Breaſt: And is not this a remarkable Symbol of the Croſſes which the Prelates of the Church wear upon their Breaſts? One of the Religious Duties of Paganiſm, was to kiſs their Hand as they carried it to their Mouth, laying the firſt Finger over the Thumb in the Form of a Croſs. The Croſs was in great Veneration amongſt the primitive Chriſtians, who painted it on their Foreheads, to ſhew the Heathens, that they gloried in being the Diſciples of a crucified Jeſus; and they made the Sign of the Croſs the better to diſtinguiſh each other from the Infidels, and to unite together under the Banner of the Goſpel. They prayed to God, joining their Hands, or extending them towards Heaven in the Form of a Croſs; and from that Time were convinced, that the Devil was [e] terribly afraid of that Sign, and that no other Means were ſo effectual to ſend him back to his own gloomy Territories. In all this, the Expreſſions of the Chriſtians of thoſe firſt Ages might very probably be altogether allegorical: But however that be, it cannot be denied, but that the Devotion of the Croſs has gone on and encreas'd ever ſince thoſe firſt Ideas of it. About the Beginning of the fourth Century, this Devotion gain'd Ground prodigiouſly, on account of St. Helen's good Fortune, who was Mother of the Emperor Conſtantine the Great, and found the Croſs in her Voyage to the [b] What is before called the Repreſentation.

[a] Baudry, Manuale Cerem.

[c] Relaz. della Corte di Roma di Lunadora.

[d] See Cœl. Rhod. Lect. Ant. Lib. X. Chap. viii.

[e] S. Hieron. de Nativ. Hoc ſignum diabolus contremiſcit, &c. Cardinal Bona in his Treatiſe De divina Pſalmodia, Cap. xvi. has given us a Collection of all the Virtues of the Sign of the Croſs. The Croſs, ſays he, is the Seal of the Lord, and upon the Chriſtian's Forehead is the ſame as Circumciſion to the Jew. It is the Steps whereby we aſcend directly to Heaven. It beſtows Life, delivers from Death, leads to Virtue, hinders the Corruption, (of the Pious) extinguiſhes the Flame of the Paſſions, opens Heaven, protects Cities, ſtrengthens and cements Friendſhip, &c. Moſes ſmote the Rock twice, making the Sign of the Croſs. Severus, a Chriſtian Poet, tells us in his Bucolics, that a Shepherd reſcued his Sheep from the Jaws of the Wolf, by marking them in the Forehead with a Croſs. Prudentius, another Chriſtian Poet, has not been leſs copious on the Virtue of that Divine Wood.

Holy

Holy Land. The Son, who was as religious as his Mother, put the Croſs into his Standards, or rather ordered them to be made in that Form. It is reported, however, that the Croſs was not introduced into Churches till the Beginning of the fifth Century, notwithſtanding it had appear'd upon the Coin, Colours, [a] Shields, Helmets and Crowns of the Emperors long before that Time. The ſixth Univerſal Council held at Conſtantinople, about the Cloſe of the ſeventh Century, decreed, that Jeſus Chriſt ſhould be painted in a Human Form upon the Croſs, in order to repreſent in the moſt lively Manner imaginable to all Chriſtians the Death and Paſſion of our bleſſed Saviour; but emblematic Figures of him had been in Uſe for many preceding Ages. Chriſt was frequently delineated in the Form of a Lamb [b] at the Foot of the Croſs, and the [c] Holy Ghoſt in that of a Dove. Sometimes a Crown was ſet over the Croſs, to intimate to the Faithful, that the Crown of everlaſting Glory would be the Reward of their Sufferings for the Croſs of Chriſt. A Stag likewiſe was ſometimes painted at the Foot of this ſacred Wood, becauſe that Beaſt, being an Enemy to Serpents, is the Symbol of Chriſt, who is the Enemy of the Devil. But all theſe emblematic Figures were laid aſide, at the Sight of our Saviour repreſented on the Croſs in Human Form, by a Decree of the ſixth oecumenical Council; which was the Origin of Crucifixes.

[d] THE Croſs Chriſt ſuffered on, as ſome have affirmed, was made of Oak. We have already obſerv'd, that this was fortunately found by St. Helen, together with the [e] Inſcription written over it. Pope Sergius about the Year 690. found another large Piece of the Croſs, which is carefully preſerved at Rome, and in 1492. the Inſcription was found again in a Church that was repairing in the ſame City. It had been concealed in a Wall, and the Troubles of the Times had occaſioned it to lie there forgotten. Upon this Occaſion Pope Alexander VI. iſſued out a Bull, promiſing a yearly Pardon of their Sins to all ſuch devout Chriſtians as ſhould annually, on the laſt Sunday in January, viſit the Church where that [f] Inſcription had been diſcovered. A large Part of the ſame Inſcription upon the Croſs is to be ſeen at Thouloufe alſo amongſt the Benedictine Monks, which is publickly expoſed twice a Year, viz. the third of May, and the fourteenth of September; and at ſuch Times it is ſteeped in a certain Quantity of Water, and afterwards given to the Sick, who find great Relief by it. In order to reconcile this Relic with that at Rome, the ſame Arguments muſt be made uſe of, as a certain Monk does, with Reſpect to the Nails of the Croſs, an Account whereof we ſhall give the Reader immediately. [g] Two of thoſe Nails, which faſtened our Saviour to the Croſs, were found in the Time of Conſtantine, who adorned his Helmet and Horſe's Bridle with them. Rome, Milan, and Treves, boaſt each of having one of thoſe Nails in their Poſſeſſion. That at Rome is to be ſeen in the Church of the Holy Croſs of Jeruſalem, and is annually [h] expoſed to the Veneration of the People. That at Milan hath equal Reſpect paid to it; and as there is ſome Reaſon to believe this to be the ſame with Conſtantine's, the good Friar who furniſhes us with theſe Particulars, very happily applies to it one of the [i] Prophecies of the Prophet Zacharias. That of Treves is not quite ſo much regarded; but, however, no leſs deſerves the Adoration of the Devout. Theſe are the three remarkable Nails which pierced Chriſt's Hands and Feet: As to the reſt of them, to which it has been thought proper to aſcribe the melancholy Honour of having been inſtrumental to our Saviour's Sufferings, they are either [k] thoſe which have been rubbed againſt the former, in or-

[a] Vide Lipſ. de Cruce.
[b] Sub Cruce ſanguinea niveo ſtat Chriſtus in agno, S. Paulin.
[c] Vide Caſal. de ritibus. véter. Chriſt.
[d] Nicquet de titulo ſanctæ Crucis.
[e] Nicquet, Ibid.
[f] Vide Giry Vies des Saints.
[g] Curtius de Clavis Dominicis.
[h] Curtius, Ibid.
[i] Chap. xiv. ver. 20.
[k] Curtius de Clavis Dominicis.

der;

der, without doubt, to receive the ſame divine and miraculous Qualities; or are only little Parts of the true and genuine ones (like that, for Inſtance, at Aix la Chapelle, which is the Point only of that ſhewn at Rome) or are only ſuch as faſtened the various Pieces of the Croſs together. They may likewiſe very probably be Nails of Croſſes, to which ſeveral holy Martyrs have formerly been fixed; and as Martyrs are the Members of Chriſt, there is ſome Authority for maintaining them to be the Nails of our Saviour's Croſs; by which Conſtruction it may eaſily happen that ſeveral ſuch Nails of the Croſs may appear in the World. Pope Innocent VI. in 1353. appointed a Feſtival for theſe ſacred Nails.

FESTIVALS inſtituted and ordained in Honour of the CROSS, and ſome CEREMONIES relating to the ſame.

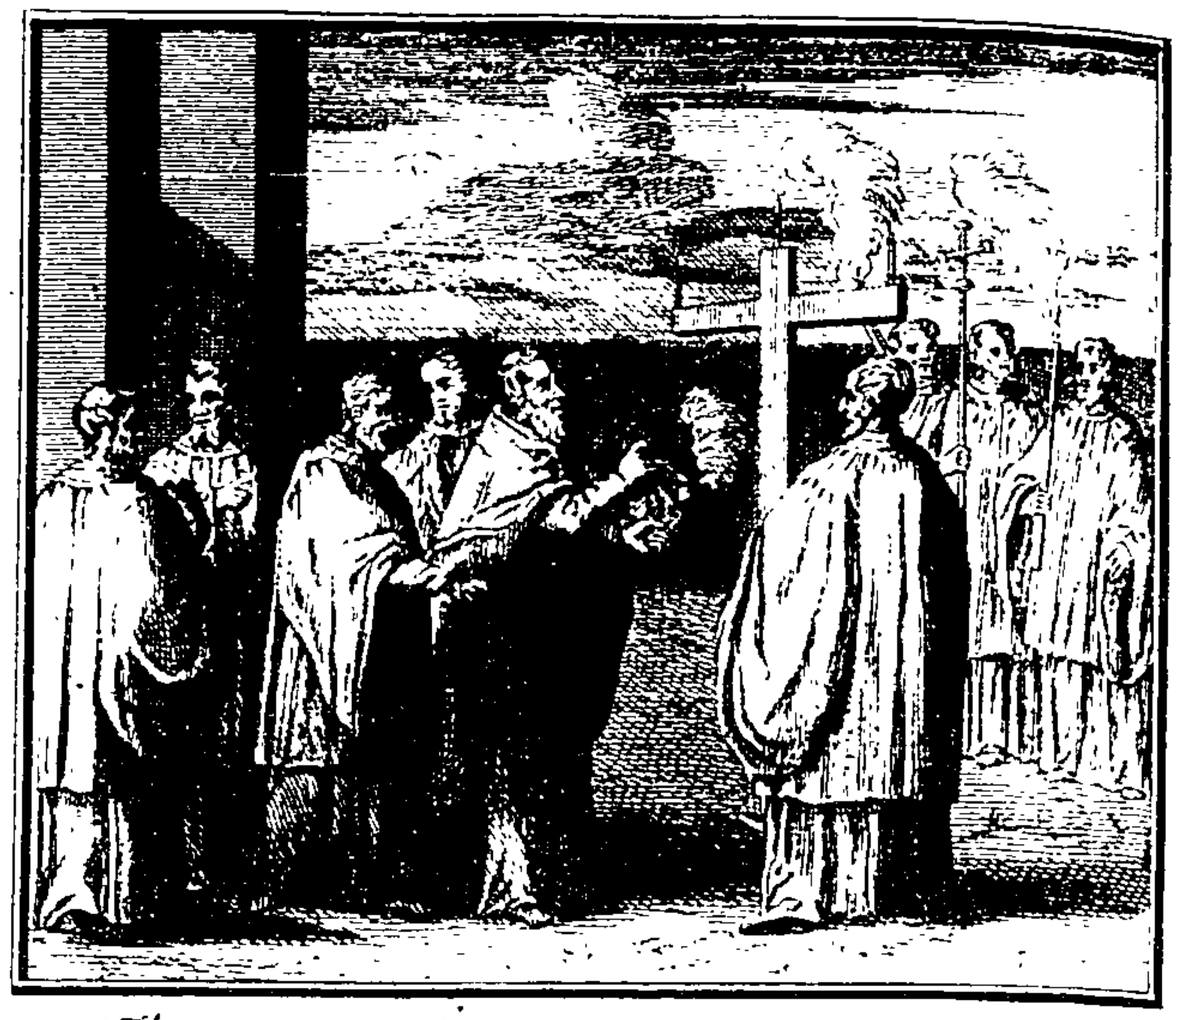
WE think it highly requiſite to inform the Reader, that there is a large Quantity of the ſacred Wood of the real Croſs to be met with all over the ſeveral Kingdoms of Chriſtendom. Heretics, indeed, make a Jeſt of this wholſom Plenty, and ſneering ſay, That the Carpenters might make numberleſs Pieces of Work, and find themſelves Employment for a great while with this ſacred Wood. But we ſtop their Mouths, by alledging the Reaſons which juſtify our profound Veneration for the two Inſcriptions, and the large Quantity of Nails that ſtill remain under the Denomination of the Nails of the Croſs.

WE have already taken Notice of the Invention of the ſacred Croſs, and informed the Reader, that St. Helen found it with the Nails and the Inſcription; and thus it happened: They were puzzled how to diſtinguiſh our Saviour's Croſs from two others which were found near it, and were the Croſſes of the two [a] Thieves. But this Difficulty was remov'd by St. Macarius. He directed the People to join with him in Prayer, and begged of God that he would vouchſafe to diſcover to him which was the true Croſs; and God heard him. A Woman at the Point of Death was brought to the Croſſes of the two Thieves, and made to touch them one after another, but to no manner of Purpoſe. After this, ſhe was brought to our Saviour's, and was immediately conſcious that her Diſtemper was removed; whereas till that Time the moſt artful Remedies proved ineffectual.

THE Feſtival of the Invention of the Croſs is celebrated on the third Day of May, and was obſerved in ſome Churches before the Popedom of Gregory the Great; but ſince his Time, has been introduced into ſeveral other Places, till at length it became univerſal.

THE Exaltation of the Croſs is celebrated on the fourteenth Day of September. In the Reign of Heraclitus, Coſroes King of Perſia plunder'd Jeruſalem, carried away that Part of the Croſs, which the Empreſs Helen left there in Commemoration of our Saviour, and ſent under a Guard into his own County, that divine Wood, which was called by his Soldiers The God of the Chriſtians. After ſeveral Battles, in which the Perſian was always defeated, [b] Heraclitus had the good Fortune to recover the Croſs, and carried it himſelf to Jeruſalem. This pious Prince laid aſide his Imperial Habiliments, in order to humble himſelf before



[a] That of the good Thief was long after found, and carried to Rome. It is at the Church of the holy Croſs of Jeruſalem.

[b] Giry Vies des Saints.

it,

The CONSECRATION of the GREAT CROSS. | CONSECRATION de la grande CROIX.

The manner of THURIFYING CROSSES. | *L'*ENCENSEMENT des CROIX.

The manner of CHRISTENING a BELL. | LE BATÊME de la CLOCHE.

The manner of BLESSING a BELL. | BENEDICTION de la CLOCHE.

The manner of PERFUMING a BELL. | On PARFUME la CLOCHE.

The CONSECRATION of an IMAGE. | CONSECRATION de une IMAGE.

it, not being otherwiſe able to walk under the Weight of it, by Reaſon of the Magnificence of his Robes. After he had thrown them off, he laid the Croſs upon his own Shoulders, that he might carry it with the greater Pomp and Solemnity to Mount Calvary, from whence it had been taken. Some particular Miracles ſignalized this glorious Day, and the Feſtival of the Re-eſtabliſhment of the Croſs was afterwards appointed, which is ſtill celebrated under the Name of the Exaltation. A Feſtival of the ſame Name, however, was obſerved long before that Time, which is thought to have been inſtituted under Conſtantine the Great. But be that as it will, the Recovery of the Croſs was no Equivalent to the Chriſtians for the Loſs of the Eaſt, which Mahometaniſm, that ſprang up under this Emperor, tore from them with an unaccountable Swiftneſs.

POITIERS glories in having Part of the true Croſs. Radegonda, Wife to Clotaire King of France, obtained this heavenly Preſent for the Capital City of Poitou: Paris has another Piece of it; and the Honour of poſſeſſing it is celebrated under the Name of the Reception of the Holy Croſs, on the firſt Sunday in Auguſt.

THE Roman Rituals preſcribe the Manner in which the Prieſt is to make the Sign of the Croſs. He is to lay his [a] Left-Hand ſtretched open under his Breaſt, and to take peculiar Care [b] that it touches no Part on which the Croſs is to be made; he is to obſerve likewiſe, to keep the Fingers of that Hand cloſe together. The Fingers of the Right Hand which are appropriated for making the Sign, muſt be diſpoſed in the ſame Manner as the Left. He muſt ſtand with his Head erect and his Hand ſtreight; the Fingers not being ſo much as bent. The Sign muſt begin at the Forehead, and ſo deſcend upon the Breaſt, from whence he is to proceed from the Left Shoulder to the Right: This Sign thus made, the Prieſt muſt take all the Care imaginable not to carry his Right-Hand either to his Breaſt, or his Mouth, which is very indecent, but immediately afterwards his Right-Hand muſt be joined to his Left. Theſe Signs are made ten thouſand Times over in all Devotions both public and private. But to ſay more of them here, would be to no manner of Purpoſe; and as for the Clergy, they may conſult their Rituals at their Leiſure.

The CONSECRATION of public and private CROSSES.

CROSSES of all Sizes are conſecrated after the following Manner. The Print repreſents the Conſecration of a large Croſs. An Acolyte, you may obſerve, is very buſy in lighting up the Candles at the Foot of this Croſs. The grave Aſpect of the Celebrant, who is ſeated in a Chair provided for that Purpoſe, with his Paſtoral Croſier in his Hand, and in the midſt of his Clergy in their Surplices, ſhews that his Mind is intent upon this Ceremony, of which we ſhall now give the Reader an exact Deſcription. [b] The Celebrant muſt be dreſſed in all his Pontifical Habiliments; the Amict, Albe, Girdle, Stole, white Pluvial, plain Mitre, and his paſtoral Staff. Thus equipt, he preſents himſelf before the great Croſs, and part of the Clergy turn towards him; he makes a Diſcourſe to the People, as he ſits, upon the Excellence of the Croſs, at the [c] Foot whereof three Tapers are lighted, and then the Celebrant takes off his Mitre, and repeats a Prayer before the Croſs. The Litanies follow it, and after them there is an Anthem. He then ſprinkles the Croſs, and afterwards perfumes it with Frankincenſe: That being performed, he ſets Candles upon the Top of each Arm of the Croſs, which, if it be ſo high that he cannot reach the Top [d], he is furniſhed with a Ladder. The Ceremony

[a] Baudry, Manuale Sacr. Cerem. p. 76. Ed. 1711.
[b] Extra Limites Crucis, Id. Ibid.
[c] Pontific. Rom.
[d] Scala ſuper quam aſcendens Pontifex poſſit aſcendere, &c concludes with Pſalms and Prayers. The Conſecration of all Croſſes intended for public Places, Croſs-Ways, and High-Roads, are performed after the ſame Manner. As to the Adoration of the Croſs, which is preſented to the People on Eaſter-Eve, we ſhall refer it to that Feſtival.

As for ſmall Croſſes newly made, and intended for Proceſſions, Churches, Chapels, Altars, or private Families, when a Prieſt, by the Licence and Conſent of his Biſhop, bleſſes one of them, he muſt lay it upon the Altar on the Epiſtle-Side, on a Cuſhion, and having taken care that one Taper at leaſt be lighted, muſt put a Stole over his Surplice, of ſuch a Colour as is proper for the Day; and being attended, if conveniently it can be, by a Clerk in a Surplice, whoſe Buſineſs is to hold the Water-Pot and Sprinkler, muſt make the Sign of the Croſs over himſelf, and ſay ſome Prayers ſuitable to the Occaſion, &c. [a] But it muſt always be obſerved, that the ſame Prayer which is uſed to bleſs a Stone or Metal Croſs, will not ſerve for a wooden one: After this he muſt kiſs it, and thoſe who ſtand near him kiſs and adore it after him.

THE Croſs muſt always be placed upon the Altar. It is carried before Patriarchs and Biſhops, as well as before the Pope; the Image which is upon it muſt be always turned towards the Prelate. The Croſs-Bearer muſt be dreſſed like a Clerk.

THE Pectoral, or Breaſt-Croſs, [b] in which ſome Relic, or Piece of the true Croſs ought to be ſet, is worn by Prelates, and hangs on a Chain, or Silk String, and is tied about their Necks. This Breaſt-Croſs is inſtead of the Pectoral Ornaments of the antient High-Prieſt of the Jews; and the Cuſtom of wearing it was eſtabliſhed, as we are informed, about the Beginning of the ninth, or latter End of the eighth Century. In 811. the Patriarch of Conſtantinople ſent a Gold Relic-Box, in which was a ſmall Piece of the true Croſs, to Pope Leo the Third. This Relic-Box was in Greek called Encolpion, a Term which ſignifies any Thing worn on the Breaſt. This Cuſtom proceeded, no doubt, from that of the firſt Chriſtians, who out of Devotion for the Croſs of our bleſſed Saviour, wore it on their Breaſts, and even made it, on the ſmalleſt Occaſions, the Object of their Remembrance. As an Illuſtration thereof, they cut their Bread in the Form of a Croſs, which Cuſtom continued in the Church for a long Time; but, without attributing this Practice to the Veneration of the firſt Chriſtians for the Croſs of Chriſt, it might very probably be a Relic of the ancient Roman Way of cutting Bread, which gave Riſe to a celebrated [c] Proverb. When the primitive Chriſtians travelled abroad, or even walked about the City, they carried Croſſes about them, as a Teſtimony of the Religious Regard which was due to that of our bleſſed Lord. Afterwards, indeed, it became no more than an Ornament, and was accordingly ſet off with Jewels, like the Diamond Croſſes of our modern Ladies. Croſſes were likewiſe engraved upon ſepulchral Monuments and at the Doors of Chapels. The Pectoral Croſs muſt be conſecrated, like all others, and ſprinkled with Holy-Water.

THE Conſecration of Croſſes is very antient, and at leaſt antecedent to the ſeventh general Council. Some Hiſtorians aſſert, that it had been practiſed ever ſince the ſecond Century, and that judicial Oaths were at that Time made before Croſſes; but this is very improbable, ſince the Church then laboured under the Pagan Yoke.

[a] Piſcara Praxis Ceremon. Lib. II. Cap. iii.
[b] Bonanni Gerarch. Eccl.
[c] Aliena vivere Quadra, Juven. The Quadra was called the four Pieces into which the Bread was cut.

Ce-

Celebrated CRUCIFIXES.

LORETTO is famous for the Image of our Lady. There is likewiſe a miraculous Image made by St. Luke, in the Borough of Cirolo, in the Road to that ſmall City. They who go to pay their Devotions to our Lady, will be ſure to remember, that at leaſt as much Reſpect is due to the Son as to the Mother.

THE [a] Santiſſimo Croceſiſſo at Naples is compos'd of Wood; nor does the Coarſeneſs of the Stuff in the leaſt diminiſh its Value; the Gratitude it ſhewed to St. Thomas Aquinas, [b] in thanking him for his beautiful and inſtructive Writings, ſhould redouble the Zeal of all ſuch as viſit the Chapel where it reſides.

THE Santo Volto at Lucca is made of Cypreſs, and dreſſed in a very pompous Veſtment; its Shoes [c] are Silver, covered with Plates of Gold; and its Head adorned with a Crown, ſet all round with Jewels. Nicodemus, they ſay, was the Artificer that made it; but it is the general Notion, that he was only concern'd about the Face. The bold Undertaking having drawn down certain Angels out of Curioſity, to ſee how he would accompliſh ſo important a Task, they were ſoon tired with the ſlow Progreſs which Nicodemus made; and, being moved with Compaſſion for a Man whoſe Zeal had prompted him to undertake a more than human Work, they gave it the finiſhing Stroke themſelves; and from thence the Crucifix took the Name of Santo Volto. How this wonderful Crucifix came to Lucca, we cannot determine. At firſt it was carried, or rather went of itſelf, and fixed at St. Fredianus's Church; but either finding itſelf too much confin'd there, or having particular Reaſons for removing its Quarters, it fled to the Cathedral of that City, and remain'd hanging in the Air, till an Altar was erected for it, on the Spot where it was found. [d] This charitable Crucifix one Day determin'd to beſtow one of its Shoes upon a poor Man, who begged its charitable Aſſiſtance. This Gift was made known, the Shoe was redeemed, and the poor Man had the Value of it given him in Gold.

THE Crucifix at Loretto is famous for divers Miracles. The Angels tranſported it with the Santa Caſa from Paleſtine to Italy. A Crucifix of St. Mary Tranſpontina at Rome frequently convers'd in the moſt familiar Manner with St. Peter and St. Paul.

THE ſacred Crucifix at Trent is remarkable, for the Approbation which it gave to the Decrees of the Council held in that City in the ſixteenth Century.

IN the Church of the Beguine Nuns at Ghent, there is a Crucifix with its Mouth always open. One of thoſe Beguines, affronted at being left out of a Party of Pleaſure, which had been made one Day in the Carnaval, complained to the Crucifix of it, which, at the ſame Time it exhorted her not to diſturb herſelf, or be vex'd at the Diſappointment, invited her to be its wedded Bride, and ſhe died the next Day. The Nun, in all Probability, would have preferred the ſenſual Pleaſures of this World to that celeſtial Wedding: But ever ſince that Time, however, the Crucifix has remained with its Mouth open.

[a] In the Church of St. Dominic the Great.

[b] Falſe Religions have likewiſe aſcribed the Gift of Speech to the Images of their Gods; and Inſtances of it are to be met with in the Idolatry of the Indians. The Juno of Veia being formerly asked to go to Rome, declared ſhe approved of the Propoſal.

[c] Curtius de Clavis Dominicis.

[d] Id. Ibid.

[a] WE muſt not omit that at Bavaria, which was diſcovered by a Stag that was hunted by a Parcel of Dogs. The Stag ſhewed it to the Huntſmen with his Foot, and never attempted to make his Eſcape, till he had diſcovered the Crucifix to them. This Miracle happened in the Reign of Charlemaigne, and gave the Name to the Convent of Pollingen, the firſt Syllable whereof ſeems to expreſs the Barking of Dogs. A Fair was ſet up at Pollingen, by which Means the Crucifix, Convent, and Church, which St. Boniface erected there, ſoon grew famous, and drew upon Pollingen the Jealouſy of Weilhaum, a ſmall adjacent Village. They procured the Fair to be removed thither, which ſlackened the Devotion of the Bavarians, and ſoon occaſioned the Crucifix to be forgotten; but it ſoon revenged itſelf in ſuch Sort, that the little Town of Weilhaum was conſumed to Aſhes. Notwithſtanding this public Calamity, that Town could not agree to part with what it had ſo unjuſtly gained; but a ſecond Fire, which once more deſtroyed it, oblig'd that unhappy Town to reſtore what it had ſo ſacrilegiouſly uſurped.

IN a Church at Cologne, there is a Crucifix, the Head whereof is cover'd with a Peruke. The Date of this Head-Dreſs is not known; all that we can ſay of it is, that it cannot be of any long ſtanding, ſince the Uſe of Perukes is pretty modern. Thoſe auſtere Eccleſiaſtics, who have declared againſt ſuch falſe Hair, would have looked upon a Crucifix thus dreſſed in all Probability with Indignation; and yet this Peruke is very marvellous and edifying; for the Hair is never diminiſhed, tho' the Devotees that viſit it never take their Leave without carrying away a Lock or two of it.

WE ſhall ſay Nothing of an infinite Number of Crucifixes, ſome of which have ſhed Tears, others ſweated Blood, and others again diſcovered Sacrileges, and ſtruck the Malefactors either blind or lame. Some have even reſtored Life to the Dead, and others Health to the Diſeaſed, and all have diſtinguiſhed themſelves by ſome remarkable Inſtance of Proweſs or another. Neither ſhall we mention any domeſtic Crucifixes, ſince their Favours ſeldom reach farther than the Families they protect. Among theſe latter [b] ought to be reckon'd the Crucifix which oblig'd F. Bencius with ſeveral nocturnal Viſits, and at laſt made him determine to aſſume the Jeſuit's Habit.

The Cuſtom of having BELLS in CHURCHES.

FROM Croſſes we proceed to thoſe metal Inſtruments call'd Bells, which make themſelves heard by the Faithful a great Way off, [c] and repreſent the Duration of the Goſpel, whoſe glorious Sound has been carried throughout the whole Earth. [d] They likewiſe repreſent the Church encouraging the Faithful to praiſe the Lord, and the Paſtors of the Goſpel preaching the Word of God. They have beſides ſeveral other myſterious Significations, which are to be met with in the Rituals. Some pretend that they were invented in Campania, a Province of Italy, and from thence took their [e] Name in bad Latin. The firſt Uſe of them [f] is attributed to Pope Sabinian; it is certain, [g] however, that the Romans had them in Uſe long before, and it is well known that the ſacerdotal Robe of the Jewiſh High-Prieſt was hung all round about with little Bells. However that be, about the Year 603. Sabinian inſtituted the Uſe of Bells for the ſolemn Celebra-

[a] Curtius de Clavis Dominicis.
[b] Vide Alegambe de Script. &c.
[c] Roman Ritual.
[d] Alet's Ritual.
[e] Campanæ.
[f] It is pretended, that St. Paulinus, Biſhop of Nola, eſtabliſhed the Uſe of Bells in his Dioceſe. Salmuth, a Commentator upon Pancirollo, thinks he only conſecrated a Cuſtom long before practiſed among the Heathens. The following is a merry Proof of the Antiquity of Bells, viz. that in a Church at Rome there was formerly preſerved a Part of the Sound of the Bells of Jeruſalem.
[g] They called them Tintinnabula.

tion

tion of the Maſs, and for canonical Hours, as the Cuſtom is now obſerved. The tolling them for the Dead was [a] eſtabliſhed in England from the Beginning of the eighth Century, [b] and is ſtill preſerved in ſome reform'd Churches, notwithſtanding their Revolt from the holy See. Bells [c] likewiſe ring the Ave Maria, Morning, Noon, and Night, to remind the People of their Devotions at thoſe ſtated Times. They are alſo rung [d] when the Hoſt is elevated, carried to the Sick, and in Proceſſions.

DURING Paſſion-Week the Creſſelle, which is a wooden Inſtrument, is made uſe of inſtead of Bells, in which there are ſeveral Myſteries lie conceal'd. As for Inſtance, it repreſents Chriſt praying upon the Croſs, and inviting all Nations to embrace his Doctrine. It repreſents likewiſe our bleſſed Saviour's Humility, &c. The Uſe of this Inſtrument is look'd upon as much more antient than that of Bells; [e] as being what the primitive Chriſtians made uſe of to ſummon their Brethren privately to the Prayers they made in ſubterraneous and ſolitary Caverns.

The Benediction of BELLS.

THE Ceremony of bleſſing Bells, is by the People called, [f] chriſtening them; becauſe the Name of ſome of the Saints is aſcrib'd to them, [g] by Virtue of whoſe Invocation they are preſented to God, in order that they may obtain his Favour and Protection. The Benediction devotes them to God's Service, that he may confer on them the Power, not of barely ſtriking the Ear, ...but of touching the Heart by the Influence of the Holy Ghoſt..... When they are thus bleſt and rung out, they contribute very much towards the Prieſt's Succeſs in his Exorciſms, &c. 'Tis the Biſhop's peculiar Province to perform this Ceremony. But in the firſt Place, the Curates, to whoſe Care the caſting of the Bells is entruſted, [h] muſt prevent their being caſt either in the Church or the Church-Yard, and permit nothing prophane to be engrav'd upon them; Nothing but a Croſs, or the Image of the Saint, who is the Patron of the Church. They are likewiſe to hinder, as much as in them lies, all Manner of Superſtition at the Time of their Caſting, and Benediction.

THE Bell once compleated, muſt, as ſoon as it is convenient, be put into a proper Condition for receiving the Benediction, that is, it muſt be hung up, and ſo commodiouſly diſpoſed, as to leave Room to walk round it, to come at it within and without, to waſh it, and give it the holy Unctions. There muſt be a Seat for the Celebrant near the Bell, a Stool at his Left-Hand for the Deacon, and Seats on each Side for the reſt of the Clergy; a Desk likewiſe with the Anthem Book, or Ritual, muſt be carried to the Place appointed for the Performance of the Ceremony; if in the Church, a Credence is prepared on the Epiſtle-Side, with a white Cloth laid over it, whereon are ſet the Sprinklers, the holy Water-Pot, a Salt-Seller, the Napkins, a Veſſel for Oil, that for the Chriſm, Paſtils, Incenſe, Myrrh, Cotton, a Baſon and Ewer,

[a] Bede quoted from Caſalius de Ritibus Vet. Chriſt.

[b] In Holland, Pruſſia, and other Places. The Lacedemonians, at the Death of any of their Kings, made uſe of Kettle-Drums. The Sound of Braſs was then thought to keep away evil Spirits, juſt as the Catholic Church now holds, that the Sound of Bells keeps the Powers of the Air at a Diſtance.

[c] Pope Calixtus III. ordered a Bell to be rung at Noon, as it was before at Night, to ſalute the Virgin Mary. He is ſaid to order this in 1455. in favour of ſuch as went to the Wars againſt the Turks.

[d] Gregory IX. who lived in 1230. appointed the ringing of a Bell to give Notice to kneel and adore the Hoſt at the Elevation, Caſal. de Rit. vet. Chriſt.

[e] Vide Caſal. de Chriſt. Ritibus.

[f] Pope John XIII. firſt baptized Bells, by giving his own Name, to that of St. John de Lateran in 965. Caſal. de Rit. Chriſt.

[g] Alet's Ritual.

[h] Ibid.

and ſome Crums of Bread: if elſewhere, all thoſe ſacred Utenſils are to be convey'd to the Place where the Ceremony is to be performed, after which they proceed to conſecrate the Bell after the following Manner: The Celebrant dreſs'd in his Albe, Stole, and white Pluvial, and the Deacon robed in the very ſame Colour, walk out of the Veſtry in Proceſſion; the Thuriferary marches foremoſt, and after him two Ceroferaries, each with a lighted Taper; then the Clergy two and two, and the Celebrant with the Deacon on his Left-Hand brings up the Rear. Being arrived at the Place, the Taper-Bearers ſet down their Lights on the Credence, near which both they and the Thuriferary ſtand. The Clergy range themſelves on each Side, and the Celebrant places himſelf on a Seat near the Bell, and being cover'd, inſtructs the People in the Sanctity of the Action, which he is going to perform, and endeavours as much as poſſible to awaken their Attention, and thereupon riſes to ſing the Miſerere with the Choir, and ſome other ſelect Hymns, appointed in the Ritual.

THIS done, they all riſe, and the Celebrant, as well as the reſt, uncovers. [a] He exorciſes and gives his Benediction to the Salt and Water, and as he addreſſes himſelf to them, he beſeeches God to be good and gracious to them, and in one particular Prayer begs, that by the prevailing Influence of the holy Water, the Bell may acquire the Virtue of protecting Chriſtians from the wicked Devices of Satan, of driving away Ghoſts, of huſhing the boiſterous Winds, and raiſing Devotion in the Heart, &c. He then mingles the Salt and Water, and croſſing them three Times, in the Name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt, pronounces theſe Words, [b] God be with you. In the Prayer after this Mixture, God is humbly entreated to look down [c] with an Eye of Mercy on theſe Creatures of Salt and Water, which might almoſt tempt one to imagine them to be the Genii or Spirits which preſide over Salt and Water, like Count Gabalis's Gnomes and Sylphs, &c. Laſtly, The Celebrant takes his Sprinkler, dips it into the holy Water, and begins to waſh the Bell, which his Aſſiſtants finiſh. After ſprinkling, rubbing, and waſhing it well both within and without, it is carefully wiped dry with Linen Cloths. Pſalms are ſung during this Ablution.

A VESSEL which contains what they call Oil for the Infirm. is in the next Place opened by the Deacon, into which the Celebrant dips the Thumb of his Right Hand, and applies it to the Middle of the Bell, with Intent to ſign it with the Croſs. At this Action the Deacon raiſes the Celebrant's Pluvial on his Right Hand Side, which is obſerv'd in every Thing that is done to the Bell. As ſoon as the Prieſt or Biſhop has made the Sign of the Croſs, he repeats a Prayer to much the ſame Effect with all the former, after which he wipes thoſe Places, on which he has made the Sign, with Cotton. The Bell is marked with ſeven Croſſes more, made with the ſame Oil, as ſoon as they have ſung the twenty eighth Pſalm. Four other Croſſes made with the holy Chriſm, ſet the Seal of Benediction, as it were, upon this Metal; at which Time the Celebrant honours the Bell with a Kind of Baptiſm, conſecrating it in the Name of the ſacred Trinity, and nominating the Saint who ſtands Godfather, it generally bears his Name.

THE Bell thus chriſtened, or conſecrated, is perfumed after the following Manner: The Thuriferary having the Thurible and Navet in his Hand, goes up to the Celebrant, who is ſeated by the Bell. The Celebrant takes Incenſe, Myrrh, and Paſtils out of the Navet, and puts them into the Thurible, but does not bleſs them; he then returns the Thurible to the Thuriferary, who ſets it under the Bell, in order to receive the Smoke. After an Anthem is ſung with all the Warmth of [a] Exorciſo te creatura ſalis aut aquæ, &c.

[b] Dominus vobiſcum.
[c] Ut dignanter aſpicias.

Devo-

Devotion imaginable, a Prayer is ſaid; which calls this Perfume the Dew of the Holy Ghoſt. The Ceremony of the Fumigation is ſucceeded by bleſſing the Incenſe, and the Thuriferary walks between the two Ceroferaries, the Clerk, or Sub-Deacon, and the Deacon who carries the Goſpels to the Place where they are appointed to be read. The Deacon delivers the Book to the Clerk; who ſtands between the two Ceroferaries, (ſays the Ritual,) ſo as to have all of them their Backs towards the North; as North; as for the Celebrant, he turns towards the Deacon. The Thuriferary, who is at his Right Hand, gives him the Thurible to incenſe the Goſpel, according to Cuſtom: After the Goſpel is read, the Clerk delivers the Book to the Celebrant, in order to kiſs it, and the Deacon incenſes him. The Celebrant then turns to the Bell, and makes the Sign of the Croſs over it with his Right Hand, whereupon the Clerk returns him his Cap, and they all go back and undreſs themſelves.

THE Conſecration of Bells repreſents, according to the Rituals, that of Paſtors; the inward and outward Ablution, ſucceeded by the anointing with Oil, denotes the Sanctification of their Baptiſm; the ſeven Unctions, in Form of a Croſs, ſhew, [a] That Paſtors ſhould excel all other Chriſtians in the Graces of the Holy Ghoſt, and poſſeſs the Fulneſs thereof typified by the ſeven Gifts; the anointing the Inſide with the Chriſm ſignifies a compleat Fulneſs of the Holy Ghoſt, wherewith the Biſhop finds himſelf endowed by his Ordination. We may reaſonably ſuppoſe, that the Perfuming includes Myſteries of no leſs Importance. The moſt obvious Idea we can entertain of it is, that as the Smoke of the Perfumes ariſes in the Bell, and fills it, ſo a Paſtor who is adorned with the Fulneſs of God's Spirit, receives the Perfume of the ſolemn Vows and Supplications of the Faithful. [b] Such as are fond of myſterious Enquiries, may gratify their Curioſity by conſulting the Rituals.

The Benedictions of IMAGES.

IT is prohibited by the Decrees of the Council of Trent, to erect any extraordinary and unuſual Image in Churches, without the Biſhop's Licence and Approbation firſt had and obtained; and they proceed to the Benediction of an Image in the ſame Manner as to that of a new Croſs. While the Prayer is ſaying, the Saint, whom the Image repreſents, is nam'd; and, after that, the Sprinkler is taken, and the Prieſt, to conclude the Conſecration, ſprinkles the Image with holy Water; but when any Image of the Virgin Mary is bleſſed, [c] it is incenſed three Times as well as ſprinkled, to which are added, an Ave Maria, ſome Pſalms, and Anthems; the Prayer beginning Deus qui virginalem aulam, &c. the Anthem, O glorioſa Dei genetrix, the Magnificat, &c. A double Sign of the Croſs, made with the Prieſt's Right-Hand, concludes the Ceremony.

SOME Proteſtant Hiſtorians pretend, that Image-Worſhip is of no greater Antiquity than the fourth Century, but that it gain'd Ground conſiderably in the ſucceeding Ages, to which the furious and miſguided Zeal of the Iconoclaſts, or Image-Breakers, contributed more than Religion; though ſome few might in all Probability act out of a religious Principle. Serenus, Biſhop of Marſeilles, was one of thoſe Zealots who had them all demoliſhed throughout his Dioceſe, to prevent the new Converts from adoring them

[a] Alet's Ritual.

[b] For the Reader's Amuſement we ſhall give him the anatomical Abridgment of a Bell, and all its Parts, according to Durant's Diſcoveries, in his Treatiſe de Ritibus. The Metal denotes the Strength of the Preacher's Underſtanding, and the Clapper his Tongue. The Stroke of the Clapper, the Cenſure of the latter againſt Immorality and Profaneneſs; what holds the Clapper, ſignifies the Moderation of the Tongue. The Wood on which the Bell hangs, the Wood of the Croſs; the Pieces to which the Wood is fixed, the Oracles of the Prophets. The Cramp-Iron fixing the Bell to the Wood, expreſſes the Preacher's Attachment to the Croſs of Chriſt. The Bell-Rope likewiſe includes conſiderable Myſteries; the three Cords, for Inſtance, of which it is made, are the three Senſes of the Scripture, viz. the hiſtorical, the moral, and the allegorical.

[c] Piſcara Praxis Cerem. Lib. II. Sect. 12. Chap. iii.

as Idols, or falſe Deities; though Pope Gregory oblig'd him to replace them. Whilſt he commended his Zeal, he blamed the Irregularity and Exceſs of it, and preſuming their groſs and material Ideas might not be ſo prevalent and perſuaſive as his paternal Inſtructions, preſcribed this latter Way, of confirming his Flock in the true and genuine Uſe of Images.

IMAGES are almoſt as antient as Religion itſelf; nor is it in the leaſt ſurprizing they ſhould be ſo, ſince the Origin of them is owing to the Weakneſs of the human Mind, which not being able to fix its Attention long on Objects purely ſpiritual, turns by inſenſible Degrees towards Matter, and endeavours to make the Object of its Adoration palpable, if we may be allowed the Expreſſion, to itſelf. Scarce any one addreſſes God as he would a King, ſince the former is inviſible; and the Majeſty of a King, on the contrary, demands the Speaker's Attention, ſince he is viſibly in his Preſence. How many ſenſible Signs are there which are never omitted in inſtructing Children to pray to God, and acknowledge the manifold Wonders he has wrought for them? The too frequent Uſe of thoſe Signs, indeed, grows dangerous; for which Reaſon God was pleas'd in former Days to forbid them to the Jews. The Chriſtians, however, have thought they might, withoutany Danger, imitate the Heathens, their Predeceſſors, in this Particular; and thus in order to heighten the People's Devotion by ſuch Objects as ſtrike the Senſes, God is painted in Churches, like a venerable old Man, he having ſtiled himſelf the Antient of Days. [a]The Son is repreſented likewiſe as a Man, he having put on a human Form; and the Holy Ghoſt in the Form [b] of a Dove, the Hieroglyphic of Simplicity and Integrity. The Angels are deſcrib'd as young Men, with Wings on their Shoulders; their Character and Induſtry as the Miniſters of God, being deſcribed by nothing more aptly than the Youth of Man, and the Agility of Birds.

THE antient Pagans did not attribute an Almighty Power to thoſe illuſtrious Heroes, whom they entitled after their Deaths, Gods, or Demi-Gods, though they paid them that religious Homage which ſeemed due only to the ſupreme Being; but they imagin'd, that when ſuch great Men were become Gods, Demons, or Genii, by Deification, which was much like our Church's Canonization, they were the Agents or Subſtitutes of the Deity, to whom they preſented the Vows and Prayers of Men, and that their Mediation was infinitely agreeable to him. They likewiſe look'd upon thoſe bleſſed Genii, as Governors or Superintendants of Provinces, and were perſuaded that all thoſe who had a Share in the Honours of the Court of Heaven, indiſputably took into their Protection the States and Kingdoms of the Earth, the Fortune of Mankind, their Employments and Profeſſions, &c. The ſame Opinion, or ſomething very like it, prevails amongſt the modern Pagans; for which Reaſon both the one and the other have conſecrated Images and Statues to them, and paid them the ſame Honours as thoſe which are paid to the Images of our Saints. The Antients burnt Tapers and Lamps before them, [c] carried them in Proceſſion, and wore them out moſt devoutly with their Kiſſes. Cicero, in one of his Orations againſt Verres, obſerves, that the conſtant Kiſſes of the Devotees had worn away the Beard and Mouth of an old Hercules of [d] Agrigentum.

[a] He was formerly repreſented in the Form of a Lamb, with one Foot before the Croſs, or of a Shepherd with a Lamb on his Shoulders.

[b] This Manner of painting the Holy Ghoſt is very antient, and even the Euchariſt was formerly kept in a Box made in the Faſhion of a Dove. In ſhort, the Cuſtom of painting the Saints with certain Appurtenances, which denote their Functions or Qualities was likewiſe practiſed by the Heathens in the Repreſentation of their Gods. Mercury, Apollo, Æſculapius, Diana, Minerva, Hercules, and Bacchus, are all Inſtances of it. At this Time St. Anthony's Fire ſhews his Love of God; the Hog at his Feet, his trampling upon, and deſpiſing all ſenſual Enjoyments; the Bell denotes his Diligence in Prayer, the Letter Tau the Croſs of Chriſt. St. Chriſtopher's gigantic Stature ſhews a Chriſtian's Strength; the Infant which he carries, the Love of the Son of God; the River he is paſſing, the Torrent of Afflictions. Many ſuch Examples are to be ſeen in Caſal. de Sacr. vet. Chriſt. Rit. in Molanus's Hiſtory of Holy Images, in the Lives of the Saints by Giry, and in ſeveral other Writers.

[c] The Eaſt Indians likewiſe carry the Images of Eſtwara and Wiſtnou in Proceſſion.

[d] A Town in Sicily, now Gergenti.

Nay,

Vol. 2.

REPRESENTATION of two famous Shrouds.

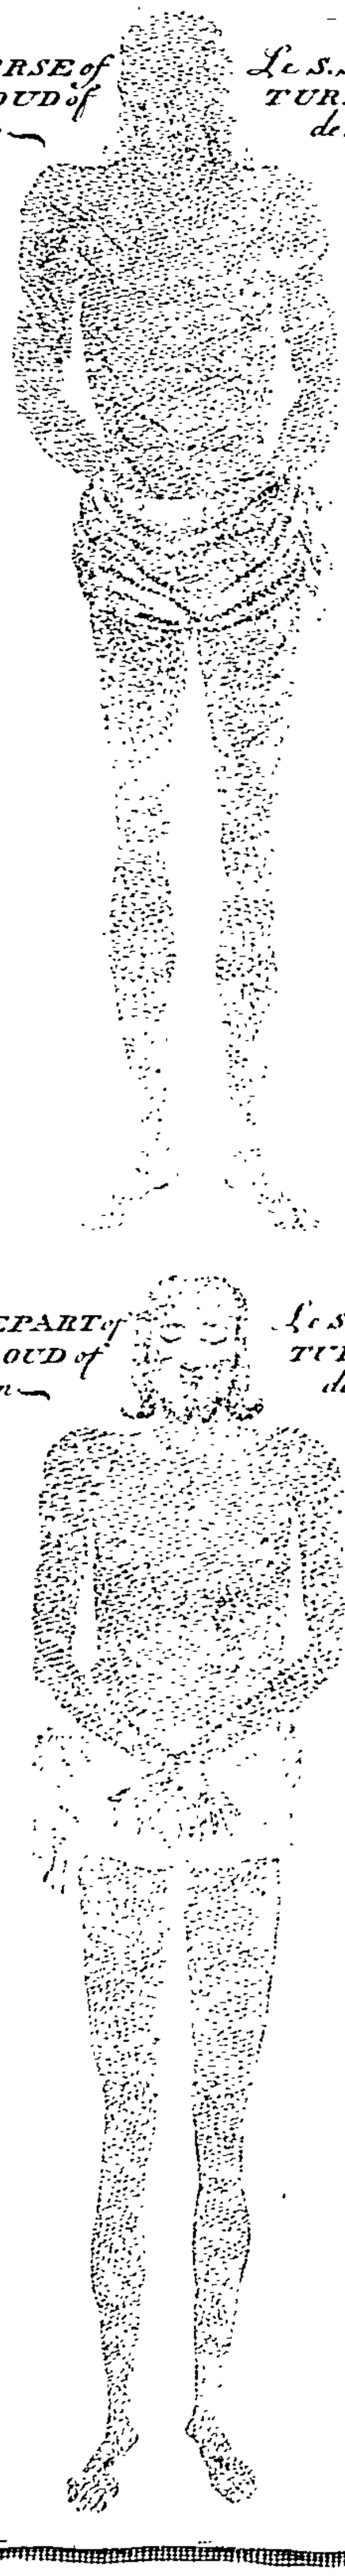

FIGURE des deux FAMEUX SUAIRES.

The HOLY SHROUD of BEZANÇON.

Le S. SUAIRE de BEZANÇON.

The REVERSE of the H. SHROUD of Turin.

Le S. SUAIRE de TURIN vu par derriere.

The FOREPART of the H. SHROUD of Turin.

Le S. SUAIRE de TURIN vu par devant.

Rome 1722.

C. Du. Bosc. ex

Nay, their Devotion frequently hurried them on to kiſs every Thing that belonged to the Saint, or was any Part of his Equipage. Such Bigots may aptly enough be compared to a Country Gentleman, newly come to Town, who pays a Part of the Complement he intended for the Maſter, upon the Porter that attends his Door.

THERE are but few Chriſtians who are Strangers to the Miracles and wondrous Effects of the Images of our Saints, whereof we ſhall give the Reader ſome Inſtances. The Image of JESUS CHRIST, which an impious Wretch had ſtabbed with his Dagger, feeling the Blow, laid its Hand upon the Wound: This Image is famous at Naples: But [a] that of our Lady, made by St. Luke, the celebrated Painter and Evangeliſt, is no leſs remarkable; and it is likewiſe reported that the Angels have frequently ſung the Litanies round her. The Image of St. Catharine of Sienna has often driven away Devils, and wrought ſeveral other extraordinary Miracles. Our Lady of Lucca, being treated after a very inſolent Manner by a Soldier (who threw Stones at her, and had like to have broken the Head of the young Jeſus, which ſhe held in her Right Arm; ſet the Child in a Moment on her Left; and the Child liked that Situation ſo well, that, ſince that Accident, he has never changed it. It would be tedious, if not impertinent, here to give the Hiſtory of ſeveral other miraculous Images, ſince there are entire Books written upon this Topic; nor will it be leſs trifling to obſerve to the Reader, that the Heathens, long before Chriſtianity, attributed the Power of working Miracles to the Images of their Gods and Heroes. Livy, that ingenious Legendary of Paganiſm, has thought proper to embelliſh his Hiſtory with an infinite Number of Miracles and Prodigies, amongſt which many are wrought by Pagan Images and Idols: And Cicero himſelf, who was not over credulous, frequently tells us of ſuch Religious Wonders. As for Inſtance, the [b] ſweating of Statues, &c. To conclude, the Mahometans, Pagans, and modern Jews have determined not to loſe ſo valuable a Privilege: [c] For they have their Miracles too; and thoſe too which are moſt difficult in the Operation.

The HOLY SHROWD.

IF the Croſs, which was ſanctified by the Sufferings of our bleſſed Saviour, requires the Veneration and Eſteem of all Chriſtians; if it be [d] allowable for them to make their Applications to the holy Croſs in the ſame Manner as to Chriſt crucified, the ſacred Shrowd has, no doubt, a Right to expect the ſame Veneration. This directly touched the Redeemer of Mankind, and wrapped up his Body in the Sepulchre, whilſt his Soul deſcended into Hell to triumph over the Grave, and redeem ſuch as expected the coming of the Meſſiah. The Prayer to St. Veronica, which we have mentioned before, is con-

[a] Now at Rome in the Paulin Chapel.

[b] Lib. I. De Divinatione, he ſays, That the Statues of Apollo at Cumæ, and of Victoria at Capua ran down with Sweat. It is obſervable, that Cicero puts this Story into his Brother's Mouth, whom he introduces in this Book, and confutes in the ſecond.

[c] With this Difference, That, amongſt the Mahometans and Jews, they are aſcribed neither to Statues nor Images, both being unlawful.

[d] St. Thomas Sum. Theol. 3. p. 9. 5. Art. 4. expreſſes himſelf after this Manner: They who ſhall read the Concluſion of a Paragraph in the ſixteenth Chapter of Cardinal Bona's Pſalmody, will look upon all he ſays to the Croſs as a Poetical Rapture: But ſure thoſe, and ſuch other Expreſſions, are never to be taken in a ſtrict Senſe; nay, it would be very ill-natured and unkind ſhould any one do ſo. It is ſcarcely to be imagined, that any Chriſtian, upon the leaſt Reflection, can be perſuaded, that two Pieces of Wood, made in the Form of a Croſs, are able to ſave him; who makes his Addreſs to them for that Purpoſe, as Cardinal Bona does in the following Terms,

Salva nos tremendo tuo
Signaculo munitos.

But it may be ſaid, that he who ſhall make his Applications to a Piece of Wood of the true Croſs, and at the ſame Time touches it, will infallibly feel the good Effects of it; it being to be preſumed, that the Particles flying off from the Wood to which Chriſt was faſtned, will have the ſame Influence over a Man's Body, as the Load-ſtone has over the Needle.

ceived in the Words following, [a] O bleſſed Figure, be thou our Guide, that we may ſee the Face of Jeſus Chriſt; with much more Reaſon then may we ſay to the holy Shrowd, [b] Preſerve us, O divine Likeneſs of Jeſus Chriſt, the Reſemblance of the Father, who is unchangeable. To thee we direct our Prayers as to an intelligent Being, &c.

THERE are two celebrated Shrowds in Europe, that of Bezancon, and that of Turin; Chifflet has obliged the Public with the Hiſtory of them both, and [c] pretends that the former was brought from Paleſtine, in the Time of the Cruſades, about the Beginning of the twelfth Century; and the Cuſtom of ſhewing it unto the People has been continued almoſt ever ſince. The ſame Author has extracted this Ceremony from an antient Ritual; and 'tis performed after the following Manner. At the Matins on the Feſtival of Eaſter, three Canons walking out of the Chapel, ſing as they go to the high Altar, Who is he that ſhall remove the Stone from the Sepulchre? At the ſame Time, ſeveral Boys dreſſed like Angels meet them, and ask, Whom ſeek ye? To whom they anſwer, Jeſus of Nazareth; whereupon the Angels reply, He is not here. Then the Chanter addreſſes himſelf in the following Terms to the firſt of the three Canons; Tell us, O Mary, what thou haſt ſeen in the way: I have ſeen, ſays the Canon, the Sepulchre of Chriſt who liveth, and the Glory of him who is raiſed from the Dead. The ſecond adds; I have ſeen the Angels who are Witneſſes of the Reſurrection; I have ſeen the holy Shrowd; and at the ſame Time ſhews it, as alſo the other Clothes; the third Canon at the ſame Time confirms the Sanctity of the Ceremony, by theſe Words; Jeſus Chriſt our Hope is riſen. The Choir confeſs the Truth of our Saviour's Reſurrection thus: It is much better to believe the Teſtimony of Mary, than the Impoſtures of the Jews: We know that Chriſt is riſen from the Dead. This Act of Devotion ends with ſinging the Te Deum.

THE Shrowd of Bezancon is famous for the Miracles it has wrought. It has even raiſed the Dead, and this Reſurrection, which happened in the fourteenth Century, conſiderably encreaſed its Reputation. The Church of St. Stephen, where this ſacred Relic was kept, was ſoon found too ſmall. The vaſt Croud of Devotees, which flocked in from all Quarters to ſee it, obliged them to erect a wooden Theatre before the Church, and afterwards a Stone one, from whence it is expoſed to public View twice a Year, viz. Eaſter-Day, and the Sunday after Aſcenſion. [d] Chifflet in his Diſſertation has preſerved the Memory of the Miracles, which were performed by this Relic. It has ſeveral Times cured deſperate Diſtempers, reſtored the Blind to Sight, put a Stop to the Plague; nay, the very Images of this holy Relic have wrought miraculous Cures, if we may depend upon the Veracity of the Author before-mentioned.

THE Society of the holy Shrowd of Bezancon was inſtituted upon a deſtructive Plague, from which this Relic, as we are informed, delivered the City in 1544. The Members go in Proceſſion every third of May, to the Church and Cloiſter of St. Stephen, and carry it in Form in a Silver Casket. The principal Magiſtrates of the Town aſſiſt at this Solemnity. Pope Gregory XIII. granted extraordinary Privileges to the Altar of this holy Relic in the Year 1579. By his Bull we are aſſured, that all ſuch Souls for whom Maſs ſhall be ſaid at this Altar, ſhall obtain Indulgences in the other World; and ſhall be delivered from the Torments of Purgatory, through the Merits of JESUS CHRIST, the bleſſed Virgin, and the Apoſtles St. Peter and Paul.

[a] O felix figura, deduc nos ad videndam faciem quæ eſt Chriſti pura.

[b] Chifflet concludes his little Treatiſe. De linteis Sepulchralibus Chriſti, with this Prayer to the holy Shrowd of Bezancon, O divina ſimilitudo ejus, quæ mutari non poteſt, patris ſimilitudinis —— tecum loquor, tanquam cum re animatâ —— conſerva eum qui piè nobis imperat, &c.

[c] De lint. Sepulchral. c. 9.

[d] Ibid.

THAT

The BENEDICTION of the SACERDOTAL ROBES. | BENEDICTION des HABITS SACERDOTAUX | The BENEDICTION of a New CROSS. | BENEDICTION d'une nouvelle CROIX

The ADORATION of the Said CROSS. | L'ADORATION de la dite CROIX. | The BENEDICTION of ye Expository for ye B. Sacrament. | BENEDICTION du SOLEIL.

B. Picart. del. C. Du Bosc. exc.

The BENEDICTION of a WARRIOR. | BENEDICTION d'un HOMME de GUERRE | The BENEDICTION of MARHAL COLOURS. | BENEDICTION d'un DRAPEAU.

THAT of Turin falls nothing ſhort of the other: This likewiſe was brought from Jeruſalem, the Hiſtory whereof may be ſeen in Chifflet. He informs us, that, after two or three Times changing its Situation, it fixed at laſt at Turin, in the Chapel of the holy Shrowd, which is within the Cathedral. This Relic is as noted as the other for its Miracles. Its very Preſence only delivered ſome that were poſſeſſed in 1534; and if the Father of a certain Child who ſaw his Son drowning had not [a] invoked its Aid and Aſſiſtance, the Youth had been inevitably loſt. It is expoſed to public View on the fourth of May, being its Feſtival, which was inſtituted by Julius II. in 1506 [b]. The ſame Pope eſtabliſhed a Society in honour of this ſacred Relic, to comply with the Devotion of Duke Charles and Chriſt's Claude his Mother. He added Indulgences [c] for ſuch as ſhould viſit its Chapel, and pay their Devotion, there on ſtated Days.

BESIDES theſe two Shrowds, there is one depoſited in the Church of St. Cornelius at Compeigne. There are three others, as we are informed at Rome; one at Milan, one at Lisbon, and one at Aix la Chapelle; moſt of them known by the Name of Veronica. There are likewiſe two others in this laſt City; one called the Holy Garment, in which Joſeph of Arimathea wrapped the Body of our bleſſed Saviour, when he put him into the Sepulchre; the other, which they particularly call the Holy Handkerchief, is that which Face was cover'd with, [d] and which St. Peter, as they ſay, found in a ſeparate Place from the other Veſtments, as an infallible Teſtimony that Chriſt was riſen.

The BENEDICTION of the PONTIFICAL ROBES, &c.

THIS Benediction cannot be performed but by a Biſhop, unleſs he conſents that a Prieſt ſhall officiate in his Stead; but whoever performs it, he muſt be dreſs'd in a Surplice, with the Stole over it, of a Colour ſuitable to the Day. The Benediction differs in no Reſpect from any of the foregoing, and is given by the Light of Tapers, with the ſprinkling of Holy-Water, and a few Prayers which may be ſeen in the Ritual. All the Robes from the Mitre down to the Sandals receive the ſame Benediction.

WE ſhall take no Notice of what is peculiar in the Benediction of the Altar-Cloths, and other Linnen appropriated for the Altar, till we come to the Dedication of it. Neither ſhall we mention what is peculiar in the Bleſſing of the Corporals, and Tabernacles, the Pyx and Ciborium, and laſtly, of the Veſſels for the holy Oils. Anointing, and making the Sign of the Croſs with the Chriſm, are added to the Benediction [e] of the Paten and Chalice, after which they are both rubbed with the Crumb of Bread.

As to the Benediction of thoſe who are appointed for the holy War, ſuch as Knights, &c. and the Bleſſing of Standards, Colours, &c. all which are repreſented in the Print hereunto annexed; the following Circumſtances in it are the moſt remarkable. When the Biſhop [f] bleſſes the new [g] Warrior, he gives him a Sword, bleſſed before by his Lordſhip,

[a] Vidit periculum infelix pater, O ſancta ſindon, ait, ſerva me. Ibid.

[b] The Shrowd was then at Chamberg. The Plague which raged in Italy 1578. was the Cauſe of its being brought to Turin. Duke Emanuel Philibert, who had it tranſlated, promiſed to reſtore it to the People of Chamberg: Yet neither he nor his Succeſſors ever performed that Promiſe; and the Savoyards complain, that their Country has been expoſed to great Calamities ever ſince it has been removed. The Mule which carried the ſacred Relic, and would not ſtir one Step beyond the Gate of Chamberg, is a manifeſt Proof of the Right the Inhabitants have to it. Vide Chifflet, Ibid.

[c] Omnibus fidelibus, certis diebus ſanctam capellam viſentibus, in eâque orantibus indulgentias quaſdam largitas. Chifflet, Ib.

[d] Vide A ſmall Treatiſe entitled Prone des Saintes Reliques, which the Provoſt of the Church of Notre Dame gives to the Devotees who come to viſit the Relics: See likewiſe Chifflet's Works before-mentioned.

[e] Piſcara Praxis Cerem. Lib. II. c. ii.

[f] Or the Pope. This Benediction is taken out of the Roman Ceremonial.

[g] We here tranſlate the Word Miles, Soldier or Warrior, which is its genuine Signification, although it has ſince been rendred by the Term Knight. Such as know the Origin of Knights, will not think it ſtrange that we tranſlate Miles Soldier.

by

by the ſprinkling of Holy-Water. In giving him the Sword, he exhorts him to employ it againſt the Enemies of the Church, and the true Religion; in Defence of Widows, Orphans, &c. Then it is ſheath'd in the Scabbard, and the Biſhop himſelf girds it upon him. The Soldier, who is all this while upon his Knees, then gets up, draws it, flouriſhes it thrice in the Air, and brings it over his Left Arm. The Biſhop, this Goſpel-Hero, whoſe only Weapons are the Croſs and the Breviary, then manfully takes the material Sword, and gives him who is to be the Wearer of it, three gentle Blows, and admoniſhes him to be a [a] peaceful Soldier. After this, his Lordſhip ſheaths the Sword, gives the Novice a gentle Stroke with it, exhorts him to [b] watch; and, laſtly, gives him the Kiſs of Peace. The Fellow-Soldiers of this new Spiritual Combatant put on his Spurs. The Biſhop orders an [c] Anthem to be ſung, after which he riſes from his Seat, and a ſecond Time gives his Benediction to him whom he has conſecrated for the War; who kiſſes his Lordſhip's Hand, takes off his Sword and Spurs, and then goes home in Peace.

STANDARDS and Arms are conſecrated by the Sign of the Croſs, and the Aſperſion of Holy-Water. We ſhall refer the Bleſſing of Water, Salt, and Incenſe, to the Conſecration of Churches. Every one knows, that, before the Sacrifice of the Maſs, [d] the People are ſprinkled with this Water. It is likewiſe poured on the Altar, on ſuch as are Sick and at the Point of Death, on dead Bodies in Church-Yards, and on the Tombs of the Deceaſed. To conclude, the Devotees never fail to keep ſome of it in their Houſes for their own private Uſe, as a Charm againſt Thunder, and Storms, and to keep off the direful Effects reſulting from the Malice of the Devils, who are concerned, for the generality, in the Agitation of the Air. There is nothing ſingular in the Benediction of Tapers.

The PRONE, or HOMILY.

THE Prone, or Homily, is too conſiderable a Part of the Service to be here omitted. Under the Word Prone, Alet's Ritual tells us, we are to include the Inſtruction which is given to the People, relating to what is neceſſary for Salvation; the Prayers of the Church in a peculiar Manner for the Faithful; the Publication of Feſtivals, Faſts, Bans of Matrimony, Holy Orders, Marriages, and other Things concerning the Diſcipline of the Church. The Prone follows the Goſpel, becauſe this Part of divine Service is particularly intended for the Explication of the Myſteries of Religion, and the ſacred Scriptures.

AFTER the Goſpel, the Curate, whoſe Province it is to pronounce the Prone, having bowed to the Altar, goes to the Bottom of the Steps by the Epiſtle-Side, then takes off his Chaſuble and Maniple, puts on his Cap, kneels down on the Middle of the laſt Step of the Altar, and there begs of God to give a Bleſſing to the Duty he is about to perform. He then goes to the Pulpit; but if there be none, performs the Prone ſtanding with his Cap, on at the Entrance of the Nave: But whether in the Pulpit or not, he muſt be viſible to the [e] Congregation, and be in ſome Place where he may be heard by [a] Eſto miles pacificus.

[b] Exciteris a ſummo.
[c] It begins thus, Specioſus formâ, &c. Thou art the faireſt among Men, gird thy Sword upon thy Thigh, O thou moſt Mighty.
[d] At the Entrance into all Churches there ſtands Holy-Water, in Veſſels called Benitiers, Holy-Water-Pots; a Practice originally Pagan, but ſince made Part of the Chriſtian Religion.
[e] Not to enter too far into the Depths of Learning, in order to examine whether all ſuch of the Antients, who ſpoke in Public, always choſe ſome Eminence for the Theatre of their Eloquence; or whether, for want of Desks and Pulpits, they mounted upon Turfs, or Benches, rather than to ſtand upon the ſame Gronnd with thoſe they harangued; I ſay, without entring into ſuch Enquiries, it muſt be agreed, that all Orators ſhould be ſeen by their Audience, which cannot be done without they are raiſed above them. This is the Original of Pulpits and Theatres. In the firſt Ages of the Church, the Biſhop inſtructed the People ſitting or ſtanding in a Pulpit, ſet apart for himſelf alone. The by them. Before the Inſtruction he bows to the Croſs, and croſſes [a] himſelf. Then he bows to the Chief of the Congregation and the People. In Italy the Angelic Salutation [b] precedes the Exordium of the Lecture, in France comes after it. If the Curate or Preacher, whilſt the Inſtruction is reading, or the Diſcourſe repeating, pronounces the Name of Jeſus or Mary, he takes off his Cap and bows. [c] In Italy he obſerves the ſame Ceremony whenever the reigning Pope is named. The Inſtruction and Sermon both conclude with the Curate's Benediction to the People; but if he preaches before his Biſhop, or a ſuperior Clergyman, he asks his Bleſſing before he begins.

THE Cuſtom is to preach uncovered before the Biſhop, or the holy Sacrament, when it is ſolemnly depoſited on the Altar. The Angelic Salutation is never uſed on Good Friday; but inſtead thereof the Preacher [d] addreſſes himſelf, on his Knees, in a Prayer to the Croſs, which is on the Altar, or on the Desk of the Pulpit. After Sermon, he expoſes the Image of the Crucifix to public View, and has at ſuch a Time two Acolytes in their Surplices, on each Side one, with burning Tapers in their Hands. There are ſeveral other Particulars on this Head, which may be met with in the Rituals, more proper for a Curate's Peruſal than any other Perſon's.

As to the external Deportment of the Preacher, and the Character of the Sermons of thoſe who preach, everyBody knows, we do not now live in the Age of the Barelettes and Menots. There are none of thoſe fanatic extravagant Preachers now amongſt us, who ſupplied the [e] Author of Herodotus's Apology with ſuch a Number of Buffooneries. France has cleared itſelf of ſuch Rubbiſh; or, ſuppoſing there may be ſome Country Curates ridiculous or clowniſh enough to fall into the Exceſſes we have already mentioned, yet the Bourdaloues, Maſſillons, Cheminais's, and all thoſe other excellent Divines, now diſperſed over all Parts of the Kingdom, would undeniably demonſtrate how contemptible thoſe abject and unworthy Wretches are, who make the Goſpel the Laughing-Stock and Deriſion of the diſſolute and profane. The Decrees of the Councils preſcribe an Apoſtolical Gravity to thoſe who preach, and prohibit every Thing that is inconſiſtent with that Decorum which becomes a Paſtor. Italy, however, has not as yet been able to conform to this Decency, ſo requiſite to add a Weight and Sanction to Religion. Not only their Sermons are full of little Witticiſms, Conundrums, and cold Alluſions; but their whole Deportment is like that of a Dancing-Maſter. They are extravagant in their Geſtures, make a Noiſe with their Hands and Feet, rowl their Eyes, and caper about with an immoderate and ridiculous Activity, from one End of the [f] Pulpit to the

The Preacher often ſtood upon the Steps of the Altar, Several curious Remarks on this Topic are to be met with in Ferrarius de Ritu Veteris Eccleſiæ Concionum, Lib. III. The Engliſh Editor thinks proper to inform the Reader, that this Argument of Pulpit's is moſt learnedly and accurately handled in Dean Swift's Tale of a Tub.

[a] It apears from a Paſſage of Corippus, a Poet, who was Contemporary with the Emperor Juſtinian, that Chriſtian Princes always began their Diſcourſes in Public with croſſing themſelves. The Doctors of the Church did the ſame in their Diſputes againſt Heretics and Infidels; perhaps to drive away the Devil, whom the Pope exorciſes in the Perſon of ſuch as he reconciles to the Church.

[b] Baudry Manuale Cerem. The Cuſtom of repeating the Angelic Salutation before the Sermon is not very antient, if, as Ferrarius in the before-mentioned Treatiſe obſerves, St. Vincent Ferrier, who lived at the Beginning of the fifteenth Century, was the firſt who took Notice of, or inſtituted it. It is thought that the Blaſphemies and Hereſies againſt the Virgin Mary, the Fruits of theſe latter Ages, gave Birth to it; tho' Eraſmus attributes it to a much leſs ſerious Original; for he inſiſts, that it was introduced to curry Favour with the Fair Sex, in Imitation of the Heathen Poets, who invoked the Muſes at the Exordium of their Poems. Anciently Care was taken to proclaim Silence before Sermon begun, which was the Dean's Office, and the ſame was obſerved in the Jewiſh Church before the reading the ſacred Scriptures. One of the Heathen Forms on theſe Occaſions was Favete Linguis. According to Ferrarius, the Church of Milan, to this Day, retain the antient Manner of commanding Silence in Pontifical Maſſes. The Orator or Preacher often commanded the Aſſembly's Silence, by waving his Hand. We ſhall not enter into a Detail of thoſe Signs, which were made in a different Manner; but ſhall rather obſerve, that ſome Leſſons out of the Scripture went antiently, as well as now-a-Days, before the Inſtruction to the People, or the Diſcourſe we call the Sermon. The Jews have always followed the ſame Rule, as well as all Chriſtian Congregations, except the Quakers, as ſhall be obſerved in a more proper Place.

[c] Piſcara. Prax. Cerem. Lib. II. Sect. 2. Cap. vi.

[d] O Crux, ave, ſpes unica, hoc paſſionis, tempore, &c.

[e] Henry Stevens.

[f] In Italy the Pulpits are very long, and proportionably wide.

other. " Their fineſt Sermons, ſays a celebrated [a] Traveller, ſpeaking of the Italian " ones, are thoſe that raiſe the moſt Laughter; and every Order of Monks has its " particular Manner." This Traveller is pretty favourable to the Jeſuits, but as to the Capuchins, " They always thunder, adds he, and never preach but on tremendous Sub- " jects, when it is not a Day devoted to Buffoonery .... They lay hold of their Beards, " clap their Hands, and ſcream enough to fright the whole Congregation, &c..... The " other Day I heard a Carmelite, who was preaching on the Topic of Mary Magdalen, " to the Penitents of the Holy Croſs, and gave a Looſe to his roving Imagination. In " order to raiſe a more exalted Idea of the generous Contempt which his Penitent had " ſhown of the Pomps and Vanities of this wicked World, he ſpent a whole Quarter " of an Hour in repreſenting her as one of the moſt aimable Creatures under the " Copes of Heaven. Not one agreeable Feature in the moſt regular Beauty was omit- " ted, and he talked more like an accompliſh'd Painter than a Divine."

THE Angelic Salutation, as we have already obſerved, precedes the Sermons of the Italian Preachers, after which they take their Text, and if they enter immediately upon the Subject ariſing from it, it is after a very irregular Method, and for the moſt Part without any Manner of Connection. Their Sermons, however, are moſt commonly divided into two Parts; the firſt, indeed, is the more ſerious of the two, and abounds with ſcholaſtic Divinity, which is enough to lull a Frenchman preſently to ſleep; after which there [b] is a Collection for the Poor. The ſecond Part is wholly ludicrous, frequently nothing but a Rhapſody of Tales and Stories, relating to the other World, and tends more to the Diverſion than Edification of the People, unleſs ſo inſipid an Entertainment can be called inſtructive.

THERE are ſeldom any Sermons in Italy, except in the Time of Advent and Lent; but at thoſe Times God only knows what Preparations are made by theſe Preachers ſeveral Months beforehand, to [c] diſplay their Eloquence in all its Luſtre; and, indeed, theſe Labourers in the Goſpel reap a moſt plenteous Harveſt. At all other Times there are but few, if any, Sermons preach'd in the Pariſh-Churches, and nothing is performed but the Office, and the Maſſes ſung in Muſic. The Friars preach in their Convents, upon ſuch Subjects as may properly enough be called everlaſting; for they very ſeldom loſe Sight of their Founders, or of ſome particular Cuſtoms which they are fond of; ſuch as the Roſary, the Scapulary, and St. Francis's Girdle.

IN ſome of their Cities there are itinerant Preachers. We are inform'd by ſuch as have heard them, that they imitate in a great Meaſure your Jugglers and Emperics, in their Way of dealing out Goſpel-Truths in their Diſcourſes, [d] of which they make a kind of Sale to the People, after they have cook'd them up with their Buffooneries, according to the Cuſtom of common Quacks. A Friar, with a large Crucifix carried before him, and a little Bell, mounts into a moveable Roſtrum, in order to vend his

[a] Miſſon. Travels to Italy.

[b] This is likewiſe the Way in the Proteſtant Churches in Holland; the Preacher ſtops to exhort his Audience to Charity; the Deacons go from Row to Row with Purſes tied to long Poles, at which there is a ſmall Bell, to waken ſuch as pretend to be aſleep, or really are ſo.

[c] Se ne viene in coteſta Città, ſays Loredano, il Padre Girolamo Olivi a far pompa d'Eloquenza nel corſo quadrageſimale.

[d] They traffic with theſe Truths, as a Quack-Doctor with his Orvietan, and often rob them of ſome of their Patients. Theſe Preachers, methinks, might be compared to the Mimes and Pantomimes of the old Romans, and their Sermons to their Attellani. It is well known, that the Mimes did not ſpare their very Gods in their Farces, nor the Pantomimes in their Poſtures; and that the Pagan Theology was turned into Ridicule by the Attellani. 'Tis very probable the Arlequinades of the Italian Monks is a Relic of that antient Taſte. But as to the Cuſtom of preaching in the public Streets or Markets, it was practiſed among the antient Jews, as appears by Chriſt himſelf. A Sermon preached in the open Market ſo affected the Heart of St. Nicolas Tolentinus, that, to do Juſtice to Truth, which he had all his Life-Time loved, he was canoniſed after his Death. The Tree which ſerved St. Anthony of Padua for a Pulpit, is now ſhewn near Padua.

Wares,

Wares, which are as deſtructive to the Soul, as the ſophiſticated Drugs of a Quack-Doctor are to the Body.

THE Spaniſh and Portugueſe Divines preach the Goſpel at leaſt in as particular a Manner as the Italians. "These, ſays the Author of the Delices de l'Eſpagne, preach "in the public Squares and high Streets; and, if they have any Skill or Genius at all, "never fail of a numerous Audience. Their Method is ſomewhat different from that of "other Nations; they particularly aim at affecting the Hearts of Sinners, and to that "End take extraordinary Pains, and every now and then ſmite their Breaſts or Faces, "and the whole Congregation follow their Example. Some reſerve their grand Ex-"clamations for the Concluſion of their Sermons, and they who can command the "moſt Tears are thought the moſt excellent Preachers." What follows is the Fragment of a Sermon, which was made on Eaſter Sunday by a Portugueſe Divine, as given us by M. Dellon in [a] his Travels, and is very remarkable. "You know (ſaid he, after "making the Sign of the Croſs) that this Day's Sermon is appointed for three Ends: "The firſt to wiſh my Auditors a happy Eaſter; and, Gentlemen, in order to comply "with this Duty, I wiſh you all the Bleſſings and Proſperity imaginable theſe holy "Days: The ſecond is, to demand my Eaſter Eggs, a Preſent which is cuſtomarily "ſent to the Preacher at the Cloſe of Lent; and to the due Performance of this Arti-"cle I muſt exhort you..... To conclude, Gentlemen, the third and laſt Reaſon is, "you are ſenſible, to amuſe my Audience, who are too much caſt down perhaps, and "afflicted, with the Auſterities and Mortifications which they have practiſed during "Lent. In order to ſucceed in this Particular, I am to tell you, that Yeſterday Morn-"ing..... I met tun-bellied Gregory, who did not appear to me to have faſted at all, "&c." Such an inſipid Diſcourſe ſure muſt rather excite the People's Compaſſion for the Preacher, than their good Humour; but this may poſſibly be copied from the Curate of *Coligna*c's, or M. Dellon, being exaſperated at his ill Treatment for a long Time, in the Priſon of the Inquiſition, has carried Things in all Probability too far.

As to the Voice and Geſture of the Preacher, they are not the proper Buſineſs of a Work of this Nature; and yet Cuſtom and Faſhion have a Share even in this. In France they formerly coughed by Rule, in ſome particular Places of their Sermons; which Cough, though doubtleſs not Ciceronian, is noted as a Perfection in the Sermons of Olivier Maillard, an eminent Preacher of the fifteenth Century. We ſhall ſay nothing [b] of the French and Latin, which were interſpers'd by Turns in their oratorial Diſcourſes. Rabelais has very agreeably rallied [c] both the Cough and this laſt Medley, in the impertinent Harangue he puts into the Mouth of his Janotus de Bragmardo. Alluſions, Points of Wit, and Antitheſes, have been in Vogue; looſe incoherent Diſcourſes have had their Turn; a falſe and extravagant Pathos, attended with odd fantaſtic Geſtures, has been cried up; Burleſque and comic Rants, rather than Chriſtian Flights, were able to afflict the Hearts of our Anceſtors; but now all theſe Whims are contemn'd, and fallen to the Share of the Capuchins. A plain familiar Inſtruction, or a Leſſon from the Goſpel, attended with ſome Reflections in a plain Stile, without being low or ſervile, would have a better Effect, if the Ear were not tired with what was uniform; and it is this Diſtaſte which opens a Way for the Faſhion; which, however, is frequently improv'd by the Preacher's Ambition, whoſe principal Motives to Elocution, as well as to the Pains which he takes in the Converſion of Souls, are his Reputation and Eſtabliſhment in the World.

[a] Tom. I. p. 459. Ed. of 1709. printed at Paris, though in the Title Page 'tis mention'd at Cologne.

[b] This Practice was continued at the End of the ſixteenth Century, as may be ſeen in the Sermons of Maitre Jean Boucher, a famous Partiſan of the League. There is not only Latin but Greek too in them.

[c] Book I. Chap. xviii.

THE

THE Devotion of the Audience likewiſe has a ſtrong Tincture of Faſhion and Cuſtom in it; although this ſame Faſhion, indeed, will never in all Probability become univerſal, ſince Mankind cannot find out the Secret of reconciling the Art of fearing God, with that of making their Fortune. There are Countries, however, we ſee, where the People ſafely, and without being called to any Account, mingle Devotion and Paſſion together. Strict and faithful Obſervers of the eſtabliſh'd Cuſtoms! according to which, they who follow the Ordinances of the Church are eſteemed good Chriſtians, though in other Reſpects they either wound or devoutly poiſon their Enemies. The Prieſts themſelves, having finiſh'd their Devotions, haſten to teſtify their Complaiſance and Gallantry to ſome Signora. On the other Hand, Devotion is not cuſtomary where Freedom of Opinions is eſtabliſhed; but becomes ſo whenever a decay'd diſſolute Prince takes it into his Head to make a Reformation. A Prince that affects Devotion, and fills his Palace with Croſſes, Breviaries, and Roſaries; that gives Audience to no Body till he has ſaid his Prayers before ſome Shrine, nor ſigns any Orders till he has ſigned himſelf with the Croſs, and ſprinkled himſelf with holy Water, ſoon finds his Court grow moſt holy, at leaſt in all outward Appearance, though 'tis in Reality perhaps extremely vicious, their Devotion being the Reſult of Complaiſance or Imitation. Examples of what we here advance are eaſily to be met with in private Families. The Maſter of a Houſe, who has no other Recreation than what he finds in his Piety, is ſure to make his Houſe a Nurſery of Devotees. A Family brought up to look with Horror and Deteſtation on every one that bears any Relation to this World, moſt charitably condemns all thoſe who ſhew any Concern for the Things that belong to it. They paſs all the Time they can poſſibly ſpare from their Buſineſs in Maſſes and Prayers, and, as if the Bulk of each devout Implement was really [a] inſtrumental to their Devotion, their Prayer-Books, their Chaplets, their Crucifixes, and, in ſhort, their whole ghoſtly Equipage, are of a larger Size than thoſe of others; but as their Piety is in Reality no more than a Habit, accordingly it falls infinitely ſhort of that of the moſt lukewarm Chriſtian.

A Deſcription of the ALTAR, and of ſuch Precautions as are requiſite for the keeping it in due Order.

THE Deſcriptions which we have already given of the Pope's Chapel, Maſſes, Croſſes, &c. demand an Account likewiſe of [b] the Altar, after which we ſhall proceed to Churches.

THE Altar [c] muſt be made of Stone, according to the ſacred Canons, as the Intention of it is to repreſent Chriſt, who is the Foundation-Stone of the ſpiritual Building, which [a] Rabelais has given us a genuine and humourous Deſcription of theſe falſe Devotees, in the Character of his Gargantua. "After a good Breakfaſt, he went to Church, and they carried to him in a great Basket, a huge Breviary, weighing in Greaſe, Claſps, Parchment, and Cover, near one hundred and ſix Pounds, little more or leſs. "There he heard ſix and twenty or thirty Maſſes: This while, to the ſame Place came his Matin-Mumbler, muffled "up about the Chin, round as a Hoop, and his Breath pretty well antidoted with Vine-Tree Syrup. With him "he mumbled all his Kyrie's with ſo great Nicety, that there was omitted not ſo much as one of them. As he "went from Church, they brought him, upon a Dray drawn by Oxen, a confuſed Heap of Pater Noſters of Sancte "Claude, every one of the Bigneſs of a Hat-Block; and ſauntring along through the Cloiſters, Galleries, and Gardens, he riddled over more of them, than ſixteen Hermits would have done, Lib. I. Chap. xxi.

[b] Taken Word for Word from Piſcara, Prax. Cer. Lib. I. Sect. 3. Cap. i. Lib. II. Sect. 1. Cap i. Ed. of Venice in 1681.

[c] Cardinal Bona carries the Original of Altars very high, for he firmly believes, that Adam was the Inventor of them. Rerum Liturg. Lib. I. Cap. xx. It appears, they were eſtabliſhed among Chriſtians from the earlieſt Ages of the Church; but it is not known whether they were of Wood or Stone. The inventing the latter is aſcribed to St Sylveſter, but without good Proof.

is

is the Church of the Faithful. St. Charles Borromeo, a Saint of the first Order, has declared, that, for Want of Stone, it must be built at least of Brick: 'Tis the Bishop's Province to consecrate it. The Table of it must be one single Stone, and the Body must be filled up with Mason's Work, or supported by Pillars. There should be three Steps to go up to it, either of Stone or Brick, and covered with a Carpet. 'Tis the Clerk's Business to take care that the Table be covered with a Chrismal, that a fine Cloth, as white as possible, be laid upon it, that all Things, according to St. Paul's Command to the Corinthians, may be done with Decency and Order. All this must be observed with the greatest Exactness, with Respect to the high Altar, where Christ's Body is for the generality deposited; and two of the most able Clerks must be chosen, to adorn and take care of it, and must never approach it but in their Surplices. As soon as they approach it, they are to kneel down, adore the holy Sacrament, and say some few ejaculatory Prayers. When the Ornaments of the Altar are to be changed, these Rules are to be observed. Before the new ones are put on, the Cire-cloth, called the Chrismal, must be taken away, a Carpet must be spread upon the Fore-Part of the Altar, and the Table-Cloth, and other Linen that has been made use of, must be neatly folded, and locked up; and then the Clerks must take a Brush, and sweep off the Dust which happens to be upon the Altar. They must in the next Place put on the Antependium intended for it, according to the Day; and this must be so adjusted, as to form a Cross in the Middle, and three Table-Cloths must be laid over the Surface, one of them hanging down to the Ground all round about the Altar, and the two others not quite so long. The whole must be blessed, crossed, and sprinkled with holy Water. The same Formalities are to be observed with respect to the Tabernacle of the Altar, to the Pyx, the Box wherein the Host is locked up, and the Corporals on which they consecrate, &c. and, for [a] the Glory of God, peculiar Care must be taken, to provide every Thing of the greatest Value for the Decorations of the Altar.

We just now observ'd, that the Decorations were changed according to the Solemnity of the Day. Altars are likewise adorned with natural and artificial Flowers, according to the Season.

The Dust [b] must be swept off the Altar every Day, and the Carpets must be well dusted by the Clerks, at least once a Week. When the Clerk, whose Business it is to sweep the Pavement of the Presbyterium, approaches the holy Sacrament, he must be uncover'd.

The Tabernacle of the holy Sacrament is fix'd upon the Altar. Neither Gold, Silver, nor precious Stones are spared to adorn it, and the most splendid and magnificent Productions of Art contribute to its Lustre; but peculiar Care must be taken, that the Eucharist is not exposed to any Moisture. Tapers are set on the Right and Left Side of the Tabernacle, which must be made of white Wax, except at all Offices for the Dead, and the three last Days of Passion-Week, at which Times they are yellow. We have already taken notice of the Canopy.

There must be a Crucifix in Relievo on the Altar, neatly made, notwithstanding there is one upon the Tabernacle, and a Cross painted or carved on the Door of it. The Crucifix must be so placed, as that its Foot must be as high as the Top of the Candlesticks, and appear quite above them. It would be needless to inform the Reader, that it must be blessed as well as all the Crosses and Images. The Candlesticks must be of an Ecclesiastical Form, different from such as are made use of in private Houses.

[a] Piscara, Ibid.
[b] Id. Ibid.

THERE muſt likewiſe be what is called [a] the Te igitur, or Canon, upon the Altar, the Letters whereof muſt be written pretty large, and placed at the Foot of the Crucifix, that the Prieſt may read them without any Trouble.

WE ſhall paſs over the Cruets, the Baſon, the Napkin made uſe of at the Lavabo, after waſhing the Hands, the Golden-Hook on the Epiſtle-Side for the Prieſt's Cap; but we muſt not omit the little Bell which is to be rung at the Sanctus, or the two Elevations. The Clerk muſt tinkle it twice at each Sanctus, and at each Elevation nine Times, that is, thrice when the Prieſt kneels down, thrice when he elevates the Hoſt, and thrice when he ſets it down upon the Altar; and the ſame Formalities muſt be obſerved with Reſpect to the Chalice.

THERE muſt be a Balluſtrade, either of Iron, Marble, or Wood, before every Altar, to ſeparate the People, or to keep them off from the Altar.

ON each Side [b] the Altar, and before the laſt Step of it, muſt ſtand a Taper in a Silver Candleſtick, to light it, if the Pariſh be rich enough to afford it; this is in Honour to the Sacrament at its Elevation: Three, or ſometimes even five Lamps, likewiſe, are hung up before it [c] for the ſame Purpoſe.

THE great or high Altar muſt be [d] twelve Spans long, and four Spans and two Thirds high from above the Foot, and from the Edge acroſs the Surface, four Spans. The Platform to ſtand on muſt always be of ſome hard poliſhed Wood.

A PORTABLE Altar, or ſacred Stone, which is uſed inſtead of a conſecrated Altar, muſt be of hard Stone or Marble, in which there muſt be a Sepulchre, or ſmall Cavity in the Middle of the Side before, in which the Relics of Saints and Martyrs are depoſited and ſealed up by the Biſhop: If the Seal ſhould unfortunately break, the Altar loſes its Conſecration.

The ſacred VESSELS belonging to the ALTAR, &c. The Corporals, Pales, Purificatories, Purſes, Veils, and other Decorations of ALTARS and CHURCHES.

WHAT we have ſaid relating to the Altar would be imperfect, ſhould we omit giving ſome Account of the Veſſels, and other Implements belonging to it, for the ceremonial Decoration of the Service, and the Preſervation of the holy Sacrament. [e] Both raiſe the Soul to the Contemplation of Spiritual Objects, and engage her to bleſs and adore the Deity. A Roman Prelate expreſſes himſelf in thoſe very Terms, and at the ſame Time adds, that the mechanical Operation of theſe Things is an Act of Worſhip.

[a] The Te igitur is the Beginning of the Canon of the Maſs. It is a curious Prayer addreſſed to God only, the firſt Perſon in the ſacred Trinity; it is alſo called the Secret Prayer.

[b] Both Epiſtle and Goſpel Side.

[c] In noted Churches. The Cuſtom of hanging up Lamps before the holy Sacrament is taken from the Jews.

[d] Small Altars are to be from nine to ten Spans long, two Spans and two Thirds high, and three Spans and a half broad. It is enough for theſe Altars to have a Foot without Steps, which muſt be four Spans wide, and three quarters of a Span high. It muſt project beyond the Altar a Span and a half on every Side, if there be Room. On theſe Altars muſt ſtand a Gradin of a Span in Heighth and Breadth.

[e] Caſalius de Vet. Chriſt. ſacr. Ritib. Cap. xxxiv.

No

No Layman is permitted to make uſe of any ſacred Utenſils whatſoever. 'Tis the Privilege of the Clergy alone to handle them; which is a Cuſtom borrowed from the Jews.

THE Chalice muſt be made either of Gold or Silver; from whence we may infallibly conclude, that the Chriſtian Church is very rich. The ſubject of Chalices gave Boniface, who was both a Biſhop and a Martyr, the Hint inſerted in the [a] Remarks below. This Prelate found very little Inſtruction in the irregular Deportment of the Clergy of his Time. [b] In the Infancy of the Church the Chalices were all Wood; and the Church itſelf, in ſhort, no more than a ſmall Veſſel of Fiſhermen. In Proceſs of Time they were made of Glaſs or Marble, and at laſt of Silver or Gold. The Biſhop is obliged to conſecrate the Chalices, as well as the Patens, both within and without. [c] Small Chalices, for the generality, are nine Inches in Height, and the large eleven or twelve.

The Paten muſt be made of the ſame Metal as the Chalice, and the Uſe of it is to hold the conſecrated Hoſt; [d] it muſt likewiſe be anſwerable to the Size of the Chalice, that is, be about ſix or eight Inches Diameter.

The Pyx, in which the holy Sacrament is depoſited, muſt be of Silver gilt within at leaſt, and its Foot muſt be half a Span high. The Height of the Cup muſt be proportion'd to its Breadth, and the Bottom muſt have a gentle Riſing, in order the more commodiouſly to take out the Wafers when there are but a few in it, and to cleanſe it when there is Occaſion. They are not to [e] lie above eight Days at moſt in the Pyx without its being clean'd, leſt they ſhould happen to grow mouldy. Particulars of leſs Importance we purpoſely omit in the Deſcription of the Pyx, the uſual Height whereof is nine Inches, that of the Cup three, and the Foot ſix. A Veil in Form of a Tent, made of a rich white Stuff, with a Fringe round it, muſt cover this precious Repoſitory of the Wafers.

There muſt likewiſe be a Box to carry the Communion to the Sick, which muſt be made of Silver gilt within, when it is to go any conſiderable Way; and it muſt be put into a white Silk Purſe, and be hung about the Neck, in ſuch Places as are difficult of Acceſs. The Box and Pyx muſt be bleſſed. There muſt be another Box for large Wafers, which are round, and ſomething bigger than the others; and this may be made of Silver, Tin, Paſtboard, &c. lined with white Taffeta within, and adorn'd with ſome rich Silk without. A round leaden Plate, covered with Taffeta, muſt be put into the Box, that the Wafers may be always ready. Theſe Wafers muſt neither be kept in too dry, nor too moiſt a Place. Such as are too ſtale muſt never be made uſe of.

[f] THE Sun for expoſing the holy Sacrament muſt be made of Silver: The Foot of the ſmalleſt muſt be a Span in Height. This Sun muſt have two Cryſtals, one Third of a Span Diameter, or more, that a large Wafer may the more commodiouſly be put be-

[a] Quondam ſacerdotes aurei ligneis calicibus utebantur, nunc è contra ligneiſacerdotes aureis utuntur calicibus. This Thought is prettily expreſſed in the following French Verſes.

Aux tems paſſés au ſiécle d'or,
Croſſe de bois, Evêque d'or;
Maintenant, qu'ont changé les Loix,
Croſſe d'or, Evêque de Bois.

[b] Caſalius, &c. Cap. xxi.
[c] Alet's Ritual.
[d] Ibid.
[e] De ſeptimo in ſeptimum diem muletur ne fortè diu ſervata mucida fiet. Vide Caſalius, &c. Alet's Ritual ſays, the Wafers muſt be changed every fifteen Days, and Care muſt be taken that thoſe put into the Pyx be freſh made.
[f] Alet's Ritual.

tween,

tween; and this muſt be ſet in a little Half-Moon made of Silver, but always gilt. One of the Cryſtals muſt be faſtened to the Sun by a ſmall Chain, like the Caſe of a Watch. There muſt be a Croſs likewiſe over the Sun.

[a] THE Thurible may be made of Silver or Pewter, but there ſhould be four Chains to it. Two Thuribles are uſed in Proceſſions of the holy Sacrament, but at no other Times. The Navet muſt be of the ſame Metal with the Thurible.

THE Incenſe which is made uſe of at Church, muſt be of an odoriferous Smell, and be a little broken before it is put into the Navet, but not reduced to Powder.

THE Holy-Water-Pot ought to be made of Silver, Pewter or Tin, the Sprinkler of the ſame, or elſe of Wood, with Hog's Briſtles, or Wolf's Hair twiſted round about it; and at the End of it there muſt be a hollow Knob with Holes, in which a ſmall Spunge muſt be encloſed. There muſt be two Veſſels of Pewter, Delf, or Earthen Ware, for waſhing the Corporals, Pales, Purificatories, and Chalices. In the Place where the Wafers are made, there muſt be another Pewter or Earthen-Ware Veſſel, to be appropriated to this Uſe, and no other.

[b] THE Peace-Utenſil muſt be made of Gold, Silver, or Embroidery, with ſome pious Image of the Crucifix, or other Myſtery, upon it. It muſt be half a Span high, not quite an Inch broad, and end in an half Round at Top. There muſt be a ſmall Handle on the Back-Side to hold it by, to which a Veil muſt be faſtened, of the Colour of the Service of the Day, to wipe it with.

[c] THE Corporals muſt be made of fine white Linen; not too thin, nor ſtitched, and without Lace: But if there be any, it muſt be very narrow within two Fingers Breadth of the Edge that comes forward. In that Part where the Prieſt moſt commonly kiſſes the Altar, a ſmall Croſs muſt be placed, and made of white Silk or Thread, in this Form ✠. The Corporals muſt be folded in ſuch a Manner as that all the Ends may be in the Inſide, and not be ſeen, &c.

[d] THE Pales muſt be made of the ſame Linen as the Corporals, and lined with ſtiffening Paſteboard. Upon theſe there muſt be neither Embroidery, Croſs, nor Image, nor any Lace round them; but four ſmall Taſſels only at the four Corners to hold them by. They muſt be bleſſed with the Corporals, and no Perſon under a Sub-Deacon muſt preſume to touch them.

[e] THE Purificatories are made of Linen, and are two Spans in Length. They are folded three double, and there muſt be a ſmall blue Thread Croſs in the Middle of them.

[a] Id. Ibid. This is the Allegory which Germanus of Conſtantinople has found in the Thurible. It repreſents, ſays he, the human Nature of Chriſt. The Burning of the Perfume is his divine Nature; the Perfume itſelf the Holy Ghoſt. Happy the Man born for making ſuch ingenious and inſtructive Diſcoveries! The Incenſe is the Emblem of Penance, of the Preaching the Goſpel, and of the Prayers of the Faithful. It repreſents the Virtues and good Works of the Saints. The Thurible, according to St. Auſtin, is likewiſe the Image of Chriſt's Body. Theſe, and many other Allegories, are Demonſtrations that Perfumes ought to be uſed at Church in honour of the Deity; and St. Ambroſe very wiſely obſerves, that an Angel appears at this Ceremony.

[b] Alet's Ritual.

[c] Id. Ibid. The Uſe of Corporals is ſaid to have been appointed by Pope Euſebius, or by Sylveſter I. This repreſents the Sheet wherein our Saviour's Body was wrapped after his Death, and can be made of nothing but Linen for that Reaſon. Vide Caſalius de Ritib. &c. Chap. xxxiv. We ſhall paſs over the many Myſteries contained in the Corporals; but Caſalius may be conſulted hereon.

[d] Alet's Ritual. Piſcara Prax. Cerem.

[e] Alet's Ritual.

THE

[a] The Outſide of the Purſes for the Corporals is made of the ſame kind of Stuff as the other Decorations, but the Inſide is lined with fine white Linen, with a ſtrong Paſte-board between. Theſe Purſes are about a Span wide, are faſtened by a Button and Loop, and have a Croſs embroidered on the Outſide, of about three quarters of a Span in Length.

THE Veil of the Chalice is made of Silk, and of the ſame Colour as the reſt of the Decorations, is three Spans ſquare, and has no Croſs, or any other Figure whatſoever.

[b] IN Churches where the ſolemn Service is performed, the Sub-Deacon muſt have Veils of ten Spans long, and as wide as the Silk, of four Colours, viz. white, red, green and purple, to hold the Paten up with at high Maſs. Black Veils are never made Uſe of, even at Maſſes for the Dead, nor on Good Friday. They muſt be made therefore of white Silk, and be edged with Lace, &c. Alet's Ritual adds, That in the moſt celebrated Churches, there muſt be another white Veil of the ſame Size, but more coſtly, to throw over the Shoulders of the Celebrant, when he carries the Hoſt in Proceſſion; and in the Pariſh Church, there muſt be a Canopy likewiſe of white Silk, for the holy Viaticum when 'tis carried to the Sick, of five or ſix Spans long, and four wide, or rather more. The Vallant with the Fringe muſt be a Span and a half deep, and both muſt be made of white Silk. It muſt be carried with two Poles of five or ſix Spans long, which muſt be covered with the ſame Silk as the Canopy, if they are neither painted nor gilt. However, he that carries the holy Sacrament to the Sick, is inferior to him that carries it in Proceſſion.

THERE muſt [d] be Veils, likewiſe, or Covers to the Croſſes and Images in Paſſion-Week, which muſt be made of Camlet, or ſome other Stuff of purple Colour, but without any Figure, Image, Croſs, or other Implements of the Paſſion.

IN every [e] Pariſh-Church there ought to be a Standard, about nine or ten Spans high, and ſix long, of a Colour ſuitable to its Patron; and in the middle of it, the Patron muſt be repreſented in Embroidery. This Standard muſt be of Satin, Damask, Taffeta, or Camlet, lined with Linen, or a light Stuff, and have a Silk Border and a Fringe all round about it. The Pole of it muſt be a [f] Cane and a half long.

WE ſhall not trouble the Reader with a Detail of the Maſs-Book, the Uſe and Contents of it being ſo well known already. They, who are of Opinion, that the Conſtitutions of St. Clement are genuine, are fully perſuaded that St. Peter was the Inſtitutor of the Maſs-Book, and recommended the Uſe of it to St. Clement his Succeſſor.

HAVING now ſpoken of the ſacred Veſſels of the Altar, and their various Uſes, it would be needleſs to take Notice of the Regard which its Miniſters ought to ſhew to the holy Sacrament. This is foreign to our Purpoſe; and beſides, the Care taken of the Ornaments which appertain to thoſe Veſſels, the Precautions uſed in cleanſing them, by Conſecration, and other religious Practices, all theſe ſhould be look'd upon as ſo many Teſtimonies of Reſpect paid the holy Euchariſt. If Calvin has robbed it of all its Luſtre, in all Probability, he was induced thereto, as looking upon the Piece of Bread given to thoſe of his Sect, as nothing more than a Type, or Sign; but the Catholics think they

[a] Alet's Ritual.
[b] Id. Ibid.
[c] The Reaſon for theſe Colours has been already given us in the Diſſertation on Religious Worſhip, and in this Diſſertation likewiſe, Vide Caſal. de Vet. Chriſt. Ritib. Chap. xxxiv.
[d] Alet's Ritual.
[e] Id. Ibid.
[f] A Meaſure in Languedoc and Provence, which contains about an Ell, and two Thirds.

ought to clothe the Body of the King of Kings, in the moſt coſtly and pompous Attire that the moſt lively Imagination can deviſe. The Faithful of the antient Church, when they travelled, frequently carried the Euchariſt about them, and kept it in [a] their Houſes. There are in thoſe Practices, however, ſeveral [b] Things which ſeem repugnant to that Notion which the Church directs Chriſtians to entertain of the holy Euchariſt.

The BENEDICTION of the FIRST STONE of a NEW CHURCH.

THE Congregation, and the Place where they aſſemble themſelves together, are both called the Church. The latter is a Place ſet apart, and devoted entirely to religious Worſhip, the moſt eſſential Parts whereof practiſed therein, as well as what is the moſt acceptable to God, are Prayer, Contemplation, and the Elevation of the Heart to the Supreme Being. Theſe are the eſſential Qualities of a Chriſtian, who profeſſes to worſhip God in Spirit and in Truth. Thus the Name of Church muſt be confined to Chriſtian Congregations, and at the ſame Time to their Temples.

[c] BEFORE a Church can be erected, the Biſhop's Conſent muſt be firſt had and obtained. It is his Province to fix the Place, and the Extent of it, the Revenues and Miniſters belonging to it, the Fund for Lights, Decorations, and the Support of it: As alſo, to plant the Croſs on the Ground of the new intended Church, and lay the firſt Stone; or at leaſt, if he does it not in Perſon, ſome inferior Clergyman performs this ſacred Office with his Approbation and Conſent. A wooden Croſs muſt be ſet where the Altar is to ſtand, the Day before the Stone is to be laid, and the Day following; a ſquare, angular Stone is to be made choice of, which is to be the firſt, and Foundation Stone of the ſacred Fabric. In order to perform this Benediction, the Pope, in caſe he be at Rome, and is inclined to perform this religious Duty himſelf, muſt have his Rochet on, and other Robes ſuitable to the ſolemn Occaſion: But an inferior [d] Eccleſiaſtic muſt wear the Amict, the Albe, the Girdle, the white Pluvial, and plain Mitre, beſides the Surplice, and hold the Paſtoral Staff in his Left Hand. Thus dreſs'd, he muſt go to the Ground intended for the new Church, [e] and there bleſs the Salt and the Water. He begins with the former, to which he ſays; May it be exorciſed by the living God, &c. and being ſo exorciſed for the Salvation of thoſe who believe, may it procure Health of Body and Mind to all ſuch as ſhall partake of it, and may it have ſufficient Influence to deſtroy the Malice of Satan. After this, the Pope takes off the Mitre, and pronounces the Benediction over the Salt: In the next Place, he puts his Mitre on again in order to exorciſe the Water, that its Virtue, like the Salt, may be able to deſtroy the Power of the Devil and his Angels; and goes on with the Ceremony, as he had done before with Reſpect to the Salt. Theſe two Benedictions over, he puts the Salt into the Water in the Form of a Croſs, ſays Prayers ſuitable to the ſolemn Occaſion, takes his Mitre, and cauſes an [f] Anthem to be ſung, and the eighty third Pſalm, according to the Vulgate; and all the while, the

[a] It may be ſaid, That Chriſtians were betrayed into Prophanation, by an Exceſs of Piety, on theſe Occaſions. The ſetting the Euchariſt on a Corpſe, and burying it with it, was doubtleſs one Inſtance; and yet it was practiſed in former Times.

[b] Was not ſetting the Body of Jeſus Chriſt on the Breaſt of a dead Body buried, or dividing the Holy-Water, as St. Baſil did, in order to let Part of it into the Grave with him; was not this, I ſay, burying the Living with the Dead? No ſolid Reaſon can be given for ſuch a Practice.

[c] Pontif. Rom. Part II. According to the holy Canons, no Church or Chapel is to be erected without the Licence and poſitive Order of the Biſhop. He muſt mark out the Ground, the Entrance, &c. Alet's Ritual.

[d] The Pontifical ſays Religioſus.

[e] This Bleſſing of the Salt and Water is always practiſed.

[f] Of which this is the Purport. Set, O Lord, a Mark of Salvation on this Place, nor ſuffer the deſtroying Angel to enter into it,

Celebrant,

Tab. 2.

The Consecration of Salt & Water to be used in blessing ye first STONE. | La Consecration du SEL, et de l'EAU pour benir la premiere PIERRE | The Benediction of the GROUND where ye CHURCH is to be BUILT. | Benediction du TERRAIN ou l'on doit bâtir l'EGLISE

The BISHOP places the first STONE. | L'EVÊQUE va poser la premiere PIERRE. | The BISHOP blesses the FOUNDATION of the CHURCH | L'EVÉQUE benit les FONDEMENS de l'EGLISE.

B. Picart. del. — C. Du Bosc. exc.

The BISHOP SPRINKLES the Outside of the CHURCH. | L'EVÊQUE fait l'ASPERSION de l'EGLISE, par dehors. | The BISHOP makes the Sign of the Cross at the CHURCH DOOR | L'EVÊQUE fait le Signe de la CROIX a la Porte de l'EGLISE.

Celebrant, having his Mitre on, ſprinkles the Spot of Ground where the Croſs ſtands. As ſoon as the Pſalm and Anthem are ended, he turns himſelf towards the Place which he has been ſprinkling with Holy-Water, and addreſſes himſelf to God in a Prayer, thro' the Mediation of the particular Saint to whom the new Church is to be conſecrated; after which he takes his Mitre off once more, and bleſſes the Stone; then reads ſeveral Prayers after this Benediction, and ſprinkles it. The ſprinkling performed, the Celebrant makes ſeveral [a] Croſſes, in the Name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt, on the Stone with a Knife. An Oremus and ſome Litanies follow, after which the Celebrant, who before was on his Knees on a Carpet ſpread for that Purpoſe, riſes without his Mitre, and repeats a Prayer turning towards the Stone. In the mean Time the Mortar is preparing, and the Celebrant, as ſoon as it is ready, puts on his Mitre again, beginning an Anthem, the Subject whereof is, the Stone which Jacob laid for a Monument when journeying in the Deſart; after which this Anthem is ſucceeded by the hundred and twenty fourth Pſalm, according to the Vulgate. To conclude, the Celebrant, having his Mitre on, touches the Foundation Stone with his Hand, and lays it in its Place, [b] thro' Faith in Jeſus Chriſt; and ſtill, all the while the Maſon is faſtening the Stone with Mortar, he takes care to ſprinkle it with Holy-Water, addreſſing himſelf to God in theſe Terms; [c] Thou ſhalt cleanſe me with Hyſſop, &c. after all this, is ſung the fiftieth Pſalm, according to the Vulgate.

WHENEVER the Biſhop, or Prieſt by his Direction, goes to bleſs a Stone, he is to walk with two Clerks in Surplices before him: One of them carries the Ritual, and a ſmall Veſſel with Salt; and the other a Veſſel with fair Water and the Sprinkler. One of the Clergy carries the Croſs between two Ceroferaries.

The Benediction of the Foundation of a CHURCH.

THE abovementioned Pſalm concluded, the Celebrant, with a Sprinkler in his Hand, walks forwards, ſprinkling all along the Foundations of the Church on the Right Hand, and on the Left. This Ceremony is performed after the ſame formal Manner as the Benediction of the firſt Stone; and an Anthem, and Part of the eighty ſixth Pſalm is ſung all the Time of the Aſperſion. When one third Part of the Foundations is conſecrated, the Anthem is repeated. The Biſhop takes off his Mitre, and ſays an Oremus; then reſumes the Mitre and Anthem, and ſprinkles another third Part of the Foundations. Then follows a Prayer, then an Anthem, and the hundred and twenty firſt Pſalm. For the remaining Part of the ſacred Fabric there is a third Aſperſion, the Anthem is ſung again, another Prayer is ſaid, and the Biſhop gives out the Veni Creator, and continues on his Knees till the firſt Verſe is over; but riſes at the ſecond, and ſtands uncovered to the End of the Hymn; after which the Celebrant begs of God, that the Holy Ghoſt would vouchſafe to reſide within this holy Place, that this Houſe of Devotion may never be profan'd, and that he would think it worthy of enjoying his divine Favours, &c. One of which no doubt is, that pious Chriſtians may help to erect it by their liberal Contributions. Then the Celebrant, having his Mitre on, ſits down, and exhorts the Congregation to a generous Contribution. This Exhortation cloſes with a Benediction, and a Preſent of ſome Indulgences from the Pope.

[a] He makes the Sign of the Croſs on every Side, ſo that it has ſix. Vide Alet's Ritual.
[b] Theſe Words are the Beginning of a Prayer which he then repeats.
[c] Aſperges me, Domine, hyſſopo, &c.

The

The Dedication of a CHURCH and ALTAR.

A Sunday or Holy Day, if poſſible, muſt [a] be choſen for [b] the Performance of this Ceremony. The Arch-Deacon is to give Notice of it to the Clergy and Inhabitants of the Place, that they may faſt on the Eve thereof. In the mean Time [c] the Relics, [d] which are to be depoſited in the Altar of the new Church, are preparing. They are put into a neat and decent Veſſel together, with three Grains of Incenſe. To this is added a Slip of Parchment, whereon is written, "That ſuch a Day of ſuch a "Month and Year, the Church of * * *, and its Altar were conſecrated by Biſhop * * *; "that there are proper Relics under the Altar of the Church, and that all pious Chriſ-"tians who come to viſit it, ſhall obtain Indulgences, &c." The Vaſe, in which the Relics are depoſited, muſt be ſealed up, and laid in a very clean Place [e]. Two Tapers muſt be kept conſtantly burning before them. There are other Circumſtances to be obſerved on this Occaſion; but we refer the Reader to the Rituals for further Information.

THE following Inventory contains the Implements requiſite for the Dedication of a Church and Altar.

A ſmall Veſſel with the holy Chriſm in it.
Another, containing the [f] conſecrated Oil.
Two Pound of Frankincenſe, beat ſmall.
A Thurible, Navet, and Spoon.
A Veſſel for live Charcoal.
Another with Aſhes in it.
Another with Salt.
Another with Wine.
An Hyſſop-Sprinkler.
Some Napkins, or Towels, made of coarſe Cloth, to rub the Table of the Altar.
A Cire-Cloth to cover it with.
Five ſmall wax Croſſes.
Some wooden Spatula's, to ſcrape the Places of the Altar which happen to be burnt by the Incenſe, and the Wax-Candles.
A Veſſel for theſe Scrapings.
Lime, Sand, and Brick-Duſt, for making the Cement, intended for cloſing up the Place where the Relics, &c. are depoſited.
Two burning Flambeaux, or Tapers, which are borne before the Celebrant.
A Baſon with Water for waſhing his Hands.

[a] Extracted from the Roman Pontifical, and Alet's Ritual.

[b] If by Dedication be meant the Conſecration of a certain Houſe to God by Prayer, it may juſtly be accounted very antient, and eſtabliſhed by the Apoſtles themſelves: But as for all the Train and Implements of the Ceremony, they, doubtleſs, began when the Church was freed from the Perſecution of its Adverſaries, and ſtill grew with the Proſperity and Worldly-Mindedneſs of its Miniſters. We ſhall here obſerve, that the primitive Chriſtians built their Temples as like that of Jeruſalem as poſſibly they could; but afterwards gave them the Form of a Croſs in Commemoration of our Saviour. Vide Bona, Lib. I. Chap. xx. Rerum Liturgic. and Gaſalius, &c. Chap. xxxiii.

[c] This is done on the Eve of the Dedication.

[d] Some pretend, that the Cuſtom of putting Relics under the Altar, owes its Origin to the Veneration of the Chriſtians for the Church-Yards and Tombs of Martyrs. When the Chriſtian Church triumphed over Paganiſm, the firſt Temples were erected in ſuch Places, and, as it were, over theſe reſolute Defenders of the Truth. The Roman Church was the firſt that obſerved to place Relics under the Altar; and the Practice muſt be antient, ſince St. Ambroſe and Prudentius mention it; it might very probably, however, be firſt owing to Chance; for though Aſſemblies were held at the Tombs of Martyrs, very likely it might not be for their Sakes, but becauſe they were there ſecure from the Rage of the Heathens. But be that as it will, it was afterwards ordained, that they who ſhould preſume to conſecrate any Church, without having firſt provided it with proper Relics, ſhould be degraded, as Tranſgreſſors of the Traditions of the Church. Vide Bona.

[e] For Inſtance, under a Tent or Pavillion, at the Entrance of the Church.

[f] Oleum Catechumenorum.

Napkins

Napkins to wipe them.
Crumbs of Bread.
Two Pound of Silk to rub the Croſſes, which the Celebrant makes with Chriſm upon the Church-Walls, and all round the Altar.
Two Veſſels of holy Water.

ALL theſe Things are look'd upon as abſolutely neceſſary. We have extracted them from the Roman Pontifical, and ſhall proceed to ſhew the Reader all the Purpoſes for which they are intended.

BEFORE the Dedication is begun, proper Care is taken to have three Croſſes painted on each of the Church-Walls, at ſome conſiderable Height, over each of which muſt ſtand [a] a Candle of an Ounce Weight. We muſt not omit that the Sacriſtin is oblig'd to have a Ladder ready for the Service of the Celebrant, to take care that the holy Water-Pots be clean, and that every Thing that might occaſion the leaſt Interruption be removed all round the Church, that the Dedication may be performed with Decency and Order.

ON the Morning of the Day intended for the Ceremony, the Biſhop appears in his Pontifical Robes, and orders the twelve Candles before-mentioned to be lighted. He then goes out of the Church, and makes every Body do the ſame, except one Deacon, who remains lock'd up in it, dreſſed in his Amict, Albe, Girdle, and Stole. The Biſhop goes to the Place where the Relics were depoſited the Day before. There he begins the ſeven penitential Pſalms, in a low Voice, and an Anthem without Litanies, putting on all the Time his Amict, Albe, white Pluvial, &c. The reſt of the Clergy preſent at the Ceremony are in their proper Robes. After the ſeven Pſalms, the Biſhop with his Aſſiſtants goes to the Church-Door, and pulling off his Mitre, begins an Anthem, which for the moſt Part is ſucceeded by an Oremus. He then leans upon a Chair, placed there on a Carpet for that Purpoſe, whilſt the Litanies are ſinging; upon which he bleſſes the Salt and Water, ſprinkles himſelf and his Aſſiſtants, and then directs them to begin to ſing. As ſoon as ever they have begun, he puts the Mitre on again, and makes the Tour of the Church, beginning to the Right, the Sub-Deacon with the Croſs between two Ceroferaries, and the Clerk carrying the holy Water-Pot, walking before him. As he goes along, he ſprinkles the Church-Wall both above and below, in the Name of the ſacred Trinity. [b] The Biſhop's Aſſiſtants bear up the two Sides of his Pluvial all the Time; and he that carries the holy Water is to take care that he walks a little before him on his Right-Hand, that the Biſhop may take the holy Water when he wants it.

BEING return'd to the Place they ſet out from, and when the Anthem after the Pſalm is repeated, the Celebrant ſtill ſtands uncovered, and turning towards the Church-Door ſays, Oremus. The firſt Aſſiſtant ſays, [c] Flectamus Genua, upon which they all kneel but the Celebrant, the Croſs-Bearers, and the Ceroferaries. Then the other Aſſiſtant ſays, Levate, and then they all riſe with him. This Spiritual Diſcipline is not eaſily learnt, on account of its numerous and different Evolutions; for which Reaſon all the Ceremonies of the Church are performed with the Ritual in Hand. We hope the ſerious Chriſtian Reader will not be offended at this military Compariſon, it being no Treſpaſs on the Eſſentials of Religion. The Prayer which follows the Levate in the Pontifical, is very much in the myſtic Taſte. As ſoon as it over, the Celebrant puts [a] Theſe twelve Candles repreſent the preaching of the Goſpel, the Light of it diſperſed all over the World by the twelve Apoſtles, and the Attention which all pious Chriſtians ought to give thereunto.

[b] Alet's Ritual.
[c] That is, Let us kneel.

on his Mitre, and going up to the Church-Door, firſt ſtrikes it with his Paſtoral Staff, and then pronounces [a] the Attollite Portas, & introibit Rex Gloriæ. The Deacon, who remain'd lock'd up in the Church, asks who this King of Glory is, to which the Biſhop, anſwers, That it is the Lord God Almighty, the God of Hoſts. Is it purely in order to condeſcend to the Frailty of human Nature, or, as Charron expreſſes it, [b] Becauſe it is allowable to trifle with Children, that a Ceremony is practiſed, in which there ſeems to be no Manner of Footſteps of the Apoſtolic Spirit? Inventors of religious Ceremonies muſt have been very conſcious that the human Underſtanding is uncapable of any Thing grand or ſublime, with reſpect to Matters of Religion.

THE Biſhop, having gone round the Church on the Right Hand, does the ſame on the Left, ſprinkling the Outſide of the Walls, about as high as his Head. The Anthem and Prayer uſed here are different from the others. The reſt of the Ceremony is carried on as before, except that after the Deacon, who is lock'd in the Church, has asked who is the King of Glory, the Clergy and Biſhop jointly anſwer, [c] It is the Lord Almighty, the King of Glory; and that they all together cry out thrice, [d] Open the Doors. The Biſhop croſſes the Door, and repeats at the ſame Time [e] a Verſe in Church Latin, which, however, effectually confounds the Devil and all the Powers of Hell. The Senſe of this Verſe is, that all the Devils muſt vaniſh at the Sight of the Sign of the Croſs. At length the Door being opened, the Biſhop enters, attended by his Miniſters only; for the People, except a Maſon or two, who are to cloſe the Sepulchre, where the Relics are depoſited, and cement the Altar-Table with Mortar, remain without. The Biſhop as he goes in, ſays, Peace be in this Houſe, to which the Deacon anſwers, [f] When thou ſhalt enter into it. Whilſt ſome Words applicable to this Wiſh, extracted out of the Scripture, are ſinging, the Biſhop, advancing towards the Middle of the Church, kneels down, and begins the Veni Creator, with his Head uncover'd, and his Face towards the high Altar; then one of the Sub-Deacons takes ſome Aſhes, and ſcatters them on the Pavement, in Form of a Croſs, as preſcribed in the Pontifical, and repreſented in [g] the Print hereunto annexed. Next the Litanies are ſung, wherein is twice named the Saint from whom the Church or Altar takes its Name. We are to inform the Reader likewiſe, that the ſame Honour is done to thoſe whoſe Relics lie buried under the Altar; for too great a Streſs cannot be laid on this Particular. All this is performed whilſt they addreſs themſelves thrice to God in theſe Words; [h] We beſeech thee to hear us, ſtill calling, however, on the Saint of the Church, and all the Time making Signs of the Croſs. The Celebrant makes three upon the Church and Altar. Theſe Ceremonies are followed by ſome Oremus's, an Anthem, and the Song of Zachariah; and the Biſhop, whilſt ſome of his Officers are ſinging in Chorus, puts on his Mitre, and with his Croſier draws upon the Aſhes a double [i] Alphabet in Capitals. The Reader may be fully informed of the Manner of this Ceremony, by conſulting the Repreſentation of it given in the [k] two Prints.

The

[a] Lift up your Gates, that the King of Glory may enter in, Pſalm xxiii.

[b] On Wiſdom, Lib. I Sect. 1.

[c] Dominus virtutum.

[d] The Paſtoral Staff with which the Biſhop knocks at the Gate, repreſents the Sacerdotal Power communicated by Chriſt to his Diſciples, and which their Succeſſors have increaſed by thoſe Arms Religion has ſupplied them with. The Blows given upon the Church-Door inſtruct us, that Heaven, Earth, and Hell, muſt all yield to the Authority of Chriſt's Vicar. We are obliged to Caſalius, Chap. xxxiii. de Ritibus, &c. for this Interpretation.

[e] Ecce Crucis ſignum, fugiant phantaſmata cuncta. Pontif. Rom.

[f] This is admirable when conſidered only as a Ceremony; for your mitred Eccleſiaſtics are oftner the Fore-runners of War than of Peace. The Ship or Boat which repreſented the Church would run ſtrange Hazards of being expoſed to Ship-Wrecks, did not the Pilot's Wiſdom prevent the Villany of the Sailors who row it.

[g] Vide the firſt Diviſion in the Print.

[h] Te rogamus audi nos.

[i] This Alphabet repreſents the firſt Principles of the Chriſtian Religion. The Croſs informs us, that the firſt Thing a Chriſtian ſhould learn, is Chriſt crucified. Vide Caſalius de Ritibus, &c.

[k] Vide the two firſt Figures in the Print. This and ſome other Ceremonies appear no doubt ſingular enough; but that Judaiſm has been a Source of Myſteries and Ceremonies, and Paganiſm not behind-hand with it, is not at all

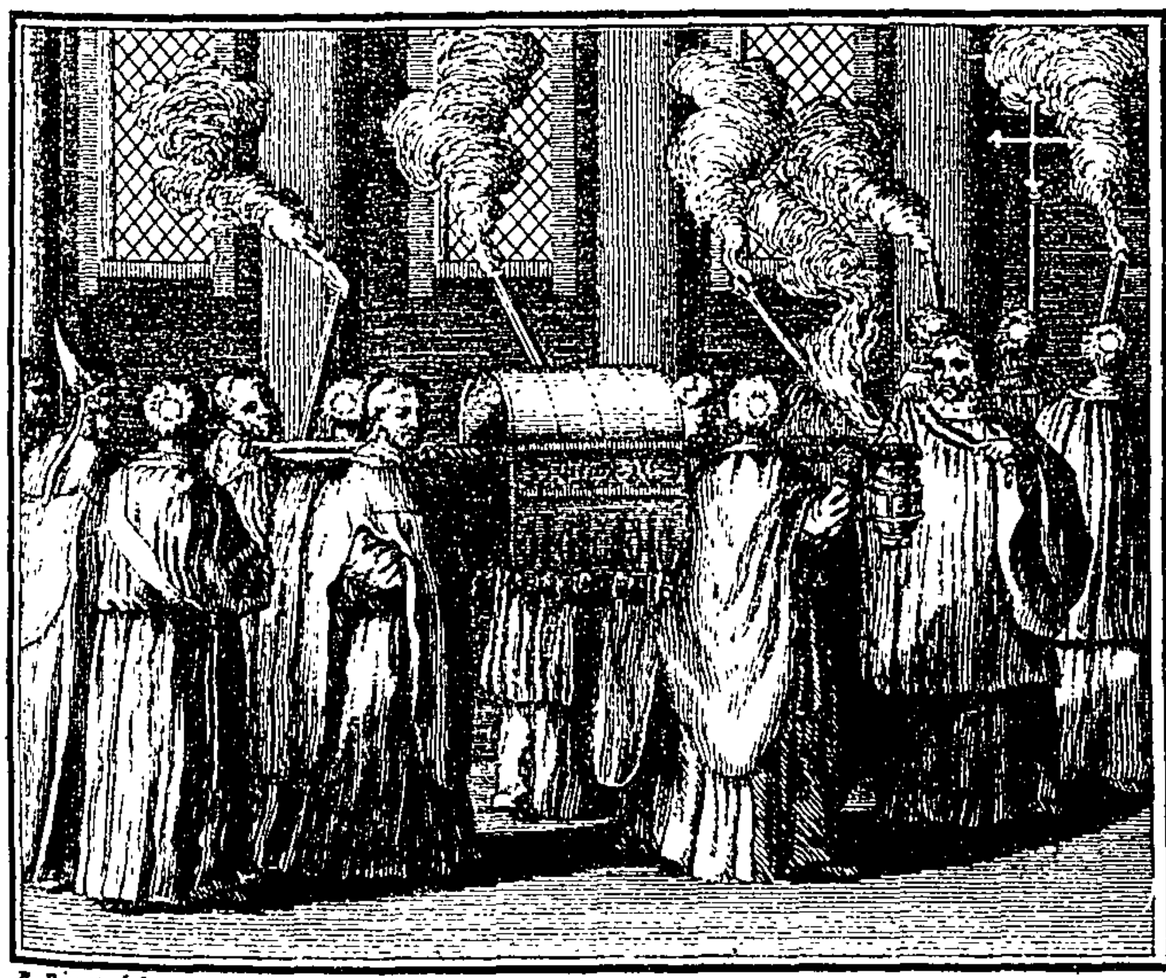
Vol. I.



The Bishop writes ye ALPHABET on ye Cross of ASHES made by ye SUBDEACON. | L'EVEQUE ecrit L'ALPHABET sur la CRO. de CENDRES que le SOUSDIACRE a fait. | A REPRESENTATION of the Cross of ASHES made on ye CHURCH PAVEMENT | FIGURE de la CROIX de CENDRES qu on a tracee sur le PAVE de L'EGLISE.

The BISHOP makes a CROSS with H WATER on the middle of the ALTER. | L'EVÈQUE fait la CROIX avec de L'EAU BENITE au Milieu de L'AUTEL. | The BISHOP Sprinkles the CHURCH PAVEMENT with holy water | L'EVÈQUE ASPERGE le PAVÉ de L'EGLISE avec de L'EAU BENITE.

B. Picart. del. C. Du Bosc. exc.

The RELICKS carried within the CHURCH in PROCESSION. | On porte les RELIQUES en PROCESSION dans L'EGLISE. | The BISHOP encloses the RELICKS in the ALTER. | L'EVÈQUE enferme les RELIQUES dans L'AUTEL.

The Conſecration of an ALTAR.

WE proceed to the Conſecration of the Altar. It is here introduc'd in its proper Place, though we have already ſpoken of the Altar before the Church. [a] As ſoon as the Biſhop has made the two Alphabets in the Aſhes, he turns to the high Altar, being ſome conſiderable Diſtance from it, takes off his Mitre, falls on his Knees, and repeats a Prayer or Anthem, which the [b] Choir anſwers. This is done thrice, and each Time they raiſe their Voice a Note higher; then the Celebrant puts his Mitre on again, and bleſſes the Water, Salt, Aſhes, and Wine. The Exorciſm [c] of the Salt and Water, &c. and the Oremus's are different from thoſe which we have before mentioned at the Benediction of the firſt Stone. When he bleſſes the Aſhes, he begs, That God would vouchſafe to ſend his Angel to conſecrate and bleſs it; that it may become a wholſome Remedy to all ſuch as ſhall call upon the ſacred Name of God, and confeſs their manifold Sins and Tranſgreſſions; and that they, who whilſt they are calling on his Name, ſhall ſprinkle themſelves with it, for the Expiation of their Sins, may obtain Health of Body, and the Salvation of their precious and immortal Souls. After this Prayer the Biſhop takes the Salt, mingles it with the Aſhes in the Form of a Croſs, takes a Handful of this Compoſition (for we may properly call it ſo) and throws it into the Water at three ſeveral Times, repeating a Benediction each Time; then he bleſſes the Wine, and mingles it with the Water in the Form of a Croſs. This Benediction, as well as the former, has ſome Prayers peculiarly relating to it. The Benediction ends with the Biſhop's Account of the Advantages ariſing from Water, and the Miracles wrought by it. He looks at, and directs his Diſcourſe to it, whilſt he is expatiating on this Topic. The Conſecration does not immediately follow. The Celebrant goes to the Church-Door again, and with his Paſtoral Staff croſſes it at Top and at Bottom; then begs of God, [d] that the Croſs may be invincible, and that all ſuch as ſhall viſit this Church may abound in all Manner of good Things, &c. Laſtly, He returns to the Place where he bleſſed the Water, and being uncover'd, and turn'd towards the high Altar, [e] exhorts the Congregation to beg of God, to bleſs and keep this Place, by the Aſperſion of Water mingled with Wine, Salt, and Aſhes, and through Jeſus Chriſt, &c. [f] After this there is an Anthem ſeveral Times repeated. At the Beginning of it, the Celebrant ſtands before the Altar, dips his Right Thumb in the Water which had been bleſſed before, and makes a Croſs on the Middle of the Table, belonging to the Altar, conſecrating it [g] in honour of God Almighty, of the bleſſed Virgin Mary, and of all Saints, in the Name and in Commemoration of Saint ..... as alſo in the Name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt. He muſt make a Croſs at each of the four [h] Corners, beſides that in the Middle; two on the Epiſtle-Side, and two more on the Goſpel-Side. A Prayer ſucceeds, after which the Celebrant makes a Tour ſeven Times round the Altar, and ſprinkles it as he goes all ſtrange. Ceremony may in ſome Meaſure be ſtiled —— the Eſſence of both thoſe Religions. 'Tis ſurpriſing, however, that Chriſtianity, whoſe Principles are the moſt plain and ſimple, ſhould load itſelf with ſo cumbrous a Train, and ſo difficult, that thoſe very People, who are obliged to ſupport it, cannot acquit themſelves without infinite Fatigue and Trouble. It is eaſy to be imagin'd, that it requires more Time to learn ſuch Things, than to be informed of Religion.

[a] Pontif. Rom.

[b] He begins with Deus in adjutorium, and the Choir having anſwered, Domine ad adjuvandum, he ſays Gloria Patri, &c. and the Choir anſwers, Sicut erat in principio. All this muſt be done methodically, for Method is the very Soul of all Formularies. The leaſt Reflection upon what paſſes in all Societies, as well Eccleſiaſtic as Secular, will convince the Reader of this Truth.

[c] Creatura ſalis, Creatura aquæ, &c. thus the Pontifical calls them.

[d] Sit poſitis crux invicta liminibus, &c. Pontif. Rom.

[e] Ibid.

[f] If there be other Altars to conſecrate, the Celebrant beſtows the ſame Ceremonies on them all, conſecrating them one after another, Pontif. Rom.

[g] Pontif. Rom.

[h] The Altar is the Symbol of the Univerſal Church. Its four Corners repreſent the four Corners of the World. This Ceremony therefore ſignifies the Extent of the Church, and of the Merit of the Croſs of Chriſt. The ſeven Turns round it, and ſeven Sprinklings, expreſs the Fulneſs of the Grace of the Holy Ghoſt.

with with holy Water. We ſhall not expatiate any farther on the Ceremonies of theſe ſeven Tours, it appearing to us entirely uſeleſs; but we think it neceſſary to add, that after them, and during the Anthem, the Celebrant paſſes behind the Altar, and turns on the Right Side, to go round the Church, and ſprinkles the Bottom of the Walls. He returns the ſame Way, ſprinkling the Middle of them. At the third Round, going to the Left, he ſprinkles the upper Part, then the Pavement, and then begins to ſprinkle before the Altar; from thence he proceeds to the great Gate, and continues the Ceremony croſs-wiſe, from one End of the Wall to another. He likewiſe ſprinkles it, turning to the [a] four Corners of the World. After this he turns towards the great Gate, and ſays a very conciſe, but truly [b] Chriſtian Prayer, and after that another, which in the whole is no ways inferior to it; then he lays his Hands upon his Breaſt, and repeats what the Church calls the [c] Preface.

AFTER the Preface, the Biſhop, or officiating Prieſt, pours holy Water into the Cement, in order to faſten the Stone that is ſet over the Sepulchre of the Relics, over which he prays, and gives it his Benediction.

The Proceſſion of the RELICS, being a Continuation of the DEDICATION of a CHURCH.

THE Celebrant, with ſeveral Eccleſiaſtics in his Train, and preceded by the Croſs, carried between two Taper-Bearers, goes and fetches the Relics with abundance of Solemnity. The Chriſm is carried to the Entrance of the Church, and at going into the Tent where the Relics are depoſited, an Anthem is ſung, and the ninety fourth Pſalm likewiſe, according to the Vulgate; but ſometimes they ſing a Reſponſe only, in honour of the Saint, whoſe Relics are going to be removed; after which the Celebrant, who ſtands before the Relics bare-headed, ſays a Prayer [d] in honour of them. The Incenſe is after that put into the Thurible, and the Proceſſion begins in the following Order. The Croſs-Bearer marches firſt, between two Ceroferaries, with Tapers in their Hands, and the reſt of the Clergy follow them, and ſing as they go along. The Prieſts march next, who bear the Relics, richly adorned, upon a Litter.

THE Incenſe-Bearer walks by the Side of it, and takes care to perfume the Relics with Incenſe during the Proceſſion. Several Ceroferaries with Tapers likewiſe walk on one Side, towards the Head of the Litter. After the Relics appears the Celebrant with his Aſſiſtants. When the Proceſſion ſets out from the Pavilion where the Relics were depoſited, he begins an Anthem, and after that ſome others are ſung by the Choir. When they are come to the Church-Door, the Celebrant, having the Croſs, Ceroferaries, and Relics before him, leaves the Choir to go round the Church, and then ſtops at the Church-Door, and harangues [e] the People; at the Concluſion whereof he makes [a] Verſus Orientem, Occidentem, &c. Pontif. Rom.

[b] The Purport of it is, That God would ſhed his Mercy on all ſuch as ſhall call upon him in this Church.

[c] Per omnia ſæcula, &c.

[d] He begs of God, That the Faithful through his Grace may in a worthy Manner touch the Members of thoſe Saints which have been particularly conſecrated to him.

[e] This turns upon the Reſpect due to God, and to his Churches; the Veneration which Jewiſh, and afterwards Chriſtian Princes have ſhewn to theſe holy Places. We muſt not omit, that Criminals who ſeek an Aſylum in Churches (eſpecially in Italy, Spain, and Portugal) are protected by the Mediation of the Clergy who officiate in ſuch Churches. He exhorts Chriſtians, notwithſtanding, to enter them with Purity. "The holy Pontiffs, adds he, "have granted Privileges to the Church we are dedicating in honour of the Almighty, of the bleſſed Virgin Mary, "of all the Saints, and particularly of Saint —— We declare that we have depoſited the Relics of the Saints—— "under its Altar, and that the Bodies of Saint —— and Saint —— lie in ſuch a Place. All who viſit them ſhall "enjoy the Indulgence granted by —— We exhort you to pay the whole Tithes to ſuch as ſhall officiate in this Church." On this capital Point he muſt enlarge, and prove, that it will draw down the Bleſſing of God, &c. Vide Pontif. Rom.

an an Exhortation to him who founded the Church, informing him, that it ought to be endowed; that is, a Fund ought to be raiſed for its Maintenance and Support. The Church, by the Mouth of the Celebrant, promiſes the Founder and his Heirs, in Return, that they ſhall always be the foremoſt at the Proceſſions to be held on the Anniverſary of the Dedication, &c. After this they pray for him, ſing a Reſponſe, and then pray again. The Celebrant makes a Croſs on the Outſide of the Door, with his Right Hand Thumb, [a] before he goes in. Laſtly, The Prieſts take the Litter upon their Shoulders, and enter the Church in Proceſſion, ſucceeded by the People and the Clergy; then thoſe Saints, whoſe precious Remains they are carrying, are invited by an Anthem which the Celebrant begins, and afterwards the whole Choir joins in, [a] to come and take Poſſeſſion of the Apartment which the Lord has prepared for them. The Proceſſion in the mean Time continues walking on; and when they are come to the Altar where the Relics are to be depoſited, Tapers are lighted all round about the Litter, which is laid near the Altar. The Celebrant honours the Arrival of theſe holy Relics, by ſinging an Anthem, which is repeated, and by two Pſalms, which are ſucceeded by a ſhort Prayer.

The Depoſiting the RELICS under the ALTAR.

BEFORE they are depoſited in the Sepulchre, the Biſhop, or other Celebrant, takes his Mitre, and marks the Depoſit with the Chriſm; but firſt ſeals up the Veſſel which holds the Relics. He muſt take care that four Signs of the Croſs, which muſt be made on the four Sides of the Sepulchre, in the Name of the Father, &c. accompany this marking with the Chriſm. This is the Conſecration of the Sepulchre. He is then to repoſit the Relic-Box with all the Veneration imaginable, which he ſhall do uncover'd, to teſtify it the better to the Congregation. After this an Anthem is repeated, during which the Celebrant, ſtill with his Mitre off, incenſes the Relics, and then puts it on, takes the Stone which is to be laid over the Sepulchre with his Right-Hand, dips the Thumb of his Left in the Chriſm, and makes the Sign of the Croſs in the Middle of it, on the Side which is to be towards the Relics, with Intent to conſecrate it on that Side. Several Anthems and [b] the Oremus follow next, according to Cuſtom. After this the Celebrant fixes the Stone upon the Sepulchre, the Maſons make an End of the Work, and the Celebrant ſanctifies it by making the Sign of the Croſs upon it.

The Incenſing of the ALTAR.

THE Stone being fixed, bleſſed, and ſigned with the Croſs, the Altar muſt be incenſed. The Celebrant puts Incenſe into the Thurible, [c] bleſſes it, and makes the Sign of the Croſs over it; then he incenſes the Altar on the Right-Hand and the Left, before and behind, the Choir ſinging all the Time. After 'tis incenſed he prays, and then his Aſſiſtants rub the Table of the Altar with a very clean Cloth. This Table is incenſed by the Celebrant in Form of a Croſs. The four Sides of the Altar muſt likewiſe be incenſed, and be performed ſeveral Times without Intermiſſion.

[a] Ingredimini, ſancti Dei, preparata eſt enim a Domino habitatio ſedis veſtræ, &c. Pontif. Rom.

[b] In this Prayer they teſtify to God, that they embrace the Relics of the Saints, for which this Ceremony is performed, with a religious Affection.

[c] Ab illo benedicaris in cujus honore cremaberis. Pontif. Rom.

THE Celebrant then makes five Croſſes with the ſacred Oils; one in the Middle, and one on each Side of the Altar, in the ſame Places he made them before with holy Water. Theſe five Croſſes are repeated with the Oils, and the Incenſing begins again. Theſe Perfumes, and all the Signs of the Croſs which the Celebrant makes a third Time with the Chriſm, are accompanied with Pſalms, Anthems, and Oremus's, with Alterations. In ſhort, not to be too tedious, the Celebrant [a] at the ſame Time pours Oil and Chriſm in equal Proportions upon the Altar, and rubs them all over it with his Right-Hand. In the mean Time, the Choir ſing Iſaac's Benediction to his Son Jacob, which is followed by a Pſalm, and then the Celebrant exhorts the Congregation [b] to beg of God to bleſs and conſecrate the Stone which has thus been anointed, &c.

The Unction of the twelve CROSSES.

WHILST the Choir and Clergy are thus piouſly engaged in ſinging of Anthems and Pſalms, we ſhall interrupt the Incenſing of the Altar, by taking Notice of the Unction of the twelve Croſſes, which were made upon the Wall of the Church. He begins this Ceremony behind the Altar, and proceeding to the Right, anoints them all one after another, and at every Unction repeats the ſame Form as is made uſe of at the [c] Conſecration of a Church. Every Croſs in particular is perfum'd with Incenſe as ſoon as it has been anointed.

A Continuation of Incenſing the ALTAR.

THE incenſing of the twelve Croſſes being thus compleated, the Celebrant returns to incenſe the Altar, begins an Anthem, and begs of God, with the uſual [d] Sign of the Croſs, to ſanctify the Altar, and bleſs the Oblations of his Servants, &c. He forgets not here to bleſs the Incenſe, that [e] Creature, which by [f] its fragrant Smell diſpels all Faintneſs and Diſeaſes, but eſpecially guards the true Chriſtian againſt the Artifices of his greateſt Enemy, the Devil. In the ſame Manner, neither, does he fail to make five new Croſſes upon the Altar, each with five Grains of Incenſe, in the ſame Places where he made them before with holy Water, holy Oil, and the Chriſm. Over every Croſs of Incenſe he puts one of Wax, as repreſented in [g] the Print. Then kneeling before the Altar, he there lights it, and begs of the Holy Ghoſt [h] to kindle the Fire of his Love in the Hearts of the Faithful. An Hallelujah precedes the Anthem. The Choir continue ſinging, and the Prieſt concludes this Act of Devotion with a Prayer. In the mean Time the Wax Croſſes and Incenſe burn, and the Celebrant orders the proper Officer carefully to collect their ſacred Aſhes. One of his Aſſiſtants performs this Part of the Ceremony, puts them into the appointed Veſſel, and then empties them into the Sink, call'd the Piſcine. The uſual Concluſion of this whole Ceremony is an Oremus, which the Celebrant pronounces on the Steps of the Altar [i] in due Form. The Oremus being over, the Celebrant, according to the Directions given in the Note, re-

[a] See the fourth Compartment of the Print.

[b] Pontificale Romanum.

[c] Sanctificetur & conſecretur hoc templum, &c.

[d] It is to be obſerved, that the Sign of the Croſs is appropriated to the three Perſons of the ſacred Trinity in Benedictions, when ſuch Words as Bleſſing, Conſecrating, Sanctifying, are pronounced.

[e] Creatura Incenſi, Creatura Aquæ, Creatura Salis, &c. are the uſual Terms of the Pontifical, as already hinted.

[f] Pontific. Rom.

[g] Vide the fifth Compartment in the Cut.

[h] It is the Hymn beginning with theſe Words, Veni, Sancte Spiritus, &c.

[i] That is ſtanding, and without the Mitre. One of his Aſſiſtants afterwards ſays, Flectamus Genua, upon which all kneel but the Celebrant. The other Aſſiſtant ſays, Levate, and all riſe with him.

peats

Vol. 1.

The CELEBRANT anoints w.th CHRISME the twelve CROSSES on the Walls.

Le CELEBRANT oint avec le S.t CHRÊME, les douze CROIX des Murailles.

He CROSSES the front of the ALTER with holy CHRISME.

Il fait avec le S.t CHRÊME une CROIX *au devant de L'*AUTEL.

He BLESSES y.e Plate design'd for the Service of the ALTER.

Il BENIT les VAISEAUX, *qui doivent servir à L'*AUTEL.

He pours oil and CHRISME on the ALTER-TABLE.

Il VERSE *de L'*HUILE et du CHRÊME sur la TABLE *de L'*AUTEL.

B. Picart del.

C. Du Bosc. ex.

He LIGHTS y.e five WAX CROSSES laid upon the five others of INCENSE.

Il ALLUME les CINQ CROIX de CIRE qui sont posée sur les cinq CROIX *d'*ENCENS.

He CONSECRATES the ORNAMENTS of y.e ALTER.

Il CONSACRE le PAREMENS *de L'*AUTEL.

peats the per omnia, which we have already ſpoken of, moderately loud, ſtretching his Hands forth at the ſame Time, even with his Breaſt.

THE Altars at Rome are on Thurſday and Friday in Paſſion-Week ſtripped of their Decorations, and waſhed with Water and Wine. This ſtripping them, denotes the Chriſtian's Sorrow for our Saviour's Sufferings, or elſe repreſents the Manner in which he was ſtripped and ſcourged. The Ablution with Water and Wine, is a Symbol of the Blood and Water which iſſued out of his Side.

The CROSS before the ALTAR.

AFTER all thoſe Croſſes with which the Celebrant has been bleſſing, conſecrating, and ſanctifying the Altar, &c. one would imagine the Ceremony was compleated. But far from it, there ſtill wants one for the Front of the Altar, which is made with the Chriſm, and attended with a Prayer; and then the Sub-Deacons come and rub it with Towels appointed for that, and no other Purpoſe. The Celebrant ſeats himſelf near the Altar, and rubs his Hands with the Crumb of Bread, then waſhes and wipes them in Form; after which the Acolytes preſent him the Cloths, Linen, Veſſels, and all the other Ornaments of the Altar, to bleſs. Theſe Circumſtances are peculiar to this Ceremony. There is nothing remarkable in the Conſecration of the Portable Altar, nor in the Benediction of any Altar alone, where there is no Dedication of the Church. As to the Conſecration of the Portable Altar, a few ſmall Relics, and three Grains of Incenſe are prepared for that Part whereon it is to be conſecrated, and the Ceremony muſt be performed faſting. The Prieſt, if he thinks fit, may ſay Maſs after the Conſecration.

The Benediction of the VESSELS and ORNAMENTS of the ALTAR.

[a] THE Celebrant ſprinkles theſe Veſſels and Ornaments with holy Water; after which his Miniſters ſpread the Chriſmal upon the Altar, and put on the reſt of the Decorations, as the Croſs, &c. The Celebrant begins the firſt Verſe of the Anthem ſtanding, which is ſucceeded by a Pſalm, and then he proceeds to the Altar, kiſſes the Croſs, and perfumes the Altar with Incenſe three Times. After this he prays, and then goes into the Sacriſty, takes off his Pluvial, [b] and returns with the Sandals, waſhes his Hands, and dreſſes himſelf all in white. The Church is adorned, the Altar is illuminated, and the officiating Prieſt ſays Maſs, if the Fatigue he has undergone will permit him; if not, it is perform'd by another.

[a] Pontif. Rom.

[b] Si celebrare voluerit, adds the Roman Pontifical.

A

DISSERTATION

ON THE

CEREMONIES

OF THE

ROMAN CATHOLICS.

PART III.

Treating of ſuch Cuſtoms as relate to Devotion in the Roman Catholic Church.

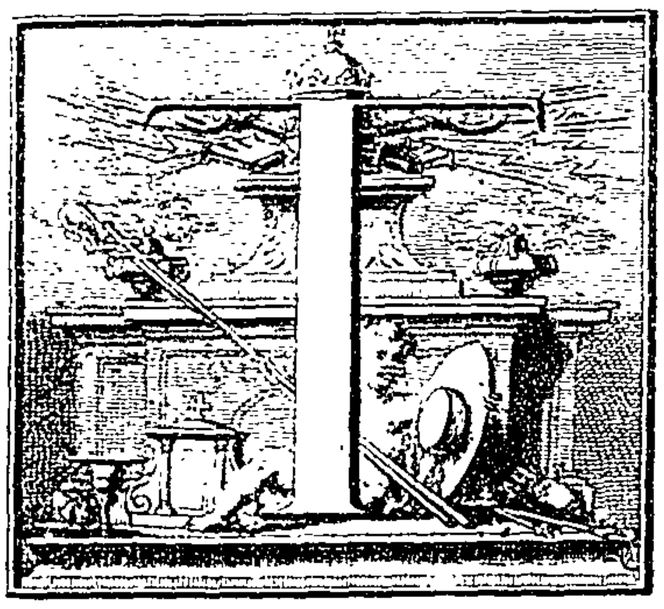
A

DISSERTATION

ON THE

CEREMONIES

OF THE



ROMAN CATHOLICS.

PART III.

Treating of ſuch Cuſtoms as relate to Devotion in the Roman Catholic Church.

CHAP. I.

The Benediction of AGNUS DEI'S.

HE [a] Pope performs the Ceremony of [b] baptiſing and giving his Benediction to the Agnus Dei's in the firſt Year of his Pontificate, and every ſeventh Year repeats it. We ſhall now give the Reader a ſhort Deſcription of theſe Agnus's. They are a Sort of Paſtils made of Wax, in the Form of an Oval Medal, upon which Jeſus Chriſt is repreſented under the Appearance of a Lamb holding a Croſs; for which Reaſon theſe Paſtils are called Agnus's. [c] This Wax was formerly provided by one [d] of the Gentlemen of his Holineſs's Chamber, who held his Office from the Maſter or Chamberlain of the ſacred Palace. Such as were deſirous to have any Agnus's laid Wax upon St. Peter's Altar; and an Apoſtolic Sub-Deacon fetch'd it from the Altar, and carried it

[a] Cerem. Eccl. Rom. Lib. I. p. 37. Edit. of 1516.
[b] At Rome this Ceremony is called Baptiſing.
[c] Cerem. Eccl. Rom. Ibid.
[d] Magiſter Cereæ Palatii Apoſtolici.

to

to an Apartment in the Pontiff's Palace. The Sub-Deacon and his Collegues, aſſiſted by ſome of the Acolytes, moulded the Wax, and, [a] with great Devotion, Reſpect, and Neatneſs, made it up into Agnus's, according to the Directions of the Roman Ceremonial. Theſe ſacred Paſtils were provided entirely at the Expence of the Apoſtolic Chamber. The Wax, which was the Ground-work or Subſtance of them, was melted in a Quantity of ſacred Oil and Chriſm of the foregoing Year. When the Materials were compleatly prepared, the Agnus's were preſented to the Pontiff in one or more Baſons, and he gave them his Benediction. [b] In this pious Work the Prelate who is his Holineſs's Sacriſtan, employs his Chaplain, and the Clerks of the Chapel. The Wax of which they are made, is taken from the Remains of the laſt Year's Eaſter Wax; and as that would not be near ſufficient, the Apoſtolic Chamber ſupplies them with more.

[c] THE Sacriſtan performs the Benediction over the Water on Eaſter Tueſday, and the next Day, as ſoon as the Pontifical Maſs is ended, his Holineſs, dreſſed in his Amict, his Albe, his Stole of white Damaſk with a Silver Lace, and having a Mitre of Cloth of Gold upon his Head, conſecrates the Water which was bleſſed by the Sacriſtan the Day before. This Water is put into a large Silver Baſon; the Conſecration conſiſts of the uſual Bleſſings, to which the Holy Father adds a Prayer to Almighty God, that he would vouc'ıſafe to ſanctify ſuch Things [d] as waſh away the Sins of Mankind, &c. after which he takes ſome Balm, and pours it into the Water, adding thereto the holy Chriſm, which he likewiſe pours into it in the Form of a Croſs. He offers up ſeveral Prayers to God during the Performance of this Ceremony; then he turns to the Agnus's, [e] bleſſes and incenſes them, imploring God to ſhower down upon them all the Virtues generally aſcribed to them. A ſecond and third Prayer follow; after which his Holineſs, ſeated in an eaſy Chair prepared purpoſely for him, [f] having a Napkin girt about him, and his Mitre on, takes the Agnus's, which the Gentlemen of the Chamber preſent him in Silver gilt Baſons, one after another, and throws them into the holy Water; the Cardinals, in their fine Linen Albes, take them out the next Moment, with a Spoon made uſe of for no other Purpoſe. Their Eminencies aftewards lay them on a Table covered with a clean white Cloth, and there wipe them with a Napkin, which they likewiſe wear in the Form of an Apron, and the Aſſiſtant Prelates range them upon the Table, where they are left till they are thoroughly dry. After this [g] Baptiſm of them is over, the Holy Father riſes, and in a Prayer addreſſes himſelf to the Holy Ghoſt, beſeeching him to bleſs them, and then makes his Application to JESUS CHRIST; after this they are put into the Baſons again, and his Holineſs takes all the Cardinals to Dinner with him, who [h] have aſſiſted him in this Office. This Work is reſumed the Thurſday following, and continued till they are all bleſſed, which is always on the Friday. This Ceremony is performed in the Preſence of ſeveral Ambaſſadors, and Multitudes of Strangers, whom Curioſity brings thither to be Spectators.

THE Saturday following, being the Day on which the Agnus's are diſtributed, there is a Chapel held, and Maſs ſung by a Cardinal Prieſt, at which his Holineſs aſſiſts in his Pontificalibus. " [i] As ſoon as the Agnus Dei is ſung, an Apoſtolic Sub-Deacon, dreſs'd " in his Robes, with the Croſs-Bearer, two Wax-Taper-Bearers, and the Thuriferary

[a] Cum magnâ devotione, reverentiâ, & munditiâ.

[b] Ceremon. Eccl. R. Ibid. Aimon in his Tableau de la Cour de Rome ſays, " That generally the Feuillants, or Monks of S. Bernard and S. Pudentiana, mould the Agnus's.

[c] Lunadoro, Relaz. &c.

[d] Quatenus ipſorum veneratione & honore nobis famulis tuis crimina diluantur, &c. Cerem. Eccl. Rom. Vide The Cut on which are inſcribed the Virtues of Agnus Dei's.

[e] Benedice, e Turifica de gl' Agnus. Lunadoro.

[f] Accinctus linteo.

[g] Cerem. Eccl. R. Omnibus Baptizatis.

[h] Lunadoro, Relaz. &c.

[i] Aimon. Tableau de la Cour de Rome.

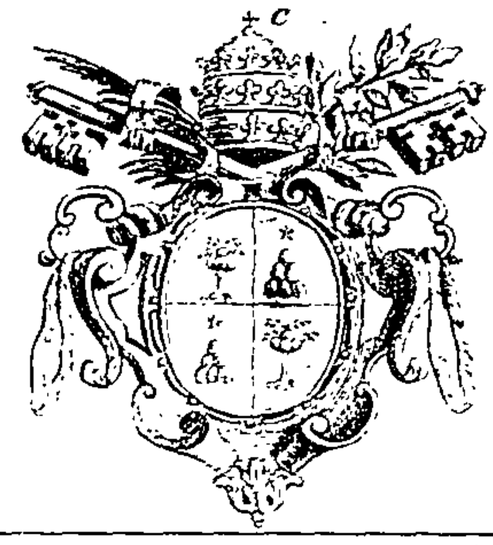
" before

A

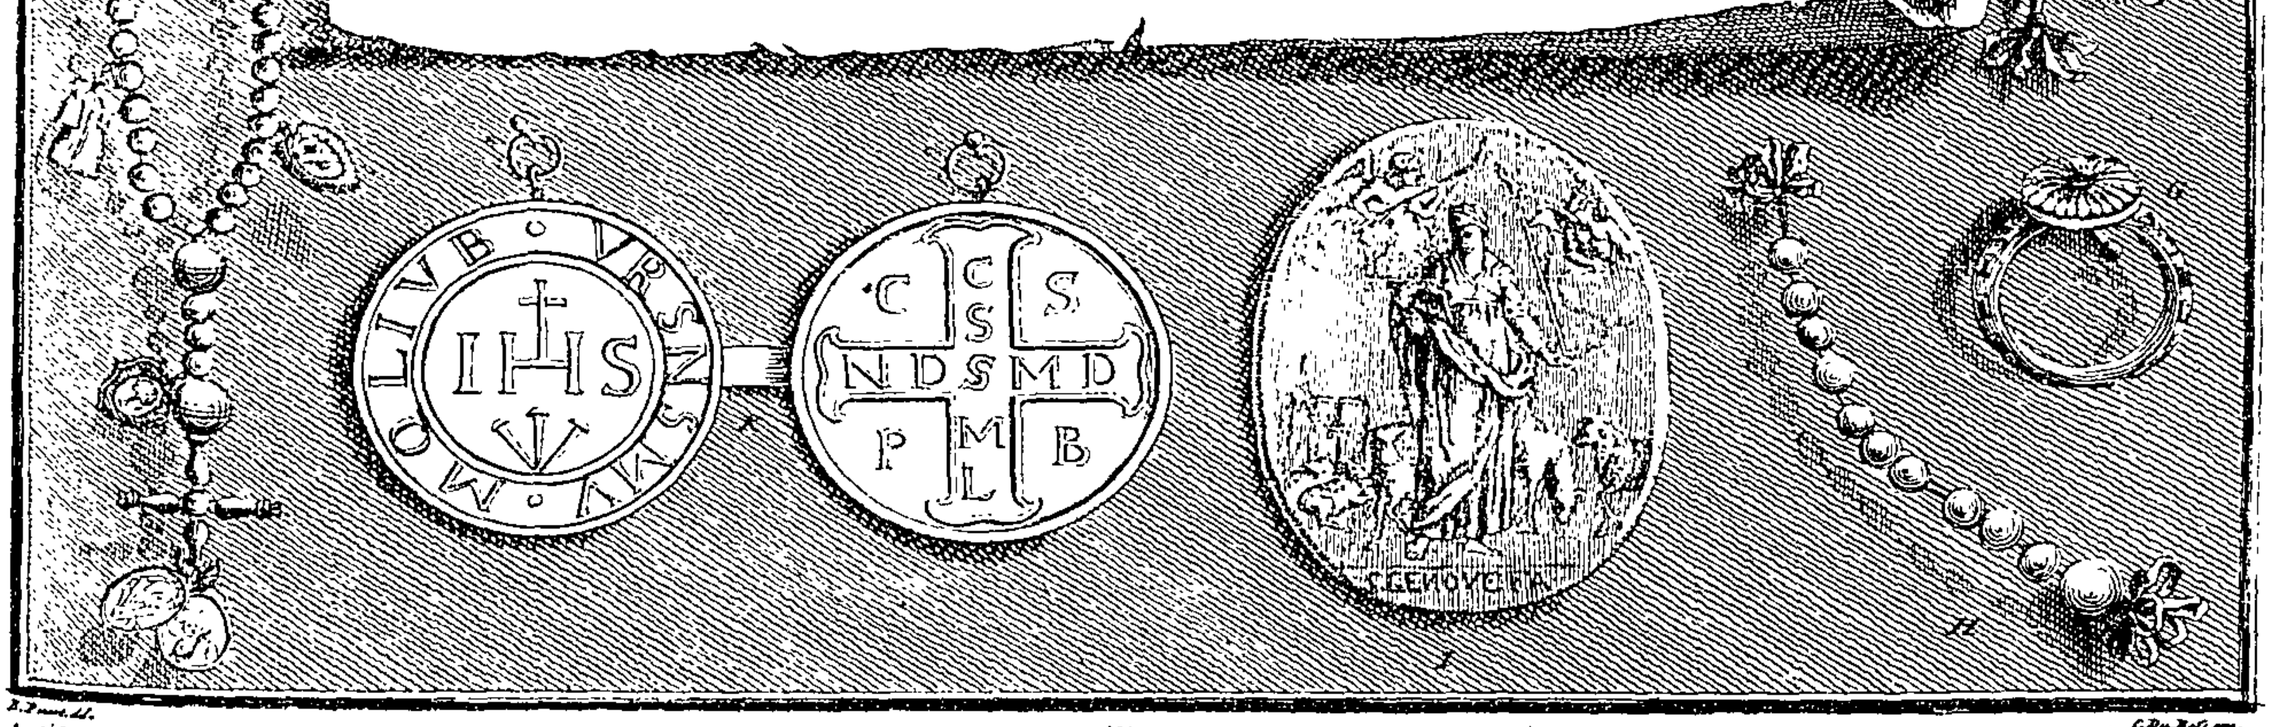


LES VERTVS DE L'AGNVS DEI,

Compose de Sainct Creſme, Baume, & pure cire. Extraict du liure appellè le Ceremonial, ou parlant de la Benediction d'iceux; les paroles ſuyuantes, ſe trouuent regiſtrées ſur la fin en ceſte maniere.

B

C



Il ſe lit que le Pape Vrbain V. enuoya à l'Empereur des Grecs trois Agnus Dei, auec ces vers & paroles.

Les tonnerres il chaſſe,
Les pechez il efface,
Sauue d'embraſement,
Et de ſubmergement,
Garde de mort ſubite,
Les Diables met en fuite,
Dompte les ennemis,
Hors de danger ſont mis
Et l'enfant & la Mere,
Qui trauaille à le faire
Il donne maint pouuoir
Aux dignes de l'auoir
La part quoy que petite
Tant que la grand profite

La Priere que le Pape faict à la Benediction de l'Agnus Dei

Qu'il efface les pechez, qu'on impetre pardon, qu'il confere les graces.
Que le touchant, & voyant, les Chreſtiens ſoient eſmeus à loüer Dieu.
Que le bruit de l'air, gresles, neiges, & tempeſtes, la furie des Vents, & des Tonnerres. ſoient moderez, & arreſtez.
Que deuant le Salutaire, & glorieux eſtendart de la Croix, qui y eſt figure, les eſprits malings s'eſpouuantent, & s'enfuyent.
Que celuy qui les porte, aye vertu contre les illuſions, tromperies, aſtuces, & fraudes du Diable, & des eſprits malings.
Qu'aulcune tempeſte, aduerſité, air peſtilentiel, ou corrompu, ni mal caduc; auleune tourmente, tempeſtes de mer, aulcun feu, ou aultres iniures de temps, ne puiſſent offenſer, nuire, ny preiudicier, à celuy qui le portera deuotement ſur ſoy.
Qu'en l'accouchement ſoient conſeruez la Mere, & l'enfant
Que tous ceulx qui le portent, puiſſent eſtre touſiours en ſeureté, qu'ils ne craignent aulcun peril, qu'ils n'ayent point peur des ombres, qu'aulcune cruauté du Diable ne les endommage, qu'ils ne puiſſent eſtre trompez des hommes, qu'ils ſoient exempts de tous perils, de feu, de fouldre, de tourmente, & tempeſtes: Et que les femmes enfantent ſans trauail, & ſoient deliurées de mal, & de tout danger.

A ROME, Chez l'Imprimeur de la Chambre Apoſtolique. 1662.
auec permiſſion des Superieurs.

B. The Medal.

C. Du Dessein.

A. A Correct copy of the printed Schedule, given by the Pope along with Agnus Dei's. —— a sort of wax medals with the representation of a lamb upon them as appears at Letter B.
B. The Reverse is the Image of some Saint.
C. The Coat of Armes of Pope Alexander VII. who first granted the Schedule A.
D. The Scapular.
E. The Rosary consisting of 15 tens, or 150 beads.
F. A Common Chaplet embellish'd with Relics &c.
G. A Ring used by the Knights of Malta in saying their Rosary; The Rose at the top turns on a spring and marks out by the small black dial hand the number of tens already said, on the 15 figures placed upon the rim. H. A pair of Tens.
I. St. Genevieve's Bread, being a kind of buskets given by the monks to cure fevers.
K. A Bleſt Medal made of Braſs, and worn at their heads by the Nuns of the Charity at Paris, in Order to preſerve their Virginity.

A. L'epie exacte de la feuille imprimée, que le Pape donne avec les Agnus Dei, qui est une espece de medaille de cire, representant un Agneau comme on le voit a la lettre B. cette medaille a pour revers l'image de quelque Saint.
C. Les Armes du Pape Alexandre VII. que a donné l'original de la susdite feuille A.
D. Le Scapulaire.
E. Le Rosaire, Chapelet compose de 15 dizaines.
F. Chapelet ordinaire enrichi de Reliques &c.
G. Bague dont les Chevaliers de Malthe, se servent pour dire leur Rosaire, la Rose qui est au dessus tourne avec ressort, et marque avec le petit point noir, sur les 15 chifres qui sont autour, le nombre des dizaines deja dites. H. Dizaine pour dire son chapelet.
I. Pain de S.te Genevieve ou espece de petit biscuit, ce que les Religieuses de S.te Genevieve distribuent pour la fievre.
K. Medaille Benite de Cuivre que les soeurs de la Charité a paris portent a leur chapelet pour conserver leur virginité.

" before him, goes to the Pontiff's Sacriſtan, and takes from him a Baſon full of thoſe " Agnus Dei's, lately bleſſed, and wrapped up in a parti-colour'd China Cotton." The Sub-Deacon is followed by a Clerk of the Ceremonies, and two Chaplains in their Surplices. When theſe are got to the Door of the Chapel, they all kneel, and the Sub-Deacon with an audible [a] Voice ſings theſe Words in corrupt Latin. [b] Holy Father, theſe are the new Lambs, who have ſung their Allelujahs to you. They drank not long ago at the Fountain of holy Water. They are now very light, or rather very much enlightened. Praiſe the Lord. To which the Muſic in the Choir anſwer: God be praiſed: Allelujah. After this the Sub-Deacon riſes, and walks forwards. As ſoon as he gets to the Entrance of the Baniſters in the Chapel, he repeats the Words juſt before-mentioned. When he approaches the Pontifical Throne, he repeats them a third Time, and proſtrates himſelf at his Holineſs's Feet, who receives him ſitting with his Mitre on. When the Croſs enters, however, he and the whole Congregation riſe; but the Holy Father ſits down again immediately, tho' the Sub-Deacon remains kneeling at his Feet, whilſt he thus diſtributes the Agnus's.

Two Auditors take a fine white Napkin, and preſent it to two Cardinal-Deacons Aſſiſtants, who lay it in a decent Manner on his Holineſs's Knees; and the two former hold the two Ends of the Napkin, whilſt the ſacred College partake of the holy Father's Munificenc. Their Eminenees, after their uſual Teſtimonies of Reſpect and Veneration paid, preſent their Mitres to his Holineſs with the Horns downwards, who puts as many Agnus's as he thinks proper into them. [c] Formerly he beſtowed no more than three a piece to the ſacred College, two to the other Prelates, and one to the Clergy, &c. Their Eminences kiſs his Holineſs's Hand and Knee. After they and the Clergy have received their Share, ſeveral Ambaſſadors, and other Perſons of Diſtinction, come forward with white Napkins, to partake in their Turn of theſe Spiritual Benefits. The Holy Father, indeed, is not ſo liberal and indulgent to theſe as to others; but puts a reaſonable Number, however, of Agnus's into their Napkins.

The Diſtribution thus made, the Pope waſhes his Hands, the ſacred College unrobe, the Celebrant returns to the Altar, [d] Maſs concludes with a double Allelujah, and his Holineſs beſtows his Benediction on his Children, with a great many Indulgences, which are publiſhed by the Celebrant. The Popes, we find by the Roman Ceremonial, had formerly a Baſon full of Agnus's brought to Table after Dinner, which they diſtributed among the Apoſtolic Court.

" [e] All the Agnus Dei's, which remain out of the prodigious Quantity that have " been bleſſed, are left in the Prelate's Cuſtody, who is Maſter of the Pope's Wardrobe, " .... and he diſtributes them every Day at certain Hours among the Pilgrims and other " Foreigners, who go and ask for them. By one of the Conſtitutions of Pope Gre- " gory the Thirteenth, made in 1572. all ſuch as were not in holy Orders, were for- " bidden to touch theſe Agnus Dei's, unleſs on ſome emergent Occaſions; and, as a ſtill " greater Precaution, all Laymen were directed to have them ſet in Glaſs, or Cryſtal, " or ſuch other Things as were tranſparent; and that ſuch as had the Means of wrap- " ping them up in ſome rich Embroidery, ſhould ſo order it, that the Agnus might " appear on one Side as in a Reliquary. Printing them was likewiſe prohi- " bited by the ſame Conſtitution, upon Pain of Excommunication; the Whiteneſs of " the Wax, in which theſe Figures in Relievo were formed, being eſteemed by that [a] Cerem. Eccl. R. Lib. II. Fol. 111.

[b] Pater Sancte, iſti ſunt agni novelli, qui annunciaverunt vobis Alleluja. Modo veniunt ad fontes: Repleti ſunt claritate. Alleluja.

[c] Cerem. Eccl. R. Lib. II.

[d] Ite, miſſa eſt, cum duplici Alleluja, Ibid.

[e] Tableau de la Cour, &c.

" Pope more ſuitable than any other Colour whatſoever, ...to repreſent the immaculate
" Lamb of God. Theſe are the Words made uſe of by all the Popes down from Gregory
" the Thirteenth to this Day, ... in ſpeaking of the miraculous Effects of Agnus's.

THE Origin of this Ceremony was thus : [a] In the earlieſt Ages of the Church, ſmall Figures in Wax, which repreſented Chriſt under the Form of a Lamb, were given to thoſe who came to be baptized. Theſe Catechumens wore them about their Necks. This Cuſtom ſeems to have ſucceeded in the Room of the Heathen Amulets. The Romans hung the Figure of a Heart, and of another certain Part of the human Body, about the Necks of their young Children, as Tokens both of the Courage and Strength of the Male Sex; but Chriſtians, as Diſciples of a better Maſter, introduced that of a Lamb in their Stead, which is the Emblem of Humility and Patience. The antient Heathens look'd upon thoſe Figures which they called Bullæ, as Preſervatiues againſt Charms and Enchantments, and the thouſand other Caſualties to which the Life of Man is daily expoſed. For which Reaſon they were peculiarly beſtowed on Children, who are more liable to Accidents than ſuch Perſons as are grown to Maturity. And for the ſame Reaſon Care is taken now-a-days to provide them with Agnus's and Scapularies.

CHAP. II.

The CANONIZATION of SAINTS.

BEFORE the [b] Perſon to be canoniz'd is regiſtred amongſt the Number of the Saints, his Holineſs holds four Conſiſtories. The two firſt are private, the third public, and the fourth between both. In the firſt, he cauſes the Petition of thoſe, who demand to have their Saint univerſally acknowledged as ſuch in the Catholic Church, to be examined by three Auditors of the Rota, and directs the Cardinals to reviſe all the Inſtruments relating thereunto. In the ſecond, the Cardinals make their Report. The third, [c] as we have already obſerved, is held in public, in which the Cardinals pay their Adoration to his Holineſs; after which, one of the Conſiſtorial Advocates makes the Elogium of the Perſon who is to be proclaimed a Saint, and gives a long and particular Account of the Life and Miracles of this faithful Servant of God; nay, he often enters into his moſt hidden Secrets, purſues him thro' all his Thoughts, and examines the minuteſt Motives, by which he acted, with all that Exactneſs which is neceſſary, when People are about to acknowledge a new Interceſſor with God, and to add him to the Body of Mediators, appointed at different Times, for the faithful Members of the Church. The fourth is neither public nor private, and is held in the Ducal Hall, where his Holineſs aſſiſts in his plain Mitre and Pluvial; at which no Adoration is paid to him. Patriarchs, Archbiſhops, Biſhops, Prothonotaries, and Auditors of the Rota, are admitted at this Conſiſtory, and the Train-Bearers perform their Office dreſs'd in Purple; but after the Extra, every Body goes out, but the Prelates beforementioned. This Conſiſtory is held for taking the Votes of thoſe Prelates, who are for and againſt the Canonization, and, as ſoon as it is reſolved upon by Plurality of Voices, the Pope [d] intimates the Day appointed for the Ceremony.

ON the Canonization-Day, the Pope officiates in white, and the Cardinals are dreſs'd in the ſame Colour. St. Peter's Church is hung with rich Tapeſtry, upon which ap-

[a] Caſalius De Ritibus, &c.
[b] Seſtini's Maeſtro di Camera.
[c] In the Hall called the Royal.
[d] Vide Chiapponi Acta Can. &c. Romæ 1720.

pear

pear the Arms of his Holineſs, or of that Prince or State which requires the Canonization, embroider'd with Gold and Silver. The Church is moſt pompouſly illuminated, where millions of Chriſtian Souls wait, in all probability, with a devout Impatience, till the canonized Saint has made his public Entry into Paradiſe, in order to addreſs their Petitions to him without Danger of being rejected. We ſhall enlarge upon the Particulars of the Canonization, when we ſhall give you a Deſcription of this Ceremony, as it was performed in the Pontificate of Clement XI.

CANONIZATION coſts thoſe Princes immenſe Sums, who are deſirous of the Glory of procuring it for ſome favourite Chriſtian. Beatification, as they call it, is in ſome meaſure the Fore-runner of it. Beatitude naturally leads us to Sanctity, and to a Suppoſition, that he that is accounted bleſſed here below, ought to be acknowledged as ſuch in Heaven: Several Beati, however, have never yet been able to obtain to true Holineſs; either becauſe they have not been able to procure the neceſſary Teſtimonies and Certificates, or have not performed a ſufficient Number of Miracles to get them declared Saints; for Saints, and Soldiers who labour at Preferment in the military Way, are in the ſame Circumſtances. They muſt both produce ſome Tokens at leaſt of a ſuperior Courage; and as the great Men of this World cannot always form a juſt Judgment of Merit by themſelves, it is requiſite for both the one and the other to have Patrons to diſplay their Virtues, and Advocates to plead in their Behalf.

THE Birth of Martyrs, the Commemoration of their Death, the Oblations made to their Memory in thoſe ſolemn Feſtivals, and the extraordinary Veneration which the Church ſhewed for thoſe brave and intrepid Champions for the Cauſe of Truth, were earlier by many Ages than the Canonization of Saints. [a] Some Footſteps of invoking them, however, may be traced ſeveral Years before the firſt Council of Nice. The Cuſtom of collecting their Relics, which were ſcattered about in very different Places upon Account of Perſecutions, was introduced at the Cloſe of the third and Beginning of the fourth Century. The Proteſtant Writer quoted below, inſinuates, That [b] the Invocation of Saints was owing to the Rhetorical Figures of the Chriſtian Orators of thoſe firſt Ages. But be that as it will, from that Time devout Excurſions were made to the Tombs of Martyrs, nor did theſe Travellers ever return without bringing home ſome Parts of their ſacred Bodies. The ſurpriſing Virtues which were diſcovered in thoſe Relics, for the Cure of ſuch as were diſeaſed, and the Salvation of Men's Souls, gave Birth to their Tranſlation. It was the received Opinion, that the Bodies of the Saints were able to draw down the Bleſſings of Heaven on Cities and States; and whole Nations put themſelves under their Protection. The numberleſs Miracles which are related in the Legends, as well antient as modern, convinced the Populace, that the Protection of Saints was a Circumſtance of the laſt Importance. Their Images were erected in their Churches, and their Names included in their Litanies. To that Time Canonizations were made by a tacit Conſent of the Clergy, without the leaſt Formality imaginable; but the Uſe of Regiſters, known by the Name of Diptics, had obtained long before that, in which were ſet down the Names of Martyrs, and thoſe who died in a Reputation for Holineſs, after having diſtinguiſhed themſelves by a virtuous Life; nay, they often regiſtred the Names of ſuch as had no other Pretenſions but their noble Extraction.

THERE is no Inſtance, as we can find, of a ſolemn Canonization, before that of St. Sibert, whom Pope Leo III. canonized about the Beginning of the ninth Century; tho' ſome attribute the firſt ſolemn Canonization to P. Adrian, and others are of Opinion that St. Ulric, who was canonized by Pope John XIV. or XV. in 993. was the firſt

[a] Hiſtory of Ceremonies and Superſtitions, Ed. of 1717.
[b] Idem.

Saint

Saint canonized in Form; and ſome again aſcribe the Glory of this Inſtitution to Pope Alexander III.

FROM what has been ſaid, 'tis manifeſt, that Canonization by the Church, bears a very great Affinity to the antient Deification of the Romans, and in all probability owes its Riſe to it. At leaſt ſeveral Ceremonies of the ſame Nature are conſpicuous in both. Such, as to the latter, are the Senate's Approbation of thoſe whom they deified, the Examination into their Lives and Virtues, the Hymns and Forms of Prayer which were compoſed in Honour of thoſe ſubordinate Deities, the Temples erected for them, and the Prieſts appointed for their Service. It would be impertinent to produce a more circumſtantial Compariſon; for which Reaſon we ſhall only obſerve, that thoſe great Men, thus advanced to the Rank of Gods at Rome, were not always worſhipped even in thoſe Provinces which were ſubject to the Roman Government, and much leſs in Countries out of their Juriſdiction. In the ſame manner our Saints are not acknowledged in all Places alike. The Eaſtern Churches have ſeveral which our Calenders take no manner of Notice of; and ſome of ours are omitted in theirs; and yet thoſe who have written the Lives of the Saints both of the Eaſt and Weſt, or endeavoured to have them canonized, demonſtrate by a great Number of Miracles, that both the one and the other may be addreſſed to without the leaſt Scruple or Offence.

[a] THE Acts of Canonization of Pope Pius V. Andrew d'Avellino, Felix de Cantalice, and Catharine de Bolognia, will ſupply us with an ample Account of all the Particulars of this Ceremony. Theſe four holy Perſons were canonized in 1712. in the Pontificate of Clement XI. In the private Conſiſtory held by his Holineſs on that Topic, he declared [b] that the Miſeries of a War, and the Fear of a Peace, which might be fatal to Religion, had [c] prevail'd on him to procure new Patrons, who might have Credit with God for the afflicted Church, in Hopes they would uſe their utmoſt Endeavours to appeaſe his Wrath, and thereby reconcile them to the divine Majeſty. Then followed a Narrative of their Lives and Miracles. There were two Images of this Saint miraculouſly preſerved from Fire; and one ſingle Touch only of the Saint's Shirt, healed a Perſon afflicted with a dangerous Diſtemper, who had put himſelf under his Protection. Thus you have two out of the ſix which the Congregation of Rites approved of in the Account given them relating to St. Pius V. After his Holineſs ordered the Votes to be taken, in order to proceed to their Canonization. We ſhall paſs over the Conſiſtories held after this Reſolution, and ſay nothing of the Panegyrics which were pronounced in Honour of the four Saints. The Seſſion of Conſiſtories was ſucceeded by a Diſtribution of Indulgences, which the Cardinal, who is his Holineſs's Vicar-General, promiſed to theſe pious Chriſtians, who, after they had faſted the fourth, ſixth, and ſeventh of May 1712. and confeſſed within that Week, and afterwards communicated, ſhould viſit, for ſeveral Days together, the Baſilica's of St. John de Lateran, St. Peter and St. Mary Major. The whole City ſtrove to partake of thoſe Liberalities, which his Holineſs, as Heaven's Treaſurer, offered to all Nations; the Curates publiſhed to their reſpective Flocks the glad Tidings, which the Vicar of Chriſt promiſed to all true Penitents; and the Holy Father himſelf offered up the Body of our bleſſed Saviour in his private Chapel, and gave the Communion, to ſuch as had the Honour to be admitted, with his own Hands. In ſhort, the more effectually to excite and ſtir up the Devotion of Chriſtians, his Holineſs himſelf, with great Humility, viſited the abovementioned Baſilica's on the firſt Sunday in May, and the ſacred College were invited to follow his pious Example in their ſcarlet Robes; but on Days of Penance they appeared in Purple.

[a] Acta Canon. printed at Rome in 1720.

[b] Republicâ Chriſtianâ bellorum procellis agitatâ —— timendum magis eſt ne —— deterior bello pax —— orthodoxæ Religioni maxime perniciosa —— coaleſcat.

[c] In tanto rerum diſcrimine —— novos ac validos afflictis Eccleſiæ rebus apud divinam bonitatem patronos quærere decrevimus, qui ſcripti ſint —— lenire iracundiam Dei, &c.

Great

Great Numbers of Relics were expoſed, and Prayers and Humiliations were offered up to God as they went along. All this Devotion was with Deſign to cauſe the Holy Ghoſt to deſcend into the Hearts of ſuch as were to ſet the laſt Hand to the Canonization of the four Saints, which was at laſt executed in the Demi-public Conſiſtories held on that Occaſion; and in Conſequence thereof, his Holineſs appointed the twenty ſecond of May, for the public Entry of theſe new Saints; a Day in every Reſpect ſolemn, the Feſtival of the Holy Trinity being celebrated at the ſame Time. Whilſt Preparations were making for ſo pompous and magnificent a Ceremony, the Vicar-General ordered freſh Indulgences to be fixed up in all the public Places, together with an Abſolution and Pardon of Sins to all ſuch, as, upon Confeſſion and Communion, ſhould by any Acts of Devotion intereſt themſelves in the Canonization of the four Saints, and afterwards appear at the Proceſſion of that Day. As to thoſe Devotees, who might be hindred from being preſent at it, through any extraordinary Accidents, they had a Share in the Indulgences, upon the Repetition of three Pater Noſters, and three Ave Maria's, on that Morning the Bells ſhould ring at Rome.

A MAGNIFICENT Theatre is always erected in St. Peter's Church, for the Ceremony of Canonization. That which was prepared for theſe four new Saints ſhall be deſcribed immediately. On the Day the Ceremony is to be performed, the Entrance to the Theatre is lin'd by the Swiſs Guards, who are likewiſe poſted at the Doors of the Baſilica; a Detachment of the Horſe-Guards is drawn up in St. Peter's Square, another of the Cuiraſſiers in that of the Vatican, and a third in all the Streets through which the Proceſſion paſſes. Theſe Guards, together with thoſe which are poſted in the other Quarters of Rome, and the Garriſon of Caſtle St. Angelo, make a general Diſcharge of their Artillery, when the Signal is given that the Ceremony is begun, and all the Bells in the City are rung at the ſame Time. Te Deum is ſung to inſtrumental Muſic, &c. This, however, is a general Idea only of this Day's Solemnity, but what follows is a particular Deſcription of thoſe Honours which Pope Clement XI. paid in 1712. to thoſe Saints who were publickly acknowledged by his Holineſs as the Mediators of all Chriſtians with Jeſus Chriſt.

ALL the Avenues of St. Peter's were lined on the twenty ſecond of May, in the Manner we have obſerved; and nothing leſs was ſufficient to withſtand the impetuous Force of the vaſt Concourſe of People, of all Ages and Sexes, whom Devotion and Curioſity had equally, perhaps, brought thither to ſee the Ceremony. This prodigious Concourſe of all Ranks and Degrees, flocked from every Part of Rome to St. Peter's by Break of Day; whilſt the Clergy, both Secular and Regular, according to the Order iſſued out to them, aſſembled at the Vatican. The Cardinal-Deacons then robed the Pope in his proper Ornaments; after which his Holineſs ſet out for Sixtus's Chapel, with the Croſs before, and the Clergy behind him. As ſoon as he arrived there, he made the Sign of the Croſs over his devout Retinue, took off his Triple Crown, and kneeling down prayed before the Altar. Afterwards he gave out the Hymn, which begins with theſe Words, Ave Maris Stella, &c. and then kneel'd down again till the Muſic of the Chapel had made an End of it. Whereupon the Holy Father riſing, put on his Mitre, went again [a] into his Chair, and there received from Cardinal Albani, who was his Nephew, and Petitioner for the Canonization, two large painted Tapers, and a ſmall one, with the Arms of his Holineſs, and the Images of the Candidate-Saints upon them. His Eminence at preſenting them, kiſſed the Hand and Knee of the Pontiff his Uncle. One of theſe large Tapers was, by the Directions of his Holineſs, given to the Conſtable Colonna, in order to carry it in the Proceſſion before him, and to hold it in his Hand during the Ceremony of Canonization. The other was not diſpoſed of, there being no Perſon of ſuitable Quality preſent, to walk a-breaſt with the Conſtable on this ſolemn Occaſion. The ſmall Taper was given to the Cup-Bearer, firſt Chamberlain to his Holineſs; but a general Diſtribution of Tapers was firſt made among the Clergy, each of them being diſtinguiſhed according to his Rank and Dignity. The four Standards, on which were painted the Images of the four Saints, and which were to be carried in the Proceſſion, were planted under the Portico, near Conſtantine's Steps; that being the general Rendezvous of this religious Army. Their Arms were delivered to them at the Entrance of the Gate of the Vatican, from whence the Myriads, which compoſe the Regiments and Battalions of the Church, filed off Taper in Hand. We ſhall now give the Reader a particular Deſcription of the Order and March of thoſe Apoſtolic Troops.

[a] Sedes geſtatoria. The Chair in which he is carried to Chapel.

CHAP. III.

The General Proceſſion which was made at ROME on the twenty ſecond of May 1712. being the Day appointed for the CANONIZATION of four particular SAINTS.

THE Charity Boys of the Apoſtolic Hoſpital of St. Michael walked firſt, with lighted Tapers in their Hands; after them came the Orphans, the Fathers of the Convent belonging to the Church of St. Mary of Miracles of the third Order, the bare-foot Auguſtins of Jeſu Maria, the Capuchins, the Brothers of Charity, the Fathers de Mercie of St. Adrian, the Anchorets of St. Onuphrius, the Minims of Mount Trinity, the Fathers of St. Andrew of the Monks; thoſe of St. Francis's third Order, of St. Coſino and Damian, the Minors, Conventuals of the Holy Apoſtles, the Obſervantins of St. Mary in Ara Cœli, the Auguſtiniants of our Lady of the People, the Hermits of St. Auſtin, the Carmelites of St. Chryſogonus, thoſe of the Tranſpontina (or the other Side of the Tyber) the Servitors of St. Marcellus, the Jacobins of la Minerva, the Hieronomites of St. Alexis, the regular Canons of St. Saviour, the Friars of Mount Olivet of the Congregation of St. Bennet, the Citeaux of the Congregation of Tuſcany, thoſe of the Holy Croſs, the Feuillans of St. Bernard, the Fathers of the Congregation of Vallambroſa, the Camaldules of St. Gregory, the Benedictins of the Congregation of Mount Caſſino, the Canons Regular of St. Mary of Peace; then follow'd the Seculars in good Order, with their Standards before them, as well as the Regulars. A Camerlingo, or Chamberlain, who bore a ſacerdotal Stole, was their Serjeant, and directed the March. St. Mary on the other Side of the Tyber, and St. Laurence in Damaſo, who have the Precedence alternately every other Year, came next; and after them the reſpective Chapters of St. Mary Major, St. Peter of the Vatican, and St. John of Lateran.

AFTER theſe came the Officers of his Holineſs's Chapel, his Squires in their Caſſocs, the Procurators General of the five Mendicant Orders in their proper Ornaments, the Gentlemen of the Bed-Chamber in Red, the Fiſcal Procurator, the Commiſſary of the Apoſtolic Chamber, the Conſiſtorial Advocates, his Holineſs's private Chaplains, the Gentlemen of the Bed-Chamber, and the Muſic of the Chapel, ſinging without Intermiſſion Ava Maris Stella during the whole Proceſſion. After them appeared the [a] four coſtly

[a] The Church Militant, for ever at War with the World and the Devil, has preſerved in her Proceſſions an Image of the military Diſcipline of Worldlings. May not the Banner uſed in Proceſſions be compared to the Labarum? The Proceſſions of the old Romans were in many Things like the Proceſſions of our Devotees; but for that we ſhall refer the Reader to what we ſhall ſay of them in the Sequel of this Diſſertation.

and

and magnificent Banners, or Standards of the four Saints, on which were painted their Images and chief Miracles; the whole being executed by ſome of the moſt celebrated Artiſts. As the Precedency had been given to St. Catharine of Bologna, her Banner went firſt; that of St. Felix de Cantalice next; then came St. Andrew d'Avellino; and laſt of all St. Pius V. as Servant of Servants. Six of the Minor Obſervantins, each with a Taper in his Hand, walked before St. Catharin's Standard, attended by the Society of the Bolognians of St. Petronius; the Standard being ſupported by four of the principal Fathers of the Order. That of St. Felix, which was ſupported in the ſame Manner by ten Capuchin Friars, was carried at the Head of a numerous Detachment of the Fraternity of the Stigmata of St. Francis. Another Detachment of the ſame Fraternity followed St. Andrew d'Avellino's Standard, and the Fraternity of the Agoni-zants, that of St. Pius V. each in the Habits of their reſpective Fraternities; but the Agonizants had Sacks on. After them came the Referendaries; then the Regiſters of the high Court, the Voters of the Signature, and the Clerks of the Chamber. After them the Maſter of the ſacred Palace amidſt the Auditors of the Rota; then the Apoſtolic Acolyte, who perform'd the Office of Thuriferary, marched alone with the Thurible in his Hand; and ſeven more Acolytes, who walked in the [a] Figure of a Half-Moon, or Semicircle, followed him. Each of theſe laſt carried a magnificent ſilver Candleſtic, with a burning Taper in it. The Sub-Deacon, who was Croſs-Bearer, appeared in his white Robes, with the Pontifical Croſs in the Middle of them, having on each Side of him an Apoſtolic Officer with his red Staff. The Vatican Penitentiaries of the Society of Jeſus came next, dreſs'd in white, with their Hats on; and then the Abbots, Generals of Orders, the Aſſiſtant and Non-Aſſiſtant Prelates; and finally, the ſacred College; the Cardinal-Deacons firſt, then the Prieſts, and the Biſhops laſt. The Envoy of Bologna walked on the Left-Hand of the Prior of the Captains of the Quarters, followed by the Conſervators, who walk'd before the Conſtable and Governor of the City. The Cardinal-Deacons Aſſiſtants, with the Goſpel Cardinal-Deacon between them, walked before his Holineſs's Chair; then appeared the Pope himſelf. [b] Being about to open the Gates of Heaven to the new Saints, his Preſence gave new Life and Vigour to the Apoſtolic Troops, as he was ſeated on high in his Chair, and carried by eight proper Officers cloathed in Red. Eight of the ſenior Referendaries bore up a rich and pompous Canopy over the holy Father's Head, with Pikes embelliſhed with Silver; and the Swiſs Guard with their naked Sabres ſurrounded the Chair. His Holineſs was followed by an Apoſtolical Sub-Deacon, call'd the Auditor of the Mitre, who walked between two Gentlemen of the Privy Chamber in red Robes, at that Time actually in waiting. The Apoſtolical Prothonotaries Participants with their Deputies, and the mendicant Orders, with their Generals at their Head, dreſſed all in their proper Habiliments, cloſed the March, and brought up the Rear of this Army of the Faithful, in the Centre whereof march'd the Pope, Prelates, and Cardinals.

THE Proceſſion was ſucceeded by a prodigious Concourſe of People, [c] whom the Preſence of his Holineſs, and the ſober, modeſt, and religious Deportment of the Devotees in the Proceſſion, inſpired with ſo ardent a Devotion, that in an Inſtant nothing was ſeen but Tears, nothing heard but Sighs and Groans, Voices interrupted by Sobs, and the Cries of ſuch as preſſed forward to receive, as ſoon as poſſible, his Holineſs's Benediction. The whole Multitude fell down on their Knees, each Man ſmiting his Breaſt, and whilſt one was craving his immediate Bleſſing, another was petitioning for an Indulgence. His Holineſs, quite melted down with Compaſſion, could not refrain from Tears, whilſt he was diſtributing the Favours of Heaven amongſt his faithful

[a] In Hemicycli formam diſpoſiti. Acta Canon. &c.
[b] Janitor Cœli. Id. Ibid.
[c] Id. Ibid.

Subjects

Subjects on his Right Hand and on his Left. He [a] went through the Ranks weeping, bleſſing his People with one Hand, and holding with the other the ſmalleſt of the painted Tapers beforementioned, in a little white Veil, which was embroider'd with Gold, and intended to catch the Drops of Wax which ſhould accidentally fall from the ſacred Taper.

SUCH was the Proceſſion which marched towards St. Peter's, with Colours flying, where his Holineſs was received by the Clergy who belong'd to that Cathedral, whilſt the Choir ſung the Anthem, beginning with theſe Words; Tu es Petrus, Thou art Peter. His Holineſs ſeemed aſtoniſhed at the Pomp and Splendor of his Cathedral; and the holy Father ſure enough might juſtly ſay at the Sight of it, [b] I have ſeen the holy City, the New Jeruſalem, come down from Heaven, deck'd like a Bride for her Bridegroom. The Poſtulants, for ſo thoſe who ſue for the Canonization of any Beati are called, had laboured to exceed the Magnificence of all former Canonizations, which made the holy Father weep for Joy. As ſoon as he had quitted his Taper and Mitre, he went and proſtrated himſelf before the holy Sacrament, in the Chapel of the holy Trinity. The Eccleſiaſtical Senate followed his pious Example. His Holineſs then taking back the Taper and Mitre, return'd to his Chair, and was carried to the Altar of the Apoſtles. There he gave the Taper to his Cup-Bearer, (who held it in his Hand during the whole Ceremony) knelt upon his Seat, and prayed for ſome conſiderable Time; after which he beſtowed new Benedictions on the Congregation, went up to his Throne to perform the Function of the Vicar of Jeſus Chriſt, and there received the Adoration of the ſacred College. After this the moſt antient of the Cardinal-Biſhops went up to the Pontifical Throne, and placed himſelf on the Right, but ſo that his Face was towards the Left. The Cardinal who was deputed to demand the Canonization, moved forwards to the Steps of the Throne, having the Cardinal-Legate of Bologna on his Left-Hand, and a Conſiſtorial-Advocate on his Right; the Maſter of the Ceremonies, who attended the Cardinal-Poſtulant, being on the Legate's Left. They firſt bowed to the Altar and his Holineſs; then the Cardinal-Poſtulant roſe, and the Advocate, addreſſing himſelf in his Eminency's Name to the holy Father, begged that he would be graciouſly pleaſed [c] to order the four Beati to be enrolled amongſt the Saints of the Lord. No ſooner had he ſpoke, but one of the Gentlemen of the Pope's Bed-Chamber, Secretary of his Briefs, ſtanding up, reſum'd the Diſcourſe, and made a ſhort Eulogium on the Merit and Virtues of the four Beati, who were all Natives of Italy, and had immortalized themſelves by their religious Atchievements. Italy, indeed, is grown famous by the illuſtrious Names of ſeveral Saints. The Courage and Intrepidity of the two St. Francis's, of St. Anthony of Padua, &c. are well known, [d] thoſe bold and generous Soldiers of the Armies of the Lord, who ſubdued the Kingdom of Heaven by their Chriſtian Virtues, and acquired a far ſuperior Reputation to that of the Heroes of ancient Rome; for whoſe Glory, to ſpeak the Truth, Italy ſeems to have long ago renounced all Claim and Pretenſions.

THE Gentleman of the Bed-Chamber cloſed his Harangue with an Exhortation to the Aſſembly to beg the Light of God's Spirit upon ſo delicate an Occaſion. Then his Holineſs roſe off his Throne, and all the Clergy knelt; two Muſicians of the Chapel, dreſſed in their Surplices, and kneeling, ſung the Litanies of the Saints; after which the Cardinal-Poſtulant for the Canonization repeated his Inſtances; and this was ſucceeded by a Prayer to Almighty God to implore the Aſſiſtance of his holy Spirit, and then the holy Father ſung the Veni Creator Spiritus, which is a Hymn addreſſed to the third Perſon in the ſacred Trinity. The two Muſicians ſung the Verſe which begins

[a] Inter utrumque Clerum præteriens, Id. Ibid.
[b] Id. Ibid.
[c] Id. Ibid.
[d] Id Ibid.

gins with Emitte Spiritum, and the Pontiff called upon the Holy Ghoſt, whilſt they they continued ſtanding with Tapers in their Hands, before the Steps of the Throne. A third and laſt Requeſt, made in the ſame Manner as the former, ſucceeded this Invocation. Then the Secretary of the Briefs reſumed the Diſcourſe, and [a] declared it was Time to acquieſce with God's Commands. His Holineſs, continued he, is going to make a Decree for raiſing PIUS V. ANDREW D'AVELLINO, FELIX DE CANTALICE, and CATHARIN DE BOLOGNA to the Rank of Saints, to the Glory of God, and the Honour of the Catholic Church, in order that their Names may be called upon for Ages to come, &c. After theſe Words the Secretary withdrawing, the Cardinals ſtood up, and Chriſt's Vicar, [b] by the Aſſiſtance of the Holy Ghoſt, pronounced the Decree of Canonization, thereby commanding, that from thenceforth thoſe Beati ſhould be look'd upon as Saints by the Catholic Church, and their Feſtival be ſolemnized upon their reſpective Birth-Days. The Apoſtolic Prothonotaries and Notaries immediately drew up an Act of this Canonization, and Te Deum was ſung by Way of Thankſgiving.

WHILST the Muſic of the Chapel was ſinging the Te Deum, the Maſter of the Ceremonies, by a Signal, gave Notice to all the City of the ſolemn Advancement of theſe four new Saints. The Sound of Trumpets, the Beat of Drums, the ringing of Bells, and the Diſcharge of the Artillery, ſpread the Triumph of the Church-Militant, under Chriſt's Lieutenant-General here on Earth, all over the City. The glorious Miracles of the new Saints, their Auſterity, their Piety, and other Virtues, were the only Topics now talked of. Already did the People recommend themſelves to them, make choice of them for Patrons, and the Roman Devotees in their Tranſports offered up to God a thouſand ſolemn Vows for the holy Father's Proſperity.

As ſoon as the Te Deum was ended, the Cardinal-Deacon Aſſiſtant, who was on the Right, ſung the Litanies in honour of the new Mediators, and called on them by their reſpective Names. His Holineſs read with an audible Voice a Form of Prayer of his own compoſing, to inſtruct the devout after what Manner they were to call upon them. The Subſtance of it was, to beg of God to grant ſuch Aſſiſtance to the Righteous as might be expected from one who puts himſelf under the Protection of a Saint; and as ſoon as it was read, the Cardinal-Deacon of the Goſpel went up to the Pontifical Throne, there ſtood at the Foot of it, at the Pope's Right-Hand, and turning towards him ſung the Confiteor, therein naming each of the four Saints expreſly, whoſe Promotion CHRIST's Vicar had juſt pronounced. In the mean Time the Epiſtle-Sub-Deacon went and took the Croſs from the Altar, carried it to the loweſt Step of the Throne, and on his Knees placed it before the ſovereign Pontiff, who thereupon read the Bleſſing and Abſolution to the Aſſembly, in the Words following.

MAY God Almighty have Mercy on you, by virtue of the Prayers and Merits of the holy Virgin, of St. Michael the Archangel, &c. ..... and of St. Pius, St. Andrew, St. Felix, and St. Catharine. May the divine Majeſty, for their Sakes, pardon all your Sins, and lead you into eternal Life. May God of his infinite Goodneſs grant you Indulgence, Abſolution, and Remiſſion of Sins, &c.

THE Pontifical Maſs followed the Canonization. The Pope was conducted in Form to the little Throne, repreſented in the Print of the Theatre for the Canonization, between two Deacons Aſſiſtants, and ſupported by two Auditors of the Rota. His Holineſs, as he went to it from the great one, poured down his Benedictions on the Apoſtolic Senate. He then immediately laid aſide his Mitre, got up, turned his Face towards the Altar, in a low Voice repeated the Pater-Noſter and Ave-Maria, croſſed himſelf, and for the Tierce ſung Deum in adjutorium, &c. We ſhall omit the other Particulars of this Maſs, as little differing from other papal Maſſes, and ſhall only obſerve, that his Holineſs made on this Occaſion a Diſcourſe or kind of Homily. One of the moſt remarkable Things in it was, that the Corruption of the Age made it abſolutely neceſſary to propoſe freſh Examples of Virtue to the People, to give a new Life and Spirit to Devotion, which was now grown languid, and to draw down freſh Aſſiſtance from Heaven, in the Defence of Religion; and for this Purpoſe no Subjects could be pitched upon more proper than St. Pius and his three holy Aſſociates. In the Midſt of his Diſcourſe, he addreſſed himſelf in a moſt edifying Manner to the four Saints of his own Creation, beſeeching them to look down upon the Calamities of the Church with Eyes of Pity and Compaſſion, and with the moſt ardent Zeal recommending to their Care and Protection the New Sion, the Mother and Miſtreſs of all other Churches. This Homily over, the Cardinal-Biſhop Aſſiſtant begged the holy Father, that he would be pleaſed to grant Indulgences to all thoſe who ſhould perform their Devotions to theſe new Saints; upon which his Holineſs, turning towards the People, declared a ſeven Years plenary Indulgence for ſuch as ſhould viſit their Sepulchres annually.

[a] Acta Canon. p. 224.

[b] Celeſti Spiritu afflatus, ibid. The Pope, in former Times, before he pronounced the Decree of Canonization, made a Proteſtation, declaring, that by ſuch his Decree he did in no wiſe intend to derogate from the Faith of the Church and Glory of God. Cerem. Eccl. Rom. Lib. I. Fol. 32. Ed. of 1516.

[a] As to the Oblations repreſented in the Print, they were divided into four Parts, upon Tables placed over againſt the little Throne, and preſented in the Proceſſion after the Manner following. [b] The Maſter of the Ceremonies, at the Head of the Proceſſion, was followed by four Mace-Bearers, with ſilver Maces on their Shoulders. After them came two of Cardinal Abdua's principal Domeſtics, each with a large Taper, whereon were painted St. Pius, and the Pope's Arms. The Cardinal, holding his Mitre in his Hand, walked on the Right Hand of the Sollicitor for the Canonization. Two Friars followed, one of whom was the Maſter of the ſacred Palace, carrying a ſmall Taper painted like the great ones, and two Turtles in a little gilt Baſket. Two of Cardinal Pignatelli's Gentlemen in their long Robes, carried two Loaves, with his Holineſs's Arms upon them, one gilt; and the other waſh'd with Silver. The Cardinal himſelf followed, with two moſt Reverend Friars after him, one of them being the Commiſſary of the holy Roman Inquiſition, and the other Procurator-General of the Order of the preaching Friars. The former carried alſo a ſmall Taper, and the latter a Pair of Doves in a Baſket, waſhed with Silver. Two of Cardinal Pamphilio's Gentlemen came after in Clerks Habits, carrying two ſmall Barrels; one with Wine, and gilt, the other with Water, and ſilver'd over; both of them having his Holineſs's Arms at the Bottom, and thoſe of the Poſtulants for Canonization. Theſe were followed by [a] It is well known, that Oblations were in Uſe among the Jews; nor were they leſs in Repute among the antient Idolaters. Chriſtians have taken up the ſame Cuſtom, which in Proceſs of Time has degenerated into an Abuſe that can hardly eſcape Ridicule. There was no approaching the Altar in Conſtantine the Great's Time without a Preſent, which was a capital Point, and ſwelled the Revenues of the Clergy; nay, and was as important as the Articles of Religion. Nicolas I. expreſſes himſelf in a Paſſage from Ciapponi, in his Diſſertation upon Offerings, in the following Terms: Go to Church, pray, pardon Sinners, aſſiſt at Maſs, and carry your Oblations.

Theſe Oblations were of divers kinds, ſome were common, as Bread, Wine, and Water, for the Communion; others were for the Ceremonies, and other Neceſſities of the Church and her Miniſters; ſuch as Incenſe, Perfumes, Tapers, Oil, ſacred Veſſels, the firſt Fruits of the Earth, and of the Flock; but in a more particular Manner Money, Inheritances, Poſſeſſions in Land, Lordſhips, and other fine Eſtates, which the faithful Servants of the Church have in the Courſe of Years gained from timorous Sinners.

At this Day in the Church of Milan, a kind of Oblation is made, much like that of Bread and Wine in the antient Roman Church. Two old Men of St. Ambroſe's School offer three Wafers in a Plate, and a ſmall ſilver Veſſel full of Wine, which is likewiſe performed by two old Women. Theſe are Footſteps remaining of the Communion under both kinds, of which the Roman Church has likewiſe preſerved an Idea in the Canonization of Saints, the Conſecration of Biſhops, and the Benediction of Abbots; on all which Occaſions, Bread, Wine, and Water are offered. In antient Time, Tapers and Candles were likewiſe offered to Popes and Prelates, a Cuſtom ſtill ſubſiſting in ſeveral religious Ceremonies, ſuch as the collating to Orders, and the bleſſing of Virgins. Rome in her annual Solemnities does ſtill by proper Magiſtrates offer up Patins, Chalices, Tapers, &c. at the Altars of her moſt conſiderable Churches.

[b] This is a particular Deſcription of the Oblation made for Pius V. taken verbatim from the Acts regiſtered by St. Ciapponi.

their

A THEATRE erected in ST PETRS CHURCH for the Canonization of SAINTS under the Pontificate of CLEMENT XI. an. 1712.

1. The Pope.
2. The Seat of the Cardinal Bishop assistant to y Throne.
3. Cardinals in Deacons orders, assistants to the throne.
4. Cardinals Bishops & Priests.
5. Cardinals in Deacons orders.
6. Bishops assisting at the throne.
7. Bishops that do not assist.
8. Procurator y Fathers.
9. Governor of Rome Protonotaries Supernumeraries.
10. The Constable Collonna.
11. Governors of ecclesiastical State.
12. Conservators of Rome.
13. The Legate of Bologna.
14. The seat of the Master of the Popes Palace or Sacred Palace.
15. Auditors of ye Rota.
16. Clerks of the Chamber.
17. Voteing Prelates of the Signatura of Justice.
18. Abreviators.
19. Referendaries.
20. Steward Chamberlains.
21. Chamberlains of Honour.
22. Chaplains private and in ordinary.
23. The place of the Gentlemen of Arms.
24. Armes Barres.
25. Master of the Wardrobe.
26. Officers of Chapel.
27. A Credit table or Buffet for the Church plate.
28. Another Cittern with 7 tapers upon it.
29. The Popes Buffet or Side Table.
30. Places reserv'd for Canonization.
31. The Imperial Embassador.
32. The Portugal Embassador Extry.
33. The Popes Nephews.
34. The Popes Sister in Law &c.
35. Choyr of Musick.
36. Ladies of Quality.
37. Theatins and Capuchins.
38. Gentlemen.
39. The Scenes of the high altar in the Pattern Chappel.
40. The Popes Litle throne.
41. An Image of St Veronica.

THEATRE dressé dans L'EGLISE de ST PIERRE pour la CANONISATION de quelques SAINTS sous le Pontificat de CLEMENT XI. en 1712.

1. Le Pape.
2. Siege du Cardinal Evêque Assistant.
3. Cardinaux Diacres Assistans.
4. Cardinaux Evêques & Prestres.
5. Cardinaux Diacres.
6. Evêques assistans du Throne.
7. Evêques non Assistans.
8. Procurateurs Peres.
9. Gouverneur de Rome Protonotaires Supernumeraires.
10. Connetable Collonne.
11. Generaux d'Eglise.
12. Conservateurs de Rome.
13. Legat de Bologne.
14. Place du Maitre du Sacre Palais.
15. Auditeurs de Rote.
16. Clercs de la Chambre.
17. Prelats Votans de la Signature de justice.
18. Abreviateurs.
19. Referendaires.
20. Camériers secrets.
21. Camériers d'honneur.
22. Chapelains Secrets et Communs.
23. Place des Peintres.
24. Laudateurs.
25. Maitre de la Garderobbe.
26. Officiers de Chapelle.
27. Credence sur laquelle on met les vases Sacrés.
28. Autre Credence sur la quelle on met 7 Cierges.
29. Credence du Pape.
30. Cour que Pratiquent pour la Canonisation du saint.
31. L'Ambassadeur de l'Empereur.
32. L'Ambassadeur du Roi de Portugal inconnu.
33. Les Neveux du Pape.
34. Belle Sœur du Pape &c.
35. Chœur des Musiciens.
36. Dames de Qualité.
37. Theatins et Capucins.
38. Gentils Hommes.
39. Place du Grand Autel de la Chapelle du Vatican.
40. Le Petit Throne du Pape.
41. Statue de St Veronique.

their Maſter, and he by the Reverend Father the Secretary of the Congregation of the Index, and the Reverend the Provincial of the Holy Land; the former with a gilt Cage, full of little Birds, and the latter with a ſmall Wax-Taper, like thoſe beforemention'd, under which he held a fine white Napkin, that not one Drop of the Wax might be loſt. As ſoon as they were come to the Steps of his Holineſs's Throne, the Mace-Bearers and Gentlemen made a Lane to the Right and Left; Cardinal Abdua and Cardinal Albani, Poſtulants for the Canonization, went and placed themſelves on the Pope's Right Hand, firſt paying him their due Reſpects. They, who carried the large Tapers, delivered them into Cardinal Abdua's Hands, who, after he had kiſſed them, preſented them to his Holineſs. Cardinal Albani, as Poſtulant, preſented the ſmall Tapers, and the [a] Oblations carried in the little Baſkets. The reſt of the Cardinals preſented the Bread, and the Barrels, in which were the Water and Wine, to the holy Father; and they were afterwards permitted to kiſs his Feet. They then went down the Steps on the Left Side, and all the Oblations were thereupon again ſet upon the Tables from whence they had been taken.

We ſhould now enter upon a Deſcription of the Decorations of the Theatre, but as ſuch Relations are flat and tedious, we ſhall content ourſelves with pointing out what is moſt remarkable at the Bottom of the Print, and only inform the Reader in general, that the Theatre was covered with the richeſt Tapeſtry, and that the warmeſt Imagination can ſcarce deviſe any Thing more pompous than the Pope's great Throne; on one Side whereof was a Statue, which repreſented the Church, and on the other that of Juſtice. The Middle of the Throne was fifty Roman Palms high, and thirty ſix broad, on one Side of it ſtood the Figure of Faith, and on the other that of Hope. The Church and Theatre were illuminated with an infinite Number of Wax-Tapers. The Author from whom we have made this compendious Extract, has not omitted a complete Liſt of every Thing requiſite for a regular and pompous Canonization.

Nor ſhall we ſay any Thing of the particular Graces and Benedictions which his Holineſs beſtows on the Roſaries, Chapels, Images, Croſſes, Medals, and ſuch other Things of the like Nature, which are ſanctified on Account of this Ceremony; or at the Time of the triumphant Entrance of the four Saints into Heaven. This was expreſſed in a particular Indulgence, with the Promiſe of Pardon, and Forgiveneſs of Sins, to all ſuch as ſhould viſit ſeven Churches in one Day, or at leaſt as many as there were in the Town he reſided in; but with this Proviſo, that in caſe there were but one, he ſhould viſit all its Altars. The ſame was granted to him, who, in Commemoration of the Paſſion of our bleſſed Saviour, ſhould kiſs the Earth ſeven Times, perform any pious Action in Imitation of the four new Saints, read any Chapter of their Lives, viſit any of their Altars, or adore any of their Relics; at the ſame Time praying for the Glory of the Church, and the Converſion of Sinners, &c.

We muſt here introduce another Ceremony that followed the Canonization, viz. the carrying St. Pius V.'s Standard in Pomp, from the Baſilica of St. Peter of the Vatican, to that of St. Mary of Minerva, which was done on Saturday the 6th of Auguſt, 1712. For this Purpoſe the Order of the preaching Friars, and of the Agonizants, aſſembled together in the Baſilica of the Vatican, to which the Clergy of that Church came in their Robes of Ceremony. They all drew up before the Confeſſional of St. Peter, and from thence began the Proceſſion. They all made one Genuflexion, except ſuch as carried Croſſes, Banners, Tapers, &c. as they paſſed in a Review before the Altar. The Brothers of the holy Sacrament, who carried the Saint's Standard, halted

[a] The Author of the Tableau de la Cour de Rome ſays, that the Pope opens the Door of theſe Bird-Cages, and gives one of his little Captives its Liberty, whilſt the reſt remain Priſoners; which, ſays he, is an Emblem of Limbo, or Purgatory, from whence his Holineſs delivers ſuch whom he pleaſes to let into Heaven, &c.

halted near the Altar of the Choir, in order to hear an Anthem ſung by the Muſic in Honour of the Saint, which was ſucceeded by a Litany to him. Then the Canon, whoſe Week it was to officiate, ſung the Prayer of the new canoniſed Pope, and walking directly up to his Standard, on which his Image was painted, he incenſed it three Times in Form. In the mean Time, the Clergy of that Church came after the Croſs with Tapers, and walked immediatly after the Dominicans. After this the Standard was given to four Fathers of that Order, by the Canon on Duty for the Week, who immediately feel upon his Knees, and in the moſt devout Manner adored the holy Image. This Ceremony was performed in the Church. When the Standard went out, the Clergy and Chapter made a Lane on each Side to honour it, and, kneeling down, paid Obeiſance to the Repreſentation of that holy Pontiff.

IT was highly reaſonable, that the Dominicans ſhould have the Honour of carrying the Standard of a Pope who had been a Member of their Order. Theſe pacific Friars walked with lighted Tapers in their Hands after the Roman Drums and Trumpets, and after the Agonizants, who were likewiſe provided with Candles, in the midſt of a numerous Band of Muſicians, and carried the Croſs, the Standard of the Society, and Lanterns. The Standard of Pius was guarded by twenty of the Pope's Grooms, and thirty of his Swiſs Guard. The Bells of all the Churches were rung out during the Proceſſion, and the Windows of the Houſe adorned with abundance of Devotion. There were Illuminations all over the City, and ſeveral Diſcharges of the Artillery. And, to conclude, the Order of St. Dominic began their Part. Fifty ſmall Canons were at their own Expence planted before St. Mary's of Minerva, and, it ſeemed as if the Rattle and Noiſe of the Artillery had nothing Shocking in it to thoſe Recluſes, tho' they are ſuppoſed to handle nothing but their Croſſes and Chaplets in their Retirement. The Proceſſion marched on to St. Mary of Minerva, and croſſed that Church in two Columns.

As the Standard was juſt entring the Church, a Cardinal, who attended at the Door in his Pontifical Robes, and ſtood between the Deacon and Sub-Deacon, haſtened towards it, and laying aſide his Mitre, fell down on his Kees upon a Carpet ſpread for that purpoſe, and in that humble Poſture [a] adored the Image, and incenſed it. It was afterwards ſet upon the Altar, and, during the Elevation of it, his Eminence, turning to the Croſs upon the Altar, began the Te Deum, incenſed the Image, ſung the Prayer of the new Saint, and then gave his Benediction to the whole Aſſembly, which was attended with the Sound of Canons, Drums, and Trumpets. Eight whole Days were ſpent in pious Rejoycings, accompanied with Maſſes and Indulgences. But we ſhall here drop the Deſcription, leſt we ſhould Treſpaſs too much on our Readers Patience.

EVERY Oblation made at a Canonization is myſterious: The Tapers, which, according to thoſe who are fond of [b] Myſteries, repreſent the Humility of our Saviour, are likewiſe a Symbol of the Saints Chaſtity and good Works. The Bread, Water, and Wine, give us an Idea of ſpiritual Subſiſtence. Moreover, Bread denotes our Gratitude towards God, and all of them together are Types of the Oblation which Chriſt made of his Body at the laſt Supper. As to the Turtle, 'tis a Symbol of conjugal Fidelity, and it would be almoſt prepoſterous to be without it at a Canonization-Ceremony; ſince it repreſents in ſo lively a manner the inviolable Fidelity which the Saints have ſworn to God. It is likewiſe an Emblem of the contemplative Life of the Saints; for, like them, it delights in Solitude. Its Sighs expreſs the tender Concern and unfeigned Sorrow which the Saints feel for the Sins of Mankind. Theſe excellent Qualities in the Turtle, however, ſhould not make us contemn thoſe Doves which love Company, and fly in Flocks together, which is a lively Image of the active Life of the Saints. Beſides, the Holy

[a] Sancti Pii imaginem adoravit. Acta Canon.
[b] Acta Canon. p. 260.

Ghoſt

A SOLEMN PROCESSION performed at the CANONIZATION of Certain SAINTS in Saint PETERS CHURCH during the Pontificate of CLEMENT ye XI. An.o 1712.

1. Abbreviators.
2. Voters of ye Signature.
3. Clerks of the Chamber.
4. Auditors of the Rota & the master of ye Sacred Palace.
5. Acolytes carrying the 7 Candle-sticks
6. Subdeacon with the Cross.
7. Penitentiaries.
8. Abbots.
9. Bishops Assistant and non Assistant
10. Cardinals Deacons.
11. Cardinals Priests.
12. Cardinals Bishops.
13. the Legate of Bologna with the Prior of the Quarters.
14. Conservators.
15. The Constable Collonna.
16. The Governor of Rome
17. Cardinal Deacon assistant and of the Gospel
18. The Pope under a Canopy carried by ye Referendarii
19. Chamberlains assistant to
20. Apostolic Protonotaries and their Coadjutors
21. Generals of orders
22. the Auditor of ye Mitre
23. The entrance into the Church

Ordre de la PROCESSION pour la CANONIZATION de quelques SAINTS, dans L'EGLISE de S.T PIERRE, sous le Pontificat de CLEMENT XI. en 1712.

1. Abbreviateur
2. Votans de la Signature
3. Clercs de la Chambre
4. Auditeurs de Rote, et Maitre du Sacré Palais
5. Acolytes avec les 7 chandeliers
6. Soudiacre avec la Croix
7. Penitenciers
8. Abez
9. Evêques Assistans, et non Assistans
10. Cardinaux Diacres.
11. Cardinaux Prêtres.
12. Cardinaux Evêques
13. Legat de Boulogne, avec le prieur des Quartiers.
14. Conservateurs
15. Connetable Collonne.
16. Gouverneur de Rome
17. Card. dia. Assistant & de l'Evang.
18. Le pape sous le dais porté par les Referendaires
19. Cubiculaires Assistans avec l'Auditeur de la Mitre
20. Protonotaires Apostoliques and ses Adjoints
21. Generaux d'Ordres.
22. Le Peuple
23. Entrée de l'Eglise

C. Du Bosc. Excud. et sculp.

Ghoſt himſelf is painted under this Figure. As to the little Birds which are offered in this Ceremony, they too are typical with Regard to the Saints, who ſoaring towards Heaven by the Strength of Contemplation, there converſe familiarly with their Maker. In ſhort, the very Barrels of Wine and Water, the Bird-Cages, the Bread-Baskets, the Painting of the Tapers, and the Gold and Silver with which the Loaves are embelliſhed, are all myſterious Affairs. But we farther refer our Readers to the Author, from whom we made the foregoing Extract.

CHAP. IV.

The CEREMONIES of BEATIFICATION, and the Devotion paid to Saints.

NO one can be beatified within fifty Years after his Deceaſe. All Certificates, or Depoſitions, relating to Virtues and Miracles, are ſtrictly examined by the Congregation of Rites. This Scrutiny is carried on ſometimes for ſeveral Years together; after which the Pope reſolves upon the Beatification: For the Candidate's Reputation is in no Manner of Danger, the Affirmative being always on his Side.

As ſoon then as the Congregation has accurately examined the Requeſts of the Poſtulants, and the Life of the future Beati, his Holineſs ſigns the Decree for his Beatification. [a] His Corps and Relics are from that Moment expoſed to the Veneration of all true Chriſtians, his Images are crowned with Rays, and an Office is ſet apart for his Service; Maſs is ſaid in Honour of him, tho' neither his Body nor his Relics are carried in Proceſſion: Indulgences and Remiſſion of Sins, likewiſe, are granted on the Day of his Beatification, which, tho' not altogether ſo magnificent as that of Canonization, is however pompous enough, and worthy of a Perſon ſo highly advanced.

THE Saints are divided into various Claſſes. Some, by the Means of their immenſe Riches, have, when living, been Benefactors to the Church, and its Miniſters; others, backed by the Authority they were poſſeſſed of, declared themſelves its Patrons and Protectors. Many of them diſtinguiſhed themſelves by their bright Parts and penetrating Judgments. A long and affected Retirement, a Life, which in the Eye of the World would paſs for extravagant and romantic, has canoniſed many. A ſincere Return to God, after an irregular and diſſolute Courſe of Life, has procured ſeveral others the ſame Honour. In ſhort, there are to be found amongſt thoſe Saints, who are acknowledged by the Catholic Church as ſuch, a conſiderable Number of bleſſed Martyrs of our Lord and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt.

THE Legends, as well antient as modern, have particular Places aſſigned to all theſe Saints: Their Lives are there inſerted for the Edification of the Godly, with Praiſes that might juſtly be ſuſpected, were they beſtowed on worldly Perſons. Nothing but what is miraculous, ſupernatural, or divine, is to found in them.

BESIDES ſuch Saints as are effectually and nominally known to us, there are Millions of others that we know nothing of, not ſo much as their Names; but it is preſumed, they are real and genuine Saints, becauſe his Holineſs declares them ſuch, after their Bodies have been removed from the Catacombs, or ſubterranean Burying-Places. Whatever Figure theſe new Patrons made in the World whilſt living, they are ſure of being bleſt with the Gift of Miracles after their Deceaſe. Rome is conſcious of this, it being a Place where unknown Saints are in high Repute.

[a] Ciapponi Acta Beatif. &c.

THO' one might reaſonably imagine, that, after the Deciſions of the Apoſtolic Court, the Faithful ſhould run no Hazards in throwing themſelves into the Arms of unknown Saints; yet ſome Doctors have endeavoured to ſubvert the Foundations of this Worſhip. Monſieur Thiers, for Inſtance, deſcribes this kind of Devotion with no other Intent than to render it odious, and for that purpoſe he expreſſes himſelf after the following Manner. "[a] One of the kinds of Devotions now moſt in Vogue, is, that to the new Saints, "whoſe Bodies are taken out of ----- Catacombs, and given away gratis to any con- "ſiderable Perſon who is deſirous of them, after the Pope's Cardinal-Vicar, or the Biſ- "ſhop, who is Sacriſtan of the Apoſtolical Chapel, has given them their Names. . . . . The "Churches where the Bodies of ſuch new Saints lie, are reſorted to in Crowds; Obla- "tions, Vows, Pilgrimages, and Neuvaines, or Nine-Days-Devotions are made to them; "Perſons who are ſick of all Kinds of Diſeaſes, are carried and recommended to their Fa- "vour; as alſo ſtill-born Children, and ſuch as died without Baptiſm; in hopes, by the In- "terceſſion of theſe new Saints, of a bleſſed Reſurrection. Numbers take all imaginable "Pains to kiſs their Shrines, to have their Chaplets, Medals, and the Clothes for ſuch as "are ſick touched by them; they frequently cry out a Miracle . . . . every one is fond of "being a Witneſs of it; it ſpreads apace; the Crowd gathers, and the Churches thereby be- "come throng'd, and grow into greater Reputation than ever. . . . . This Devotion, in- "deed, might be very meritorious with God, did it not tend to leſſen that Veneration "which the Church always paid to the antient Saints . . . . . and were it true that "theſe new Saints were ſuch in Reality. . . . . But it is much to be feared, that the De- "votion paid to them, may bring People off from the Veneration which is due to the "antient Saints, and that they may fondly imagine, that the new ones have more Power "and Intereſt with the Almighty." It muſt be allowed, indeed, that the Populace, who are always fond of Novelty, may eaſily give into ſuch an Exceſs; for they think God is like Man, and that the laſt Comer muſt of Courſe be the greateſt Favourite with the Supreme Being. The Devotion paid to the antient Saints is, in the Opinion of Mr. Thiers, by far more regular, certain, and better eſtabliſhed. But let him think as he pleaſes, we ſhall be ſo free as to inform him, that there is no manner of Danger in aſſociating to the antient Saints all ſuch whom the Pope has cauſed to be acknowledged in the laſt Ages, by a ſolemn Canonization, or ſome other lawful Ways.

DEVOTION to Saints is grounded on their Power, and that on the Miracles they wrought, whilſt living, or after their reſpective Deceaſes: So that Miracles are the authentic Teſtimonies of the Sanctity of thoſe whom the Pope [b] canonizes; ſince God would grant thoſe eſſential Marks of his ſupreme Authority, to none but thoſe who had diſtinguiſh'd themſelves by their Virtues. All ſupernatural Operations, as well thoſe which interrupt the Courſe of Nature, as thoſe that run counter to the Laws by which ſhe acts, were formerly called Miracles. Theſe Operations were a Violence, if we may be allowed the Expreſſion, done to Nature; and accordingly, God allowed them only upon ſome extraordinary Occaſions; ſuch, for inſtance, as the Deſtruction of Error, and the Eſtabliſhment of the true Religion, &c. As to ſuch Miracles as were formerly wrought under Paganiſm, for the Maintenance and Support of Error, they have been rank'd under Sorcery, Impoſtures, and Illuſions.

FOR ſome Ages paſt we have been obliged to entertain a different Notion of Miracles. They are in general become more eaſy and common, than in the earlieſt Ages of the Church. Religion and Truth are not now their ſole Objects; but, on the other Hand,

[a] Thiers chap. 24. of the moſt Neceſſary of all Kinds of Devotion.
[b] He canonizes none but thoſe who have wrought two or three Miracles.

we

we have the Satisfaction to see all the Laws of Nature destroyed, for the least Favour a Saint shall ask of God, either for others, or his own private Occasions. [a] Birds have stood mute, and listen'd with Attention to the Sermons of Saints, and [b] Fishes have left their Streams to hearken to their Preaching. To conclude, since this Change of Notions, Saints have past muster with much more Ease, and Persons but of mean Extraction have been admitted. All these Changes have been followed by numberless Miracles, which have not yet ceased, nor ever will. The Faith of pious good Souls is not yet exhausted, notwithstanding the rash Endeavours of the Incredulous; but is a plentiful Fountain that will never be exhausted.

CHAP. V.

An IDEA of the POWER of the modern SAINTS.

IF Faith had no other Support than Reason, it would be but of a short Duration. It requires stronger Aids, than that of a Brain exhausted in contemplating on the Truths of Religion. To speak boldly, it must have Examples that strike, and, if we may be allowed the Expression, stupify the Mind. This is what will justify the Necessity of the Miracles of these latter Ages, in the Opinion of some Devotees. We have already given you some Instances of these [c] Miracles, and we shall now venture to add a few more.

St. RAYMOND of Pennaforte, after having long censured the dissolute Deportment of a King of Spain, without being able to wean him from his criminal Engagements, determined to leave him to his own wicked Inclinations, and embark, in order to return to Barcelona; but his Majesty having charged all Persons whomsoever not to transport him, St. Raymond revived the Miracle of our Saviour's walking upon the Water: For throwing his Cloak into the Sea, and taking his Staff in his Hand, he embarked in this new kind of Boat, and arrived safe in Catalonia. The very Gate of the Convent opened of itself at the Saint's Approach.

St. PETER of Nola, [d] that unprofitable Servant, that Off-scouring of the Earth, and meer Nothing, had very frequent and familiar Intercourses with God and the blessed Virgin. The Apostle St. Peter one Day honoured him with a Visit, in the same Posture wherein he was crucified, that is, with his Heels upwards.

St. FRANCIS of Paula was endow'd with a supernatural Strength: There never was his Fellow since Sampson himself. He carried away, without any Assistance, a prodigious large Rock, which obstructed the Foundation of the Dormitory of a Monastery he was building; he took upon his Shoulders what four Men were not able so much as to move. He hung up in the Air a Piece of Rock, which broke from a Mountain, and threatned to demolish his new Edifice, and dash in Pieces a great Number of his Workmen. He afterwards supported it with his Staff, and left it for a long Time in that Position exposed to public View, to the Edification of a multitude of People, who resorted thither in Crowds to see such a Miracle. This Rock was afterwards made use of in the finishing his new Monastery; but whether there has been any Relic made [a] St. Francis silenced the Swallows who interrupted him.

[b] St. Anthony of Padua, being unable to gain the Attention of the Heretics, desired them to go to the Sea-side, in order to convince them of the tractable Disposition of the Fish.
[c] These Examples are taken from Giry's Lives of the Saints.
[d] This Saint assumed these Titles in his Letters.

out of it, or not, we cannot determine, since History is silent in that Particular, which seems very extraordinary.

MANNA has been often seen to fall on St. Agnes of Monte Pulciano in the Form of a Cross. The blessed Virgin appeared to her on one of the Festivals of the Assumption, with the Child Jesus in her Arms, whom she permitted her to embrace, and press to her Breast. [a] At her Departure she left the Saint a Cross, which the Child Jesus wore about his Neck. We shall take no Notice of the Rose that appeared in the Midde of Winter, in a Dish which the Saint served up to two Hermits; but we cannot forbear mentioning the Advances in Point of Complaisance, which she made after her Decease, to St. Catharine of Sienna, who went to pay her a Visit at her Sepulchre. Whilst the living Saint was stooping down to kiss the Feet of the dead one, the latter, through an Excess of Humility, and to be before-hand with the former, lifted up her Foot and touched the other's Lips. St. Catharine, however, did not think proper to expose herself to such an Accident a second Time, for at her next Visit to St. Agnes, she kissed her Head instead of her Feet.

St. BONAVENTURE, that celebrated Author of the [b] Psalter of our Lady, not being able to take the Sacrament in the usual Way, through a violent Indisposition in his Stomach, [c] had the holy Pyx placed upon his Breast, and the sacred Wafer instantly penetrated that way into his very Bowels, in order to become the Life of his Soul.

St. IGNATIUS, who was given over by the Physicians, was visited by St. Peter, who by a Touch with his Hands wrought a miraculous Cure. After that, the blessed Virgin paid him a Visit, and made him a Present at the same Time of a celestial Ointment, which may with Propriety be called the Balm of Chastity, as it annihilated the irregular Impulse of his Senses, and even obliterated all the Images of sensual Pleasure. It is not to be questioned, but St. Ignatius has transmitted the Virtue of this Balm down to his spiritual Children. F. Alegambe tells us extraordinary Things relating to the Assaults which these Champions have made upon the Flesh, and the Conquests they have gained over it. Father Gil at the Age of seventy knew no Woman, not so much as by Sight, so great was his Caution to prevent his Senses fixing upon such agreeable Objects. He was afraid even of himself, and almost frightned when he touch'd himself: In short, he thanked God that the Defects of his Eyes served as a Remedy against his Senses. F. Costerus declared, he had never felt any irregular Passions, and that nothing was capable of corrupting his Imagination. F. Cotton, who was Confessor to a Prince, whose Mind was too apt to receive the Impression of an amiable Object, preserved his Chastity so far, as that he looked upon every Thing that could in the least taint his Virtue with the utmost Abhorrence: Moreover, he had his smelling so quick, as that he could easily discover those who had violated the Laws of Chastity. F. Spiga, who was seventy four Years old when he died, could not distinguish one of his Nieces from the other, so much had he habituated himself not to look upon any of the Fair Sex. But to return to Ignatius; as he was upon his Pilgrimage to Jerusalem, he determined to visit the Mount of Olives, and Christ himself condescended to be his Guide. He cured Persons afflicted with the Falling Sickness, cast the Devils out of such as were possessed, and recovered several by permitting them to touch the Hem of his Garment. To conclude, the Number of Miracles, which are said to be wrought by him, amount to two hundred, or thereabouts.

[d] St. CLARE was in such Esteem with God, that without the least Difficulty she obtained whatever she asked. From her very Infancy, there appeared in her surprising Signs of [a] These are Giry's own Words.

[b] He composed it in Latin, but a Jesuit translated it into French. It was printed at Lisle in 1655.
[c] We make use of F. Giry's very Words.
[d] The Words of F. Giry.

her

her future Sanctity: Inſtead of playing like other Children, ſhe did nothing but pray, faſt, and give Alms in her early Years. All the Saints, as appears by their Lives, have for the moſt part begun with theſe general Practices of Devotion. But from her very Infancy ſhe went farther, and wore a Hair-Cloth to mortify the Fleſh, and to put a Stop to all irregular Paſſions, to which, it ſeems, ſuch as intend to profeſs Holineſs, are more expoſed than the reſt of Mankind. She was very ſeldom alone in the Heat of her pious Exerciſes. A very beautiful Child, with two radiant Wings, flew into her Lap one Day, and claſping her with them, carreſs'd her with many fond Endearments. At another Time, altho' ſhe was indiſpoſed, and unable to go to Matins, yet ſhe heard diſtinctly the Office which was ſung at a Church ſome conſiderable Diſtance from the Monaſtery, and what is moſt ſurpriſing, ſhe was ſo happy as to ſee the young Child Jeſus lying in his Manger. As ſhe was giving up the Ghoſt, he was ſeen near her accompanied, by ſeveral Virgins crowned with Flowers. One of them in particular, who wore a cloſe Crown more radiant than the Sun, drew near and embraced her. The reſt ſpread a Carpet of ineſtimable Value over her Body. The Daughters of this Holy Mother, eſpecially the Nuns of the Ave Mary, have inherited her Auſterities and Virtues, tho' they have not attained the Gift of Miracles.

St. BARBARA, accompanied by two Angels, gave the Communion to the little bleſſed Staniſlaus Koſtca, who lay dangerouſly ill in a Family who were Heretics, and would not permit the holy Sacrament to come into their Houſe. We ſhall paſs over the Converſations he held with the Virgin Mary, his [a] Lady, his Miſtreſs, and his good Mother; as alſo of a great Number of Miracles wrought by his Mediation after his Death. Devils quitted the Bodies they had been tormenting at the very Name of Staniſſaus. [b] He reſtored as many Perſons to Life as he was Years old, though he lived to the Age of nineteen, and this extraordinary Miracle has been thought ſo eaſy for him to perform, that 'tis grown into a Proverb in Poland: Let us go, ſay the People, to the bleſſed Staniſlaus, who raiſes the Dead. The Application of this young Saint's Image cured a young Jeſuit of fourteen Years of Age at Lima, in the Year 1673. but upon this Condition, that he ſhould ſay a Pater Noſter, and an Ave Maria every Day of his Life, in Honour of the little Poliſh Saint; that on the Eve of his Feſtival he ſhould live upon Bread and Water, and once perform the ſpiritual Exerciſes of Saint Ignatius, to the Honour and Glory of his bleſſed Son Staniſlaus. Thus much will be ſufficient to give ſome Knowledge of the Saint. We ſhall now only advertiſe ſuch as are afflicted with Palpitations, Swellings, broken Limbs, Sore-Eyes, Fevers, &c. [c] that a little Wine in which one of the Saint's Bones has been ſteeped, is an infallible Remedy againſt all thoſe Diſtempers.

[d] St. ROCH, the Patron and Protector of ſuch as are infected with the Plague, has diſtinguiſhed himſelf by ſeveral remarkable Cures. The Dog that is painted lying by him, charitably fed the Saint at a Time when the Peſtilence was outragious.

THE bleſſed Clare of Montefalco had the Figure of Chriſt upon the Croſs, and all the Inſtruments of his Paſſion, engraved upon her Heart. Her repeated Declarations of this Miracle to the Nuns of her Convent made them curious to ſee if it were true, and after her Death they divided her Heart, and were convinc'd of her Aſſertion.

[a] Giry in the Life of this Saint. "The firſt Time that ever the Virgin Mary appeared to Staniſlaus, ſhe enjoined "him to enter into the Society of Jeſus, and put her Son into his Arms; as if ſhe intended that little Staniſlaus "ſhould have the Pleaſure of carrying him ——— the Virgin Mary came a ſecond Time, accompanied by ſeve-"ral bleſſed Virgins, to conduct him to Heaven." Extracted from the Opuſcula of Father Bouhours, printed at Paris in the Year 1684.

[b] Opuſcula of F. Bouhours. p. 323.

[c] Id. Ibid.

[d] This Saint was a Native of Languedoc, a Country full of vain Boaſters. St. Roch muſt have been God's great Favourite, to have been able to keep clear of the ſame Character.

St. BRIDGET raiſed ten Perſons that were dead to Life. 'Tis very remarkable, that Chriſt himſelf did not go near ſo far. St. Thereſa appeared [a] after her Death, which was occaſioned by an Exceſs of Divine Love to ſeveral Perſons, to inform them of the high Degree of Glory to which ſhe was exalted. We ſhall omit her wondrous Viſions, and the Love-Wound made in her Heart by a Seraphim, with a golden Arrow pointed with red hot Steel.

St. DIDACUS cured ſeveral diſeaſed Perſons with the Oil of a Lamp which burnt before an Image of our Lady. One Day having no manner of Proviſions, on a Journey he was making with one of his Companions to his Convent, he prayed to God to ſupport them in their Diſtreſs, and inſtantly they found a Table ſpread before them upon the Graſs, and the Entertainment, tho' not very elegant, was very wholſom and refreſhing.

St. XAVERIUS raiſed ſeveral to Life during his Miſſion in the Eaſt Indies. Being in the Neighbourhood of Amboyna, he calm'd a raging Tempeſt by plunging his Crucifix into the Sea. In the Eagerneſs of the Action his Crucifix ſlipped out of his Hand, but an officious Fiſh miraculouſly reſtored it to him in a Moment, and in giving it took care to hold it upright, to denote the Triumph of the Croſs over the Infidels.

St. THOMAS OF BECKET, Archbiſhop of Canterbury, was amply rewarded for the violent Death he ſuffered, by the numerous Miracles he wrought afterwards, and which, if we may believe F. Giry, he ſtill continues to perform. No ſooner was this Saint buried, but he declared himſelf the Phyſician of a multitude of ſick Perſons. It is very remarkable, that the Saints of the latter Ages go far beyond thoſe of the Apoſtle's Days in raiſing the Dead to Life.

[b] THE bleſſed Roſa was under five Years old when ſhe conſecrated her Virginity to God. " To prevent ſo delicate a Flower from loſing it Odour and Beauty, ſhe hedged " it in, as it were, with Thorns and Brambles, by practiſing up all Kinds of Auſteri- " ties ſhe poſſibly could from that very Moment. In ſo tender an Age . . . . . during " the three Days in the Week, which are conſecrated by the moſt holy Myſteries of " Chriſtianity, ſhe liv'd upon Bread and Water." F. Oliva very well obſerves, in his Eulogium on this Saint, that Mankind had an infinite Loſs in God's not creating Roſa in the terreſtrial Paradiſe inſtead of Eve. Her Ambition to ſuffer made her ingenious in ſearching out the Means of mortifying herſelf. This pious Maid would frequently rub her Cheeks and Eyes with the [c] Bark and Powder of Indian Pepper, to prevent her going to Balls, or appearing in Company. The Sharpneſs of the Pepper, had a very different Effect from the Paints and Coſmetics now in Vogue with our modern worldly minded Ladies, and made her Face all bloated and full of Ulcers. Roſa had the Glory moreover, of finding out freſh Methods of Mortification every Day, and of reproaching Nature perpetually with the enormous Crime of having made her ſo handſome. It is certain, that nothing is ſo Shocking and inſupportable to Saints of a myſtical Comſtitution, as this corporal Beauty, which they relinquiſh to the Devil, together with all other ſenſual Enjoyments.

THE bleſſed Roſa, like our bleſſed Saviour, multiplied Loaves. She miraculouſly repleniſhed an empty Veſſel, to comfort her Mother, who was ſick, with celeſtial Honey. Her Vocation or Call has no Inſtance like it. " As ſhe was paſſing by St. Dominic's " Church, for whom ſhe ever had a particular Eſteem, ſhe found her ſelf inſpired to go

[a] " F. Giry ſays, ſhe was ſo influenced with the ſacred Fire of divine Love —— that being no longer able to bear " up againſt it, ſhe ended her Life in the midſt of the Flames." She was carried off in fourteen Hours.
[b] Panegyric on the bleſſed Roſa by F. Oliva in Bouhours's Opuſcula.
[c] Of Lima, the Capital of Peru.

in

" in, and pay her laſt Reſpects to the Image of our Lady of the Roſary. No ſooner " was ſhe on her Knees, than ſhe remained immoveable, and nail'd, as it were, down " to the Ground .... Aſtoniſhed at ſo extraordinary a Prodigy ..... ſhe promiſed the " bleſſed Virgin to become a Nun of the third Order of St. Dominic..... As ſoon as " ſhe had finiſhed her Prayer, ſhe, without the leaſt Difficulty, accompliſhed that in " a Moment, which ſhe had not been able to do in ſeveral Hours before with great and " repeated Efforts." Roſa, at her commencing a new Life, thought it an incumbent Duty to invent new Auſterities. She tied a great Chain, wherewith ſhe had long given herſelf Diſcipline, thrice round her Waiſt; and not contented with wearing ſo gauling a Girdle, ſhe put a Padlock upon it, and threw the Key into a Well. She long bore with Patience the Pains which this Chain gave her, but at length was obliged to ſeek Relief, and human Means failing, ſhe made her Applications to the bleſſed Virgin, who immediately opened the Lock. The bleſſed Roſa thinking her Lodgings at her Mother's too commodious, determined to build herſelf a ſorry Hut at the End of the Garden. She was ſoon attacked by a whole Army of Gnats; and as they interrupted her Contemplations, ſhe thought proper to make a Truce with them upon the following Conditions. The Gnats were allowed to ſhelter themſelves in the Cell during exceſſive Heat or Cold; and they ſtipulated on their Side never to incommode her more, and even to withdraw, whenever ſhe found them any ways offenſive. This Truce was near a Rupture, through the Imprudence and ill Conduct of a certain Nun, that went to viſit Roſa. The Reader may find this curious Paſſage at Length in F. Oliva's ingenious Panegyric, to which we refer him; but we cannot forbear obſerving, that the largeſt Trees in the Garden, when Roſa paſſed by them to her Cell, bent down their Branches, nay and Trunks too, as a Teſtimony of their profound Veneration.

CHAP. VI.

The Manner of devoting a Man's Self to SAINTS, &c.

THIS [a] Cuſtom was formerly much in Repute, and in ſeveral Catholic Countries is ſtill obſerved. [b] An annual Tribute was paid to the Saint who was made choice of as Patron, and the Vaſſal frequently bound himſelf and his Children at leaſt, if not his whole Poſterity, to perform the Condition of his Obligation. We ſhall here amuſe the Reader with an Extract of the Form of ſuch a ſpiritual Contract, in the Terms made uſe of in the Year 1030.

IN THE NAME OF THE HOLY TRINITY.

" J. GHISLA, born at Ghent, and of free Parents, convinced by the pious Ex- " ample and frequent Admonitions of the Saints, that Humility is the moſt ac- " ceptable to God of all Chriſtian Virtues, have determined to ſet an Example thereof, " by devoting myſelf, both Body and Soul, to the Service of ſome one of them, that " under his or her Protection, and through his or her Aid and Aſſiſtance, I may partake " of the Divine Favour. For which purpoſe, I do by theſe Preſents devote both my- " ſelf and my Poſterity to St. Gertrude, whom I have made choice of as Patroneſs both " of me and my Family, that by ſuch our voluntary Service, we may procure the Par-

[a] This Cuſtom was introduced in the ninth or tenth Century.
[b] Extracted from the Life of St. Gertrude, written in Latin by Ryckel, and publiſhed in 1637.

" don

" don and Remiſſion of all our Sins. In witneſs whereof, I do hereby for me and my " Poſterity, promiſe and agree to pay yearly and every Year, at the High Altar of St. " Gertrude, the Sum of .... And in order that no one ſhould preſume to violate our " Engagement, Sentence of Anathema has been publiſhed in the Church of Nivelles " againſt all and every ſuch Perſon or Perſons as ſhall preſume to violate the ſame; that " they may periſh with Dathan and Abiram. Signed at Nivelles in the Preſence of Wit- " neſſes, in the Year of Grace 1030.

THERE are other Methods of devoting, or engaging one's ſelf in the Service of any particular Saint; and the Marks or Tokens of ſuch religious Service conſiſt of a Chain round the Perſons Neck, or his Arm, [a] which he muſt wear to the Time of his Deceaſe. This Cuſtom is practiſed to this very Day, according to the Author quoted [b] below, by the Servants of the bleſſed Virgin Mary. In an Age more devout than this we live in, a Chriſtian Prince would have made his Dominions tributary to ſome Saint; as indeed the common Practice was in former Times. But thoſe Times are changed, and no Prince now a-Days carries his Devotion ſo far as even to acknowledge himſelf a Vaſſal to the Church. The Saint to whom ſuch a Devotee had granted the Revenue of his Eſtate, did by Virtue thereof acquire Houſes, Lands, and a conſiderable Income, which the Monks and the reſt of the Clergy took care to improve in his Behalf; but the preſent Race of Chriſtians is grown a little cool in this Reſpect. We find a particular Ceremony obſerved in the fourteenth Century, performed by a Devotee who gave his Effects to the Church. He took a Knife by the Handle, and a Turf of Earth, wherein was planted the Branch of a Tree. Theſe three Things were made Oblations to his Patron Saint, or rather to the Monks or other Eccleſiaſtics, who were the Saints Attornies, and Agents. The Turf repreſented Lands and all immoveable Effects; the Branch, the Fruits of the Earth; and the Knife, which, was held by the Handle, all Moveables of what Nature or Kind ſoever.

THE Saints have their reſpective Offices and Litanies in the Church; which laſt aſcribe to each of them ſuch Praiſes as are due to their Merit, and give the Pious an exact Idea of the Power.

IT is cuſtomary for Devotees to prefer that particular Saint who is their Patron to all others in Paradiſe, and put all their Truſt and Confidence in him alone, without giving themſelves much Pain about the reſt of his Brethren, &c. " [c] They believe, that God " has granted particular Privileges to their favourite Saint; and that they ſhall certainly " and infallibly obtain of him all ſuch Favours both Spiritual and Temporal as they ſhall " ask, through his Mediation, without giving themſelves any Trouble about Repentance, " or Compliance with the Will of God." This particular Exceſs of Devotion leads to ſeveral other Exceſſes.

" SOME People, ſays our Author laſt quoted, imagine, that by their Devotion to St. " Barbara, called in ſeveral Places The Mother of Confeſſion, they ſhall not die, (however " they may have lived,) without Confeſſion.

" OTHERS pay their Devotions to St. Chriſtopher, ſuppoſing that by a View of his " Image in a Morning, they ſhall not die that Day, nor the ſubſequent Night. ....

[a] Two Decrees of the Holy Office of Rome made in 1673. condemn all Fraternities of Slavery to the Virgin, and forbid the Uſe of Chains, Images, and Medals repreſenting the ſame, and all Books treating of that kind of Devotion. In the Cuts annexed to ſuch Books are ſeen Men with Chains falling from Chriſt, the Pyx, the Virgin Mary, St. Joſeph, &c. It is this pretended ſpiritual Captivity which is termed Slavery.

[b] Ryckel, ubi ſup.

[c] Thiers concerning the moſt neceſſary of all Devotions, Chap. xxiii.

ABUN-

" ABUNDANCE of Devotees perſuade themſelves, that if they do but make their Ad-
" dreſſes to St. Anthony of Padua, and ſay [a] the eighth Reſponſe of the Mattins of the " Feſtival obſerved in honour of him, they ſhall moſt aſſuredly find all ſuch Goods as " happen to be either ſtole, loſt, or ſtrayed.

" OTHERS flatter themſelves, that by repeating for a whole Year together the little " Crown of St. Anne, God will at the End thereof infallibly grant them one of the three " Things they think proper to requeſt."

WHAT has been ſaid will be ſufficient to give the Reader an Idea of ſome of theſe Exceſſes which attend Devotion paid to Saints.

CHAP. VII.

The Devotion paid to the BLESSED VIRGIN.

THE Church calls the holy Virgin in her Litanies, the Mother of God, the Queen of Angels, the Refuge of Sinners, the Mother of Mercy, the Gate of Heaven, the Myſtic Roſe, the Virgin of Virgins, &c. M. Thiers, [b] in the Work we have before quoted, makes uſe of conſiderable Reſtrictions in the Ideas which thoſe Appellations may poſſibly raiſe in pious Perſons; he principally dwells upon that of Refuge of Sinners, which induces abundance of People to believe that a regular Dovotion to this Mother of Mercy, is ever and at all Times a Preſervative againſt eternal Damnation. But the Opinion and Arguments of this celebrated Divine, will be no Law or Rule of Faith with reſpect to the Practice of Devotion. By decreaſing the Exceſs which he pretends to find in that to the Virgin Mary, and the Saints, the Piety of great Numbers might be diminiſhed, who ſincerely believe, that Things are ordered in Heaven even as they are here on Earth, and that we muſt go to the Saints firſt before we can come to God. They imagine, likewiſe, that the Saints are an imperious, fantaſtic, fickle, touchy ſort of People; that Acceſs to them is difficult, and that they may be bribed, and prepoſſeſſed in Favour of ſome particular Perſons. They are apprehenſive, leſt their Promiſes ſhould prove as ineffectual as thoſe of Courtiers here, which the Vulgar call Court Holy-Water. In ſhort, ſo confined and narrow is the Sphere of the Piety of ſome Devotees, that they regulate the Government of Heaven upon the Foot of their own Conduct in their reſpective Families. Now the Irregularities in the Devotion of thoſe who entertain ſuch abſurd Ideas are ſurely excuſable.

And if ſo, can it be taken amiſs, that we ſhould ſtick to the Practices of Devotion which F. Bary has preſcribed to thoſe of weak Underſtandings in his Paradiſe opened to Philagia? He aſſures us, it is open " to ſuch as confine themſelves to their Chambers, or " carry about them an Image of the Virgin, and look ſteadfaſtly upon it. . . . Who Night
" and Morning beg her Benediction, ſtanding near ſome of the Churches dedicated to her,
" or contribute to the Relief of the Poor for her ſake . . . who, out of a pious Regard for her,
" avoid pronouncing the Name of Mary when they read, but make uſe of ſome other
" inſtead of it . . . . who beg of the Angels to ſalute the Mother of God in their Name;

[a] Si quæris miracula, mors, error, calamitas, dæmon, lepra fugiunt, ægri ſurgunt ſani, cedunt mare, vincula; membra; reſque perditas petunt, &c.

[b] Chap. xxiii.

" who give honourable Appellations to her Images, and caſt amorous Glances at " them," &c.

THERE is no Title of Honour but what ſome Divines of the Church, and particularly our Modern ones, have beſtowed on the Virgin Mary. Having robbed Paganiſm of every Thing that was moſt magnificent and glaring, to beſtow it on the Mother of our Saviour, they have continued to invent ſuch ſplendid Names, as even the moſt fruitful Imagination of the beſt Poets was never capable of deviſing. The Hereſies againſt her inſenſibly produced an Exceſs of Reverence and Devotion to her. In the earlieſt Ages of the Church ſhe was called Queen of Angels, and Mother of God; afterwards the Controverſies which aroſe on her Account, made her Advocates advance every Thing they could think of to make her conſiderable againſt Heretics, and to accuſtom her Devotees to ſuch Expreſſions as are extravagant, and yet very natural in Matters of Debate. She has been looked upon as the Diſpoſer and Depoſitory of God's Favours, the Treaſurer and even Queen of Heaven, the Spring and Fountain of Salvation and Life, the Gate of Paradiſe, the Mother of Light, and Interceſſor between God and Man; the Hope of Mankind, [a] and the Ocean of the Deity. Some celebrated Authors have ſtiled her [b] Goddeſs, and Father Salazar, about the End of the ſixteenth Century, declared her the [c] Acompliſhment of the Trinity. [d] The Pſalter, nay the whole Bible had been applied to her, long before that Declaration; and it hath been proved both by Miracles and Apparitions, that the bleſſed Virgin appeaſes Chriſt's Wrath againſt Sinners; [e] and that ſhe has the Power of abſolving, binding, and looſening. We ſhall take no Notice of the Temples and Altars conſecrated to her from Time to Time for many Ages; of the Vows and Invocations addreſſed to her; of the various Works which ſome devout Writers have publiſhed under her Patronage; of the ſeveral Poems and other witty Pieces compoſed in honour of her; nor laſtly, ſhall we ſay any Thing of the Theological [f] Diſſertations which have appeared under her Name.

THE firſt and principal of the various kinds of Devotion paid to the bleſſed Virgin, is, that by which we imitate her Virtues: But this is ſomewhat difficult. The others are what all Devotees may eaſily perform. The Jeſuit, who publiſhed the Pſalter of our Lady in French, exhorts the devout Chriſtian, who ſays theſe Words in the Introduction to it, Holy Lady, open thou my Lips, &c. " to make two Signs of the Croſs when he repeats " them, one upon his Lips with his Thumb, and the other upon himſelf with his " Hand, as the Prieſts do when they begin their canonical Hours." This Method, as he aſſures us, will procure the Devotee the Honour and Happineſs of being Canon, or Canoneſs of Heaven; and that our Lady, as a Reward of ſo conſpicuous and inſtructive an Act of Devotion, will admit him into Paradiſe. He gives us a Pattern of the Vows

[a] F. Binet the Jeſuit, ſays, that the Springs and Rivers of all Graces flow from the Virgins Womb, as from an Ocean of Divinity.

[b] Several celebrated Writers have ſtiled the Virgin Goddeſs; whereon may be conſulted the Controverſies between the Biſhop of Bellay and Mr. Drelingecurt, upon the Honour due to her. Almoſt an abſolute and Sovereign Power over her Son our Saviour has been aſcribed to her, nor has this Thought been diſagreable to the Church, as will appear from the following Verſes:

O felix puerpera,
Noſtra pians ſcelera,
Jure matris impera
Redemptori.

[c] In Proverb. Salom.

[d] The Pſalter of our Lady is aſcribed to St. Bonaventure, and the Bible to Albert the Great.

[e] St. Antoninus, Archbiſhop of Florence.

[f] The Polyanthea Mariana, the Mariale, the Floſculi Mariani, the Stellarium Coronæ beatæ Virginis, the Faſti Mariani, &c. In the Menagiana, p. 281. of the 2. Tom. of the Continuation, Ed. Holl. 1713. we find that a Monk took it into his Head to compoſe a large Folio, under the Title of Summa Deiparæ; that two or three thouſand new Queſtions relating to the Virgin Mary were therein handled, and that the good Friar exactly copied St. Thomas's Method in his Summa Theologiæ. Juſt as St. Thomas examines this Queſtion, Whether there be a God, ſo does the Monk, Whether there be a Virgin, &c.

which

which the Devotee is to make " for Jeſus and Mary's Sake, and for all the Lovers of " them both, whether Male or Female." He deſcribes the Alliance to be made by him with the moſt amiable and honourable Mother of all Mothers, the Act of Repentance and Contrition for the Reconciliation of himſelf with her, and all the Ceremonies great and ſmall, by which he may devote himſelf to the bleſſed Virgin.

WHOEVER hopes to draw down the Bleſſings of the [a] Virgin upon him, muſt ſalute her every Day both at his going out and coming in: The Legends have tranſmitted down to us ſeveral remarkable Inſtances of Advantages ariſing from Ave Maria; not to mention the thouſand Days Indulgence granted by ſeveral [b] Popes to all thoſe, who ſhall repeat it at the Hour of the Angelus. It were to be wiſhed, therefore, that our modern Chriſtians were more exact in the Practice of this ſort of Devotion, and would imitate St. Margarite of Hungary, who ſaid an Ave kneeling before every Image of the Virgin ſhe met with in her Way; or Saint Catharine of Sienna, who repeated as many Aves as ſhe went up Steps to her Houſe. Theſe Remarks, we preſume, will be thought ſufficient with reſpect to private Devotions. All we ſhall ſay, as to faſting on Saturday in honour of the Virgin Mary, is, that 'tis look'd upon as a Treaſure of Indulgences and Delights, and that it may be look'd upon as an excellent Preſervative againſt eternal Damnation.

CHAP. VIII.

FESTIVALS inſtituted in honour of our LADY.

WE ſhall conclude with what may be call'd popular, or rather ſuperſtitious Devotion; we mean the Cuſtom of dreſſing our Lady after a very magnificent Manner; of ſetting a rich Crown upon her Head on her Feſtival, and other ſolemn Days; of lighting up one or more Tapers before her Images, and preſenting her with Fruits and Flowers, &c. The Populace pay the ſame Reſpects to the reſt of the Saints, and the leaſt Oblation that they can make is a Taper or a Candle.

WE ſhall purſue the ſame Order the Church does, in the Celebration of her Feſtivals. The Purification of our Lady is ſolemnized the ſecond of February. This Feſtival was in former Times called the Feaſt of St. Simeon and St. Anne, thoſe two holy Perſons accidentally meeting together in the Temple at the very Time when the bleſſed Virgin went thither to offer up her Son Jeſus Chriſt to God. For the ſame Reaſon the Grecians have called it Hypapante, or meeting together. It is at preſent known to the Church by the Name of the Purification of our Lady, and to the People under that of Candlemas, by reaſon of the Proceſſion which is at that Time made round the Church with Tapers.

[c] THIS Feſtival ſucceeded in the ſtead of the Amburbales or Proceſſions, which the Romans celebrated at the Beginning of February, in Honour of the Goddeſs Februa; and of their nocturnal Tours with Flambeaux, to repreſent thoſe of Ceres, when ſhe roved about the Country in hopes to find her Daughter Proſerpine again, whom Pluto

[a] Suffren. in his Ann. Chr.

[b] Leo X. and Paul V.

[c] The Inſtitution of this Feſtival is by ſome attributed to St. Gelaſius, who lived in 492. by others to P. Vigilius, who ſay, he only revived it about the Middle of the ſixth Century. P. Sergius, who flouriſhed towards the Cloſe of the ſeventh Century, is, according to ſome Writers, the Founder of the Proceſſion with Tapers. Il mua, ſays the old Legend, la coutume des paiens en meilleure: C'eſt à ſcavoir, que les Chriſtiens environnaſſent l'Egliſe a Clerges benits & alumés en l'honneur de la mere de Dieu; ſi que cette ſolemnité tint, & qu'elle fut faite a autre intention had

had run away with. Thoſe Religious Cuſtoms amongſt the Romans were real Fountains of Debauchery, upon which Account the Roman Pontiffs, determining to remove thoſe Snares of Heathen Superſtition, were obliged to give the People an Equivalent to make Attonement for the Loſs of this Solemnity, which could not be deemed a real Act of Religion with reſpect to Chriſtians. The Luſtrations therefore of the Month of February were conſecrated; and from thence came our Candlemas. The People carried the ſame Flambeaux or Tapers for the Virgin's ſake, as formerly they had carried in Honour of Februa and Ceres; ſince they were juſtly allowed to mingle ſuch Diverſions and Pleaſures, as Feſtivals never fail to inſpire them with, along with their Devotions. [a] The Tapers at Candlemas are bleſſed with the uſual Ceremonies. [b] The Biſhop, or his Vicar, diſtributes them firſt to the Principal of the Clergy, then to the Chief of the Laity, Prieſts, Acolytes, &c. and laſtly, to the reſt of the beſt Faſhion who are preſent. [c] A Canon ſomewhat advanced in Years, diſtributes them amongſt the Ladies of Faſhion; but as to the Populace, when the large Tapers have been diſtributed to Perſons of the higheſt Diſtinction, the ſmall ones only remain to be diſtributed to them [d] without Diſtinction of Age or Sex, by a common Prieſt.

[e] THE Proceſſion, as we have already obſerved, is made round the Church. The Singers march in the Front, and the Incenſe-Bearer follows; the Taper-Bearers, with the Croſs-Bearer between them, walk after them, and then come the Clergy. They who are on the Right Side carry their Tapers in their Right Hands, and ſuch as are on the Left, in their Left. Then comes the Biſhop between two Aſſiſtant-Deacons, with a Taper in his Left Hand, and with his Right beſtowing his Benediction on his Flock. They all carry lighted Tapers, and the Reaſon which is aſſigned for it, is, That they [f] repreſent Jeſus Chriſt, who is the Light of the World. "They kneel to the Altar "before they ſet out; but if there be no Tabernacle, and if they be Canons, they then "only bow to it." The Repreſentation of theſe Candlemas Ceremonies may be ſeen in the Print of the Eaſter Ceremonies.

ON the twenty fifth of March is celebrated the Feſtival of the Annunciation of the bleſſed Virgin; the Origin whereof is of earlier Date than the third Century.

THE ſecond of July is the Viſitation. St. Bonaventure, Principal of the Minors, appointed this Feſtival to be obſerved throughout the whole Order in 1263. Pope Urban VI. in 1389. by his Bull, made it extend to the Church in general; and the Council of Baſil confirmed it, and fixed the ſecond of July for the Day of its Celebration. St. Francis de Sales, together with Mother Jane de Chantal, have founded an Order of Nuns in Remembrance of the Viſitation of the Virgin.

THE ſixteenth of July is the Feſtival of our Lady of Mount Carmel, which, in a more particular Manner, concerns thoſe who pay their Devotion to the Scapulary.

THE fifth of Auguſt is the Feſtival of our Lady of the Snow. We are informed, that the Solemnization of it was owing to a Miracle. [g] When Liberius was Pontiff, a Patrician, or Roman Nobleman, finding himſelf old and childleſs, reſolved, with his Wife's Approbation and Conſent, to make the bleſſed Virgin his ſole Heireſs. The Vow was made with abundance of Devotion; their principal Concern in the next Place, was [a] The Vulgar imagine theſe Tapers have the Power of driving away Demons, and preſerving them from all Temptations.

[b] Cerem. Epiſc. Lib. II.

[c] A ſenicre dignitate, Cerem. Epiſc Ibid.

[d] Aliquis de capitulo diſtribuit candelas minutiores populo utriuſque ſexûs, Cerem. Ep.

[e] Cerem. Epiſc. Ibid.

[f] Alet's Ritual.

[g] Giry's Lives of the Saints.

to employ the Inheritance to our Lady's Good-liking; and accordingly they applied themſelves to faſting, praying, giving Alms to the Poor, and viſiting the Sick, in order to know her Pleaſure. At length the Virgin appeared to each of them in a Dream, and told them, "it was her's and her Son's Will, that they ſhould employ thoſe Effects in erecting a "Church for her, on a particular Part of the Mons Eſquilinus, which they ſhould find "cover'd with Snow." The pious Husband firſt communicated the Revelation to his Wife, who thereupon told him in a Surpriſe, that ſhe had had the ſame Revelation that very Night: But, ſuppoſing the two Dreams had not proved alike, an Exceſs of Zeal would have been ſufficient to have given them all the Conformity that was requiſite. Theſe two Devotees went ſtraitway, and declared their Dreams to the Pope, who perceived that he was a third Man in the Revelation; for his Holineſs had been favoured with the ſame Viſion. [a] It was no longer queſtioned, but Heaven had a Hand in this Affair. The Pontiff aſſembled the Clergy together; and there was a ſolemn Proceſſion to Mount Eſquiline, on purpoſe to find out whether the Miracle was real or not, when the Place ſpecified in the Dream was found covered with Snow. The Ground was juſt of a ſuitable Extent to erect a Church upon, [b] which was afterwards called Liberius's Baſilica, and St. Mary ad præſepe, (becauſe the Manger, which was made uſe of as a Cradle for our Lady, was brought thither from Bethlehem) and is now called St. Mary Major. Every Feſtival-Day the Commemoration of this Miracle is revived, by letting fall white Jeſſamin Leaves, after ſo artificial a Manner, as to imitate the falling of Snow upon the Ground.

THE fifteenth of Auguſt is the Aſſumption of our Lady; but it is not looked upon to be earlier than the ſixth Century: Before which Time, there had been no Revelation of the Aſſumption of the Virgin, Soul and Body to Heaven.

THE Nativity of our Lady is celebrated on the eighth of September, and is a Feſtival which was unknown till the ſeventh Century; but in the twelfth, Pope Innocent IV. made it univerſal.

THE ſeventh of October is devoted to the ſolemn Celebration of the Roſary, of which we ſhall treat at large, when we come to that Topic.

FATHER Giry informs us, [c] that "from the bleſſed Virgin's firſt Appearance in the "World, ſhe preſented herſelf before God to be his faithful and inceſſant Servant; that "the Sacrifice of her Mind and Heart preceded her very Birth; that ſhe offered herſelf, "in ſhort, in her Mother's Womb." It is not, however, that private offering herſelf, which the Church ſolemnizes on the twenty fourth of November; but her Dedication to God by her Parents St. Joachim and St. Anne. This Feſtival firſt came from the Eaſt, and towards the Cloſe of the fourteenth Century began to be eſtabliſh'd in Europe.

The Conception of our Lady is ſolemniz'd by the Church on the eighth of December, and is called Immaculate, it being alledged, that the bleſſed Virgin was conceived without Spot or Stain. This Feſtival is more antient amongſt the Greeks than the Latins, and began to be obſerved in Europe about the Beginning of the twelfth Century. Pope Sixtus IV. who had been a Cordelier, and by Conſequence an Advocate for the Immaculate Conception, eſtabliſhed this Feſtival by his Bull in the fifteenth Century.

THE Feſtival of our Lady of the O, or of the Delivery of the bleſſed Virgin, is celebrated on the eighteenth of December. It was inſtituted in Spain, in the Pontificate

[a] Giry's Lives of the Saints.
[b] Idem, Ibid.
[c] Vie des Saints.

of Vitalian, about the Middle of the ſeventh Century. It is called likewiſe the Feſtival for expecting the Birth of our Lord Jeſus. The Denomination of our Lady of the O, is owing to the Anthems which are called the O's, on Account of the frequent Repetition of that Note of Exclamation; and thereby the Church invites the Eternal Wiſdom to deſcend on Earth.

IN Italy and Spain, nine Days are ſet apart for expecting his Birth, in Commemoration of the nine Months Pregnancy of the bleſſed Virgin: [a] During which Time, the Altar is adorned in a Manner ſuitable to the ſolemn Occaſion, and the Image of our Lady is expoſed upon it.

FORMERLY the Feſtival of the Virgin's Eſpouſals was likewiſe ſolemniſed. It was inſtituted in France, as we are informed, in the Year 1532, and the Celebration of it was fixed on the twelfth of January.

CHAP. IX.

PLACES remarkable for the Worſhip and Miracles of our BLESSED LADY.

I. SOME pretend, tho' 'tis no Crime to diſallow it, that [b] the Apoſtle St. Peter himſelf conſecrated a Chapel to the Mother of the bleſſed Jeſus.

THE Spaniards tell us, that when St. James was at Saragoſſa, the bleſſed Virgin appeared to him, and on that Account the holy Apoſtle cauſed a Chapel to be erected in honour to her, which was afterwards called Neuſtra Sennora del Pilar. Some venture to affirm, [c] that the Angels themſelves were the Architects of the Chapel. The bleſſed Virgin, moſt magnificently dreſſed, reſides there on a Marble Pillar, having a young Jeſus in her Arms. Several Angels, made of Silver, ſurround her with Flambeaux, beſides fifty ſilver Lamps, and ſeveral Branches of the ſame Metal, with Tapers burning before her Night and Day. The Walls of this ſacred Chapel are hung [d] with the Figures of Feet, Hands, Arms, Legs, Hearts, &c. being the Oblations of the Pious to the bleſſed Virgin, as a grateful Acknowledgment of the miraculous Cures wrought by her on thoſe particular Members.

II. OUR Lady of Atocha reſides at Madrid, [e] in a Chapel which blazes with an hundred Lamps made of Gold and Silver. She there performs as many Miracles as at Saragoſſa, Loretto, &c. Our Lady of Atocha is dreſſed for the moſt Part in Widow's Weeds, having a Chaplet in her Hands; but notwithſtanding all this devout Attire, ſhe is crowned with a Sun, and appears like a Queen in all her Gaiety, and in all her Jewels, upon ſolemn Feſtivals. It is now ſix hundred Years ago ſince our Lady firſt ſettled at Lieſſe in Picardy. During the Cruſades, an Egyptian Princeſs, who had heard much Talk of the Miracles of the bleſſed Virgin, reſolved to have an Image of her, and for that

[a] Piſcara Prax. Cerem. Lib. III. Sect. 1.
[b] Ralph. Volat.
[c] Etat de l'Eſpagne, Tom. I.
[d] The antient Heathens, as well Greeks as Romans, had the ſame Cuſtom from a Principle of Gratitude to their Gods, to whom they thought themſelves obliged for any Cure. The Cuſtom of offering thoſe Parts of the Body ſuppoſed to be cured, in Gold or Silver, to our Lady, or any other Saint, is very common in Flanders, Brabant, and Picardy.
[e] Id. Ibid.

Purpoſe

Purpoſe addreſſed herſelf to three Gentlemen of Picardy, who were Priſoners at Cairo; and though Strangers to the Art of Painting, one of them had Courage enough to make the Attempt. Having endeavour'd, but in vain, to acquit himſelf of his Promiſe, he made his earneſt Applications to the bleſſed Virgin, and his two Companions joined with him in Prayer; after which they all fell aſleep. As ſoon as they awoke, they found an Image of our Lady, moſt accurately performed, which they ſent the Princeſs, who in return for their Compliment gave them their Liberty. We ſhall omit the Remainder of the Story, and only acquaint the Reader, that the Princeſs, who was converted to the Chriſtian Faith by Virtue of this Image, and the three Priſoners who had obtained the Favour from Heaven, by their fervent Prayers, miraculouſly eſcaped out of Egypt, and found themſelves all on a ſudden, by a Continuation of the ſame Miracle, in Picardy, on the very ſame Spot of Ground where the Church of our Lady of Lieſſe now ſtands.

III. Our Lady of Neubourg would have remained unknown for ever, had not the Zeal of Mark d'Aviano, a Capuchin Father, recalled the Devotees back to her. The pious Reſentment of this good Friar for forty Years together, to ſee our Lady wholly abandon'd, drew upon him the miraculous Regards of the Image; of which ſeveral devout old Women were Eye-Witneſſes, nor is it any great Wonder. Our Lady of Monte de la Guardia, which is about five Miles from Bolonia, is no Ways inferior to the foregoing Images. Her's painted by St. Luke, is carried in Proceſſion for three Days together, annually, in the City of Boulogne.

IV. In the Sequel of this Diſſertation, we ſhall have Occaſion to take notice of our Lady of Loretto; but we ſhall only firſt mention here our Lady of Montſerrat in Catalonia, of Hal and Aſpremont in Flanders and Brabant, of Pity at Naples, of Cures in Gaſcony, &c. The Miracles which ſhe has wrought in all theſe Places are almoſt innumerable; nor is it a leſs difficult Taſk to enumerate thoſe [a] of her Images. The Devotees, in conſequence of the Miracles wrought by them, are to carry Repreſentations of her about them, deck her Images with Flowers, dreſs them in Silks or other coſtly Ornaments, burn Tapers before them, kiſs them, and look with a languiſhing Eye upon them, touch them with their Chaplets, rub their Handkerchiefs upon them, &c. and ſalute them with the profoundeſt Veneration.

Relics of the Bleſſed Virgin.

We come now to the laſt Topic, relating to the Bleſſed Virgin, which is her Relics. As to her Hair, the greateſt Part of it has been preſerved; and for her Milk, not one Drop of it, we are told, was ever loſt; but Relics were made of it immediately after our Saviour's Nativity. Some of it is to be ſeen in divers Parts of Chriſtendom. Our Lady's Wedding-Ring is preſerved with the utmoſt Reſpect at Perouſe; the Fate and Miracles whereof are all deſcribed in [b] a Book publiſhed in the Beginning of the ſeventeenth Century. The bleſſed Virgin's Clothes are to be ſeen at Rome and ſeveral other Places, her Shifts at Chartres and Aix la Chapelle, one of her Handkerchiefs at Treves, her Girdles at our Lady of Montſerrat, at Prato, &c. one of her Combs at Rome, another at Bezancon, her Shoes at our Lady of Puy, and at St. Flour; one of her Slippers in Brittany. [c] The Meaſure of her Foot is in the Cuſtody of the [a] The Origin of ſome of theſe Images is very extraordinary. Our Lady of Banelle, for Inſtance, was found in the Middle of an Oak.

[b] De annulo pronubo Deiparæ Virginis, autore J. Bapt. Lauro, Colon. 1626.

[c] La Medidad del piè ſanctiſſimo de Nueſtra Sennora. Pope John XXII. gave ſeven hundred Years Indulgences, and a pretty full Remiſſion of Sins, to the Devotee who ſhould thrice kiſs the holy Meaſure, and ſay three Ave's in honour of it.

Spaniards

Spaniards. To conclude, it is not to be queſtion'd, but that all the various Pieces of her Goods, Kitchen-Furniture, Toilette, and Implements of Houſhold, have been carefully preſerved. Her Gloves, Headclothes, Veils, Bed, Chair, and the Stones on which ſhe waſhed our Lord's Swadling-Clothes; her Candles, the Oil for her Lamp, and all her Earthen Ware, are ſtill expoſed to public View. 'Tis true, indeed, that theſe Things were loſt for ſeveral Ages; but the Monks have had the good Fortune to find them one after another. We have no [a] Relic of her ſacred Body left us, that being, as we have already obſerved, taken up to Heaven.

CHAP. X.

The JUBILEE.

I. THE Jubilee, as to its Origin, is half Jewiſh, half Pagan. That joyful Seaſon procured Liberty amongſt the Jews to ſuch as were Slaves; to ſuch as were poor, an Acquittance from their Debts, and the Recovery of their Effects to ſuch as through Neceſſity had been obliged to pawn them. The Ground itſelf reſted during the Year of the Jewiſh Jubilee. The Pope, by our Jubilee, of which the former was but a Type, grants the like Privileges to Chriſtians: 'Tis a Year of reſt to them: His Holineſs frees them from Sin, relieves the ſpiritual Poverty of the Penitent, by opening [b] the Treaſures of the divine Mercy to him, remits his Debts, and reſtores him to the Poſſeſſion of celeſtial Effects. On the other Hand, one would imagine, that the Jubilee was deſign'd to ſucceed the Ludi Sæculares, or ſecular Games of the Romans, and that it was the Intention of Boniface the VIIIth, in order to divert the Chriſtians from this Pagan Ceremony, to ſubſtitute a better, accompanied with ſeveral ſhining Acts of Piety. It was he who order'd the firſt grand Jubilee to be celebrated.

II. Pope Boniface the VIIIth, [c] upon his Inſtitution of this grand Jubilee, expreſly declared by his Bull, that ſuch as ſhould viſit the Baſilicas of St. Peter and St. Paul in the Year 1300. and every hundred Years afterwards, after a free Confeſſion and ſincere Repentance of their Sins, ſhould obtain a full Remiſſion, together with ſeveral Indulgences as extenſive as were poſſible to be granted to repenting Sinners. It does not appear, ſays M. Turtin [d], that his Holineſs had any Regard to the Jubilee of the Jews, ſince he not only declin'd the Name of Jubilee, but on the contrary, doubled the Time preſcribed them. But as to Clement the VIth, the Caſe was alter'd. This Pope called that Inſtitution the Jubilee, and ordered it to be celebrated every fifty Years.

III. SEVERAL Roman Catholic Writers are of Opinion, that the Jubilee of the Chriſtians bears a very near Affinity to the ſecular Games of the antient Romans. We ſhall

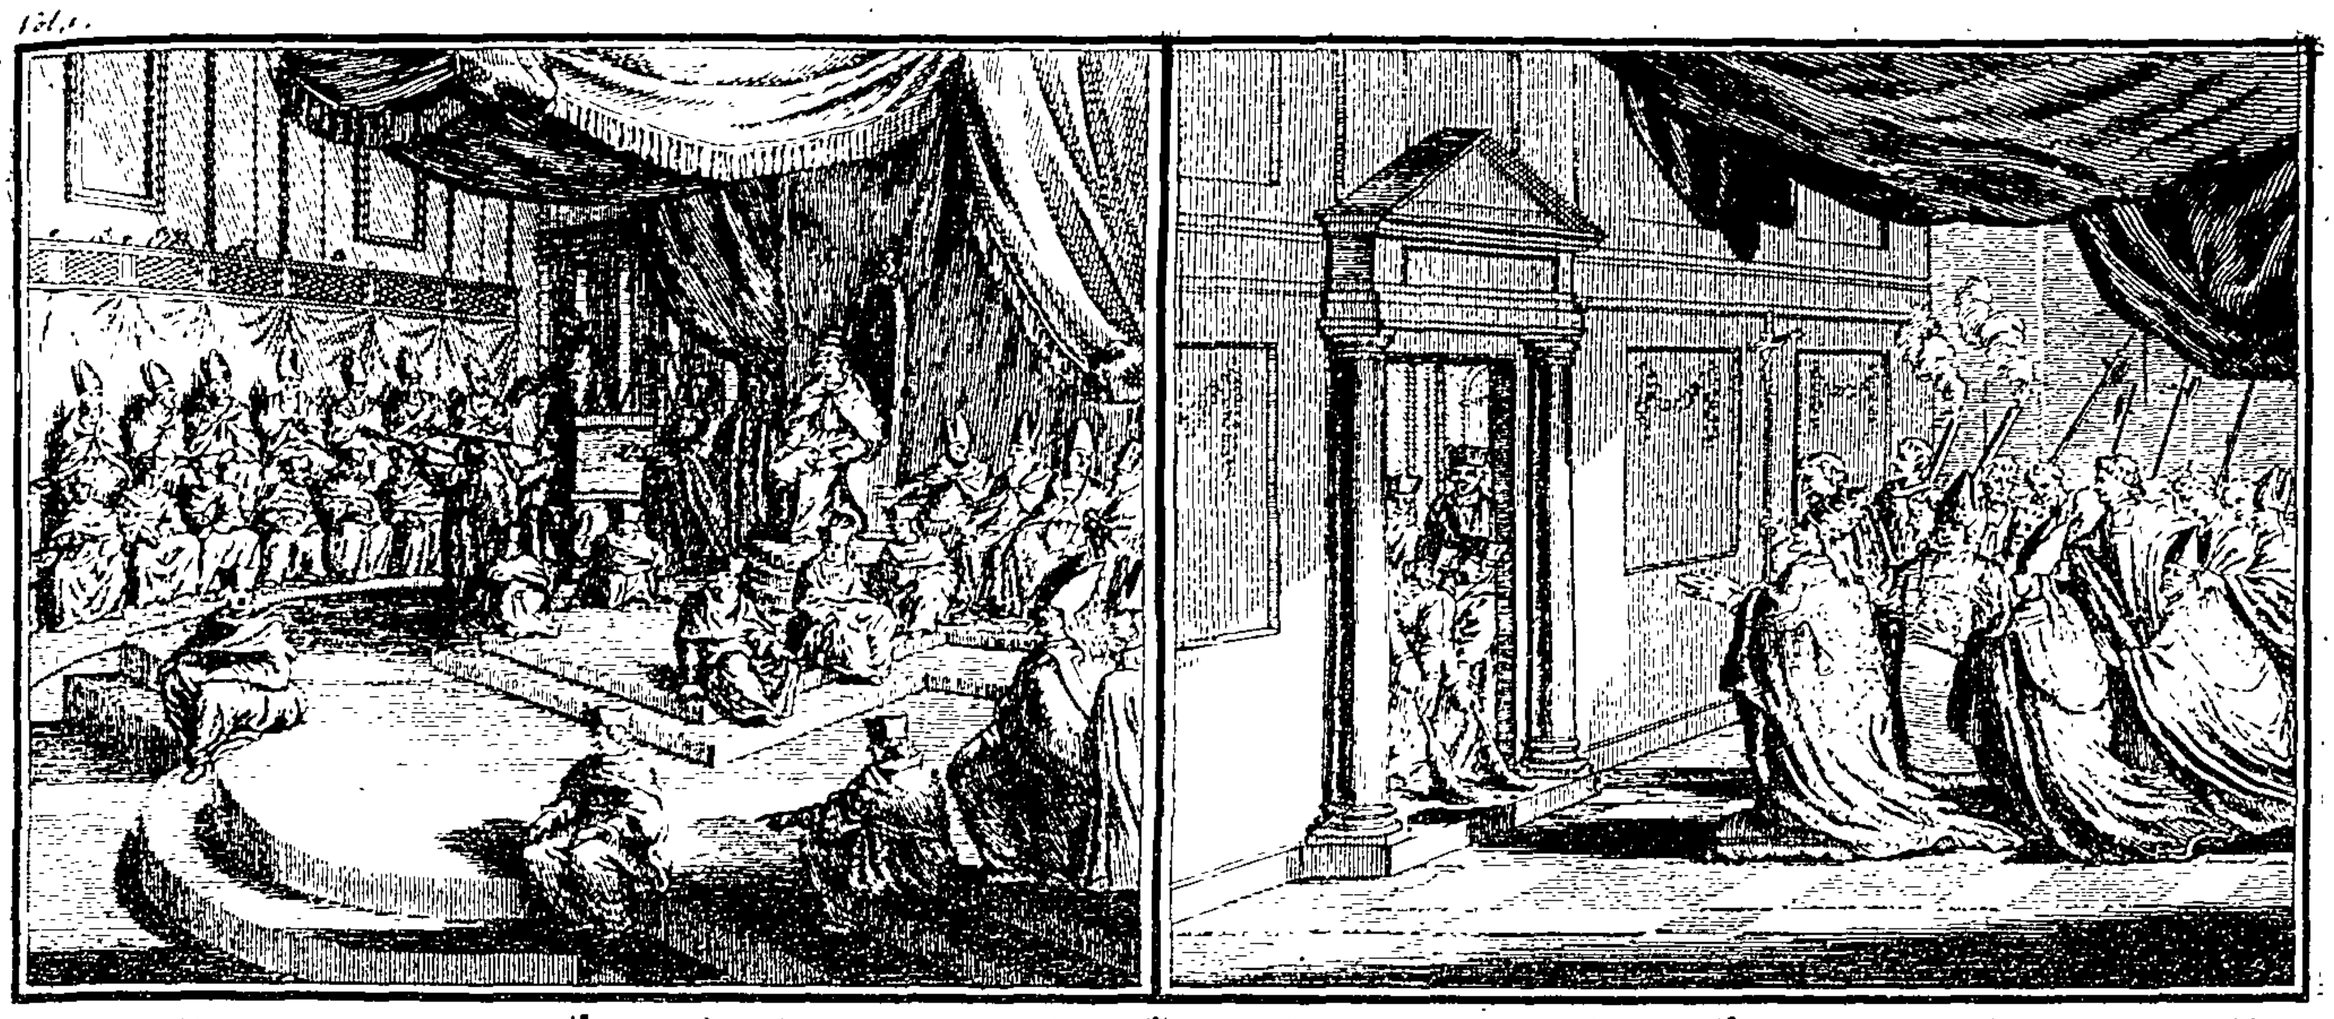
[a] Milk and Hair are not Relics, properly ſpeaking, of the Bleſſed Virgin's Body.



[b] Indulgences.

[c] The Character which Hiſtory gives us of this Pope, makes it a reaſonable Suppoſition, that he inſtituted the Jubilee to amaſs Wealth, and to give a Luſtre to the Papal Dignity. He, as the common Father of all Chriſtians, gave the People his Benediction in his Pontifical Robes the firſt Day, but the next preſented himſelf as Emperor, inveſted with the Ornaments of Empire. His Holineſs had even a naked Sword carried before him; and to teſtify his double Authority, the Vicar of Jeſus Chriſt, ſeated on his Throne, cried out, Behold two Swords. Albert Krantz, quoted by M. Turtin, in his Diſſertation upon the Ludi Sæculares.

[d] Diſſert. de Ludis Sæcularibus.

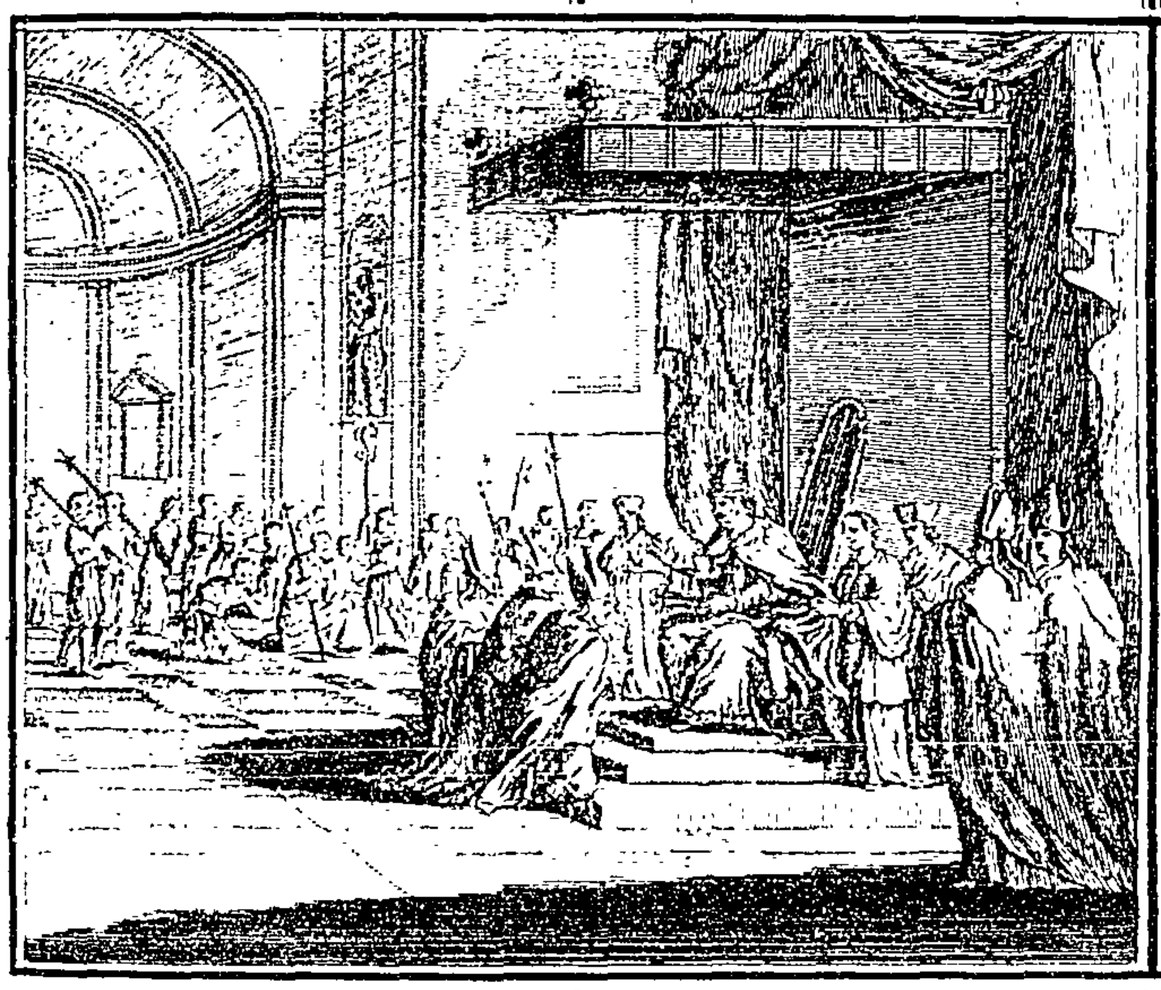
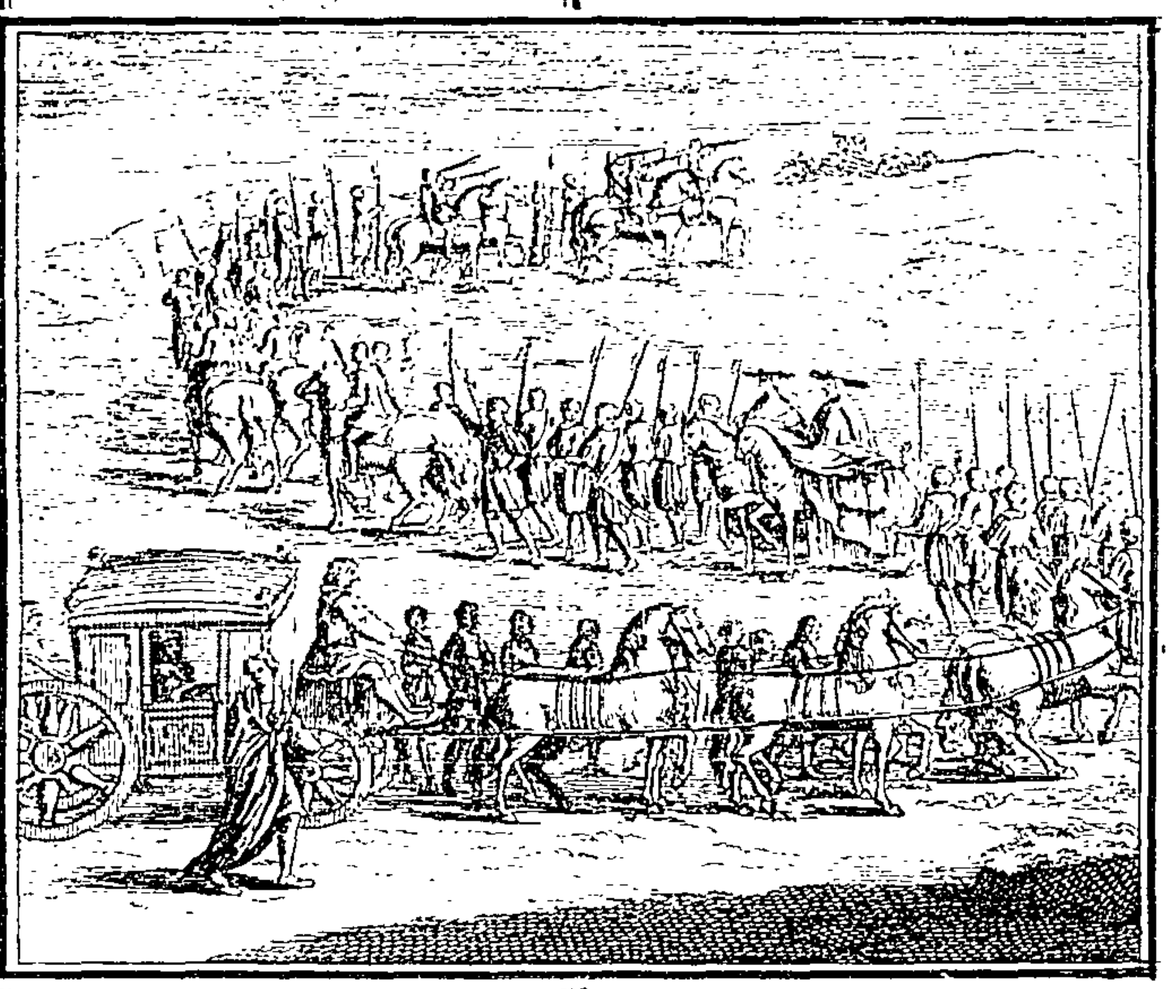
quote

Tab. 1.



The JUBILEE Proclaimed with Sound of Trumpets in S.t PETERS CHURCH.

La Proclamation du JUBILE au son des trompettes dans l'eglise de S.t PIERRE.

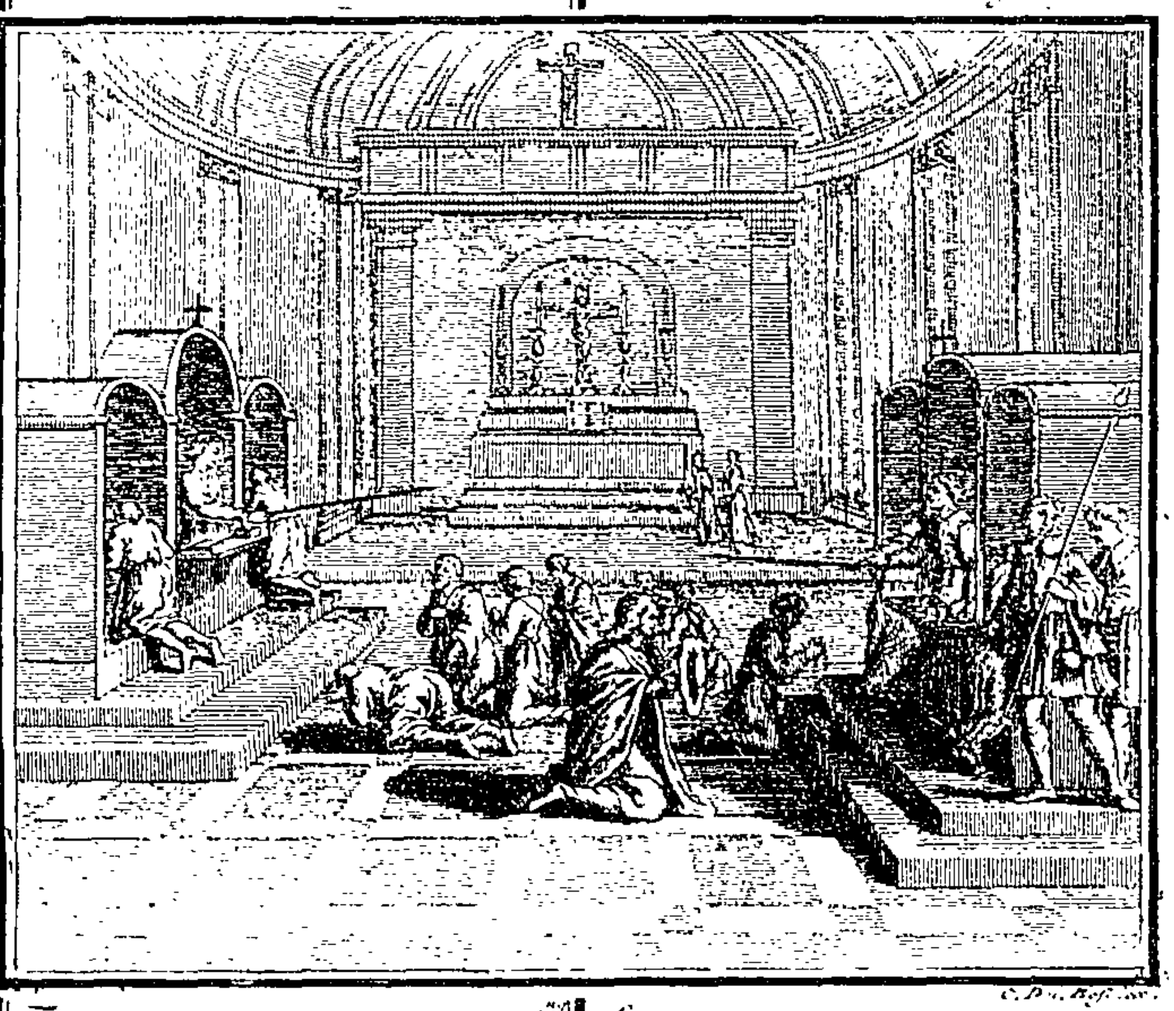


After y.e PORTA SANTA is unwall'd &c. the penitencaries sweep it perfum.d and the POPE takes his Cross & makes his entrance Singing the TEDEUM

Les Penitenciers ayant balayé la PORTE S.te après quelle a été démurée, le PAPE prend sa croix, et y entre en chantant le TEDEUM.

The POPE deputes three CARDINALS to open the Gates of S.t JOHN of LATERAN, MARIA MAJOR and S.t PAUL.

Le PAPE depute trois CARDINAUX pour aller ouvrir les portes de S.t JEAN DE LATRAN de S.te MARIE MAJEURE et de S.t PAUL.



The Procession of the CARDINALS deputed by his HOLINESS to perform the overture of the PORTA SANTA at three other CHURCHES.

Marche des CARDINAUX deputez par sa SAINTETE pour aller faire l'ouverture de la PORTE SALVTE aux trois autres Eglises.

The MILICIA receive the Commission of Guarde, of the SANTA PORTA.

La garde de la PORTE SAINTE est commise aux MILICE.

The PENETENCIARIES touch the PILGRIMS with long rods forgive their Sins.

Les PENITENCIERS remettent les Pechez aux PELERINS, en les touchant de leurs Baguettes.

R. Pigeot del.

C. Pau. Ref. sc.

quote [a] two Paſſages on this Subject, without preſuming, however, to offer any Thing againſt the Ceremony of the Jubilee. The Evil lies not in the Conformity between a Practice eſtabliſhed in a falſe Religion, and one admitted into the true; but in the Abuſe and Superſtition, to which ſelf-intereſted Views and Ambition unavoidably lead. Onuphrius formally, and in expreſs Terms, compares the Jubilee to the ſecular Games. "An Attonement for the Sins of Rome was made in them; Men were there-"by regenerated, and promiſed to lead a better Life; our Jubilee grants us a general "Remiſſion of our Sins." M. Turtin in his Diſſertation, ſupplies us with Matter ſufficient to make an exact Compariſon of theſe two Ceremonies. We ſhall cite the Paſſage. "Both the one and the other muſt be ſought for at Rome. The ſecular Games "were publiſhed in a ſolemn Manner, as the Jubilee is now-a-days by Bulls ſent to "all Chriſtian Princes. During the ſecular Games, the Temples of the two principal "Deities of the Pagans were viſited in the very ſame Manner as the Baſilicas of St. "Peter and St. Paul, St. John de Lateran, and St. Mary Major are now viſited in the "Time of the Jubilee. The Expiations and Luſtrations practis'd at the ſecular Games, "were deem'd very proper for obtaining the Remiſſion of Sins, appeaſing the Anger "of the Gods, and averting their Judgments. The Object of the Jubilee is the At-"tonement for Sins, &c. The Oblations which the People made during the Celebra-"tion of the ſecular Games, may, in ſome Degree, be conſtrued as an Equivalent for "the Money offered for Indulgences. The Emperor (as ſovereign Pontiff) was for-"merly the Primum Mobile and Head of the Ceremony, as the Pope is now of the "Jubilee. On ſome Medals the Roman Emperor is ſeen knocking with a Rod at the "Door of a Temple, as Director of the ſecular Games. His Holineſs performs the "ſame Ceremony with his Hammer; after which the ſacred Doors open to him as well "as they did to the former. The Pagan Ceremony was attended with Hymns, ſo is "ours now. In ſhort, the Emperors frequently changed the ſtated Time for the Ce-"lebration of the [b] ſecular Games." Auguſtus did not ſtay till the Expiration of the hundred Years; and Claudius ſolemniz'd his about ſixty Years after thoſe of Auguſtus. The Popes have copied them. Clement the VIth we find ordered the Jubilee to be celebrated twice in a hundred Years. Urban the VIth reduced the Term to thirty three Years. Boniface IX. ſolemniz'd it nine Years after; and in Proceſs of Time a Bull of Sixtus the IVth eſtabliſh'd it once in twenty five Years. His Predeceſſor Paul the IId had before fixed it by a Decree of the Year 1470. to the ſame Time. Sixtus the IVth, however, celebrated a Jubilee in 1475. and Alexander the VIth, not content with the Solemnization of it in 1498. revived it again in 1500.

[a] Polyd. Virgil, in his Treatiſe, De Reb. Invent. ſays, that this Pope inſtituted the Jubilee to divert the Chriſtians from the Superſtition of the ſecular Games. The Cardinal of Pavia, ſpeaking of the Jubilee in a Letter which he wrote to Pope Paul II. calls it an Imitation of the antient Superſtition (antiquæ vanitatis.)

[b] As every Reader is not acquainted with what the ſecular Games of antient Rome were, we ſhall here give a ſhort Deſcription of them. Varro and Valerius Maximus attribute alike the Origin of theſe Games to public Calamities, though in a very different Manner. They were inſtituted by V. Publicola in the primitive Times of the Republic, but often neglected afterwards. When Auguſtus revived them, it might probably proceed from a Principle of Policy more than any religious Motive. The People who had juſt loſt their Liberty were to be dazzled and relieved at once, and made to forget the Oppreſſion and Tyranny of the Triumvirate.

When the Time for the Celebration of them came on, they were publiſhed at Rome, and throughout Italy, in the moſt ſolemn Manner. The Officers named the Quindecemviri diſtributed Sulphur, Bitumen, and Lights among the People, in order to make an exact Luſtration therewith for the Expiation of their Sins. Three Days and Nights were employed in Sacrifices to Jupiter, Juno, Latona, Ceres, Apollo, Diana, Pluto, Proſerpine, and the Fates. White Victims were offered to ſuch Gods as inhabited the Heavens, and black to thoſe who reſided in the infernal Regions. The Prince, or principal Perſon in the Republic, on the firſt Night of this religious Ceremony, opened the Devotion by a Sacrifice of three Lambs, on three Altars raiſed on the Banks of the Tyber. After this, Hymns were ſung, and firſt Fruits offered for the Redemption of Sins. They reſorted to the Capitol to pay their Devotions, and make their Sacrifices. From thence they went to the Theatre, to ſee the Games celebrated in honour of Apollo and Diana. The next Day the Ladies in their Turn went and performed their Devotions at the Capitol. In ſhort, the third Day twenty ſeven young Boys, and the ſame Number of Girls, all of good Families, and whoſe Fathers and Mothers were living, went to the Temple of Apollo, ſirnamed Palatinus, to ſing the ſecular Hymn in honour of Apollo and Diana. Devotion created no Interruption in their Joy and Mirth; for the Pagans had the Art of blending them agreeably together.

IV. THE Decrees of Paul the IId, and Sixtus the IVth, do not hinder the Popes from declaring an univerſal Jubilee on their Exaltation to the Pontificate, and likewiſe on ſome other extraordinary Occaſions. The holy Gates, however, are never opened but for the twenty fifth Year's Jubilee, which, if we may be allow'd the Expreſſion, brings with it an univerſal Indulgence; [a] the Hearts of the Faithful are comforted thereby, and Joy entereth into the Houſe of the Lord.

THE Jubilee grants to ſuch Confeſſors as are approved by their Superiors, a Power to abſolve in all reſerved Caſes, from all Cenſures, and the greater Excommunication; to annul all Suſpenſions relating both to Benefices and Eccleſiaſtical Offices, and to take off Interdicts. It permits them likewiſe to alter Vows, in caſe they have no Relation to Religion or Chaſtity, or are not of the Nature of thoſe that engage to perform certain Pilgrimages, ſuch as thoſe to Rome, Jeruſalem, and St. James of Galicia.

V. WHEN his Holineſs has appointed the Jubilee, he gives notice of it, by his Apoſtolical [b] Letters, to all the Prelates throughout Chriſtendom; and theſe cauſe it to be publiſhed in their reſpective Dioceſſes, with proper Exhortations, in order that the Faithful may put themſelves into a Condition of obtaining the Advantages which attend it. The holy Father's Intentions are explained; thoſe Churches which are to be viſited, are nominated; certain Acts of Devotion, which are always attended with proper Indulgences, are preſcribed; and proper Litanies, and Prayers peculiar to the ſolemn Occaſion of the Jubilee, and to the Subject which procures it, are cauſed to be printed. No Society, no religious Order muſt abſent itſelf from the Proceſſions which are ordered for celebrating this Piece of Devotion. The People, with their Magiſtrates, and the reſt of their Superiors, are invited to attend it with all the Modeſty that an Act of Religion requires. On ſuch Days as are ſet apart for Faſting and Repentance, the Biſhop and his Clergy are enjoin'd to appear overwhelmed with Sorrow, and filled with Sentiments of Humiliation. They are to pray with Heart and Mouth to the Almighty, and to offer him the Fruits of a ſincere Contrition, which conſiſts in the Renunciation of all thoſe Engagements by which Men are for the moſt part devoted to the World, and in a ſtrong Reſolution to inſtruct the People by their own pious Example. The good Chriſtian, who has undergone a long Penance, for the Edification of the Church, may with very good Grounds aſſure himſelf, that he is in a right Way to enjoy theſe Indulgences. We ſhall here introduce the Ceremonies of the Univerſal Jubilee.

VI. " THE Pope, ſays the Sieur Aimon, in his Tableau de la Cour de Rome, notifies " the Univerſal Jubilee in the Capitol of Chriſtendom, by a Bull which he cauſes to be " publiſh'd the Year preceding, on Aſcenſion-Day, at his giving the ſolemn Benedic- " tion. An Apoſtolical Sub-Deacon begins the Publication, in the Preſence of the whole " Court of Rome, reading a Bull in Latin; and after him another Sub-Deacon reads it " with an audible Voice to the People in Italian. As ſoon as he has done, the Pope's " twelve Trumpets in ordinary begin to ſound, and immediately after them twelve " Huntſmen ſound their ſilver Horns, by Way of Concert, and the Caſtle of St. Angelo " at the ſame Time giving a Diſcharge of all its Artillery.

" ON the fourth Sunday in Advent, [c] the Apoſtolical Sub-Deacons publiſh the Bull for " the Jubilee a ſecond Time, and on the three Days, which immediately precede " Chriſtmas-Day, the Bells throughout the whole City proclaim the Solemnity, which " is to commence the next Day.

[a] Caſal. de Vet. Sacr. Chriſt. Ritib.
[b] Piſcara Praxis Cerem. Baudry Manual. Sacr. Cerem.
[c] As deſcribed in the firſt Print.

VII.

The POPE opening the HOLY GATE.

Le PAPE faisant l'ouverture de la PORTE SAINTE.

Petrus Lucatellus, del. C. Du Ros. exc.

BOXES for the NOBILITY to See the opening of the HOLY GATE.

Vuë des LOGES d'où la NOBLESSE regarde la Ceremonie de l'ouverture de la PORTE SAINTE.

VII. "ON the twenty fourth Day of December, of the holy Year, all the ſecular "and regular Clergy aſſemble together at the Apoſtolic Palace, and from thence march "in Proceſſion to St. Peter's at the Vatican. When the Clergy come into the great "Square before St. Peter's, they find the Doors of the Church ſhut, and all the En-"trances of the Portico lined with Guards, to hinder the Mob from getting in. The "Pope, the Cardinals and Biſhops, dreſs'd in their white damaſk Robes, having their "Mitres on, meet in Sixtus's Chapel, at which Place his Holineſs ſings the Veni Creator, "with a lighted Taper in his Hand. All the Cardinals, having each of them one likewiſe "in their Hands, come out, according to their reſpective Rank, and repair to the Swiſs "Portico, where the holy Father nominates three of them his Legates a latere, to go and "open the Gates of St. John de Lateran, St. Mary Major, and St. Paul without the "Walls." Their Eminencies having received his Holineſs's Orders on their Knees, in the Manner as deſcribed in the ſecond Print, go to thoſe ſeveral Churches, (the Manner whereof is likewiſe delineated in the fourth Print,) preceded by Trumpets, Hautboys, and a Troop of Men, half in warlike, and (if the Expreſſion may be allow'd) half in religious Armour. Their March begins as ſoon as the Pope has open'd the holy Gate at St. Peter's.

THE Chief of the Roman Soldiery have the Charge of this holy Gate, which is always open'd by his Holineſs himſelf, unleſs the Infirmities of Age, or ſome other particular Indiſpoſition renders him incapable; in which Caſe the Cardinal-Dean officiates for him.

CHAP. XI.

The Opening of the SACRED GATE by his HOLINESS.

I. THE Vicar of JESUS CHRIST, being ſeated on a Throne, which is raiſed before the great Gate, and in the Middle of the great Portico before mention'd, reſts himſelf for a ſhort Time there; after which the Prince of the Throne preſents him with a golden Hammer, which the holy Father takes in his Right Hand; then riſing from his Throne, he goes and knocks at [a] the Sacred Gate. His Clergy follow him with Tapers in their Hands. The Pontiff knocking thrice againſt the Gate, ſays with an audible Voice, Aperite mihi portas juſtitiæ, Open unto me theſe Gates of Juſtice; to which the Choir add, This is the Gate of the Eternal, the Juſt ſhall enter therein, &c. [b] In the mean Time the Head-Maſons break down the Wall

[a] The ſacred Gates are Repreſentations of God's Grace. The Paſſage of the Pilgrims through them denotes the Chriſtian's Paſſage from the State of Sin to that of Grace. All ſuch as perform the Stations appointed by his Holineſs, in the four Baſilica's at Rome, muſt paſs through theſe holy Gates. It is likewiſe pretended, that the opening of theſe Gates repreſents the opening of the Church unto all Men, provided they go to it after a ſincere Converſion. The holy Father opens the Gate, which ſignifies his having the Key of the celeſtial Treaſures. The three Blows upon the Gate repreſent the three Quarters of the World, Europe, Africa, and Aſia, to which his Holineſs offers the Treaſures which he diſpoſes of. Vide Caſal. de Ritib. &c. There is ſome Deficiency in this allegorical Explication. Why is not America comprehended under it? We ſhould then rather ſay, that the three Strokes with the Hammer are an excellent Repreſentation of that Joy which the Jubilee gives the Faithful, in Heaven, on Earth, and in Purgatory.

[b] Tableau de la Cour de Rome. This Wall is erected on Purpoſe, in ſuch a Manner, as to hold but very ſlightly by its four Sides. The Stones are not faſtened with Cement, ſo that the Moment the holy Father knocks at the ſacred Gate, it falls without any Reſiſtance.

which

which cloſes up the ſacred Gate, and the Rubbiſh of it is diſtributed amongſt the Devotees, who pick it up with all the Zeal and Eagerneſs imaginable, in order to rank it with their moſt precious Relics. And it is really ſo indeed to all ſuch as imagine there is a cret and divine Virtue conſtantly reſiding in every individual Thing made uſe of in the Ceremonies of Religion. Whilſt the Rubbiſh is a clearing out of the Way, his Holineſs goes and ſits down on his Throne.

II. WHEN the Wall is demoliſhed, the Penitentiaries of St. Peter take their Brooms, clear the Gate, and ſweep the Bricks and the Lime that remain out of the Paſſage. Theſe Materials are not to be looked on as contemptible Rubbiſh, ſince Relics are made of them. The Mouldings as well as other Decorations round the Gate are waſhed with holy Water. When this Operation is over, his Holineſs deſcends from his Throne, and begins this Anthem, Hæc dies quam fecit Dominus, This is the Day which the Lord hath made, &c. which the Choir goes on with after him. Being arrived at the Sacred Gate, the holy Father repeats ſeveral Prayers, takes the Croſs, kneels down before the Gate, begins the Te Deum, and riſes up and paſſes thro' the holy Gate, ſtill ſinging the ſame as he goes along. His Clergy follow him. Every Body gets into the Church, either to ſee this magnificent Ceremony, or aſſiſt at the Veſpers of the Pope's Chapel. After Veſpers, the Cardinals pull off their white Robes, put on their red Copes again, attend his Holineſs to the Door of his Apartment, and then withdraw. On Chriſtmas-Day, after the Maſs of the Day, the holy Father goes to the Benediction-Pew, and bleſſes the Faithful by Way of Jubilee.

CHAP. XII.

The STATIONS or VISITATION of the CHURCHES by the PILGRIMS.

I. THE Pope's Bull [a] enjoins the Viſitation of the [b] four Churches before mentioned, as highly contributing to procure the Benefits of the Jubilee. And accordingly the Romans are commanded to viſit them thirty Times, but his Holineſs abates half the Number in favour of ſuch of the Faithful as are Foreigners. He has the ſame Indulgence for ſuch Chriſtians as are afraid of being incapable of undergoing the Fatigue of ſo difficult and laborious a Devotion. A Man muſt go twelve Miles to viſit thoſe four Churches only once a Day; ſo that the Chriſtian Devotee who would be regular, may compute, that during the Jubilee, he will walk three hundred Miles for God's Sake. There are little Books of Prayers compos'd by the Pope's Order, to direct the faithful Pilgrim's Devotion and Deportment, in the Churches which he is oblig'd to viſit; and if by Misfortune he dies before he has accompliſh'd all his Viſits, there is a Clauſe inſerted in the Bull for the Jubilee, which

[a] Tableau de la Cour de Rome.

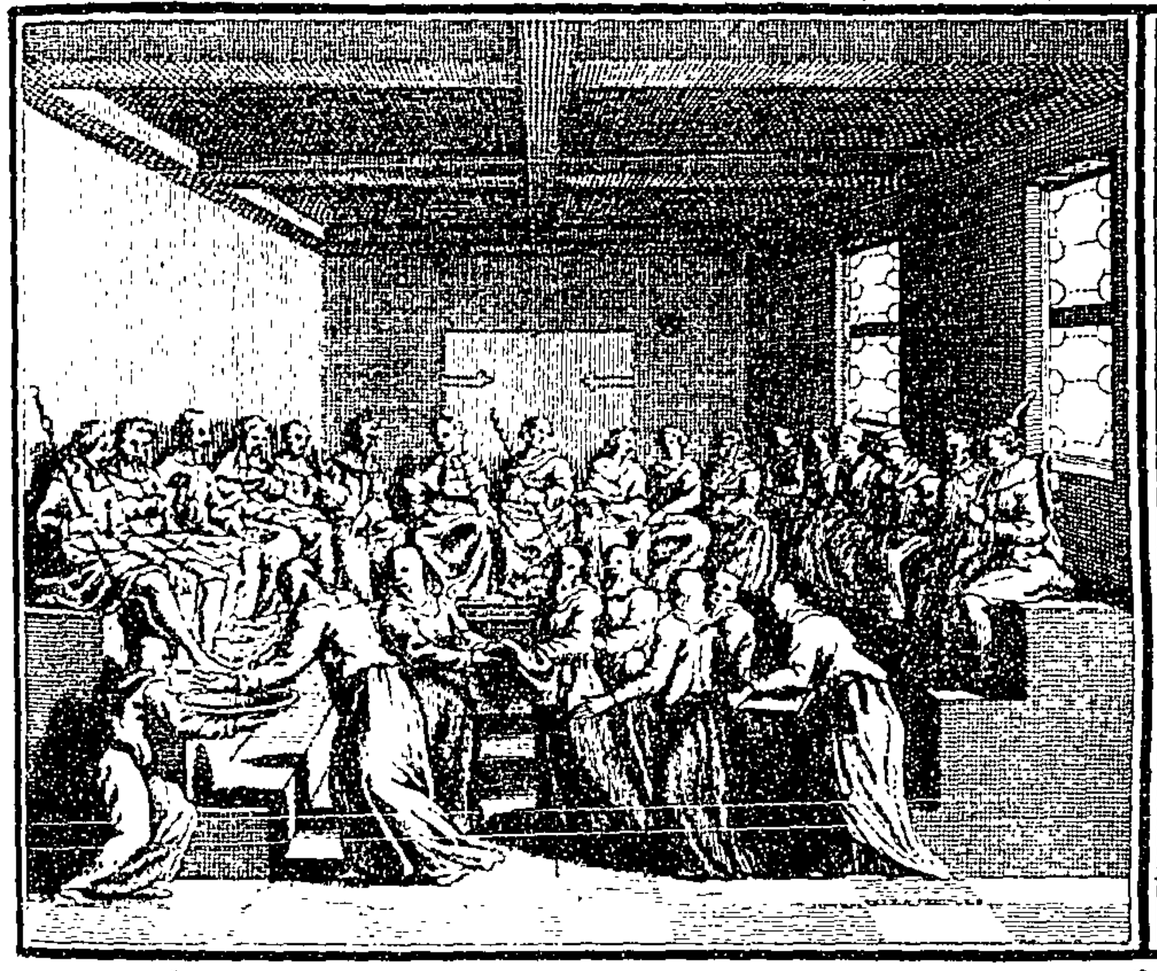
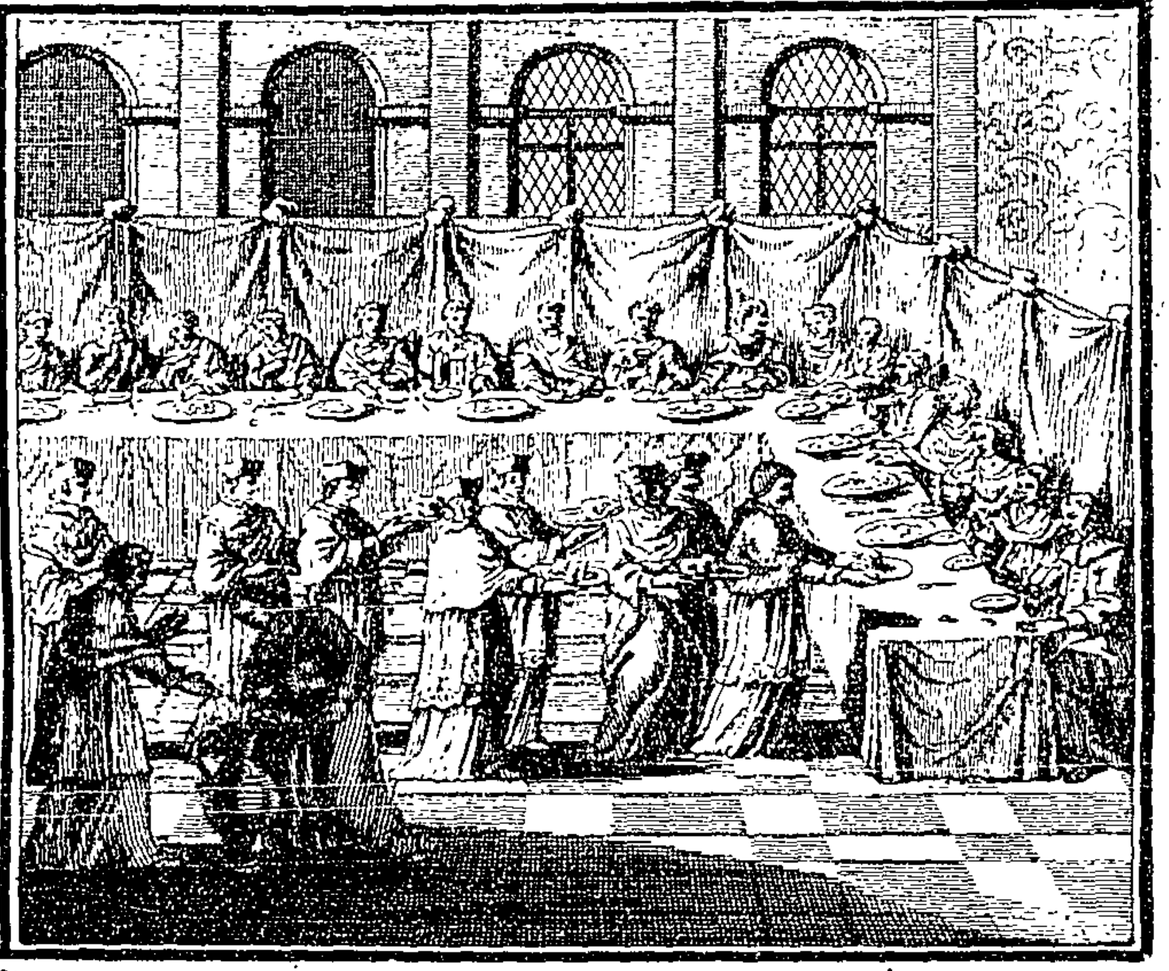
[b] Boniface the VIIIth, Founder of the Jubilee, preſcribed the Viſitation of the Baſilica's of St. Peter and St. Paul, in order to obtain the Indulgences annexed to this Solemnity. To theſe two Churches Clement the VI. added that of St. John de Lateran, and Urban VI. that of St. Mary Major. Afterwards a fifth was viſited, which is that of St. Laurence without the Walls; and as St. Sebaſtian's lies between St. Peter and St. Paul, and that of the holy Croſs of Jeruſalem, between St. John and St. Laurence, they are viſited in the Way to the others. Theſe are the ſeven Churches which Pilgrims look upon as their Duty to viſit. According to Nodot, in his Memoirs de la Cour de Rome a Man muſt walk nine long Miles to accompliſh this Act of Devotion, nay twelve, including the three Fountains and the Annonciada, to which the greateſt Zealots always pay their Reſpects.

favours



The Pilgrims go in Procession to Visit the Seven CHURCHES.

Les Pelerins vont en Procession Visiter les Sept EGLISES.



The Pilgrims Mount the SCALA SANTA upon their knees.

Les Pelerins montent à genoux LA SCALA SANTA.

The PRELATES and BARONS dress'd in Penetential Weeds wait upon the PILGRIMS and Wash their feet.

Les PRELATS, et BARONS Romains. Vetus en Penitens. lavent les pieds des Pelerins et les Servent.

The POPE Says grace for the PILGRIMS & with y CARDINALS and other PRELATES Serves them at table.

Le PAPE benit les Tables des Pelerins, et leur sert a Manger avec les CARDINAUX, et autres PRELATS.

The POPE gives the PILGRIMS Beads Medals and AGNUS DEIS and they Kiss his feet.

Le PAPE distribue aux Pelerins des Chapelets Medailles et AGNUS DEI, ceux ci lui baisent les pieds.

The POPE at the close of the JUBILEE places the first Stone in order to Shut up the H. GATE.

A La fin du Jubilé la PAPE pose la premiere pierre pour fermer la PORTE SAINTE.

favours the pious Chriſtian's Intention, and puts him into Poſſeſſion of all the Benefits and Bleſſings annexed to the Indulgence.

ANOTHER Piece of Devotion, which is look'd upon as meritorious, is the aſcending the Steps of the Scala Sancta; for ſo the eight and twenty Stairs are called, by which it is reported that CHRIST went up either to Pilate's or Caiphas's Houſe; nay, 'tis affirmed, that a little braſs Grate there covers a Drop of our Saviour's Blood; and moreover, that the Preſervation of this holy Ladder is owing to St. Helen, who was Mother to Conſtantine the Great. The Pilgrim, having reach'd the Top of the ſacred Ladder, muſt repeat a ſhort Prayer before he enters into the Holy of Holies. As for Women, they never enter into it; but obtain, however, the Indulgence, by looking at that Chapel through an iron Grate. All theſe Acts of Devotion obtain for Pilgrims an abſolute Pardon of all their Sins, and the Penitentiaries put the Seal to ſuch Pardon, by touching them with their Rods. The Roman Prelates and Barons, dreſs'd like Penitents, waſh their Feet; the holy Father and the Cardinals laying aſide their Robes of State, wait on them at Table. The Pope preſents them with Chaplets, ſacred Medals, and Agnus's, and permits them to kiſs his Feet.

THE Jubilee concludes with ſhutting up the ſacred Gates, which is done on Chriſtmas-Eve, the Year after they were firſt opened. The Pope, his Cardinals, the Clergy, and the Perſons of the higheſt Diſtinction in the Court of Rome, go to St. Peter's in their Robes of State. Veſpers are ſaid; after which the Clergy, having lighted Tapers in their Hands, offer their Obeiſance to the holy Face, which is known by the Name of Veronica. Then his Holineſs ſings an Anthem, which begins with theſe Words, Cum jucunditate exhibitis, Ye ſhall go out with Joy. As ſoon as 'tis begun, every one makes all the haſte he can to get through the holy Gate. The holy Father, when every Body has gone through it, goes up to it, and turning towards it, ſays, Adjutorium, &c. Our Help, &c. together with ſome few Prayers, wherewith he bleſſes the Stones and Mortar intended to ſhut the Gate which the Jubilee has opened. The Pope himſelf lays the firſt Stone, under which ſeveral Medals are conceal'd, which ſerve to tranſmit the Memory of this pious Ceremony to lateſt Poſterity.

THE holy Father having laid the Stone, waſhes his Hands, and returns to his Throne; then [a] Salvum fac populum, &c. is ſung. In the mean Time the Maſons make an End of walling up the Gate, in the Midſt whereof they ſet a copper Croſs, whilſt his Holineſs repeats ſome particular Prayers, which he continues till the Breach is perfectly repaired. The Benediction given by the Vicar of Jeſus Chriſt from the Pew which has taken its Name from thence, to the Faithful, aſſembled together to receive it, concludes this Piece of Devotion, which might be look'd upon as the moſt difficult, if ſuch a Thing could be, to thoſe who make the Joys of Heaven depend on theſe external Fatigues. The Cardinals and Clergy throw off their Robes of State, wait on the Pope back to his Apartment, and his Holineſs entertains them with an elegant Supper, which ſerves to refreſh them when the Fatigues of the Day are over.

Of INDULGENCES.

INDULGENCES are the ſureſt Touchſtones which his Holineſs makes uſe of to try the Faith of true Believers. A vaſt Number of Devotees imagine, that they infallibly ſecure the Attainment of Paradiſe. The Origin of theſe Means, this ſalutary Inſtitution, which has ſince degenerated into an Abuſe, ſeems particularly hinted at in a [a] Paſſage of St. Cyprian; but be that as it will, the Releaſe from Torments was not known till a long Time after by the Name of Indulgence. It was common enough, indeed, in the ſeventh and eighth Centuries. Pope Sergius, in the Year 884. gave three forty Days Indulgences at once to ſuch as [b] ſhould viſit the Church of St. Martin on the Hills, on the Feſtival peculiarly devoted to the Service of that Saint.

[a] Lord, ſave thy People.

If the Term Indulgence be defin'd, [c] we mean a Remiſſion from temporal Pains, which are due to actual Sins. It will be comprehended with Eaſe, that Acceſs to Heaven is not therefore the freer to ſuch Devotees as have obtained it, unleſs by Acts of Virtue they concur to make it effectual; and yet every one is conſcious of the exceſſive Power aſcrib'd to Indulgences, and of the vaſt Services they have done to Avarice, miſguided Zeal, and Ambition. No one, however, ought to imagine, that our Intent is to overthrow the real Advantages of them by this Expreſſion; for we are no Strangers to the Miracles wrought by St. Bernard, who, whilſt he was preaching up the Indulgences of Pope Eugenius III. [d] inflamed the Hearts of the Believers of his Age at once with a Spirit of War and Contrition, and ſhewed them the Attonement of their Crimes, and the Remiſſion of their Torments, annexed to thoſe Croſſes and Swords, wherewith he perſuaded them to arm themſelves againſt the Infidels: We are very ſenſible, likewiſe, that St. Bridget declares in her Revelations, the Viſion ſhe had of our Lord Jesus Christ, who inform'd her, "That the moſt infallible Way to attone for all her Sins, "was to procure Indulgences; that with reſpect to himſelf, whenever he was inclin'd "to treat any Soul with Tenderneſs and Affection, he would adviſe it to reſide con-"ſtantly at Rome, there being no Place in the World where ſo many Indulgences could "be procur'd." To this we might add, that there is no City more commodious than this for Devotees, who would turn their Piety towards this Object: Its Baſilicas have Indulgences for every Day in the Year; and on Feſtivals they are redoubled.

M. Thiers is very copious on the Abuſes of Indulgences: We ſhall here give the Reader an Abſtract of what he has ſaid upon this Topic, in his [e] Treatiſe On the moſt neceſſary of all Devotions. There is no Occaſion, after what he has offer'd, to mention ſuch Indulgences as are acknowledg'd to be falſe and ſpurious; nor ſuch as exceed the Power of the Perſons who grant them; nor ſuch as are granted without any Juſtice or Reaſon; nor ſuch as are too frequent, too numerous or exceſſive; nor ſuch as are not [a] Pœnitenti, operanti, roganti poteſt clementer ignoſcere; poteſt acceptum ferre quicquid pro talibus & petierint Martyres, & fecerint ſacerdotes. Indulgences were originally no more than the ſoftening of Pains, impoſed upon Sinners condemn'd to Penance, which in the primitive Ages of Chriſtianity was very ſevere. The Church had Regard to the Infirmities of Penitents, who could not undergo the Rigour of them; but they were at the ſame Time to diſcover a real Contrition, and with a perfect Sincerity endeavour to purify themſelves from their Crimes, according to their Strength. A Relaxation from eccleſiaſtical Pains gradually introduced into Devotion certain Practices, ſeemingly difficult, but yet much eaſier than a ſpiritual Worſhip. Nothing gave a greater Scope to the Abuſe of Indulgences, than the Commutation of Pains into pecuniary Fines, which were vaſtly advantageous to the Prieſts, and ſhewed them the Way of ſelling the Remiſſion of Sins.

[b] Caſal. Ibid.

[c] Tolet. apud Caſal. de Ritib. &c.

[d] "St. Bernard uſed his utmoſt Endeavours effectually to move the Hearts (of Chriſtians) by the Conſideration of "the Glory of their Anceſtors, ... of their Salvation, which they might ſecure to themſelves by this kind of "Martyrdom ..... but above all, of the Honour of Chriſt, whom he diſplayed marching at the Head of the Cru-"ſade-Warriors..... As ſoon as he had concluded, the King, who had liſten'd to him with all the Tokens of a "tender and ſevere Devotion, aroſe from his Throne, and went and threw himſelf at his Feet, humbly begging "him to oblige him with the Croſs..... He went up into the Desk with St. Bernard, and exhorted the Aſſembly "himſelf to follow the Example of their King. .... Immediately all who were preſent cried out the Croſs, the Croſs. "St. Bernard threw a vaſt Number of them from the Desk, which were laid by him in large Bundles; and, to gra-"tify the Eagerneſs of ſuch as had been able to get at none, he cut his Robe in Pieces, and made more Croſſes of "it upon the Spot. .... Men were ſo throughly perſuaded, that the Succeſs of the War depended on him, that it "was reſolved, ... that not only he ſhould go to it, but ſhould have the general Command of the whole Army, "which could not fail being always victorious under a General, who was thought to have the Omnipotence of God "in his Hands, by the Gift of Miracles." Maimbourg's Hiſtory of the Cruſades, Lib. III.

[e] Chap. xx.

iſſued

iſſued out from the holy See, or from ſuch Biſhops as are empowered to grant them; nor ſuch as are propoſed to the true Believers, after they have been recalled, or after the Time is expired; nor ſuch as are granted on falſe Allegations, on falſe Facts, on private Viſions which have no Sanction, or on Bulls which contain Things repugnant to the Doctrine of the Church; as for Inſtance, That certain Perſons ſhall be abſolved from all Manner of Pains and Crimes (a Bleſſing which no Pope whatever can beſtow) if they be of ſuch a religious Order, ſuch a Society; if they wear ſuch a Dreſs, or ſuch an Inſtrument of Devotion: All which Indulgences are void, as they are vicious. Such as exceed a Term limited are the ſame; and ſuch likewiſe as are given for an hundred, two hundred, a thouſand Years, &c. or ſuch as Cardinals ſhould grant for above an hundred Days, or Biſhops for above forty. In ſhort, the Cauſe, or more properly ſpeaking, the Works which ought to be done for obtaining Indulgences, muſt have ſome Proportion with them; which is not to be found in a few minute, inſignificant Practices of Devotion, ſuch as ſaying a Pater-Noſter, or an Ave-Maria, or ſome certain Prayer at a ſtated Hour, or carrying about one a Medal, an Image, a Chaplet, a Croſs, a Set of Beads, kiſſing theſe Objects of Devotion, looking on them with an Eye of Sorrow and Contrition, by fetching accidentally a few Sighs, which one may regularly produce at ſuch Hours as are uſual for the Viſitation of ſuch ſacred Things; upon which, however, Devotees perſuade themſelves, that they are upon an Equality with the moſt illuſtrious Saints of the Church. They flatter themſelves, that the viſiting a Church, a Chapel, an Altar, and aſſiſting at a Maſs, give them the ſame Right and Title.

II. M. THIERS, in the ſame Place, gives us a conciſe Account of the Methods made uſe of for procuring the Indulgences which were granted for the Deliverance of Souls out of Purgatory, and his Words are theſe: "They are, ſays he, become ſo common, "and have been ſo exceſſive for about a Century and an half, that it is not always ſafe "to put too much Truſt and Confidence in them, unleſs they have been well ex-"amined and purged beforehand. The Application of them, is by ſaying, or cauſing "to be ſaid, certain Maſſes, by aſſiſting at certain Offices, and certain Proceſſions, by "confeſſing and receiving the Euchariſt, by Alms-giving, or wearing particular Habits, "Croſſes, Chaplets, Crowns, Beads, &c.

III. ROMAN Catholic Devotees have a peculiar Veneration for privileged Altars, [a] a Thing never talk'd of in the Church, till after the Cloſe of the Council of Trent. The Decree whereby they are eſtabliſhed is very mortifying to abundance of Souls. It runs to this or the like Effect: Whenever a Maſs for the Dead ſhall be ſaid at ſuch an Altar, for the Soul of a Perſon deceaſed, an Indulgence ſhall be procured, by Virtue whereof ſuch Soul ſhall be freed from Purgatory, or abſolv'd from the Pains of it. M. Thiers very juſtly obſerves, that the Pope, for the Eaſe and Conſolation of all Souls, ought to have made every Altar a privileged one. Is it reaſonable, for Inſtance, that the Soul of one whoſe Virtue was not any Ways conſpicuous in this World, ſhould be ſooner comforted than that of a perfect Devotee, becauſe the Body of Chriſt has been ſacrificed for the former at a privileged Altar?

IV. WE ſhall paſs over likewiſe the Abuſes which were formerly committed in the Diſtribution of Indulgences; ſuch was [b] the infamous Traffic of them, publickly carried on throughout Europe, ſome hundred Years ſince: Happy Times for Sinners! when [a] Thiers, Ibid.

[b] It is unneceſſary to look for Proofs of this beyond the Pontificate of Leo X. For this we ſhall take Father Maimbourg for our Voucher. This is what he ſays in his Hiſtory of Lutheraniſm. "Leo X. advanced to the ſupreme "Dignity of the Church when he was but ſeven and thirty Years of Age, gave ſhining Inſtances of all the Per-"fections of a great Prince, without poſſeſſing all thoſe of a great Pope: Having undertaken to complete the mag-"nificent Edifice of the Baſilica of St. Peter, ---- according to the Example of Pope Julius, he had Recourſe to "Indulgences, which he every where publiſhed; and all ſuch as ſhould contribute what was demanded of them "towards when their Crimes were rated, and the Remiſſion of them ſet up at Auction. [a] The Apoſtolic Chancery taxed Sins at a pretty moderate Rate. A Malefactor, for about ninety Livres, and ſome few Ducats, might buy off ſuch Crimes, as the People on this ſide the Alps would be burnt for. The Nuns might purſue their Amours, and refreſh themſelves with their Gallants after the Fatigue of Divine Worſhip, without running any other Riſque than a Fine of thirty ſix Livres and nine Ducats. But that Time is elapſed. The Kingdom of Heaven is now-a-days farmed out much cheaper, and the Proprietors do not make near the Money of it as they formerly [b] did.

THERE is nothing ſingular in the Form made uſe of at Rome in Relation to Indulgences.

CHAP. XIII.

Divers INSTRUMENTS of PIETY; and divers Devout SOCIETIES.

I. WE have already given the Reader a Deſcription of the Agnus Dei's, and the Manner of making them. We ſhall now treat of Beads, or Chaplets. The Hiſtorians of the Cruſade Wars, as they are commonly called, ſay, that Peter the Hermit firſt taught thoſe Soldiers to count their Prayers, and for that Purpoſe invented an Inſtrument called the [c] Chaplet, the Uſe whereof ſoon grew very common. S. Dominic,

" towards the Erection of St. Peter's, were permitted to eat Eggs and Cheeſe in Lent, and to make Choice of their " own Confeſſor. Indeed it muſt be owned, (and we do own it with ſome Exception after F. Maimbourg) that the " ſucceeding Popes have been much more regular in their Diſpenſation of thoſe ſpiritual Treaſures, and that ſome " Things were then done, which would not be now, and which made thoſe Indulgencies of Leo odious, particular- " ly in Germany —— There are Authors who affirm, that a Fund was in a Manner raiſed out of theſe Indulgen- " ces, and, in order to come at ready Money, the Sums ariſing from them were farmed out to the higheſt Bidders, " who thereupon, not only to reimburſe, but likewiſe to enrich themſelves by ſo ſhameful a Commerce, choſe ſuch " Preachers of Indulgences and Collectors as they thought moſt proper, they being well paid to induce the People, " in order to procure theſe Pardons, to contribute whatever theſe covetous and ſacrilegious Wretches inſiſted upon " for them. —— It is certain, that theſe Collectors, who were eſtabliſhed at the ſame Time that the Indulgences for " the Cruſades were firſt publiſhed under Urban II. from that Time ſlackened, being ſubdued by their Avarice ——" Indeed Meaſures were taken to put a Stop to ſo ſcandalous a Commerce; but, adds Father Maimbourg, " notwith- " ſtanding theſe Precautions, very great Abuſes crept into the Publication of theſe Indulgences of Leo ——Some of " theſe Preachers of Indulgences raiſed the Price and Value of them to ſuch an exorbitant Pitch, as to induce the " People to imagine, that they were ſecure of Salvation, and of delivering Souls out of Purgatory, as ſoon as they " had paid the Money demanded for the Letters, teſtifying they had procured the Indulgence. ——— The Clerks " of the Farmers, who had purchaſed the Profits of theſe Indulgences, were ſeen daily in the Taverns carouſing, " and ſpending Part of that Money in all Manner of Licentiouſneſs, which the Poor inſiſted was barbarouſly ex- " torted from them.

[a] Vide Treatiſe entitled, Tax of the Chancery, &c.

[b] And yet Indulgenees ſtill produce immenſe Sums both in the old and new World. In the latter, particularly, a vaſt Trade of Bulls is carried on, which the Pope ſends from Rome to the Indies; and it may with eaſe be believed, that the Apoſtolic Court does not diſtribute them gratis. That would not be reaſonable. There is not " one Child in any good Family, who, according to what Coreal ſays, Tom. I. of his Voyages to the Eaſt Indies, " p. 81. does not provide himſelf with ſome of them, at two Reals a Piece; tho' there are ſome much dearer. The " Spaniards oblige their People —— to purchaſe them." Is it Avarice, or their Care for the Salvation of the Poor Indians, that puts them upon this? If the Bull has the ſame Influence over the Hearts of the Indians, as a Paſtoral Inſtruction enforced by good Examples ought more naturally to have, let us over-look this ill Principle in the Spaniards.

[c] Prayers, nevertheleſs, were ſaid by Tale, or Computation, long before the Invention of the Chaplet, and F. Giry, the Author of The Lives of the Saints, gives ſome Inſtances of it. Another Writer (Ryckel, who has given us The Life of St. Gertrude) gives us an Account of a Chaplet by way of Roſary, which this Saint, who lived in the ſeventh Century, made uſe of at her Devotions. It is great Pity that ſeveral of the Beads are loſt, by being given to big bellied Women, to be kiſs'd and handled.

Founder

Founder of the Order which bears his Name, and of the Holy Office of the Inquiſition, greatly advanced the Credit of this Inſtrument of Devotion; by declaring, that the bleſſed Virgin had brought him one from Heaven after a miraculous Manner, compoſed of a certain Number of Beads, which he called the Roſary. The Public receive it with profound Veneration and Reſpect, and it is ſtill looked upon as one of the moſt valuable Exerciſes of Devotion by a great Number of Catholics. But to be ingenuous, with regard to the Chaplet, it is not to be queſtioned in the leaſt, but that it came from the Mahometans. Peter the Hermit borrowed it, without doubt, from them, in favour of thoſe Soldiers of the holy Wars who were not able to read, or make uſe of a Prayer-Book. The Motive was laudable, but to whom were the Mahometans beholden for this Cuſtom? Why, perhaps, to the Eaſt Indians, who make uſe of a kind of Chaplet alſo. It appears moreover, by the Medals which may be ſeen in the Diſſertation on the Religion of the antient Romans, by Du Choul, that they had the Uſe of the Chaplet too amongſt them. Nor was it leſs requiſite for the Pagans than for the Chriſtians and Mahometans; the Prayers of the firſt being at leaſt as copious, [b] and as difficult to retain as thoſe of the others. It is thought, that the ſame Peter the Hermit before-mentioned invented the Hours and Office of our Lady.

II. Four Inſtruments, or Helps to Devotion, have been the Occaſion of erecting four conſiderable Societies. That of the Roſary owes its Birth to the Roſary of St. Dominic. The Roſary is a large Chaplet, conſiſting of one hundred and fifty Beads, which make ſo many Aves. Every ten Beads, divided by one ſomething larger, make a Pater. The fifteen large Beads are the Symbols of fifteen Myſteries, [b] which are ſo many lively Images, as it were, wherein are to be diſcerned the Intentions of "the Eternal Father in "the temporal Birth of his Son, the Caſualties that befel him in his Infancy, and in the "private and unknown Part of his Life; in his painful Part, and in his glorious and im-"mortal Life." The common Chaplets contain only fifty Ave Maria's, and five Pater Noſters. Before the Perſon begins to repeat his Roſary, he muſt take it, and croſs himſelf. He muſt in the next Place repeat the Apoſtles Creed, to put himſelf into a proper Diſpoſition for Prayer; after which he muſt ſay a Pater and three Aves, on Account of the three Relations which the bleſſed Virgin bears to the three Perſons in the ſacred Trinity. After theſe Preliminaries, he paſſes on to the fifteen Pair of Beads, containing ten Courſes. The Chriſtian Devotee muſt obſerve to let himſelf into the Myſteries of each ten Courſes, by a Prayer, which he will find in ſuch Books as treat of the Method of Devotion with the Roſary. The fifteen Myſteries are divided into three Claſſes, the firſt includes the five Myſteries of Joy; the five next are thoſe of Sorrow, as turning upon our Saviour's Paſſion; and the five laſt thoſe of Glory, as being deſtined to his Reſurrection, Aſcenſion, &c. After the Roſary, the Brethren who have the Honour to bear the Name of it, muſt ſay the Litanies and Prayers for ſuch as are afflicted in Mind, Body, or Eſtate, &c. They ſhall lift up their Heart to the Virgin [c] who is the Queen of the Roſary, Empreſs of Heaven and Earth, High Treaſurer of the Spiritual Finances, and celeſtial Riches: And as the true Believers ought not only to pray for each other, but likewiſe for an Increaſe of the Worſhip whereof they make Profeſſion; thoſe of the Roſary muſt never omit this laſt Article, but uſe their utmoſt Endeavours to make Proſelytes to the Faith of St. Dominic.

III. This Saint, of whom the Legend-Writers relate Wonders, was born of a very illuſtrious Family in Spain, in the Year 1170. He was but a Child, [d] when the bleſſed Virgin firſt taught him the Devotion of the Roſary, which ſoon became the ſacred Object of this Saint's Devotion. A Miſſion, whereto he was appointed in Spain, in order to

[a] Agmine verborum Deum adeundum putant, Tertul. de Orat.
[b] Alanus redivivus.
[c] Vide The Practice of Confeſſion and Exerciſe of the Roſary, after the Pſalter of our Lady, printed at Liſle 1662.
[d] Alanus de vitæ. Giry Vies des Saints.

animate the People's Love and Affection towards our Lady, gave him Occaſion to ſet up the [a] Society of the Roſary, and ever afterwards he preached up the Eſtabliſhment of it in all Places thro' which he paſſed. We ſhall not inſiſt on the Miracles of his Miſſion againſt the Heretics of Languedoc, nor ſhall we ſpeak of the holy Perſecutions he made them ſuffer, believing he ought to join Temporal Arms to the Spiritual againſt thoſe who maintain, as they ſay, their Doctrine with ſuch Obſtinacy and Perverſeneſs as might ruffle the Temper of the moſt patient Devotee. The Saint, by the Pope's Authority, diſputed againſt Error, preached up the holy War againſt its Agents, had thoſe who refuſed to ſubmit to his Arguments, judged and condemned; but the Roſary alone, more effectual by far than the ſecular Arm, or the charitable Sermons of St. Dominic, [b] brought back above an hundred thouſand Souls into the Church's Boſom. Neither ſhall we mention the other Miracles wrought by this Inſtrument of Devotion, but we muſt honour the Saint for one Action, the Parallel whereof is not to be found even in the Life of our Bleſſed Saviour: Which is this, that he miraculouſly drowned a vaſt Number of Heretics in their Paſſage over the Garonne.

IV. THE Solemnity of the Roſary is celebrated on the firſt Sunday in October. This Feſtival is owing to the Piety of Pope Gregory XIII. Several [c] Popes have confirmed the Way of praying with the Roſary by their Bulls, and granted to ſuch as ſhall devoutly ſay it over, all ſuitable Indulgences, as well plenary as particular.

V. As to the Society, the Legendaries of the Order of St. Dominic, and ſeveral others, aſſure us, that it owes its Origin to the ſacred Founder of the Roſary. He appointed it, as we are informed, by an Order from the bleſſed Virgin, when he was labouring to reduce the Albigeſe, and extirpate Heretics. After the Saint's Deceaſe, the Devotion of the Roſary was totally neglected; but Alanus de Rupe [d] revived it with great Improvements, and for fifteen Years together uſed his utmoſt Endeavours to procure Devotees to it. The Society is divided into two Branches, one of the common, and the other of the perpetual Roſary: The former are obliged every Week to ſay the fifteen Diviſions of ten Beads each, to confeſs, and receive the Sacrament every firſt Sunday in the Month; and moreover, to appear at all the Proceſſions of the Society. The faithful of the latter are under very ſtrong Obligations. The firſt Duty incumbent on them is, to repeat the Roſary without Intermiſſion; that is, there is always ſome one of them, who is actually ſaluting the bleſſed Virgin in the Name of the whole Society.

VI. THE Scapulary forms another, the Devotion whereof is, in every Reſpect, as exact as that we have already deſcribed. After divers Prayers, and pious Sollicitations, the bleſſed Virgin granted the Scapulary to Simon Stoch, Commander of the Carmelites, in the ſame Century, and much about the ſame Time, that ſhe gave the Roſary to St. Dominic: She aſſured the Devotee of her Protection, promiſed to be propitious to all ſuch as ſhould join in the Devotion of the Scapulary, and to look upon them as her Children; and engaged to ſave all thoſe, who at the Hour of Death ſhould be found provided with ſo precious a Badge.

VII. THE Scapulary of the Carmelites is a ſmall Wooden Garment, of a dark brown, or tawny Colour, which goes over the Stomach, Back, and Shoulders. It conſiſts likewiſe of two ſmall Pieces of Cloth three or four Inches Square, tied together with two Ribbands; and this is what the Brethren of the Devotion of the Scapulary wear. We ſhall paſs over the

[a] He ſet it up in Favour of ſome Mahometan Pirates, who carried him away one Day as he was preaching by the Sea Shore. After having been ill treated by theſe Barbarians a long Time, he had the good Fortune to convert and baptiſe them; upon which he made them Devotees of the ſacred Roſary.

[b] Giry's Life of St. Dominic. The bleſſed Virgin adviſed him to preach the Roſary to Heretics, and to explain the fifteen Myſteries of it to them, &c. Several Writers date the Inſtitution of the Roſary from this Apparition of the bleſſed Virgin.

[c] Leo X. Pius V. Gregory XIII. Sixtus V.

[d] In 1460. or thereabouts.

Miracles

Miracles wrought by this excellent Preſervative againſt the Caſualties to which Mankind are daily expoſed, and refer to the Legendaries, who have omitted nothing on this Topic. The Devotees of the Scapulary celebrate the ſixteenth of July as their Feſtival, which Day is likewiſe devoted to the Service of our Lady of Mount Carmel. The Bulls of the Popes have from Time to Time ſecured numberleſs Indulgences to them; but what will give the Scapulary the Preference before all other Practices of Devotion, is the Sabbatin Bull of John XXII; wherein he declares, that the bleſſed Virgin gave him an abſolute Promiſe, as he was one Day at Prayers, that ſhe would deliver her Children the Carmelites, and the Brethren of the Scapulary, out of Hell, on the Sunday next after their Deceaſe, upon three Conditions. 1. That they wore the Scapulary to the Day of their Death. 2. That they preſerved their Virginity, or at leaſt their Continency, and obſerved conjugal Chaſtity; all which the Carmelite muſt fulfil. It is enough for one of the Society to keep to that relating to Marriage. 3. That they repeated their Canonical Hours, or if they could not read, to faſt on the Days appointed by the Church, and abſtain from eating Fleſh every Wedneſday and Saturday throughout the Year, Chriſtmas-Day only excepted, in caſe it ſhould fall out on either of thoſe Days. Theſe Practices, 'tis true, are difficult. Continence, however, is the principal Point; the Want whereof might abſolutely deſtroy the Virtue of the Scapulary. What Difficulties muſt the poor Carmelite ſtruggle through, who by the Rules of his Order muſt wear it, on Condition at the ſame Time of ſubmitting to the gauling Yoke of Chaſtity! Can the Sufferings of a Brother, who has made a Vow to put on this ſpiritual Armour, to ſave his Soul from Hell, be deſcribed in their proper Colours? How many Temptations is he obliged to withſtand!

VIII. As to the Devotees of the Society of the Scapulary, ſeveral Popes have abſolved them of one third Part of their Sins. The Principal, or Grand Society of our Lady of Mount Carmel at Rome, dreſs in a very remarkable Manner. A tawny-colour'd Sack is fixed to a Cowl which covers their Faces, and falls down in a Point as low as the Girdle. There are two Holes made in it over-againſt the Eyes. The Sack is tied with a Leathern Girdle, and the Shoulders of theſe Devotees in Maſquerade are covered with a [a] Camail, or very ſhort Cloak made of red Serge.

IX. St. Francis's Girdle forms the third Society. Such as are acquainted with the extraordinary Merit of this Saint, and [b] all the perfect Relations he bears to our bleſſed Saviour, will readily imagine, that the Chriſtian who unites himſelf to God by Virtue of this Girdle is the happieſt Man alive. [c] St. Francis is looked upon as a Pattern of Patience, Chaſtity, and Humility. The Stigmata, or Marks, which he received from a Seraphin, in his Feet, Hands and Side, in Commemoration of Chriſt's Wounds, prove the firſt of theſe Virtues. His extreme Poverty, and the Manner in which he treated his miſerable [d] Brother Aſs, are Circumſtances likewiſe very well known. As to his Chaſtity, every Body has heard how he roll'd his Body in the Snow upon Thorns, and the [e] Fire, to preſerve its Purity. In ſhort, both his Wiſdom and Humility were doubtleſs very conſpicuous when he made the Birds and Fiſhes liſten to what he preached; [f] and when, in order to ſubdue a ſlight Motion of Impatience and Pride, he obliged Friar Bernard de Quintavalle to ſet his Foot on his Throat. St. Francis's Girdle is that thick Cord which is made uſe of for that Purpoſe by ſuch Friars as live un-

[a] Mozzetta.

[b] Vide Lib. conformitatum S. Franciſci de Barthelmi of Piſa, or its Abridgment, the Alchoran of the Cordeliers.

[c] He lived towards the End of the twelfth Century.

[d] St. Francis called his Body thus. Vide Giry's Lives of the Saints, Tom. II. Edit. 1715.

[e] A very beautiful Woman endeavoured to gain St. Francis's Love, but he threw himſelf naked upon burning Coals. This is my Bed, ſaid he to her. The Lady, however, was not in the Humour to accept the Man of God's Courteſy, Lib. Conform. Fol. 113.

[f] He called an enraged Wolf by the Name of Brother, and made him promiſe never to bite any Perſon whomſoever. The Wolf too happy to get off at ſo cheap a Rate, ſolemnly promiſed to obey him; and as a Teſtimony of his Faith gave him his Paw, Ibid.

der

der the Rule of that Saint, and who are divided, notwithstanding they are all Children of St. Francis, into different Orders. This Cord, after it is tied round the Friar's Middle, falls down almost to his Feet, and is used by him as a Lash to discipline himself withal; for which Purpose it has several large Knots, made at some Distance from each other, particularly towards the End, which an arch Poet in one of his Epigrams calls [a] Stings. This Girdle of St. Francis has often cured the Sick, forwarded Labours, fortified the Health, procured Children, and wrought an infinite Number of other edifying Miracles.

X. Of all the Societies who own St. Francis as their Founder, that of the Stigmata at Rome is the Chief. A Surgeon gave Rise to it at the Conclusion of the sixteenth Century, and soon drew after him an infinite Number of Devotees. After the Statutes of the Society were drawn up, it was called the Chief, or Principal Society. The Author of the History of the Religious Orders, has given an exact Account of every Thing relating to this Society, in the fiftieth Chapter of the fifth Part of his Work, to which we refer our Reader; only observing here, that the Brethren of the Society, out of Humility, dress in an Ash-colour'd Sack, which they tie with a thick Cord, adorned with a large wooden Chaplet; that they [b] wear a Scutcheon, whereon are the Arms of the Order of St. Francis; that in Procession they walk barefoot, with wooden Sandals, and carry a wooden Cross; and lastly, that their Faces are covered with their [c] Cowls.

XI. St. Austin's Girdle likewise unites a large Number of Devotees under the Name of an Arch-Society. It is composed of Leather. The Austin Friars assure us, in a Dissertation written on the Subject of this Society, that the blessed Virgin, who is Empress of Men and Angels, girded it about her Loins. The Law of Nature, the written Law, and the Law of Grace, have all three reaped the Advantages arising from the Use of this Girdle. In all probability our first Parents, who lived under the first Law, being dressed in Skins, must have worn a Leathern Girdle. (So that they were of the Order of St. Austin.) As to its being used under the second Law, it is not allowable to call it in question: The Prophet Elias also wore it about his Loins; it being written, that he was girded with a Girdle of Leather. St. John Baptist wore it under the last, as may very easily be demonstrated.

XII. St. Monica's Girdle ought not to be omitted. It has its peculiar Virtues, as well as that of St. Francis of Paula. This girdle has five Knots in it, which are altogether upon the same Footing with those of St. Francis. We shall leave to the Children of St. Francis of Paula, the Glory of determining all the Benefits of their Girdle. It is enough for us to have mentioned it here, for the Edification of such Devotees as shall be inclined to put themselves under its Protection. [d] The Society of the Holy Sacrament at Rome acknowledges St. Francis of Paula as one of its Patrons, and wears the Girdle of the Friars Minims over their Sacks, which are of a Purple Colour.

[a] Vide Epigram 61. beginning A deux genoux, &c. in Russeau's Works, Tom. II. Ed. of 1716. It is ingenious, but the Author talks to no Purpose. It is with this Sting, however, that the Brethren of St. Francis's Order withstand the Temptations of the Flesh, and drive the Devil out of Hell. It were to be wished, likewise, that those religious Orders which are so happy as to enjoy any extraordinary Means, capable of inspiring Christians with Devotion, would exercise a little more Charity and Forbearance one towards another. It is but too common to see a Dominican ridiculing the Girdle of St. Francis, or the Scapulary of the Carmelites, in order to cry up the Rosary. Can we imagine, that the Scapulary and the Girdle are not of equal Virtue and Dignity with the Rosary? On the contrary, does St. Austin's Girdle make fewer elect to the Lord than the Carmelite's Scapulary? These are doubtless very uncharitable Ideas.

[b] These are two Arms crossed one over the other; the one naked, the other in a Sleeve, the Hands bored with Nails; and these are placed upon a wooden Cross. History of Religious and Military Orders, Chap. 50. part. 5. 4° Edit. of 1718.

[c] Towards the Close of the sixteenth Century, Sixtus V. by a Bull granted vast Privileges to the Societies of the Girdle, and very considerably augmented the Indulgences of such as engaged to wear it. The Bull directs, that the Girdle intended for any of the faithful Devotees shall receive the Benediction of a Priest of the Order.

[d] History of Religious and Military Orders, Part. 6. Ch. 24.

XIII. From

XIII. FROM Girdles let us proceed to Clothes. [a] Formerly it was a received Notion, that a Man could not die a good Chriſtian, if, when at the Point of Death, he was not wrapped up in St. Francis's Robe, or expired in his Cowl. Devotion is ſince grown cold; a Man may die a Chriſtian now-a-days without being clothed like a Monk; and be ſaved in a Lay-Habit. Let us ſay one Thing, however, that ſeems to juſtify our preſent Decay of Piety. [b] Neither Scripture nor Tradition prove that the Habit of a Monk has the Privilege of ſetting the Chriſtian into the Way of Salvation. This is a ſpecious Reaſon; and ſeveral Chriſtians unfortunately build on this Principle. They with Aſſurance ſay, it is no Crime to believe, that any particular Habit is vain and worthleſs, without true Piety, and wherever that is, the Habit has leſs Virtue by far than a Bottle full of good Liquor. "Can a Monk (ſays one that has been charged with Impiety) imagine, that there exhale from his Body Atoms of Piety, which extend themſelves all "over his Robe; and then penetrate directly to the Heart of the dying Perſon, who "is covered with that ſacred Veſtment?" Such are the Errors of our Age! But notwithſtanding all theſe fallacious Arguments, a Friar, who is fully convinced of the Divinity of his Order, by Cuſtom or Strengh of Imagination, may with a very good Conſcience ſet his Accoutrements next to Baptiſm and the Paſſion of our Lord. Libertiniſm and Hereſy oppoſe it to no Manner of Purpoſe; theſe three Things will always be of equal Dignity.

CHAP. XIV.

A CONTINUATION of the ſame SUBJECT: [c] Their SOCIETIES.

I. WE have already mentioned ſome of theſe Societies, which their Founders ſet up againſt the Fleſh and the Devil. It is well known, that their Intention is to join under one and the ſame Livery, and to liſt under one and the ſame Banner, in order to combat and oppoſe the Enemy of Mankind. They attack him with a Reſolution, which, to all outward Appearance, promiſes much; but it is with theſe Societies as with Troops which are hired of a Foreign Prince. They fight againſt an Enemy, who is not properly their own. Every Society has its peculiar Rules, Cuſtoms, and Religious Ceremonies; its Arts of War, Stratagems, and Diſcipline. The moſt material Point, is conſtantly to wear the Marks of the Society into which any one enters. The new Brother receives from the General his Letters of Adoption; after which, he has a Share in the Scourgings, Penances, and every other good Work of the Society.

II. WE ſhall here produce divers Particulars relating to the Societies of Chriſtendom, but yet without expatiating beyond due Bounds. A full Account, indeed, would make a large Volume. Our own Age has produced ſeveral new Societies, whereof we ſhall ſpeak: The preceding ones had not the Air of Novelty, which is equally entertaining to the Devotee and the worldly Man. There was an abſolute Neceſſity for quickening the Taſte of that celeſtial Manna, which a Succeſſion of many Ages had rendered flat and inſipid. There is no Difficulty in praying to God at home with one's Family, or to join with the reſt of the true Believers in public Devotion; but it is much more glorious for Chriſtians to liſt under ſome Standard, and march with Colours flying towards Heaven. The Riſe of abundance of theſe Societies is owing, in all probability, to this Notion.

[a] Eſpecially in the 14. and 15. Centuries.
[b] Thiers upon the moſt neceſſary of all Devotions, ch. xxiii.
[c] The Greeks and Romans afford us Inſtances of the ſame kind of Aſſociations in Honour of their Deities, and ſome are to be found amongſt the Eaſt-Indians.

III. ITALY, Spain, and Portugal, are the Countries of Europe where theſe Societies abound; many of which aſſume the Title of Arch-Societies, as we have lately obſerved; that is, the Mothers, or Superiors, as it were, of the reſt. [a] They communicate to them their Laws and Statutes, their Mode of Dreſs, and their Privileges. Rome alone contains a conſiderable Number of theſe pious Societies within her Boſom; each of which has its Church or Oratory. Employments, Arts, Trades, are all followed in Society in this Capital of Religion, and every one puts himſelf under the Protection of the Saint whoſe Standard the Members have ſet up. They march in Proceſſion, according to a certain Author, [b] under thirty ſeven different Banners: The Catalogue whereof, as he has given it us, is as follows.

" The Pope's Officers march under the Banner of St. Martha.
" The Cardinals Mace-Bearers under that of St. Catharine.
" [c] The Train-Bearers under that of our Lady of Purity.
" The Notaries under that of St. Benet.
" The Proctors under that of St. Euſtace.
" The Clerks and other Writers under that of St. Thomas.
" The Painters under that of St. Luke.
" The [d] Gravers, Sculptors, and Stone-Cutters, under that of St. Leonard.
" The Goldſmiths under that of St. [e] St. Eloi.
" The Smiths and Farriers under that of St. George.
" The Curriers under that of St. Laurence.
" The Coachmen under that of St. Lucia.
" The Waggoners, &c. and Meſſengers, under that of St. Anaſtaſius.
" The Carmen under that of St. Vincent.
" The Grooms under that of St. Anne.
" The Cow-Keepers and Tanners under that of St. Bartholomew [f].
" The Butchers under that of St. Mary of the Oak.
" The Inn-keepers under that of St. Euſtace.
" The Vintners under that of St. Sylveſter.
" The Wholeſale-Merchants and Woollen-Drapers under that of St. Laurence.
" The Mercers [g] under that of St. Sebaſtian.
" The Druggiſts and Apothecaries under that of St. Laurence of [h] Miranda.
" [i] The Phyſicians (Barbers, and Bagnio-Keepers) under that of St. Coſmus and St. Damian.
" The Bombardeers under that of St. Mary Tranſpontina.

[a] Hiſtory of Religious and Military Orders, part 6. chap. xxxiv.
[b] Tableau de la Cour de Rome.
[c] Eſtabliſhed in 1527.
[d] This Society was erected in 1406. under the Protection of the nine Martyrs, who were Sculptors by Profeſſion, &c. Clement VIII. approved their Statutes in 1596.
[e] St. Eloi, Biſhop of Noion, formerly Goldſmith to King Clothaire II. famous in the Writings both of antient and modern Legendaries. His Application to God and Religion, in the midſt of the Pomp and Splendor of the Court with which he was ſurrounded, did not prevent him from following his Trade; but he conſecrated his pious Labours to Relics. He made the Shrines of various Saints. Several Societies in France and the Low-Countries have the Honour of his Patronage and Protection.
[f] The Society of Tanners is under the Protection of this holy Apoſtle, becauſe he was flay'd alive.
[g] To this Society belong the Glovers, Perfumers, Skinners, Workers in Silk, Cap-Makers, &c.
[h] This Church, which takes its Name from the Saint, was granted to the Society of Apothecaries in 1430. by Pope Martin V. On St. Laurence's-Day the Society diſtribute fifty Roman Crowns to a particular Number of poor Girls who are marriageable.
[i] Their Rules were approved by Sixtus IV. in 1494. St. Coſmus and St. Damian were Brothers and Phyſicians, and lived towards the End of the third Century.

" THE

" The Furriers under that of [a] St. Pantaleon.
" The Sadlers under that of St. Saviour.
" The Shoemakers under that of St. [b] Criſpin.
" The Coblers under that of [c] St. Goodman.
" The Joyners and Carpenters under that of St. Joſeph.
" The Bricklayers under that of St. Gregory.
" The [d] Bakers under that of our Lady of Loretto.
" The Coopers under that of St. Mary of the [e] Chapel.
" The Wool-Combers under that of St. Blaiſe.

" THE Workers in mixed Manufactures under that of St. Mary of the Gardens, and " under the Banner of St. Saviour, of the Crucifix, of the Trinity, of St. Angelo, " St. Bernard, St. Jerome, St. Lucia, St. Roe, St. Julian, St. Thomas, St. Mary of Tears, " and of the forty crowned Martyrs.

" TWENTY Societies, continues he, march under the Banner of the Holy Sacrament; " one under that of the Reſurrection, one under that [f] of Mercy, one under that of " Piety, one under that of the Suffrage, one under that of the Annunciation, one under " that of the Roſary, one under that of the Scapulary, one under that of the Saviour, " one under that of the Name of God, one under that of Death.

To theſe Societies muſt be added that of the Hatters, who have St. James Major for their Patron; that of the Cooks, erected by Pope Paul III. at the Requeſt of his Cook, John of the Vallies; that of the Butlers of the Cardinals; that of the [g] Bookſellers, whoſe Patrons are St. Thomas Aquinas, and [h] the bleſſed John de Dieu; that of the [i] Fiſhmongers, whoſe Protector is St. Andrew, on Account of his being a Fiſherman; that of the Regraters; that of the Braziers; that of the Upholders, who follow their Trade under the Protection of St. [k] Venant; that of the Dyers; [l] that of the Weavers,

[a] St. Pantaleon was a Phyſician in the Reign of Dioclefian.

[b] St. Criſpin and St. Criſpinian, who were both noble Romans under Dioclefian. made themſelves Shoemakers, according to the Legend, in order to bring over the Romans, and make Converts of them. Tho' theſe two Saints lie buried at Soiſſons; yet a Church at Rome boaſts that they are in her Poſſeſſion likewiſe. Now, how can this be reconciled? It would be proper in order thereunto to open the Shrines, and ſee whether they both do not contain different Parts of thoſe two Bodies. The ſafeſt Way, in reality, is to believe ſo; for theſe Sanctuaries are not eaſily meddled with. This Way of Reaſoning we owe to F. Giry, Author of The Lives of the Saints, printed at Paris in 1715.

[c] The Taylors, and not the Coblers. Their Patron is St. Huomobuono, who is canoniſed by the Church. His Feſtival in celebrated on the thirteenth of November.

[d] Eſtabliſhed in 1500. under the Pontificate of Alexander VI.

[e] St. Mary in Capella, a Corruption of Copella, a kind of Barrel.

[f] A Society of black Penitents inſtituted in 1488. They aſſiſt Criminals at their Execution, bury them, and take care that the Service for the Dead be ſaid for them.

[g] Erected in 1600. by a Jacobin, Maſter of the ſacred Palace, and in that Quality Cenſor of Books.

[h] John de Dieu flouriſhed in the Beginning of the ſixteenth Century. He was a Shepherd till he was two and twenty, and then a Soldier. As a Puniſhment for not having ſaid the Roſary and his other Devotions, he fell off his Horſe, and hurt himſelf one Day when he was gone to Forage. See Giry's Life of the bleſſed John de Dieu; whereby it appears he was much better qualified for a good Soldier than a great Saint. His Negligence had like to have coſt him his Life; he was caſhier'd, however, and obliged to turn Shepherd again; yet he ventured once more to turn Soldier, and with more Succeſs, ſays Father Giry, this being a holy War. In a Tempeſt he determined to imitate Jonas, and be thrown, like him, into the Sea. They were a going to take his Word, but an Ave opportunely repeated brought him off. He long run the Race of Sanctity, till being upon a Journey, he turned Bookſeller, or rather Hawker. He ſold Paper, Images, Catechiſms, and at the ſame Time made public Exhortations to Virtue. This pious Bookſeller, who, perhaps, will never have his Rival, thus ſanctified a Profeſſion, the Piety whereof has never made any great Noiſe in the World. He then took a Shop in Granada, and ſome Time after left it to run about the Streets crying out Mercy. He was taken up for a Madman, and treated as ſuch, and did all he could to perſuade the World he was ſo. One Day as he was ſinging the ſalve Regina before our Lady, ſhe drew the Curtain that concealed her, to do him the Honour to look at him. The Sexton ran in, and would have beaten one whom he took for a Thief, but his Leg withered, nor could he recover the Uſe of it again, but by the Mediation of this Righteous Man.

[i] Eſtabliſhed in 1571.

[k] What procured St. Venantius the Care and Inſpection of this Trade is his Martyrdom. He was thrown down a Precipice. On this Account he is invoked againſt Falls, to which the Upholſterers are frequently expoſed.

[l] Set up in 1517.

&c. The Germans, Flemiſh, and Swiſs, of his Holineſs's Guard, have likewiſe a Society.

POPE Clement VII. eſtabliſhed the Arch-Society of Charity. This Society, which cannot be too much praiſed for its Benevolence, makes a general Proviſion for the Neceſſities of the Poor, of what Nature or Kind ſoever. It diſtributes Bread amongſt them every Saturday, cauſes Maſs to be ſaid, and the Sacraments to be adminiſtred to Priſoners; gives Portions to forty poor Maids on the Feaſt of St. Jerome, Patron of the Society, and is remarkable for ſeveral other good Works.

THE Society, or rather the Arch-Society, of Death, buries thoſe Dead which are abandoned by all the World, and cauſes Maſſes to be perform'd for their Service.

St. CATHARINE of Sienna receives the Spiritual Homage of the Society of the Sienneſe her Countrymen, in her own Church. This charitable Society accompanies an Image of this Saint in Proceſſion, on the ſecond Sunday in May, and crowns one Criminal, whom it ſaves from a Halter, or from the Gallies, with Laurel. This is a Privilege granted by a Pope of the ſame Country.

St. MARY of the Suffrage is at the Head of a Society [a] which bears her Name. The Members of it engage to comfort ſuch Souls as are in Purgatory, and by their Prayers to procure them the Suffrages of the Bleſſed. Without entring into farther Particulars, we ſhall content ourſelves with barely mentioning the Societies of the Holy Apoſtles, of the Agonizants, of [b] the Souls in Purgatory, who ſtand in great Need of the Maſſes of the true Believers ſtill on Earth; of St. Marcellus and St. Giles, of our Lady of the People, of the Reſurrection, of our Saviour of the Lateran, of St. Saviour at the Sancta Sanctorum; the Arch-Society of [c] the Immaculate Conception of the bleſſed Virgin; that [d] of the Euchariſt, that of the five Wounds of our Saviour, and that of the [e] Trinity of Pilgrims. This Society takes peculiar Care of Pilgrims, and defrays all their Expences for three Days. [f] The Society of the Piedmonteſe look upon the ſacred Handkerchief as the Principal Object of their Devotion; that of the [g] Annunciation peculiarly honours the bleſſed Virgin, and redoubles its divine Homages to her on the Celebration of that Feſtival.

THE Society of Gonfalon acknowledges for its Founder St. Bonaventure, who, in the Year 1264. gave it the Name of the Brethren recommended to the bleſſed Virgin, and ordered them to wear [h] a white Dreſs, with a white and red Croſs upon their Soulders; for which Reaſon they are called the white Penitents.[i] They aſſumed the Name of Gonfalon, to teſtify their Zeal for their Country and Liberty, on a particular Occaſion wherein they cauſed Juſtice to be done to ſome Perſons who were injured, and oppreſſed by the Roman Nobility.

TOWARDS the Middle of the laſt Century, Michael Buch, ſirnamed the Good Henry, a poor Shoe-Maker by Profeſſion, took upon himſelf the Fatigue of bringing back his Brethren the Shoe-Makers to Piety. He was a Native of Luxembourg. We ſhall ſay

[a] In 1592.
[b] Dell' anime piu biſognoſe del purgatorio.
[c] Formed in 1465.
[d] Formed in 1501.
[e] Formed about 1550. under the Direction of St. Philip Nereus.
[f] Eſtabliſhed in 1597. in the Pontificate of Clement VIII.
[g] Inſtituted by Cardinal Turrecremata.
[h] This Dreſs is a Robe of Cloth or Serge, called a Sack, tied with a Girdle. A pointed Cowl covers the Brother's, or Penitent's Face, except two Holes for his Eyes. All the Brethren wear an Eſcutcheon over the Sack, whereon appears either the Patrons Image, or the Badge of the Society.
[i] Vide Hiſtory of Religious and Military Orders, part 6. chap. xxxiv.

nothing

nothing of all the ſurprizing Adventures of his Life, that we may only mention the Fraternity he eſtabliſhed. Notwithſtanding his extraordinary Zeal, he had in all Probability paſſed his Life in his Endeavours to reform his Companions without Noiſe, and in Obſcurity, had he not had the good Fortune to be courted by a Perſon of Diſtinction. The Baron De Renti produced him to the World, notwithſtanding the Meanneſs of his Occupation, and procured the Good Henry his Freedom. He opened Shop at Paris, took Apprentices and Journeymen, without any other View, but to inſtruct them how to pray to God aright; thus the Shoe-Maker's Shop was ſoon turn'd into a Seminary, to which People crowded to ſerve an Apprenticeſhip of Devotion. His Society was reſolved upon, and formed in 1645. M. De Renti was declared Protector of the new Corporation; and the Good Henry, Father of this Inſtitution, was at once advanc'd from a Shoe-Maker to a Superior. Such is the Riſe of the Company of Shoe-Makers, which in 1647. was ſucceeded by that of the Taylors, likewiſe under the Protection of the Good Henry. Several others of the like Nature were erected in ſome other Towns in France.

THE [a] Society of Mercy at Lisbon is too remarkable to be omitted. It conſiſts of Perſons of the higheſt Diſtinction in the State, and the King himſelf is enter'd a Member of it. This numerous Society, which extends its Branches all over the Kingdom, ſecures to the Faithful, but principally to its own Members, a great Number of Maſſes.

THE Particulars we have here given, are ſufficient to ſhew the Nature of Societies. There are abundance of Devotees who imagine, that they are much ſurer of their Salvation, by entring themſelves into them; that ſome particular Liveries are ſure, and eſſential Characteriſtics of their Chriſtianity, and that there is no true Devotion, but that practiſed in their reſpective Societies. It would be an unfortunate Circumſtance for ſome religious Orders ſhould their Devotees be undeceived.

A CONTINUATION of the ſame TOPIC; their PENANCES, PRAYERS, and PILGRIMAGES.

IT would be an Act of Injuſtice to compare the Penances of the preſent Age to thoſe of the primitive Chriſtians. They were perfectly unacquainted with the Cuſtom of whipping themſelves in public, and imploring the divine Mercy in Maſquerade-Dreſſes, and Ropes about their Necks. [b] Chriſtians who appear in Drawers, and naked almoſt to the Waiſt, who mangle their Shoulders every Step they take, and load themſelves beſides with a Croſs and Chains, having their Arms tied [c] to a Piece of Wood of an unmerciful Weight, in order to repreſent in the livelieſt Manner the Crucifixion of our Bleſſed Lord, might, perhaps, have converted ſome thouſands of Idolaters more than the Apoſtolic Simplicity. We ſhall forbear enlarging on ſuch as wear Crowns of Thorns on their Heads, in honour of Jeſus Chriſt; who mangle their Bodies with Scourges, and ſteel Nails; [d] who turn the Points of their naked Swords againſt their Breaſts, or make themſelves deep Wounds for God's Sake. Can Chriſtianity be carried to a higher Pitch, than to ſuffer ſuch Evils voluntarily, as the Saviour of Mankind never expected or required?

[a] Irmendada de Miſericordiâ.
[b] Theſe Penances are to be ſeen in Italy and Spain, during Lent, and Paſſion-Week.
[c] This is practiſed in Catalonia.
[d] Dellon's Travels, Tom. I. Edit. of 1709.

[a] IN Spain and Portugal there are ſeveral Devotees who do Penance by Proxy. They have People, who for a ſuitable Reward will diſcipline themſelves in their ſtead, laſh themſelves with all the Auſterity of a Devotee, who is mortifying himſelf for his Sins, and endeavouring to pay off, at the Expence of his Body, what he thinks he is indebted to the Almighty. During the Performance of theſe ſevere Penances, the Women, who are piouſly enquiring into the whole Merit of them, [b] cry out, and weep moſt bitterly. They likewiſe beat their Breaſts and Faces till they are black and blue, tear their Hair, and with all the Ardency imaginable, reprove ſuch as laſh themſelves with apparent Partiality. On the other Hand, the Penitents reſume freſh Courage by Drinking; and whilſt they ceaſe for a Time from their Acts of Devotion, the Bottles of Wine paſs and repaſs from Hand to Hand: The Women Penitents regale their Patients with Liquors and other agreeable Refreſhments; after that, they begin to weep afreſh, implore God's Mercy, and call upon all the Saints of Paradiſe. This Medley of Penance and Indulgence has nothing in it ſhocking, in thoſe Countries where they really believe, that the Chriſtian Religion requires ſuch a Deportment; and if we add thereto the Conſtitution of the People, the Warmth of the Climate, which produces exceſſive and extravagant Ideas in an heated Brain; and the Impreſſions they receive from their Paſtors, it muſt be acknowledg'd, that the Practice is reaſonable, unleſs we would have them reſolve to be burnt alive.

[c] THE Abbot Boileau goes no higher than the eleventh Century, for the Riſe of Scourgings in Penance. At that Time, ſays he, a Pack of Fellows, wrapped up in Cowls, provided themſelves with Whips and Rods to appeaſe the Deity, by the ſevereſt Flagellations imaginable; then, it ſeems, they impoſed on themſelves the moſt heavy Tasks of Devotion, and exceſſive Penances. In ſhort, Scourging grew to ſuch a Pitch, that there ſtarted up a Sect of Flagellants in the third Century, who walked two and two at Proceſſions through the public Streets, and whipped themſelves in ſuch a Manner, as was much leſs edifying, than worthy of Compaſſion. This kind of Devotion ſeized upon the Women. They whipped themſelves likewiſe; but, not to offend the Public, did it in their Chambers. [d] About fourſcore Years afterwards, there ſprang up another Sect, who pretended they had received a Commiſſion from God to ſcourge themſelves for the Sins of Mankind. Nay, even Children at that Time formed a Society of Flagellants among themſelves. It appears, from the beforementioned Author, that theſe

[a] It is not in Spain and Portugal only, that Penances are performed by Proxy. They are to be met with in Provence, and Italy too. Some Years ago, one James Zeger follow'd this charitable Profeſſion in ſome of the Towns of Brabant. This Man would whip himſelf till the Blood came, in Preſence of the Sinner, if he would give him Something to buy cordial Liquors before he began the Operation, over and above what he received for the Penance. He had, ſay they, two Daughters, who likewiſe did Penances, as well for Ladies, as for Wives and Chamber-Maids, who had wherewith to pay for them. He had ſettled the Price of ſuch Acts of Abſtinence as he was to go through, according as they were more or leſs difficult. He had ten Pence for a Faſt where he was to eat no Meat, and thirty for one of Bread and Water; but for ſuch Penances in which he was to whip himſelf, and perform other Acts of Devotion of this kind, there was no ſet Price; there an Agreement was to be made beforehand. He laid his Regiſter before the Penitent, and ſhewed him his uſual Agreements. A Penance of four uſual Faſts; the repeating fifty two Aves a Day; a Penance of twenty five Laſhes on Friday after Midnight, beſides a Miſerere mei, Deus; a Faſt of Bread and Water on Wedneſday, with three Magnificats repeated before Sun-Riſing; a Penance of five Roſaries repeated at twelve at Noon, with the ſeven Penitential Pſalms, and the Litanies of all the Saints. Other Penances: To hear three ſucceſſive Maſſes in the Church of the Jeſuits, before St Ignatius, on the Marble, upon his bare Knees; to ſtand upright, with each Arm extended before an Image of the bleſſed Virgin, from one to two a Clock at Night; to go barefoot round the holy Sacrament, without reſting but at every hundred Steps; to pull one hundred and fifty Hairs off his Head at the Door of the Carmelites Church, where the Devotee ought to be between two and three a Clock in the Morning, and there repeat one hundred and fifty Aves; give himſelf five and twenty Laſhes, whilſt he repeated the Domine ne in furore to beati quorum; to ſay two hundred and fifty Aves, and five Times the Laudate Dominum, bare-kneed, on a Board ſtrewed with Sand; to lie three Nights naked, and without a Shirt, in Sheets with Cow-Itch on them, viz. Monday, Wedneſday, and Saturday. We ſhall proceed no farther in this Account, which is a Diſgrace to true Chriſtianity. Theſe Practices are ſo far from being commanded, that they are contemn'd by all ſincere Chriſtians, and forbidden by all Paſtors who intend to honour Religion.

[b] Dellon, Ibid.

[c] Hiſt. Flagell. Cap. vii.

[d] Chronicle, cited by the Abbot Boileau, Ibid.

good People in ſharp Terms inveighed againſt the Vic[illegible]nd Remiſſneſs of Chriſtians; and yet it cannot be denied, but this ſurprizing Devotion was very enthuſiaſtical.

THE Riſe of Flagellation, which [a] the People of Italy, Spain, and Portugal, have adopted into their public and private Penances, and which many religious Orders practiſe in their Convents, was very much like the former. We ſhall have Occaſion once more to ſpeak of Penance, when we come to the Sacrament of Confeſſion; and ſhall deſcribe the Proceſſion of the Spaniſh Diſciplinants in the Article relating to Proceſſions.

NOTHING appears more requiſite than Prayer. It is a Branch of all Religions whatever; but if the external Form be not attended with internal Notions of Virtue, all its Regularity muſt be deem'd a Cuſtom or Ceremony only, and as ſuch we have given it a Place in our Diſſertation. As a Ceremony then, we are to conſider the Prayer of thoſe, who, when enter'd into any Society, religiouſly obſerve all its Rules, and yet make no Scruple of indulging themſelves in all Manner of Vices; of thoſe, who at the Hour of Death wrap themſelves up in a Monk's Robe, and give that Patrimony to Convents which they rob their neareſt Relations of; of ſuch as devote themſelves to the Performance of Acts of Piety, when they find their ſenſual Appetites are of no farther Service to them. This Specimen will give the Reader an adequate Idea of what is call'd Prayer of Ceremony, or, a Compliment paid to the Deity. We ſhall drop the Account here, and leave the reſt to Confeſſors.

[b] THE Practice of wearing particular Prayers about the Neck, or any other Part of the Body, which may be look'd upon as a ſuperſtitious Relic of Amulets, muſt be rang'd amongſt the Number of Cuſtoms; as alſo, that of praying exactly at a particular Hour, and always in one Poſture, or elſe in as difficult and uneaſy a one as can be imagined; that of confining oneſelf to ſay a particular Prayer, [c] during a certain Number of Days, &c.

" THE Vows and Pilgrimages which are made to the Sepulchres of the Martyrs and " other Saints, to Churches, Chapels, and other Places ſet apart for divine Worſhip, " are of great Antiquity, and authoriſed, ſays M. Thiers, [d] by the Teſtimony of the " Fathers and other Eccleſiaſtical Writers. But to imagine, adds he, that one cannot " be perfect without going in Pilgrimage to ſuch holy Places; or that, becauſe Pilgri- " mages are made to them, and Vows and Prayers are offered there, we ſhall obtain

[a] Penitents are diſtinguiſhed by their Colours in Italy. They are formed into ſeveral Societies, under the Names of blue, green, purple, grey, black, and white Penitents. During Paſſion-Week, the Members of them laſh themſelves in Cadence with Whips of ſmall Cords, which, as we are inform'd, make more Noiſe than Wounds. If this be the Caſe, their Penance is not performed with ſo much Sincerity, as that of the Bramins and Faquirs, or of the antient Heathens. We ſhall carry the Compariſon no farther, leſt we ſhould make it odious; but ſince we are upon the Article of Penance, the Reader muſt obſerve, that it is more whimſical and external, if we may be allow'd the Expreſſion, in ſuch Religions, where the Worſhip requires a great Preparation, many Prieſts, and divers Practices. It is of the ſame Character too in thoſe who retire from the World; and in order to grow Friends with God, endeavour to become Enemies to Mankind. It is ſuch, in ſhort, in thoſe Countries where the Brain, heated by the Warmth of the Climate, is eaſily overcharged with odd and extravagant Ideas. To theſe Principles are to be aſcribed the Penances of the Mexicans and Eaſt-Indians, thoſe of the Greeks and old Romans, whom Minutius Felix reproaches, That in offering the Gods their own Blood, and praying to them by the Mouths of their Wounds, they were not in their right Senſes. As to modern Flagellations, Polydore Virgil has the Aſſurance to compare them to the Lupercales, which were celebrated with the Whip in Hand, and the Face masked. He adds, that the Egyptians whipped themſelves with Rods at the Celebration of certain Sacrifices.

[b] Vide Thiers, on the moſt neceſſary of all Devotions, Chap. xxi.

[c] Vide Ibid. what the Author ſays of the thirty Days Prayer, and of that of thirty three Days.

[d] On the moſt neceſſary of all Devotions, Chap. xxiii. The Journies which have ſince been call'd Pilgrimages, began in the Reign of Conſtantine the Great. They became much more frequent towards the End of the fourth Century; but they were nothing in compariſon of the Pilgrimages of the enſuing Centuries. The tenth grew famous for thoſe of the Holy Land, which at laſt gave Birth to the Cruſades. Thoſe ſolemn Devotions which the Jews, who lived at any Diſtance from Jeruſalem, went to pay, at leaſt once a Year in that Capital of Judea, as alſo the Voyages of the Devout under antient Paganiſm, to conſult the Oracle of Apollo at Delphos, of Jupiter Ammon in Africa, of Serapis in Egypt, and of Trophonius in Bœtia; at the Cave which went under his Name, ought all to be look'd upon as Pilgrimages.

" thoſe

" thoſe Mercies from God which we ask of him, through the Mediation of ſuch Saints " as we invoke; that we ſhall aſſuredly be freed from the Evils and Pains we ſuffer, " and be abſolv'd from all our Sins; that we ſhall die in the Grace of God, and be " ſaved, though we lead a common Life..... all this is an egregious Error." We may, doubtleſs, without ſtirring from home, eaſily recollect the Saints, copy their Virtues without hurrying from one Place to another, and pray to God without viſiting all the Churches throughout Town.

We have already obſerv'd, that the moſt remarkable Pilgrimages were formerly thoſe to the Holy Land. Rome, Compoſtella, and Loretto, are the moſt famous now-a-days. We have already ſpoken of that to Rome, under the Name of the Jubilee. Devotees go to Compoſtella to viſit the Relics of St. James Major, known to the Populace by the Name of St. James in Galicia; and to Loretto to viſit our Lady.

A Writer [a] of good Reputation gives us the following Account of this Apoſtle, who is the Object of the Pilgrim's Devotion. " St. James, [b] Patron of all Spain, has reſted " for theſe nine hundred Years paſt in the Metropolitan Church of Compoſtella. The " Image of this bleſſed Apoſtle is upon the high Altar; it is a ſmall wooden Buſt, with " forty or fifty white Tapers conſtantly burning before it. The.... Pilgrims kiſs it " three Times, and put their Hats upon the Head of it with abundance of Reſpect " and Devotion. There are thirty ſilver Lamps always burning in the Church, and " ſix large ſilver Candleſtics likewiſe, five Foot high, which were given by Philip III. " There are fine Platforms of large Free-Stones for walking all round the Church, and " above it is another of the ſame kind, where the Pilgrims aſcend, and fix ſome Rem- " nant of their Clothes to a ſtone Croſs, which is erected thereon. They perform " likewiſe another Ceremony as ſingular as this. They paſs under this Croſs three " Times, through ſuch a ſmall Hole, that they are obliged to ſlide through with their " Breaſt againſt the Pavement; ſo that ſuch as are never ſo little too fat, muſt ſuffer " ſeverely; and yet through they muſt go, if they will obtain the Indulgence thereto " annexed. This is the ſtrait Gate of the Goſpel, through which the Pilgrims enter " into the high Road to Salvation." " Some, who had forgot to paſs under the ſtone " Croſs, ſays the Author of the Delices de l'Eſpagne, have gone back above five hun- " dred Leagues to perform this pious Ceremony." The French Pilgrims have a Chapel in the ſame Church.

Another Writer, who is a Proteſtant, I confeſs, has given us a very agreeable Deſcription of the Devotions of Loretto. Without animadverting on thoſe little Touches of Hereſy, which good Catholics will find in it, we are of Opinion we may venture to inſert it. It is well known, that the [c] Caſa Santa of our Lady of Loretto is encompaſſed

[a] The Abbot Vayrac's Etat de l'Eſpagne, Tom. I. Dutch Edit. 1719.

[b] The Body of St. James was at Compoſtella about the Beginning of the ninth Century, and ſince that Time has performed great Miracles there. Tamayo de Salazar, quoted by F. Giry, informs us, that this Apoſtle has honoured the Kings and Princes of Spain ſo far, as to appear fifteen ſeveral Times to them all, and always ſome conſiderable Advantages enſued; for Inſtance, he one Day put himſelf at the Head of the Troops of a King of Spain, and leading them againſt the Moors, mounted on a white Horſe, defeated ſeventy thouſand of thoſe Infidels. Many Ages before, Caſtor and Pollux, mounted likewiſe on white Horſes, came to the Aſſiſtance of the Romans againſt the Latins.

[c] The Santa Caſa, which the Italians are laviſh in the Praiſe of, is the Houſe wherein the bleſſed Virgin was born, betrothed, and married. There happened the Annunciation of the Birth of the Son of God, and his Incarnation. More than thirteen Centuries had paſſed ſince this Houſe had ſtood at Nazareth, when in 1291. it was tranſported by Angels into Dalmatia. At the End of three Years and ſeven Months they once more convey'd it into the Territory of Recanati. If we may credit the legend Writers, it was there that celeſtial Concerts were heard, the Harmony whereof drew thither the Inhabitants of the Neighbourhood; the ſame Writers add, that all Nature rejoiced at the Removal of this holy Houſe, and that the very Trees of the Foreſt bowed down before it; and yet it continued here but eight Months, and then 'twas tranſported a little farther. But the Angels carried it away once more about four Months afterwards. They then fixed it where it now ſtands, and where a Church compaſſed by an Encloſure, and that there are a vaſt Number of Lights all round about it, by Means whereof the Pilgrims who are juſt landed, begin to diſcover the Holy Houſe. The Proceſſion is performed by going [a] round [b] the Royal Palace of our Lady upon their Knees. " Some, ſays [c] our Proteſtant Author, go five Times, ſome " ſeven, and others twelve Times round about it, according to the Myſtery which they " are pleaſed to find in the Number. Imagine that you ſee forty or fifty Perſons, Men, " Women, and Children, all of them marching on their Knees one way, and as many " more, who meet them, going the other. Each has a Chaplet in his Hand, and mut- " ters his Pater-Noſters; all of them, however, endeavour to get as near the Wall as " poſſibly they can; not only to ſhorten the way, but to be near the Holy Place; which " makes them often run one againſt another, and creates abundance of Confuſion. This " Account anſwers the Time only when there are but few: The great Reſort thither is at " Eaſter, and towards the Birth of the bleſſed Virgin, which is ſettled in the Month " of September. At that Time it is abſolutely neceſſary to take other Meaſures. 'Tis " with ſome Reluctance that I venture to tell you one Thing, which ſeems almoſt incre- " dible, and yet is affirmed as a poſitive Truth, viz. That in the Years of the greateſt " Concourſe, there have ſeveral Times been two hundred thouſand Pilgrims and upwards, " during theſe two Feſtivals, according to the neareſt and moſt modeſt Computation.

" NOTHING can be conceived more diverting than the Caravans of Male and Fe- " male Pilgrims, when they arrive in Bodies. Several Societies of Bologna, for in- " ſtance, join, in order to go the Pilgrimage in a Body. Each Society puts on a Sack of " common Linen, with a Cowl which covers the whole Head, and has three Holes for the " Eyes and Mouth. . . . Nor do they fail to bring with them the large Chaplets, Girdles, " Staves, and Arms of the Society, which are either painted or embroidered, [d] and worn " before and behind upon the Back and Breaſt of each Member. Thus equipped they " mount upon Aſſes, which, upon account of their frequent Pilgrimages, are look'd " upon as ſacred. They very ſeldom ſtumble, or, if by Accident they do, it is, as we " are informed, without the leaſt Danger to the Pilgrim. So much for the Men. The " Women appear as gay as poſſible, and tie a ſmall Staff of the Length of a Span to " their Stays: [e] This Staff creates abundance of pretty Thoughts, and contributes very " much to the Mirth and Entertainment of the Journey. Theſe Female Societies ride " in Chaiſes, and ſeveral Squadrons of the other Sex, mounted on Aſſes, eſcort and " ſurround them. It muſt doubtleſs be very diverting, to ſee theſe devout Merry-An- " drews thus equipped, making a hundred Grimaces, Cringes, and Curvets, attended " with Buffoon Songs for the Amuſement of their Lady-Pilgrims. The Reader muſt " not be ſurpriſed to ſee Women take ſuch Liberties. The Pretence of Devotion . . . . . " is a ſubſtantial Reaſon for dragging them out of their uſual Confinement; beſides, " there is no Queſtion to be made, but that each of them has at leaſt ſome Brother or " Spy about her". It may be ſaid a-propos here, that Spain is Proof againſt this jea- lous Precaution; if what we are told be true, that the Husband there is ſo diſcreet as to withdraw [f] whilſt his pious Spouſe is at her Devotion with a reverend Father.

Church has been erected, in the midſt whereof ſtands the Caſa Santa. Beſides, it is ſurrounded by four Walls, which encloſe it without touching it. Some Legendaries make a Miracle of this Separation; nor is this ſurpriſing, ſince the Materials, Ornaments, and Images of it are all miraculous. The Chaplets rubbed againſt it, the Handkerchiefs, and other Pieces of Linen, that have touched any Thing that appertains to this ſacred Fabric, become likewiſe Inſtruments of Miracles. We muſt inform the Reader, that all the original Inhabitants of Loretto are deſcended from People who ſaw the Santa Caſa arrive, and they want but little of being capable of being Saints themſelves.

[a] The Mahometans, who go in Pilgrimage to Mecca, muſt turn ſeven Times round the celebrated Moſque in that City. Vide Reland, de Relig. Mahom.

[b] Regia: This is the Expreſſion of an Italian Writer.

[c] Miſſon's Voyage to Italy, Tom. I. Edit. Holl. 1702.

[d] See what has been already ſaid on this Head.

[e] There are ſome, ſays the Author in the Margin of his Relation, of Gold, Silver, Ebony, Ivory, artificial Flowers; and ſeveral ſet off with Pearls and other Jewels, &c.

[f] They add, that the Friars leave their Sandals at the Door, to prevent the Husband from diſturbing his Wife's Devotion.

To theſe Pilgrimages ſeveral others may be added, which are very famous, from which [a] Pilgrims never return without attaining ſome extraordinary Advantages. Such is the Viſit made by certain Devotees to our Lady of the ſeven Sorrows of Nivelles; but it ſhall ſuffice to have hinted at this Church of our Lady, as well as at the Pilgrimage of the devout Flemings to the ſame City, there to implore the Aid and Aſſiſtance of [b] St. Gertrude. It would be tedious, if not impertinent, to mention any more; beſides, can any one flatter himſelf that ſo fruitful a Subject can be exhauſted?

A CONTINUATION of the ſame SUBJECT; their PROCESSIONS, NINE-DAY-DEVOTIONS; their RETIREMENTS and FOUNDATIONS.

WE ſhall now deſcribe thoſe religious Marches, uſually known by the Name of Proceſſions, and begin [c] with that which the Inhabitants of Nivelles perform once a Year in honour of St. Gertrude. On the Day of the Dedication of St. Michael the Archangel, after Maſs is ſung, the Shrine of St. Gertrude is carried betimes in the Morning to the Entrance of the Church of the Canoneſſes on the Weſt-Side. It is placed upon a Car embelliſhed with Paintings, conſiſting of Emblems and Allegories, which the Wits of the City endeavour to furniſh out in the moſt ingenious Manner they poſſibly can, in honour of the Patroneſs of the Place. This Car is drawn by ſix Horſes with rich Harneſſes. But before the Saints march, the following Ceremony is firſt obſerved.

WHILST the Horſes are getting ready, the Shrine of St. Gertrude is entruſted to the Care and Cuſtody of the Superior of the Canoneſſes of Nivelles, who is Sovereign Lady of the Town both in Spirituals and Temporals. The Magiſtrates receive this celeſtial

[a] As Penances are performed by Proxy in ſome Chriſtian Countries, ſo there are Pilgrimages for which there is a Diſpenſation without any Prejudice to Salvation, in caſe one of the hired Devotees before-mentioned does but take upon him ſuch Commiſſion. One Nicole, a Female Inhabitant of Liege, was famous, they ſay, ſome Years ago, for Commiſſions of this Kind; nay, it was a common ſaying at Bruſſels, that if Nicole could not ſucceed in obtaining what ſhe asked by her ſpiritual Elevations, it was to no Manner of Purpoſe to employ either Prieſt or Monk. Her Chamber was always crowded with Servants, who came to have Pilgrimages entered for their Maſters or Miſtreſſes, and Viſits to Male and Female Saints. The Citizens Wives and Daughters, likewiſe, were conſtant Cuſtomers, who came to conſult her about what they ſhould ask of the bleſſed Virgin. She would talk very learnedly on the Power of Saints, and on what they had done for her. The good and pious Nicole was the Mother of a Son and Daughter brought up to the ſame Profeſſion, and they were perpetually abroad either upon Penances or Pilgrimages. Madam Nicole, like the above-mentioned James Zegers, kept a Journal of the Debts contracted with Heaven for the Diſcharge of Sinners; and ſhe kept her Accounts after the following Manner. To the going in Pilgrimage barefoot from my Houſe to our Lady at Hall, having three ſucceſſive Maſſes ſaid to her, and at each Maſs offering a Taper of reaſonable Weight, &c. To my Performance of a nine-days Devotion to our Lady De bon Secours, with a Taper in one Hand and a Roſary in the other. To my Recommendation of the young Lady, whom I have before mentioned to her. To my making a Viſit to St. Brice, and beſeeching him from a great Lady to have the Goodneſs to take her Husband off his vicious Courſe of Life. A Prayer to St. Eloi for a young Lady. A Viſit to St. Marcou, to beſeech him to cure an old Lady of the Itch. A Penance for a Lady ſentenced to gape as wide as ſhe can, without ſhutting her Mouth from Noon to one a-Clock, and who is then to repeat fifty two Aves, with an Inviolata Integra, &c. . . . . for having ſpoken ill of ſome Eccleſiaſtics, &c.

[b] This Saint diſtinguiſhed herſelf in her Infancy. Afterwards Itta her Mother, becoming a Widow, turned Nun, and reſolved her Daughter ſhould be ſo too. It was in this State of Retirement, that St. Gertrude finiſhed the conſecrating herſelf to God, and became one of the moſt ſhining Ornaments of the Church. One of the Legend Writers has moſt judiciouſly obſerved, that this Saint made her Appearance in the World at the ſame Time with Mahomet. An admirable Proof of God's Providence, who was pleaſed to make uſe of St. Gertrude to ſupport Religion in the Weſt, at the ſame Time as it was ſinking in the Eaſt. Another Proof of the Truth of this Obſervation, is the Name of Gertrude (Gartroit) which ſignifies perfectly Faithful, or a perfect Believer. Vide Ryckel already quoted.

[c] This Deſcription is taken from the Hiſtory of St. Gertrude by Ryckel, 4°. Ed. of Bruſſels, 1637.

Treaſure from the Superior, after they have requeſted of her the Honour of carrying it in Proceſſion. Then the March begins in the following Order.

THREE Companies of Citizens attend the Saint's triumphal Car. The Children of St. Francis, with the Croſs, in the Habits of religious Warfare, and covered with their Cowls, march at the Head of the Proceſſion; then come the Guilelmites, the Singers, the Canons and Canoneſſes of St. Gertrude: The Lady Superior follows in her Coach, attended by ſome of the old Canoneſſes dreſt in blue. As they march they ſing the Praiſes of the Saint, and when they have got to the Entrance of Mons-Street, they begin the Veni Creator, and the Reſponſes are ſung by the Choir. Then the Muſic ceaſes, and in the mean Time an innumerable Croud of People, both Citizens and Strangers, flock in from all Parts to join the Proceſſion. The Devotees preſs thro' the Croud, and come barefoot to beg the Saint's Aſſiſtance. Each uſes his utmoſt Endeavours to procure the firſt Favours, and all imagine they have obtained them; which, doubtleſs, is what the Scripture calls forcing the Kingdom of Heaven. The Magiſtrates, Nobility, and Perſons of Diſtinction in the City, appear on Horſeback at the Proceſſion. The Singing goes on again, which was for a few Moments interrupted; the Hymn to the ſacred Trinity is ſung, &c. After a ſhort March, they meet another Troop of the Faithful; that is to ſay, the Proceſſion of St. Barbara. Several Hymns and Reſponſes are ſung in Honour of the Virgin, of St. Michael, and all the Angels, as they go round the City. Whilſt they are ſinging they come before the Chapel of St. Anne, where the ſeven penitential Pſalms and the Litanies are begun, which they continue to ſing till they come to our Lady of the ſeven Sorrows, and there the Devotees halt and refreſh themſelves.

As ſoon as the Signal is given, they fall into their Ranks again, and the Proceſſion goes forwards, which is to laſt at leaſt two Hours longer. So that the whole pious March has now continued five, and it is eleven when they enter Nivelles. Then the Saint's Shrine is returned to the Lady Superior with all the Solemnity imaginable. But there is ſtill another Proceſſion made round the Church, which they enter at laſt in order to ſing the Te Deum: After which the Superior reſtores the Depoſit, which had been entruſted to her Care, to the Chapter.

DURING the Octave of St. Michael, the Canoneſſes are to repeat the Office in the Preſence of the Relics of St. Gertrude Day and Night: But on the ninth Day they are reſtored to their proper Places. Six Canons in white Stoles perform this Ceremony. Great Care is taken, never to expoſe or carry in Proceſſion the precious Remains of a Body wherein once reſided a Soul of the firſt Order, but on the moſt emergent Neceſſities. Our Author obſerves, that the Preparation of the Proceſſion has often appeaſed the Deity. And is there any Thing, indeed, to be ſeen more worthy of the Divine Majeſty, than the March of a numerous Train of Devotees, who, with their Eyes fixed ſtedfaſtly on the Shrine of ſome bleſſed Saint, expect with a holy Impatience that the Grace of God will exhale from that ſacred Body, and diffuſe itſelf over them like a ſalutary Balm?

ON the Day after Pentecoſt, the Society of St. Gertrude perform another Proceſſion in honour of their Patroneſs; of which we ſhall ſay ſomething on Account of the Singularity of it. At the Head of this Proceſſion is a Horſeman well mounted, who carries a beautiful Virgin behind him, dreſſed like a Devotee, and repreſenting St. Gertrude. An active Merry-Andrew jumps, and capers before the imaginary Saint, and every now and then attempts to make her laugh. Several young Girls, with the Image of the bleſſed Virgin, come after her; and then follow the Croſs-Bow-Men of St. Catharine, and of ſeveral other Orders.

OF the numerous Proceſſions made by the Spaniards, that of the Diſciplinants, or Scourgers, which is on [a] Good Friday, is one of the moſt remarkable. It evidently demonſtrates, that the Genius of that Nation is naturally turned to an Exceſs in Devotion, [b] and delighted with every Thing that has the outward Shew of Religion. All the Orders, all the Courts of Judicature at Madrid, all the Companies of the City; nay, the very Comedians, tho' the Church looks upon them as Prophane, are obliged to be preſent at it.

THE King, attended by the whole Court, is frequently at it. Every Lord has his Footmen there, who carry Flambeaux. The Preparations for this Ceremony are really ſad and gloomy. His Catholic Majeſty's Guards march with their Arms in Mourning. The Muſicians likewiſe dreſt in Mourning, and maſked, play the moſt ſolemn Tunes on divers kinds of Inſtruments. The Drums covered with Black, beat a doleful March, to denote the Death of our bleſſed Saviour. The dying Sound of the Trumpets animates and ſtirs up the Sorrow of the Penitents, and the Banners and Croſſes covered with Crape, have the like Influence on the pious Soul; but nothing raiſes Devotion better than the cumbrous Machines intended for Repreſentations of the Paſſion; they are drawn in the Proceſſion, and afterwards ſet upon a Theatre, erected on Purpoſe, to repreſent the Death of our Saviour to the Life. A kind of pious Tragedy, divided into ſeveral Acts, is performed thereon; and the Spectators weep, ſigh, and beat their Breaſts, during the whole Time of the Repreſentation.

ALL the Diſciplinants at Madrid are preſent at this Proceſſion. " [c] They wear a long " Cap covered with Cambric three Foot high, made in a Conic Form, from whence " hangs a Piece of Linen, that falls before and covers their Faces. Some, indeed, un- " dertake this devout Exerciſe out of a real Regard for Religion; but others perform it " only to oblige their Miſtreſſes; which is a Piece of Gallantry of a new Kind, and un- " known to other Nations. Theſe Diſciplinants wear white Gloves and Shoes, [d] a " Waiſtcoat with Sleeves tied with a Ribband, of ſuch a Colour as they imagine moſt " agreeable to their Miſtreſſes. [e] They ſcourge themſelves by Rule and Meaſure, with " a Whip made of ſmall Cords, to the End whereof are fixed ſmall Balls of Wax, with " Pieces of broken Glaſs in them. He who whips himſelf with the greateſt Dexterity " and Reſolution, is eſteemed the braveſt. Whenever they meet a pretty Lady in the " Way, they can [f] whip themſelves ſo artfully, as to make their Blood guſh out in Streams " upon her; and this is eſteemed an Honour, for which ſhe is always thankful to the " Diſciplinant. When any one of them comes before his Miſtreſs's Apartments, he re- " doubles his Blows, and mangles his Back and Soldiers. The Lady, who ſees him from " her Balcony, and knows he does it for her ſake, thinks herſelf infinitely obliged to " him, and always takes Care to return the Obligation. Such as undertake this Exer- " ciſe, are obliged to go thro' it annually, in Default whereof they fall Sick; nor is it " the Populace or Citizens only that ſubmit to this, but Perſons of the higheſt Diſ- " tinction..... There are ſeven or eight hundred of theſe Diſciplinants at a Time, at [a] Partly extracted from the Delices de l'Eſpagne.

[b] The Abbot Vayrac, Author of the Etat de l'Eſpagne, and ſome other good Writers, attribute this Character to the Spaniards. If they give into it, to that Degree which ſeveral of theſe Relations aſcribe to them, they are in a fair way, doubtleſs, of practiſing all thoſe Whims which the Mind of Man is capable of, in Points of Devotion; but the Imagination of ſeveral Authors has diverted itſelf, perhaps, at their Expence; they have made bold to place an infinite Number of Follies to the Account of the Spaniards. For which Reaſon, we ſhall avoid entring into a too particular Detail of their Devotions.

[c] Delices de l'Eſpagne.

[d] They have a Petticoat likewiſe of fine Linen, which hangs down to their Shoes, and is plaited into ſuch ſmall Plaits, and is ſo full, as to take fifty Yards, as Madam d'Aunoy aſſures us in her Travels to Spain. She adds, that their Waiſtcoat is open in two Places on the Shoulders.

[e] According to Madam d'Aunoy, they have Maſters to teach them the Art of Flagellation, after the ſame Manner as others are taught Dancing or Fencing.

[f] There muſt be no Geſticulations with the Arms, ſays Madam d'Annoy, if they would be thought dextrous, and are ambitious of Applauſe. The whole Operation muſt be performed with the Hand and Wriſt only.

" Seville,

" Seville, and they have the Credit of whipping themſelves more ſeverely than thoſe of " Madrid.

As ſoon as the Penitents of the Proceſſion are returned home, they find an elegant Entertainment provided for them, tho' it is one of the moſt ſolemn Days in Holy Week: " but after ſo good a Work, they think they have a Licence, as it were, to do a little " Harm. The Penitent has his Shoulders rubbed immediately, for a long Time with " Sponges dipped in Salt and Vinegar, leſt any of the bruiſed Blood ſhould remain; " after this he ſits down at Table, and diverts himſelf with his Comrades." This Pro- " ceſſion [a] begins at four in the Afternoon, and is not over by eight at Night.

The Proceſſion of the Holy Sacrament, as 'tis performed in Spain, has likewiſe ſeveral Things very remarkable in it. [b] All the Pariſhes, and all the Friars aſſiſt at it, who, 'tis well known, are very numerous and powerful in Spain. The Streets, thro' which they are to paſs, are hung with the fineſt Tapeſtry; and all the Balconies and Lattices are covered with the ſame. A Cloth is ſpread quite a-croſs each Street, to prevent the raging Heat of the Sun from incommoding the Devotees, and Water is thrown upon it, to make it ſtill the Cooler. The Streets are all ſtrewed with Sand, and water'd, and covered with a vaſt Variety of Flowers. The Altars erected for the Sacrament to reſt upon are very large, and embelliſhed with the utmoſt Pomp and Magnificence.

The Holy Sacrament is carried under a rich Canopy. His Catholic Majeſty and the whole Court follow it, attended by the Council and Judges, but without any Regard to the Order of Precedency, each having a Taper in his Hand. The King immediately follows the Venerabile, and walks with a Taper in his Hand, as well as his Subjects. They reſt from Time to Time, according to the Cuſtom eſtabliſhed for Proceſſions. During the march of the Venerabile, and of all the pious Retinue, the Ladies appear in the Balconies, dreſt all in their Summer Sutes, and are ſometimes more Inquiſitive about the Shape and Mien of a Penitent, and more influenced by his Merits on thoſe Reſpects, than the Devotion of the Ceremony, which they endeavour to reconcile however with their Inclination. They have Baskets filled with Flowers, which they throw in ſmall Quantities on the Perſons who march in Proceſſion; and Bottles of Sweets likewiſe, the Perfumes whereof they ſcatter upon the Detachment of the Church Militant, whom the Holy-Water ſecures from the ſecret Wiles and Stragagems of the Devil, whilſt the perfumed Waters expoſe them to thoſe of the fair Sex. There are ſeveral Buffoons who attend this Act of Devotion, mix in the Ranks, dance by the Side of the Venerabile, and play a thouſand antic Tricks during the Proceſſion. Theſe Buffoons, who for the generality are Biſcayans, are unaccountably active; but what is ſtill more unaccountable, is, that the Spaniſh Gravity can acquieſce in ſuch a Contraſt. The Proceſſion laſts ſeveral Hours, and it is two in the Afternoon frequently before it is over. Then it is the Devotees go home to Dinner, in order to meet again at the Autos Sacramentales, which are a kind [c] of pious Farces played in honour of the Holy Sacrament, in the open Street, and by the Light of Torches, tho' at broad Day. Theſe Farces laſt a Month, and cloſe the Devotion of the Holy Sacrament.

[a] Madam d'Aunois Travels into Spain.

[b] Ibid. & Delices d'Eſpagne.

[c] Or rather a ſort of Tragedies, the Subjects of which are pious, and the Execution whimſical and extravagant according to Madam d'Aunois in her Travels into Spain. She has given us the Subject of one of theſe Autos, which is this. " The Knights of St. James are aſſembled, and our Lord comes and requeſts to be admitted into this Order. " Several readily agree, but the Antients lay before the reſt the Injury they ſhould do themſelves by ſuch Compliance, " to a Perſon of ſo mean Extraction; that St. Joſeph his Father was but a poor Joiner, and his Mother work at her " Needle. Our Lord waits with great Uneaſineſs for the Reſolution they ſhall come to; they with ſome Reluctance " reſolve not to admit him; but thereon propoſe an Expedient, which is to inſtitute the Order of Chriſt on purpoſe for " him, and by this all of them were ſatisfied."

THE Proceſſion of the Holy Sacrament upon Corpus Chriſti Day, is much more ſolemn and ſerious at Genoa. The Streets and Houſes are hung with Tapeſtry, as they are in France: The way is likewiſe ſtrewed with Greens, and the Ladies throw Flowers and Perfumes upon the Heads of ſuch as have the honour to follow the Venerabile; but theſe little Acts of Gallantry are not attended with any Thing antic or ridiculous, and all pious Buffooneries are prudently omitted, which Practice Milan, as we are informed, hath faithfully retained, and in which, [a] according to Miſſon, People exerciſe themſelves ſome ſhort Time beforehand, to ſhine in a more Chriſtian-like Manner at the enſuing Feſtival.

THE Proceſſion of the Roſary, as the Dominicans perform it at Venice, is very ſingular. A great Number of little Angels and Saints follow the Croſs. Theſe are ſo many beautiful well-made Boys and Girls. One of the latter repreſents Saint Apollina, another St. Lucia, and another St. Agnes; in ſhort, they are all ſo many ingenious Copies of the Inhabitants of Paradiſe. Theſe imaginary Saints are attended by a Parcel of little very black Devils. They have Tails, Horns, Talons, and every Thing requiſite to make them appear what they repreſent. Theſe jump and caper about, and make a thouſand ridiculous Grimaces at the Female Saints; nay, they carry their Jeſt ſo far, as ſometimes to take ſuch Liberties as might make the young Saints loſe ſight of the Benefit and Advantage of this Act of Devotion; but they ſtill keep their Gravity however, defended by the Buckler of a borrowed Sanctity, and thinking themſelves very powerfully fortified with all the Arms of Salvation, they affect to look down with Contempt on the Devices of the Devils. The more they attempt to lead them aſtray, the leſs Inclination they have to liſten to the dangerous Drolleries of Hell, played off for their Amuſement; Drolleries which edify vulgar Chriſtians only. St. Catharine of Sienna appears at this Exerciſe of Devotion with a little Jeſus by her Side, who [b] has a Broom in one Hand, and a pair of Bellows in the other. After theſe Female Saints come a Number of pious Women, choſen from amongſt the faireſt, to repreſent ſeveral of the Saints in the old Teſtament. The Muſic mixes with the Proceſſion, and the Eunuchs ſing Hymns and other muſical Compoſitions. The bleſſed Virgin richly dreſſed, and in royal Robes, follows theſe Devotees, with a large Roſary in her Hand, the Beads whereof are of the biggeſt Size. For the bleſſed Virgin had, in her Life-Time, as we are informed, a particular Value for the Devotion of the Roſary; at leaſt the Dominicans think ſo. The young Lady who repreſents the Virgin, is carried upon a Litter, and at ſome little Diſtance follows a wooden Image of the bleſſed Virgin, which the Dominicans hold in the higheſt Veneration. The People humble themſelves before it, fall down on their Knees, and flock round about it, as being fully perſuaded, that thereby they ſhall reap Bleſſings without Number. The Dominicans armed with Roſaries ſurround our Lady.

SUCH Chriſtians as are hard to pleaſe, or ſingular in their Taſte, can never approve theſe ſolemn Proceſſions, in which the Saints appear degraded from that State of Humility they had made choice of in order to make themſelves acceptable to God on Earth. But theſe Practices, however, are of ſingular Service to ſuch Perſons, over whom Superſtition and the Paſſions are for ever contending to get the Maſtery; a Debate of the higheſt Importance to the Leaders of the Church Militant. As to [c] the myſterious Part of their Proceſſions, we ſhall leave that Enquiry to them, as no one knows the ſecret but themſelves.

WE ſhall not here enter into a more particular Account on the Topic of Proceſſions. There are two or three others, however, which will be deſcribed in the Sequel of this Work, whereof the leaſt that can be ſaid, is, that they are very ſingular.

[a] Miſſion's Voyage to Italy, Tom. III. Hague Edit. 1702.
[b] It was in this Condition he once came into the Saint's Room to help and ſerve her.
[c] Vide the next Page.

PRO-

PROCESSIONS are of Pagan Original, and ſuch as were very ſolemn, were formerly made in honour of their falſe Deities. For this we ſhall refer the Reader to Polydore Virgil; but however, for his Satisfaction, we ſhall give him the Deſcription of a Pagan Proceſſion, as we find it in Book XI. of Apuleius's Metamorphoſis, which was one made in honour of Diana. Firſt appeared ſome in the Equipage of Warriors, and others of Huntſmen, armed with Spears, and other Inſtruments, proper for the Chace; then came Men diſguiſed like Women, with their Hair flowing in Ringlets; their Body, Feet, and Legs, dreſſed in the moſt pompous Manner, with all the Ornaments of the gayeſt Ladies.

ONE was dreſſed like a Magiſtrate, another like a Philoſopher. A tame She-Bear was carried on a Litter, in honour of the Goddeſs, that being the living Emblem of Hunting, over which Diana exerciſed her Authority among the Pagans..... Theſe, if I may be allow'd the Expreſſion, were the Preliminaries; after which march'd the Women Devotees, clothed all in white, and crowned with Flowers; they ſtrewed the Ways with them, through which the mortal Spoils of ſeveral Gods, and likewiſe the Image of the Goddeſs, were to paſs..... This ſacred Company which trod upon thoſe Flowers, perfumed the Streets likewiſe with a precious Balm, which they poured out Drop by Drop as they marched along. A great Number of Male and Female Devotees followed the holy Matrons, with Torches or Flambeaux in their Hands. There was Muſic alſo, and the ſinging Boys join'd their Voices in a very agreeable Manner, with the Symphony of Inſtruments, as they ſung the Praiſes of their Gods. Such as had devoted themſelves to Piety came after the Choir..... The Prieſts who followed them carried ſeveral Things which were conſecrated to the Service of Religion; after which appeared their Gods. Anubis, Mercury, Serapis, &c. condeſcended to be mingled with their Adorers, under a Form which repreſented their Character and Functions. They always carried likewiſe in this Proceſſion ſome certain Myſteries, which made the moſt eſſential and valuable Part of their Religion. They were lock'd up in a Caſket, which one of the Miniſters of the Gods carried with that becoming Gravity, which was ſo highly requiſite to gain over the People, and imprint an implicit Faith on the Hearts of their Devotees.

PROCESSIONS were likewiſe in Uſe [a] amongſt the antient Jews. They were introduc'd, as ſome pretend, into Chriſtianity under Conſtantine the Great. The Uſe of Tapers had been eſtabliſhed before, but they did not appear at Proceſſions till ſome Years after.

YOUR Expoſitors of Myſteries inform us, [b] that Proceſſions recall to the Chriſtian's Mind the various Travels of our bleſſed Lord for our Salvation, and the Life which a Chriſtian ought to lead here upon Earth. The Chriſtians who introduced the Uſe of them in the firſt Ages of the Church, in our Opinion, made none of theſe Reflections; and only imagined that they ought to imitate a Ceremony which gives ſuch a Luſtre to Religion, though borrowed from Paganiſm, and which the Jews themſelves had made no Scruple of adopting. Beſides, it is eaſy to conceive how the Chriſtians, living amongſt Heathens, did by Degrees take various Cuſtoms from them, which they imagin'd they might apply to their Religion, without any Ways corrupting it.

THE Croſs which is carried before the Proceſſion, is intended to inſtruct us, that the Faithful ought always to have CHRIST before their Eyes; and the Image of the Saint,

[a] Examples of them are to be met with in the Old Teſtament.

[b] Alet's Ritual. "The Compaſs taken in going from any holy Place, and coming back to it again, all the while "ſinging the Praiſes of God, repreſents the Travels of Chriſt, during his living with his Diſciples," &c. The Application is a little forced, and that of a Proceſſion to the Life of the Chriſtian is equally ſo.

that that they are obliged to imitate their Patron Saints as thoſe did our bleſſed Saviour. The People walk after the Prieſts and Clergy, to denote that the Faithful ought entirely to rely on their Inſtruction, and implicitly follow them in the Way chalk'd out by them to Salvation.

As to the Manner of appearing in Proceſſions, Eccleſiaſtics ſhould think on nothing but the Myſteries contain'd in them; nay, were there no Myſteries in them at all, it were probably no Harm piouſly to imagine ſome. Nor ought they to have any worldly Intereſt in View, ſuch as the Advantages of a Pariſh, or a Convent, the fond Deſire of eſtabliſhing any particular kind of Devotion, &c. nor think they deſcend from their Superiority no more than CHRIST did when he converſed with his Diſciples. In a Word, their Lives ought to be conformable to the Intentions of the Proceſſion. As for the Populace, the Beauty of the Ceremony ought to be laid before them, and the Myſteries of it to be explained, that they may appear at them with that Fervency of Devotion which the Church takes Pleaſure to diſcover in the Faithful.

IT is not ſufficient to give the Reader a Deſcription of ſome Proceſſions, which are remarkable for their Object only; we ſhall therefore now treat of the general Order preſcribed by the Church, to be obſerved at all Proceſſions. [a] "The Banner or Image of "the Saint muſt march in the Front, and be carried, if poſſible, by a Clergyman in "his Surplice. The Children follow two and two, with an Eccleſiaſtic in his Surplice, "or their School-Maſter before them; then comes an Exorciſt, with holy Water and "the Sprinkler, or an Incenſe-Bearer holding the Cenſer ſmoking, and the Navette; "then the Croſs-Bearer between two Ceroferaries. The reſt of the Clergy follow two "and two. Such as wear Pluvials march after the others; but if there be any Ca-"nons amongſt them, the Choriſters who are not ſo walk before them..... The Ce-"lebrant goes laſt. At ſolemn Proceſſions, which are made before Maſs, the Deacon "walks at the Right Hand of the Celebrant, and the Subdeacon at his Left..... An-"other Subdeacon is the Croſs-Bearer..... At ſuch as are made out of Maſs-Time, no "Deacon or Subdeacon is requir'd to attend, except at that of the Holy Sacrament; "but the two firſt Choriſters are on each Side the Celebrant in their Pluvials. The "Magiſtrates, and ſuch Perſons as are the moſt ſubſtantial of the Place, immediately "follow, and the reſt of the People after them, the Men firſt, and the Women and "Girls laſt." As for the reſt we refer the Reader to the Rituals.

THE March of the Detachments, who form the Proceſſion, is always directed towards ſome particular Church; but they often halt, in order to viſit ſeveral others in their Way; an extraordinary Piece of Devotion, and conſtantly attended with Indulgences, which the Pope grants for the Encouragement of the Faithful. This Devotion is call'd at Rome, [b] a Station, a Term which formerly ſignified the tarrying for a ſhort Time in any Place; a Port or Retreat for Ships; an Encampment, &c. All which are Ideas agreeable to the Church Militant.

PEOPLE of all Religions have their Retreats or Places of Retirement, if thereby we underſtand a voluntary Separation from the reſt of Mankind, to perform their Devotions in ſecret, and free from Diſtraction. Every Man, indeed, may do this in his own private Apartments, but there are ſome Retreats of a much more ſolemn Nature, and thoſe only we call ſuch which we perform for ſome Time in a Convent or Seminary, in order to pray to God at our Eaſe, without being expos'd to any Temptations, and without giving ourſelves up to earthly Anxieties.

[a] Alet's Ritual.

[b] Stations were eſtabliſhed, as they tell us, under Conſtantine the Great, but not then regulated. St. Gregory the Great fixed the Days and Churches where they were to be performed.

WE have already obſerved, that nine Days Devotions are of Pagan Original; to perform this kind of Devotion as we ought, we are to conſider it muſt be confined exactly to the Number nine. Some Devotees imagine, that nine Maſſes perform'd nine Days together, will be more acceptable to God than twelve Maſſes ſaid twelve Days together. If theſe Devotions be appointed in honour of nine Orders of Angels, what Reaſon have we to doubt of their being well received?

THERE is nothing which flatters the Heart of Man more than what is call'd Good Works, ſince 'tis looked on by him as a formal Contract, or, as it were, a Truce between his Paſſions and the Duties of his Religion. [a] A certain Satyriſt has obſerved, "That a Devotee refuſes to pay his Debts, though he ſays his Prayers; that he plunders his Neighbour, though he gives the tenth to the Poor; that he ruins honeſt Families, whilſt he is building Hoſpitals; in ſhort, that Religion with the Devotee is "the Counterpoiſe of Juſtice." Whether this Character be true or not we ſhall not take upon ourſelves to determine. To moralize is not our Buſineſs here, but we may venture to aſſert, that there are many who look upon Good Works alone as the high Way to Salvation. We may farther add, that whatever Good Works may be in their Nature, the Clergy have always made their Advantage of them, under the ſpecious Pretence of ſhewing many Chriſtians the Road to Heaven; but above all, they have attempted to pave the Way to it by Foundations, which, according to M. Thiers, began in the fourth or fifth Century; and yet it was nothing then; the Mode was not entirely eſtabliſhed till the ſixth. Nothing was at that Time, indeed, to be ſeen, but People of all Ages, Sexes, and Conditions, renouncing their worldly Poſſeſſions for the Endowment of Churches and Convents. New Practices of Humility ſprang up on all Sides, and Devotees grew diſtaſted at Vigils, which to them appeared too weak. The Prieſts and Monks had Viſions; they entered into an intimate Correſpondence with the Saints of Paradiſe. More warm and ſtrenuous Meaſures were taken againſt the Devil, who then grew formidable. Several Croſſes were dug up, and Relics found, which till that Time had been unknown, and never heard of; nay, ſome of the Mouths of Hell, and two or three of Purgatory, were likewiſe then diſcover'd. The Maps of the Monks preciſely pointed out their Height, nor was this Diſcovery the leaſt eſſential of the Age. A prodigious Number of Souls got out of Purgatory, and ſome of the Damn'd themſelves eſcaped. Such as had any Regard for their Relations, immediately took care of them, and new Methods were invented for alleviating the Sorrows of ſuch dead Perſons as had their Friends to appear for them.

MASSES were multiplied, and one Sacrifice being now inſufficient, there was a Neceſſity not only for ten, twenty, or thirty, but ſometimes for thirty thouſand. The Sovereigns of the Church created new Patrons. Altars and Churches were founded without Number. Swarms of the Vermin, called Monks and Friars, overſpread the Face of the whole Earth. This, they aſſerted, was God's Work. Habitations were aſſigned, and Revenues appointed them; but pious Souls very largely augmented them. Houſes where Devotion has always found an Aſylum, cannot be too much indulg'd. We may eaſily conceive, that Convents increas'd with Devotion, and that ſuch as had devoted their Patrimonies to the Service of the Church, found no other Refuge than that of the Caſſoc or the Veil; in ſhort, a ſtrong Perſuaſion at that Time prevail'd, [b] that God could not be ſerved aright but by Prieſts and Friars; and nothing, indeed, was to be ſeen but Caſſocs, Cowls, Tonſures, Crowns, Vows of Continence and Chaſtity, voluntary Divorces between Husband and Wife, upon a Motive of Piety, and with Intent to retire from the World, that they might pray to God at their Eaſe in the Society of Monks and Hermits.

[a] Reflex. Moral. Satyr. & Comic. p. 259. Ed. of 1716.
[b] Diſſertation on the moſt neceſſary of all Devotions.

BESIDES the Foundations of Churches, Convents, and Maſſes, there are divers others more remarkable. [a] There are ſome ſettled for expoſing or carrying the holy Sacrament in Proceſſion, on ſuch Days as are not ſet apart by the Church for it; or for making ſome particular Day more famous than it originally was, according to the Inſtitution of the Church. Such is the Foundation, ſays Mr. Thiers, (on whoſe Veracity we depend,) whereon the Holy Sacrament is expos'd on the Feſtival of ſome Patron of a Pariſh; the Feſtival-Day of the Saint whoſe Name we bear, or for whom we have a peculiar Reſpect and Veneration. There are likewiſe other Foundations for Offices and Prayers in honour of the Saints, at ſuch Times as we have received any extraordinary Mercies and Favours from them.

The DEVOTION of RELICS.

[b] MR. THIERS aſſures us, that the Faithful throughout all the Ages of the Church have paid a great Veneration to the genuine Relics of Saints, and have frequently received great Advantages by them; but he adds, that ſome Men have carried this Sort of Devotion ſo far in theſe latter Times, as to imagine that they need only to be devout to ſome particular Relics, carry them about them, or frequent Places where they are depoſited, in order to die free from Sin. Mr. Thiers has ſome Grounds for talking after this Manner; and yet he had better have omitted this Article. Why ſhould a great Number of pious Souls be undeceived, who more cloſely and ſtrenuouſly labour at their Salvation before the Head or Arm of a Saint, becauſe they have made choice of this Relic for the Object of their Devotion, rather than any other? and who, being depriv'd of ſenſible Objects, are taken up with ſpiritual Ideas, which lead him who meditates on them directly to God? The Charity of a Chriſtian avoids ſuch Judgments as are too raſh and precipitate. A certain Devotee aſſures us, that a little Relic, which he carries about him, and is neatly ſet in a Box, is a ſovereign Antidote againſt the Temptations of the Fleſh, a ſpiritual Balm that revives him, and an Eſſence that makes him live to God ..... Let us take his Word for it, without further Examination.

THE Antiquity of this Reſpect for Relics has been attempted to be proved from the Tranſlation [c] of Joſeph's Bones, when the Jews went out of Egypt. It is certain, that under the Old Teſtament, it was thought, as it is now, that whatever has touched the Body of a Saint, acquires extraordinary Virtues. This was the Opinion of the primitive Chriſtians, and Inſtances of it are to be met with in the Goſpels, and the Acts of the Apoſtles; from whence we may infer, that the real Body of any Saint is capable of producing much more miraculous Effects. In proceſs of Time, the Conſequences of this Notion of Virtue and Holineſs has been carried to a greater Pitch. Some have pretended, [d] that it was neceſſary to collect all ſuch Things as had been made uſe of by the Saints, to dig up their Bodies, to ſearch after their Bones and Aſhes, and fix on them ſuch an Aſſurance as is eſteemed juſt and reaſonable, ſince thoſe Saints had procured it

[a] Diſſertation on the moſt neceſſary of all Devotions, Chap. xxiv.

[b] Ibid. Chap. xxiii.

[c] Exodus, Chap. xiii. 29. The antient Heathens likewiſe worſhipped the Aſhes of their Heroes. By the expreſs Order of the Oracle of Apollo, the Athenians gathered up the Bones of Theſeus, and religiouſly preſerved them, after having carried them in a pompous Proceſſion, and offered ſolemn Sacrifices in honour to them. Were it neceſſary, other Inſtances might be added.

[d] Bezius, in one of his Pieces, grounds the Merit and Incorruptibility of Relics on theſe Texts of Scripture. One ſingle Hair of your Head ſhall not periſh. The Lord preſerveth the Bones of his Servants, not one of them ſhall be broken. Whoſo eateth my Fleſh to eternal Life, &c. which prove, ſays he, that the ſmalleſt Particles of Saints (even their Hair) have been preſerved down to our Times, that their Bones ought to be placed in Shrines, to create Reſpect and Homage; that the Relics of Saints are endued with eternal Life, and a vivifying Power, and they retain the ſame Power of working Miracles as the Saints were poſſeſſed of in their Life-Time.

when

when living. Then were Temples, Chapels, and Altars devoted to their Service. [a] The very Angels concerned themſelves in this important Affair; for they collected the Bones of St. Catharine, and buried them upon Mount Sinai. Tranſlations began to be made in the fourth Century with abundance of Solemnity. The Uſe of Shrines for Relics began at the ſame Time.

THE Church takes care to have the Shrines, wherein Relics are depoſited, ſolemnly bleſſed. There is nothing ſingular in this Ceremony. [b] The Purport of the Prayer is, that God would grant his Protection to ſuch as reverence the Merits of the Saints, and embrace their Relics with Humility, in order that theſe faithful Suppliants may be guarded from the Power of Satan, from Thunder, Plague, an infectious Air, wild Beaſts, and from the malicious Devices of wicked Men. This Enumeration ſhews to what Purpoſes Relics may be applied. Another Prayer ſaid by the Celebrant before the Shrines, wherein the precious Remains of the Saints are to be lock'd up, after they are ſprinkled with holy Water, is of equal Energy.

OATHS are taken on the Relics of the Saints; and the Oath of the King of the Romans, on the Blood of St. Stephen at Aix la Chapelle, upon his Coronation-Day, is an Inſtance of this religious Cuſtom.

THE Faithful, who viſit Relics out of Devotion, muſt acquit themſelves of this Duty with Zeal, and touch the ſacred Limbs of the Saints with more than common Faith. There is a ſtated Time for the public Expoſition of them to the Devout. The Relics of the Church of Notre Dame at Aix la Chapelle, [c] are expos'd once in ſeven Years with Proclamations, which are intended to prepare the Chriſtian's Application. We ſhall tranſcribe one of theſe Proclamations, that the Reader may have a more adequate Idea of the Ceremony.

The PROCLAMATION relating to the Head and Right Arm of St. CORNELIUS.

" THE Head and Right Arm of St. Cornelius are to be expos'd, by whoſe Me" diation may the Lord Jeſus preſerve you from the Falling-Sickneſs, and af" ter this Life beſtow on you the Kingdom of Heaven. Amen. Pater Noſ-
" ter. Ave Maria. Credo."

The TRANSLATION of RELICS.

THIS important Ceremony requires great Care and Application. The [d] Biſhop muſt examine into them before they are tranſlated; and a Congregation of the Clergy and Doctors in Divinity muſt be firſt aſſembled: Nor muſt the conſulting with Phyſicians be omitted, particularly thoſe who are well skill'd in Anatomy, in order to give their Opinions relating to the Nature and Condition of the Relics, without which great Abuſes might be committed. After their Examination, they proceed to the Inventory, and the Notary draws up an Act of it; after which they are laid in the Place appointed for them. All this is ſpecified; the Biſhop gives his Atteſtation, which is [a] Caſal. de Vet. Chriſt. Ritibus.

[b] Alet's Rit. Pontifi. Rom.
[c] Vide A ſmall Pamphlet, entitled, Prône des Saintes Reliques, &c. printed at Aix.
[d] Bauldry, Part II. Cap. xv. Man. Sacr. Cerem.

con-

confirm'd by a Decree, enjoining all the Faithful to revere them. In ſhort, the ſacred Treaſure is then lock'd up, but bleſs'd firſt, in the moſt ſolemn Manner by the Biſhop.

THE Tranſlation of Relics is made in Proceſſion; ſuch Devotees as aſſiſt at it, may be aſſur'd of a great Number of Indulgences, which his Holineſs grants to all ſuch as are preſent at that Act of Devotion. On the Day appointed for the Tranſlation, the Streets through which they are to paſs, muſt all be cleaned, and the Houſes hung with Tapeſtry. The [a] Church and Altar are magnificently embelliſhed, and the Images of the Saints ranged in public View. The Celebrant has all his proper Robes on, and, attended by his Miniſters, goes to the Place where the Relics are, prays before them on his Knees, riſes and bleſſes the Incenſe, wherewith they are to be bleſſed, incenſes them three Times, then bows, and orders them to be carried to the Place appointed for them, and Pſalms are ſung all the Way. The Populace, naturally fond of every Thing that is outwardly pompous and magnificent, often ſurround them with Tapers in their Hands. When the Relics are depoſited in their proper Places, the Clergy ſet a Guard over them, Day and Night, which is relieved by Turns. The Reader is deſired to obſerve, that Prayer is the ſole Exerciſe of the Faithful who are upon Guard.

BEFORE the Proceſſion for the Tranſlation of Relics, there is a Maſs; the Proceſſion is performed in the following Manner. [b] Two Mace-Bearers march firſt, and clear the Way; the Maſter of the Ceremonies ranges the Faithful according to their Rank; he who has the Bells under his Direction, ſets them a ringing, and immediately the March begins.

FIRST walk the Muſic, then the Societies, according to their various Degrees, and after them the Images of the Saint or Saints, in caſe there be more than one to be tranſlated. Some Laymen of Diſtinction carry theſe Images, juſt as military Officers carry their Enſigns. Others help to ſupport their Trains. A Band of Muſic walk before them; and Children and young Boys decently dreſſed follow bare-headed. Thoſe of the greateſt Note, and the chief Men of the Town, follow the Images, with Tapers in their Hands. The religious Orders fall in by Detachments, or Deputies, and walk next to the Laity of Diſtinction. We ſhall paſs over the Order which the ſecular Clergy walk in, viz. the Incenſe-Bearer firſt, the Croſs-Bearer between two Ceroferaries, &c. We have already ſaid enough as to that Particular.

THE Relics are carried under a Canopy. The Biſhop, if he be at the Ceremony, muſt be dreſs'd in his Pontifical Robes. Some Muſicians likewiſe in their Robes walk before the Relics, ſinging the Eulogiums of the Saint who is tranſlated. During the Proceſſions two Thuriferaries are conſtantly incenſing them.

TE DEUM muſt be ſung as ſoon as ever they enter the Church; and the Relics are ſet upon the Altar to be rever'd by the People. Before they are locked up they are bleſs'd by the Biſhop. Prayers are appointed in honour of them, and a Lamp is left burning Day and Night before the Place where they are depoſited.

* THE Relicts of Saints muſt not be carried by Laymen, under Colour of any Society. The Tranſlation of Images is performed after the ſame Manner as that of Relics.

[a] The Church muſt be adorned with the Colour ſuitable to the Saint, whoſe Relics are tranſlated. Red is the proper Colour of an Apoſtle or Martyr, white of a Confeſſor or Virgin. Taken from Alet's Ritual.

[b] Baulduy. Manuale Cerem. It muſt be obſerved, that this Author writes particularly for Italy.

[c] Alet's Ritual.

RELICS for MIRACLES.

WE ſhall ſay little on this Topic, which is almoſt inexhauſtible; but ſhall only mention the Blood of thoſe Martyrs, which is preſerved in various Parts of Chriſtendom. Rome in particular, and Italy, are grown famous for the vaſt Quantity that is found in them; nor is this in the leaſt to be wondered at, conſidering the Perſecutions of the primitive Chriſtians, under the Tyranny of the Pagans. The Earth at Rome is ſtained with the Blood of the Faithful. This City, according to an Italian Writer, [a] has drank of it to that Exceſs, as to be drunk with it. He adds, that his Holineſs makes Preſents of ſome of this ſacred Earth to Foreigners, thereby endeavouring to gratify the Deſires of ſuch good Chriſtians, as come to Rome upon a religious Motive; and are unwilling to return home without being furniſh'd with ſome ſalutary Teſtimonial of their Travels. This is an infallible Relic; having at leaſt ſome Part of thoſe Virtues which Saints communicate to every Thing they touch; as we ſhall demonſtrate by a Miracle, extracted from the abovementioned Author. An Ambaſſador of Poland earneſtly entreated Pope Pius V. to oblige him with a Relic; but whether his Holineſs was not inclin'd to open his Treaſures to this Pole, or elſe imagin'd that a little Earth taken off the Pavement would have as much Efficacy as a Bone, when ſeparated from a Saint's Body, he took his Handkerchief out of his Pocket, put a little Roman Earth into it, and then folding it up, preſented it to the Ambaſſador, who took the Pope to be only in a merry Mood; but as ſoon as his Excellence was returned home, he opened the Handkerchief, and going in all probability to throw the Earth away, ſaw the Earth and the Handkerchief likewiſe ſtained with the Blood of Martyrs.

THE Blood of Martyrs has wrought abundance of Miracles. The Author, whom we ſhall quote at the Bottom of the Page, has collected ſome of divers Sorts; and to him we ſhall refer the Reader.

As to the miraculous Manner, "in which the Blood of Martyrs, according to Report, "has in all Times been ſeen to melt and run, the Devout flatter themſelves, that God "has been pleaſed to give this Satisfaction to all pious Perſons for their Conſolation, and "as a Reward of their Virtue." There are now-a-days ſeveral Liquefactions of this Nature, particularly in Italy. [b] On the Feſtival of St. Euſtace, that Saint's Blood is ſeen to boil at Rome. The Blood of St. John Baptiſt does as much, if not more, at Naples; and that in three different Churches. It [c] puts itſelf into this violent Ferment in honour of JESUS CHRIST, and ſeemingly endeavours once more to proclaim the Coming of our Bleſſed Saviour. There too St. Bartholomew's Blood is in as great a Heat as that of St. John Baptiſt; and ſo likewiſe is the Blood of St. Stephen, which never fails running on the Day whereon is commemorated the finding his Body. Some Unbelievers pretend, that all theſe Liquefactions have more of Artifice than Miracle in them; and we ſhould be apt to imagine ſo ourſelves, were we not convinced by numberleſs Inſtances of the fair Dealing and Sincerity of the Prieſts and Monks of this Country. We ſhall produce one that will put it beyond all Diſpute.

ON the 18th of September is celebrated the Ceremony of expoſing the Head and Blood of St. Januarius, Patron of the City, to public View. There is a [d] ſolemn Proa Boldetti. Oſſervazioni ſopra i cimiteri de S. S. Martiri, Lib. I. Cap. xxvi. Edit. of Rome, 1720.

b Oſſervazioni ſopra i cimiteri, &c.

c This is the Expreſſion of a Poet, quoted by the Italian Author.

d The following Story, as we are inform'd, gave Riſe both to the Proceſſion and Miracle. A Neapolitan Lady, being ſo ſick as to keep her Bed, having heard of St. Januarius and his Aſſociates, determin'd to ſeek her Cure upon Proceſſion likewiſe in Honour of the Saint, at which the Martyr's Head and Blood are carried in all the Pomp and Grandeur imaginable. 'Tis ſo contriv'd, that theſe two Relics meet together, and as ſoon as they are within Reach of each other, the Blood is ſeen to grow Fluid, to boil, and to riſe to the very Rims of the Glaſs, in which 'tis kept. This Miracle is wrought every Year, never deceiving the People's Expectation, who are always ready to atteſt the Truth of it.

WE ſhall forbear mentioning [a] the Liquefaction of St. Vitus's Blood, which is to be ſeen in one of the Abbies of the Dioceſe of Tarentum, and that of the Blood of St. Pantaleon, St. Urſula, St. Laurence, and divers others.

WE ſhall likewiſe ſay nothing of thoſe Tranſlations in which Relics have formerly ſignalized themſelves by a vaſt Variety of miraculous Cures, peculiar Operations, and famous Deliverances, which have been owing to them. Some may imagine, perhaps, that nothing like them is ſeen in our Days; ſince modern Incredulity is apt to laugh at the Candour and Faith of our Anceſtors. But we ſhall refer them to the Archives of the Monks: Where they will ſee that the Power of the Saints is no ways diminiſhed.

[b] IN 1672. Rome raiſed a Recruit from the Catacombs of four hundred and twenty eight Saints, moſt of them anonymous, and unknown; which, however, afforded abundance of new Relics. Other Recruits of the ſame ſort had been made before that Time.

The MANNER of diſtinguiſhing the RELICS dug out of the CATACOMBS, to be genuine.

THE [c] apoſtolic Chamber hires Diggers, on purpoſe to work in the ſubterraneous Places, where ſacred Bodies, as they are call'd at Rome, are commonly found. This holy Employment is carry'd on in Spring and Winter. As ſoon as the Sepulchres are opened, an apoſtolic Commiſſary examines the Marks whereby the Bodies of Martyrs are to be known. If there be only the name of CHRIST thus (☧) over theſe Sepulchres, or a ſingle Croſs, a Dove, a Crown, an Olive-Branch, without a Palm-Branch, or without a Vaſe of Wood, or other Veſſel, wherein the Blood of Martyrs was uſually put, they are look'd upon barely as ſo many Chriſtian Sepulchres, and in ſuch a [d] Caſe are never opened. The Veſſel for holding of Blood is in a particular Manner [e] an evident Sign of upon the very Spot where theſe faithful Chriſtians had been executed. Immediately ſhe gets up, full of Hope, takes two Vials, and repairs to the Place of their Martyrdom, which being ſtill wet with the Blood of theſe faithful Confeſſors, ſhe fills her Vials therewith. In one ſhe puts all the pure Blood ſhe could get, and in the other, that which was mixed with Earth and other Filth. She had ſcarce made an End, before ſhe found herſelf reſtored to a perfect State of Health. Some Time after, this good Lady was informed, that the Head of the Saint whom we are ſpeaking of, was lodged at Naples; and thought herſelf bound to acquaint her Countrymen, that ſhe was in Poſſeſſion of the Saint's Blood, and owed her Cure to it. This was a new Subject of Edification for that pious City; the Devout are determined to tranſlate it; the Head therefore of the Saint is taken and carried in Pomp, in order to fetch the Blood. The Lady did not wait for this Viſit. She would have done wrong to ſtand upon Punctilios. Equally humble and devout, ſhe takes the two Vials, and runs to meet the Head of the Martyr. In the firſt Moment of the Interview the Blood diſſolves, the People were convinced beyond the Power of doubting, that it was the Blood of St. Januarius, and ſince that Time the Miracle has never ceaſed. This is what the Italian Author, already quoted, relates.

[a] Oſſervazioni ſopra, &c.

[b] Id. Ibid.

[c] Id. Ibid..

[d] Or at leaſt are but very ſeldom opened. Id. Ibid.

[e] Hereby we ſee it is falſe, to ſay, that the ſmall Earthen Veſſels, where appear any Remains of the Blood put into them by thoſe that buried the Bodies of Martyrs, or any Part of the Inſtrument which was made uſe of in their Execution, or, in ſhort, any Inſcription graved on Stone, were acknowledged as true and genuine Marks of the Martyrdom ſuffered by thoſe near whom they were found in their Sepulchres.

Mar-

Martyrdom, and conſequently of Holineſs. When the neceſſary Tokens here mentioned have been obſerved, they proceed to open the Tombs with all the Precaution ſo religious an Operation requires.

ALL the Caution imaginable is uſed with Reſpect to the Bones of Martyrs; without which they could not be taken out whole. As they are dug up, they are put into little Caſes, which are afterwards corded up, and ſealed with the grand Vicar's Seal; and then the Diggers carry them into the Chambers appropriated for Relics. The Bones are laid upon Tables at ſome Diſtance one from the other, that as they dry, the Air may reſtore them in ſome meaſure to their primitive Hardneſs. All this requires a dextrous Hand, becauſe theſe Bones grow very brittle; and as they are apt to crumble with the leaſt Touch, by lying ſo many Ages under Ground, muſt be artfully and lightly handled. After this, the Cardinal-Vicar and his Holineſs's chief Sacriſtan expoſe theſe Relics to the Veneration of the Faithful, diſtribute them as they ſee proper, and arm them with the neceſſary Atteſtations. Relics of the larger Size are beſtowed on none but crowned Heads, and Perſons of the firſt Diſtinction in the Church.

THE Sieur Aimon, in his Tableau de la Cour de Rome, acquaints us, that the Congregation of Relics gives Names to thoſe Bones which are dug up, and cannot be known by any Inſcription; which Names are given at the Diſcretion of ſuch Devotees, as would honour them under ſome Saint whom they nominate, as Godfathers and Godmothers do when Children are baptized.

[a] IF the Proprietors of any Land under the Juriſdiction of Rome, ſhould diſcover any Sepulchres, or ſubterraneous Places which have Communication with thoſe where any ſacred Bodies have been dug up, they muſt give Notice of it to the Congregation of Relics, who take due Care to have ſuch Places ſtrictly examined.

[b] THE Biſhop is allowed to give his Approbation of ſuch Relics as are but newly diſcovered, of a Saint who has been in Heaven for many Ages paſt, and is poſſeſſed o the Right of Holineſs without having his Privilege diſputed. But it is not ſo with ſuch Saints as are wholly unknown, or but little known, or whoſe Sanctity muſt be proved. CHRIST's Vicar only can beſtow on their Relics the Authority they deſerve.

[a] Oſſervazioni ſopra i cimiteri, &c.
[b] Id. Ibid.

Se-

Several CUSTOMS relating to RELICS.

EXCESS of Love and Esteem makes us preserve with Fondness what once belong'd to our Friends or Relations. People of high Birth leave their Descendants particular Family-Trifles, which have been transmitted to them from their Ancestors; and if such Trifles happen to be accompanied with any peculiar Circumstance, the Family is very apt to place them in the Number of Relics. Nay, Antiquity alone is sufficient sometimes to set an excessive Value upon Things. An Antiquarian, who should be so happy as to be possest of an Arm of Alexander, or one of Cæsar's Robes, would imagine himself as fortunate at least as a Christian, who should reckon twenty sacred Bodies, together with all their proper Attestations, amongst his Treasures. This Character is naturally stamped on the Mind of Man in general; we can't refrain from entertaining a Respect and Veneration for the most trivial Things we have remaining of such as in their Life-Time merited public Esteem; and should this Principle arise from the same that makes us fond of Religion; should those Persons, for instance, whom we thus value and regard, have suffered for it, or should we have discovered an uninterrupted Course of Sanctity in them, we are easily persuaded, that when they departed this Life, they left a Portion of their Holiness behind them; that some remained in their very Clothes, nay, that the Earth that bears them has acquired some Share of it. This Persuasion is confirmed by Time, and a Series of Time gives it a Right, which no one would dare rashly to contest.

WE are well assured, that this Principle may have been the Occasion from the Infancy of the Church, of collecting the Bones and Ashes of the primitive Martyrs. The Garments of Christ and his Apostles may possibly have been preserved; some of the Instruments of their Sufferings may likewise have survived; some may have procured St. Peter's Chains, and others the Stones with which St. Stephen was martyr'd. But let us carry the Supposition still farther; there may be Devotees who are firmly of Opinion, that there were some Christians so patient, or rather so cunning, as to make an Advantage of the Moment that St. Joseph was cutting Wood, with an Intent to get Possession of his [a] Breath in that Instant, and secure it fast in a Bottle. But, be that as it will, there would be no Method of accounting how these, [b] and several other Relics, at least as antient, are transmitted down to us free from Forgery, after so many, and great Revolutions of States, and after about seventeen Centuries, without Faith, and without Miracles.

THE Custom of wearing holy Relics by way of Devotion, or in order to be preserved against all Casualties, Diseases, Calamities, &c. is very antient in the Church; since [c] St. Gregory Nyssen takes particular Notice of a small Piece of Wood of the true Cross, which his Sister wore on her Finger in a Ring. This Custom might partly arise from the Prac-

[a] This is what is pretended to have been somewhere preserved.

[b] Such, for Instance, is Part of the Table-Cloth laid before Christ at his last Supper, and is at Vienna in Dauphiny. Such are likewise his Manger, the Table on which the last Supper was served, the Napkin with which he wiped his Apostles Feet, his seamless Garment, his Purple Robe, the Cloth he wore round his Body on the Cross, the Spunge by which he received the Gaul and Vinegar, the Stick with which he was struck, the Blood mixt with Water that came out of his Side, the Hair and Garments of the blessed Virgin, those of St. John the Evangelist, the Girdle of our Lady, and St. Joseph's Cloke.

The Carthusians at Cologne have the Hem of Christ's Garment, which the Woman afflicted with the Loss of Blood touch'd in order to be cured. The Ladies of that Place, as we are informed, send Wine to the Carthusians to have the Relic steeped in it, and drink of it upon any emergent Occasion.

[c] Osservazioni sopra i cimiteri, &c.

tice

tice of the Pagans, to preſerve themſelves againſt magical Charms and Incantations. It is pretended, that what the Children of the Romans wore about their Necks, ſerved them as a Preſervative againſt future as well as preſent Evils: Amulets and Abracadabras ſpring from the ſame Fountain. But be that as it will, it is to St. Helen that Relics owe the Beginning of their high Reputation; and yet the Croſs was at that Time the only Relic really in Faſhion: That devout Princeſs foreſeeing, that the finding of the Croſs would inflame the Chriſtian's Devotion, took but a Part of it away with her, and left the Remainder at Jeruſalem to be an Object of the Pilgrim's Devotion. But it is not in the leaſt to be queſtioned, but that this ſacred Wood would by Degrees have been all loſt, on account of the conſtant Diſtributions which were made of it to Devotees, had not St. Paulinus aſſured us, [a] that at that Time it remained in the ſame Condition; that the Faithful were taking away ſome of this divine Wood without Intermiſſion, and yet they always found it whole and entire. In Proceſs of Time, Relics of all Sorts were worn, but more particularly about the Neck, and on the Breaſt [b].

Relics were formerly carried in military Expeditions, and this was an eſtabliſhed Cuſtom in the Time of Theodoſius the Great. The Knight-Templars, and Soldiers in the Cruſades, carried them a long Time after with them in their Expeditions againſt the Enemy of the Chriſtian Name. Our Kings when they went to War, armed themſelves with St. Martin's Cope, and cauſed the Shrines of Saints to be carried at the Head of their Armies. [c] Du Val de Cernay the Monk aſſures us, that on a dangerous Expedition, a Body of Prieſts and Friars having the Croſs before them, and being ſupported by Relics, after ſinging the Veni Creator, which was their Signal, advanc'd againſt the Albigeſe; and that at the third Repetition of a particular Verſe of the Hymn, the Rebels of the Church fled from the Field of Battle. Nor did the Biſhop of Cominge ſhew leſs Bravery and Reſolution. For, notwithſtanding the ſmall Number of the Faithful who were facing above one hundred thouſand Albigeſe, he armed himſelf with the Wood of the Croſs, and getting upon an Eminence therewith, [d] bleſſed the Soldiers of the Catholic Army.

Devotion ordains Recourſe to be had to holy Relics in Caſe of any public Calamity. [e] The Blood of St. Januarius, ſet before the Flames of Mount Veſuvius, has never failed to extinguiſh them. [f] The Miracles wrought by St. Genevieve, whenever it has been thought proper to carry her in Proceſſion, are well known at Paris; and, if we may credit the Devotees at Rheims, St. Remi's Handkerchief has had no leſs Virtue, at all ſuch Times as it has been found requiſite to produce it, in order to allay or remove public Calamities. All this is ſufficient to juſtify the Cuſtom. We have already mentioned the Cuſtom of ſwearing by the Relics of Saints. That of employing them as Witneſſes of a Man's Misfortunes, or Inſtruments of his Defence againſt the Injuries done him by his Enemies, was no leſs edifying.

[a] Id. Ibid.

[b] St. Charles Borromeus wore about his Neck a Tooth of St. Satina. Gregory XII. wore one of St. Catharine of Sienna. Some Ages before that, St. Dunſtan having broke his Cane upon the Devil, who appear'd to him in the Form of a Bear, had another made much ſtronger, in which he ſet a Tooth of the Apoſtle St. Andrew.

[c] Quoted by the Author of the Oſſervazioni, &c.

[d] The Catholic Soldiers, enliven'd, and inſpir'd, as it were, by the Preſence of the Croſs, defeated the Ring of Aragon's Army; who was found among the Dead.

[e] Oſſervazioni ſopra, &c. At Venice a Leg of St. Laurence extinguiſhes Fires. In a Church here, Holy Water of great Virtue is made with the Bone of St. Liberalis. In Sicily, St. Agatha's Veil, carried in Proceſſion by the Clergy of Catanea, puts a Stop to the Deluges of Fire of Mount Gibel. A Piece of Cotton, when rubb'd againſt this Veil, has the very ſame Effect.

[f] St. Genevieve is Patroneſs of the Pariſians. Her Shrine is taken down in any Time of public Calamity, and contains in it the very Planks of this Saint's Coffin, on Account of ſome miraculous Virtue obſerv'd in them. When taken down, it is carried to Notre Dame, together with St. Marcellus and ſome other Saints. The Ceremony for the generality begins at Mid-Night. All the Companies of the City, with the Clergy before them, appear at the Proceſſion. The Abbot and Monks of St. Genevieve walk barefoot from their own Church to that of our Lady, where High Maſs is celebrated, which is ſeldom over till four in the Afternoon. Many Times they only uncover the Shrine of the Saint, but it always anſwers the Expectations of the Devotees, whether uncover'd, or carried in Proceſſion.

It was allowable formerly to pawn Relics upon any urgent Neceſſity: Nay, they were obliged, as it were, to wear Mourning for their Owners Afflictions; ſince any Perſon under Misfortunes would throw them down on the Ground, and ſet them round with Thorns: But that Cuſtom is aboliſhed, having ſomething in it which reſembles too much the Practice of the Pagans, who frequently puniſhed their Gods for not being propitious to them. They were the guardian Protectors of the Fields and Lands againſt the Villany of Thieves. This Cuſtom likewiſe was a Relic of the Idolatry of the Pagans, who entruſted their Gardens to the Care and Conduct of particular Deities. To conclude, Relics were carried in a religious Manner thro' the Towns and Highways to augment charitable Collections.

Finis

11 NF 89

INDEX
TO VOLUME I.

Note, The Figures refer to the Pages, and N. to the Notes.

A

AARON, his Deſcendants the ſole Miniſters of the Temple, under the Jewiſh Diſpenſation, Page 39.
Abdalla, his Laws againſt the Jews, 177.
Aben-Eſra, a Jewiſh Commentator on the Scriptures and Philoſophy, 137.
Abjuration of a Jew to Chriſtianity, Form of it, 247.
Ablution not always neceſſary, yet required for the more auguſt Myſteries, 11. and for conſulting the Oracle of Trophonius, ibid. how then performed, ibid. almoſt an univerſal Cuſtom among the Heathens, ibid.
Ablutions continual required by the Jewiſh Religion, 11.
Ablutions practiſed with great Exactneſs by all Mahometans, 11.
Ablutions Jewiſh, 205.
Abraham Ben-Meſullam, a Jewiſh Poet and Philoſopher, 139.
Abſtinences Alms of the Jews, 204.
Academies Jewiſh, V. Jews.
Acceſſus, what, 291. N. [b]
Acoſta, his Sufferings after Excommunication, 206.
Adorare, Etymology of it, 2.
Adrian, his Severity to the Jews, and why, 169, 177.
Agnes of Monte Pulciano, S. her Hiſtory, 400.
Agnus Dei's deſcribed, 383. Ceremony of bleſſing them, 384. to 386. Riſe of the Ceremony, 386.
Agobardus Biſhop of Lions, his Rancour againſt the Jews, 170.
Albericus trium fontium, a credulous and inconſiderable Writer, his Charge againſt the Jews, 173.
Alder-Tree ſacred to Pan, 22.
Alfes Iſaac, a Jewiſh Rabbi, and famous Collector of the Deciſions of the Gemara, 131.
Alet, his Direction for the Foundation-Stone of a Church, 14.
Allegation ridiculous in Defence of Proceſſions, 440.
Altar, ever one of the principal Inſtruments of divine Worſhip, 18. formerly the Place for Prayers, Vows, and taking of Oaths, ibid. among the Jews the Place for confeſſing of their Sins, and the Manner how performed, ibid. Chriſtian Church has preſerved the Altar for the Ceremonies of religious Worſhip, ibid. Uſes of the Altar among them, ibid. prophaned by being made a Sanctuary for the moſt vile and profligate Wretches, ibid. and 19. Cuſtom of Sanctuaries antient, but only tolerated for accidental Crimes, 17.
Altar, Deſcription of it, and of what is required for keeping it in Order, 364, 365. Rules for changing its Ornaments, 364. Veſſels and Inſtruments annexed to it deſcribed, 363, to 368. Conſecration of it, 375. depoſiting the Relics under it, 377. incenſing it, ibid. 378. croſſing it, 379. bleſſing the Veſſels and Ornaments belonging to it, ibid. Altar, and its Parts, Types, 375. N. [h]. Altars ſtripped of their Ornaments, on what Occaſions, 379.
Americans, their Religion chiefly conſiſts in Dances and Songs, and why, 21.
Anaſtaſius S. Patron of Waggoners, and other Meſſengers, 426.
Andrew S. Patron of the Fiſhmongers, 427.
Annates, what, Reflection thereon, 291. N. [a b].
Anne S. Patron of Grooms, 426.
Anniverſaries of the Dead, Account and Reflexions on them, 345. N. [a].
Antoninus Pius, a Favourer of Judaiſm, 169.
Anubis, an Egyptian Deity, the ſame as Mercury, why repreſented with the Head of a Dog, 26.
Apex, Signification of it, 93.
Apollo, the Laurel conſecrated to him, 22.
Apoſtles Chriſt's, Days conſecrated in honour of them, 7.
Aquinas S Thomas, thanked by a miraculous Image, 35. Reflexion thereon, ibid. N. [b]
Arch-Fraternities, V. Fraternities and Societies.
Archi-Synagogus, who, 118.
Arithmetic of the Jews, V. Jews.
Aſpergillum, kiſſed by the Prieſt in ſprinkling of holy Water, 20.
Aſperſion, or Sprinkling, with what, and how performed among the Romans, 11. on what Occaſions, ibid. and 24.
Atocha our Lady of, her Chapel famous for Miracles, 410.
Ave Maries, Efficacy of them, 25.
Augsburg, Jews obliged to pay a Florin an Hour for their Stay there, 179.
Auguſtus, believed the good or ill Fortune of the Day owing to putting on his Shoe, 14.
Aſtronomy of the Jews, V. Jews.
Authors, Explanation of them neceſſary in the learning of Tongues, 144, 145.
Autos, a ſort of pious Farces, 438. Deſcription of them, ibid. N. [i] Azarias, a Jewiſh Rabbi, a good Hiſtorian, 140.
Azyma of the Jews, what, 60.

B.

Babylonian Captivity a fatal Blow to the Jewiſh Religion, 168.
Babylonian Captives, reputed by the Jews to have been all Saints, 168. their Employment, ibid.
Baptiſm Chriſtian, a kind of Ablution, 11.
Baptiſt S. John, wore a Girdle of Leather, like the Auſtin Friars, 391.
Barbara S. her Hiſtory, 401.
Barcochebas, a falſe Meſſiah of the Jews, 169.
Barnaby S. his Blood boils on his Feſtival, 409.
Bernard S. Miracles wrought by him with Indulgences, 418. N. [d]
Barajetot, V. Jews.
Barmizva, what, 83.
Bartholomew S. Patron of Cow-Keepers and Tanners, and why, 426.
Baſil S. Enquiry concerning the Genuineneſs of his Liturgy, 148.
Bathing, what neceſſary to be obſerved in it, 10, 11.
Beatification, the Fore-runner of Canonization, 387. Ceremonies of it, 397.
Beatitude, what, 387.
Bells, myſterious Significations of them, 352. by whom inſtituted, ibid. and N. [f] in Uſe among the Romans, 352. and Jews, ibid. their Uſe, ibid. Benediction of them, 353. to 355. myſterious Signification, ibid. anatomical Deſcription of a Bell, 355. N. [b]
Bell-Clerks, why ſo called, 322.
Bennet S. Patron of the Notaries, 392.
Beth Hachaim, the Grave ſo called by the Jews, and why, 99.
Beth Hammikra, Beth Hamidras } what, 118.
Biſhops, Prieſts, and Deacons, Riſe and Occaſion of their Creation, 119, 120.

INDEX.

Blaise S. Patron of the Carders, 393.
Blood of St. Eustace boils on his Festival, 409. and of St. John Baptist, St. Barnaby, and St. Stephen, 445, 446, 447.
Blood of Martyrs has stained the very Earth of Rome and Italy, 445, 446. has wrought many Miracles, ibid.
Blowing of Horns a Jewish Ceremony, 64, 65.
Books of the Jews, V. Jews.
Books written on the Devotion paid to the Virgin Mary, 406. N. [f]
Books, placed on the Coffin of a Rabbi, 99.
Boniface, Founder of the Jubilee, 412.
Borromeo Cardinal, his Prohibition to the Jews, 179.
Bowing the Body or Head only in religious Worship, a natural Sign of the Respect due to God, 15, 16. this Custom preserved among the Roman Catholics, Greeks, and some other Christian Communities.
Brachmans, by their Religion obliged to be chaste, 9. but do not observe the Precept, ibid.
Brerewood, his Mistakes as to the Eastern Liturgies, 154.
Breviary, V. Divine Service.
Bridget S. her History, 402.
Bridget S. her Vision concerning Indulgences, 418.
Buch Michael, a poor Shoe-Maker, his History, 370.
Buffeting, a Punishment inflicted on the Jews, and where, 177. Reflexion thereon, N. [d]
Bull Sabbatin of Pope John XXII. concerning the Scapulary, 422.

C.

Cabala, V. Jews.
Cader persecutes the Jews, and why, 170.
Cadis, a Hymn of the Jews, 37.
Chacam Rau, or Morenu, a Title of Honour among the Jews, 46.
Cajetanus Cardinal, his Opinion concerning the Necessity of learning the Hebrew, 142.
Cairo, certain Monks there prostrate themselves an hundred and fifty Times, and lick the Dust off the Pavement before they lie down to sleep, 16.
Calender of the Jews, 224. to 232.
Canon, what, 329. N. [a]
Canons, their Office, 121.
Canonical Hours, V. Divine Service.
Canonization of Saints, the Ceremony of performing it described, 386. to 390. Procession on this Occasion described, 390. to 397.
Canticles, Reflexion on the Stile of them, 145.
Caraïtes, why so called, 85. are reformed Sadducees, 86. their Tenets, ibid. and 184, 185. their Places of Residence, ibid. and 184. hated by the rest of the Jews, ibid. Rise of Caraïtism, ibid. Caraïtes, thought Samaritans, or Sadducees, 85, 86. and why, but falsly, 86, 87. Difference between them and the Rabbinists, ibid. and 88 to 90. admit of the Jewish Canon of Scripture, 87. and all Traditions not false or ridiculous, 87, 88. receive the Bible as printed with Points, 88. their Divinity freer from Superstition than that of the Rabbinist Jews, ibid. believe no Cabalistic Explanations, ibid. their Opinion of the Soul, ibid. reject all the Constitutions of the Misna and Talmud in Ceremonies, ibid. Instances of it, ibid. read the Bible in a reasonable Manner, and how, 89. agree with the Rabbinists in some Points of Discipline, ibid. Instance thereof, ibid. differ in writing the Name Jehovah from the Rabbinists, and Conjecture thereon, ibid. must marry a Slave when they would turn Rabbinist, 90.
Cardinals, what in their Rise, 289. when first called so, ibid. how many in Number, ibid.
Carmelite, Duties of one difficult, 389.
Castles and Palaces of Wax, why carried at the Pope's Coronation, 301. N. [a] Catharine S. Patroness of Mace-Bearers to Cardinals, 392.
Catharine of Sienna S. her Devotion to the Virgin Mary, 407.
Catharine S. of Sienna, her Fraternity, V. Fraternities.
Catholics Roman have consecrated kissing on occasion of Ceremony, 20.
Ceremonies, Rise of them, 2.
Ceremonies of the Jews, called a Yoke by St. Peter, 113. and by the Jews a Blessing and Prerogative, ibid.
Ceremonies of the Jewish Sabbath, V. Jews.
Ceremony, to which the Jews are obliged when the Pope first goes to St. John de Lateran, 306. Rise of this Ceremony, 178. See N. [d] ibid.
Ceremony, the Essence of the Christian and Jewish Religion, Reflection thereon, 374. N. [k]
Ceremonies thought agreeable to God, 2.
Ceremonies relating to the Jubilee, V. Jubilee.
Ceres, what was consecrated to her, 22.
Chair, Pontifical Description of it, 320.
Chaplets at Prayers, very antient, 16. used by the Romans, ibid. ease the Memory of Devotees, ibid.
Chaplets Beads, Indulgences, Rosaries, Scapularies, Agnus Dei's, their Virtue, 23.
Chaplet, by whom invented, 420. borrowed from the Mahometans, who borrowed it from the East-Indies, ibid. in Use among the Romans, ibid.
Characters Jewish, Opinion of the Samaritans concerning them, 92.
Characters Samaritan, Opinion of St. Jerome, and modern Critics concerning them, 94.
Characters Chaldee, Reason of the Use of them among the Jews, 94.
Characters of some of the Writers of the Bible, 145.
Charity, Arch-Fraternity of it, V. Fraternities.
Charlemagne, attempted to introduce an Uniformity in Liturgies, but in vain, 155.
Charlemagne favourable to the Jews, 170.
Charles the Bald tolerates Judaism, 170.
Chever de Rau, a Title of Honour among the Jews, 46.
Chazan, who, 46, 200.
Chilperic and Dagobert Kings of France, their preposterous Method of converting the Jews, 170.
Chiriat Sceman, a Jewish Thanksgiving, 38.
Choicest of Meats and Drinks offered up to the Sun by the Tartars, 7.
Chosen Hamispath, the Title of an admirable Treatise upon the Jewish Law, 49.
Christianity, general Notion of it, 253 to 255. Idea of it according to the Principles of the Roman Catholics, extracted from M. Bossuet, 256 to 270.
Christians consecrate Sunday to Devotion, 7.
Christians, why consider'd as Idolaters by the Jews, 113.
Christians, primitive, why Enemies to the Jews, 170.
Christians, primitive, their Church Music simple, 20.
Church Christian, imitated the Jewish Discipline in her Meetings and Councils, 115, 116.
Church whole, alone, infallible, 116.
Church, its Authority and Head, 283, 284.
Church Cathedral, Derivation of it, 119. ridiculous Notion of the Spaniards concerning them, ibid.
Church Militant, a lively Image of the Church Triumphant, 320.
Church, Ceremonies of dedicating one, 372, 376. Reflexion thereon, 372. N. [b]
Chronology Jewish, imperfect, 139.
Chrysostom S. John, his Liturgy, Enquiry into the Genuineness of it, 149.
Circumcision, V. Jews.
Clara S. her History, 401.
Clara of Montefalcone S. her History, 402.
Clergy of Rome, why it has not the same Power as the Jewish Sanhedrim, 117.
Clergy, how they should appear at Processions, 440.
Cloth yellow, a Badge of Ignominy to the Jews, 178.
Cloths, touched by the Jews make a Bargain valid, 49.
Colours, a Mark of ignominious Distinction imposed on the Jews, 179.
Colours different, Reasons for the Pope's wearing them, 309. N. [e]
Colours, proper for an Apostle, Martyr, Confessor, or Virgin, 445.
Commandment of Charity, why called new by Christ, 112.
Complexion bad, the Mark of a Jew, 179.
Complines, what, 313.
Compromise, what, 292. N. [b]
Conclave, Preliminaries to the Entrance to it, 290. several Ways of electing a Pope, 291, 292, N. [b] Scrutiny, ibid. Accessus, ibid. Compromise, ibid. Inspiration, ibid. Intrigues carried on in it, 290, 292. who allowed to remain in it, 293. Order observed in Rome during it, 294. Description of it, 295. Manner of carrying Provisions to the Cardinals in it, 295.
Conclavist, his Office and Privileges, 293. how many allowed to each Cardinal, ibid.
Conditions, excluding from public Worship among the Romans, 8, 9.
Confession of the Jews, Form of it various, 204. two Sorts of it, ibid.
Confessors, their Power at the Jubilee, V. Jubilee.
Consecration of an Altar, V. Altar.
Consistory, Order and Ceremonies observed in holding one, 310 to 312.
Constantine pretty mild to the Jews, 110.
Constantius severe to the Jews, 170. his Decree against intermarrying with them, ibid.

Contracts,

INDEX.

Contracts, made with the Gods, how, 6.
Converſation unlawful with Women, how many ways among the Jews, 73.
Converſation matrimonial, excluded Perſons from public Worſhip among the Romans, 9. and Jews, ibid.
Cordeliers of Catalonia, their Charity, 314. N. [b]
Coſmos and Damian S S. Patrons of Phyſicians, Barbers, Bagnio-Keepers, 427.
Covering the Head, an eſſential Cuſtom in religious Worſhip among the Antients, 12.
——— And now among the Jews in their Synagogues, ib.
——— And likewiſe with the Turks, ibid.
Council General, what, 286. of whom compoſed, ibid. its Power, ibid. can check the Pope, ibid. Ceremonies uſed in calling one, Rank of ſuch as Vote in it, 287, 288.
Creſſelle, what, 353, is myſterious, ibid.
Cretans would ſuffer none to enter the Temple of Diana with Shoes on, 13. V. Feet.
Crimes imputed to the Jews. V. Jews.
Criſpin S. Patron of the Shoe-Makers, his Hiſtory, 427.
Critics modern, their Opinion of the Samaritan Characters, 94.
Croceſiſſo Sanctiſſimo at Naples, deſcribed, 351.
Croſs, Cuſtom of placing it before the Candles on the Altar, Account of its Riſe, 346. Miracle relating thereto, ibid.
Croſs carried before the Pope, Riſe of this Cuſtom, and Reflexion thereon, 316. N. [d].
Croſſes, 12. Ceremony of anointing them, 378.
Croſs, Devotion of it, 346. Virtues of it, ibid. N. [e] in great Veneration among the primitive Chriſtians, 346. Inſtances of it, ibid. Holy Croſs found by St. Hellen, and when, ibid. this Devotion, when introduc'd, ibid. Decree of a General Council concerning it, 346, 347. Chriſt, how painted, ibid. Croſs of Chriſt, of what Wood, ibid. Part of it found by whom and when, ibid. Part of the Inſcription on the Croſs found in ſeveral Places, and how this Difficulty is reconciled, ibid Miracles wrought by it, ibid. Nails of the Croſs at ſeveral Places, ibid. their Number accounted for, ibid. Feſtivals appointed in Honour of them, ibid. Feſtivals and Ceremonies appointed in Honour of the Croſs, 348, 349. Conſecration of public and private Croſſes, 349, 350. famous Crucifixes, 350, 351. Veneration paid to the Croſs condemned, 357. N. [d]
Crowns, Flowers, and Fruits, cuſtomary Offerings to the Gods, 18, 22. appropriated by Chriſtians to the Saints and the Virgin Mary, ibid. and 23.
Crowns offered to the Gods, where commonly hung, 22.
Crucifixes famous. V. Croſs.
Crucifixion of Infants by the Jews, their Motive thereto, 174 N. [a] Cruſades, terrible to the Jews all over Europe, 171.
Cruſades, Maimbourg's Hiſtory of, a curious Paſſage cited from it, 418. N. [d]
Cures, extraordinary wrought by Muſic, 21.
Cuſtom of changing his Name introduced, by what Pope, 296. N. [e] of kiſſing the Pope's Feet very antient, 298.
Cuſtom of being carried on Mens Shoulders introduced, by what Pope, 298. N. [a] Cuſtoms obſerved in religious Worſhip, 6.
Cuſtom of repeating the Name of God among the Turks, 6.
Cuſtoms Jewiſh, wherein Religion has a Share, 244 to 247.
Cybele, the Pine conſecrated to her, 22.

D.

Dacier, his Opinion on Pythagoras's Injunction to turn round in worſhipping, 19.
Dancing, no Relation between it and Religion, 21.
Dancing round Altars and Statues a religious Ceremony of the Antients, in which all Sexes and Ages joined, 21. Antients believed the Gods themſelves danced, 21, 22. Salii or Prieſts of Mars led them up at Rome, 21. Dances a chief Part of the Religion of the Eaſt and Weſt Indians, 22. Priſoners to be put to Death, oblig'd to dance in Braſil, ibid. Dancing at religious Worſhip, with much Difficulty avoided among Chriſtians, and Inſtances of it, ibid.
Daniel, a Jewiſh Impoſtor, 176. raiſes himſelf up into the Air, ibid. cauſes a fiery Globe to reſt on his Breaſt, ibid. baniſhed, ibid.
Daniel Father, his Accuſation of the Jews, what, 173. Reflexion thereon, ibid.
Daughter Voice, among the Jews, what, 181.
Days ſolemn, conſecrated to the Gods by the Heathens, and how, 8.
Deacon, his Office, 121.
Dead Body, handling it impure among the Jews, 10.
Decalogue, Baſis of the Chriſtian Religion, 111, 112.
Decree of Conſtantius, againſt intermarrying with Jews, 169.
Devotee falſe, deſcribed by Rabelais, 364. N. [a]
Devotee, Character of one, 441.
Devotion extravagant Riſe of it, 2.
Devotion, barbarous Inſtances of it 1, 4, 5.
Devotion, a Pretence for growing idle and ſavage, 3 4.
Devotion, Saturday the Day of it among the Jews, 8.
Devotion of nine Days, a Relic of Paganiſm, 345. N. [b]
Devotion of nine Days, Account of it, and Reflections on them, 434.
Devotion to Saints. V. Saints.
Devotion to Relics. V. Relics.
Devotion, Mode of it has a great Influence on Courts and private Families, 364, 365.
Diaconi Regionarii, who, 289.
Diana Anicina, her Temple built in Woods, 3.
Dichduch, what, 82.
Didacus S. his Hiſtory, 402.
Dien John de, the bleſſed, his Hiſtory, 427. N. [b]
Diſciplinants Spaniſh, their Proceſſion deſcribed, 435.
Diſputings of the Jews, immethodical and noiſy, 45.
Diſperſion of the Jews. V. Jews.
Divination, all ſorts of it unlawful among the Jews. V. Jews.
Divine Service Roman Catholic, 312. wherein it conſiſts, ibid. called Canonical Hours, and the Breviary, ibid. in what Poſture to be ſaid, ibid. of what compoſed, 313. who obliged to ſay it, ibid. where it muſt be ſaid, ibid. Inſtances of canonical Hours to be found in Scripture, 312. N. [i] Divorce. V. Jews.
Dominic, a Child crucified by the Jews, fabulous Hiſtory of him, 173. N. [d]
Dominic S. his Hiſtory, 421.
Domitian loaded the Jews with Taxes, 168.
Doors of the Temples and Statues of the Gods embraced by the Heathens, 19. appropriated by Chriſtians, ibid.
Dreſs of a Friar has no Privilege to put a Man into the Way of Salvation, 425.

E.

Earth ſtained with the Blood of Martyrs, a Preſent made by the Pope to Foreigners, 445. Story concerning it, ibid.
Eaſt, turning towards it at Prayers, 17. Rule concerning it laid down by Vitruvius, ibid. Riſe of this Cuſtom, 18. Eaſt-Indians and Americans turn to the Eaſt at their Devotions, ibid. Chriſtians borrowed this Cuſtom from the Heathens, prov'd from St. Auſtin, ibid. obſerved by the Roman Catholics. ibid.
Eccleſiaſtes, Reflexion on the Stile of this Book, 145.
Eccleſiaſtics mitred, oftner Fore-runners of War than Peace, 374. N. [f] Eldavid, a Jewiſh Impoſtor, 176. his Death, ibid.
Election of a Pope, ſeveral Ways of doing it, 291. Scrutiny what, and how performed, ibid. N. [b] Acceſſus, what, ibid. Compromiſe, ibid. Inſpiration, ibid.
Elias, believed by the Jews to be preſent at all Circumciſions, 81.
Eloi S. Patron of the Goldſmiths, his Hiſtory, 426. N. [e]
Empedocles appeaſed Anger by Muſic, 21. N. [a]
Emperor, his Submiſſions to the Pope at his Coronation, 284, 285, &c.
Emperors Roman, treated the Jews with Rigour, 168.
Eſdras, Reaſons for conjecturing why he uſed the Chaldee Letters upon their Return from the Captivity, 93.
Eſſenes, 186.
Evangeliſts, why ſo called, 86.
Euſtace S. the Patron of Proctors, and of Inn-Keepers, 426.
Euſtace S. his Blood boils on his Feſtival, ibid.
Excommunication, how performed by the Jews, and its Effects, 46, 47. terrible Effects of it, 200, 201.
Eyes, caſt down by the Turks at their Prayers, 15.
Eyes, caſt down to the Ground by the Antients, and on what Occaſions, 15.
Eyes caſt down often, a Sign of Hypocriſy, 15.
Eyes lifted up a Mark of Confidence in God, 15.

F.

Faith, ſupported by Reaſon only, ſoon a-ground, 399.

INDEX.

Faldiſtorium, a Type of what, 319. N. [b]
Fans of Peacocks Feathers born before the Pope, a Myſtery therein included, 315.
Faſts Jewiſh, how performed, 205.
Feet bared in Proceſſions in honour of their Deities by the Gentiles, 14. this Honour always paid by Cybele, ibid. Roman Ladies always went barefoot into the Temple of Veſta, ibid. Jews practiſed the ſame in Humiliation, ibid. Grecian Ladies obſerved this Cuſtom, and followed the Proceſſions of Ceres with bare Feet, and diſhevelled Hair, ibid. Caterpillars driven away by Women barefooted, ibid. this Cuſtom practiſed by Chriſtians, and Inſtances of it, ibid.
Ferdinand the Catholic, a great Perſecutor of the Jews, 170.
Feſtivals of Saints ſo multiplied, that every Day in the Year has its Patron, 7, 8.
Feſtivals in honour of the Virgin Mary. V. Virgin.
Feſtivals of the Jews. V. Jews.
Firſt-born in every Jewiſh Family, Faſts on the Eve of the Paſſover, and why, 61.
Fiſherman's Ring, what, 290. N. [c]
Flagellants Fanatic, Deſcription of them, 172. they deſtroy and burn the Jews, ibid.
Foot, the Right ſet foremoſt by the Antients at entring their Temples, and great Men's Houſes, 14.
Forehead, according to the Antients, the Seat of Modeſty, conſecrated to their particular Genius, and touched with their Hands whilſt praying, 14. ſo touched by the Eaſt-Indians, ibid. this Cuſtom practiſed by them in Honour of their Princes, ibid.
Foundation of a Church, Ceremony of bleſſing it, 337.
Francis S. his Character, 423.
Francis of Paula S. his Hiſtory, 399.
Fraternities, ſet up againſt the Fleſh and the Devil, 425. how a new Brother of one entitled to the Merits of them, 426. particular Account of theſe Fraternities, and of their Patrons, 426 to 429.
Fruits conſecrated to Pomona, 22.
Funeral Sermons, pleaſant Directions for making them, 321. N.
Funeral Rites impure, 10.

G.

Ganges in great Veneration among the Indians, 9. O Ganges purify me, a Form of Prayer with the Indians, ibid.
Ganz David, a Jew, and chronological Writer, 140.
Gate Holy, Manner of opening it, 415. Explanation of the ſeveral Myſteries included in this Ceremony, ibid. N. [a] Ceremony of ſhutting it, ibid.
Gauls ancient, turned to the Left at worſhipping, 19.
Gedalia, a Jewiſh Rabbi and Author, 199.
Geometry of the Jews. V. Jews.
Gemara. V. Jews.
Genoeſe, their Method of converting the Jews, 171. Reflexion thereon, ibid. and 172.
Genzim, who, 131.
George S. Patron of the Smiths and Farriers, 426.
Germans, ſacrificed to their God Thor every Thurſday, 5, 6.
Gertrude S. her Hiſtory, 434. N. [b] Proceſſion in honour of her, 434, 435.
Getæ conſecrated no Temples to their Gods, 3.
Giafer Sadec, a Mahometan Caliph, his Law againſt the Jews, 177.
Girdle Leathern, a Badge of Ignominy impoſed on the Jews, ibid.
Girdle of S. Francis deſcribed, 423. Advantages of its Devotees, ibid. Societies of it, ibid. their Dreſs, ibid. Reflexion thereon, ibid. N. [o]
Girdle of S. Auſtin, its Praiſe and Privileges, 423. its Fraternity, 424, 425.
Girdle of S. Monica, 424.
Girdle of S. Francis of Paula, ibid.
Girls Jewiſh, how named at their Birth, 82.
Gonfalon, Fraternity of, V. Fraternities.
God worſhipped without Pomp in the firſt Ages of the World, 2.
Gods worſhipped by the Romans at Day-Break, 5, 6.
Gods inferior, had their particular Provinces, Employments, and Hymns, 20.
Gods of Rivers, have Reeds appropriated to them, 21.
Goodman S. Patron of the Coblers, 427.
Graces in Muſic, carried to Exceſs, ſtifle Devotion, 20.
Gradual, why ſo called, 326. when began to grow in uſe, N. [c]
Grammar of the Jews. V. Jews.
Grammarians of the Jews. V. Jews.
Grecians never ſacrificed with the Head veiled, 11, 12.
Gregory the Great, his Opinion concerning matrimonial Converſation at Times of Devotion, 8, 9.
Gregory S. Patron of the Bricklayers, 427.
Greeks and Romans aſcribed a wonderful Virtue to particular Words, and ſuperſtitious Forms, 2.
Greeks, hung up the Hair of their Dead at the Door, and why, 9, 10.
Greek Tongue neceſſary to a complete Knowledge of the Scriptures, 141.
Greek Liturgies. V. Liturgies.
Guinea, People of it worſhip in Groves, 3.

H.

Habdalla, Name of a Jewiſh Ceremony, how performed, 59.
Hagada of the Jews, and Chriſtians, what, 126.
Hagair Alaſuad, a black Stone at the Temple of Mecca, ſome Account of it, 20. N. [a].
Hair of the Dead, hung up at the Door to prevent People's defiling themſelves by entring the Houſe, 10.
Hakam, a Jewiſh Impoſtor, 175. throws himſelf into a Tub of Aqua fortis, and why, ibid.
Hakim, the Egyptian Caliph, his Severity to the Jews, 178.
Halenu le Sabſab, a Jewiſh Prayer, 37.
Half Jews, what, 187.
Hands, Uſe and Application of them in Devotion, 16.
Handkerchief Holy, the Hiſtory of it, 329. N. [b] Miracles wrought by it, 357. See Shrowd.
Handkerchiefs, Linen Clothes, &c. touched by the Images of Saints, a Cuſtom of Heathen Original, 19.
Hanuca, or Feaſt of Lights, Manner of the Jews obſerving it, 9.
Hay, ſacred to Vertumnus, 22.
Hat high crowned, a Mark of ignominious Diſtinction impoſed on the Eaſtern Jews, 179.
Hat red, a Badge of Ignominy to the Jews at Venice, 179. by them turned into an Ornament, ibid.
Hat yellow, a Mark of Diſtinction for Jews, 179. Veil yellow, a Mark of Diſtinction impoſed on Jewiſh Women, ibid.
Heathens, conſecrated ſolemn Days to their Gods, 3.
Heathens, their Sentiments and Practice in Regard to their Gods, and Demi-Gods, the ſame as thoſe of the Roman Catholics in Regard to their Saints, 356, but condemned, 357.
Hebrew Rabbinical, taken from the Hebrew of the Bible, 140, 141. Account of it, ibid.
Hebrew Tongue, its Uſe, 140, 141. that and Greek neceſſary to a complete Knowledge of the Scripture, ibid. Objection againſt learning it anſwered, 142. another Objection anſwered, ibid. Application to the Hebrew habituates the Mind to an Exactneſs and Readineſs in the Style of the Scripture, ibid. Cardinal Cajetanus's Opinion of the Neceſſity of learning it, 142. Jeſuits Opinion thereon, ibid. Hebrew eaſy to be acquired, and why, ibid. plaineſt and conciſeſt Grammars beſt, and why, ibid. Inſtructions for Learning it, 143, 144. no particular Pronounciation to be followed, tho' the Spaniſh way the beſt, ibid. the ſhort and long Points to be obſerved, and why, ibid. Conjugations to be learned in the Groſs, ibid. this as well as all other Tongues ſhould begin with the Explanation of Authors, ibid. Characters of the Hebrew Writers, 145.
Hebrew Tongue barren, and why, 44. how ſupplied, ibid.
Hell, Opinion of the Jews concerning it, 101.
Henry III. of England, his Treatment of the Jews, and Pretence for it, 172, 173.
Heraclius, his violent Charity in converting the Jews, 169.
Hercules, the Poplar ſacred to him, 22.
Hercules, Account of Sacrifice to him, 25.
Herodians, what, 187.
Hills and Mountains conſecrated to the Gods, 3.
Hippocrates and Galen tranſlated from the Arabic into Rabbinical Hebrew by the Jews, 138.
Hiſtory and Chronology of the Jews wretched, 139.
Holland more generous to the Jews than any other Proteſtant States, 172.
Homer among the Jews, what, 61.
Honours paid to the Pope take their Riſe from thoſe paid to the Roman Emperors, 299.

INDEX.

Horn, a Badge of Ignominy impoſed on the Jews, 179.
Hoſt prophaned, Miracles performed by it, 173.
Hymns to the Gods, their Subject, what, 21.

I.

James S. his Liturgy, whether genuine, 148, 149.
James Major S. Patron of the Hatters, 426.
James of Compoſtella S. Deſcription of his Church, 432. has appeared fifteen Times to the Kings of Spain, ibid. N. b Janſeniſts, their chief Opinions, 270 to 275.
Januarius S. miraculous Liquefaction of his Blood, 445, 446. Riſe of this Miracle, See Note.
Janus believed by the Romans to be the Founder of public Worſhip, Temples, and Altars, and the Introductor and Advocate with the Gods, 8.
Ibum and Caliza, what, 79, 80, 241.
Iconoclaſtes, their ill-timed Zeal, and Effects of it, 355.
Jerome S. his Opinion of the Samaritan Characters, 93.
Jeſuits, their Opinion concerning the Hebrew Tongue, 143.
Jews conſecrate Saturday to Devotion, 7.
Jews prayed towards the Weſt, and why, 17.
Jews turn to the Right in worſhipping, 18.
Jews, their Muſic, what, 20.
Jews, building muſt leave Part of the Houſe unfiniſhed, and why, 28. their Doors, Chambers, and all frequented Places, muſt have a Reed with a Parchment in it fixed againſt the Walls of them, and in what Manner, 28.
Jews Italian, admit of Portraits and Hiſtory Pieces in their Houſes, but not Relievo's of entire Bodies, 29.
Jews Kitchen Furniture muſt be new if Earthen, if of Metal not, and why, 29. and muſt be put into Water before uſed, 29. Utenſils for Milk muſt not be uſed for other Food, ibid. have particular Kitchen Furniture and Utenſils appropriated to the Paſſover, 60.
Jews, their Bed muſt ſtand North and South, and why, 29. Prayers at going to Bed, ib. have great Faith in Dreams, and why, ib. faſt after four ſorts of Dreams, and in what Manner, ibid.
Jews, muſt not wear any Mixture of Linen and Wollen, and why, 30. muſt not diſguiſe themſelves by wearing the Apparel of the contrary Sex, ibid. Precept as to Painting, falſe Hair, &c. ibid. may not wear a Crown or Lock in the Middle of the Head, 31. Women wear a Peruke or Head Dreſs at their Wedding, ibid. Men think it indecent to be uncover'd in their Synagogues, ibid. every Garment they wear muſt have four Corners, ibid. Zizit, what, ibid. this not obſerved amongſt them, and why, ibid. think it becoming to wear a Girdle, and why, ib.
Jews, muſt eaſe themſelves as ſoon as riſen, and waſh afterwards, 32. muſt not refrain it upon any Motion, and why, ibid. muſt guard againſt being ſeen, ibid. had an Invocation to the Angels to protect them at it, and a Thankſgiving to God for it, ibid. muſt waſh after it, ibid.
Jews, as ſoon as riſen muſt waſh their Hands and Face, nor touch any Thing ſacred before, 32. muſt not throw the Water they have ſo uſed on the Ground, ibid. whilſt wiping their Hands and Face muſt repeat a Benediction, ibid. farther Particulars concerning their Purity and Ablutions, 205.
Jews, how render'd unclean, 33.
Jews, forbidden to ſow two ſorts of Seeds together, or Seeds with Grapes, or to graft Trees, or to keep them ſo grafted, 40. and to eat of the Fruit of any Tree till three Years after it has been planted, ibid. and to couple Animals of a different Species, or let them draw together, ibid. commanded to leave part of their Harveſt ſtanding, ibid. and to let the Land reſt every ſeventh Year, and to leave its Produce for the Poor, ibid. forbidden to eat the Firſt-born of any clean Female without Spots, but not now obſerved, ibid. or to take the Dam with the Eggs, ib.
Jews, very compaſſionate to the Poor, 40, 41. Poor ones, how relieved, ibid. any extraordinary Charity, how collected among them, ibid. Societies for beſtowing Charities, how divided and called among them, ibid. manner of poor Jews applying for Charity, and how it is beſtowed, 41, 42. Alms ſent by Jews of all Parts of the World to Jeruſalem, Joppa, Tiberias, and Hebron, ibid. Jews charitable both to Man and Beaſt and why, ibid. and 198.
Jews, few of them can make a complete Diſcourſe in the Hebrew or Chaldee Tongues, but are only acquainted with the Language of their Birth-Place, 42. differ much in their Pronunciation of the Hebrew, in which the Italians excel, 43. their Books, Contracts, Journals, public Tranſactions, &c. written in Rabbinical Hebrew, ibid. their Letters, &c. generally in their native Language, ibid. Jews in the Morea only tranſact every Thing in Hebrew, ibid. their Sermons when, in what Language and Manner made, ibid.
Jews, their Agreements, how valid, 49. three Witneſſes make any Agreement ſo, ibid. their Witneſſes, how unexceptionable, ib. their chief Rabbi Judge of all Differences among them, ibid. whereon he grounds his Opinion, ibid. Jews ſubject to the State where they reſide in criminal Matters, ibid. Extent of the Rabbi's Authority, ib.
Jews, what Beaſts, Birds, and Fiſh they are forbidden to eat, 50. and in what Veſſels dreſſed, ib. forbidden to eat Fat, Sinews, and Blood of what Beaſts, ib. their Manner and Caution in killing of Animals, 51. Precepts concerning killing and eating them, ib. which relate not to Fiſh, ib. may not eat Fleſh and Milk at the ſame Meal, nor dreſs them in the ſame Veſſel, ib. their Veſſels particularly marked, ib. never eat Cheeſe unleſs they have firſt ſeen it in Curds, and why, 51, 52. not allowed to drink Wine made by any but Jews, and why, ib. this Rule not obſerved by them all, ib. Grace pronounced at their Drinking, ib.
Jews, their way of making Bread, 52. waſh their Hands before eating, 52. ſay a Pſalm at ſitting down to Table, ibid. their manner of breaking Bread, ib. forbidden to tread upon it, ib. waſh their Hands after eating, and Ceremonies after it, ib.
Jews, their Veneration for the Sabbath, and why, 55. have reduced Things prohibited on the Sabbath to thirty nine Heads, and what, ib. and 56. may not touch Fire on the Sabbath, ib. nor dreſs or eat of Meat dreſs'd, ib. nor carry Burthens, ib. nor talk of Buſineſs, ib. nor take in their Hands any Thing forbidden to be uſed that Day, ib. nor walk above a Mile out of Town, ib. nor handle Money, ride, &c. ibid. and with Difficulty allow of a Surgeon's Aſſiſtance, ib. make their Preparations for the Sabbath on Friday, ibid. and 57. their Notion of honouring the Sabbath 57. Time when their Sabbath begins, ibid. then put on clean Linen, and waſh their Hands and Face, and go to the Synagogue, ib. their Salutation thereon, ib. and Behaviour afterwards, ib. riſe late on the Sabbath, ib. their Prayers, Praiſes, Leſſons, and other Ceremonies at the Synagogue, ib. believe the damned do not ſuffer on the Sabbath, ib. and 58. farther Particulars concerning it, 208. & ſeq.
Jews, their Prieſts, who admitted ſuch, their Office and Prerogatives, 39. not allowed to marry a divorced Woman, ib.
Jews, their Studies and Academies, 45, 197. they chiefly ſtudy the Gemara or Talmud, 45. diſpute immethodically, and with much Noiſe, ib. their Times of diſputing, ib. Riſe and Account of their Talmud. Rabbi Juda Author of the Miſna or Text of it, ib. two Talmuds, the Babyloniſh, and that of Jeruſalem, ib. Talmud prohibited by ſome Popes, 46.
Jews, Creation, Authority, Titles, and Office, of their Rabbi's, 46, 198. Excommunication, how performed by them, and its Effects, ib. and 47.
Jews, their Manner of keeping the Paſſover, 60, 61, 62, 215 to 218.
Jews, their Faſts, Manner of obſerving them, 67, &c. 204, 222.
Jews, their Oaths and Vows, 47, 205. forbidden to ſwear in vain and lie, 47. Vows not approved of among them, but they are obliged to fulfil them, ib. in what caſes they have a Power of diſpenſing with them, ib.
Jews, their Trade and Uſury, 48. obliged to obſerve the Rules of Commerce preſcribed in the Scripture, ib. forbidden to deceive Chriſtians, ib. and 49. why they are become Uſurers, ib. allow themſelves to take Uſury of Chriſtians, from a Paſſage in the Pentateuch, but unjuſtly, and why, ib.
Jews, how they compute their Months, 59. celebrate the Feſtival of New-Year's-Day in Tiſri or September, and why, 63. their Salutation on this Day, ib. believe God judges the Actions of the laſt Year on this Day, ib. their Penance of the Month Elul, ibid. 211. their Manner of celebrating their New-Year's-Day, ib.

INDEX.

and 212. their intercalary Month, 59. their Calendar, 224 to 232.

Jews, their Chipur or Day of Expiation, their ſtrict Obſervation of it, 64. eat heartily on the Eve of this Faſt, ib Synagogue then illuminated, ib. farther Particulars concerning it, 213, 215.

Jews, their unlawful Converſation with Women of how many ſorts, 50. forbidden to converſe with a Woman during her Courſes, 74.

Jews, obliged to marry, 74. at what Age, ib. are allow'd Plurality of Wives, ib. whom they may take for Wives, ib. Widow, or Woman divorced, when allowed to marry, ib. their Manner of betrothing and marrying, 74, to 76. are often betrothed for Years, 75. particular Days for marrying Maids and Widows, ib. Bride bathes on her wedding Night, Ceremonies at and after the Wedding, ib. and 76. farther Particulars relating to this Head, 224 to 226.

Jews, Manner of their Women obtaining a Divorce, 76. debauching a Maid, are obliged to marry, or give her a Sum of Money, ib. farther Particulars and Reflections relating to Divorces, 239, 240.

Jews, their Women whilſt impure cannot converſe with their Husbands, 76. muſt afterwards bathe, and how, ib. and 235. muſt do the ſame Things at and after their Lyings-In, 77.

Jews, their Jealouſy and Divorces, 77, 239. Wives ſuſpected, how treated, ib. may divorce their Wives on the leaſt Diſlike, and how prevented, ib. Form of their Divorces, and Manner of performing it, ib. and 78.

Jews, their Ilum or Caltza, what, and Manner of performing it, 79, 80, 241.

Jews, their Circumciſion, 80. Congratulation on the Birth of a Son, ib. Time of their Circumciſion, ib. Ceremonies before, at, and after it, 81, 82, 233, 234.

Jews, their redeeminng of their Firſt-born, 82, 235. who eſteemed ſuch, ib. the Ceremony of it, ib. Levites not bound to redeem, ib.

Jews, in what they inſtruct their Children, and how, 82, 235. at what Age Jews are accounted Men and Women, and Conſequences thereof, ib. 235, 236.

Jews, their Reſpect to Relations and others, 83. think themſelves obliged to honour their Parents, an elder Brother or Mother-in-Law, thoſe who have inſtructed them in Religion, all learned and pious Men, and the aged, ib. and 84.

Jews, their Feaſts of Tabernacles, or Succoth, 65. Exactneſs of the Rabbi's as to the Nature and Form of theſe Tabernacles, ib. Manner of celebrating this Feſtival, ib. and 66. Time of its Continuance, ib. farther Particulars concerning it, 218, 219.

Jews, their Synagogues, 117. had many in Jeruſalem, and their Uſe, ib. were Places for Trials and Judgments, ib. how diſpoſed, ib. and 118. how dedicated, 118. their different ſorts, 119. Conformity of the Chriſtian Churches and Synagogues, 119, 120, 121. their Manner of making a Doctor, 120. Offices belonging to the Synagogue, 120, 121. farther Particulars concerning it, 195, 196. Service of the Synagogue, 34, to 36.

Jews, their Prayers, 33, 34, 200, 202, 203. and the Conformity of them with thoſe of the Chriſtians, 121, 122, 123. have a great Number of Prayers, and what, 122. have affixed Time for public Prayer, 36, 121. which ſort of their Prayers condemned by Chriſt, and why, ib. have different ways of Praying, and what, 122. S. Auſtin's Explanation of S. Paul's Words relating thereto, ib. two Things relied on by the Jews in their Prayers, and what, ib. have Diverſity of Common-Prayer Books, ib. Subject and Order of their Prayers, ib. and 123. their Benedictions and the Conformity of them with the Chriſtian, 123, 124. by whom pronounced, 123. Paſſages of the Evangeliſts relating to Benedictions explained, ib. and 124. how many Perſons make a Congregation. 36.

Jews, think it ſinful to give Credit to any Predictions whatever, 95. or to any kind of Divination or Witchcraft, ib. or to cut their Skin and colour it, ib. their Behaviour and Practice with regard to Proſelytes, ibid.

Jews, their Injunctions upon Women, 96. their Practices in Regard to Slaves, 97. their kind of Confeſſion, and when and how performed, ib. their Days of Penance, when, ib. they eſteem it a good Work to viſit and aſſiſt the Sick, 98. their Behaviour in Sickneſs, ib. ſit up with the Sick, and wherefore, ib. throw away all the Water in the Houſe of any dead Perſon, ib. their Practice in Regard to the Dead, and at Funerals, 98, 99.

Jews dying, their Cuſtoms, 230. their Mourning, Prayers, and Commemoration of their Dead, 100. their Notions of Paradiſe, Hell, and Purgatory, 101. their Belief as to Tranſmigration of Souls, Reſurrection, and Day of Judgment, ib. their thirteen Articles of Faith, ib. and 102.

Jews and Chriſtians agree in the Foundation of their Religion, viz. Scripture and Tradition, 105. their Belief as to Tradition, and the Manner of its being handed down, ib. but falſe, and why, ib. Opinion of our Saviour concerning the Jewiſh Traditions explained, 106. and of the Apoſtles, ib. and of the Council of Trent, ibid. Rule to be obſerved in Regard to Tradition, ib. Jews cannot agree from whom they received their Traditions, 107. their Way of ſalving the Difficulties in their Chain of Succeſſion, ib. but improbable, ib. they impoſe on the World without Fear or Shame, ibid.

Jews, their Theology, 108. their Articles of Faith, ib. and 188, 189, 190. Reflexions thereon, 108, 109. their Divinity over-run with Allegories and Fables, and the Reaſons of it, 109. altered by the Study of the Ariſtotelian Philoſophy, ib. their vain Notion of God's Preference to themſelves, ib. their Doctrine concerning Angels, ib. and 110. Account of their Cabala, ib. they believe a Hell, Paradiſe, and Purgatory, ibid. their Opinion of Nations not receiving their Law, ib. Jewiſh and Chriſtian Religion eſſentially the ſame, 111.

Jews, their Morality compared with the Chriſtian, 112. the Decalogue, the Baſis of that of the Chriſtian, ib. their Morality conſiſts not of Ceremony only, ib. have reformed their Doctrines upon the Writings of the Chriſtians, ib. Cauſe of their Wickedneſs in theſe latter Ages, 115. and of their Uſury, ib. their Charity to their Brethren, ib.

Jews, their Commandments, Ordinances, and Judgments, 113. into how many Precepts they divide the Law, ib. different Opinions concerning their Number, and Riſe of them, 114. another Diviſion of theſe Precepts, and abſurd Reaſons thereof, ib. another Diviſion into Precepts, Statutes, and Judgments; and Explanation of it, ib. obey the Commands of their wiſe Men likewiſe, and why, ib. and 115.

Jews, their Sanhedrim, its Riſe and Number, Preſident, Vice-Preſident, and Senators, 115. where held, ibid. who admitted into it, ib. and 116. its great Power and Authority, 116. and how long it laſted, 117. Explanation of ſome Circumſtances on this Subject, with relation to what is obſerved among Chriſtians, ib. and 117. Infallibility aſcribed by the Jews to their Sanhedrim, 116.

Jews, their Feſtivals, and the Conformity of them with the Chriſtian, 126, to 128.

Jews, their State and Government after the Deſtruction of Jeruſalem, 128, to 130. kept to the ſame Diſcipline as before, and in what Manner, 128. Riſe of the Talmud, and the Manner in which it was compoſed, 129. Miſna, Gemara, Toſiphetot, Barajetot, what, ibid. their two Talmuds, an Account of them, ib. and 130. full of uſeleſs Queſtions and Fables, ib. and Riſe of them, 130, 131. Reflexions on their Succeſſion of Doctors, who came after their Talmud, 130. Riſe of thoſe ridiculous Traditions contained therein, 131, 132. their local Practices and Cuſtoms, 132.

Jews, their Books for the Uſe of the Synagogue, what, how prepar'd and written, 133, 134. not accented, nor illuminated, ib. their chief Study, ib. their Method of inſtructing their Children, ib. and of diſputing, ib. why ſuch Bigots, ib.

Jews, their Writings, and how far uſeful to Chriſtians, 135. their Miſna and Gemara of little Uſe, ib. their Books of Divinity, how far uſeful, and ſome Account of them, ib. Account of their Writings of the Cabala, and Reflexions thereon, ib. and 137. their Philoſophy, Logic, and Metaphyſics borrowed from Ariſtotle, and how far their Writings thereon uſeful, 137. boaſt of ſome Works of Ariſtotle, which are not in Greek, ibid. their Mathematics and Medicine, and whence derived, ib. their Arithmetic, Geometry, Aſtronomy, and Aſtrology, ib. their Calendar, how regulated, 138. their Books of Phyſic Tranſlations only, and from whom, ib. their Treatiſes in Chirurgery and Botany, ib. Rhetoric and Poetry neglected by them, ib. their Writers of Hiſtory and Chronology wretched, 139, &c. their Grammarians learned and ſubtil, and the

Time

INDEX.

Time of their flouriſhing, 149. their modern Grammarians of little Uſe, ib. their moſt celebrated Grammarians, who, ib.

Jews, their Diſperſion, 166. their own and the Chriſtians Idea of it, ib. and 167 Eldad, and other Hiſtorians, their fabulous Accounts of their Settlement and Sovereignty ſince, ib. and 168.

Jews turn Fortune-Tellers, and why, 168.

Jews, their Number baniſhed out of France, 171, 172.

Jews accuſed of poiſoning the Waters, and obliged thereon to turn Chriſtians, 171, 172.

Jews, Treatment and Perſecutions of them ſince the laſt Revolution of Jeruſalem, under the Emperor Veſpaſian, 168 to 173.

Jews, Crimes imputed to them, 173. crucifying Children, and receiving the Heart of them at their Communion, ib. Witchcraft and Sorcery, 174 abuſing the Hoſt, ib. Miracle relating thereto, ib. ſcourging Crucifixes, and prophaning Images and Croſſes, ib. poiſoning Springs and Rivers, 175. Treaſons and Rebellions, ib.

Jews, their Impoſtors and falſe Meſſiahs, 175, 176.

Jews, Puniſhments and diſgraceful Diſtinctions impoſed on them, 177 to 180.

Jews, Laws of Princes, and Decrees of the Church againſt them, 177 to 180.

Jews in the utmoſt Contempt amongſt the Mahometans, 179.

Jews obliged to pay a Florin an Hour for their Reſidence at Augsburg, 179. allowed to ſtay but three Hours at Trent, and why, ib.

Jews puniſhed for their Fidelity to their Prince, 179. Reflexion thereon. ib.

Jews, their Saints, and the Miracles performed by them, 180 to 182.

Jews Chineſe, their particular Tenets and Practices, 185, &c.

Jews, their religious Ceremonies whilſt travelling, 241.

Jews preſent the Pope with a Copy of their Law at his taking Poſſeſſion, 306.

Jews heretical. V. Caraites, Samaritans.

Ignatius S. his Hiſtory, 400.

Ignorance, Mother of barbarous Devotion, 1.

Ilicet, a Form, what, and when uſed, 25.

Images, Benediction of them, 355. Image-Worſhip, Riſe of it, ib. Images almoſt as antient as Religion, ib. owing to human Weakneſs, ib. the holy Trinity and Angels, how repreſented, ib. and 356. Notions and Practice of the Heathens, in regard to their Demi-Gods, and the Roman Catholics in regard to their Saints, the ſame, ib. but cenſured, ib. miraculous Effects of Images, ib.

Images miraculous, of our Lady, 410, 411.

Impudence of the Jews, in impoſing their Fictions on Mankind, 107.

Impurity contracted by Dreams, how cleanſed away, 10.

Impurities among the Jews, how waſhed away, ib.

Incenſing an Altar, V. Altar.

Indians, conſecrated no Temples to their Gods, 3.

Indians of Peru, never entered the Temple of the Sun, but barefooted, 14.

Indians pray to their Pagods barefooted, 14.

Indians Eaſt, turn round at their Prayers, 19.

Indian Temples built in Woods and Fields, 3.

Indulgences, the Touchſtone of Faith, 417, 418. N. [a] Riſe of them, ib. Definition of them, 418. Wonders wrought by them, ib. Abuſes of them, ib. and 419, 420. N. [b]

Infallibility, aſcribed to the Jewiſh Sanhedrim, as well as to the Councils of the Chriſtian Church, 115.

Innocent III. a Saying of his, 298.

Inſcription in the Temple of the Samaritans, concerning Phineas, 93.

Inſpiration, what, 291. N. [b]

Inſtrument of Peace, its Inſtitution to whom aſcribed, 331. N. [b]

Inſtruments of Piety, their Virtue and Miracles, 420. V. Chaplet, Roſary, Scapulary, Girdles of St. Francis and St. Auſtin.

Intrigues carried on in the Conclave, 291.

Inventions human in Religion, produce Irreligion in ſome, and Bigotry in others, 2.

Invocation of Saints, to what owing, 387.

Io Pæan, Etymology of it, 2.

Io Pæan, a Prayer addreſſed to Apollo, not underſtood by the Heathens who uſed it, 2.

Job, full of the boldeſt and ſublimeſt Figures, 145.

Jochanan, a Jewiſh Saint, his ridiculous Piety, 181.

John XXIII. Pope, a bitter Enemy and Perſecutor of the Jews, 172.

John Baptiſt S. his Blood boils on his Feſtival, 445.

Jonas, a Rabbi and Grammarian, 140.

Joſeph S. Patron of Joiners and Carpenters, 427.

Joſippon Ben Gorion, a Jewiſh Hiſtory cenſured, 140.

Iſaac de Caſtro of Tartas, a Jewiſh Saint and Martyr, 181.

Iſaiah, the moſt eloquent of all the Prophets, 145.

Italy, Spain, and Portugal, ſwarm with Fraternities, 426.

Italy, famous for the Blood of Martyrs, 445.

Jubilee, its Origin, 412. its Advantages under the Jewiſh and Chriſtian Oeconomy, ib. Author of its Inſtitution, and his Deſign therein, ib. Conformity of it with the Ludi Seculares of the Romans, ib. and 413. Opinion of two Roman Catholic Writers thereon, ib. different Times of its Celebration, 412, 413. Decrees of Popes concerning it, 412, 413. Power it gives to Confeſſors, 414, 415. Ceremonies relating to it, 413, 414, 415, 416.

Juda the Believer, V. Lopez de Vera.

Juda, a Rabbi and Grammarian, 140.

Juda the Holy, a Jewiſh Saint, Miracles wrought at his Funeral, 181.

Judgment laſt, Opinion of the Jews concerning it, 104.

Julios preſented to the Pope, and why, 302.

Juno Lacinia, her Temple built in Woods, 3.

Jupiter, how worſhipped on the Mountains of Bithynia, 3.

Jupiter, the Oak appropriated to him, 22.

Juſtinian, his Rigour againſt the Jews, 169.

K.

Keys of the Church of St. John de Lateran, of what Metal, and why, 308. N. [b]

Kimchi David, a Rabbi and Grammarian, 140.

Kinian Suidar, or Purchaſe of the Cloth, what, 49.

Kiſſing the Images of Saints, has obtained many Bleſſings for whole Families, 19.

Kiſſing the Hands, Mouths, Feet, and Knees, of their Gods, the Doors of the Temples, the Poſts and Pillars of the Gates, the Ground of any foreign Country, an ancient Cuſtom among the Heathens, 19. kiſſing the black Stone, and four Corners of the Kaaba, a Cuſtom amongſt the Mahometans, ib. conſecrated by Roman Catholics, on Occaſions of Ceremony.

Kiſſing the Pope's Feet, a very antient Cuſtom, 298. Reaſons alledg'd by the Catholics, in ſupport of this Cuſtom, ib.

Kiſſes thrown up to the Gods, by ſuch as could not come near them, 19.

Kneeling at Prayers, one of the moſt antient Cuſtoms in the World, 16. according to St. Baſil a Type of Sin and Grace, ib.

Kyrie Eleiſon, what, 325. Reflexion thereon, ib. N. [b]

L.

Lag, Name of a Jewiſh Feſtival, 62.

Lamps and Tapers have furniſhed Oil and Wax for many Miracles, 319. are myſterious, ib. the Cuſtom of burning them always obſerved by Jews and Gentiles, 338.

Lauds, what, 313.

Laurel, ſacred to Apollo, 22.

Laurence S. Patron of the Curriers, 426.

Laurence of Miranda S. Patron of the Druggiſts and Apothecaries, 426.

Laurence S. Patron of Merchants and Woollen-Drapers, 426.

Laurence S. Liquefaction of his Blood, 446.

Law, Purity of the Jewiſh to be learnt from the Samaritans of Sichem, 91.

Law of the Jews, V. Jews.

Laws of Princes made againſt the Jews, 177 to 179. Decrees of the Church made againſt the Jews, 178, 179.

Leo the Iſaurian, zealous in converting the Jews, 167.

Leo X. Pope, his ſcandalous Traffic of Indulgences, 419.

Leonard S. Patron of Gravers, Sculptors, and Stone-Cutters, 426.

Levita Elias, a Rabbi and Grammarian, 141.

Lewis the Debonaire favourable to the Jews, 169.

Lieſſe, a Chapel of our Lady, there famous for Miracles, 410.

Limbs, Figures of them offered to Saints, and why, 410. an Heathen Cuſtom, ib. N. [d]

Liquefactions of the Blood of Martyrs, ſeveral in Italy, 445, 446.

INDEX.

Lirinenſis Vincentius, a Writer on Traditions, 88.
Liturgy, its Signification, 145. in its Riſe plain and ſimple, ib. wherein it has ever conſiſted, ib. Account of the antient Liturgy, ib. derived from the Jews, ib. Alterations therein produced by Time, 146. Diverſity of them conſidered, ib. divided into Eaſtern and Weſtern, ib. under the Eaſtern what Liturgies included, ib. wherein the Difference between the Eaſtern and Weſtern Liturgies has chiefly conſiſted, ib. Enquiry concerning the firſt Authors of it, and the Tongues wherein it was compoſed, ib. 147, 148. Diſquiſition concerning the Liturgies of St. James, St. Baſil, and St. John Chryſoſtom, 149. Liturgies tranſlated from the Greek, ib. Reflexions upon them, ib. to 153. Cuſtom of the Eaſtern Chriſtians in celebrating Maſs, 150. & ſeq. Breviated miſtaken as to theſe Liturgies, 154. Weſtern Liturgy, Opinion concerning St. Peter being its Author groundleſs, ib. and 155. the preſent Uniformity of the Weſtern Liturgies, not always ſubſiſting, ib. attempted by Charlemagne and others, but in vain, ib. only Fragments of the Liturgies of the Weſtern Church remaining, ib. Account of the different Liturgies in Uſe in that Church, ib. 155, 156, 157. Subſtance of the Weſtern Liturgies, notwithſtanding any minute Differences has ever been the ſame, 157.
Logic of the Jews, V. Jews.
Lopez de Vera, a Jewiſh Saint and Martyr, 181. judicious Reflexions thereon, ib.
Loretto, our Lady of, Account of the Devotion of Pilgrims to her, 432. N. [c]
Love Intrigues, &c. carried on under Pretence of Devotion, 5.
Lucia S. Patroneſs of Coachmen, 426.
Ludi Seculares, deſcribed, 412. N. [c]
Luke S. Patron of the Painters, 426.
Lutheraniſm, Maimbourg's Hiſtory of, a curious Paſſage cited from it, 419. N. [b]
Luſtration by Air, how performed, and why, 25.
Luſtration by Fire, uſed by the antient Hebrews, 25. Trials by Fire-Ordeal took their Riſe from hence, ib.
Luſtration by Smoke, how made, and of what, 25.
Luſtrations Nuptial, 25. by Blood, ib. with Fruits, Dogs, Cats, and other Animals, ib. Aſperſions with Laurel, Olive, Roſemary, Hyſſop Branches, ſo many Luſtrations, ib.

M.

Mahometans, modeſt and humble at their Prayers, 7.
Mahometans, in their Prayers turn to the South, and why, 17.
Mahometans abſtain from Women at the Time of their Devotions, 9.
Mahometans, all Sorts of them practiſe Ablutions with great Care and Exactneſs, 11.
Mahometans favour the Jews, 170.
Mahometan Perſecutions of the Jews, neither ſo violent nor general as the Chriſtian, 170, 171.
Maimonides, a Jewiſh Saint, fabulous Hiſtory of him, 180.
Maimonides Moſes, a Jewiſh Rabbi and Commentator on the Talmud, 131.
Manzerim, or Baſtards, who eſteemed ſo among the Jews, 86.
Margarite S. her Devotion to the Virgin Mary, 407.
Married Women, their Feet waſhed, and why, 11.
Martha S. Patroneſs of the Pope's Officers, 392.
Mary of the Oak S. Patroneſs of Butchers, 426.
Mary Tranſpontina S. Patroneſs of the Bombardeers, 427.
Mary in Capella S. Patroneſs of the Coopers, 427.
Maſquerades, Stage Drolleries, Penitents, and Buffoons, an odd Jumble in Religion, 21.
Maſs, Ceremonies of it, 323. regarded by the Catholics as the moſt excellent of Adorations, and effectual of Prayers, ib. its Derivation, ib. N. [a] effectual though celebrated by a wicked Prieſt, ib. N. [c] Preparations for it, 324. of what Parts compoſed, ib. the different Actions of the Prieſt at Maſs deſcribed, 324. to 333. Perſons preſent at it, how placed, 333. Poſtures required in the Congregation, ib. Rules for their devout Behaviour at it, ib. High Maſs, Solemn Maſs, Epiſcopal Maſs, 334. to 338. Solemn Maſs celebrated by the Pope, 338. to 342. Maſs for the Dead, 342. to 346. Account of ſeveral particular Maſſes, 334. Reflexion thereon, ib.
Mathematics of the Jews, V. Jews.
Matins, what, 313.
Meal, how prepared by the Jews for the unleaveſſed Bread, 60, 61.
Mecca Temple, ſome Account of it, 19.
Medicine of the Jews, V. Jews.
Medraſain, V. Zohar.
Mercy, Fraternity of, V. Fraternities.
Metaphyſics of the Jews, V. Jews.
Metempſychoſis, Opinion of the Jews concerning it, 101.
Mezuza, what, 28.
Micra, alias Scripture, 86.
Minerva, the Olive-Tree conſecrated to her, 22.
Minian, what, 83.
Miracles, more eaſy and common than in the primitive Ages, 398, 399.
Miracles of the Saints of theſe latter Ages, 398. to 403.
Miracle of our Lady of the Snow, 408.
Miſna, V. Jews.
Molinos, Author of Quietiſm, 279. Account of him, ib. his Condemnation, 280. N. [e]
Monday and Thurſday, Devotion on theſe Days, how performed by the Jews, 223, 224.
Money coined after the Pope's Death, 291. N. [a]
Monte de la guardia, our Lady of, her miraculous Image there painted by St. Luke, 411.
Morality of the Jews and Chriſtians compared, 111.
Morenu, a Title of Honour among the Jews, 46.
Mortification of the Enemies of one's Religion, a great Pleaſure when approved by the Prieſts, 169.
Moſes, a Jewiſh Grammarian, 140.
Moſes, Maſter of the greateſt Perſpicuity of Stile, 145.
Motawakel, his Laws againſt the Jews, 177.
Murther, how atoned for among Idolaters, 10.
———————— among Chriſtians, 10.
Muſic in religious Worſhip, a general Cuſtom from the remoteſt Ages, 20. thought by the antient Heathens to appeaſe their Deities, ib. conſecrated to Religion by Jews and Chriſtians, ib. uſed by the Romans, Grecians, and Egyptians at their religious Exerciſes, ib. Muſic of the Jews, 21. of the primitive Chriſtians, ib. too many Graces in it ſtifle Devotion, ib. Muſic and Dances of the Americans, their chief Religion, ib. Inſtances of the Power of Muſic, ib.
Myrtle ſacred to Venus, 22.

N.

Nabardea, a famous Jewiſh Academy on the Euphrates, 107.
Names of the Virgin Mary, V. Virgin Mary.
Neubourg, a famous Image of our Lady there, 411.
Nicolas of Valencia zealous againſt the Jews, 170.
Nola S. Peter of, his Hiſtory, 399.
None, what, 313.

O.

Oak, ſacred to Jupiter, 22.
Olive Tree, ſacred to Minerva, 22.
Onuphrius, his Compariſon of the Jubilee with the Ludi Seculares of the Romans, 413.
Oral Law, a commode Invention for ſupporting Punctilio's, 184.
Orators Jewiſh, who, 145.
Order in Rome during the Conclave, 293.
Order of Proceſſions preſcribed by the Church, 426.
Ordination derived from the Jews, 120.
Oſcillation, a kind of Purification, how performed, 25.
Our Lady of Purity, Patroneſs of the Trainbearers, 426.
Our Lady of Loretto, Patroneſs of the Bakers, 427.

P.

Pagods Indian, built near the Ganges, and why, 10.
Painters, their Ignorance and Blunders in repreſenting Chriſt, 118.
Palm-Branch, preſented to the Prieſt by the Deacon on Palm-Sunday, kiſſed by the latter, 20.
Pan, Alder-Tree ſacred to him, 22.
Pantaleon S. Patron of the Furriers, 427.
Paradiſe, Jewiſh Idea of it, 101.
Parnaſſim, or Memunin, among the Jews, who, 48.
Pavia Cardinal of, his Opinion concerning the Conformity of the Jubilee, with the Ludi Seculares of the Romans, 413.
Peace Eccleſiaſtical, a nice and tender Affair, 285.
Penance Jewiſh, how performed, 204.

INDEX.

Penance, modern different from that of the primitive Chriſtians, 429. Deſcription of a modern Penitent, ib. and 430. Penance done by Proxy, ib. N. [a] Abuſe of it, 430. Uſe of it, and Flagellation, 431. Reflexions thereon, ib. N. [a] Pennaforte S. Raymond, his Hiſtory, 399.

Pentateuch Hebrew-Samaritan, falſe Opinion concerning it, 94.

Pentateuch Jewiſh and Samaritan, Difference between them, 94.

Perfumes and Incenſe offered by the Antients to their falſe Gods. 22.

Perſecutions of the Jews, V. Jews.

Perſians, erected no Statues nor Altars to God, 3.

Perſians, preſerved the true Religion for a great Length of Time, 34.

Perſians, why they deſtroyed the Grecian Temples, 3.

Perſians, turned round in worſhipping, and why, 19.

Perſians, began the Day with Hymns to their Gods, 7.

Peſach, the Paſſover ſo called by the Jews, 60.

Peter S. falſly eſteemed the Author of the Roman Liturgy, 154.

Phariſees, who, believe the Metempſychoſis, and in what manner, 186. believe a Fate or Deſtiny; their Penance, ib.

Philip le Bel ruins the Jews, 172.

Philip the Bold, his Law againſt the Jews, 178.

Philoſophy of the Jews, V. Jews.

Phrygian Cap, what, 26.

Pictures ſet up in the Temples of the Gods, on what Occaſion, 23. conſecrated by Roman Catholics to ſome Saints in their Churches, as Monuments of the Miracles wrought by them, ib. theſe Offerings ſometimes of Gold and Silver, ib.

Piety, why repreſented veiled, 26.

Piety Works of, flatter the Heart of Man, and why, 441. made Advantage of by the Clergy, ib. Riſe, Progreſs, and Abuſe of them, ib. and 442.

Pilar nueſtra Sennora del, a Chapel famous for Miracles wrought by the Virgin Mary, 410.

Pinarians, V. Potitians.

Pine Tree, ſacred to Cybele, 22.

Pipe, uſed at receiving the Communion, its Riſe and Cauſe, 340. N. [b]

Pius V. Pope, baniſhes the Jews out of the Eccleſiaſtical Dominions, except Rome, and why, 172. Reflexion thereon, ib.

Places famous for the Worſhip or Miracles of the Virgin Mary. V. Virgin Mary.

Pleaſures ſenſual, how introduced into religious Worſhip, 21.

Plutarch, his Opinion on Pythagoras's Sentiment upon turning round at worſhipping, 19.

Points long and ſhort, to be obſerved in learning of Hebrew, 144.

Polygamy allowed among the Jews, 74.

Pomona, Fruits ſacred to her, 22. her Story, 24.

Pope, Succeſſor of St. Peter as Head of the Church, 116. his Supremacy, 284. Proofs of it, ib. and 285. his Spiritual Juriſdiction, 289, 290. poſſeſſes the higheſt Degree of Power and Fortune, to which a Man can be raiſed in the Eccleſiaſtic State, ib. Ceremony of adoring him after his Election, 296, 299. Ceremony of his Coronation, ib. to 303. the Entertainment formerly given him on his Coronation-Day, 303, 304. Ceremony of his taking Poſſeſſion, 304 to 307. Ceremony of his Reception at St. John de Lateran, 307. his Robes of Ceremony, 308. Ceremonies at his holding a Conſiſtory, 310 to 312. Ceremonies of his Chapel, 314. Order of Proceſſion to it, 316. Deſcription of it, 318. Solemn Maſs celebrated by him, 338. Reaſons for his wearing the Keys and triple Crown, 299, 300. preſented with twenty five Julio's, and why, 302. preſented with a Copy of the Law by the Jews, 306. their Decrees concerning the Jubilee, 412, 413.

Poplar-Tree, conſecrated to Hercules, 22.

Porters and Chanters of Churches, Riſe of them, 124.

Poſtures of the Turks at Prayers, 16 affected diſagreeable to God, ib.

Potitians and Pinarians, who, 26.

Priapus, venerable for ſome certain Faculties, 22. how worſhipped, ib. a remarkable Part of his Body crown'd, and by whom, ib. and 23. Ladies turned to Gallantry, how they ſhewed their Reſpect to Priapus, what ſacred to him, 22.

Prayer, Riſe and Occaſion of it, 2.

Prayer amongſt the antient Idolaters, how uſed, 2.

Prayer, modeſt and humble of the Mahometans, 7.

Prayers Time of, among the antient Heathens, 7.

Prayer, five Times a Day among the Mahometans, 7.

Prayers, Repetition of them abſurd, 7.

Prayer, true Idea of it, how loſt, 2.

Prieſts, uſeleſs Creatures, 5. Tricks of them, ib.

Prieſts make themſelves Maſters of the Courts of Princes, and damn People for God's Sake, 5. Inſtances of it, ibid.

Prieſts Roman Catholic, condemned to perpetual Chaſtity, Reflexion thereon, 9.

Prieſts Egyptian, abſtained from Wine and Women, 9.

Prieſts Jewiſh, abſtained from all ſtrong Liquors, 9.

Prieſts of Iſis and Cybele, abſtained from certain Meats, 9.

Prieſts of all Religions have obſerved certain Faſts and Abſtinences, 9.

Prieſts and People crowned at Religious Ceremonies, 22.

Prieſt, the being one, ſufficient Reaſon for being thought by others, and perſuading oneſelf that one is the Depoſitory of the Supreme Being, 181.

Prieſt, his Duty, 313. muſt renounce State-Intrigues, ib. and bid adieu to Gallantry, ib. and to the Ladies, ib. Reflexions on cunning Prieſts, 314.

Prieſts Heathen, practiſed Confeſſion, and how, 336. N. [c]

Prime, what, 313. Reflexion thereon, 312. N. [i]

Principle Chriſtian, of deſtroying the Body to ſave the Soul, 169.

Proceſſions of Images in Uſe among the Heathens, 8.

Proceſſions, Deſcription of ſeveral, 434 to 442. condemned by ſincere Chriſtians, 438. their Original Heathen, 439. in Uſe among the Jews, ib. ridiculous Allegations in Defence of them, ib. how Eccleſiaſtics ſhould appear at them, ib. general Order of them preſcribed by the Church, ib. always directed towards ſome Church, 440.

Proceſſion general at Rome upon the Ceremony of canonizing four Saints, 390 to 397.

Prone, or Sermon, what, 360. Ceremonies preparatory to, at, and after it, 360 to 364. Deſcription of ſome fanatic and buffoon Preachers, 361, 362. Italian Preachers, what, ib. Itinerant Preachers, ib. entertaining Reflexions on the Italian, Spaniſh, and French Way of Preaching, 361, 362, 363.

Prophets Jewiſh, animated by the Sound of muſical Inſtruments, 21.

Prophets ſacred, figurative in their Stile, 145. were the Jewiſh Orators, ib.

Proſelytes, how made among the Jews, 232.

Proſtration before the Statues of their Gods practiſed by the Romans, 15. now practiſed by the Turks, 16. by the antient Egyptians to their God Anubis, ib. by the Banians, ib. one hundred and fifty uſed by certain Monks of Cairo before they lie down to ſleep, 15.

Proteſtants cover themſelves at reading the Bible, and preaching, the contrary at ſinging Pſalms, or Prayers, 12.

Proteſtants and reformed Churches have rejected the white Colour in their Worſhip, 13.

Proverbs, Account of the Stile of them, 145.

Proviſions, how carried into the Conclave, 296.

Pſalms, Character of the Stile of them, 145.

Ptolemy Philopator, his Law againſt the Jews, 177.

Public Faith, why repreſented with a Cornucopia, and veiled, 26.

Public Notaries, in no Conſideration among the Jews, 49.

Purgatory, what the Jews think of it, 101.

Purifying the Body, not ſo troubleſome as that of the Soul, 10.

Purim, Feſtival ſo called, how obſerved by the Jews, 69, 70.

Puniſhments and Badges impoſed on the Jews, 177 to 180.

Pythagoras enjoined his Diſciples to worſhip barefooted, 13. V. Feet.

Q.

Quietiſm, an Account of its Riſe, Progreſs, and Fall, and Reflexions thereon, 274 to 280. Conformity of their Opinions with thoſe of the Beguards, 277

INDEX.

R.

Rabbanim, who, 86, 131.
Rabbi judges of Differences among the Jews, 49. his Authority extends to Excommunication only, ib.
Rabbi's Jewiſh, their Views after the Deſtruction of Jeruſalem, 129. how they account for the handing down of their Tradition, ib.
Red Hat, a Badge of Ignominy among the Jews, where, 178.
Reeds, appropriated to all River Gods, 22.
Reflexions on the Succeſſion of Jewiſh Doctors that came after the Talmud, 131.
Reflexions on the Ceremonies practiſed at the Pope's Reception into the Church of St. John de Lateran, 307. N. [d]
Reflexion on a ſcrupulous Regularity in the Obſervation of religious Ceremonies, 323.
Reflexions judicious, on the Stupidity of wearing any of the Inſtruments of Piety, 425.
Reformation Proteſtant, favourable to the Jews, 172.
Relics ever venerated by the Church, 442. Abuſe of the Devotion to them, and Reflexions thereon, 442, 443. Antiquity of this Devotion, how attempted to be proved, 442. Shrines of Relics bleſſed, 443. Oaths taken before them, ib. Directions for ſuch as viſit them, ib. Ceremony of tranſlating them, ib. muſt not be tranſlated by Laymen, 444. Miracles wrought by them, 444 to 446. Recruit of four hundred and twenty eight raiſed at Rome, in 1672. and ſince, 446. Manner of digging them out of the Catacombs, ib. Time when, and Perſons by whom performed, ib. Characteriſtics of them, ib. Cautions uſed in digging them, ib. Manner of diſpoſing them afterwards, ib. by whom named, ib. Biſhop approves them, 407. ſeveral Practices in regard to them, ib. and 408. Cuſtom of putting them under the Altar, its Riſe, 372. N. [d] Proceſſion of them, 376. Ceremony of depoſiting them, 377.
Religion external, the only one of an infinite Number of People, 2.
Religion leſs ſpiritual, when over-run with Ceremonies, 5.
Religion Jewiſh and Chriſtian eſſentially the ſame, 105.
Religion Jewiſh, Cauſe of the Change in it, 168.
Rebellion of the Jews under Veſpaſian, the Cauſes of it, ibid.
Religious Worſhip, Cuſtoms concerning it, 6.
Religious Worſhip, Law of the twelve Tables concerning it, 6.
Reſurrection, Jewiſh Idea of it, 101.
Retirements, what, and in what Place performed, 440.
Rhetoric and Poetry, neglected by the Jews, 158.
Ribaldry and Nonſenſe always an Ingredient in the Hymns of the Antients, 20.
Riſe of Temples and Prieſts, 5.
Rivers and Fountains held in high Veneration by the Romans, and why, 11.
Robes Pontifical, Ceremony of bleſſing them, 359.
Roch S. his Hiſtory, 401.
Romans for an hundred and ſeventy Years worſhipped without making any Images of their Gods, 3.
Romans, before they beſieged any Town, beſought the Gods of it to depart, 4.
Romans worſhipped the Gods at Day-Break, 6.
Romans honoured them with Praiſes on Feſtivals and other ſolemn Occaſions, 6.
Romans went in Proceſſion barefoot, 6.
Romans, began their Worſhip with the Invocation of Janus, 8.
Romans believed that Janus firſt inſtituted public Worſhip, built Temples and Altars, and was their Advocate with the Gods, 8.
Romans paid a great Reſpect to Rivers and Fountains, and why, 11.
Romans exact in their ſuperſtitious Ceremonies, 14.
Romans covered themſelves when they approached any of their Deities, 12.
Romans covered themſelves in order to move Compaſſion, 12. and in Nuptial Ceremonies, and why, ib. and in Mourning, ib.
Romans ſacrificed white Victims, and why, 12. black, and why, ib. and clothed themſelves accordingly, ib.
Romans uſed Beads to count their Prayers, 16.
Romans turned to the right in worſhipping, 19.
Romans, Grecians, and Egyptians, conſtantly had Muſic at all their religious Exerciſes, 20.
Roman Catholics, their Sentiments and Practice in regard to their Saints, the ſame as thoſe of the Heathens, in regard to their Gods and Heroes, 356. but cenſured, ibid.
Roſa the Bleſſed, her Hiſtory and Miracles, 402.
Roſary deſcribed, 421. Myſteries of it explained, ib. Directions for its Uſe, ib. Miracles wrought by it, ib. Time of celebrating the Solemnity of it, 422. Fraternity of it, ib. Proceſſion of it, 438.
Rules for changing the Altar Ornaments, V. Altar.

S.

Sabbatai Tſevi, a Jewiſh Impoſtor, Account of his Impoſture and Death, 176.
Sabbath of the Jews, V. Jews.
Sabbatites, or Sabbatarians, what, 187.
Sacrament, Proceſſion of it at Madrid deſcribed, 437. at Genoa, ib.
Sacrificers, Body, and ſometimes Head only, waſhed, 11.
Sacrifices bloody, not offered in the firſt Ages, 3.
Sacrifices, ſometimes went before Prayers, and ſometimes after them, 3.
Sadducees, their Riſe, 185. their Opinions and Doctrines, ibid.
Saints of Chriſtianity, firſt, how dreſſed, 23.
Saints of the Church, their miraculous Power, ib.
Saints of the Jewiſh Church, and their Miracles, 180 to 182.
Saints and Miracles of the Jews, V. Jews.
Saints, Patrons of particular Fraternities, V. Fraternities.
Saints, Canonization of them deſcribed, 386 to 390. Beatification the Fore-Runner of it, 387. Riſe of the Ceremony of Canonization, ibid. Invocation of them, to what owing, ibid. firſt Inſtance of a ſolemn Canonization, ibid. Canonization bears a great Affinity to the Roman Apotheoſis, ibid. Devotion paid to them, 397. various Claſſes of them, and how diſtinguiſhed, ibid. Millions of them unknown, and without a Name, ibid. Opinion of a learned Man concerning the Devotion paid to them, 398. and Ground of the Devotion to them, ibid. Idea of the Power of thoſe of the latter Ages, and Account of their Lives and Miracles, 399 to 403. Manner of devoting oneſelf to them, 403. and of their acquiring Lands, Houſes, &c. ibid. Patron Saint preferred to the reſt, 404. Exceſſes in the Devotion to them, ibid.
Solomon Iſaaki, a Jewiſh Rabbi, eſteemed for his Knowledge of the Talmud, 131.
Samaritans converſe not with their Wives during their Sabbath, 9. nor the Mahometans, ib.
Samaritans, their Riſe, and Deſcent, 90. their Memory, how revived, ibid. Places of Abode, ibid. their Temple, ibid. Time of their celebrating the Paſſover, ib. obſerve the Sabbath according to Exodus, and how, and look on it as their principal Feſtival, ib. which begins at Sun-ſet, and why, ib. offer no Sacrifice but on Mount Garizim, ibid. and 91. Difference between them and the reſt of the Jews in Obſervation of the ſame Feſtivals, 91. their Objections againſt the other Jews, ibid. have a lineal Deſcent of High Prieſts from Aaron, 92. their Characters uſed by God in writing the Law, ib. their Opinion of the Jewiſh Characters, ib. falſly ſuſpected of Sadduceiſm, and why, ib. Number of them living in the Time of Benjamin the Jew, 92. their Prieſts marry into their own Family, and why, ib. are in Poſſeſſion of Joſeph's Tomb, and of thoſe of the Prophets, Joſhua, Caleb, and others, ib. calumniated by the Jews, and why, ib. look upon the Pentateuch only as authentic, ib. but have other hiſtorical Books of the Bible among them, ib. ſpeak of Eſdras as an Impoſtor, and why, 93. Difference between the Samaritan and Jewiſh Pentateuch, 93. have Tranſlations of their Pentateuch in Arabic, and Syriac, and how written, ib. write without Vowels, 94. Sects of them, ib. further Account of them, 182, 183.
Sanhedrim of the Jews. V. Jews.
Santa Caſa, or Holy Houſe of Loretto, Deſcription of it, 432. N. [c]
Santo Volto at Lucca, deſcribed, 351.
Saturday, conſecrated to Devotion by the Jews, 7.
Saul, relieved by Muſic, 21.
Saviour S. Patron of the Sadlers, 427.
Scala Santa, going up the Steps of it a meritorious Piece of Devotion, 417. but fatiguing, 12. preſerved by whom, ib.

INDEX.

Scapulary, described, 422. its Origin and Advantages, ib. Time of its Festival, ib. Bulls and Indulgences of Popes concerning it, ib. difficult Duties of its Devotees, ib. Fraternity of it, ib. Dress of the Arch-Fraternity of it described, ib. and 423.
Scach Abbas, King of Persia, a Persecutor of the Jews, 171.
Scemona asre, Jewish Hymns, 37, 38.
Scents bad, the Sign of a Jew, 179. how taken away, ib.
Sciamus, who, 121, 200.
Scrutiny, what, 294. N. [b].
Scruples imbibed from a Religious Principle are of a vast Extent, 22.
Sea-shore, why Devotions paid there, 10.
Sebastian S. Patron of the Mercers, 426.
Seboreans, who, 131.
Serpent, strange Tradition of the Rabbinist Jews concerning it, 87.
Severus, treated the Jews with Lenity, 169.
Sexte, what, 313.
Shepherds Fanatic, headed by a Priest and a Monk, destroy the Jews without Mercy, 171.
Shoes Violet-coloured, an ignominious Distinction of the Eastern Jews, 179.
Shoes, Friars left at the Door to gives the Husband Notice not to disturb his Wife's Devotions, 433. N. [i] Sicyonians, how they worshipped, 3.
Signs external, Cause of religious Worship, 1.
Signs external, by Custom grow into the essential Part of Religion, 11.
Signs are to fix our Attention on the Thing signified by them, 12.
Simcha tora, what, 66.
Simon of Emesa, his Manner of converting a Jewish Glass-Maker, 169. N. [c]
Sixtus V. Pope, his Reason for allowing the Jews to live in Rome, 172.
Slaves, Customs of the Jews concerning them, 97.
Societies of the Jews for distributing Alms, 40, 41.
Societies for Devotion, V. Scapulary, Rosary, Girdles of S. Francis, S. Austin, S. Monica, S. Francis of Paula.
Sorbonne, a Doctor of it grosly mistaken in his Opinion of the Caraites, 87.
Spanish Jews, pronounce the Hebrew best, 143.
Spanish Visigoth Kings, Enemies to the Jews, 170.
Spaniards, their Character, 436.
Spouses of the Law among the Jews, what, 66.
Staff Pastoral, of the Bishop a Type, 374. N. [d]
Staff of the Pilgrims, the Occasion of a World of pretty Thoughts, 433. N. [e]
Stephen II. Pope, the first carried on Mens Shoulders, 298. N. [a].
Steps of a Temple must be odd, and why, 14.
Stock Simon, General of the Carmelites, Patron of the Devotees of the Scapulary, 422. read General instead of Commander, ib. received the Scapulary from the Virgin Mary, ib.
Stone-Foundation of a Church, Ceremony of blessing it, 370, 371.
Stor-junkare, a Lapland Deity worshipped on Mountains, 4.
Strictness childish, of the Jews in the Observation of their Sabbath, 7.
Strings blue, a Mark of Ignominy imposed on the Jewish Women, 179.
Studies of the Jews. V. Jews.
Sunday, consecrated by Christians to Devotion, 7.
Sursum corda, Reflexion thereon, 328. N. [b]
Sylva, a Jewish Saint saved from burning by a Tempest, 181.
Sylvester S. Patron of the Vintners, 426.
Synagogue. V. Jews.
Synod Provincial, what, and how often to be held, 288. who has a Right to call it, and how called, ib. order of holding it, ib. Ceremonies before and after it, ib.

T.

Tabernacles Feast of, V. Jews.
Taled, or Jewish Veil, its Form and Use, 200.
Talmide Hakamim, who, 118.
Talmud of the Jews, how many, and how formed, 129, 130. Use of the Talmud, 86. V. Jews.
Talmudists, their Opinion concerning the Beginning of the World, 63.
Tartars began the Day with Hymns to the Sun, 7.
Tau, Greek Letter, what it signified among the Egyptians, 346.
Teffilin, or Forehead-Pieces, what, and how worn, 36, 200, 201.
Temples, none in the earliest Ages, 2.
Temples Egyptian, why built on the Borders of the Nile, 10.
Temples Christian, none built till Constantius's Time, 119.
Tetragrammaton, how written by the Jews, how by the Caraites, and why, 90.
Thales, cured of the Plague by Music, 21. N. [d]
Theodardus S. the incorrect and frivolous Writer of his Life, his Charge against the Jews, 175.
Theodosius, his Indulgence to the Jews, 169.
Thomas S. Patron of Clerks, and other Writers, 426.
Thomas a Becket S. his History, 402.
Thomas Aquinas S. Patron of the Booksellers, 427.
Thor, a God of the Germans sacrificed to every Thursday, 6.
Throne pontifical, Custom of covering it with rich Stuffs very antient, 320. its primitive Place, ib. Reflexions thereon, ib. N. [f]
Tierce, what, 313.
Toledo Archbishop of, persecutes the Jews, 170. N. [b]
Tosiphetot. V. Jews.
Trees, the tallest consecrated to the Gods, 2.
Trees, what, appropriated to particular Gods, 22.
Traditionaries Jewish, their extraordinary Privileges, 181. V. Jews.
Traditions of the Jews, when collected into a Body, 129, 130, 131, &c.
Trent, Jews allowed to stay but three Hours there, and why, 179.
Triregne, or Pope's Triple Crown, its Rise, 299. N. [b] and [c]. Description of it, 302. N. [l]
Turbant Violet coloured, an ignominious Badge imposed on the Eastern Jews, 179.
Turning round, still observed at Mass, 19. and why. ib.
Turning round in Worship, a Custom among the Heathens, 19. recommended by Pythagoras, ib. Plutarch's and M. Dacier's Opinion thereon, ib. Romans turned to the Right, the Gauls to the Left, ib. Indians observe the same, ib. Pythagoras recommended turning round in Worshiping, 19.
Turks detest black as an ill Omen, but esteem white and green as sacred, 13. have forbidden Jews and Christians to wear green, but allow them black and yellow, ibid.
Turkish Religion much indebted to the Jewish, 12.
Turks put of their Shoes to pray, 14.
Turks pray with downcast Eyes, 15.
Twelve Tables, Law of it concerning religious Worship, 5.
Tyrtæus, animated the Lacedæmonians by Music, 21. N. [d]

V.

Vayrac Abbot, his Character of the Spaniards, 436.
Veiazin, a Jewish Hymn, 37.
Veils, their Origin, 12.
Veils, of what Colour, and why, 12.
Venant S. Patron of the Upholders, 427.
Venus, Myrtle consecrated to her, 22.
Version Samaritan of the Pentateuch, what, 94.
Vertumnus, Hay sacred to him, 22. his history, 24.
Vespers, what, 313.
Vessels and Instruments of the Altar described. V. Altar.
Villany, Enthusiasm, and Bigotry, Causes of Persecution in Matters of Religion, 173.
Vincent S. Patron of Car-men, 426.
Violence in Matters of Religion, considered by the Vulgar as Acts of Religion against the Enemies of their Belief, 177. N. [d]
Virgil Polydore, his Opinion concerning the Conformity of the Jubilee, with the ludi sæculares, 413. N. [c]
Virgin Mary, Devotion paid to her, 405. her Names, ib. ridiculous Opinion as to the Devotion to her, ib. Rise of this excessive Devotion, 406. Sorts of Devotion to her, ib. Books written on this Devotion, ib. N. [f] Festivals instituted in honour of her, 407, to 410. Places famous for her Worship or Miracles, 410, 411. her Relics, what remaining, and where, 411, 412.
Visitation of Churches by Pilgrims, 416. its End and Advantage, ib. and 417.
Vitruvius, his Direction concerning the Steps of a Temple, and the Reason of it, 14.
Vitus S. Liquefaction of his Blood, 410.
Unity of a Supreme Being, a Point generally granted by the Heathens, 20.

INDEX.

Vows and Pilgrimages to Saints and Martyrs, Abuſe of them, 431, to 434. famous Pilgrimages, 432, 433. Ceremonies of them, ib. performed by Proxy, 430.
Uſury Jewiſh. V. Jews.

W.

Warlike Implements, Ceremony of bleſſing them, 359, 360.
Warrior Holy, Ceremony of bleſſing him, 359, 360.
Waters poiſon'd by the Jews, 175.
Waſhing of Feet, on what Occaſions, 11.
Waſhing Head and Hands, 11.
Waſhing Hands, 11.
Water luſtral, why uſed, 10. a Hint for Holy-Water among Roman Catholics, ib.
Water Holy, a Memento to Chriſtians, 10. clean Heart preferable to all Aſperſions with it, ib.
Water of the Sea eſteemed for Luſtrations, 10.
Water Holy, its Uſe, 360. ſprinkling with it, an Heathen Cuſtom, ib. N. [d]
Wheat Ears, ſacred to Ceres, 22.
Wheel, Caps and long Sleeves, Badges of Ignominy impoſed on the Jews, 179.
Women Jewiſh, what Injunctions oblige them, 96.
Woman, during her Courſes not to be converſed with, 74. what ſtiled a Husband-killer, ib.
Women devout, prayed with their Hair untied, 15.
Witchcraft, unlawful among the Jews, 95. V. Jews.
Worſhip of Images, its Riſe, 355.
Worſhip religious, external Signs, one Cauſe of it, 1.
Worſhip religious extravagant, where Supreme Being unknown, 1.
Worſhip public, Conditions admitting to, or excluding from it, among the Romans, 8.
Worſhip public, of the Romans began with Janus, and concluded with Veſta, 8, 9.
Worſhip religious, what falſly ſo called, 1.
Writings of the Jews. V. Jews.

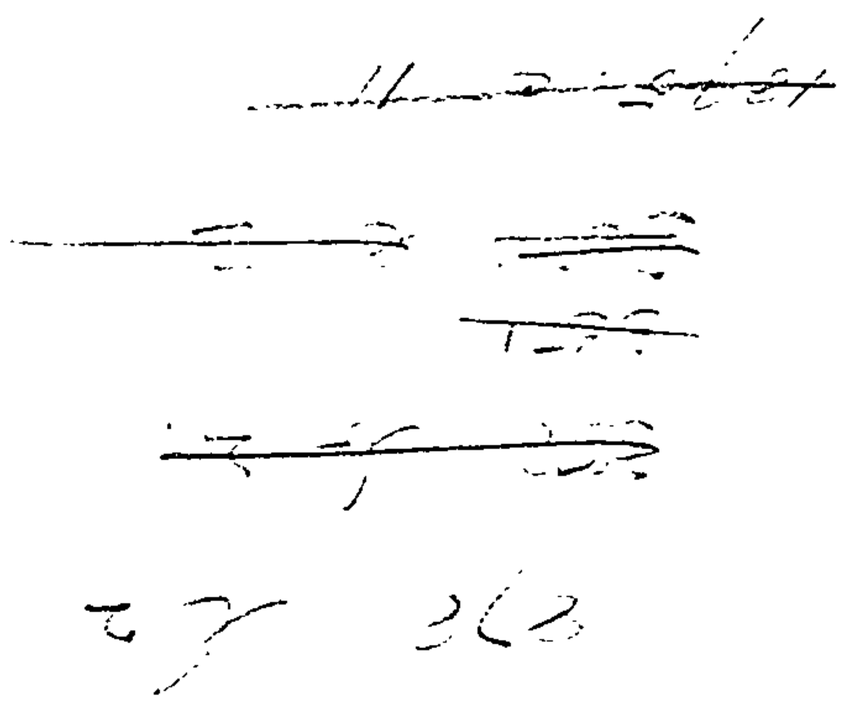
X.



Xaverius S. Francis, his Hiſtory, 42.
Xenocrates, heal'd Madneſs with Muſic, 21. N. [a]

Z.

Zedaca, Hebrew Word, its Signification, 41. N. [c]
Zedekias, a Jew, famous for ſwallowing Carts, Horſes and their Drivers, 175.
Zekenim, who, 118.
Zecotora, People of it worſhip in Groves, 3.
Zohar and Medraſcim, famous Jewiſh Commentaries of little Uſe to Chriſtians, 136.
Zizith, or Taſſels, its Form and Uſe deſcribed, 200, 201.

H E. 69

Institution - Asperiores - Regeneration p. 25
Animal Expenditure Innovation Air Liberty Atlantic Continent Ice Bridge Mountain Valley - Ice Fuel - Gas Prison - Continent Mobile Battle.

THE

CEREMONIES

AND

RELIGIOUS CUSTOMS

OF THE

ROMAN CATHOLICS, &c.

VOLUME the SECOND.

THE

CEREMONIES

AND

RELIGIOUS CUSTOMS

Warren OF THE Hastings

VARIOUS NATIONS of the KNOWN WORLD;

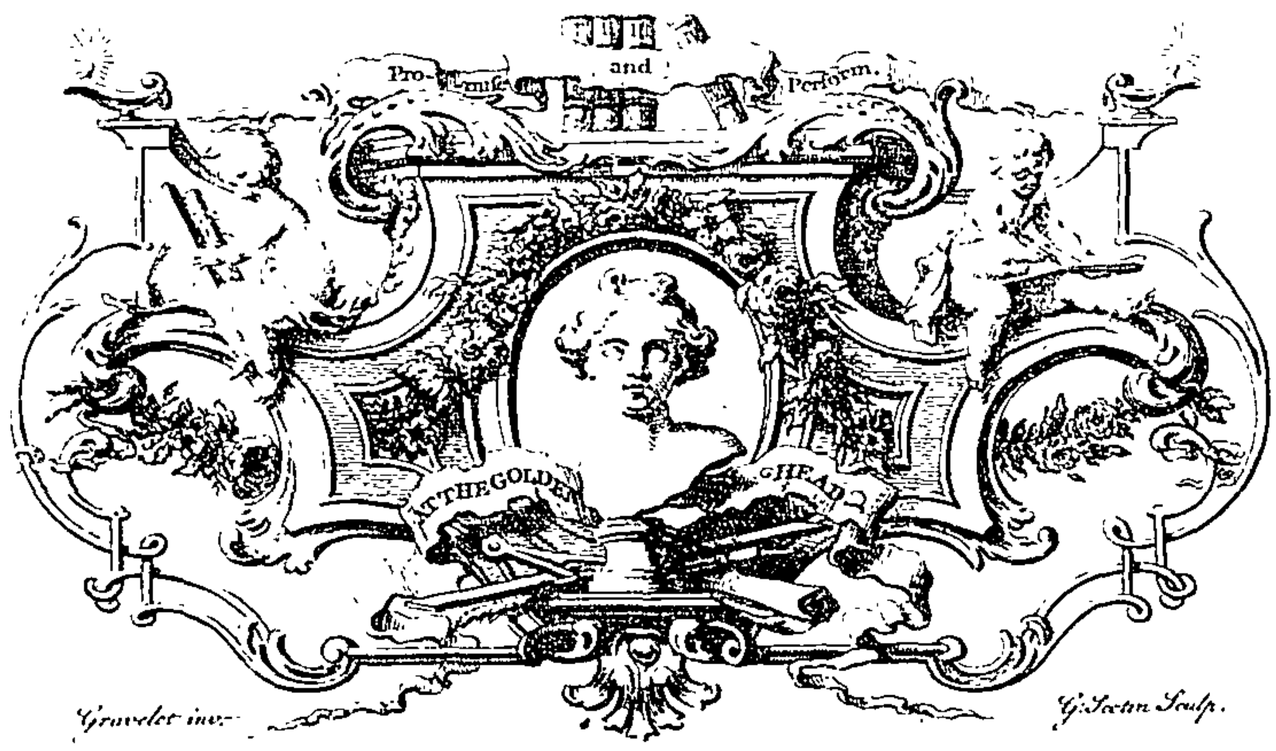
Together with

HISTORICAL ANNOTATIONS

And several

CURIOUS DISCOURSES

Equally Instructive and Entertaining.



VOL. II.

A Continuation of the DISSERTATIONS concerning the Customs and RELIGIOUS CEREMONIES of the ROMAN CATHOLICS.

Written originally in FRENCH, and illustrated with above One Hundred and Seventy Folio COPPER PLATES, all beautifully Designed

By Mr. BERNARD PICART,

And curiously Engraved by most of the BEST HANDS in EUROPE.

LONDON:

PRINTED by WILLIAM JACKSON, for CLAUDE DU BOSC, Engraver at the Golden-Head in Charles-Street, Covent-Garden.

MDCCXXXIV.

THE CONTENTS

OF THE

SECOND VOLUME.

BEING

A Continuation of the DISSERTATIONS concerning the CUSTOMS and RELIGIOUS CEREMONIES of the ROMAN CATHOLICS.

PART IV.

CONTAINING the Feſtivals, Sacraments, and other Ceremonies of the Catholic Church, Page 1
The Roman Calendar, of Feaſts and Stations throughout the Year 5
January, ibid.
February, 8
March, 10
The Lent Stations, 12
The Ceremony of giving the Aſhes, 13
Carnival, or Shrove-Tide, Lent, and Ember-Weeks, 14
The Ceremony of bleſſing the Golden-Roſe, 16
The Ceremonies of Palm-Sunday, 17
The Proceſſion of the Hoſt to the Sepulchre, 19
The Manner of uncovering the Altar, 20
The Excommunication pronounced on Holy Thurſday, 21
The Ceremony of waſhing the Feet of the Poor, ibid.
The Bleſſing of the Oils, 24
The Adoration of the Croſs, 25
Proceſſions on Good-Friday, 27
The Bleſſing of the New Fire, 30
The Bleſſing of the Paſchal Candle, 31
The Bleſſing of the Baptiſmal Fonts, and the Baptiſm of the Catechumens, 32
Ceremonies obſerv'd at Eaſter, 33
April, 35
May, 37
The Stations of the Moveable Feaſts after Eaſter, 39
The Ceremonies on the Feſtival of the Aſcenſion, 40
Ceremonies obſerv'd at Whitſontide, ibid.
Proceſſion of the Bleſſed Sacrament, 41
The Manner of carrying the Hoſt before the Pope when he is upon a Journey, 46
The chief Proceſſions in Rome, during the Octave of Corpus Chriſti, 49
June, ibid.
July, 51
Auguſt, 52
September, 54
October, 55
November, 57
December

The CONTENTS.

December, 60
The Bleſſing of the Sword, and of the Ducal Hat fix'd on its Point, 62
The Sacraments of the Church, 67
I. Of Baptiſm, ibid.
II. Of Confirmation, 72
III. Of the Euchariſt, 74
The Bleſs'd Bread, 76
The Viaticum, or Communion of Perſons at the Point of Death, 77
IV. Penance, 80
V. Extreme Unction 92
Some farther Account of what is obſerv'd with regard to ſuch Chriſtians as are at the Point of Death, 94
The Ceremonies obſerv'd at Funerals, 96
The Ceremony of Bleſſing Church-Yards, 98
Ceremonies relating to Burial, 100
VI. Marriage, 110
The Ceremonies of Marriage, 115
The Bleſſing of a Woman with Child, 119
Exorciſm, 120
A Diſſertation on the Ceremonies of the Roman Catholicks, containing all ſuch Particulars as relate to the Hierarchy, or Church Government, 127

PART I.

The Sacrament of Holy Orders ibid.
The Benefices and Dignities of the Church, 133
Ceremonies relating to the Election of Biſhops, 135
The Bleſſing of the Lambs, of the Fleeces whereof the Palls are made, 140
The Entry of a new-elected Prelate into his Dioceſe, ibid.
The Death and Funeral of a Biſhop, 142
The Miniſter of the Church, and ſuch Dignitaries as are inferior to Biſhops, 143
Their Manner of Nuns being profeſſed, 149
Ceremonies relating to the Dignity of Cardinals, 150
The Promotion of Cardinals, 152
The Manner in which the newly-created Cardinal takes Poſſeſſion of his Title 158
The Interment of Cardinals, 160
The Interment of a Pope, 162

PART II.

The Pope's Vicar General, 166
The Pope's Chancellor and Vice Chancellor, ibid.
The Regent, Prelates, and Regiſters of the Pope's Chancery, 167
The Pope's Secretary of State, and Under-Secretaries, 168
The Prefect of Aſſeſs'd Briefs, the Prefect of the Signature of Favour, the Prefect of the Signature of Juſtice, and the Prelates Referendaries of both Signatures, 170
The Pope's Datary and other Officers of that Court, 172
The Maſter of the Pope's Palace, and other chief Officers of his Houſhold, 175
The Prefect of the Pope's Sacriſty, 177
His Holineſs's Librarian, 178
The Pope's Maſter of the Ceremonies, 179
The Camerlingo, or Treaſurer of the College of Cardinals, the National Secretary, and Clerk, and the Accountant of the ſaid College, ibid.
The Tribunal of the Rota of Rome, and its particular Magiſtrates, compoſing together a kind of papal Parliament, 180
The Apoſtolical Chamber, and its Officers, 182
Apoſtolical Prothonatories, Aſſiſtants of the Pope's Conſiſtory call'd Participanti, 185
The Congregations, ibid.
The Pope's Congregation, 186
The Congregation of the Holy Office, ibid.

The

The CONTENTS.

The Congregation de propagandâ fide, 187
The Congregation for explaining the Council of Trent, 188
The Congregation of the Index, ibid.
The Congregation of Immunities, 189
The Congregation of the Biſhops and Regulars, 190
The Congregation for the Examination of Biſhops, ibid.
The Congregation of the Morals of Biſhops, 191
The Congregation for the Reſidence of Biſhops, ibid.
The Congregation for ſuppreſſing Monaſteries, 192
The Congregation of the Apoſtolical Viſitation, 193
The Congregation of Relicks, ibid.
The Congregation of Indulgencies, 194
The Congregation of Rites and Ceremonies of the Church, ibid.
The Congregation for the Building of Churches, 195

Hiſtorical Memoirs relating to the INQUISITION.

BOOK I.

The Preface, wherein is ſhewn how different the Practice of the Church was in antient Times, from that of the Tribunal of the Inquiſition in our Days with regard to Hereticks. A Parallel between them. The Juſtice of the one and the Injuſtice of the other. 199

BOOK II.

CHAP. I. The Origin, Eſtabliſhment, and Progreſs of the Inquiſition, 207
CHAP. II. The Wars rais'd on Account of the Eſtabliſhment of the Inquiſition, 213
CHAP. III. The Difficulties that oppos'd the Eſtabliſhment of the Inquiſition, 219
CHAP. IV. The Inquiſition erected in ſeveral Parts of Italy, 223
CHAP. V. The Eſtabliſhment of the Inquiſition in Spain, 226
CHAP. VI. The Attempts made to ſettle the Inquiſition in the Low Countries occaſion Wars and Inſurrections, 228
CHAP. VII. The Inquiſition ſet up in Venice, 236

BOOK III.

Of the Laws, Proceedings, and Magiſtrates of the Inquiſition, 233
CHAP. I. A Deſcription of the Inquiſition of Rome and Spain, ibid.
CHAP. II. Of Caſes and Perſons ſubject to the Inquiſition, 235
CHAP. III. The Manner in which the Tribunal of the Inquiſition proceeds againſt all Perſons impeach'd, 239
CHAP. IV. In what Manner Priſoners are put to the Torture in the Inquiſition, 247
CHAP. V. The Ceremonies uſed in executing the Sentences of the Tribunal of the Inquiſition, 249
CHAP. VI. Maxims of the Inquiſition, and of the Inquiſitors, 254
CHAP. VII. The Troubles and Difficulties that are met with in the Inquiſition; the Inhumanity, Injuſtice, &c. thereof, 257
CHAP. VIII. Conduct of the Inquiſition with Regard to Books, 261
Concluſion, 266
An Extract of a Voyage to Spain relating to the Tribunal of the Inquiſition, and the Prerogatives of the Familiars of the Holy Office, 267

BOOK IV.

Containing the Eſtabliſhment of the Inquiſition in the Kingdom of Portugal, 270
CHAP. I. The Inquiſition is introduced into Lisbon, but oppos'd by Don John. Its Re-eſtabiſhment after his Death. His Excommunication. The Abſolution of his Corpſe. Diſpute between the Parliament of Lisbon and the Inquiſitors. Their Rigours and Cruelties, &c. ibid.

CHAP.

The CONTENTS.

CHAP. II. The Treatment thoſe Perſons meet with who are impriſon'd in the Portuguese Inquiſitions, 276

CHAP. III. Deſcription of the Dungeons. Puniſhments inflicted on the Priſoners, 279

CHAP. IV. How Women are treated. The Order obſerv'd in Proſecutions, 282

CHAP. V. Sequel of the Proſecutions, 286

CHAP. VI. Sequel of the Proceedings againſt ſuch Men as are impeach'd, and againſt Women, 291

CHAP. VII. The Confeſſion of the Priſoner compared with the Depoſitions of his Accuſers, 295

CHAP. VIII. Puniſhment of Negative Convicts, 298

CHAP. IX. The Reaſons why the New Chriſtians are perſecuted. Examples of Old Chriſtians puniſh'd, 300

CHAP. X. Deſcription of the Inquiſition of Goa, 304

CHAP. XI. Of the Officers of that Tribunal, and their Behaviour to the Priſoners, 306

CHAP. XII. Of the Formalities obſerv'd in the Inquiſition, 307

CHAP. XIII. Of the Injuſtice of the Inquiſition with reſpect to Perſons accus'd of Judaiſm, 309

CHAP. XIV. Sequel of the Formalities and Injuſtice of the Tribunal of the Inquiſition 311

CHAP. XV. Some Particulars relating to the Officers of the Inquiſition, 313

CHAP. XVI. Order of the Proceſſion in the Act of Faith, and the Ceremonies which are obſerv'd in the Place where it is ſolemnized 323

CHAP. XVII. Abſolution of the Excommunicated, and what is obſerv'd with Regard to thoſe who are condemn'd to the Flames, 326

CHAP. XVIII. An Account of Mr. Dellon's Releaſe from the Inquiſition, his Inſtruction and Penance, 328

CHAP. XIX. Deſcription of the Galley, or Priſon of the Inquiſition in Lisbon, 330

An Illuſtration of the Memoirs relating to the Inquiſition, 331

Statutes to be obſerv'd by the Inquiſition of Venice, 337

Explanations of the ſeveral Figures, 350

Of the Firſt, ibid.

Of the Second, 351

Of the ſeveral Habits, 355

The Act of Faith, as publickly ſolemnized in Lisbon, on Sunday the 6th of November, 1707. 357

DIRECTIONS

TO THE

BOOK-BINDER

FOR

Placing the Cuts of the SECOND VOLUME.

THE new Fire lighted on Eaſter-Eve, } Page 8
Le feu nouveau le Vendredy Saint, }
Manner of returning the conſecrated Bread, } 13
Maniére dont on rend le pain benit, }
The Proceſſion of the Bleſſed Sacrament on Corpus, 16
The Adoration of the Croſs on Good-Friday. 20
The Biſhop's Hand kiſs'd, 22
The Manner of carrying the Bleſſed Sacrament when the Pope is upon a Journey, 46
Baptiſm adminiſtred by a Midwife, 70
Confirmation perform'd after another Manner, 72
The Viaticum, 74
Extreme Unction, 80
They are led into the Church, 82
An Heretic reconcil'd, 84
Offering of Bread and Wine, 102
The Corpſe laid in the Choir, 104
Bleſſing of the Nuptial Bed, 114
An Exorciſt ordained, 129
The Biſhop impowers the Prieſt to conſecrate, 132
Has his Hands anointed, 134
The Paſtoral Staff given him, 136
Their Habit conſecrated, 146
The Biſhop gives the Nuns the Communion, 148
Solemnity of the Pope's Funeral, 163
Various Methods of Torture inflicted by the Inquiſitors, 247
The Proceſſion of the Inquiſition at Goa, 249
The Executions, 323
A married Woman ſentenc'd by the Inquiſitors to be burnt alive, 354
A Man convicted of Hereſy, who pleads guilty before he is tried, 355

Gravelot. inv. G. S. S.

A DISSERTATION ON THE CEREMONIES OF THE ROMAN CATHOLICS.

PART IV.

Containing the FESTIVALS, SACRAMENTS, and other CEREMONIES of the CATHOLIC Church.

FESTIVALS, or Holidays, are certain Days which the Church of Chriſt has peculiarly ſet apart for the Service of God, in commemoration of ſome Myſtery, or in honour of ſome Saint. Such Inſtitutions are to be found in all Religions; at leaſt there are none, but what, after ſome Manner or other, practiſe certain ſolemn Acts, at appointed Seaſons, the better to honour the Being, or Beings, which they are taught to look upon as Divinities. Fauchet, in his Antiquities of Gaul, p. 124. in the Life of Clovis, pretends that all our Feſtivals, and Ceremonies in general were originally borrowed from Paganiſm: And ſpeaking of the former, ſays as follows: "The "Chriſtians, in order to win over the Souls of the Heathens to the Salvation of CHRIST "JESUS, inſtead of the Heathen Pervigilia and Lectiſternia, ſubſtituted the Eves and "Anniverſaries of their Martyrs: And to ſhew that they had the Public Weal and Plen-"ty at Heart, inſtead of Februa, Vinalia, Ambarvalia, Robigalia, which were ſo "many Heathen Prayers, they enacted, that Chriſtians ſhould keep holy the Purifi-

" cation, &c. and in Times of Affliction made Proceſſions, Rogations, and Litanies, i. e.
" Supplications; on which, and in the Nudipedalia, (which were Proceſſions and Journeys
" made barefooted) they uſed to call upon our Lord Jeſus Chriſt inſtead of Jupiter;
" whereby they did not in reality paganize, if I may be allowed the Expreſſion, but pru-
" dently countermined Paganiſm, by Means of this Shield employed to ward off the " Reproaches which the Heathens uſed to vent againſt them." 'Tis manifeſt from the Writings of thoſe Ages that the Chriſtians had Recourſe to every Method they could deviſe, to bring Men over to JESUS CHRIST. In all theſe Particulars, the Chriſtians, our Anceſtors, have imitated God himſelf, who did not diſdain to borrow Part of the Ceremonies of the Jewiſh Religion from the Egyptians. The Imitation itſelf is not to be condemned, but the Abuſe of it is owing to the wretched Avarice of Prieſts, who inſenſibly have introduced and encouraged too much that ſhewey and outward Devotion, commonly known by the Name of Ceremonies.

IN the Church there are moveable Feaſts, [a] double Feaſts, half-double, and ſimple: Some of theſe are of the [b] firſt Claſs, and others of the ſecond. They are ſtill ſubdivided: But we ſhall omit the Particulars of them, ſince they can be of no Uſe but to thoſe who are devoted to the Service of the Breviary, and ſhall therefore content ourſelves with acquainting the Reader, that the chief Difference between the ſeveral Claſſes, is the greater or leſs Solemnity uſed in them. The Churches are embelliſhed, and the Altars adorned, according to the Solemnity of the Day; and, if we may be allowed to ſay it, according to the Rank each Saint holds in the Church. On ſolemn double Feaſts, [c] the Biſhop, nay the Pope himſelf, performs divine Service in the Cathedral; and the Abbot, the Prior, or Dean of the Chapter, in [d] collegiate Churches. According to the Rituals of Italy, the Churches muſt be hung on theſe high Feſtivals, and adorned with beautiful and holy Images of thoſe whom the Church acknowledges as Saints. The Doors of the Churches muſt be adorned with Feſtoons; and the Image of the Saint, whoſe Feaſt is ſolemnized, muſt be ſet off with Flowers, and the Church ſtrewed with them. We ſuppoſe that Chriſtians come to Church on theſe ſolemn Days with an humble and contrite Spirit, proportionable to this exterior Pomp. The Church muſt be open to them during theſe ſacred Days: Wax-Tapers muſt burn on the Altar: The Ornaments of the officiating Prieſt muſt be as rich as poſſible: The Tapers which ſtand on the high Altar muſt be thicker than the reſt: And each Pariſh ſhall diſplay its Zeal in proportion to its Riches.

[e] WHENEVER the Feaſt of the titular Saint is celebrated, or of that Saint who is choſen for the Patron of a Place, his Standard and Image muſt be fix'd on the Top of the Spire, and the Bells ſet a ringing to his Honour. In ſome Places 'tis cuſtomary to have [f] Illuminations on the Eve and Feaſt of the Saint, as a Teſtimony of the Love and Reverence of thoſe who do him this [g] Honour.

[a] The Name of double Feaſts is given to thoſe whoſe Service is fuller and more ſolemn than the reſt. The Office thereof begins at the firſt Veſpers, when the Altar muſt be covered with Ornaments, ſuitable to the Solemnity of the Feaſt.

[b] The Feſtivals of the firſt Claſs are double, and are ſubdivided into three Orders, as well as thoſe of the ſecond Claſs. The Magnificence exhibited at theſe Times, is much more ſolemn than that of the ſemi-double, &c. The Nativity of our Lord, the Feaſt of Eaſter, the Reſurrection, the Feaſt of the Patron of a Church, are all double Feaſts. See more of this in the Rituals.

[c] Piſcara Praxis Cerem.

[d] Collegiate Churches are thoſe which have no epiſcopal See belonging to them, and conſiſt only of a Chapter of Canons.

[e] The Flamens of old Rome uſed to cauſe all Feaſts to be proclaim'd by public Cryers; which Cuſtom ſtill prevails in ſeveral Catholic Countries, where certain Cryers ring a little Bell at the Corners of the Streets, to give the People Notice of the Holiday, and declare to them the ſeveral Indulgences ſuitable to the Solemnity thereof.

[f] Piſcara, ubi ſupra.

[g] Ibid.

A PRIEST

A PRIEST is obliged to learn ſeveral Diſtinctions, which a Layman perhaps does not think it worth his while to trouble his Head about. Every Devotee who attends the Feaſt, is not obliged to know the Difference between the double or ſemi-double Service; nor is his Devotion leſs ſincere and fervent, whether the Feaſt be of the firſt or ſecond Claſs, double of the firſt Order, or ſemi-double of the Third. The Office of each Saint is either double or ſemi-double, according to the more or leſs Solemnity uſed with Regard to him; as for Inſtance, if his Body is to be removed, the Office muſt be double: As alſo in caſe he be a diſtinguiſhed Saint, i. e. the Patron of a State, a City, &c. In the Church where his whole Body is depoſited, the Office ſhall be double of the ſecond Claſs: In like Manner, if they have one of his Arms, Legs, or ſuch like Relic, the Office ſhall be double, or at leaſt ſemi-double: But in caſe he be not one of the moſt [a] diſtinguiſhed Saints, and if they have but an inconſiderable Relic of him, the Office ſaid in his Honour muſt be only ſimple. A Chriſtian may be unacquainted with all theſe Particulars, without any way hazarding his Salvation; for the Laity, will not be judged on theſe Points; tho' perhaps it may fare otherwiſe with the Prieſts.

ALL high Feſtivals have an Octave. This Cuſtom was firſt borrowed from the Jewiſh Religion; for it was uſual for the antient [b] Jews to allow eight Days to their ſolemn Feſtivals, in which they are imitated by the Moderns to this Day. The Octave therefore, conſiſts of the Feaſt itſelf, and the ſeven Days which follow after it, tho' the Name of Octave is particularly given to the laſt Day of thoſe Eight, which anſwers to the ſolemn Day of the Feaſt. The [c] Rituals ſay, that when two Octaves meet, the moſt diſtinguiſhed of them ſhall have the Preference, not forgetting at the ſame Time to commemorate the Saint whoſe Octave gave way to the other. In this manner the Octave of St. John Baptiſt, gives the Precedency to that of the holy Sacrament, whenever they happen to meet: But if the Octave of a [d] Saint, who is Patron of a Place, ſhould fall out at the ſame Time with that of another Saint, who had been either a Biſhop or an Archbiſhop, or Cardinal, in this caſe the Patron would be obliged to yield to the Prelate; for thus the Rituals have determined.

THE Eccleſiaſtical-Day, or Feaſt, begins in the Evening; a Cuſtom which is alſo borrowed from the Jews, [e] who begin their Day at Sun-Set. And this is the true Original of Veſpers and Vigils, thoſe ſolemn Seaſons in the Church, with which all Feſtivals commence; altho' our myſtic Writers trace the Original of Vigils as high as the Devaſtation which the deſtroying Angel made of the Firſt-born among the Egyptians, and tell us, that we muſt pray in the Night, "that the Sword of the Word of God paſſing "inviſibly over our Heads, may go and deſtroy the firſt Works, the Firſt-born of our "Corruption before our ſpiritual Regeneration." But we don't much depend on theſe ſacred Flights, nor ſhall we inſiſt on the nocturnal Rambling of the Devil, and other Spirits of Darkneſs; nor the Agitation and Hurry of the Paſſions, which ſtrike much more forcibly in the Dark than at other Times; nor in ſhort on the Birth of our Saviour, which happened in the Night-Time. All theſe Reaſons are alledged to juſtify the Neceſſity and Origin of Vigils; nay, were we to aſcend into Heaven, ſhould we not even there find the Angels praying and ſinging in the Night? And who knows, but the Stars [f] may form a kind of ſacred Concert during the Glooms of nocturnal Darkneſs? Give us leave to ſearch among the antient Heathens, for a Conformity between their Vigils and ours.

[a] Si non ſit adeo inſignis. Id. Ibid.
[b] Levit. Chap. xxiii.
[c] Piſcara, as above.
[d] Who in his Life-Time had been either a Confeſſor, or a Martyr, but had not profeſſed any eminent Employment.
[e] Ye ſhall celebrate the Sabbath from one Even to the other. Levit. Chap. xxiii.
[f] Vide aſtrorum choream, Bona Cap. 4. Divinæ Pſalm.

And without mentioning thoſe Feaſts which were to be celebrated in the Night only, all the high Feſtivals of the Gods of thoſe Idolaters, [a] begun by Vigils: Thoſe of the Feſtival of Venus laſted three Nights; and thoſe of Ceres were famous for their Licentiouſneſs. The antient Egyptians had ſome very ſolemn ones, in honour of Minerva: And to prove that thoſe Idolaters had likewiſe their Veſpers, we need only appeal to [b] Seneca the Philoſopher. All theſe Ceremonies have been ſanctified by the Chriſtians, to the Glory of the true God. Their Vigils prepare the [c] Heart, by Faſting and Humility, to commemorate the ſeveral Myſteries of Religion, and the Lives of the Saints. 'Tis pretended that they were introduced into the Church as early as the Apoſtles Days. They are undoubtedly of great Antiquity, but then 'tis as certain that they were but very few at firſt, ſince, in the primitive Times, no other Feſtivals uſed to be ſolemniz'd except thoſe of Chriſtmas, Eaſter, Aſcenſion-Day, and Whitſontide; the prodigious Number of Holidays now celebrated, being not introduced till after Chriſtianity was in a flouriſhing Condition.

THE Cuſtom of wiſhing a happy Feaſt is of very antient Date amongſt the Chriſtians: It was practiſed in the Infancy of the Church, and 'twas even cuſtomary for People to write [d] congratulatory Letters to one another on theſe ſolemn Days. A commendable Zeal ſanctified theſe pious Inſtitutions at their firſt Riſe; for Holidays were then ſpent in Prayers and pious Exerciſes, in which they anſwered the Deſign of thoſe who inſtituted them; but they have degenerated ſince by inſenſible Degrees from their primitive Purity. Feſtivals ſoon became ſo many Occaſions for Riot, Exceſs, and criminal Amuſements: The common People look'd upon them as ſo many Days allotted to Idleneſs; few conſecrated them to a ſpiritual Life, and the leaſt profane divided themſelves between God and their Pleaſures. This Licentiouſneſs was carried to a great Exceſs in a very little Time. The Age in which St. Paul lived ſeems not to [e] have been free from ſuch Irregularities, againſt which St. Jerome and the Councils inveigh'd with ſo much Vehemence three or four Centuries after the Birth of our Saviour. Let it not therefore be thought that the Profanation of Feſtivals is wholly owing to latter Ages: We have already obſerv'd, that 'twould be very ridiculous in us to be blindly prejudiced in favour of the Perfection of our Anceſtors, or to imagine that the Age in which they lived was more fruitful of Piety than ours: Mankind in former Ages were juſt the ſame they are now, but their great Diſtance from us prevents our ſeeing their Errors, and the ſecret Springs and Motives of their Actions.

IN Italy certain Feſtivals are celebrated, which are not to be found in the Calendar of the Church, but are frequently met with in the Calendar of the Lovers of that Country. Theſe Feſtivals have only an Appearance of Devotion, as is manifeſt from the worldly Motives on which they are grounded. When a Lover is deſirous of giving his Miſtreſs the higheſt Teſtimonies of his Gallantry, he immediately makes her the Idol of his Devotion; he has Veſpers, nay Maſſes, celebrated in her Honour; he cauſes the Feſtival of the Saint, whoſe Name ſhe bears, to be celebrated in ſome Church with the utmoſt Solemnity. Five or ſix Perſons of Diſtinction frequently make ſuch a Party as this: Theſe Gentlemen, without waiting for the Feſtival of the She-Saint, anticipate it by a pompous Devotion, whereof the Saint has only the Name; the genuine Homage being paid to their ſeveral Miſtreſſes. The Church indeed is adorned ſuitably to the Dignity of the Perſon canonized; but then they manage Matters ſo well, that the whole Pomp ſhall be as relative to the Saint of the Lover, as to that of the Church of God. This whimſical, or rather prophane Devotion, is intermix'd with Incidents which do

[a] Pervigilia.
[b] Nobiliſſimæ virgines ad ſacra facienda noctibus excitantur. Seneca de Providentia, Cap. 5.
[c] Moſt Vigils are accompanied with Faſts.
[d] Called Literæ Feſtivæ.
[e] See the firſt Epiſtle of St. Paul to the Corinthians, Ch. xi. ver. 20. & ſeq.

not reflect any great Honour on the Virtue of thoſe [a] Italian Ladies who are complimented after this extraordinary Manner.

THE Caſuiſts of the Church of Rome, who are not ſo rigid as the Jewiſh Doctors, permit certain Works on Sundays and Holidays, which the Jews will never allow themſelves to do, though indiſpenſibly neceſſary. But as for us, we do not make the leaſt Scruple to work on Sundays, whenever the deferring it [b] may be of dangerous Conſequence; but in general, we ought to ſanctify ſuch Days with ſpiritual Works, and abſtain from all manual Labour, which, according to the Deciſion of our Doctors, puts us in a State of mortal Sin.

WE ſhall now preſent the Reader with the Order of the Feaſts, and particularize on the moſt remarkable, as we find it already done by the [c] Author who has given us a Relation of modern Rome. We may juſtly prefer this Calendar before any other, ſince Rome is the Capital of the Chriſtian World. By this Calendar it will be found that this holy City has not left ſo much as one Day throughout the whole Year unconſecrated either by Feſtivals or Stations; that the inexhauſtible Treaſure of Indulgences is always open to the Faithful, and furniſhes them continually with Materials to repair the Breaches which Satan may have made in their Virtue; that the Clergy of Rome are always in a Readineſs to countermine his Works. Though, like the juſt Man mentioned by the Royal Prophet, They ſhall fall ſeven Times every Day, we yet need not fear but they will bravely riſe again, invigorated by the ſpiritual Succours which Rome laviſhes very profuſely on all ſuch as are willing to be devout.

THE ROMAN CALENDAR, OF FEASTS and STATIONS throughout the Year.

JANUARY.

1. NEW-Year's-Day, [d] the Feaſt of the Circumciſion of our Lord; the Station is at St. Maria Maggiore's, at St. Maria's in Tranſtevera, at St. Maria's in Ara Cœli, &c. A Service is performed before his Holineſs in the Apoſtolical Palace, Maſs is ſung by a Cardinal Prieſt, the Sermon is preached by one of the Fathers of St. Lawrence of Lucina. A ſolemn Feaſt is kept in Jeſus's Church, and in Jeſus Maria's in the Walks.

2. THE [e] Octave of St. Stephen; Feaſt at St. Lawrence's Church without the Walls, where his Body is depoſited.

[a] Chi manda la ſua figliuola a la feſta in pauco tempo ne fa una P.

[b] A Notary may draw up a Will, or any kind of Inſtrument, on a Sunday, when the deferring it may be of dangerous Conſequence; in like Manner an Apothecary is allowed to make up his Medicines, &c.

[c] Francis Deſcine, a famous Bookſeller at Rome.

[d] The Rituals likewiſe give the Name of the Octave of the Nativity of our Lord to this Feaſt: It was formerly uſual on the Feſtival of the Circumciſion to commemorate the bleſſed Virgin, and to celebrate a Maſs to her Honour.

[e] The Feaſt of St. Stephen was antiently the Feaſt of the Deacons; becauſe St. Stephen, the firſt Martyr of the Church, is ſaid to be the Chief or Principal of the ſeven Deacons who were appointed by the Apoſtles in the Infancy of Chriſtianity. The Feaſt of St. John the Evangeliſt was formerly the Feaſt of the Prieſts, and that of the Innocents, the Feſtival of Scholars and Children.

3. OCTAVE of St. John; at St. John's of Lateran, at St. Sebaſtian's without the Walls, Feaſt for St. Anterus, Pope and Martyr: His Body lies buried here. In Paris, Feaſt of St. Genevieve [a] Virgin, Patroneſs of that City.

4. OCTAVE of the Innocents; at St. Paul's without the Walls, at St. Maria Maggiore's, at the Chapel of the Manger; at St. Bibiana's, for St. Daphoroſa her Mother, and St. Demetria her Siſter, both Martyrs.

5. St. Teloſphorus, Pope and Martyr; Feaſt at St. Peter's, where his Body is interred; Veſpers in the Apoſtolical Palace.

6. [b] Epiphany: Station at St. Peter's; Service in the Apoſtolical Palace. Maſs is ſung by a Cardinal Biſhop; the Procurator General of the Order of the Servites preaches the Sermon: At St. Athanaſius's of the Greeks, a Biſhop of their Church bleſſes the Water in a ſolemn Manner, in Commemoration of the Baptiſm of our Lord, and Maſs is ſung there, in the Greek Tongue. Feaſt in the Chapel of the Three Kings, in the College De Propaganda Fide; Feaſt at St. Maria's de Ara Coeli; after Veſpers a Proceſſion is made, in which the Image of the holy Infant Jeſus is carried: The Magiſtrates of Rome aſſiſt at it. Feaſt at St. Pudentiana's in the Chapel of the Gaetani.

THE King of Spain performs the Ceremony of offering Chalices or Communion-Cups on the Epiphany or Twelfth-Day. This Offering is ſaid to owe its Original to the Piety of the Emperor Charles the Fifth. Each Chalice is worth about three hundred Ducats; and he inſtituted this Oblation in Commemoration of the Worſhip of the Wiſe Men. In the firſt of theſe Communion-Cups a Piece of Gold is put, in the ſecond Incenſe, and Myrrh in the third. After the Oblation, the King ſends one of theſe Cups to the Veſtry of St. Lawrence in the Eſcurial, and the other two to whatever Churches or Monaſteries he thinks proper. This Ceremony is deſcribed by the Abbé de Vairac in his Preſent State of Spain.

7. St. Julian Martyr; his Feaſt is kept in the ſeveral Churches that bear his Name.

8. Octave of the Circumciſion; Feaſt in St. Peter's, in St. Maria Maggiore's, and in Jeſus's Church.

SUNDAY within the Octave of the Epiphany; Feaſt and Indulgence in St. Martin's in the Square on Mount di Pieta, where the Chriſtian Doctrine is announced.

9. St. Julian and Celſus Martyrs; Feaſt in their ſeveral Churches in Banchi.

10. St. Agatho, Pope; Feaſt at St. Peter's, where his Body is depoſited; and at the Minerva, in honour of St. Amarantia.

11. St. Hyginus Pope and Martyr; Feaſt at St. Peter's, where his Body is interr'd.

[a] The legendary Writers inform us, that we cannot pay too great Homage to this Saint for the Wonders ſhe has performed for upwards of twelve Centuries; and indeed the Angels returned Thanks to Heaven for the Birth of this bleſſed Virgin. Father Giry in the firſt Volume of the Lives of the Saints, aſſures us, that the bleſſed Spirits kept "an extraordinary Feſtival at her Birth, and that all Heaven was filled with Joy." St. Germanus of Auxere aſſerted the ſame to the Inhabitants of Nanterre, the firſt Time he ſaw St Genevieve, who was born in their City. In the Height of her Piety, ſhe was ſeized with ſo violent a Fit of Sickneſs that ſhe was thought to be Dead, but in the midſt of the Torments which her Body ſuffered, "She was raviſhed in Spirit among the Angels, where ſhe ſaw unutterable Glories." —— The Particulars whereof are not related by the Hiſtorian, becauſe of the Incredulity of Mankind. Then her Holineſs ſhone with greater Luſtre than ever in the Eyes of the Pariſians.—— "She penetrated into the moſt inward Receſſes of their Conſciences, ſpent all her Time in Prayer, and ſhed ſo great an Abundance of Tears that the Floor of her Chamber was quite wet with them. Though ſhe had led a Life of extraordinary Penance, ſhe nevertheleſs lived to a very advanced Age. A great Number of Miracles were wrought at her Tomb, and would undoubtedly have been wrought to the End of the World, had her Relics been ſtill there; now they are wrought only at her Shrine. Father Giry ſets them down at Length, and to him we refer the Reader.

[b] The Epiphany or Twelfth-Day was eſtabliſhed in the Church at the Beginning of the fourth Century. Ammianus Marcellinus mentions it, Book xxi. Chap. 3. of his Hiſtory. On Epiphany-Day, after the reading of the Goſpel, the ſeveral moveable Feaſts in the Year are pronounced to the People, viz. Aſh-Wedneſday, Lent, Eaſter, Aſcenſion-Day, Whitſuntide, the Feaſt of the Holy Sacrament, and the firſt Sunday in Advent. Some Churches ſtill preſerve the Cuſtom of waſhing the Croſſes, and bleſſing the baptiſmal Fonts on the Epiphany. From the Epiphany to Septuageſima the Ornaments of the Prieſts and Altars muſt be green.

12. St.

12. St. Benedict, or Bennet, Abbot of that Order; Feſtival in the ſeveral Churches of the ſame. The Sunday immediately preceding the Feaſt of St. Anthony, Indulgence in St. Peter's, and Feaſt in that of the Holy Ghoſt, whence the Virgins go in Proceſſion to St. Peter's, where the holy Face of our Lord is ſhewn.

13. OCTAVE of the Epiphany; Feaſt in St. Peter's, in St. Maria Maggiore's, in St. Pudentiana's, in the Church of the Flemmings, in St. Julian's of the Cæſarini.

14. St. Hilarius Biſhop of Poitiers; Feaſt in St. John's of Lateran; in his Chapel the Heads of St. Peter and St. Paul are ſhewn, attended with great Indulgences. In all the Churches of St. Francis, Feaſt of the holy Name of Jeſus.

THE Sunday that falls neareſt to St. Anthony's Day; Feaſt in our Lady's del Pianto, in St. Julian's, in Monte Jordano.

15. St. Maurus Abbot; Feaſt in the Churches of the Benedictin Order; in St. John Colabit; in his own Church in the Iſland of the Religious of the Charity of the bleſſed John of God.

16. St. Marcellus Pope and Martyr; Feaſt in his Church in the Walks, where his Body lies buried; at that of Ara Cæli for St. Berard and his Companions; Feaſt in all the Churches of St. Francis; Feaſt in our Lady del Pianto.

17. St. Anthony the Abbot; Feaſt in his Church of the French Fathers of his Order, near St. Maria Maggiore's. The Day of the Feaſt of this Saint, the Pope, Cardinals, Princes, and even private Gentlemen, ſend their Horſes and their Mules in order to be bleſſed by him; the Saddles and Harneſſes of theſe Beaſts are alſo carried to him: They bleſs and ſprinkle the Beaſts and their Equipage, in the Name, and for the Sake of the Saint, upon Conſideration of a certain Sum paid for each Beaſt. Another Ceremony in which St. Anthony is applied to, is that of exorciſing, conjuring, and delivering up to the Devil, Mice, Locuſts, or Graſhoppers, and all other noxious Animals. At St. Gregory's, Feaſt for St. Anthony, St. Marula, and St. John, of the Order of the Camalduli; their Bodies are here depoſited.

18. St. Peter's Chair at Rome; at St. Peter's a ſolemn Office in which the Pope aſſiſts; a Cardinal-Prieſt ſings Maſs. St. Priſcus; Feaſt in his Church.

19. St. Marius and Martha his Wife, Martyrs; Feaſt at St. Adrian's, where they are buried together with St. Audiface and St. Abakkuk their Sons: The Heads of the two laſt are in St. Colabit's, where a Feſtival is kept; at la Tranſpontina's, Feaſt of St. Canute King of Denmark.

20. St. Fabian and St. Sebaſtian; at St. Sebaſtian's without the Walls, where their Bodies are depoſited; at St. Peter's, where is St. Sebaſtian's Head; at St. Andrew's della Valle, and other Churches of that Saint.

21. St. Agnes, [a] Virgin and Martyr; Feſtival in the Churches under her Name.

22. St. Vincent and St. Anaſtaſius; Feſtival in their ſeveral Churches.

23. St. Emerantia, Virgin and Martyr; in St. Agnes's without the Walls, in St. Maria Maggiore's; and St. Jago, or James, of the Spaniards, with Muſic, in honour of St. Ildefonſus Biſhop of Toledo; at that della Minerva for St. Raimond.

24. St. Timothy Biſhop and Martyr; at St. Paul's without the Walls.

25. Converſion of St. Paul; Feſtival in St. Paul's without the Walls, in St. Peter's, in St. John de Lateran's, in our Lady's della Victoria, in St. Charles's delli Catinari, and at the three Fountains.

[a] The Roman Breviary relates, that when this Saint was, by the Prefect's Command, ſtripp'd ſtark-naked, in order to be carried in that Manner publicly to the Stews, God gave ſuch a Thickneſs to her diſhevel'd Hair, that it cover'd her more completely than her Clothes; and when ſhe enter'd into the Brothel, an Angel ſpread ſuch a dazling Light round her, that none could touch or ſee her, by reaſon of the great Splendor; when immediately there appear'd a white Garment before her Eyes, which ſhe put on, and it fitted her ſo exactly, that all the Spectators were firmly perſuaded it was made by an Angel. The Son of the Prefect ventur'd to enter into that Light, in order to violate her Chaſtity; but before he had touch'd her, he was choak'd by the Devil, and immediately dropt down dead. See the Roman Breviary.

26. St. Polycarp, Biſhop and Martyr; in the Hoſpital of the Holy Ghoſt, where his Relics are depoſited.

27. St. John Chryſoſtom, Biſhop and Patriarch; in St. Peter's, where his Body is interr'd.

28. Second Feaſt of St. Agnes; in her Church without the Walls, and in the Piazza Navona.

THE laſt Sunday in January, at St. Maria Maggiore's, Tranſlation of the holy Image of the Virgin; at St. Croſs's in Jeruſalem, Invention of the Title of the Croſs of Chriſt, and of other Relics.

29. AT the three Fountains, Dedication of St. Maria Scala Cæli; in the new Church, Feaſt of the holy Martyrs Papia and Mauro, where their Bodies lie; in the Trinity del Monte, the Feaſt of St. Francis de Sales; but in the Monaſtery of the Viſitation in Longara, the Feaſt is not celebrated till the Sunday following.

30. [a] St. Martina, Virgin and Martyr; in the Church dedicated to her in Campo Vaccino; at St. Paul's for St. Felix III. Pope, who is there interr'd.

31. St. Cire and St. John Martyrs; in St. Praxeda's, at St. Pantaleone's of the Well; in St. Angelo's of the Fiſh-Market, for St. Zoticus and St. Cyriacus; in St. Francis's at Ripa for the bleſſed Louiſa Albertoni; in St. Adrian in Campo Vaccino, and in St. John's in Campo Marzo, for St. Peter Nolaſcus, Founder of the Order of Mercy.

FEBRUARY.

THE firſt Sunday in February; Feaſt in St. Maria Maggiore's.

1. St. Ignatius Biſhop and Martyr; in St. Clement's, where his Body is depoſited; in St. John's of Lateran for St. Ephrem the Deacon.

2. [b] The Purification of the Virgin; a papal Service at the Apoſtolical Palace; Maſs is ſung by a Cardinal-Prieſt; the Pope performs the Bleſſing and Diſtribution of the Tapers, after the Proceſſion in the royal Hall is ended; Feſtival in the Churches dedicated to the Virgin and to St. Simeon. The Sunday within the Octave; Feaſt at St. Sebaſtian's and St. Valentine's.

3. [c] St. Blaſius Biſhop and Martyr; Feſtival in the Churches under his Name, in St. Charles's del Catinari, and in St. Maria's in Ponticelli.

[a] St. Martina being brought before the Emperor as an Enchantreſs, and refuſing to ſacrifice, he commanded her to be ſtripp'd, and her Fleſh to be ſlaſhed with Swords; but the Body of this Virgin was of ſo dazling a white, that it dimm'd the Eyes of the Beholders; immediately, Milk began to flow from her Wounds, which diffus'd a fragrant Odour, like that of Spices. And when ſhe was afterwards beaten with Clubs, by the Emperor's Order, thoſe who were employ'd for that Purpoſe, cried out that their Strength failed them, and beſought him, ſaying, "Deliver us from this Virgin, for the Angels of God do again ſtrike us with Iron Bars, and our Fleſh and Bones "are all on Fire." But when the Emperor would have the Blows continued, all ſuch as beat her died. Then was ſhe caſt into Priſon, and when one Limineus, ſent by the Emperor, open'd the Door, he ſaw a great Light ſhining round her, which as he enter'd encompaſs'd him like Lightning, ſo that for fear he fell to the Ground; and being ſcarce able to riſe up and enter, he ſaw St. Martina ſitting in a glorious Seat, and a Multitude of Men in white about her, holding a golden Table, in which the following Words were written: Thy Works are wonderful, O Lord, in Wiſdom haſt thou made them all. All which he related to the Emperor.

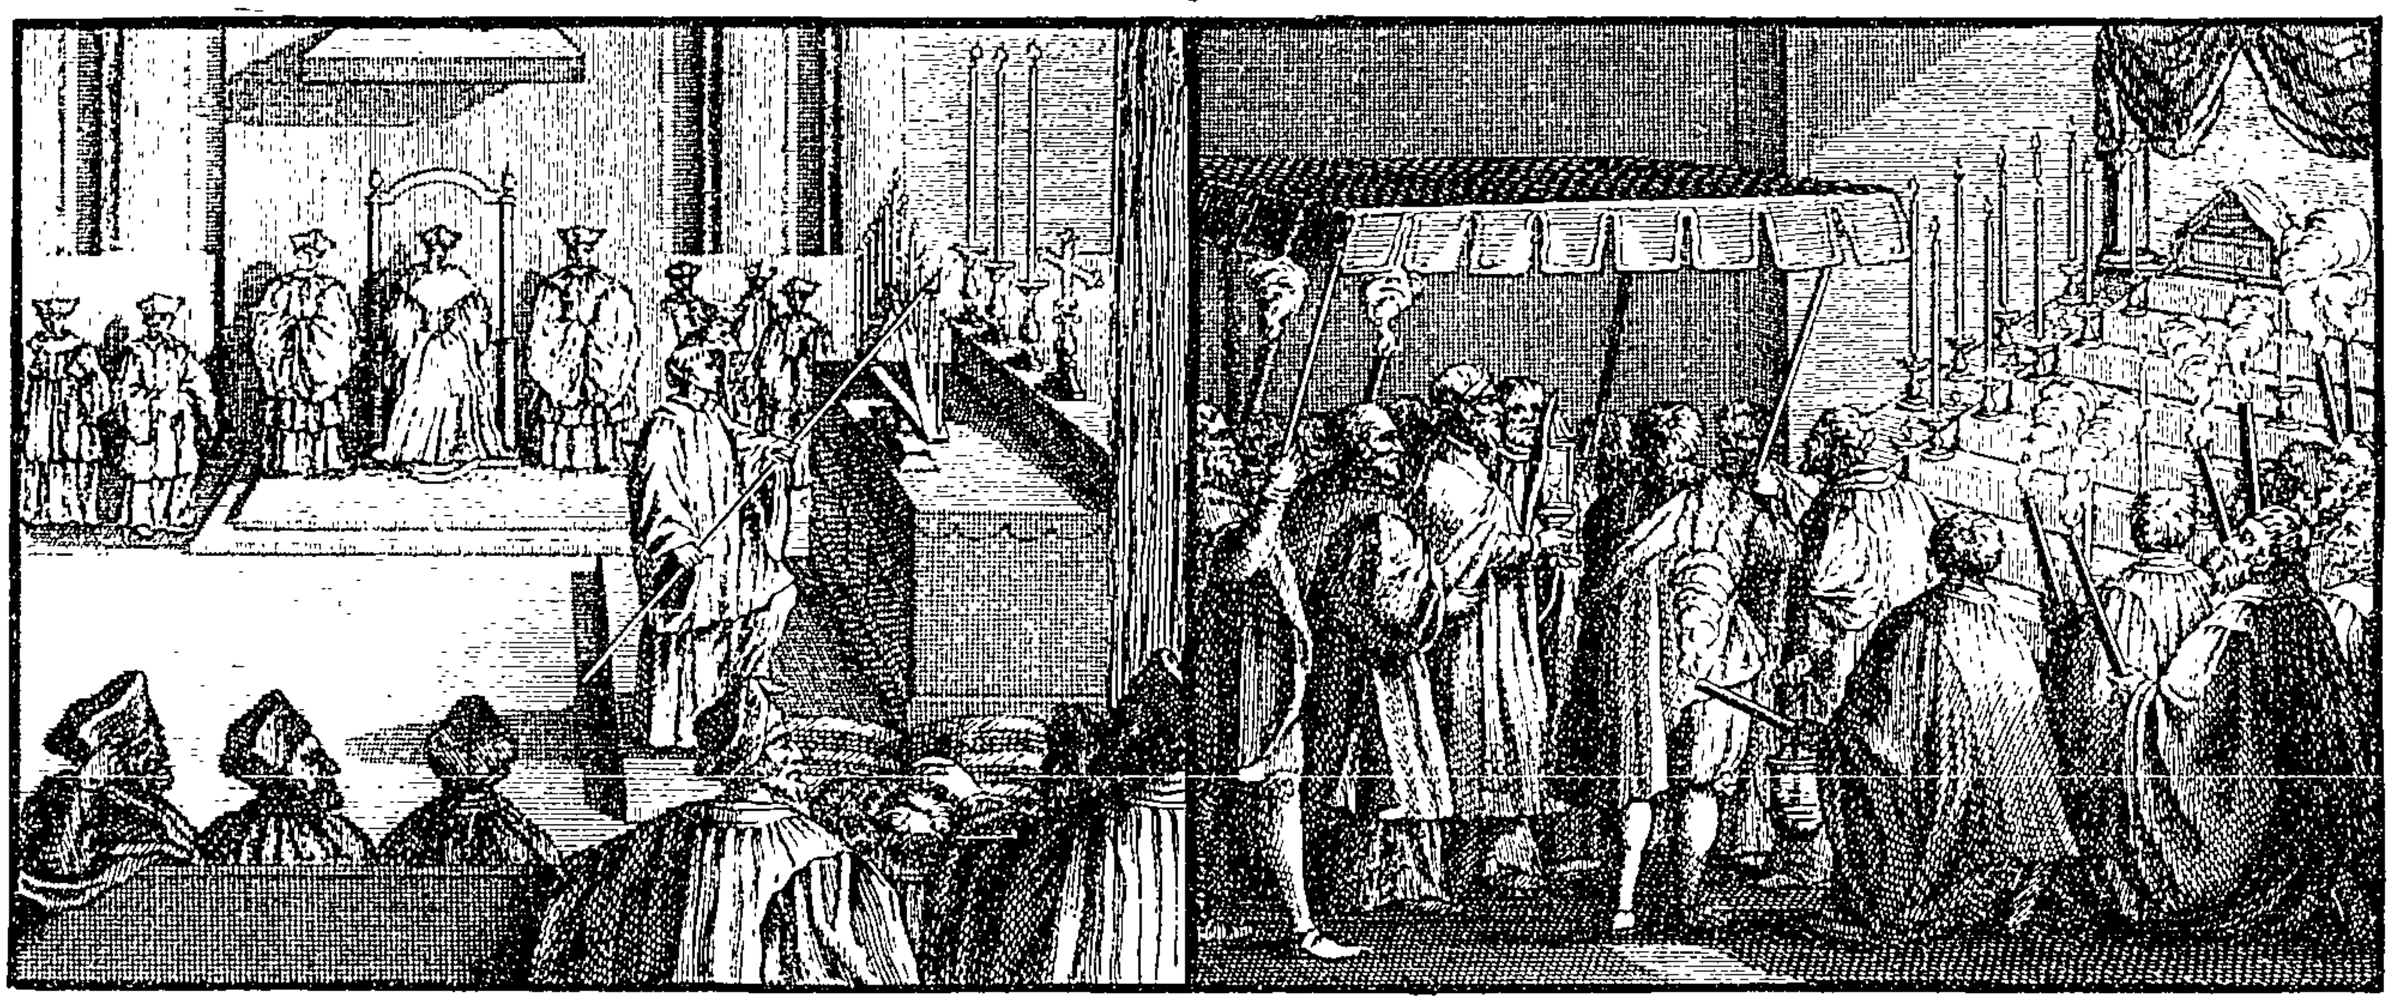
'Tis farther related, that a fierce Lion who had been kept faſting for three Days, and was ſet upon her, in order to devour her, inſtead of that, fawn'd upon her, and falling at her Feet kiſſed them; as alſo how being thrown into a great Fire, ſhe receiv'd no Harm, but the Flame diſperſing itſelf, burnt thoſe only who ſtood round it.



[b] See the Deſcription of this Feſtival in the ſecond Part of the firſt Volume of this Work.

[c] We are told in the Salisbury Breviary, that when this Saint came to be beheaded, he pray'd to God as follows: "O God hear me thy Servant, that if any one remembring me, ſhall fall down and worſhip thee, if any Fiſh-"Bone, or any other Bone, ſhall ſtick in his Throat, or if he fall into any Infirmity, Tribulation, or Danger, "receive, O Lord, I beſeech thee, his Requeſt." To which the Lord anſwer'd, "I will fulfil thy Petition." The Invocation of this Saint is a preſent Remedy in ſuch Caſes, preſcrib'd by a Greek Phyſician, ſays Ribadeneira, who alſo directs, that taking ſuch Perſons by the Throat, theſe Words muſt be pronounced with a loud Voice: Blaſius the Martyr and Servant of Chriſt Jeſus, ſays, thou Bone, either come up, or elſe go down.

4. St.

The CELEBRANT distributing WAX TAPERS on CANDLEMAS-DAY. | Le CELEBRANT distribuë les CIERGES le jour de la CHANDELEUR. | The PROCESSION on CANDLEMAS-DAY. | PROCESSION de la CHANDELEUR.

THE TENEBRÆ. | LES TÉNÉBRES. | The B. SACRAMENT carr.d to the SEPULCHRE. | On porte le S.t SACREMENT dans le TOMBEAU.

B. Picart, de. C. Du. Bosc. ex.

The NEW FIRE lighted on EASTER EVE. | Le FEU nouveau le jour du SAMEDI SAINT. | The BENEDICTION of ye PASCHAL CANDLE. | BENEDICTION du CIERGE PASCAL.

4. St. Eutychus, Martyr; Feaſt in St. Sebaſtian's without the Walls, and in St. Laurence's in Damaſo, where his Relics are depoſited.

5. St. Agatha, Virgin and Martyr; Feaſt in the Churches that bear her Name; and in that of Jeſus, for three Martyrs of Japan.

6. S. Dorothea, Virgin and Martyr; in the Church dedicated to her.

7. St. Romuald, Abbot; in the Churches of the Order of the Camalduli.

8. St. Pelagius, Pope; Feaſt in St. Peter's, where his Body lies interr'd. St. John of Martha, Founder of the Order of the Trinity-Redemption of Captives, in the Churches of that Order.

9. St. Apollina, Virgin and Martyr; Feaſt in the Church under her Name, and that of St. Auſtin. In St. John of the Maronites, Feaſt of St. John Marron their Countryman.

10. St. Scholaſtica, Virgin, and Siſter of St. Bennet; Feaſt in the ſeveral Churches of the Order, and in St. Cecilia's, where her Head is depoſited. St. Sotera, Virgin and Martyr, at St. Martin's of the Mountains, where her Body lies. In St. Auſtin's, for St. William Duke of Aquitain.

11. St. Severinus, Benedictin Abbot; in the ſeveral Churches of the Order.

12. St. Eulalia, Virgin and Martyr; Feſtival in our Lady of Montferrat.

13. St. Gregory II. Pope; Feaſt in St. Peter's, where his Body is interr'd. In St. Apollinarius, a Feaſt, and fine Muſic, for the Manifeſtation of the Image of the Bleſſed Virgin.

14. St. Valentine the Martyr; Feſtival in St. Praxedes's, where his Body is buried, and in the Church dedicated to him, near the Palace De' Mattei.

15. St. Fauſtina and Jovita, Martyrs; in the Church of the Breſſans.

16. St. Juliana, Virgin and Martyr; in the Church dedicated to her, and in St. Martin's of the Mountains, where her Body is interr'd.

17. St. Gabinus, Prieſt and Martyr, Father of St. Suſanna; in his Church at Termini.

18. St. Leo, Biſhop; in St. Martin's of the Mountains, where his Body is interr'd.

19. St. Pater, Biſhop; in St. Gregory's on Mount Cælius.

20. St. Peter's Chair at Antioch; Feaſt in St. Peter's.

21. St. Polycarp, Martyr, Companion of St. Sebaſtian, in St. Sebaſtian's; in St. Martin's, for St. [a] Lazarus the Painter. In Ara Cæli, Feaſt of the bleſſed [b] Margaret of Cortona.

[a] St. Lazarus the Painter lived in the ninth Century, under the Reign of Theophilus Inoclaſtes: He uſed to paint Images for Churches, which drew upon him the Hatred and Anger of the Emperor, who put him to very cruel Tortures, in order to force him to abandon his holy Employment. St. Lazarus, though he had ſuffered a Variety of Puniſhments for the Images he had painted, did nevertheleſs go on with his Work. This illuſtrious Saint of the Greek Church did not think proper to imitate the Generoſity of our bleſſed Saviour, who prayed to God for his Enemies; having never been able to prevail with himſelf, to deliver, by the Efficacy of his Prayers, the Emperor Theophilus's Soul out of the Flames of Purgatory.

[b] Margaret of Cortona devoted the Beginning of her Youth to Licentiouſneſs and Debauchery: But the Sight of the Skeleton of her Lover, with whom ſhe had held an unlawful Commerce for nine Years together, touched her Heart in ſo efficacious a Manner, that from that Inſtant, to the Day of her Death, ſhe loved God with an uninterrupted Affection, and expiated, by a Series of the moſt ſevere Penitence and Mortification, the grievous Diſorders of her Youth. After ſhe had thus devoted herſelf to God, all her Pleaſure conſiſted in mortifying her Body by the ſevereſt Auſterities. Her Beauty was now become a Subject of Horror to her; ſhe bruiſed her Face with Stones, ſhed Tears of Blood, and inflicted ſuch cruel Treatment on herſelf, that her Eyes ſeem'd to ſtart out of their Sockets. She was for ever beating herſelf, and uſed to whip herſelf with a Scourge full of great Knots, and other Inſtruments of Penance She fed continually on Bread and Water; had herſelf dragged along in her Shift, with a Halter about her Neck, till at laſt ſhe was quite inſenſible to all ſenſual Emotions, or the leaſt vicious Impulſe. Her Guardian Angel made her ſeveral Viſits; and we are aſſured by Father Giry, that our Saviour himſelf uſed to diſcourſe with her with inexpreſſible Familiarity. We omit to mention the other Favours which God beſtowed on the bleſſed Margaret; ſuch as the Virtue of curing Demoniacs, the Gift of Prophecy, and that of Miracles. This holy Woman had notice given her of her Death by a celeſtial Light. All the Souls which had been delivered by the Efficacy of her Prayers from the Flames of Purgatory, flocked at that Inſtant about her. Giry acquaints us farther, that her Body, after her Death, exhaled a moſt fragrant Odour; a Circumſtance very common to Saints.

22. St. Matthias the Apoſtle; Feaſt in St. Maria Maggiore's, where his Body lies interr'd; in St. Bibiana's, the Invention of her Body.

23. St. Felix IV. and St. Gregory IV. Popes; in St. Peter's, where their Bodies are interr'd.

24. St. Bon; at St. Laurence's in Damaſo, where his Body is interr'd.

25. St. Romanus, Benedictin Abbot; in the ſeveral Churches of the Order.

MARCH.

ALL Fridays in March there is an Indulgence at St. Peter's, where a great Concourſe of People aſſemble; and the Pope himſelf goes thither after Sermon, when his Health will permit, and is accompanied with the Cardinals, who walk behind him two and two.

1. St. Suithres and St. Aubin, Biſhops and Confeſſors, of the Order of St. Bennet; in the ſeveral Churches of the Order.

2. St. Soumuſus and St. Baſilicus; in the Church of the holy Apoſtles, where their Bodies are interr'd.

3. St. Aſterus Martyr; in St. Martin's of the Mountains, where his Body is depoſited.

4 St. Lucius, Pope and Martyr; in St. Martin's of the Mountains, where his Relics are depoſited. In St. Staniſlaus's of the Poles, Feaſt for St. Caſimir.

5. St. Phocas Martyr; in St. Marcellus's, where his Body is buried.

6. St. Fridelein, Benedictin Abbot; in the ſeveral Churches of the Order; and in thoſe of the Carmelites for St. Cyrillus.

7. [a] St. Thomas Aquinas; Feaſt in the Church of Minerva, where the Cardinals aſſiſt ſolemnly at Maſs; and in [b] St. Barbara's, Feaſt of the Bookſellers, who have taken St. Thomas Aquinas for their Patron.

[a] 'Tis related that St. Thomas of Aquin, praying in his Youth with bended Knees before the Sign of the Croſs, and there falling aſleep, he thought he felt his Loins faſt-bound by Angels, from which Inſtant he was never troubled with any luſtful Inclination.

[b] 'Tis related in the Golden Legend, that a Man who was thought to be ſtarv'd to Death, and by a Rope caſt about his Neck, was drawn to the Top of a Tower, and thrown down from thence, when he came to the Ground roſe up upon his Feet, and gave the following Account to thoſe who wonder'd at his being alive, ſince he had continued ſo long without Suſtenance, and how it was poſſible for him to be preſerv'd in his Fall: He aſſur'd them, that St. Barbara preſerv'd him in all his Dangers, and in his Fall from the Tower ſuſtain'd him with her holy Hands.

'Tis alſo related, that her Father, who was an Heathen, and had put her up in a Tower for fear of her being ſeduc'd, ſhe being a very great Beauty, perceiving by her Diſcourſes that ſhe was a Chriſtian, drew out his Sword in great Indignation, with Deſign to kill her; but upon her Prayers to God, a great Stone opening itſelf, receiv'd her into its Cavity, and attended her to a Mountain full of Caves, where ſhe thought to have hid herſelf, but was diſcover'd by a Shepherd, who was puniſhed for it in a miraculous Manner; he himſelf being chang'd into a Marble Statue, and all his Sheep into Locuſts, others ſay Beetles; which, as a perpetual Accuſation of the Crime, continually hover about her Grave

'Tis recorded by Surius, that in 1448. at a Town called Gorcum in Holland, one Henry Knoch, by an Accident of a Candle's falling into the Straw, had his Houſe ſet on Fire in the Night, and he himſelf hardly eſcap'd in his Shirt, which began to burn in two Places; but remembring he had left ſome Money in the Houſe, he reſolved to return again into it, in order to ſave it; but before he could come to the Place where it lay, the Houſe fell upon his naked Body; when apprehending preſent Death, he yet was more tormented, becauſe he had not been prepared againſt the Terrors of Death by the Sacraments of the Church, and in this Diſtreſs he betook himſelf to St. Barbara for Soul Remedies, by addreſſing himſelf to her in Prayer. The Saint being thus invok'd, immediately preſented herſelf before him, under ſuch a Shape as ſhe is uſually repreſented in Churches; then with her Garments ſhe quickly quench'd the Globes of Fire, and with her white Hand brought him through the Straw-Roof, and ſetting him in a ſafe Place, told him that his Life would be prolonged till the next Morning, &c. ſaying which, ſhe vaniſhed away. All was perform'd as ſhe had ſaid, though Henry was ſo burnt, that ſcarce any Fleſh was left on his Bones unconſumed; and what remained of him was as black as a Negro, his Eyes, Heart, and Tongue excepted, which remained untouch'd.

8. In St. John Colabit, Feaſt for the bleſſed John of God, Founder of the Order of the Charity, and in St. Barbara's of the Bookſellers, he himſelf having followed that Trade. St. Julius, Biſhop of Toledo, and Benedictin, in the ſeveral Churches of the Order.

9. St. Frances the Roman; Feaſt in the Church that bears her Name in Campo Vaccino, where her Body is depoſited; the Cardinals aſſiſt at the Service. Feſtival in her Church Nella Strada Felicè, at Torre de Specchi, and at Ara Cœli.

10. The forty Martyrs; Feaſt in the Churches dedicated to them.

11. St. Firminus, Benedictin Abbot; Feaſt in the Churches of the Order.

12. St. Gregory the Pope; Feaſt in St. Peter's, where his Body is depoſited, in the other Churches, and in the New Church.

13. St. Antoninus Biſhop and Confeſſor; Feaſt in St. Peter's, and in St. Venantius's; in the Churches of the Carmelite-Fryars, for St. Euphraſia the Virgin.

14. St. Matilda Queen, of the Order of St. Bennet; in the ſeveral Churches of the Order.

15. St. [a] Longinus; in St. Peter's, in the Oratory of St. Marcellus, and in St. Auſtin's, where ſome of the Relics are depoſited.

16. St. Fælix Martyr; Feſtival in St. Praxedes's, where his Relics are depoſited.

17. St. [b] Joſeph of Arimathea; in St. Peter's; and in St. Iſidore's belonging to the Iriſh, for St. Patrick.

18. St. Cyril, Biſhop and Confeſſor; Feaſt in St. Maria's, in Campo Marzo, where his Relics are depoſited. In St. Nicholas of Tolentine, Feaſt of the Image of our Lady, found near Savonna.

18. St. Joſeph, Husband of the bleſſed Virgin; Feſtival in the ſeveral Churches dedicated to him, in that Della Rotunda, and in St. Anaſtaſias his Cloke is ſhewn, by Order of the diſcalceated Carmes.

20. St. Joachim, Father of the bleſſed Virgin; Feaſt in the Churches that bear his Name, in that Della Rotunda, in St. Joachim's, and in St. Anne's; in that of the four Fountains, in the Churches dedicated to St. Anne: In that of Minerva, for St. Ambroſe and St. Sedonius; and at the Holy Croſs in Jeruſalem, for the Dedication: Women are allowed to enter into St. Helena's Chapel.

21. St. Bennet, Founder of his Order; in the Churches that bear his Name, and at the Nuns of Campo Marzo.

22. Feſtival throughout the whole Order of St. Bennet, and in St. Peter's, in honour of St. Gregory II. whoſe Body is there interred.

23. St. Bruno, a Benedictin Abbot; Feaſt throughout the whole Order.

24. Feſtivals in the Churches of the Order of St. Bennet, and at St. Saviour's Dellacorte, for St. Peter, Prieſt and Martyr; his Body is there buried.

25. Annunciation of the Virgin; a Papal Service, in the Church of the Minerva, whither his Holineſs and the Cardinals go in Cavalcade.

On the Day of the Annunciation the Pope performs the Ceremony of marrying or cloiſtering a certain Number of Maidens. Miſſon has deſcribed it very agreeably in his Voyage to Italy, Vol. II. "On the Feaſt of the Annunciation, the Pope and the ſacred "College go to the Church Della Minerva, where his Holineſs celebrates High Maſs, "or ſome Cardinal in his Abſence, and all the Maidens confeſs and cammunicate. This "being done, theſe Maidens, who are clothed in white Serge, and muffled up like ſo

[a] Tradition tells us, that Longinus, an affranchiz'd Slave, and a Soldier in the Roman Army, being almoſt blind, pierc'd our Saviour as he was hanging on the Croſs with his Lance, and by the Touch of that Blood, which was ſuppoſed to have fallen on his Eye, immediately recovered his Sight, and believed; when forſaking his military Profeſſion, and being inſtructd by the Apoſtles, he liv'd a Monaſtic Life in Cæſarea of Cappadocia: Where leading a Life of the utmoſt Sanctity, he, by his ſtrict Doctrine and Example, converted many to the Faith. At laſt he finiſh'd the glorious Strife of Martyrdom for the Confeſſion of Chriſt, under Octavius the Preſident.

[b] We are told that this Saint brought with him into Britain two Silver Veſſels, fill'd with our Saviour's Blood; which Veſſels were by his Order buried with him in his Tomb. He was interred in Glaſtenbury.

"many

" many Apparitions in a large Sheet that covers their Heads, in which they have only a " little Hole to peep through, which often is but juſt big enough for one Eye to look " out at, theſe Maidens, I ſay, walk two by two into the Choir, where all the Car- " dinals are aſſembled, when they fall proſtrate at the Feet of the Pope, or the Cardi- " nal who performs the Ceremony. An Officer appointed for that Purpoſe, ſtands on " one Side, having in his Hand a Baſon, wherein are little white tabby Bags, in each " of which is a Note of fifty Crowns for thoſe who make choice of Marriage, and ano- " ther Note of an hundred Crowns for ſuch as prefer the Veil. When each Maiden has " made an humble Declaration of her Choice, her Bag is given her hanging by a ſmall " String: In taking it ſhe gives it a Kiſs, makes a low Courtſey, and immediately wheels " off, to make room for the reſt. The future Nuns are diſtinguiſhed by a Garland of " Flowers to crown their Virginity; and they alſo have the moſt honourable Place in the " Proceſſion." If the Reader ſhould inquire, whether many of them did what St. Paul calls the [a] better, to this the Author replies, That of three hundred and fifty Maidens, who were at this Ceremony, thirty two only choſe a religious Life; the remaining three hundred and eighteen contented themſelves with doing well, that is, being married.

THE Day of the Annunciation; Feaſt in St. Maria Maggiore's, and the other Churches of the Virgin, particularly at the Nuns of Campo Marzo.

26. St. Caſtulus, Martyr; in St. Praxedes's, where his Body lies.

27. St. Robert, Biſhop and Confeſſor, of the Order of St. Bennet; Feaſt in the Churches of his Order.

28. St. Sixtus III. Pope; Feaſt in St. Lawrence's without the Walls, where his Body is depoſited.

29. St. Euſtaſius, Benedictin Abbot; Feaſt throughout the whole Order.

30. St. Quirinus, Martyr, Father of St. Balbina; Feſtival in the Church that bears his Daughter's Name.

31. St. Balbina, Virgin and Martyr; Feaſt in her Church.

The LENT STATIONS.

SEptuageſima [b] Sunday, the Station is at St. Lawrence's without the Walls.

Sexageſima Sunday, at St. Paul's; and at St. Maria's in Campitelli, the Expoſition of the bleſſed Sacrament, with Ornaments, Illuminations, Muſic, Concerts, Sermons, &c.

Quinquageſima Sunday, at St. Peter's.

Sexageſſima Monday, the [c] forty Hours are made in the Oratory of St. Francis Xaverius, with Ornaments, Illuminations, and an excellent Concert of Muſic.

[a] He who marries his Virgin does well, but he who does not marry her does better. For in this Manner does the Geneva Verſion render theſe Words of 1 Cor. Ch. vii.

[b] The Name of Septuageſima is given to that Sunday which precedes Sexageſima, and which is the third before the firſt Sunday in Lent, whereof Sexageſima is the ſecond, and Quinquageſima the firſt. Some have affirmed, that the Septuageſima alludes to the Babyloniſh Captivity of the Jews during ſeventy Years; but tis alſo an Image of the ſpiritual Captivity of Man under Sin.

[c] The Prayer of forty Hours, during which the bleſſed Sacrament is expoſed on the Altar, was inſtituted, or rather reviv'd, by Pope Pius IV. and Clement VIII. This Prayer is preceded and followed a by Proceſſion. While the Holy Sacrament is expoſed on the Altar, two Clerks Aſſiſtants muſt pray inceſſantly before it till ſuch Times as they are relieved by others, and ſo on in this Manner till forty Hours are expired. In order to give this pious Meeting a more ſolemn Air, the People ought to aſſiſt at this Prayer; and each Family is bound to beſtow an Hour at it. When the Hour is near expiring one of the Aſſiſtants rings a little Bell, to give the Ringer Notice that the Hour is almoſt ended, and then the Latter rings the great Bell to call other devout Perſons to Prayers.

Tueſday,

Ash-wednesday. || Le jour des CENDRES.

The manner of returning CONSECRATED BREAD. || Maniere dont on rend le PAIN BENIT.

Tueſday in Shrove-Tide the holy Sacrament is expoſed in St. Lawrence's in Damaſo, in Preſence of the Cardinals, ſo to remain during forty Hours, with fine Illuminations and Ornaments, as alſo a Sermon and Muſic.

Sunday in Shrove-Tide the forty Hours are celebrated in Jeſus's, which Church is adorned in a pompous Manner, with Machines, Pieces of Architecture, and Perſpective.

1. Aſh-Wedneſday, the Pope aſſiſts ſolemnly at the Office in the Apoſtolic Palace; the Cardinal Grand Penitentiary ſings Maſs, and the Sermon is preached by a Theatin Friar; the Pope performs the Ceremony of giving the Aſhes, after which, being accompanied with Cardinals, Lords, and Officers of the Court of Rome, he goes in Cavalcade to St. Sabina's, where the Station is kept, and in that of St. Alexis.

The Ceremony of giving the ASHES.

THE Ceremony of giving Aſhes is one of the antient Methods of expreſſing Sorrow, whereof mention is often made in the old Teſtament. 'Tis alſo a Type or Shadow, but at the ſame Time a very faint one, of the public Penance uſed among Chriſtians antiently, during which the Penitent was cut off from all Communication with the reſt of the Faithful, and ſtood at the Church-Door, cover'd with Sackcloth and Aſhes.

THE Aſhes that are made uſe of on Aſh-Wedneſday muſt be made from [a] the Branches of Olive, or ſome other Trees that have been bleſſed the foregoing Year on Palm Sunday. The Sacriſtian or Veſtry-Keeper gets theſe Aſhes ready, and lays them in a ſmall Veſſel on the Altar, on the Epiſtle Side; after which the officiating Prieſt bleſſes the Aſhes, for which Purpoſe the Wax-Tapers on the Altar are lighted: The officiating Prieſt, his Clerks, and his Acolytes, put on Ornaments ſuitable to the Solemnity of the Ceremony; during which the Choir chants None [b] or the ninth Hour; after which the officiating Prieſt, preceded by the Incenſe-Bearer, and other Aſſiſtants, goes up to the Altar, kiſſes it, and ſays a Prayer with his Face a little turn'd towards the Aſhes. He afterwards makes the Sign of the Croſs upon the Aſhes, and incenſes them. The Incenſing being ended, the Prieſt, having on one Side of him the Deacon carrying the Aſhes, and his Subdeacon on the other, goes forward towards the Middle of the Altar, and turns about to the Congregation: Then the Chief of the Clergy in whoſe Church the Ceremony of giving of the Aſhes is performed, goes up to the Altar, and lays the Aſhes on the Head of the officiating Prieſt in the Form of a Croſs, repeating theſe Words, Memento homo quia pulvis, es, &c. i. e. Remember Man that thou art Duſt, &c. After the Prieſt has received the Aſhes, he gives them to his Aſſiſtants, to all the Clergy there preſent, and at laſt to the whole Congregation. The Women as well as the Men, receive the Aſhes on their Foreheads.

A BISHOP receives the Aſhes ſitting, and with his Mitre off, from the officiating Canon; after which the Prelate, putting on his Mitre, and having a white Cloth before him, gives the Aſhes to the officiating Canon, who ſtoops before him: 'Tis the Biſhop's Province to give the Aſhes to a Churchman of [c] ſuperior Dignity, ſuch as an Archbiſhop or Patriarch. Princes, Ambaſſadors, and other Perſons of Diſtinction, receive the Aſhes after the Canons. The Canons and the ſuperior Clergy incline their Bodies when they receive them, but all the inferior Clergy and the Laity take them kneeling.

[a] Baudry, & Piſcara, Cerem. Eccleſ. Rom.
[b] Piſcara Prax. Cerem. Baudry Manual. Cerem. Theſe Aſhes are uſually given in the Morning.
[c] Baudry & Cerem. Epiſcop.

The Pope receives them from the officiating [a] Cardinal, who does not repeat the Memento, &c. to him; but the Cardinal ſtoops a little when he takes them from the Pope. If an Emperor were to aſſiſt at this Ceremony of Humiliation, he muſt take them after all the Cardinals; for the Princes of the Church are ſuperior to Temporal ones.

CARNIVAL, or SHROVE-TIDE, LENT, and EMB R WEEKS.

WE find, ſays a [b] Proteſtant Author, the Origin of the Carnival among the Aſcodrogites, a kind of Libertines who ſtarted up in the fourth Century, and revived the Bacchanals of the Heathens. Whether the Carnival be in Imitation of the Bacchanalia or the Saturnalia, is nothing to the Purpoſe; this only is certain, that the Licentiouſneſs which reigns during that Seaſon is not enjoin'd or approved. Theſe periodical Debauches are only tolerated, and the Antiquity of them makes them almoſt paſs for lawful. Maſquerades, Diſguiſes, and Change of Dreſs, were very frequent in ſeveral Feſtivals of the Heathens. Such were the Feſtivals juſt mention'd, the [c] Lupercalia, and the [d] Megaleſia of the Goddeſs Cybele.

LENT is an Imitation of the Faſting of our bleſſed Saviour. It muſt be of great Antiquity, ſince 'tis cited by ſeveral antient Fathers; but in the primitive Church, the Chriſtians did not always faſt during the preciſe Term of forty Days: We have Examples of Lent Seaſons that were of ſhorter Continuance, and of others that laſted longer. It was ſometimes uſual to begin Lent at Septuageſima, other Times at Sexageſima, and often at Quinquageſima. With ſome it held ſix Weeks, with others ſeven, and ſome again began it but three Weeks before Eaſter. It was kept very ſtrictly, for they uſed to abſtain not only from Wine, Fleſh, Meats, and all kinds of Luxury, but to faſt till the Evening. Laſtly, all Perſons were prohibited from marrying during Lent, which Cuſtom is obſerved to this Day.

[e] THE Faſt of the Ember Weeks is borrowed originally from the Jews. The Humiliation of the Ember Weeks conſiſts in three Days ſtrict Faſting in each Seaſon of the Year. By this Faſt the Faithful are taught that the four Parts of the Year are to be equally conſecrated to God. Some pretend that theſe Faſts were eſtabliſhed as early as the firſt Century of the Church, but that they were not abſolutely binding, and that a Perſon might tranſgreſs them without Scandal or Offence. 'Tis even ſaid, that this Coldneſs and Indifference was not ſuppreſſed but in Proceſs of Time by Councils: 'Tis further pretended, that the Ember Weeks were not inſtituted till the Year 460. by the Pope St. Leo: Moreover 'tis related, that Pope Gelaſius commanded that Prieſts and Deacons ſhould be ordained in thoſe Seaſons; and as it was cuſtomary in the Apoſtolic Age for Faſting and public Prayer to precede their Ordinations, 'twas but reaſonable that our preſent Ember Weeks ſhould be diſtinguiſhed by the ſame pious Exerciſes, and that the Faithful ſhould employ Faſting and Prayer to [f] implore ſuch Officers of God as might be worthy to ſerve his Church.

[a] Nihil dicens. Ceremon. Eccleſiæ Roman. Lib. ii.

[b] Hiſtory of the Ceremonies and Superſtitions that have been introduced in the Church.

[c] The Lupercalia were ſolemniz'd in the Month of March, when it was cuſtomary for People to put on all ſorts of Diſguiſes; but the moſt devout, in order to pleaſe the God Faunus, uſed to celebrate the Feſtival ſtark naked, the better to commemorate an Affair of Gallantry which happen'd to Faunus, deſcribed by Ovid in the ſecond Book of his Faſti. The Saturnalia were celebrated with equal Licentiouſneſs in the Month of December.

[d] This Feſtival was celebrated in the Beginning of the Spring, when it was uſual for all People to mask and diſguiſe themſelves ſo artfully, that they could hardly be known. See Herodian, Book i. Ch. 32.

[e] According to ſome the four Ember Weeks bear a Relation to four Faſts which the Jews denominated from the fourth, fifth, ſeventh and tenth Months. The Ember Weeks are obſerved in March, June, September, and December.

[f] Alet's Ritual.

2. Thurſday; Station in St. George's; all Thurſdays in Lent in Jeſus's, and in St. Andrea's de la Valle; a Sermon and Muſic in the Afternoon.

3. Friday; the Station is in St. John's, St. Paul's, and St. George's. All Fridays in Lent, the firſt and laſt excepted, the Service is performed in the Evening in the Oratory of St. Marcellus, with excellent Muſic, a Concert of Inſtruments, and a fine Symphony.

4. Saturday; the Station is in St. Triphon's and St. Auſtin's. All Saturdays in Lent, in the Afternoon, a Sermon and Muſic in our Lady of the Hills, in our Lady's of Loretto, and at Trajan's Pillar.

5. The firſt Sunday in Lent; Papal Service in the Apoſtolic Palace; a Biſhop Aſſiſtant ſings Maſs there, and the Procurator-General of the Order of St. Dominic preaches the Sermon. The Station is in St. John's of Lateran, and St. Peter's. All Sundays in Lent the bleſſed Sacrament is expoſed, with Illuminations and Muſic, in St. John's of Lateran, St. Praxedes's, St. Auſtin's, &c.

6. Monday; Station in St. Peter's in Vinculis; Feaſt in St. John's de la Pigna of the Priſoners.

7. Tueſday; Station at St. Anaſtaſia's.

8. Wedneſday, in St. Maria Maggiore's. All Wedneſdays in Lent, in the Afternoon, there is a Sermon and Muſic at St. Nicholas's of the Cæſarini, at St. Jerom's della Carità, &c.

9. Thurſday; Station at St. Laurence's in Paniſperna.

10. Friday; at the Holy Apoſtle's.

11. Saturday; at St. Peter's.

12. The ſecond Sunday in Lent; Papal Service in the Apoſtolical Palace; a Biſhop Aſſiſtant ſings Maſs; the Procurator-General of the Franciſcans preaches the Sermon; the Station is at St. Maria Maggiore's, and St. Maria la Navicella's.

13. Monday; Station at St. Clement's, and Feaſt at St. Peter's and St. Marcellinus's, for the Conſecration of the Church.

14. Tueſday; at St. Balbina's.

15. Wedneſday; at St. Cecilia's.

16. Thurſday; at St. Maria's in Traſtevere's.

17. Friday; at St. Vitalis's.

18. Saturday; at St. Peter's and St. Marcellinus's.

19. The third Sunday; ſolemn Maſs in the Apoſtolical Palace, at which the Pope aſſiſts; a Biſhop Aſſiſtant ſings Maſs, and the Procurator-General of the Auſtin Friars preaches the Sermon. The Station is at St. Laurence's without the Walls; at the Church of the Greeks, the Adoration of the Croſs is ſolemnly perform'd.

20. Monday; a Station at St. Mark's.

21. Tueſday; at St. Pudentiana's.

22. Wedneſday; at St. Sixtus's, St. Nereus's, and Achilleus's.

23. Thurſday; at St. Coſmas and St. Damianus's in campo Vaccino.

24. Friday; at St. Laurence's in Lucina.

25. Saturday; at St. Cajus's, St. Suſanna's, and St. Mary's of the Angels, at Dioeleſian's Baths.

26. The fourth Sunday in Lent; ſolemn Maſs in the Apoſtolical Palace, at which his Holineſs aſſiſts; a Cardinal Prieſt ſings Maſs; the Procurator-General of the Carmes preaches the Sermon; the Pope bleſſes the Golden Roſe; the Station is at the Holy Croſs in Jeruſalem.

Sere-

The Ceremony of BLESSING the GOLDEN ROSE.

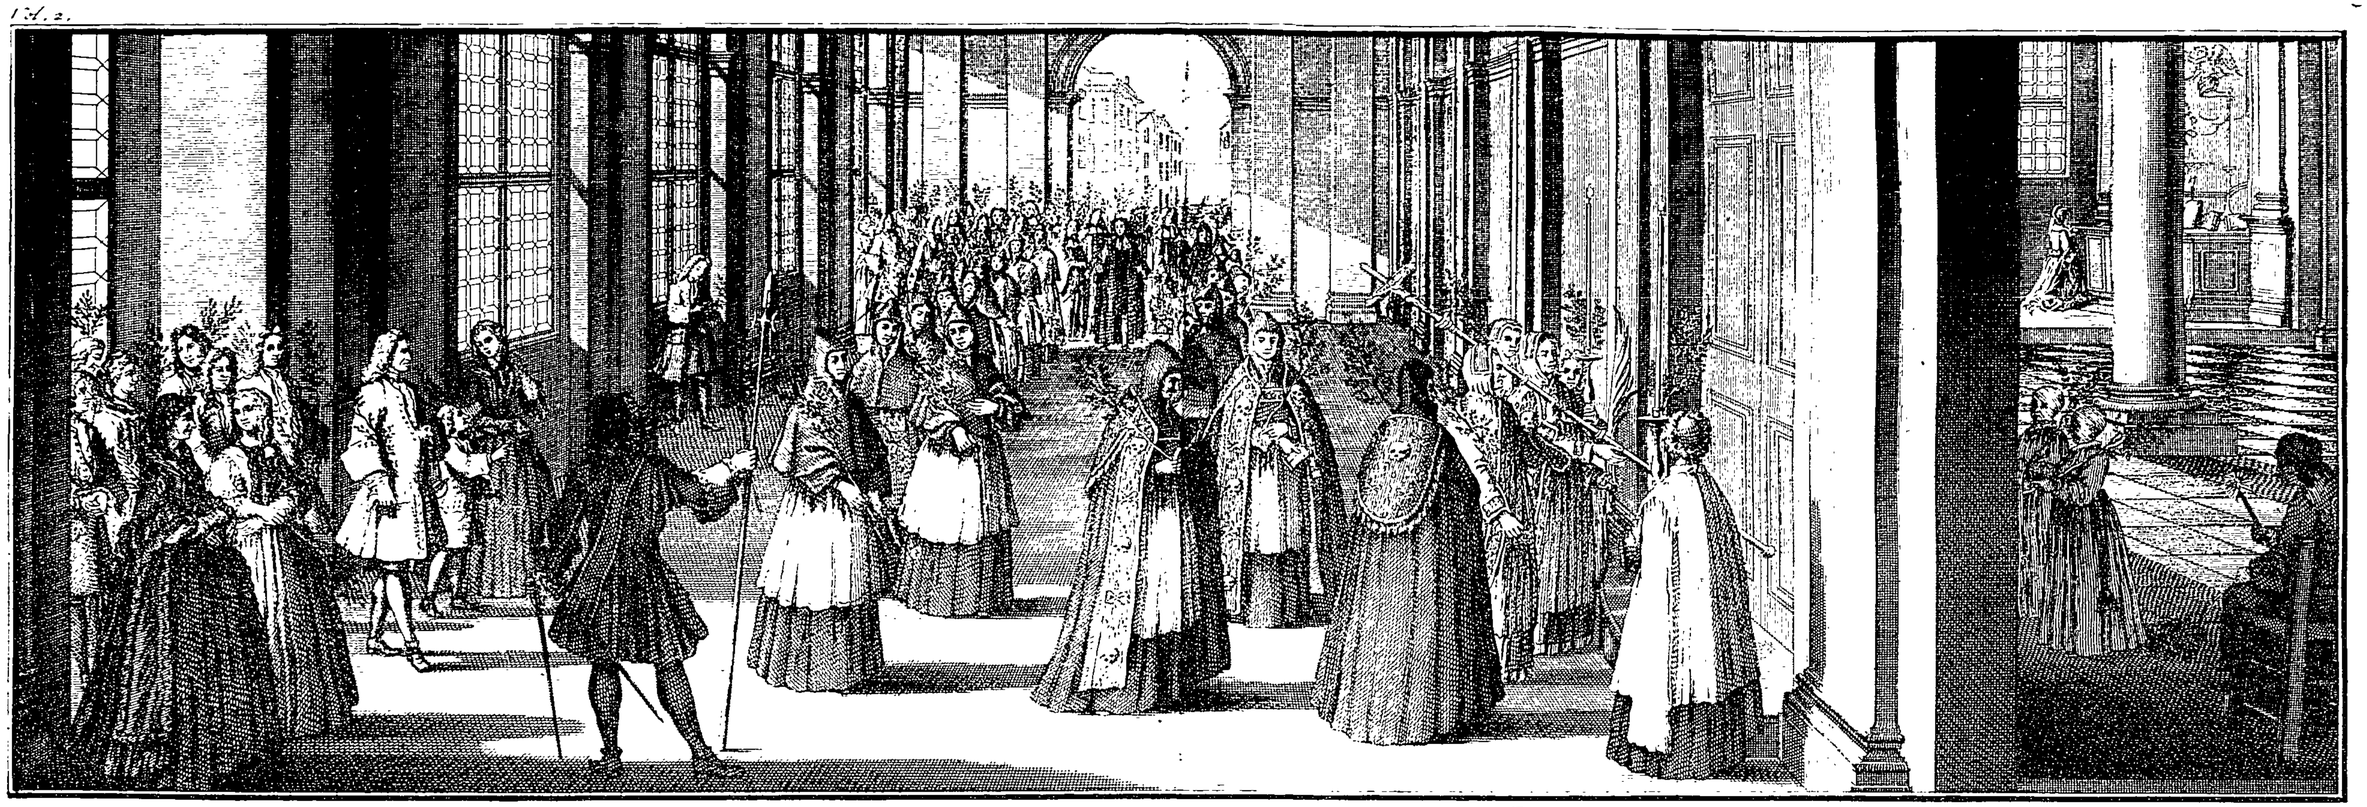
POPE Urban V. ſent, the fourth Sunday in Lent of the Year 1366, a Golden Roſe to Joan Queen of Sicily, and made a Decree by which it was ordain'd, that the Popes ſhould conſecrate one at that Seaſon every Year. This Golden Roſe is enrich'd with precious Stones, and is often ſent by the Pope to Princeſſes, or to ſome Church, as a Mark of his peculiar Affection. His Holineſs bleſſes the Roſe in the Room where the Ornaments are kept, immediately before he goes to hear Maſs in his own [a] Chapel. The Bleſſing of the Roſe is perform'd with Frankincenſe, Holy Water, Balm, and Muſk, mix'd together. The Benediction being ended, the Pope goes out of the Room, and one of his privy Chamberlain's carries the Roſe before him, and lays it on a Candleſtick. [b] Then a Cardinal Deacon preſents it to his Holineſs, who taking it in his Left Hand, walks on to the Chapel, and with his Right Hand bleſſes the Faithful who line the Way. After this the Roſe is return'd to the Cardinal Deacon, and he gives it to a Clerk of the Chamber, who lays it on the Altar. Maſs being ended, his Holineſs gives the Roſe to whomſoever he thinks proper. We muſt not omit that the Sunday of the Golden Roſe is called [c] Lætare, and that the ſacred [d] College come into the Chapel cloath'd in Caſſocks of the Colour of dried Roſes.



THE Roſe is remarkable for three Qualities, which are to be applied to the Faithful of the Church, viz. for its Colour, its Fragrancy, and Taſte. The Subſtance of the Golden Roſe, the Muſk and the Balm with which it is bleſs'd, are ſo many Emblems of the Divine, the Spiritual, and Human Nature of JESUS CHRIST. We owe this ingenious Diſcovery to a [e] Roman Prelate.

27. Monday; Station at the Church of the four Coronati.
28. Tueſday; at St. Laurence's in Damaſo.
29. Wedneſday; at St. Paul's.
30. Thurſday; at St. Martin's of the Mountains, and St. Silveſter's in Campo Marzo.
31. Friday; at St. Euſebius's and St. Bibiana's.
32. Saturday; at St. Nicholas's in Carcere.
33. The fifth Sunday in Lent, Pontifical Service in the Apoſtolical Palace; an Aſſiſtant Biſhop ſings Maſs; the Procurator-General of the Servites preaches the Sermon: the Station is at St. Peter's, and the Feſtival at St. Lazarus's without the City.
34. Monday; Station at St. Chryſogone's.
35. Tueſday; at St. Querico's, and St. Maria's in via lata.
36. Wedneſday; at St. Marcellus's.
37. Thurſday; at St. Apollinarius's, and the Converts in the Walks.
38. Friday; at St. Stephen's the Round; Feaſt at St. Marcellus's for our Lady of the Seven Sorrows.
39. Saturday; at St. John's before the Latin Gate, and at St. Cæſarius's; the Image of our Saviour in the Sancta Sanctorum is unveil'd, and that of the bleſſed Virgin's in St. Maria Maggiore's, and continues ſo till Low-Sunday.
40. Palm Sunday; Service in the Apoſtolical Chapel, at which the Pope aſſiſts; his Holineſs gives the Bleſſing, and diſtributes the Palms. A Proceſſion is afterwards made round the Royal Hall, and a Cardinal Prieſt ſings Maſs. Station at St. John's of Late-

[a] Sacra. Cerem. Lib. ii.
[b] Piſcara Praxis Cerem.
[c] 'Tis call'd Lætare from a Leſſon which is read on that Day, which begins at Ver. 10. of the lxvith Chapter of Iſaiah's Propbecy.
[d] Piſcara. ibid.
[e] Caſal. de Vet. Chriſt. Ritib.

ran,

Pl. 2.

The PROCESSION with PALMS on PALM-SUNDAY. ‖ La PROCESSION des PALMES le DIMANCHE des RAMEAUX.

B. Picart, del. C. Du. Bosc. exc.

The PROCESSION of y^{e} B. SACRAMENT on Corpus CHRISTI-DAY. ‖ La PROCESSION du S.^{T} SACREMENT le jour de la FÊTE-DIEU.

ran. At St. John of the Maronites, the Proceſſion of the Pſalms is made, and high Maſs ſung in the Syrian Tongue.

The Ceremonies of PALM SUNDAY.

ON the firſt Sunday after the Lætare the Croſs and the Images of the Saints are veil'd, and continue ſo till the Cloſe of Eaſter-Eve. On Palm Sunday Palms are prepared at the Pope's Chapel; and for want of [a] theſe Olive-Branches are uſed, adorned with the Leaves of the Palm-Tree, tied up neatly in the Shape of a Croſs: Theſe Palm or Olive-Branches are about five Foot in Length. Things being thus prepared, the Pope goes in Proceſſion to the Chapel; when the Prayers and Ceremonies uſual in all other [b] Benedictions are ended, his Holineſs ſprinkles and incenſes the Branches. After the Conſecration of the Branches, the chief Cardinal Biſhop preſents two of the largeſt of them to his Holineſs; he gives them to two Perſons of Diſtinction, who, according to the Roman Ceremonial, muſt ſtand on each Side of the Pope, with the Branches in their Hands. The above-mentioned Cardinal preſents him a third Branch, leſs than the former; this the Pope gives to a Chamberlain, and preſents the reſt to the Cardinals, Prelates, Ambaſſadors, and Noblemen, who aſſiſt at the Ceremony. The Branches which the Cardinal-Biſhop offers to his Holineſs, are beautifully adorned with Flowers, and muſt be kiſs'd by thoſe to whom they are preſented: When the chief Cardinal-Biſhop receives them, he has the Honour to kiſs his Holineſs's Hand and Knee; the reſt of the Cardinals alſo kiſs his Knee, but the Clergy of an inferior Order to theſe, only kiſs his Foot. The Ceremony concludes with diſtributing the Branches among the People; and during the Service of the Paſſion, all the Congregation hold their Branches in their Hands.

ON Palm-Sunday the Altars are adorned with Palm or Olive-Branches; and the Branches deſigned to be diſtributed are laid upon a Table near the Altar, and remain there covered with a white Cloth, till the Time of bleſſing them.

IT were needleſs to acquaint the Reader with the Incident which this Ceremony commemorates. Alet tells us in his Ritual, that by the bleſſing of the Branches, we are taught that all our Thoughts, Deſires, and Faculties, ought to be offer'd to God, formed according to his Spirit, and actuated by the Impulſe of his Grace: But this myſtical Interpretation is a little forc'd.

ONE remarkable Cuſtom practis'd on Palm-Sunday, and which is ſtill obſerved in ſeveral Parts of Chriſtendom, is the ſetting a Priſoner at Liberty; upon which Occaſion the Biſhop and Clergy go in Proceſſion; the Ceremony of which Delivery is a Type of our ſpiritual Freedom. This Ceremony is borrowed from the Jews, who uſed antiently to ſet a Priſoner at Liberty on the Day of their Paſſover, in the Commemoration of their Deliverance from the Egyptian Bondage.

[c] AFTER the Palms are diſtributed, the Proceſſion of the Palm-Branches is performed. It begins by the Deacon's preſenting the officiating Prieſt with one of theſe Branches, which he kiſſes, as alſo the Prieſt's Hand: This being done, the Sub-Deacon takes the Croſs, and goes and ſtands between the two Incenſe-Bearers, at the Entrance of the Sanctuary or Chancel: Then the March begins. Immediately after the Deacon,

[a] Sacra. Cerem. Eccl. R. Lib. 2.

[b] The Ceremony is here deſcribed in the ſame Manner as it is perform'd when the Pope himſelf bleſſes the Branches.

[c] The Prints repreſenting the Proceſſion of the Pſalms, and of the Holy Sacrament, were drawn from the Originals at Paris.

having knelt down, and turn'd himſelf towards the People, has repeated to them, Procedamus in pace, i. e. Let us go in Peace, this Proceſſion is perform'd round the Church; and when 'tis ended, Maſs is ſaid. During the ſinging of the Paſſion, the ſeveral Members of the Congregation hold their Branches in their Hands, not excepting the officiating Prieſt, and the Miniſters of the Altar: None are excepted but the Deacons, who repeat the Service of the Paſſions, and the Acolytes, their Attendants. After Maſs is ended, every Member of the Congregation carries home his Branch which has been bleſſed: And the Rituals inform us, that a Branch thus bleſſed, is a Preſervative from ſeveral Diſeaſes, and an Inſtrument of numberleſs Bleſſings.

THE Sacriſtan reſerves ſome of theſe Branches, in order to burn them to Aſhes for the next Aſh-Wedneſday. We are told, that Pope Agapetus, who lived about the Middle of the ſixth Century, firſt inſtituted the Proceſſions which are performed in Paſſion Week.

41. Monday, in Holy Week; Station at St. Praxades's; Feſtival ot St. Andrews a Ponte Mole, for the Tranſlation of that Apoſtle's Head.

42. Tueſday, ditto; Station at St. Priſcus's, and at St. Sabas's on Mount Aventine.

43. Wedneſday, ditto; Station at St. Maria Maggiore's: In the Evening the Pope aſſiſts ſolemnly at the Office in the Apoſtolic Chapel, for the Service of the Tenebræ; as likewiſe the two Days following at St. James's of the Spaniards, and at St. Apollinarius's: The Tenebræ are ſung, attended with a Concert of Muſic.

THE Service of the Tenebræ is performed on Wedneſday, Thurſday, and Friday in [a] Holy Week; at which Time neither Flowers nor Images are allowed to be ſet upon the Altars, but they muſt be covered with Purple. Six Candleſticks made of Wood, or ſome other cheap Matter, containing ſix Tapers made of common Wax, are ſet on the Altar; they take the Hoſt away from the Altar, and carry it to ſome private Place, with the Lights and Ornaments belonging to it.

ON the Epiſtle-Side, where the Sub-Deacon uſually aſſiſts at the Beginning of Maſs, or during the Introite, a kind of wooden Branch, or Chandelier made in a Triangular Form, is ſet, in which they put fifteen Tapers made of common Wax, all which are lighted; as alſo thoſe of the Altar before Matins begin. After each Pſalm peculiar to this Office is ſung, the Sacriſtan, or an Acolyte, puts out with a Reed made for that Purpoſe, one of the Tapers in this Branch; obſerving to begin with that Taper which ſtands at the greateſt Diſtance from that in the Center of the Triangle, which is the only one not extinguiſhed. The whole Ceremony is accompanied with ſinging, proper Leſſons, &c. whereof it were needleſs to mention the Particulars here, ſince they can be of no Uſe but to the Clergy. While the Benedictus is ſinging, all the Candles on the Altar, except that plac'd before the bleſſed Sacrament, are put out; and the Service muſt be ſo ordered, that they all may be extinguiſhed juſt at the Concluſion of the Canticle. As for the Taper that was left lighted in the Triangle, an Acolyte kneels down, and lifts it up on high on a little Table, while the final Anthem of the Benedictus is repeated; but he hides it either behind or under the Altar, on the Epiſtle Side, at the ſinging of the Verſe which begins as follows, Chriſtus factus eſt, &c. After which the Miſerere is ſung in a kneeling Poſture, and followed by the Prayer, whereof the firſt Words are Reſpice quæſumus: All which the officiating Prieſt, who is ſtill upon his Knees and bare-headed, as alſo his Attendants, repeats alouds, till he comes to the Qui tecum, which he ſays to himſelf. Scarce are the Prayers ended, [b] when a great Noiſe is made with Sticks, and often Fiſts, againſt the

[a] Baudry Manual. Cerem.

[b] The Maſter of the Ceremonies ſtrikes the firſt Stroke upon the Steps of the Altar.

Seats

Seats and Benches; the Children join in the Chorus, and the People, whoſe Devotion is generally inconſiſtent with good Senſe, love Noiſe too much to leave off preſently: But an Acolyte puts an End to it, by ſhewing the Taper which he had hid behind the Altar; for this is the Signal for Silence.

THE Pope aſſiſts at this Ceremony; clothed in his red Cope, with its Cape turned over his Head, but the Croſs is not carried before him; and the Cardinals, who are clothed in Purple, neither pay Obeiſance to him, nor aſſiſt at the Altar.

44. On Holy Thurſday a Rattle is made uſe of inſtead of Bells, except in Time of Maſs, at the Gloria in Excelſis, when a Bell is rung. The Altars and the Croſs muſt be covered with White, and Maſs celebrated with that Colour. No private Maſs muſt be performed on [a] Holy Thurſday; then all the Clergy receive the Communion from the Hands of their Superior, the better to repreſent the Supper of our Lord with his Diſciples; but if they are under any indiſpenſible Neceſſity of celebrating ſome [b] private Maſs, it muſt be done before public Service.

ON Holy Thurſday the Pope aſſiſts ſolemnly at the Office in the Apoſtolic Chapel; a Cardinal Biſhop ſings Maſs, which being ended, the Pope carries the Hoſt in Proceſſion to the Sepulchre, prepared in the Chapel Paulina.

The PROCESSION of the HOST to the SEPULCHRE.

HERE follows the Ceremony of this Proceſſion, which is made after a ſolemn Maſs. It were needleſs to relate how many Times the officiating Prieſt and his Aſſiſtants [c] kneel, firſt on one Side of the Altar, then in the Middle, and afterwards on the ſecond Step; nor how that after being come down from the Altar, he puts off the Maniple, (a kind of little Stola) and puts on the Chaſuble, and continues in Prayer whilſt the Sacriſtan, or ſome other Perſon, goes and lights the Tapers, lays the Corporal or bleſſed Table-cloth, on the Altar, &c. that another gives out the Tapers which are to be uſed in the Proceſſion; that the Incenſe-Bearers get ready their Thuribles, &c. and the Croſs-Bearers clothe themſelves in White, in order to walk with the proceſſional Croſs. Neither ſhall we obſerve the Manner in which theſe Miniſters range themſelves about the Altar; or how they draw near to it, kneel down and pray; for all theſe ſeveral Ceremonies reſemble thoſe which have been already deſcrib'd. Strict Care muſt be taken in general not to turn their Backs upon the Hoſt; this the Prieſt firſt incenſes thrice, it being cover'd with a Veil; at the ſame Time an Acolyte puts another over the Prieſt's Shoulders; after which a Deacon goes and takes the Hoſt from the Altar, and preſents it to the officiating Prieſt, who lifts it up on high before the Congregation, the Choir at the ſame Time ſinging the Pange Lingua. This being done, the Proceſſion ſets out, with each Perſon his Taper in his Hand, in ſuch Order that the Youngeſt walk firſt, and the Oldeſt laſt. The ſuperior Clergy walk immediately after the Prieſt, who marches under a Canopy, and carries the Hoſt. Being come to the Sepul-

[a] Some Writers tell us, that private Maſſes were firſt inſtituted in the ſeventh Century, and that they took their Riſe from the Ignorance of the People, and the Decay of Piety. At that Time the People frequented the Communion leſs, and the Cup was inſenſibly confined to the Prieſt only; and inſtead of conſecrating a large Loaf for all the Communicants, as was always the Cuſtom, they only conſecrated common Wafers. It is alſo affirmed, that Low Maſſes were inſtituted at the ſame Time: However, ſo far from believing that the Original of private Maſſes is of ſo late Date, or that 'tis to be aſcribed to a Decay of Piety, we are perſuaded they owe their Original to the fervent Devotion of the primitive Chriſtians, who uſed frequently to communicate in private.

[b] Piſcara Praxis Cerem.

[c] Baudry Manual. Cerem.

chre, chre, the Youngeſt place themſelves near the Croſs, which is ſet oppoſite to the Grave, and the Oldeſt place themſelves behind them: This being done, they all fall down on their Knees, the Incenſe and Croſs-Bearers excepted; the Choir ſings and repeats the Anthem Tantum ergo ſacramentum, till the Concluſion of the Ceremony. The Prieſt incenſes the Hoſt, when a Deacon takes it up and holds it in his Hands, till ſuch Time as the Prieſt kneels down before it. This being done, the Deacon puts it again in the Tabernacle, where the Prieſt incenſes it thrice; after which the Deacon locks up the Tabernacle, and gives the Key of it to the Maſter of the Ceremonies. This is what is call'd the carrying of the Hoſt to the Sepulchre. At the Return of the Proceſſion the Tapers are put out, thoſe of the Acolytes who walk before the Croſs-Bearers, excepted. The officiating Prieſts puts off his white Veſtments, and puts on Purple ones, in order to ſay the Office of the Veſpers; his Attendants do the ſame, and after the Veſpers are ended they uncover the Altars.

THE Pope performs the ſame Ceremonies in the Paulin Chapel.

The Manner of Uncovering the ALTAR.

THE officiating Prieſt, who is to perform this Ceremony, muſt be cloth'd in Purple: It begins by uncovering the high Altar, when the Prieſt takes from the Altar its Coverings, its Pallia, and other Ornaments; but does not take off the Croſs and its Lights. They even take away the little Table where the Church-Plate ſtands, as alſo the Carpets and Flowers, and likewiſe uncover the Pulpit and the Church-Walls; all which the Sacriſtan carries into the Veſtry. The Croſs is cover'd with a black or purple-colour'd Veil; the Tabernacle is veil'd in the ſame Manner, and is left open, as being the Houſe of the [a] Living God, who has abſented himſelf from it for ſome Time. The [b] Croſs being thus cover'd with a purple or black Veil, muſt be placed before the Tabernacle. When the Altars have been uncover'd, in order to ſolemnize the Paſſion of our Saviour, a black Canopy is ſet over the high Altar, and the Walls of the Church are hung with the ſame Colour. It were needleſs to acquaint the Reader, that this mournful Ceremony is uſher'd in by certain Anthems.

[c] WE are told, that the uncovering of the Altars repreſents the ignominious Manner in which our Saviour was ſtripp'd of his Garments.

AFTER the Ceremonies above-mention'd are ended, the Pope is carried to the Gallery, where the Bull in Cœna Domini is read; by which his Holineſs excommunicates in a ſolemn Manner all Heretics and unrepenting Sinners; after which he gives his Bleſſing to all the People there aſſembled.

[a] Baudry Manuale.
[b] Piſcaræ Praxis Cerem.
[c] Caſal de Ritib.

The

The CEREMONY of washing the feet of twelve POOR PERSONS on HOLY-THURSDAY.

Cerémonie de laver les pieds à douze PAUVRES le JEUDI SAINT.

B. Picart. de. C. Du. Bosc. exc.

The ADORATION of the CROSSE on GOOD FRIDAY.

*L'*ADORATION de la CROIX par le PEUPLE le VENDREDI SAINT.

The EXCOMMUNICATION pronounced on HOLY THURSDAY.

THIS is what is generally call'd the Publication of the Bull in Cœna Domini, which is given out from the Gallery of the Bleſſing. [a] The Pope is then cloth'd in a red Chaſuble, and a Stola of the ſame Colour; and ſtands in a kind of high Pulpit, the better to be ſeen of the People. The Sub-Deacon, who ſtands at his Holineſs's Left Hand, reads the Bull which is in Latin; and the Deacon who ſtands at his Right, reads the ſame to them in Italian. In the mean Time the Candles are lighted, and each of them takes one in his Hand. When the Excommunication is promulgated, the Pope and Cardinals put out their Candles, and throw them among the Croud, after which the black Cloth that cover'd the Pulpit is taken away.

[b] Two Cardinal Deacons Aſſiſtants publiſh the plenary Indulgence; one in Latin, the other in Italian.

AFTER this his Holineſs waſhes the Feet of [c] twelve Prieſts in the Ducal Hall, and entertains them at Dinner in another Apartment, himſelf waiting upon them; and preſents to each of them two Medals, the one of Gold the other of Silver, as alſo an Apoſtolical Garment made of white Serge.

The CEREMONY of WASHING the FEET of the POOR.

THIS Ceremony is call'd in Italian Mandato, from the Anthem which begins with theſe Words, Mandatum Novum, which is ſung at it; the Rituals alſo call it Mandatum.

HERE follows the Deſcription which a [d] modern Writer gives us of this Ceremony, performed in Imitation of our Saviour's waſhing the Feet of his Diſciples. The Pope and Cardinals being come to the Ducal Hall, where the Ceremony of waſhing the Feet is perform'd, the Cardinal Deacons Aſſiſtants, clothe his Holineſs with his purple Stola, his red Cope, and plain Mitre. Their Eminences are cloth'd in purple Copes, and his Holineſs puts three Spoonfuls of odoriferous Spices into the Thurible, " and gives his " Bleſſing to the Cardinal Deacon, who is to ſing the Goſpel, which begins, [e] Ante diem " feſtum Paſchæ: After which one of the Apoſtolical Sub-Deacons gives the Pope a Book " of the New Teſtament to kiſs; and the Cardinal Deacon incenſes him thrice; im- " mediately after which a Chorus of Muſicians ſing the thirty fourth Verſe of the above- " mention'd Chapter, in which are theſe Words, Mandatum novum do Vobis; A new " Commandment I give unto you.

" As ſoon as the Pope hears theſe Words ſung, he takes off his Cope, and putting " on a white Apron, waſhes the Feet of thirteen poor Prieſts, Strangers, who ſit on a " high Form or Bench, cloth'd in white Camblet, with a kind of Capouch or Cape, " that reaches down to the Middle of their Arms. This, at the Pope's Court, is call'd

[a] Sacra Cerem. Eccl. Rom. Lib. ii.
[b] Id Ibid.
[c] The Roman Ceremonial has thirteen.
[d] Aimon.
[e] John xiii.

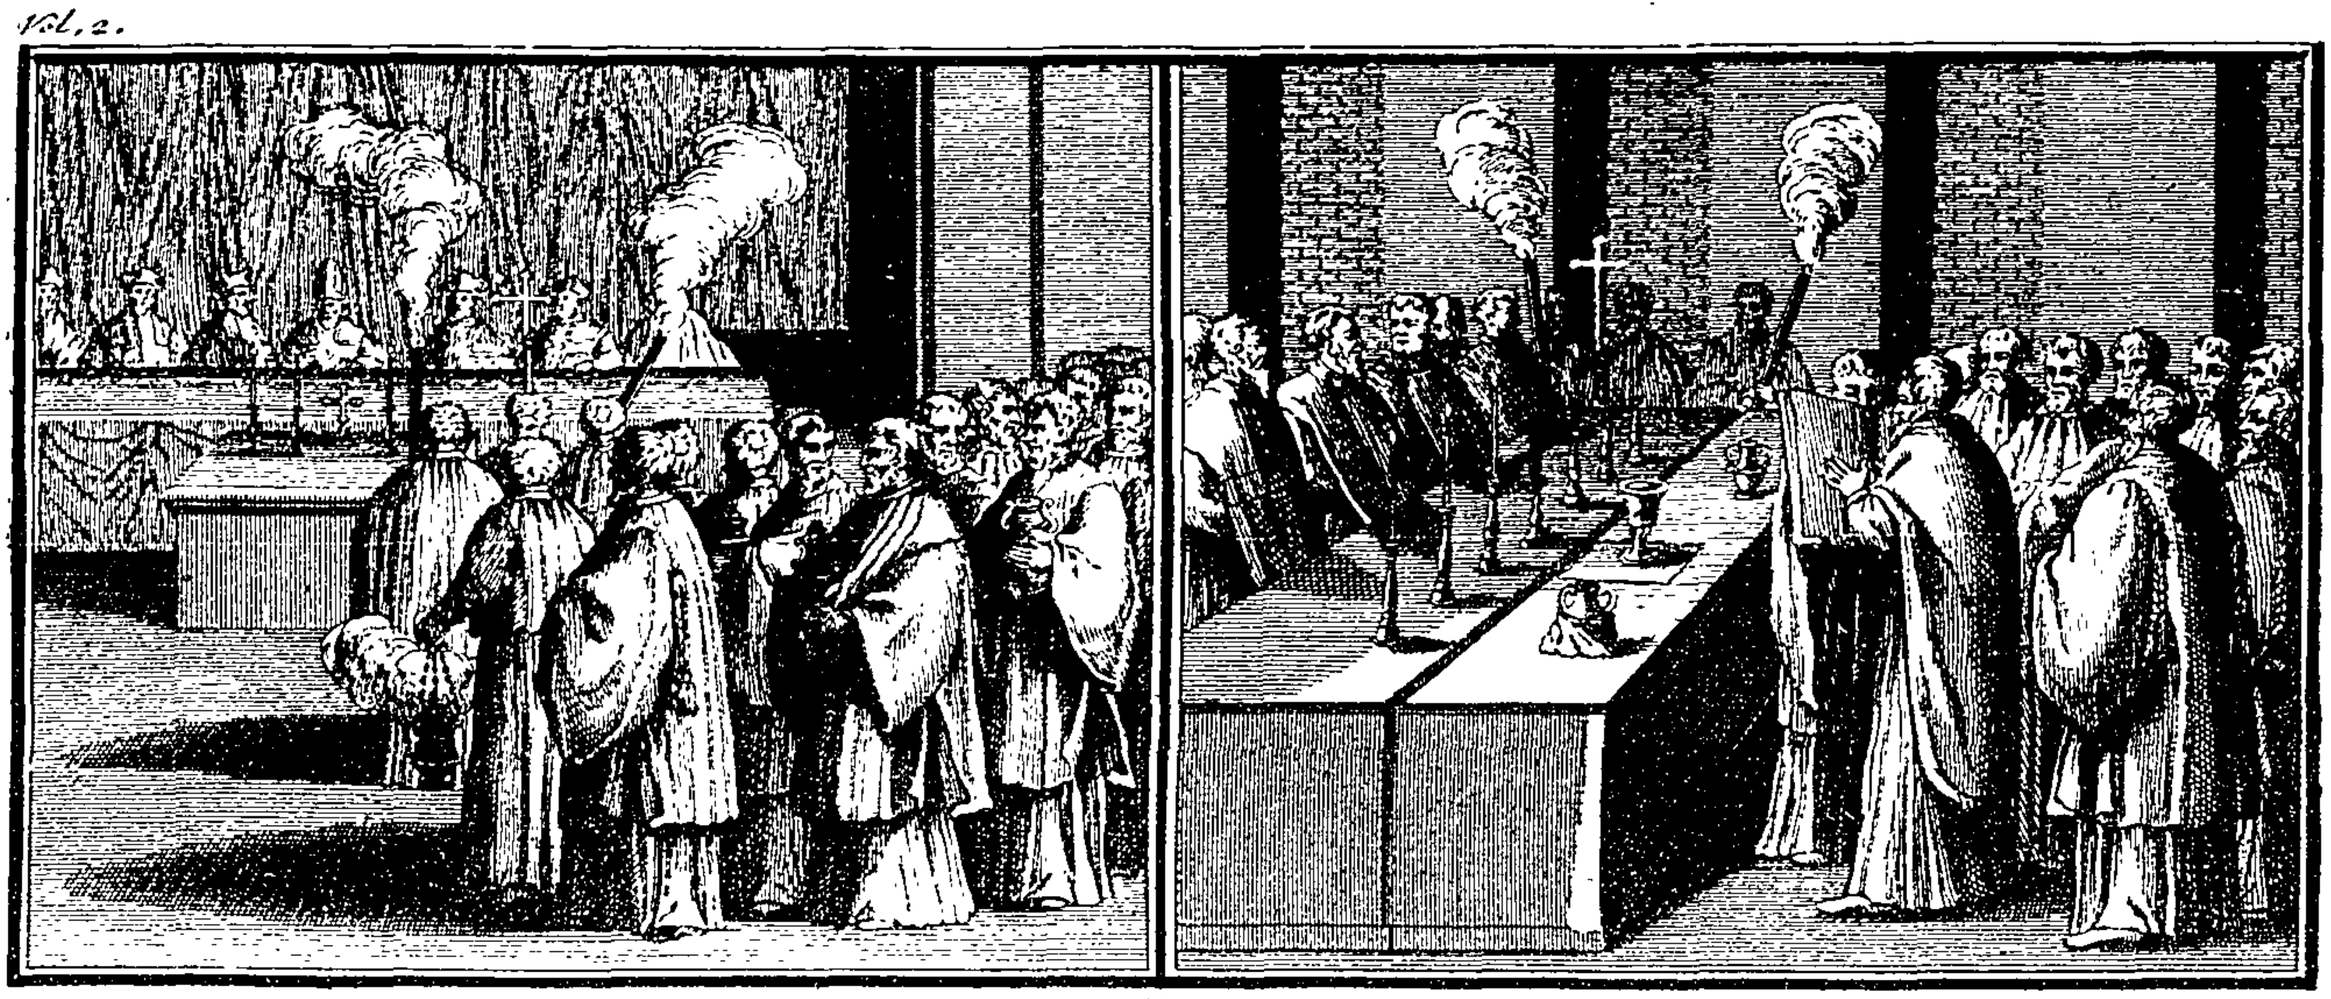
" an Apoſtolical Garment. The above-mentioned Prieſts have their Right Leg bare, " which is well waſh'd over with Soap, before they preſent it to him to waſh: When he has " done, his Treaſurer, by his Order, gives to each of them two Medals, the one of Gold, " the other of Silver, weighing an Ounce each; the Major-Domo preſents them a Nap- " kin, with which the Dean of the Cardinal College, or one of the moſt antient Biſhops " of the Apoſtolic College, dries their Feet: Afterwards the Pope returns to his Seat, " takes off his Apron, waſhes his Hands in Water, which a Layman of the higheſt Qua- " lity there preſent, pours out to him; and afterwards wipes them with a Napkin, " which is preſented to him by the chief Cardinal Biſhop. This being done, the Pope " again puts on his Cope and Mitre, and afterwards ſings the Lord's Prayer, and ſeveral " others in Latin; after which he goes into the Veſtry, where he leaves his pontifical " Veſtments, and withdraws to his Apartment, accompanied by the Cardinals."

THIS Ceremony is performed much after the ſame Manner in the reſt of the Churches in Rome, and in other Places, by the Biſhops and Curates of Pariſhes. The Place where the [a] Ceremony is perform'd, muſt be adorned and perfumed with Flowers and odoriferous Herbs; there muſt be at leaſt a Table in Form of an Altar, neatly cover'd. The Croſs muſt be veil'd with White, to denote that Purity whereof the Ceremony of waſhing the Feet is a Type; and as every Thing muſt allude to this, the Rituals obſerve that the Candles which are lighted at this ſolemn Act, muſt be made of the whiteſt Wax. The Credences or Tables, and the Baſons into which the Water is pour'd, muſt alſo be adorn'd with Flowers.

" THE thirteen Prieſts, whoſe Feet have been waſhed by the Pope, and who are at " that Day call'd Apoſtles, are an Hour afterwards carried into a beautiful Apartment " in the Vatican, in which there hangs one of the fineſt Pictures in Rome, repreſenting " the Battle of the Emperor Conſtantine. In this Apartment the thirteen Prieſts are en- " tertain'd with a moſt ſplendid Dinner. They are no ſooner ſeated than the Pope " comes in, and preſents to each of them the firſt Diſh, and afterwards pours out to each " of them the firſt Glaſs of Wine; during which he diſcourſes to them with great Fa- " miliarity, and grants them ſeveral Privileges on that Occaſion; which being done he " withdraws.



" THEN the Pope's Preacher in Ordinary begins his Sermon in the aboveſaid Apart- " ment, while the thirteen Prieſts are ſitting at Dinner, in Lieu of the ſpiritual Lec- " ture uſual at Meals in all Eccleſiaſtical Societies. The Preacher who officiates on this " Occaſion is the ſame that generally preaches once a Week before the Pope in his " Chamber during Lent and Advent. On this Occaſion the Pope ſits in a Gallery un- " ſeen by any Perſon, and the Cardinals ſit round it, clothed in purple Copes, as in the " Conſiſtory.

" BUT in caſe of the Pope's Abſence, the Cardinal Deacon, in the Preſence of the " whole Apoſtolical College, performs the Ceremony of waſhing the Feet of the thir- " teen poor Prieſts." The Ceremony ends with a ſumptuous Entertainment, which his Holineſs gives to the Cardinals, and the whole is heightned with a fine Concert of Muſic. 'Tis thus that Rome annually beholds the Image of the Lord's Supper with his Apoſtles renewed. The Magiſtrates of Rome are preſent at the Ceremony of waſhing the Feet, which is perform'd in the Hoſpital of St. John of Lateran; the ſame Ceremony is likewiſe exhibited in a ſolemn Manner at La Conſolatione, and in other Places.

[a] Baudry Manual. Cerem.

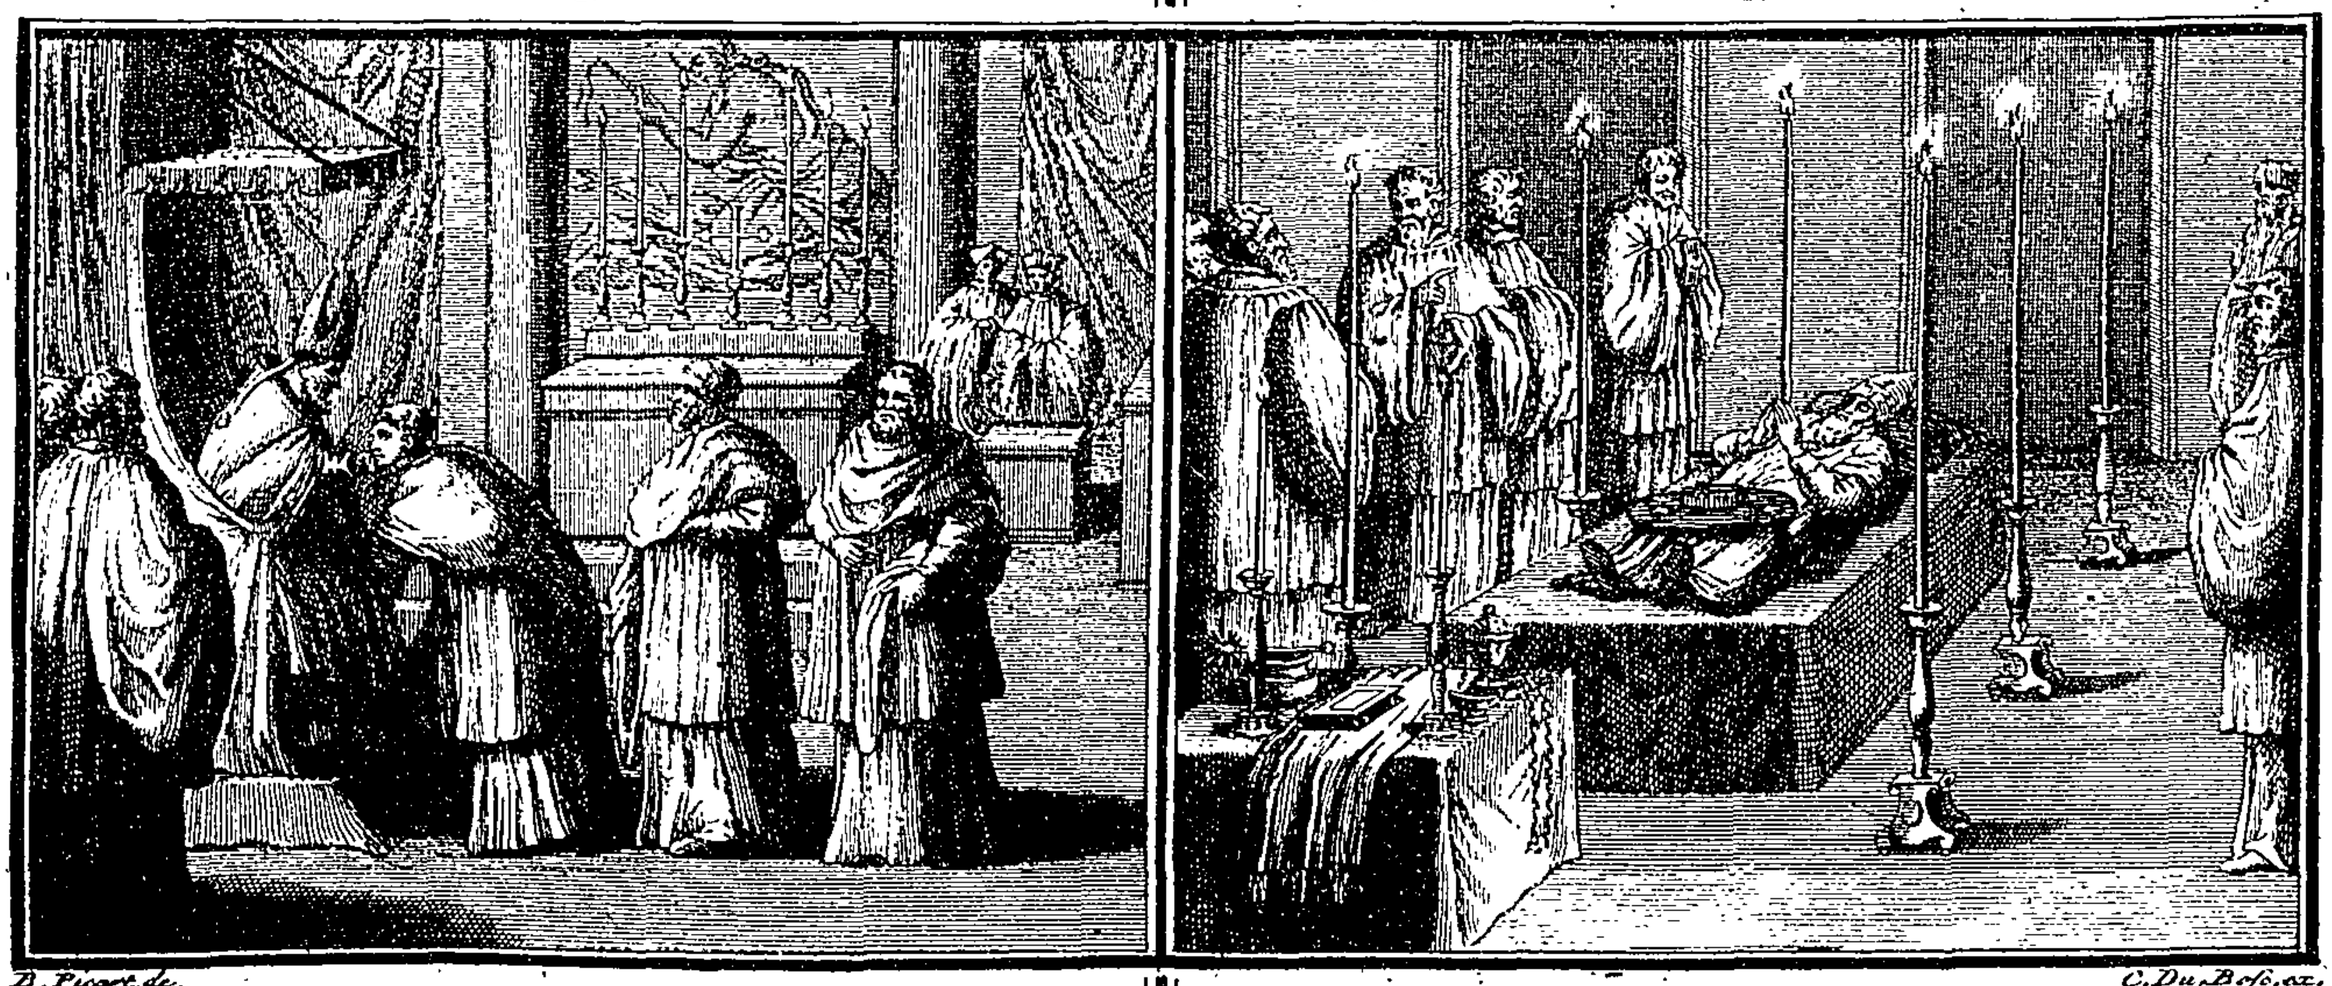
IN



Vol. 2.

The HOLY OILS carried in PROCESSION. | On porte en PROCESSION les SAINTES HUILES. | BENEDICTION of ye HOLY OILS. | BENEDICTION des SAINTES HUILES.

The reception of a BISHOP when he Visits his DIOCES. | Maniere dont L'EVEQUE est receu a la visite de son DIOCESE | The BISHOP gives his PASTORAL CHARGE. | L'EVEQUE fait L'EXORTATION PASTORALE.

B, Picart, de. C, Du Bosc, ex.

The BISHOP'S hand KISS'D. | On baise la MAIN de L'EVEQUE. | The BISHOPS CORPS lies in the CHURCH. | Le CORPS de L'EVEQUE est exposé dans L'EGLISE.

In a Word, 'tis ſolemniz'd on Holy Thurſday by all the Roman Catholic Princes in Europe. In France the King's chief Phyſician makes choice of twelve Children for that Purpoſe, whoſe Feet are waſhed by his Majeſty, and he himſelf ſerves up the Diſhes. They are afterwards preſented in the King's Name with Money, Bread, and Clothes. [a] The King of Spain performs this Ceremony in his Anti-Chamber, after having performed his Devotions at Chapel: For this Purpoſe Forms are fixed in the Anti-Chamber for the poor Men to ſit on, and oppoſite to them long Tables are placed, on which they dine; the Stuff to make their Clothes is alſo brought into the ſame Apartment, and for each a Purſe of Money. The Officers of the Pantry provide the Victuals for theſe poor People; thoſe of the Cellar furniſh each of them with Wine and Water; and thoſe of the Fruitery ſerve up the ſeveral Courſes, and adorn the Table with Flowers, &c. The Clerk of the Alms cauſes each poor Man to ſit down on the Bench where their Feet are to be waſhed; here they are viſited by the Phyſician of the Chamber, to ſee that they have no infectious Diſtemper: The Apothecary, the Clerk of the Alms, the chief Marſhal of the Houſhold, and the principal Almoner, waſh their Feet very clean, to prevent their being offenſive to his Majeſty.

" As ſoon as the Holy Sacrament is repoſited in the Tabernacle of the Sepulchre, the " King comes out of the Chapel, and goes in Proceſſion to the Anti-Chamber, attend- " ed by his Stewards with their Staves; the Officer in waiting takes care to put the " People in Order, to prevent Confuſion.

" The King's Guards are drawn up in two Lines in the Great Hall, and the Lieute- " nant who commands them ſtands at the lower End of the poor Men's Table with two " of the ſaid Guards.

As ſoon as the King is come, the Deacons begin to ſing the Goſpel, when imme- " diately his Majeſty takes off his Hat and Sword, ties a Cloth round him which the " chief Almoner preſents him with, and in his Abſence the Sumiller de Courtine, and " waſhes the poor Men's Feet: This being done, the King puts on his Hat and Sword, " and the Clerk of the Almonry cauſes the poor Men to ſit down at Table.

" Then the King begins to ſerve up the firſt Courſes, which he afterwards removes, " and gives to one of the Officers of his own Table, in order for their being put into the " Voiders.

" Whilst the King is ſerving up the firſt Courſe, the Gentlemen of the Bed-Cham- " ber go according to their Seniority, and take the other Diſhes at the Door of the A- " partment where they ſtand; and each of theſe, aſſiſted by his Domeſtics, carries the " Courſe deſigned for each poor Perſon, and gives it to the Comptroller, who preſents " two Diſhes to the King, which his Majeſty ſets before one of the poor Men. The " above-mention'd Officer, who waits at the King's Table, receives what remains from " the King's Hand, which he lays in the Voiders.

" The Butler ſtands behind the Table, and ſerves the poor Men with Wine.

" After that all the Courſes are ſerv'd up, the Gentlemen of the Bed-Chamber fetch " the Deſſert, which the King takes from them, and preſents to each of the poor Men " his Quota, who receives it in a Napkin; and at the ſame Time the Officer of the " King's Table afore-mentioned takes back the Fragments, and lays them in the Voider, " with the Bread, the Salt-Seller, Knife, Spoon, and Fork; which being done, the " Clerk of the Pantry takes off the Cloth, and the Gentlemen of the Bed-Chamber [a] The State of Spain by Abbé Vairac.

" go to the Buffet to fetch thence the Garments appointed for that Purpoſe, and pre-" ſents them to the King, who diſtributes them to the poor Men in their ſeveral Turns.

[a] AFTER the Apparel has been thus diſtributed, the chief Almoner ſays Grace, and " pronounces the Bleſſing."

The Bleſſing of the OILS, &c.

[b] THE holy Oils are bleſſed on Holy Thurſday, at which Time thoſe of the preceding Year are burnt. The Ceremony is perform'd with great Solemnity, after having firſt reconciled the Penitents to the Church. After Nones, or the ninth Hour, the officiating Prieſt clothes himſelf in White, and puts on his Sandals, &c. The Canons, the ſeveral Miniſters of the Altar, ſeven Deacons, ſeven Sub-Deacons, and twelve Prieſts, are likewiſe clothed in White, and all walk in Proceſſion to the Altar. Omitting the various Genuflexions, Prayers, and Anthems, that follow the Proceſſion, we ſhall only obſerve that the officiating Prieſt bleſſes, conſecrates, and exorciſes, three ſorts of Oil: He firſt performs the Ceremony on that of the [c] Infirm; afterwards on that of the Chriſma; and, laſtly, on that of the Catechumens; and the whole is cloſed with a [d] Salutation, which the officiating Prieſt and the Miniſters who aſſiſt at the Conſecration make to theſe ſanctified Oils, ſaying, Ave ſanctum Oleum, Hail holy Oil, &c. After this the new-made Oils are carried in Proceſſion into the Sacriſty, where the officiating Prieſt waſhes his Hands; then ſings Maſs, and gives the Bleſſing; and, in Concluſion, every Man returns Home.

IN Spain, and ſome Parts of France bordering upon Spain, the Cuſtom of bleſſing Meats publicly at Eaſter is ſtill obſerv'd. " One would imagine, ſays Biſhop Alet, in " his Rituals, that this Cuſtom owes its Original to the Hereſy of the Priſcillianiſts, " which had infected Spain and Guienne, and was condemned by the Fathers of the " Church in their Writings, who were farther deſirous of having it cenſured by a ſolemn " Cuſtom of bleſſing Fleſh, as one of God's Creatures, and a Thing that was good " and uſeful, —— in order the better to oppoſe the Hereſy of Priſcillian [e], who held " that the Prince of Darkneſs, and not God, was the Creator of Fleſh, and that the " Faithful ought to reject it as impure and unlawful. This Bleſſing is ſcarce ever us'd, " except in thoſe Churches, and near thoſe Places where that Hereſy formerly prevail'd." To this Bleſſing of the Meats we muſt add that of Bread and Paſchal Eggs.

ON Holy Thurſday the Station is at St. John of Lateran, when the Heads of the holy Apoſtles St. Peter and St. Paul are ſhewn, as alſo the Table on which our Lord eat his laſt Supper. In the Evening ſeveral Cardinals, Princes, &c. go to the Trinity, where they waſh the Feet of Pilgrims, and wait on them at Tables, which are adorn'd with great Magnificence, and cover'd with the moſt exquiſite Diſhes. The ſame Night, the Fraternities go in Proceſſion by Torch-Light to St. Peter's, preceded by great Numbers of Penitents, who ſcourge themſelves as they walk; and as a Reward for their voluntary Puniſhment, they are ſhewn the holy Face of our Lord, the Lance, and the true Croſs.

[a] The Plate repreſenting the Ceremony of waſhing the Feet of twelve poor Men, &c. was drawn from the Life at Paris.

[b] Piſcara Praxis Cerem. The Uſe of holy Oils is very antient.

[c] 'Tis the Oil that is uſed in extreme Unction, Exorciſms, &c.

[d] Miniſtri ſacri chriſmatis cooperatores.

[e] Priſcillian, a Heretic of the fourth Century, is ſaid to have condemn'd Marriage and the Fleſh of Animals, and to have requir'd that the Bleſſed Sacrament ſhould be received without eating it.

45. On Good-Friday there is a Station at the Holy-Rood in Jeruſalem, where ſeveral Relics are ſhewn; the miraculous Crucifix is unveiled at St. Peter's and St. Paul's, as alſo that at St. Marcellus's. There is a Feaſt in the Church of the Armenians, where a holy Sepulchre, in imitation of that of Mount Calvary, is ſhewn; the Pope aſſiſts at Maſs in a ſolemn Manner in the Apoſtolical Chapel; a Jeſuit preaches the Paſſion Sermon, and a Cardinal-Penitentiary performs the Office, and is cloth'd in [b] Black, without either Sandals, or Gloves; the Altar is uncover'd, and the Croſs which ſtands in the Middle is veil'd with Black, as was before obſerv'd. The Tapers are made of common Wax, the Canopy is cover'd with Black, as alſo the Pope's Chair, and the Walls of the Chapel are ſtripp'd of all their Ornaments. The gloomy Solemnity of the Day does not permit of certain Honours which would otherwiſe be paid to his Holineſs: The Cardinals don't bow to him, nor do the Miniſters who are to ſing the Paſſion, kiſs his Foot. When thoſe who ſing the Service above-mention'd come to theſe Words, Having bowed down his Head he yielded up the Ghoſt, the Pope, the Miniſter who officiates, and the reſt of the Congregation, turn themſelves towards the Altar, kneel down, and pray with a very low Voice. The ſame is done in the reſt of the Churches, nor would there be any Alteration were the Pope himſelf to officiate.

[b] On Good-Friday the Pope ſits only on a plain Form; and after Service is ended, when the Cardinals attend on him back to his Chamber, they are all obliged to keep a deep Silence, as a Teſtimony of their Sorrow.

In the Night, at 22 a-Clock, (according to the Italian Manner of counting the Hours) the Greeks perform the Obſequies of our Saviour in their own Tongue, round a great Crucifix, laid on a Bed of State adorn'd with Flowers: Theſe the Greek Biſhop diſtributes to the Aſſiſtants by way of Devotion, after the Office is ended.

The Adoration of the Croſs.

THE following Ceremony gives great Scandal to Heretics, who look upon this ſolemn Adoration on Good-Friday as manifeſt Idolatry. They cannot conceive that the Prayers which are uſed on that Day are offer'd up to a crucified Saviour; and that when it is ſaid to the Croſs, O crux ave ſpes unica, Hail thou Croſs our only Hope, the Words are figuratively directed to our Saviour himſelf. Perhaps an Alteration would be proper to remove all Stumbling-Blocks, ſince it might leſſen the Averſion of the Enemies of the Church, and would probably contribute to bring back into its Boſom, many People, who out of Prejudice object Inſincerity to us, when we ſay the following Words, directed to the Croſs on Good-Friday, are only metaphorical, viz. Ecce lignum crucis, venite, adoremus; Behold the Wood of the Croſs, let us come and adore it. Would it not be better to retrench ſome Things, than for ever to have a Set of wayward People for our Enemies, who for upwards of two hundred Years have kept true Catholics in Awe, and continue to make us bluſh for a great Number of Ceremonies, which though very antient, and well authoriſed, are now almoſt buried in Oblivion, or confined only to Spain and Italy? How many Catholics are reduced to Shifts, Diſguiſes, and Evaſions, becauſe they are afraid of openly defending many Things, which are a Folly to the Libertine, and a Scandal to the Hugonot?

[a] Cerem. Sacr. Eccleſ. Rom. Lib. ii.
[b] Id. Ibid.

[a] AFTER Nones the officiating Prieſt goes up to the Altar, preceded by the Acolytes, without Tapers, and the reſt of the Miniſters of the Altar: They firſt kneel before it, and bow to the Croſs, a Duty at all Times neceſſary, but particularly on this Day. Immediately after the officiating Prieſt and his Miniſters have repeated on their Knees certain Prayers in a low Tone, the Acolytes cover the Table of the Altar, and lay the Maſs-Book on a black Cuſhion, on the Epiſtle-Side. This done, the Maſter of the Ceremonies makes a Signal to the officiating Prieſt and his Miniſters to riſe up; then the Acolytes take away the Cuſhions that were knelt upon, and the black Cloth, while the Choir and the Congregation ſay their Prayers upon their Knees. The Miniſter who is to officiate goes up to the Altar, kiſſes it as uſual, and afterwards either repeats, or ſings with a low Voice, the ſeveral Leſſons of the Day, which his Miniſters repeat after him. Prayers being ended, the officiating Prieſt goes to the Epiſtle-Side, the Deacon takes the Croſs which is veil'd from the Altar, and preſents it to the officiating Prieſt, who after he has uncover'd the Top of the Croſs, elevates it with both his Hands, at the ſame Time ſinging theſe Words; Ecce lignum crucis, Behold the Wood of the Croſs. Then all the Congregation riſe up with their Heads bare, and the Miniſters of the Altar ſing as follows; In quo ſalus mundi pependit, On which the Saviour of the World was extended. The Choir anſwers; Venite & adoremus, Let us come and adore. Here every one falls proſtrate on his Knees, the officiating Prieſt excepted. A Moment after they all riſe up; the officiating Prieſt uncovers the Right Arm of the Crucifix, and the Head of the Jeſus; ſhews it, elevates it, and ſays, Ecce lignum, &c. but louder than before. Laſtly, he goes up towards the Middle of the Altar, turns towards the Congregation, and with a very loud Voice repeats the ſame Words, at the ſame Time elevating the Crucifix, and ſhewing it quite uncovered.

THE Acolytes ſpread a purple Piece of Cloth, or Carpet, in the Midſt of the Chancel, and before the Steps of the Altar. On the Carpet a purple Cuſhion is laid, and a ſilken Veil embroider'd with Gold. The officiating Prieſt carries the Croſs thither, and kneeling down lays it on the Cuſhion, and bows to it; and being preceded by his Miniſters, who attended upon him to this auguſt Ceremony, he returns to his Place, where he puts off his Sandals and his Mitre. He afterwards advances towards the Croſs, in the Midſt of his Miniſters, who attend him without Shoes or Sandals; kneels down thrice, repeats thrice a ſhort Prayer, and at laſt kiſſes the holy Wood, which the Miniſters do likewiſe; after which, having bowed to the Croſs, they all return back, and put on their Sandals.

THE reſt of the Dignitaries of the Church follow after, each in his Rank, and perform the ſame Ceremony, as alſo the People. [b] In thoſe Countries where the Women don't ſit with the Men, a Prieſt, having a black Stole over his Surplice, goes and preſents them the Crucifix in the Manner above-mentioned.

THE ſame Ceremonies are performed at the Pope's Chapel. [c] After his Holineſs has kiſs'd the Crucifix, he makes an Offering of twenty five Ducats of Gold at leaſt, which he puts into a Veſſel of the ſame Metal, laid near the Left Arm of the Crucifix. Emperors and Kings go and worſhip the Croſs after the Cardinals, who are the Princes of the Church, as is well known, and who conſequently are ſuperior in Dignity to all earthly Sovereigns. As this is practis'd in all Ceremonies without Exception, it were needleſs to make any farther Mention of it.

[a] Piſcara Praxis Cerem.
[b] Idem Ibid.
[c] Sacra Cerem. Eccl. Rom. Lib. ii.

We are not to omit, that in that Part of the Service which is called the The Prayer for the Jews, the Congregation are not to kneel down [a]; becauſe that at our Saviour's Crucifixion, the Jews, who put him to Death, bowed the Knee purely to mock him.

The Ceremony of the Adoration being ended, the Deacon ſalutes the Croſs, elevates it, and in this Poſture carries it to the Altar, where he places it, obſerving to bow the Knee before it. As he walks along with it, the officiating Prieſt ſtands up while it paſſes before him; but the reſt of the Miniſters of the Altar remain upon their Knees.

Processions on Good-Friday.

There is no true and unfeigned Chriſtian but conſiders our Saviour's Paſſion as the Æra from which the Salvation of Mankind is to be dated. It would be impoſſible to pay him too much Homage for the Blood he has ſhed for us; and the moſt unſullied Virtue, the moſt profound Humility, the moſt auſtere Devotion, is not a worthy Return to him, who, for Man's Sake, gave himſelf up to the moſt dreadful Torments. But ſo great is the Weakneſs of the human Mind, that 'tis to the Gratitude ſo juſtly paid to God for this excellent Sacrifice, that we owe the mad Folly of numberleſs Multitudes of Zealots, and thoſe violent Mortifications, in which an odd Complication of Extravagance and Devotion is equally conſpicuous. Your Zealots are as much infected with a Mixture of Envy and Emulation as the Children of this World, and will not ſuffer themſelves to be outdone. Hence the ridiculous Cuſtoms, which having got Footing in ſpite of all the Precautions of the holy Leaders of the Church, are daily increaſing. It is therefore but juſt to diſclaim theſe Practices, and all ſuch as tend to divert Mankind from ſincere and genuine Piety, by amuſing them with Trifles ſo unworthy of the ſacred Character of Religion, which nevertheleſs are tolerated in ſome Countries for the Sake of temporal Intereſts, to the Shame and Scandal of the Clergy thereof. This being premiſed, let the Reader conſider in what Light he is to view certain whimſical Cuſtoms we ſhall now deſcribe, after having once again declar'd, that we do not thereby intend to caſt the leaſt Blemiſh on true and unaffected Piety.

At Courtray there is a commemorative Proceſſion on Good-Friday of our Saviour to Mount Calvary. The City gives five and twenty Livres to a poor Man, who repreſents the ſuffering Saviour; and the Monks, as we are told, aſſure him of certain Salvation, in caſe he happens to die under the Blows that are given him in this Ceremony. The Proceſſion firſt aſſembles in the Pariſh-Church, when the mock Saviour is brought into the Sacriſty, where he is clothed with a purple Robe, his Loins girded with a thick Rope, and his Head crowned with Thorns; after which he is made to walk bare-foot, with a kind of Pack-Saddle bound about his Neck. On each Side of the Pack-Saddle ſix Ropes are put, of the Thickneſs of ſuch as are uſually put to draught Horſes; which being done, the voluntary Martyr has a long Croſs of great Weight laid on his Shoulders; and thus equipped, he rambles up and down the whole City. Six Capuchines, who walk at his Right

[a] Sacra Cerem. Eccl. Rom. Lib. ii.

Hand,

Hand, draw the ſix Ropes, which are fix'd on that Side of the Pack-Saddle; and the other ſix are drawn by as many Recollets, a kind of Franciſcans; ſo that the poor Fellow is ſo dragg'd and haul'd by the twelve Friars, that he is continually ſtumbling, and is almoſt pull'd to Pieces. The poor mock Saviour would have a horrid Time of it, were it not for a ſham Simon the Cyrenian, who very luckily comes in the God-ſpeed to free him from his Torments. The poor Wretch, before he gets into the Church is half killed. However, by this Aſſiſtance, notwithſtanding the Kicks and Cuffs which the People and the mimic Jews belabour him with, he is ſo thoroughly perſuaded of the Merits of his Sufferings, and that they will procure him an Eternity of Bliſs, that he bears all his Torments without the leaſt Murmur or Complaint.

NOR is the Proceſſion at Bruſſels, in which the Crucifixion of our Saviour is repreſented, leſs extraordinary in its Circumſtances. Both the City and the Court endeavour to do honour to this Solemnity; and although they may probably be perſuaded, there is little Devotion in it, they nevertheleſs give into it from mere Cuſtom, and to pleaſe the common People, who revere it becauſe of the [a] Antiquity of its Inſtitution. 'Tis performed in the Church of the Auſtin-Friars, at the Foot of the Altars. The Perſons who form the Proceſſion get together in St. Gudila's, the Cathedral Church, by eight in the Morning. The Brotherhood of the Mercy come thither in their proper Habits, bare-footed, and their Faces maſk'd. Some walk with Drums covered with black Cloth. After the Brotherhood, a great Number of Priſoners come forward, each of whom drags after him an iron Cannon-Ball, that is chain'd to his Foot; next come ſeveral Auſtin-Friars, dreſs'd in Jewiſh Habits, in the Midſt of whom is a Man, who is always a Criminal, (but pardon'd for the Part he then acts,) bound and fetter'd, crown'd with Thorns, and dreſs'd in a purple Robe. Then ſeveral Trumpets come forward, and after them the Prebends, the Prieſts, and a Multitude of People. In this Equipage they all crowd into the Church, where the Concourſe is always ſo great, that Multitudes are oblig'd to ſtand without. In the Church a large Scaffold is erected, and a Croſs, twenty Foot in Height, ſet upon it; the Perſon who repreſents the crucified Saviour, aſcends this Scaffold, and is followed by thoſe who repreſent the Jews, with Hammers, Nails, and Ropes in their Hands. The Brotherhood of the Mercy crowd round the Scaffold. The Ladies have high Seats prepared for them, and the common People ſtand below in the Pit. The mock Jews ſtrip the pretended Chriſt of his Ornaments, lay him along the Scaffold, and caſt Dice for his Garments; which being done, they ſtrip him to his Shirt. Laſtly, he is fix'd on the Croſs, by tying his Hands and Feet with leathern Thongs, which are nail'd to the Croſs; and the better to imitate our Saviour's Sufferings, they put little Bladders filled with Blood under the Thongs, which being pierced by the Nails, the Blood is ſeen to trickle from his Hands and Feet. This is the very Pathos of this pious Farce; for at the Sight of the Blood, the Hearts of the People are moved, and the moſt Devout beat their Breaſts, while the Monks ſing Anthems ſuitable to the Occaſion.

IT were needleſs to mention the whimſical Scenes that are exhibited on Good-Friday, in the ſeveral Countries of the Chriſtian World. We ſhould never have done, were we to give a Deſcription of our Saviour's Burial, as it is ſolemnized in Portugal, and recount the various Ways of crucifying him in other Countries; the ſeveral Marches and Counter-Marches of the Proceſſions made by the Penitents in their divers Colours in Rome,

[a] There is great Room to believe, that the Spaniards, their antient Sovereigns, firſt introduced this Ceremony among them.

who

who all pretend to be ready to attack the Devil, and for that Purpoſe are armed with Tapers, Whips, and Croſſes, and enroll'd under different Banners. At Venice, on Good-Friday, the Holy Sacrament is carried in Proceſſion, about nine or ten at Night, with the [a] utmoſt Solemnity: It is laid in a Coffin cover'd with black Velvet, and in this Manner is carried round the Square of St. Mark. St. Didier informs us, "That there "cannot be a finer Sight than this Square then affords. Two large Flambeaux of white "Wax are ſet at each Window of the Palace Della Procuratia, which goes round the "Square. This double Range of Flambeaux, and thoſe which are ſet over the Church "Gate, are to light the ſeveral Proceſſions of the Fraternities and the neighbouring "Pariſhes, who go purpoſely into the Square. Here the Penitents appear in Maſque-"rade, wearing ſharp-pointed Caps two Foot high, who beat themſelves till the Blood "follows the Blows; walking every now and then behind the Crucifix. For this Purpoſe "they have Scourges made of a great Number of little ſharp Cords, which they hold with "both their Hands, and dip in a Pot filled with Vinegar, brought to them for that Uſe; and "they ſtrike themſelves on the Back with ſo much Order, and in ſuch exact Cadence, "that they muſt neceſſarily have ſtudied this Art very much, to be ſo very expert in it. "So great a Conſumption of white Wax is made in theſe Proceſſions, that it is thought "there is more ſpent that Night in the City of Venice only, than in all Italy together "during a Twelve-Month." We conſider all theſe Ceremonies as ſo many Snares to delude the Simple and Ignorant; or as Expedients, to which wicked People, who are unwilling to amend their Lives, are prompted to have Recourſe; and without aſſuming the Office of a Cenſor in this Place, we believe thoſe that undergo them, don't conſider how derogatory they are to true Religion.

[b] THE Adoration of the Croſs, which is deſcribed above, is followed by the Proceſſion to the bleſſed Sacrament, which, as we have already obſerved, is put in a kind of Sepulchre. The officiating Prieſt incenſes it in the Sepulchre, after having ador'd it; then he elevates the Hoſt, and turns it to the People: At the ſame Time the Choir ſings an Anthem or Hymn [c], which is the Signal for the March; whereupon all the Congregation riſe up, and return in Proceſſion to the Altar.

[a] St. Dedier aſſures us, that the Popes, notwithſtanding their great Authority, have never been able to aboliſh this Cuſtom: But he adds, that whereas this Ceremony was formerly practiſed in the whole Extent of the Venetian Territories, 'tis now confined to the Churches of Venice only, where ſuch a Proceſſion is performed in every Pariſh the ſame Evening.

Here follows the Order which is obſerv'd in the Proceſſions on Holy-Thurſday at Venice. There are three or four hundred Men, all of them holding thick Torches of white Wax, ſix Foot long, and weighing at leaſt twelve or fifteen Pounds each. Theſe walk two and two, with a like Number of Perſons, each holding a Lanthorn, and walking between each Torch, in ſuch a Manner, that the Spectator ſees alternately a Flambeaux and a Lanthorn. They are all clothed in black or white Serge, according to their Fraternities, having a large Cowl two Foot in Length, and that terminates in a Point, hanging down on their Backs. Their Lanthorns are very large, and are fixed to the End of a Stick: Each has ſeveral Tapers in it, which gives a great Light, they being made of very clear Glaſs: And as there are a great Number of Glaſs Houſes in and about Venice, ſome of them are made in a very odd Shape, and are ſo heavy, that one Man is hardly able to carry them. Some are made in the Shape of Stars, or like Suns, with a great Number of Rays darting from them, and are ſix Foot in Diameter: The Glaſſes thereof are fixed in with Pieces of Iron and Lead gilt. Others are made in the Shape of Roſes, Full and Half-Moons, Comets, Pyramids, Croſſes, Globes, Pelicans with extended Wings, &c. In the midſt of theſe Flambeaux and Lanthorns the Standard is placed, and afterwards the Croſs, with a Crucifix four Foot high, cover'd with Crape; and a Noſegay at the Foot of it, as broad as a Half Buſhel. The Fraternities ſtrive to rival each other in the Singularity and Beauty of their Flowers, as well as the Form they ſhall give to their Noſegays. The Battuti walk before the Croſs, who ſcourge themſelves by Starts and walk backwards, having their Eyes always fixed on the crucified Saviour. After the Croſs the Relics follow, which are carried on Litters cover'd with Flowers and Tapers. On both Sides of it ſeveral Perſons walk with long Flambeaux in their Hands, and large Silver Candleſticks, with ſeveral Candles in them fix'd to a long Pole. Afterwards a Chorus of Voices is heard, and the Clergy next; then comes the Guardian, the Deputy-Guardian, and all the Brethren of the Fraternity, each having a Torch in his Hand.

[b] Piſcara Praxis Cerem.

[c] Vexilla Regis prodeunt.

WE are not to omit, that during the Proceſſion an Acolyte ſtays at the Altar, and gets it ready againſt the Return of the Congregation; who being come, the Ceremonies above deſcrib'd are continued, and the ſame are performed at the Pope's Chapel; on which Occaſion his Holineſs communicates alone at the Altar, and drinks out of the Cup, whereas at other Times he receives the Sacrament thro' a Pipe; but he muſt not then be incenſed, this Ceremony being to be performed on this Day to the bleſſed Sacrament only.

46. Eaſter-Eve; the Station at St. John's of Lateran, where, after the Bleſſing of the Fire and Water, the Catechumens who are of Age, are baptized in the Baptiſterium of Conſtantine; the Pope aſſiſts ſolemnly at the Office in the Apoſtolical Chapel, and a Cardinal Prieſt ſings Maſs.

[a] ON Eaſter-Eve, the Ornaments of the Churches and Altars are changed; the Black with which the latter was covered, is taken off, and White put on; the Tabernacle is alſo uncovered, and covered with White, but ſo that the Purple ſtill appears on the Outward-ſide, till the Litanies are ended. In like manner, after that Part of the Service has been celebrated, a Carpet, or ſome rich Covering, is laid on the Steps of the Altar, and the Images are unveil'd. Then ſix large Tapers are got ready for ſolemn Maſs, and all the Lights which are to burn before the Altar. This is ſufficient to give the Reader a general Idea of the Ceremony perform'd on this Day, without troubling him with the Mention of the Credence, whereon a great Number of ſmall Candles are laid, to light ſuch great ones as may happen to go out.

ON the Goſpel-Side of the Altar, a great Candleſtick is placed, which muſt be made in the Shape of an Angel, if poſſible, and very neatly wrought. In this Candleſtick, the Paſchal Candle is fixed; it muſt be made of the whiteſt Wax, and weigh about eight or ten Pounds; five Holes are made in it, in the Shape of a Croſs, to be filled with five Grains of Frankincenſe, gilt over, and made in the Shape of a Pine-Apple. To conclude, ſome edifying Subject is painted on the Taper; ſuch as the Patron of the Place, &c. As every Thing muſt correſpond with the Solemnity of the Day, the Ritual ordains, that the Reed with which the Tapers are lighted, ſhall alſo be gilt and adorned with Flowers. The three ſmall Candles which are fix'd to the Top of the Reed, repreſent the Trinity in Unity, and muſt therefore join together at the Baſis, i. e. at the End which touches the Reed.

IT is alſo ordained by the Rituals, that Baptiſm is not to be adminiſtred for a Week before Eaſter-Eve, unleſs a Perſon's Life be in Danger.

The BLESSING of the NEW FIRE, &c.

THE Place where this Ceremony is perform'd, muſt be ſtrew'd with Flowers. On the ninth Hour the old Fire is to be put [b] out, and at the ſame Time an Acolyte muſt [c] light the new one without the Church.

THE

[a] Baudry Manuale Cerem.

[b] Id. Ibid.

[c] The Acolyte ſtrikes Fire with a Flint and Steel, and therewith lights ſome Coals which are brought in a Veſſel for that Purpoſe. The antient Greeks and Romans, &c. uſed to light their ſacred Fire with no leſs Ceremony, and for that Purpoſe generally made uſe of a Kind of Burning-Glaſs, or rather a Veſſel in a Concave Form, in the ſame Manner as the antient Inhabitants of Peru. They likewiſe uſed to ſtrike Fire by rubbing two hard Sticks againſt

[a] THE officiating Prieſt, dreſt in all his ſacerdotal Veſtments, and attended by the Miniſters of the Altar and the Clergy, walks out of the Church in Proceſſion after the ninth Hour, and goes to the Place where the Bleſſing of the Fire is to be perform'd. The Holy-Water-Pot is carried thither in great Pomp, as alſo the Frankincenſe, the Sub-Deacon's purple Maniple, and the Maſs-Book; the Sub-Deacon walks ſingly with the Croſs, and is followed by the Clergy. When every one is got into his Place, the officiating Prieſt uncovers himſelf, and pronounces theſe Words, Dominus vobiſcum, The Lord be with you, &c. as uſual: He afterwards repeats the Prayer, Deus qui filium tuum, &c. in the midſt of which he makes the Sign of the Croſs over the Fire; he likewiſe bleſſes the five Grains of Frankincenſe, which are put on a Plate which an Acolyte holds lifted up to his Breaſt. In the mean Time the Thuriferary puts ſome Coals, after their being bleſſed, into the Thurible, into which the officiating Prieſt throws ſome Frankincenſe and bleſſes it; then the Deacon gives him the Sprinkler, kiſſing it at the ſame Time; the officiating Prieſt ſprinkles thrice with Holy-Water the Fire he had juſt before bleſſed, and as he is ſprinkling ſays theſe Words, [b] Aſperges me Domine. He incenſes the ſacred Fire thrice, in the Manner above-mention'd: Then one of the Acolytes, or a Sacriſtan, takes a ſmall Candle, and lights it at a new Fire.

As they went in Proceſſion to the Place where the Ceremony was perform'd, they return back from thence in the ſame [c] Order, but the Deacon firſt puts off his purple Ornaments, and puts on white, whereas the Sub-Deacon takes a purple Maniple. We ſhall not trouble the Reader with the Order of the Proceſſion; the only particular Circumſtance in it is, that the Deacon walks in it with the above-mentioned Reed in his Hand, and the Sub-Deacon has a ſmall Candle ſhut up in a little Lanthorn. The Proceſſion being come to the Church-Door, makes a Halt, when the Deacon kiſſes the Reed, and the Acolyte lights one of the Candles fixed upon the Reed with that which he has in his Hand; then they all fall upon their Knees, and the Deacon elevates the Reed, and ſings the Anthem, which begins as follows, Lumen Chriſti, &c. i. e. The Light of Chriſt. He lights a ſecond Candle in the Middle of the Church with the ſame Solemnity; and the third is lighted on the Steps of the Altar, where we will leave them a Moment. There they muſt perform certain Acts of Devotion, or rather Ceremonies, which, tho' deſcrib'd at length in the Rituals, would be unneceſſary in this Place.

The BLESSING of the PASCHAL CANDLE.

ONE of the Ceremonies on this Occaſion is the Deacon's asking the officiating Prieſt's Bleſſing; after which the former goes to the Desk, on which he lays the Maſs-Book, and incenſes it thrice, but neither ſigns himſelf or the Maſs-Book with the Sign of the Croſs. The reſt of the Miniſters range themſelves round the Maſs-Book in the [d] Manner following: The Croſs-Bearer ſtands with the Croſs turn'd towards the officiating Prieſt; the Thuriferary is at the Deacon's Right Hand; the other Acolyte, who has the Reed in his Hand, and he who bears the five Grains of Incenſe, are at his Left.

gainſt one another, a Cuſtom practiſed by the Mexicans, on lighting new Fires at the Beginning of every Century. The Romans uſed to renew the Fire of Veſta in the Month of March, as Ovid tells us in his Faſtorum:

Adde quod arcana fieri novus ignis in æde
Dicitur, & vires flamma refecta capit.

This might induce one to believe that the Ceremony of the New Fire was borrow'd from the Heathens.

[a] Baudry Manual. Cerem.
[b] You ſhall ſprinkle me, O Lord.
[c] Baudry Manual. Cerem.
[d] Cerem. Epiſc. Lib. 2.

When

When the Deacon begins to ſing the Leſſon call'd the Præconium, which begins Exultet, &c. the officiating Prieſt and his Miniſters uncover themſelves, and in the [a] midſt of their chaunting, he puts the five Grains of Incenſe in the Form of a Croſs, into the Taper, and afterwards, at certain Words [b] adapted to the Myſteries of the Ceremony, lights the Paſchal Taper; and whilſt he is chaunting, an Acolyte lights all the reſt of the Candles with the new Fire.

THIS Ceremony being ended, the [c] Deacon returns back to the Sacriſty, where he puts off his white Ornaments, and reſumes the purple Stole and the Maniple of the ſame Colour. After the Bleſſing of the Tapers follows the Leſſons call'd Prophecies, the Verſe ſung by the Choriſters called in Latin Tractus, and the Singing of the Prayers.

THE three Candles fixed at the Extremity of the Reed, and which are lighted one after the other, denote, as we are told, the Progreſs of the Goſpel in the three great Diviſions of our Hemiſphere; but a fourth ſhould have been added ſince the Diſcovery of America. We have already obſerv'd, that the three Candles are likewiſe an Emblem of the Trinity: But it were endleſs to take Notice of all the whimſical Notions of myſtic Writers. As for the Paſchal Candle, we are aſſured that it is a Type of our Saviour's Humanity, and the New Fire that of the new Doctrine of the Goſpel.

WE are told that the Bleſſing of the Paſchal Candle is of great Antiquity in the Church, and that Pope Zozimus in the Beginning of the fifth Century, commanded that one ſhould be lighted in every Pariſh.

[d] THE Paſchal Candle muſt remain on the Goſpel-Side from Eaſter-Eve to Aſcenſion-Day. The Rituals inform us at what Hour it is to be lighted on Eaſter-Eve, Eaſter-Day, and the following Days, &c.

The Bleſſing of the Baptiſmal FONTS, and the Baptiſm of the CATECHUMENS.

THE officiating Prieſt and his Miniſters go in Proceſſion to the Font; the Croſs and Taper-Bearers go on the other Side it, and the Miniſter who officiates puts himſelf over-againſt them, in ſuch a Manner, that the Font ſtands between him and the Croſs. The other Eccleſiaſtics range themſelves on each Side; an Acolyte ſtands at a little Diſtance behind the officiating Prieſt at his Right Hand, holding a Napkin to wipe his Hands, and the Thuriferary ſtands next in order to him.

[e] THE Miniſter who officiates uncovers himſelf, and falls proſtrate on his Knees with all his Miniſters, the Croſs and Taper-Bearers excepted. After an Anthem is ſung ſuitable to the Solemnity, he riſes up, and turning towards the Font, pronounces the Bleſſing, making the Sign of the Croſs that Way. He afterwards exorciſes the Water; makes a Croſs in it with his Hands, pours ſome out of the Veſſel towards the four Cardinal Points of the Horizon; which done, he wipes his Hand with the Napkin given him by the Acolyte, and repeats a Prayer, at the Concluſion of which he blows

[a] At theſe Words, Curvat Imperia.
[b] Rutilans ignis accendit, &c.
[c] Baudry Manual &c.
[d] Piſcara Praxis Cerem.
[e] Piſoara Praxis Cerem. & Baudry.

thrice on the Water, and in three different Places, always obſerving to do it croſs-ways; he alſo [a] plunges a Taper thrice into the ſame Water, obſerving to ſink it deeper the ſecond Time than the firſt, and the third more than the ſecond, ſaying at each Immerſion the following Words: Deſcendat in hanc plenitudinem fontis virtus Spiritus Sancti, i. e. May the Spirit of the Holy Ghoſt deſcend into this Water. [b] The Aſſiſtants, in caſe the officiating Prieſt has any, ſprinkle the People with a little of this Water, and they alſo ſend a Prieſt or a Sacriſtan to ſprinkle the Houſes therewith.

AFTER this Ceremony the officiating Miniſter perfumes the Font thrice with Frankincenſe; after which he takes the Oil of the Catechumens, and pours it on the Water croſs-ways, and does the ſame with the Chriſma. He afterwards mixes them both upon the Water, being poured into equal Proportions, and always croſs-ways; after which he mixes them with his Right Hand, in order that they may be diffus'd equally over every Part of the Font.

THE Font being bleſſed in the Manner above deſcribed [c], the Celebrant goes and receives the Catechumens at the Church-Gate, and clothes himſelf in White, to perform the Ceremony of their Baptiſm, which ſhall be deſcribed in its proper Place.

WE mentioned the Bleſſing of Houſes; but there is nothing particular in that Ceremony. The Perſon who officiates upon this Occaſion muſt wear a white Stole; and the Holy Water with which he ſprinkles them muſt be ſet apart, before the Oils are pour'd upon it. Upon his entering into each Houſe, he ſalutes it.

AFTER the Ceremony of bleſſing the Font is ended, the Litanies are ſung; a ſolemn Maſs and Veſpers are ſaid. Whilſt the Litanies are chaunting, the Hoſt, which till now was hid, is taken out, and brought to the Altar; all the Tapers are lighted, the Altar is covered with its ſeveral Ornaments, the Images are unveil'd, and the Seat of the officiating Prieſt is cover'd; who, together with his Prieſts, reſume their white Ornaments, and prepare themſelves for the Celebration of a ſolemn Maſs. Upon the officiating Miniſter's beginning the Gloria in Excelſis, the Bells fall a ringing [d] again; for which Purpoſe a Signal is given from the Cathedral.

47. Eaſter-Sunday; Station at St. Maria Maggiore's, and our Lady's of the Angels: the Pope aſſiſts ſolemnly at the Office in St. Peter's, where he himſelf ſings Maſs; after which the holy Face, the Lance, and the true Croſs, are ſhewn to the People: After which his Holineſs is carried into the Gallery, whence he bleſſes the People. At St. John's of Lateran, St. Maria Maggiore's, and St. Praxades's, the Relics are ſhewn both before and after Veſpers.

CEREMONIES obſerved at EASTER.

MATTINS are to be ſaid on Eaſter-Sunday before Day-break, becauſe our bleſſed Saviour roſe from the Dead at that Time. We might likewiſe take Notice of ſeveral peculiar Differences in the Leſſons, and the Chaunting; but as they concern only the Prieſts, ſuch as are deſirous of farther Information may have Reeourſe for it to the Rituals. [e] When the Pope himſelf officiates, certain Ceremonies are performed, which deſerve our Notice. Before the Preface, the two youngeſt Cardinal Deacons

[a] Piſcara.
[b] Piſcara, ubi ſup. Alet's Ritual.
[c] Bauldry, ubi ſup.
[d] Bauldry, Piſcara.
[e] Sacra. Cerem. Eccl. Rom. Lib. ii.

(but none of thoſe who aſſiſt his Holineſs) place themſelves to the Right and Left of the Altar, both of them being turned towards the People. Theſe two Deacons, dreſs'd in white Ornaments, repreſent the two Angels who watched our Lord's Sepulchre in white Raiment; and they ſtand in this Poſture at the Altar till the [a] Agnus Dei. After that the Deacon and the Sub-Deacon have received the Communion from the Pope's Hands, the Deacon of the Goſpel goes up to his Holineſs, who has his Head bare in honour of the Holy Sacrament that lies upon the Altar, and repeats, according to the uſual Form, the Confiteor in theſe Words: [b] "I confeſs to God Almighty, the bleſſed "Virgin Mary, the bleſſed Michael the Archangel, to St. John Baptiſt, to St. Peter and "St. Paul, the Holy Apoſtles, to all the Saints in Heaven, and to you my ghoſtly Father "that I have offended in Thought, Word, and Deed; through my Fault, my own Fault, "my very great Fault: I therefore beſeech the bleſſed Mary, &c. and you, my ghoſtly "Father, to pray for me." After Confeſſion the Deacon returns to the Altar; his Holineſs pronounces Abſolution, and makes the Sign of the Croſs over the People, but without ſaying any Thing. Next follows the Communion; and when his Holineſs adminiſters it to the Congregation, two Auditors hold a [c] kind of Silk Napkin on his Holineſs's Knees, and a Cardinal Biſhop Aſſiſtant ſtands at his Right with a Paten in his Hand. In the Roman Ceremonial we have a complete Deſcription of the Paſchal Ceremonies obſerv'd in the Pope's Chapel.

HERE follows the Order obſerved by the Ceremonial, when an Emperor or a King is to receive the Sacrament from the Pope's Hands: Firſt, his Holineſs takes the Communion himſelf, and afterwards adminiſters it to his Deacon and Sub-Deacon; the former, after having repeated the Confeſſion, takes the Hoſt from the Altar, with which the Monarch is to communicate, lays it on the Paten, and gives it, after the uſual Ceremonies are perform'd, to the Sub-Deacon, who carries it to his Holineſs: Then the firſt Cardinal Biſhop leads the Monarch to the Feet of the Pope, who kiſſes him; after Communion the Deacon conducts the Monarch back to his Seat.

ON Eaſter-Sunday the Faithful ought to have all their Food bleſſed: We have already made ſome Mention of this Cuſtom. [d] The Anniverſaries for the Deceaſed muſt be poſtponed henceforward, till after the Octave of the Eaſter.

48. Monday; Station at St. Peter's, where the Relics are ſhewn after Veſpers: Papal Service in the Apoſtolical Chapel, where a Cardinal Prieſt ſings Maſs.

49. Tueſday; the Station at St. Paul's, where the Relics are ſhewn on the Papal Altar: the Pope aſſiſts ſolemnly at the Office in the Apoſtolical Chapel, where a Cardinal Prieſt ſings Maſs.

50. Wedneſday; Station at St. Laurence's without the Walls.

51. Thurſday; Station at the holy Apoſtles.

52. Friday, Station at the Rotunda and the Minerva.

53. Saturday; Station at St. John's of Lateran: the Pope aſſiſts ſolemnly in the Apoſtolical Palace, where a Cardinal Prieſt ſings Maſs.

54. Low-Sunday, or of the Octave of Eaſter; Station at St. Pancras's, and at St. Mary's in Traſtevera, where the Relics are expoſed; at St. Laurence's in Lucina, St. Vincent's, and St. Anaſtaſius's at the Fountain of Trevi, Feſtival for the Anniverſary of the Inſtitution of the Congregation of Clerks, regular Minors.

[a] See for the Word Agnus. Vol. I. Part II. in the Deſcription of the Maſs. We are told that Pope Sergius I. inſtituted this Prayer at the End of the ſeventh Century: Vide Bona l. ii. c. 16. Sect. 5. Rer. Liturg.

[b] Confiteor Deo omnipotenti, beatæ Mariæ ſemper Virgini, beato Michaeli Archangelo, beato Johanni Baptiſtæ, ſanctis Apoſtolis Petro & Paulo, ac omnibus ſanctis, & tibi Pater, quia peccavi nimiis cogitatione, verbo & opere, meâ culpâ, meâ culpâ, meâ maximâ culpâ: Ideo precor beatam Mariam, &c. & te Pater orare pro me, &c.

[c] Mappulam bombycinam duo Auditores hinc & inde apud Papam genuflexi tenent, &c.

[d] Piſcara Praxis Cerem.

THE Saturday and Sunday after Eaſter are called Sabbatum & Dominica in Albis, becauſe the new-baptized Catechumens aſſiſt at the Devotions on thoſe Days, clothed in white Garments.

APRIL.

1. ST. Venantius, Biſhop and Martyr; at his Church in the Lateran, where his Body is depoſited.

2. St. Mary of Egypt; at the Armenian Church dedicated to her, where Service is performed in that Tongue.

3. St. Francis of Paul, Founder of the Minims; in the Churches of his Order.

4. St. Agapita and Chionia, Virgins and Martyrs; at St. Anaſtaſia's, where their Bodies are depoſited.

5. St. Vincent Ferrerius Dominican; Feſtival at the Minerva, and other Churches of St. Dominic.

6. St. Sixtus, Biſhop and Martyr; at St. Peter's.

7. St. Albirus Benedictin; in the Churches of the Order.

8. Tranſlation of St. Monica; at St. Auſtin's.

9. Dedication of the Church of St. Peter and St. Marcellinus.

10. St. Leo the Great; Feſtival at St. Peter's, where his Body lies; at St. John's of Lateran, and St. Maria Maggiore's, where his Relics are depoſited.

11. Dedication of the Church De Ara Cœli.

12. St. Julius Pope; Feaſt at St. Maria's in Traſtevera, where his Body is depoſited.

13. St. Juſtin, Prieſt and Martyr; Feaſt at St. Praxades's, where his Relics are preſerved.

14. St. [a] Tiburtius, Valerius, and Maximus, Martyrs; at St. Cecilia's, where their Bodies are depoſited: And at St. Peter's, Feſtival for St. Abundus, formerly Dean or Prebend of this Cathedral.

15. St. Baſiliſia, the Martyr; at St. Paul's, where her Body lies.

16. St. Valentine and Martin; at St. Praxades's, where her Relics are lodg'd; at St. Marcellus's for holy Joachim the Servite; at St. John's of Lateran, Tranſlation of the Heads of St. Peter and St. Paul, which are ſhewn to the People.

17. St. Anicetus, Pope and Martyr; at St. Sebaſtian's, where his Relics are depoſited; and at the Chapel of the Palace of the Dukes of Altaemps, wherein, by a Grant from Pope Clement VII. his Body is interred.

18. St. Bartholomew, Monk of Vall-ombroſa; at St. Praxades's; and at St. John's Della Pigna for St. Eleutherius.

19. St. Leo IX. Pope, of the Order of St. Benedict; in the Churches of that Order, and at St. Peter's, where his Body is interred.

20. The bleſſed Agnes of Monte Pulciano; at the Minerva, and the Churches of the Order.

21. St. Anſelm, Biſhop and Confeſſor, of the Order of St. Benedict; a Feſtival throughout the whole Order.

[a] An Angel brought two Crowns from Paradiſe, compoſed of Roſes and Lillies, and gave one to Valerian, and the other to Cecilia, his new-married Wife; the Angel added, Becauſe, Valerian, thou haſt conſented to the Council of Chaſtity, (he having been perſuaded by Cecilia not to violate her Virginity) Chriſt has ſent me to tell thee, that he will grant thee any Petition thou ſhalt ask of him. Valerian at theſe Words fell down and worſhipped, and begg'd that his Brother Tiburtius might become a Chriſtian. Tiburtius afterwards coming into the Houſe, ſmelt the Fragrancy of the Roſes and Lillies, but ſaw nothing: But as he was wondring whence it came, Valerian told him of their two Crowns, which his Eyes were not yet able to ſee; but he aſſured him, that in caſe he would turn Chriſtian, he ſhould ſee them both, and the Angel of God alſo. At theſe Words he conſented to be baptiz'd, and thereupon obtain'd all he had deſired of God, and the Sight of the Angels daily.

22. St.

22. St. Soterus and Cajus, Popes and Martyrs; at St. Sebastian's, and St. Susanna's.

23. [a] St. George the Martyr, at his Church, where the Magistrates of the People of Rome attend, in order to have their Standards bless'd. The Ceremony of Blessing the Standards was perform'd about the same Time by the antient Romans, in honour of Mars, when for seven Days together the Roman Eagles were consecrated.

24. St. Melitus, Bishop and Confessor of the Order of St. Bennet; Festival throughout the whole Order.

25. St. Mark; Festival in his Church; where the whole Clergy both Regular and Secular assemble together, and go in Procession in a Body to St. Peter's [b], the Chapter of the said Church excepted, who go thither before.

On St. Mark's Day the great Litanies are sung in a solemn Manner; they are called Great Litanies because they were instituted by St. Gregory the Great, and to distinguish them from the lesser ones, which were first established by St. Mamertus, Bishop of Vienna. The great Litanies owe their Institution to the great Floods, and the inguinary Pestilence, which laid Rome waste under the Pontificate of that Prelate. The Church causes them to be sung at this Time, in order to implore the Blessing of God, and the Preservation of such Fruits of the Earth as begin to spring up at that Time. 'Tis thought that Litanies are of greater Antiquity in the East. These Litanies were called [c] Septiformes, because Pope Gregory divided the Procession which sung them into seven Choirs. The first Choir was that of the Clergy; the second of the Abbots and Monks under them; the third of the Abbesses and their Nuns; the fourth of Children; the fifth of the Laity; the sixth of Widows; the seventh of married Women. The Particulars relating to these Litanies, and the Words in which they are expressed, may be seen in the [d] Rituals.

Here follows in general the Order which is observed in the Processions of St. Mark, and of the Rogations, of which Mention will immediately be made. The Clergy and the Congregation being assembled in the Church in the Morning, the officiating Priest, clothed in Ornaments suitable to the Occasion, the purple Stole, and the Chasuble of the same Colour, goes up to the Altar with the Deacon and Sub-Deacon, clothed in purple Habits of their respective Orders, but without their Maniples. Being come to the Altar, the Minister who officiates, all the Clergy that compose the Choir, and the Congregation, fall prostrate on their Knees, and address themselves to Heaven in Prayer; which being done, the Sub-Deacon fetches the Cross, places himself at the Entrance of the Chancel Door, and continues there till the Procession sets out, which is also observed in all other Processions. In the mean Time one or two Choristers begin the Anthem Exurge, &c. which being ended, they fall down upon their Knees again, the Cross-Bearer excepted, who, as has been already observ'd, never kneels on these Occasions. Afterwards two Choristers, or the officiating Priest alone, go forward towards the high Altar, and begin the Litanies of the Saints upon their Knees, and are answered by the Choir. At the Singing of the Sancta Maria, ora pro nobis, all the Congregation rise up and walk in Procession, followed by the People, who make their Responses to the Litanies: And as the Processions on this Occasion take a larger Tour than ordinary, Stations must be made at certain [e] Crosses, Oratories, or Churches; after the singing of the Litanies Prayers are offer'd up.

[a] This celebrated Patron of our Country, was, according to some, an imaginary Saint, to others an Arian Heretic. We need not take Notice of the famous Story of his killing the Dragon, and delivering the King's Daughter; it being so trite, that there is hardly a Child but has heard of it.

[b] We find the Order and March of the Procession of the Clergy in Aymon's Picture of the Court of Rome, p. 446. Edit. 1707.

[c] Septiformis, Vide this Institution in the History of Paul the Deacon, Book iii.

[d] To give those who are unacquainted with Litanies, a general Idea of them, we need only observe, that God, and all the Saints, are invok'd in them, for the Peace and Prosperity of the Church, for the Clergy, for the People, for Kings and Princes, for the Fruits of the Earth, for the Souls of the Faithful departed, &c.

[e] When the Station is at a Cross, the following Anthem is sung, Crucem sanctam subiit; but if the Station is at a Chapel or Church, the Prayer or Anthem of the Patron must be chaunted.

St.

St. Mamertus Biſhop of Vienna, upon his Dioceſe's being troubled with Earthquakes and other Calamities, inſtituted the [a] Rogations about the Middle of the fifth Century, and appointed them to be of three Days Continuance.

THE Church ordains Proceſſions for obtaining of Rain, fine Weather, during a Seaſon of Mortality, War, and Famine, &c. Prayers of Thanks are alſo offer'd up. There is nothing particular in all theſe Proceſſions, except that at the laſt mention'd the officiating Prieſt and his Miniſters are clothed in White. In the Proceſſions which are made to divert a Storm, the Pariſh-Prieſt cauſes all the Bells to be ſet a ringing, and ſprinkles holy Water up in the Air.

26. St. Cletus and St. Marcellinus, Popes and Martyrs; Feſtival at St. Maria Maggiore's, where the Head of the latter is depoſited; and at St. Peter's, where the Body of St. Cletus is interr'd; at our Lady of the Mountains, for her firſt Miracle wrought there; and at St. Margaret's on the other Side the Tyber, for the Conſecration thereof.

27. St. Anaſtaſius, Pope; at St. Bibiana's, where his Body lies; at St. Martin's of the Mountain, where his Relics are depoſited, and at St. Coſmus's [b].

28. St. Vitalis, Martyr; Feſtival at his Church.

29. St. Peter, Martyr; Feaſt at the Church of Minerva, where the Cardinals of the Inquiſition aſſiſt at the Office; Feaſt at our Lady's of the Peace, and at St. Marcellus's, for the bleſſed Peleninus the Servite.

30. St. Catherine of Sienna; Feaſt at the Church of Minerva, and throughout the whole Order of St. Dominic, and in the Churches of that Saint; at St. Sylveſter's in Campo Marzo, for St. Sophia Virgin and Martyr.

[c] MAY.

ON all Sundays in May, Indulgence at St. Sebaſtian's, at the Annunciada without the Walls, and at St. Laurence's in Fonte.

1. [d] St. Philip and St. James, Apoſtles; Feaſts in their Churches, where their Relics are depoſited; as alſo at St. Peter's and St. Maria Maggiore's, where alſo are ſome of their Relics.

2. St.

[a] We have Reaſon to believe, that the Proceſſion of the great Litanies, and of the Rogations, ought to be conſider'd as the Remains of ſo many Pagan Ceremonies, which ſome pious Prelates have thought worthy of being conſecrated to God. The Romans uſed to celebrate on the 25th of April a Feſtival call'd Robigalia, to deprecate the Mildew from the Corn, which is often very fatal to it in that Seaſon. This Feſtival was inſtituted by Numa King of Rome, in honour of the God Robigus, or the Goddeſs Robiga, at which Time Prayers and Sacrifices were offer'd up to her: They uſed alſo to go in Proceſſion round the Fields, in order to draw down a Bleſſing upon the Fruits of the Earth, as is ſtill the Cuſtom in Roman Catholic Countries. The old Romans call'd theſe Proceſſions Ambervalia.

[b] St. Coſmus and St. Damian were Brothers, and both Phyſicians. The following Miracles are ſaid to have happened at their Death: Being chain'd together, and thrown into the Sea, an Angel looſed their Bonds, and deliver'd them. After this they were thrown into a great Fire, but upon their Prayers the Fire had no Power to hurt them. They were then hang'd on a Croſs, and commanded to be ſtoned; but the Stones rebounded back on thoſe who threw them; and the ſame happen'd when Arrows were afterwards ſhot at them.

[c] The antient Heathens never uſed to marry during this Month, becauſe of the Lemuria, which conſiſted of Sacrifices and other Acts of Devotion, by which they pretended to keep Spirits or Apparitions from hurting them. They imagin'd that all the Women who were married at that Seaſon were good for naught.

Menſe malas Maio nubere vulgus ait. Ovid.

The Chriſtians ſeem to have borrowed this Notion from the Heathens; for the Vulgar among us think that 'tis not good to marry in that Month.

[d] On the firſt of May it is cuſtomary to ſtick Boughs of May before the Houſes of Perſons of Diſtinction, or thoſe for whom one has a particular Eſteem. This Cuſtom is ſtill obſerv'd in ſeveral Parts of Europe, particularly

2. St. Athanaſius, Biſhop and Confeſſor; Feaſt at the Church of the Greeks, who have the Service there in their own Tongue; at that of Minerva, for St. Antoninus Archbiſhop of Florence.

3. Invention, or finding of the holy Croſs; Feſtival in the Churches dedicated to it; at St. Croſs's in Jeruſalem the Relics are exhibited; at St. Alexis's, Feſtival of the holy Martyrs Alexander, Evantin, and Theodulin.

THE firſt Sunday in May; Feaſt at St. Catherine's à monte magna poli; at the Minerva for St. Catherine of Sienna; and at St. Anaſtaſia's for the bleſſed Torribio, Archbiſhop of Lima.

4. St. Monica, Widow; at St. Auguſtin's, where her Body is interr'd; at the Church of the Picmonteze; Feſtival of the holy Shroud of our bleſſed Saviour.

5. St. Auſtin's Converſion; Feſtival throughout the whole Order. St. Angelus the Carmelite; Feſtival throughout the whole Order. At the Church of Minerva, and that of St. Maria Maggiore's, Feſtival of the bleſſed Pius V. where his Body is interr'd, and where alſo the Cardinals aſſiſt ſolemnly at the Service.

6. St. John before the Latin-Gate; Feſtival in the ſame Place, where the Chapter of St. John of Lateran meet and celebrate the Office.

7. St. Staniſlaus, Biſhop and Martyr; Feſtival at the Church of the Poles; at the Chieſa Nova, for St. Ilarius the Martyr; and at St. Laurence's without the Walls, for the Tranſlation of the Body of St. Stephen the firſt Martyr.

8. Apparition of St. Michael the Archangel in his Churches; at St. Maria Maggiore's, and at St. John's of Lateran.

THE Legend Writers inform us, that St. Michael the Archangel has reveal'd himſelf ſeveral Times; the moſt famous of his Apparitions is that the Feſtival whereof is ſolemniz'd on the eighth of May; it happened about the End of the fifth Century upon Mount Gargan, ſince call'd Mount St. Angelo, in the Kingdom of Naples.

9. St. Gregory Nazianzen, the Biſhop; at St. Peter's, where his Body is depoſited, and in the Monaſtery of the Nuns in Campo Marzo.

10. St. Gordian and St. Epimachus, Martyrs; at St. Laurence's in Lucina; at St. Mary's in Traſtevera, for St. Calepodus.

11. St. Majolus, Abbot of Cluni; Feſtival throughout the whole Order of St. Benedict; at Jeſus's Church, for St. Bonus the Martyr.

12. St. Nereus and St. Achilleus; Feſtival in their Church; St. Pancratius the Martyr; Feſtival in his Church.

13. Dedication of St. Maria Rotunda.

14. St. Boniface the Martyr; Feſtival at St. Alexis's, where his Body is depoſited.

15. St. Iſidorus; Feſtival at his Church; at St. Martin's of the Mountains, for St. Quirina, Virgin and Martyr.

16. St. Ubaldus, Biſhop; at our Lady's of the Peace. St. Pelerinus, Feſtival in his Church.

17. Tranſlation of St. Bernardin's Body; Feſtival in the Church of Ara Cæli.

in Germany and Italy. It owes its Original to the antient Feſtivals of Flora, which were ſolemniz'd at the ſame Time, when the Youth among the Romans uſed to go into the Woods, where they cut down a numberleſs Multitude of Branches, with which they adorn'd or repair'd the Houſes; which Cuſtom is ſtill obſerv'd by the Youth in Italy. At Lagni, a Town in the Iſland of France, the Image of the Roman Floralia is exactly preſerved. "Early in the "Morning on Whitſunday, the common People, inſtead of going to Church, flock into the Woods to cut down "Branches of Trees, and in the Afternoon they perform a great Number of bodily Exerciſes in a very burleſque "Manner, as in the Floralia of the antient Romans; as for Inſtance, ſome Peaſants run in their Shirts for a Wager." Vide Paſquier in his Recherches, Lib. viii.

18. St.

18. St. Venantius, Martyr; Feaſt in his Church and that of St. Peter, where ſome of his Relics are depoſited. The bleſſed Felix de Cantalice, a Capuchin Friar; Feſtival at the Capuchins.

19. St. Pudentiana, Virgin; Feſtival in her Church. St. Ives, Advocate for the Poor; Feaſt in his Church; at the Church of La Sapienza the Cardinal aſſiſt ſolemnly at the Office, where the Clerks of the Chamber, and the conſiſtorial Advocates aſſemble. St. Peter Celeſtine; Feſtival at St. Euſebius's, and our Lady's of Loretto.

20. St. Bernardin of Sienna, Cordelier Friar; Feſtival throughout the whole Order of St. Francis.

21. Feſtival at St. Croſs's in Jeruſalem, for the Tranſlation of the Relics.

22. St. Romanus, Benedictin Abbot; Feſtival in the Churches of the Order. At St. Auſtin's, Feſtival for the bleſſed Rete dela Caſcia, and in his own Church under the Capitol.

23. St. Angelus of the Order of Val-Ombroſa; Feſtival at St. Praxedas's, and in the Chieſa Nova for the Dedication.

24. Tranſlation of St. Dominic's Body; Feſtival throughout the whole Order.

25. St. Urban, Pope and Martyr; Feſtival in his Churches, and St. Cecilia's, where his Body is interr'd; at St. Peter's for St. Boniface, where his Body is depoſited. Tranſlation of the Body of St. Francis; Feſtival throughout the whole Order. St. Mary Magdalen of Pazis; Feſtival in all the Churches of the Parmeſans, and at St. John's of the Florentines.

26. St. Eleutherius, Pope and Martyr; Feſtival at St. Peter's, where his Body is interr'd. St. Philip Nereus; Feſtival in Chieſa Nova, where his Body lies, and where the Cardinals aſſiſt ſolemnly at the Office.

27. St. John, Pope and Martyr; Feſtival at St. Peter's, where his Body is depoſited.

28. St. Germanus, Biſhop and Confeſſor, of the Order of St. Benedict; Feſtival in the Churches of that Order.

29. St. Cononus, Abbot of Lerma; throughout the whole Order of St. Benet.

30. St. Felix, Pope; Feſtival at St. Pancras, where his Body is depoſited; at St. Peter's, for Gabinus the Martyr, where his Body is interr'd; at St. Bartholomew's in the Iſland, for St. Exuperantius, Pope and Martyr: His Body is interr'd here.

31. St. Petronilla, Virgin; at St. Peter's, where her Body lies.

The Stations of the Moveable Feaſts after EASTER.

MONDAY in Rogation-Week; Station at St. Maria Maggiore's; the Clergy aſſemble at St. Adrian's, and go thither in Proceſſion.

TUESDAY; Station at St. John's of Lateran and St. Maria Novella's, from whence the Clergy go in Proceſſion.

WEDNESDAY; Station at St. Peter's, the Clergy aſſemble at St. Laurence's in Damaſo, and go thither in Proceſſion. On this Day at Veſpers the Pope aſſiſts ſolemnly at the Office in the Apoſtolical Palace.

THURSDAY, Feſtival of the Aſcenſion; Station at St. Peter's; the Pope aſſiſts ſolemnly at the Service; a Cardinal-Biſhop ſings Maſs, and a ſecular Prieſt preaches the Sermon, after which the Pope bleſſes the People.

The

The Ceremonies on the Feſtival of the ASCENSION.

ON Aſcenſion-Day, after the Goſpel, the Paſchal Candle is [a] put out, to denote that on that Day our Saviour left the Earth, and returned up into Heaven. [b] The Altar is adorn'd with Flowers, Images, and Relics; upon which Occaſion the officiating Prieſt and his Miniſters are dreſs'd in their white Ornaments.

THE Bleſſing which his Holineſs pronounces that Day, is one of the three ſolemn Ones. Antiently it was cuſtomary for his Holineſs, before he pronounced them, to [c] excommunicate Heretics and Infidels in a ſolemn Manner; but that is now confin'd to Holy Thurſday only, as was before obſerv'd. The Bleſſing concludes with the plenary Indulgences.

ON the Sunday within the Octave of the Aſcenſion, Feſtival of the bleſſed Francis Patricci, of the Order of the Servites at St. Marcellus's.

WHITSON-EVE, Station at St. John's of Lateran; the Pope aſſiſts ſolemnly at Veſpers in the Apoſtolical Chapel.

Ceremonies obſerved at WHITSONTIDE.

ON Whitſon-Eve the Altar is cover'd with Purple, till ſuch Time as Maſs begins, and then the Altar is cover'd with Red, and the officiating Prieſt is clothed in Veſtments of the ſame Colour. The bleſſing of the baptiſmal Fonts is perform'd after the ſame Manner as on Eaſter-Eve, and on Whitſunday the Miniſter who officiates is dreſs'd in ſcarlet Ornaments; this being an Emblem of the Holy Ghoſt, who deſcended on the Apoſtles on Whitſunday, in the Shape of fiery Tongues.

ON [d] Whitſunday a Proceſſion is made at Caen, in which the ſeveral Bodies or Companies of Tradeſmen bear a Part; a Taper is carried in it, the Expence of which is paid by the Apprentices of the ſeveral Companies; and on this Taper are fix'd all the little Pieces of Money which have been given by way of Earneſt, for the binding of Bargains, during the Courſe of the whole Year. We are told, that in order to put a Stop to the Abuſes which were committed in the levying or Diſtribution of theſe Earneſt-Pieces, it was antiently enjoin'd, that every Company of Tradeſmen ſhould elect a Provoſt, who ſhould receive the ſeveral Earneſt-Pennies that might be given on all the Bargains made in their Trading; and that on Whitſunday they ſhould be carried in Proceſſion as above-mention'd.

WHITSUNDAY; Station at St. Peter's, at St. Mary of the Angels. The Pope aſſiſts ſolemnly at the Office in the Apoſtolic Palace; Maſs is ſung by a Cardinal-Biſhop, and an Eccleſiaſtic of the Roman Seminary preaches the Sermon; Feſtival in the ſeveral Churches of the Holy Ghoſt, and at St. Bartholomew's of the Bergamaſchi.

Monday; Station at St. Peter's in Vinculis.

Tueſday; at St. Anaſtaſia's; Feſtival at the Chapel of Mount Piety.

Wedneſday in Ember-Week; Station at St. Maria Maggiore's.

[a] Piſcara, Bauldry.
[b] Piſcara Praxis Cerem.
[c] Lunadoro Relazione della corte di Roma.
[d] Origines de Caen, par Mr. Huet.

Thurſday, at St. Laurence's without the Walls.

Friday, at the Holy Apoſtles.

Saturday, at St. Peter's; at Veſpers the Pope aſſiſts ſolemnly at the Office in the Apoſtolical Palace.

[a] Trinity-Sunday; in the Churches dedicated to the Trinity; the Pope aſſiſts ſolemnly at the Office in the Apoſtolical Chapel, a Cardinal-Prieſt ſings Maſs, and a ſecular Prieſt preaches the Sermon. Wedneſday Papal Service at Veſpers.

Corpus Chriſti Day; Station at St. Peter's; the Pope aſſiſts ſolemnly at the Office at the Apoſtolic Palace.

THIS Feaſt was inſtituted by Pope Urban IV. in 1263. upon occaſion of a Viſion which was ſaid to be reveal'd to a Nun of the City of Liege. Thomas Aquinas, by order of the above-mention'd Pope, drew up the Office of the bleſſed Sacrament, in the Manner it is now uſed in the Church. About an [b] hundred Years after, the Inhabitants of Pavia began to carry the Hoſt in Proceſſion under a Canopy on Corpus Chriſti Day.

AFTER Maſs the Proceſſion of the Hoſt carried by the Pope is made round the Portico's of St. Peter's, where are aſſembled the Clergy both ſecular and regular, the Aſſiſtant-Biſhops, and Cardinals in their Copes, with their Mitres on their Heads; and, in general, all the Prelates, Ambaſſadors, and Noblemen of the Court of Rome.

Proceſſion of the BLESSED SACRAMENT.

THE Proceſſion of the Hoſt, when his Holineſs himſelf aſſiſts at it, claims a particular Deſcription; and as that which [c] Aymon has given us is very circumſtantial, we ſhall inſert it entire.

" THE Cardinals go into the Palace of the Vatican, where they clothe themſelves " in their red Copes; whence they go and receive the Pope at the Veſtry-Chamber, " and accompany him to the Chapel of Pope Sixtus, where a private Maſs is uſually " ſaid, to conſecrate the Hoſt that is to be carried in Proceſſion.

" AFTER Maſs the Proceſſion begins to wheel off; each Body of Religious ſings the " Litanies; but the Chapters have each their ſeveral Choirs of Muſic, and that of St. " Peter's of the Vatican marches the laſt but one, between that of St. Maria Maggiore's, and St. John's of Lateran.

" AFTER that the ſeveral ſecular Fraternities, the different Orders of Monks, and " the Canons of the Collegiate Churches, are paſs'd by, all the Officers of the Chancery " ſucceed according to the Order of their Governor, upon Pain of forfeiting two Months " Salary, unleſs lawful Cauſe be ſhewn for their Abſence. The Number of theſe Officers, who walk with each a Torch in his Hand, amounts to a thouſand at leaſt, " and ſometimes to twelve hundred, as may be ſeen by the Liſt which Aymon has " given of them in Chap. xviii. Part III. of his Work.

[a] We are aſſur'd that Alcuinus, who was Contemporary with Charlemagne, compoſed the Office for Trinity-Sunday.

[b] Caſalius de Chriſti ritibus & alii.

[c] Picture of the Court of Rome, p. 452. & ſeq. Edition of 1707.

" THE Pope's Houſhold and the Prelates walk next, viz. the Queries of the reign-
" ing Pontiff; the Procurators-General of the ſeveral religious Orders, the Chamber-
" lains without the Walls, the Fiſcal of the Apoſtolic Chamber, the Conſiſtorial Ad" vocates, the Secretaries of State and of the Cloſet, the private Cubicularii and Cham-
" berlains, the Conſervator of Rome, the various Bands of his Holineſs's Muſic, the " Abbreviators of the great and little Parquet, the Acolytes and the Clerks of the " Chamber, the Auditors of the Rota, the Apoſtolical Sub-Deacons, and the Croſs-
" Bearer.

" AFTERWARDS the twelve Penitentiaries of St. Peter come two and two, dreſs'd in " their Chaſubles, and preceded by two Clerks with their Staves waſhed with Silver,
" which is the Badge of their Office. Before the March begins they pay Obeiſance
" to his Holineſs, ſitting on his Throne, by kiſſing his Foot.

" THE Biſhops, Archbiſhops, and conſecrated Patriarchs, appear afterwards, cloth'd
" in their Copes, with white Mitres on their Heads; and theſe, before their ſetting
" out, pay Obeiſance to the Pope by kiſſing his Knee.

" THE Cardinals walk next two and two, according to their Ranks, having firſt " paid Obeiſance to the Pope, by kiſſing his Hand, and have each of them their At" tendants walking before them. The Cup-Bearer of each reſpective Cardinal carries
" before his Maſter a thick Flambeau lighted, made of white Wax; and behind " him, on one Side of Train-Bearer, is his Maſter of his Chamber, who carries a " Hat of Peacock's Feathers, cover'd with red Taffety, which he holds over the Head " of the Cardinal his Maſter, like an Umbrella, to ſhade him from the Sun-Beams;
" which, however, is altogether unneceſſary, ſince all the Streets through which the " Proceſſion paſſes, are cover'd either with Linen-Cloth, or Tapeſtry, through which " it is impoſſible for the Sun to dart its Rays.

" THE next that comes is the Captain of the Swiſs Guards, followed by his Men
" bearing Halberds, and drawn up in two Lines, and in the Middle of them the Cap" tain of the Pope's Guards, the Princes of the Throne, his Holineſs's Nephews, and " the Ambaſſadors of crown'd Heads, who, according to the Regulation for the Cere" monial, made by Pope Julius II. march in the following Order. Firſt the Ambaſ-
" ſador of the Emperor, and that of the King of the Romans, who is ſeldom there,
" ſince the Time that this Kingdom has been in ſome Meaſure united to the Empire
" of Germany, by the Election which is generally made of the eldeſt Son of the " Houſe of Auſtria, who by this means is made Vicegerent of the Empire, and con-
" ſequently preſumptive Succeſſor to it. Immediately after comes the Ambaſſador of " France, and afterwards thoſe of Spain, of Portugal, of England, when that King" dom is govern'd by a Prince of the Romiſh Communion; thoſe of Sicily, Hungary,
" Cyprus, and Bohemia next, when thoſe Nations have a Monarch of their own as " formerly; laſtly, the Ambaſſadors of Poland and Denmark.

" AFTER theſe ſeveral Ambaſſadors, the Pope himſelf advances forward, carried in " a Vehicle, in which he ſeems to be on his Knees, though he is really ſeated. He " has on a rich Cope, and over it a Pall made of Cloth of Silver, which covers his " Shoulders and Arms like a Scarf. Before him is ſet a wooden Stool gilt, with a
" Cuſhion of red crimſon Velvet, embroider'd and enrich'd with gold Lace, on which " is laid the Expoſitor, wherein the Hoſt is contain'd, which he bears with his own " Hands.

" THE

" THE Canopy over the Pope's Head is carried by the Patriarchs, Archbiſhops, and " Biſhops, at their firſt ſetting out from St. Peter's; and afterwards, at their ſetting out " from the Portico of the Vatican, by the prime Nobility of the neighbouring Na- " tions, ſuch as the Florentines and the Sienneſe, who relieve one another till the Pro- " ceſſion is almoſt ended, when the Roman Conſervators, and the Prior of the Captains " of the ſeveral Diſtricts, take it and carry it into Church.

" THE Swiſs, who go on each Side the Pope, are caſed in Iron from Head to Foot, " with each Man a great two-handed Sword unſheath'd in his Hand. After this Guard " of Cuiraſſiers, the Prelates advance in their ſeveral Ranks, viz. the Apoſtolical Pro- " thonotaries, the Auditors, the Clerks of the Chamber, the Generals of the Orders, " the Referendaries, or Officers in Chancery, of the Signature of Grants, and of " Juſtice; and, laſtly, the ſeveral Companies of Light-Horſe, four in a Rank, the " Horſes cover'd with very rich Trappings; and theſe cloſe the March.

" SOMETIMES his Holineſs walks on Foot in this Proceſſion, in order to ſet an Ex- " ample of greater Reſpect and Veneration for the holy Sacrament, which he carries " in his Hands. Urban VIII. and ſome other Popes, formerly carried it on Horſe- " back.

" WHEN the conſecrated Hoſt is not carried by his Holineſs, the Dean of the ſacred " College, or the eldeſt Cardinal, bears it inſtead of him, but is on Foot: And on " theſe Occaſions the Princes and Ambaſſadors do not aſſiſt at it, by Reaſon of the Popes " Abſence.

" THE Proceſſion generally laſts about four Hours, tho' it has not above a Mile to " go; but then they walk with the utmoſt Gravity, and extremely ſlow. It paſſes under " the Portico's which Alexander VII. built round the Square before St. Peter's; marches " down the Street which goes to St. Angelo's-Bridge, call'd St. James Shake-horſe's- " Square, and returns to St. Peter's by the old Town, after having croſs'd the other " Portico, and the Gallery which joins it to the Church, into which they enter in the " ſame Order that had been obſerv'd at the Going out of it.

" HIS Holineſs being arrived in the Church, lays down the Expoſitor, in which the " conſecrated Hoſt is put, on the high Altar, and whilſt Incenſings are performing, and " the Hymn Pange lingua glorioſi corporis myſterium, &c. with the Prayer Deus qui " nobis ſub ſacramento mirabili paſſionis tuæ memoriam reliquiſti, &c. by which they " beſeech of God, That he would pleaſe to make all the Congregation preſent taſte ef- " ficaciouſly the Fruits of our Saviour's Reſurrection, of whoſe Paſſion this Sacrament " is a Commemoration; during this Interval, I ſay, the Cardinals take off their Mitres " and Ornaments, and put on their red Copes, in which they accompany the Pope " to the Veſtry-Chamber, who is carried thither in his Pontifical Veſtments, where he " lays them down, as alſo his triple Crown, and puts on his ordinary Habit, and then " withdraws into his Apartment.

" THOSE who have not ſeen this Ceremony will no doubt be gladly inform'd, how, " in order to prevent any Diſorder or Diſturbance, the chief Cardinal-Deacon, cloth'd " in a Dalmatica of white Damaſk, and having a Mitre on his Head, ſits at the Gate " of the Apoſtolical Palace, in a Chair of Crimſon Velvet, trimmed with gold Fringe, " and ſet at the Head of the Swiſs Guards; at the Right-Hand of this Cardinal ſtands " the Governor of Rome, with his Batoon in his Hand; and at his Left the Major- " Domo, or chief Steward of the Pope's Houſhold. Here they remain till ſuch Time " as thoſe who aſſiſt at the Proceſſion have all march'd off, and determine upon the " Spot

" Spot all Diſputes that may ariſe with regard to Precedency, or any other Cauſe.
" They have a Right to command all the Pope's Guards, not excepting the Swiſs
" themſelves, who are all under Arms in the Midſt of the Square, nor the Light Horſe;
" two of whom, by their Order, are poſted with their Lances couch'd, at the Cor" ner of every Street through which the Proceſſion paſſes.

" WHILE the Proceſſion continues, the Caſtle of St. Angelo makes a triple Diſcharge
" of all its Artillery. The firſt Salvo is made when his Holineſs goes out of the Cha" pel Paulina, the Moment when he takes in his Hand the Expoſitor, in which the " Hoſt is contain'd, and that the great Culverine of St. Peter's is fired off to give the " Signal. The ſecond Salvo is made when the Pope goes out from the Portico of the " great Square, before the Apoſtolical Palace; and the third when he enters into that
" of St. James."

HERE follow other Particulars, which are generally obſerv'd at the Proceſſion of the Bleſſed Sacrament. During its March the Bells of the Cathedral, and of the other Churches before which it paſſes, are rung. The Streets [a] muſt be ſwept, and ſtrew'd with Flowers and Greens, and the Outſides of the Houſes and Churches hung with Tapeſtry, or adorn'd after ſome other Manner. The officiating Prieſt conſecrates two large Hoſts, one whereof is to be us'd in the Proceſſion. Maſs being ended, the Tapers are diſtributed, and a Sub-Deacon, clothed in Veſtments ſuitable to the Feſtival, comes out of the Sacriſty, preceded by two Incenſe-Bearers in Surplices, with the Thurible in one Hand, and the Navicula in the other. The two Incenſe-Bearers join the Sub-Deacon, and ſtand by him without the Chancel of the Altar, till the March begins. About ſix Clerks in Surplices, with lighted Torches in their Hands, range themſelves on each Side the Foot of the Altar; and thoſe who are to carry the Canopy, ſet themſelves at the Entrance of the Chancel.

THE laſt Goſpel being read, the officiating Prieſt makes his Genuflexions, having the Deacon and Sub-Deacon on each Side of him, and afterwards goes to the Epiſtle-Side; then deſcends to the Bottom of the Steps, takes off his Maniple and Chaſuble, and puts on a white Cope. The Deacon and Sub-Deacon alſo put off their Maniples, and then they all three go and make a Genuflexion on both Knees, bending their Bodies very low in the Middle of the laſt Step of the Altar, where they continue a little Time in Prayer; after which the Deacon riſes up, and makes another Genuflexion; and this in order to uncover the Expoſitor, and place it on the Corporal, or Piece of fine Linen uſed at Maſs. Here follows a third Genuflexion; and then he comes back, and ſtands near the officiating Prieſt, who riſes up, and withdraws a little towards the Goſpel-Side; and after having thrice put Incenſe into each Thurible, he falls down upon his Knees, with the Deacon, who is at his Right-Hand, and the Sub-Deacon at the Left. The former gives the Thurible to the officiating Prieſt, who incenſes the Bleſſed Sacrament thrice, making a low Bow both before and after. This triple Incenſing being over, the Sub-Deacon ſpreads the Veil over the Shoulders of the officiating Prieſt, while the Deacon goes up to the Altar, takes the Expoſitor from thence, which he gives to the officiating Prieſt, and afterwards covers his Hands with the Extremities of the Veil that lies over his Shoulders; after which, the officiating Prieſt, having the Pyx, or Expoſitor, in his Hands, turns about to the Right, and his Miniſters after him, when they all three continue on one of the Steps of the Altar, till ſuch Time as the whole Proceſſion is wheel'd of, when they begin the Pange Lingua, and the Proceſſion ſets out.

[a] In ſome Parts of Italy triumphal Arches are rais'd, adorn'd with Emblems and Mottos, in honour of the Bleſſed Sacrament. The Cuſtom of laying Carpets in the Streets through which the Proceſſion is to paſs, was alſo obſerved by the antient Romans on theſe Occaſions; to which we will add, that they had repoſitory Altars, as is now the Cuſtom, erected in the Streets, for their Proceſſions to make a Halt at.

[a] A CLERK dreſs'd in Purple carries the Banner of the Bleſſed Sacrament, after whom the Singing-Boys advance; then thoſe who carry the Torches, and the Members of the Confraternity, two and two: Then the Croſs-Bearer, between two Taper-Bearers. The Clergy advance afterwards, the Clerks in [b] Surplices, the Deacons and Sub-Deacons in Dalmatics, and the Prieſts in Copes. Thoſe on the Right carry their Tapers in their Right Hand, and thoſe on the Left in their Left; they are followed by Clerks, carrying Torches: Two Incenſe-Bearers walk immediately before the Hoſt, and perfume it all the way, obſerving to walk ſide-ways, in order not to turn their Backs to it. The officiating Prieſt carries it under a Canopy, ſupported by the chief Men of the Place: The two firſt Staves that ſupport it are carried by two Men of the greateſt Diſtinction; and the reſt of the Perſons of Note are ranged at the Right Hand of the officiating Prieſt, who is placed between the Deacon and Sub-Deacon, who holds up his Chaſuble.

ALL theſe devout Perſons ſing Hymns, except the officiating Prieſt, and his Miniſters, who repeat what is ſung with a low Voice. The Laity follow the Canopy, the Men bare-headed, and holding lighted Tapers in their Hands; and the Women cloſe the Proceſſion.

THE Proceſſion frequently makes a Station at ſome Church by which it paſſes, or at certain Altars, which are ſet up for that Purpoſe; the Faithful then kneel down, while the Miniſters prepare the Altar: Which being done, the Deacon places the Hoſt upon it, and the officiating Prieſt falls on his Knees and adores it; after which he incenſes it thrice, making a low Bow at the ſame Time, while the Hymn O ſalutaris hoſtia is ſinging: Which being done he repeats ſome Prayers, receives the Hoſt from the Deacon, and prepares himſelf to ſet out whereupon the Choriſters begin an Hymn, which is as it were the Signal for marching.

BEING returned to the Church, the Supporters of the Canopy ſtop at the Entrance of the Chancel of the Altar, when the Deacon receives the bleſſed Sacrament upon his Knees, and places it again on the Altar, where the officiating Prieſt incenſes it thrice, as before. After this they begin to chaunt and pray for ſome Time, which being done, the Deacon riſes, bends his Knee, and places the Hoſt on an Eminence ſet round with lighted Tapers.

THUS have we deſcribed the Order of this Ceremony, to which we might have added certain other Cuſtoms; but as they are generally obſerved in all Proceſſions, and are uſed at the Canonization of Saints, &c. we though it needleſs to mention them in this Place. When the Hoſt is not expoſed, the Deacon ſhuts it up in the Tabernacles after the Bleſſing.

DURING the Octave, the Hoſt is expoſed on the Altar; it is alſo exhibited in any Public Calamity: But there is nothing particular in this Ceremony.

WHEN the officiating Prieſt gives the Benediction with the holy Sacrament, he is firſt incenſed; during which the Choir ſings the two following Hymns, Tantum ergo Sacramentum; O ſalutaris hoſtia, &c. [c] Then the Bleſſing is performed as follows: The officiating Prieſt, with his Right Hand, holds the Nodus of the Expoſitor, and the Foot with his Left Hand; then turning about towards the People, he elevates it as high as his Forehead; after which he brings it down below the Girdle; then raiſes it in a perpen-

[a] In Spain, and ſeveral Parts of Italy, there as Buffoons and Merry-Andrews, who go at the Head of the Proceſſion, where they dance in the moſt groteſque Manner, to heighten the Solemnity of the Feſtival. We have already obſerved, that the Proceſſions of the old Romans were accompanied with ſuch Buffooneries.

[b] All theſe Veſtments muſt be white.

[c] Alet's Ritual.

dicular Line as high as his Stomach, where he finiſheth the Sign of the Croſs, from the Left Shoulder to the Right, This being done, he pauſes a little in the Middle, then turns round, lays the Hoſt again on the Altar, makes a Genuflexion, and returns to his Place, where he kneels upon the Altar-Step. Then the chief Aſſiſtant ariſes, goes up to the Altar, and puts the Sacrament again in the Tabernacle. We ſhould take Notice of ſeveral other Particulars, were theſe Deſcriptions deſigned for the Uſe of the Clergy.

The Manner of carrying the HOST before the POPE when he is upon a Journey.

